Federal Aid for Big Fires

FLAME Act brought nearly $17 million to fund five blaze battles on Idaho public lands.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

ROGERSON • When no fires are scorching the forests and sagebrush of Idaho's federal lands, the five-person truck crews of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's fire station in Rogerson work normal day shifts.

They usually start at 9:30 a.m., laboring until 6 p.m. on tasks like putting up fences, clearing brush, training and maintaining equipment. That routine stretches to 16-hour days when the need arises, such as when the 2010 Long Butte Fire scorched 306,113 acres of south-central Idaho at a cost of $4.2 million.

It's just one example of how fire-fighting costs, including labor, can dramatically increase when a large blaze erupts.

As Congress struggles to reach a compromise on federal spending, U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, is backing a proposed appropriations bill that puts $382 million into a fund dedicated to cover expenses from catastrophic fires snuffed out by federal agencies like the BLM and U.S. Forest Service.

The fund comes from 2009 legislation that Congress passed called the Federal Land Assistance, Management and Enhancement (FLAME) Act. Lawmakers intended to provide agencies with a reserve account to tap into when the year's firefighting costs exceed what's budgeted.

In 2010, $16.78 million from the fund went toward five fires in Idaho, including the Long Butte Fire.

"The main advantage for the federal fire agencies is that the FLAME Act allows them to carry over unused funds from year to year," said Don

Why Coverage is Critical During Wildfire Season

How Much it Costs

Home profile: A modest home in Twin Falls built in 1995. The house comes with a standard bathroom, recently updated kitchen and a two-car garage.

Insurance: A $100,000 coverage for the dwelling, $75,000 for personal property and $1,000 deductible.

Cost: $395 a year

T.F. insurance agent says Magic Valley homeowners and renters should know their insurance options to prepare for possible fire damage.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Summer and fire are not a complementary pair.

Due to an unusually wet spring, fire officials say more fuel may improve the chances of bigger wildfires throughout these warmer months. In 2010 alone, more than 3.4 million acres were burned in Idaho.

One step people can take to prepare for a wildfire is to review and assess their wildfire insurance. Most homeowner insurance includes some sort of fire damage coverage, but there are several options open to both homeowners and renters.

Matt Stokes, owner of Matt Stokes State Farm Insurance in Twin Falls, has been an insurance agent in the area for 10 years. He helped explain some of the basic information people should be aware of during this fire season.

Times-News: Why is wildfire coverage important for those living in the Magic Valley?

Stokes: It's important for several reasons. We live in an area that sees wildfires every year, and this year is

Restaurant Heroin Bust Nabs 3 Suspects

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Three Treasure Valley residents are charged with multiple counts of felony trafficking in heroin after Twin Falls police say they arranged a Thursday buy at Buffalo Wild Wings.

Dennis Williams, 22, of Boise; Aubree Clayton, 19, of Garden City; and Ashley Hidalgo, 22, of Boise, were arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Friday. They each face two counts of felony trafficking and one count of conspiracy to commit trafficking.

In his report, Detective Dan

Clements notes that this bust comes on the heels of an earlier arrest for alleged heroin possession. Earlier this week, Ryan Hilliard, 25, of Twin Falls, was charged with multiple felonies for allegedly trying to sell prescription painkillers and having heroin at his residence.

When police confiscated his cell phone, they noticed messages Hilliard received claiming that there was a "price drop" on heroin. Clayton allegedly sent the messages on Thursday, and Clements, posing as Hilliard, replied to set up a buy later in the day at the restaurant. Accompanied by Idaho State Police detectives, Clements watched the trio arrive in a blue Mercedes-Benz between 5-6 p.m. While still posing as Hilliard over the phone, Clements texted that he would not show for the buy.

When the trio left the building and started for the parking lot, police arrested them. Hidalgo was allegedly holding the heroin, measured at 12 grams, in her bra.

Upon interviewing the suspects, police learned that a sizeable amount of heroin was being held in Hidalgo's father's residence in Boise. ISP detectives searched the residence and found six portions of a black tar sub-

BLUE LAKES SOUTH OPENS AFTER SEVEN-MONTH CLOSE

TIMES-NEWS

After a seven-month layoff, a one-mile stretch of Blue Lakes Boulevard South in Twin Falls is now open.

The small but previously well-used section of Blue Lakes south of Kimberly Road was closed for road-work related to the city's $18.5 million arsenic reduction project.

"The work is to a large extent complete," said Lee Glaesemann, a city staff engineer. "We finished phase four of the project and will begin completing any last-minute odds and ends."

Next Monday, city officials, engineers and contractors will do a final inspection along the road.

"We aren't expecting to find anything dramatic that would require us to close the road again," Glaesemann said. "We're really thankful for the city's patience with all of the road-work; we know it's been difficult."

DOGS DESERVE DESSERT, TOO.

So why not treat them to high-quality, locally produced treats? The Times-News found five producers who sell their dog treats online, at farmers markets or through Magic Valley stores.

Smurthwaite, a BLM spokesman based at the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise. “Over time, especially after slower-than-usual fire seasons, we’ll be able to build a substantial contingency fund for use in the high-activity years.”

The fund came in response to wildland fires increasing in size and cost, which put a strain on other parts of agencies’ budgets such as land management, said Nikki Watts, a spokeswoman for Simpson.

Simpson, chairman of the House Interior and the Environment Appropriations Subcommittee, isn’t one to avoid cuts to programs. For example, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is trimmed by $1.5 billion in the same budget bill.

“Significant cuts in federal spending are an absolute must and required to get our fiscal house back in order, and Congressman Simpson is taking a very thoughtful approach to that while eliminating some programs and trying to keep others intact,” Watts said.

For this year, the budget still faces debate and further votes before making its way to President Barack Obama’s desk.

looking like no exception. However, homes can be affected by fire at any moment in the year.

TN: What kind of coverage is out there?

S: Many, if not all, homeowner’s insurance include fire damage. One of the biggest myths surrounding fire insurance is that renters can’t receive fire insurance, but there are many new options out there for renters. You can even get fire insurance just for your car. It’s all about knowing your options and finding what fits your needs.

TN: What’s the difference between “cash value” and “replacement costs”?

S: There’s a big difference between these two terms. Replacement costs will cover the costs needed to replace or repair items or areas in your home. The amounts will vary by the insurance coverage limits that you select.

Cash values, on the other hand, will cover the cost of the value of the item lost or damaged. If I have a couch that’s only $15, I will only get reimbursed for that amount. When you go in to select insurance, be sure to check what kind of replacement option you have or don’t have.

TN: What kind of questions do people need to ask or look for when they are shopping for insurance?

S: Ask what kinds of discounts are available to them. For example, there can be discounts for having a fire extinguisher or checking fire alarms. It’s all about knowing what you need to protect and knowing how you’re going to protect it.

Rupert Sex Offender Gets Third Shot at Rehabilitation

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A Rupert woman convicted of child sex crimes last year will have a third chance to toe the line on the rules of her probation.

Fifth District Judge Michael Crabtree returned 28-year-old Emily K. Thurber to the original terms of her 12-year probation on Friday in a Cassia County courtroom. Convicted in July 2010 of felony conspiracy to commit sexual abuse of a minor under 16 and conspiracy to commit sexual battery of a minor under 16 in separate cases, Thurber was sentenced to two concurrently running suspended prison sentences of up to 12 years. With the sentences suspended, she was placed on probation.

She’s twice violated her probation now, something Crabtree said he won’t let slide a third time.

“I don’t know how to express this without being boring,” he said. “This is the last chance to make it work.”

Thurber was arrested only 20 days after being released from jail after her first probation violation. Her attorney said her most recent violation stemmed from a “predatory” male who had sexual contact with Thurber in her home without her permission.

Sobbing, Thurber said she believed the man’s actions were criminal, although she admitted the contact occurred on two separate occasions.

“What’s different this time is when I got out after the first violation I was still in the mindset that the law is the bad guy,” Thurber said. “I thought if I tell them what’s going on, I’ll go to jail and it will be bad on me.”

Thurber told the court she met the man in jail and communicated with him through a crack in her cell wall. She said he found where she was living through the state’s sex offender website and showed up at her door.

Thurber’s counselor, Gail Ater, testified that Thurber was amenable to treatment but had not received the model of sex-offender treatment she needs. Ater said Thurber needs group counseling that excludes male participants because of her inability to establish boundaries with predatory males.

“There is no doubt in my mind that predatory males are attracted to Emily,” Ater said.

Although both of Thurber’s probation violations stemmed from prohibited sexual conduct, Ater said he doesn’t believe the contact was criminal in nature.

Crabtree said the court has exhausted all treatment options, making this Thurber’s last chance at avoiding prison.

“If you don’t think we’re serious, you’re wrong,” Crabtree said.

Eden Man Pinned Under Tractor

TIMES-NEWS

An Eden man was trapped under his own small tractor and injured on Friday afternoon, according to the Jerome County Sheriff’s Office.

Steve Meyerhoff was driving near a pond when the tractor tipped over and pinned him against the ground. He was able to use his cell phone to call for help shortly before 4 p.m., said Deputy Anthony Gratzner. Emergency responders traced the signal to approximately 1110 South 1500 East, just outside of Eden. Meyerhoff was transported to St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls via air ambulance.

St. Luke’s reported Meyerhoff was in good condition later Friday evening.

Filer Sewer Plant Should Be Online in August

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE

FILER • Filer’s new sewer treatment facility is nearing its turn-on date.

Rob Hegstron, with J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls, gave the Filer City Council an update Tuesday on the $12.5 million membrane bioreactor sewer system expected to be completed and brought online by the end of August.

“We’re starting up equipment, moving water between basins and testing pumps on the plant site,” Hegstrom said. “We still have to populate the membranes with biological sewer bugs, and I’m sure we won’t be running completely problem-free at that point but everything is coming together nicely.”

Wastewater will move through anaerobic basins designed to remove phosphates and nitrates. The effluent is also subjected to additional filters and ultraviolet light to further remove impurities. Any remaining solids are subjected to pressure to extract any remaining moisture and dried for disposal. Treated water will be suitable for irrigation or aquifer recharge.

In connection with maintenance and operation of the new plant, city officials are considering an increase to the existing $47.50 monthly residential sewer rate.

“We don’t know what that figure will be yet, but it’s inevitable,” said Filer Mayor Bob Templeman. “We’re looking at the general M and O of a plant that’s of similar size in Bellevue and discussing things with the Department of Environmental Quality.”

Hard figures are expected to be available next month. The city will then hold two meetings to talk to the public about the changes: at noon Aug. 16 in the Filer Senior Haven’s 222 Main Street location, and at 6 p.m. Aug. 23 in the City Council Chambers at 300 Main St.

Gas Leak Briefly Shuts Down Lincoln Co. Courthouse

TIMES-NEWS

A gas leak forced a brief evacuation of the Lincoln County Courthouse in Shoshone on Friday, but was easily fixed.

Courthouse employees smelled gas a little after 1 p.m., after returning from lunch, said Mike Bright, the county’s disaster services coordinator. The building was evacuated for just more than an hour while firefighters and Intermountain Gas Co. responded to the scene, he said.

The culprit: a boiler malfunction. “Quite a bit” of gas built up in the basement. Intermountain Gas managed to shut off the supply and air the building out, Bright said.

A woman accused of robbing acquaintances received a chance to avoid most of her jail time.

Michelle Daniels, 26, of Twin Falls, was sentenced for felony robbery on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Daniels, who pleaded guilty in March, was one of four people accused of kicking in the door of a Twin Falls hotel room and taking personal items such as a notebook computer, purses and an iPod from the victims. Her sentence of five to 12 years in state prison may be suspended if she successfully completes the retained-jurisdiction program. She was also fined $3,000.

Idaho Mulls Another Run at Federal Schools Funding

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Idaho is one of 37 states mulling a run for federal Race to the Top dollars — this time for early learning programs.

The state this week notified the U.S. Department of Education of its intent to possibly apply for a new grant competition that the federal government has dubbed the Race to the Top-Early Learning Challenge. The program will pump $500 million total into the selected states that create plans for early learning systems with clearer standards, quality work force development and better coordination, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

States applying are encouraged to focus on areas like low-income and disadvantaged children, employee training and giving information to help parents make informed decisions, according to the federal education department.

Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said no decision has been made yet about whether Idaho will apply for the program.

The state still needs to determine eligibility first, then decide whether to apply, she said.

Idaho's effort at the federal dollars in 2010 fell flat, with the Gem State ending up among the 25 states that weren't selected.

Most of the comments that came back about its application were laws that would need to be changed, McGrath said, adding that most of the goals in the original application are accomplished through "Students Come First."

That's a package of state education reforms the Legislature passed this session.

Applications will be due later this year for dollar-seeking states, with the winners selected by Dec. 31.

T.F. URA Tabs $1.3 Million for Downtown Improvements

Agency's budget still awaits public hearing; sets aside $550,000 for 'downtown building partnerships.'

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency is looking at spending $1.3 million in downtown next year and, if the budget passes with that line item, wants downtown merchants and property owners to help decide how.

Executive Director Melinda Anderson said the cash could be spent on a variety of public improvements in the area, from water and sewer lines to park benches. If the board gives the budget the OK, she said she would like to meet with downtown merchants and property owners in the early fall to decide what's needed most.

The URA board voted 5-0 Thursday to send the budget to an Aug. 8 public hearing.

The city of Twin Falls' long-term plan, a fluid document that's subject to change, has the URA spending similar amounts on downtown projects over the next several years. Anderson emphasized that the plan, like all budgeting documents, isn't set in stone.

"We'd like to continue making that investment over the next few years because we know $1.3 million doesn't go very far," she said. "There's more work to do than that."

The URA's draft budget also has the agency setting aside $550,000 for "downtown building partnerships." Anderson said that money is "opportunistic," so the agency has the money available if a need for it arises. When asked if the money was intended to purchase the Banner building on Main Avenue — which consultant Mark Rivers has pegged as a future home of a community arts center — Anderson wouldn't say.

"Just as a placeholder, we wanted to hold out that much money to see if there is something we wanted to spend it on," she said.

The URA budget also has $65,000 set aside to keep Rivers' firm, Brix and Co., on hand through the year.

Also at the meeting, the URA board approved another $28,500 for facade work by downtown property owners and merchants. That leaves only about $3,000 left in the now-defunct Business Improve-

Idaho Inmate Wins New Trial on Lewd Conduct Charge

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • A man convicted of lewd conduct with a child two years ago has won a new trial in Bonneville County after the Idaho Supreme Court ruled he should have been able to cross-examine his 5-year-old accuser.

Prosecutors recently filed a motion seeking to transport Jonathan Earl Folk, 43, from a prison in Kuna to Bonneville County, where he represented himself during his 2009 trial on charges that he had oral-to-genital contact with a small boy, the Post Register reported.

The boy testified from a separate room in the courthouse via closed-circuit television during the trial, and Folk was asked to write down his questions, which were then posed to the boy by a standby public defender. At one point, the child fell asleep during questioning.

“Because there are no facts supporting the first finding, there are likewise no facts supporting the assumption.”

— Chief Justice Daniel Eismann

A jury found Folk guilty and he was sentenced to life in prison without parole.

He then appealed and argued, among other things, that his right to confront his young accuser had been violated during the trial.

In a June 30 ruling, the Idaho Supreme Court overturned the district court conviction. Justices found that there was not clear and convincing evidence presented to show the child would suffer serious emotional trauma if he were to testify in Folk's presence. The district court also assumed the child would suffer trauma if he heard Folk's voice asking him questions over closed-circuit television, according to the opinion authored by Chief Justice Daniel Eismann.

“Because there are no facts supporting the first finding, there are likewise no facts supporting the assumption,” Eismann wrote.

The unanimous ruling also found that instructions given to the jurors during deliberation were flawed.

Bonneville County Prosecutor Bruce Pickett was a deputy prosecutor when he argued the case for the state. He told the Post Register he could not discuss whether he would handle the case against Folk differently when it goes back to trial.

The case started on Christmas Day 2007, when an Idaho Falls woman and mother of three arrived home to prepare dinner and Folk was there to pick up a house guest. The woman told police that about 15 minutes after she started to prepare dinner, she went to check on her 5-year-old son and found him in his bedroom.

From the door, the woman told police she heard her child say, “That's gross.”

The woman told police she opened the door to find the boy lying on the bed with Folk kneeling in front of him with his hands on the boy's hips. Folk and the child said they were playing and then Folk left with the house guest.

The mother told police her son woke up that night and told her he had a nightmare about what the man had done to him. The mother said she asked the boy what happened and he would not answer. The woman told police the child later said the man had put his mouth on his genitals.

The mother called police and Folk was charged in January 2008 with a felony. His trial started a year later.

BOISE WOMAN TWICE GUILTY OF DUI NOW FACES FELONY

BOISE • A Boise woman convicted twice since 2006 for drunken driving now faces a felony DUI in Idaho's 4th District Court.

Police say 32-year-old Donita M. Anderson was pulled over at 2 a.m. Friday near downtown Boise after officers watched her car stop in the middle of a crosswalk. Officers say Anderson failed field sobriety tests and was arrested with a blood alcohol content that was above the legal limit.

The Idaho Statesman reports Anderson previously pleaded guilty to misdemeanor driving under the influence in 2006 and 2007.

In Idaho, a driver with two prior DUI convictions within a 10-year span can be charged with a felony. A preliminary hearing has been set for next month.

PARENTS ENTER PLEA FOR CHILD'S MALNUTRITION

GRANGEVILLE • A Harpster couple charged with endangering their daughter's life have entered Alford pleas to felony injury to a child.

Duane and Debra Wadsworth were charged after their daughter was brought to the hospital on Dec. 21 suffering from severe dehydration and malnutrition. Court records say her body was covered with bedsores and her toes and a finger were gangrenous.

Under an Alford plea, a defendant does not admit guilt, but acknowledges prosecutors have enough evidence to gain a conviction at trial.

District Judge Jeff Brudie scheduled sentencing for Oct. 4 and told the Wadsworths they would be sentenced as if they had been found guilty by a jury.

MAN FACES CHARGES AFTER DRIVING SPAT

SANDPOINT • Police say a northern Idaho man faces battery and reckless driving charges after he was confronted about speeding in a Sandpoint neighborhood and then punched the resident who approached him.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports 30-year-old George Johnson Earle Jr. will be arraigned on two misdemeanors Tuesday.

The alleged victim told police the July 4 confrontation started when Earle sped through his neighborhood while children were nearby and then came to a stop at a nearby parking lot. The man told police he approached Earle in the parking lot and turned to leave when the conversation turned argumentative.

FAILED TAMARACK GETS NEW SUITORS

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A Swiss bank has ended exclusive talks with an Idaho investor over Tamarack Resort, but homeowners with property at the failed vacation getaway say they have been approached by new suitors.

The details were disclosed in an internal email by the Tamarack Municipal Association obtained Friday by The Associated Press.

Credit Suisse Group is no longer talking exclusively with Green Valley Idaho, the investor group led by Matthew Hutcheson of Eagle, after weeks of discussions failed to reach a deal to buy control of a $250 million construction loan that's in default.

The loan is a key piece for anybody looking to resurrect Tamarack's ski and real-estate operation.

Now, newcomers with an eye on picking up Tamarack assets for pennies on the dollar, including its unfinished retail and condominium village and more than 2,000 vacation home sites, are jockeying for position as a foreclosure case advances through the courts.

“Green Valley remains in the hunt although not as Credit Suisse's exclusive offer,” Tamarack Municipal Association attorney Steve Lord told homeowners in the note obtained by the AP. “Staff have been approached by several new, prospective buyers all of whom seem to be interested in finding a path to aggregation of all assets and getting Matthew Hutcheson, president of Green Valley Idaho, is seen on June 23 during an interview in Boise. A Swiss bank has ended exclusive talks with Hutcheson over Tamarack Resort, but homeowners with property at the failed vacation getaway say they have been approached by new suitors. The details were disclosed in an internal email by the Tamarack Municipal Association obtained Friday by The Associated Press.

Lord told the AP that none of the prospective buyers had agreed to be disclosed publicly.

To win control of the resort before it goes to a foreclosure auction, prospective buyers like Hutcheson must come up with money to buy the loan but also convince roughly 40 members of the Credit Suisse-led lending consortium to all sign off on the final details, including a price destined to be a fraction of the original loan's value.

Hutcheson originally offered $40 million.

Resolving those difficulties has complicated completion of a transaction for the property that's still viewed by investors as extremely risky: The speculative vacation real-estate in isolated central Idaho with ski-and-recreation operations is unlikely to produce significant profits for years to come.

Hutcheson said Friday he still wants to buy Tamarack, despite expiration of the exclusivity agreement on July 7.

“Credit Suisse has always been able to discuss this matter with others except for a one-week period earlier this month,” Hutcheson said. “We have seen interested parties come and go, and are not concerned about that either. We have, and always will be, committed to final acquisition of Tamarack.”

Credit Suisse didn't return a phone call and e-mail seeking comment.

The future of the resort 90 miles north of Boise in the central Idaho mountains has been in doubt since 2008 when it defaulted on the Credit Suisse syndicate's loan. Its French-born majority owner, Jean-Pierre Boespflug, remains on the lam after skipping a state court hearing in June. He is racking up court fines of up to $5,000 a day.

Meanwhile, Bank of America is still trying to tear out two ski lifts it owns but hasn't been paid for.

Earlier this week, the bank's leasing division won permission from a planning commission in Valley County to remove the lifts without going through hearings to get special permits, though Bank of America first must fulfill 11 provisions designed to protect homeowners who desperately want those lifts to stay put.

The Tamarack homeowners could still appeal the commission's decision, a move that could delay Bank of America from tearing out the lifts for weeks or even months. Lord said he was still weighing the options.

“In the meantime, several interested parties have approached (Bank of America) about buying and leaving the lifts in place as part of their efforts to acquire the entire resort,” according to his internal email to Tamarack Municipal Association members.

Brad Goergen, Bank of America's lawyer in Seattle, didn't return a phone call.

Judge Appoints Special Master in Prison Lawsuit

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE (AP) • A federal judge has appointed a special master to see if the state is complying with court orders in a decades-old lawsuit over conditions at the Idaho State Correctional Institution.

The U.S. District Court hired Marc Stern, a doctor and correctional health care consultant from Tumwater, Wash., to determine whether the state is complying with a ruling designed to improve medical and mental health care for inmates at the prison south of Boise. His report is due to the court in six months.

“I'm honored to have been appointed and I look forward to learning about it and meeting and working with the parties to help them resolve the issue,” Stern said Friday.

The long-running case began in the early 1980s when so many inmates from the Idaho State Correctional Institution began filing lawsuits that the cases threatened to clog Idaho's federal dockets. The judge combined them all into one class-action lawsuit, which became known as the “Balla case” after lead plaintiff Walter Balla.

Over the next three decades, the various federal judges overseeing the lawsuit made three major rulings. They ordered Idaho leaders to stop overcrowding, provide warm clothing to inmates, improve access to medical and psychiatric care and rehabilitation programs, and take other measures to make sure the prison would no longer be, in the words of former U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan, “an extremely violent place to live.”

But the case kept bouncing back to the federal courts as inmates maintained that while some issues had improved, problems at the prison continued and wouldn't likely be fixed until Idaho leaders improved prison budgets and facilities. The state, meanwhile, has argued that the prison has changed so dramatically — with new buildings, new contractors, new leaders and evolved policies — that the old Balla rulings essentially focus on a facility that doesn't exist anymore and so are virtually impossible to enforce.

The state contends that if there are still problems at ISCI, inmates should file new lawsuits that accurately reflect the present circumstances.

But even Idaho Department of Correction officials have demonstrated some concerns with the way Idaho's contractor, Correctional Medical Services Inc., has administered medical care at ISCI.

An investigation by The Associated Press earlier this year found that Idaho has fined CMS more than $382,500 in recent years for failing to meet some of the most basic health care requirements outlined by the state. Both Idaho Department of Correction officials and CMS leaders say those problems have since been resolved, and the fines ended in May.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill said Stern's opinion of the medical and mental health care situation at ISCI should be informed both by his professional experience in the delivery of prison medical care, and in his knowledge of the Eighth Amendment, which prohibits prison officials from being deliberately indifferent to prisoners' serious medical needs.

Stern's experience includes a year working as a regional medical director for Correctional Medical Services in New York. He left the company on good terms, and Winnmill said the previous association likely wouldn't affect Stern's analysis of the situation at the Idaho prison.

Most Chinook Fishing to End Soon on Two Rivers

LEWISTON (AP) • Fishing for Chinook salmon will close on most of the lower Salmon River in Idaho and on the Imnaha River in Oregon in the next few days.

A section of the Salmon River between Cottonwood and Riggins will close starting Monday morning, along with the section from Shorts Creek to the boat ramp at Vinegar Creek.

The Imnaha River in the northeastern corner of Oregon will close to chinook fishing at sun-down Saturday.

Judge Deals Rock Creek Mine Developer Another Blow

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • A Helena judge has ruled that a mining company must go through a more rigorous permitting process before it can build a copper and silver mine in the northwestern Montana wilderness.

Judge Kathy Seeley says her decision Thursday centered on the potential degradation of threatened bull trout habitat by the sediment generated by the Rock Creek mine's construction.

Seeley voided Revett Minerals Inc.'s general permits approved by the state Department of Environmental Quality.

Instead, Revett must apply for individual permits that require a public comment process.

Idaho to Sell $200M Bonds for Unemployment Debt

BOISE (AP) • Idaho is weeks away from selling bonds to refinance roughly $200 million in loans from the federal government that have propped up the state's unemployment safety net during the recession.

Idaho Housing and Finance Association officials are working with ratings agencies and plan to begin marketing the bonds to investors within a month and a half.

Idaho borrowed the money interest-free from the federal government starting in 2009, but the federal government is now set to charge interest.

Idaho hopes its four-year bonds have an interest rate of less than 3 percent, less than the 4.1 percent that could have been charged by the federal government.

And by paying off the federal debt at once, Idaho leaders predict they'll spare businesses a $157 million hit over the next three years.

N. Idaho Woman Wanted on Manslaughter Charge

BOISE (AP) • Authorities say a northern Idaho woman is wanted on charges of vehicle manslaughter in a December crash that left a 77-year-old man dead.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's Office announced

Friday that 33-year-old Lisa Marie Calbick, of Kellogg, is wanted on a $50,000 warrant.

The sheriff's office says Calbick was traveling on Interstate 90 near Post Falls on Dec. 15 when her car rear-ended another vehicle that flew over the shoulder of the road, where it landed upside down. The driver of the vehicle that was hit, 77-year-old Donald Graham of Rathdrum, was pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Feds Say Yellowstone Oil Cleanup Will Take More People

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Exxon Mobil Corp. will have to bring in more people to mop up oil from a broken pipeline beneath the Yellowstone River as receding floodwaters reveal new contamination, federal officials said Friday.

Also Friday, Montana environmental regulators said the pipeline may have leaked up to 1,200 barrels of oil into the scenic river. That equals 50,400 gallons and is 20 percent higher than prior estimates from Exxon Mobil.

Water levels on the Yellowstone have dropped six feet since the July 1 accident. Hundreds of logjams and debris piles, many coated in a layer of drying crude, now litter its banks and islands.

After burning the piles was rejected by state officials, representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday that oiled debris will have to be pulled apart, run through wood-chippers and hauled away.

EPA on-scene coordinator Craig Myers said that will take more people than the 750 Exxon Mobil now has in Montana for the spill.

“They’re planning on ramping that up in short order,” Myers said Friday as he toured an area along the river where dozens of cleanup workers were cutting down oil-fouled trees and plants.

Standing in front of a jumble of weathered wood smeared with crude, Myers said the prevalence of the piles “is going to change how many people Exxon has to get in here to deal with those.”

Most of the work to date has been concentrated along a roughly 30-mile stretch of river from the spill site in Laurel downstream to east of Billings. Exxon Mobil spokeswoman Claire Hassett would not say how many more people might be brought in or whether that would speed a cleanup that the EPA wants done by Sept. 9.

“We intend to bring in the resources we need to ensure the cleanup is conducted efficiently and thoroughly,” Hassett said.

The investigation into why the pipeline broke could take months to complete, pipeline safety officials have said.

Floodwaters pushed oil deep into back waters and side channels along the river, where trees are now ringed with oil several feet off the ground.

Crews also have found oil on numerous islands along the river. Myers said wood chippers and other equipment would be flown to those islands by helicopter, which would also be used to cart away oiled debris for disposal in out-of-state landfills.

A total number of sites with oil has not been established. Forty-six were found from the air in the first days after the spill. Since then, the government has stopped tallying individual sites, and it hasn’t it been able to provide any mileage or acreage estimates for land and shoreline impacted by the spill.

The higher spill volume estimate of 50,400 gallons was based on the state’s determination that the pipe did not just have a hole in it but was completely severed, said Mike Trombetta with the Montana Department of Environmental Quality.

Exxon Mobil did not immediately respond to an inquiry from The Associated Press about the higher volume.

CONSERVATION CUTS ARE A LOSS AMERICANS CANNOT AFFORD

Each year, more than 1 million people participate in hunting, fishing and other wildlife-related recreation in Idaho, contributing $932 million to our state’s economy.

The North American Wetlands Conservation Act has conserved more than 65,000 acres in Idaho, and the Land and Water Conservation Fund has helped conserve the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation Area and Henry’s Fork Wetlands. These areas provide our state and citizens with a variety of recreational and economic opportunities.

Conservation programs have positive impacts on our state’s outdoor traditions and our economy. However, the future of these economically viable conservation programs is in jeopardy.

Both the North American Wetlands Conservation Act and the Land and Water Conservation Fund have garnered bipartisan support for their fiscally responsible approach to conservation. Without congressional support, both these programs and our economy are at risk.

For more information, visit www.ducks.org/publicpolicy

By investing in conservation today, we can ensure future generations will enjoy Idaho’s wildlife tomorrow.

WITNESS: SERGEANT BRAGGED OF KILLING UNARMED CIVILIANS

JOINT BASE LEWIS-McCHORD, Wash. (AP)

• A soldier accused of masterminding the murders of three Afghan civilians last year boasted about one of the killings, an Army medic testified Friday.

Pvt. Robert Stevens told an investigating officer during a hearing at Joint Base Lewis-McChord south of Seattle that Staff Sgt. Calvin Gibbs of Billings, Mont., acknowledged participating in the February 2010 killing, The News Tribune newspaper reported.

The victim has previously been described as a random civilian target, but Stevens, of Portland, Ore., testified that Gibbs said he suspected the unarmed man was involved in the Taliban and that Gibbs was "sick of picking him up and letting him go."

Stevens said Gibbs recounted how he fired off a couple rounds from an AK-47 he had illicitly obtained, kicked the weapon toward the Afghan, and then shot him with his Army-issued M4 rifle. The placement of the AK-47 near the victim was intended to make him appear to have been a combatant.

Those details generally back up an account of the shooting given by the government's key witness, Pvt. Jeremy Morlock, of Wasilla, Alaska. Morlock has admitted being involved in all three killings and testified Thursday that it was Gibbs' idea to start killing civilians. Morlock has been sentenced to 24 years in prison.

Gibbs and Morlock are among five soldiers charged in the killings in Kandahar Province. Gibbs is also charged with keeping severed fingers from the dead and other misconduct, including leading others in beating up a soldier who reported drug use in the unit.

He denies the charges and maintains the killings were appropriate engagements.

Stevens has described himself as a close friend of Gibbs at the time of the killings and said that although he was in a different unit, Gibbs frequently suggested that Stevens join him on patrols. During one of those patrols, he said in a sworn statement previously given to investigators, Gibbs ordered him and others to fire at two unarmed men in a field. They missed.

"When SSG Gibbs called for us to fire I knew there was not a threat, and that there was no reason to shoot these guys," Stevens said in the statement. "I was extremely thankful to find out that we had not killed or wounded either of those two individuals, and I regret not trying to stop Staff Sgt. Gibbs from trying to kill innocent people."

Stevens pleaded guilty in December to charges stemming from that shooting and other misconduct allegations in a deal that called for him to serve nine months in prison, be demoted from staff sergeant to private, and testify against other defendants.

Stevens also said Gibbs had shown him a finger he claimed to have cut from the body of an Afghan National Army or Afghan National Police member killed by a roadside bomb, and that Gibbs illicitly collected weapons. Others claimed that Gibbs dropped such weapons near the bodies of civilians to make them appear to have been combatants.

Eminent Domain Not Quite Imminent for MATL

BY MATT GOURAS

Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • The stalled power line project running north to Canada remains plagued by testy, and often failed, negotiations with landowners despite the new and clarified eminent domain powers granted the company in a much-ballyhooped legislative fix.

Little appears changed since lawmakers — many begrudgingly — rushed to the aid of the Montana-Alberta Tie Line project and other utility companies with a new law that aimed to clarify such operations had eminent domain power. Landowners and their advocates seethed at the time, arguing the law would let the big companies steamroll through their projects without paying just compensation.

For MATL, however, little appears different more than two months later.

It remains mired in a court battle with disgruntled landowners — a dispute hardened by past grievances that are slow to ease. New mediation attempts to redraw the route of the power line in some places recently collapsed collapse amid complex arguments over easement language, compensation and other issues.

Both sides agree the newly filed eminent domain proceedings do not promise the company a speedy closure to the issues. Both sides continue to negotiate a litany of differences with more than two dozen holdout landowners who control about 90 parcels of land.

The landowners feel confident that their legal battles provide enough cover to force agreement on the issues.

"I think there is always time to settle," said Bozeman attorney Hertha Lund, representing some of the landowners. "And I think if MATL had been fair to the landowners and more thoughtful they would have most everything settled already."

MATL, still, has an entirely different take.

The company's representatives argue that the demands from the landowners keep changing — along with the price tag sought for crossing the properties. Proposed compensation covering annual payments for pole placement and up-front fees for disturbances and easements exceed industry averages, said MATL spokesman Darryl James.

Problems persist with the best known case where Shirley Salois and her son Larry, Little Shell Indians, gained attention fighting to preserve historic teepee rings in a ranch just off the Blackfeet Indian reservation. MATL said it is frustrated because it believes the disagreements are turning to other issues, like money, since a deal appears worked out on a new route that regulators could sign off on by early August.

"Now they are pulling back and making additional demands," said James.

The MATL project, backed by the Canada-based Tonbridge Power Inc., is a 230-kilovolt transmission line along a 214-mile corridor that has the backing of many of Montana's top officials including Gov. Brian Schweitzer. But it has received a cool reception by some who aren't too excited about a foreign corporation using eminent domain authority for a utility that does not service Montana retail customers.

Lund, representing the Salois, said there are no additional demands. She said on some issues one firm hired by MATL is not communicating the outstanding issues with other firms. She pointed out that MATL could have long ago agreed with Salois to reroute the lines, but instead the company decided to file an eminent domain action that was beat back in court and led to a new law out of the Legislature.

Larry Salois said one of the new issues cropped up when the lines were drawn for a new line route. He said dormant oil wellheads need to be protected in case they can be used later.

And he said he is not prematurely cutting a deal and wants to make sure whatever is worked out is acceptable to other landowners Lund represents, although he believes a deal is within reach. The extra money to cover legal fees, which will be in excess of $50,000 according to one recent document, is needed since they have been paying for a long court battle out of pocket.

Police say the man is six-feet-two-inches tall and about 175 pounds. He has grey hair and blue eyes.

Anyone with information is asked to contact authorities.

Vegas Mom Gets 5 to 20 Years for Son's Death

LAS VEGAS (AP) • A 43-year-old Las Vegas mother tearfully apologized in court for the death of her 4-year-old disabled son, who was found dead after 17 hours in a hot vehicle.

Clark County District Court Judge Douglas Herndon was unmoved and sentenced her to five to 20 years in prison.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal reports the judge told Colleen Rimer at sentencing Thursday that she failed as a mother, and that Jason Rimer died in June 2008 because no one in the family cared to go find him.

Colleen Rimer and her husband, Stanley Rimer, were convicted March 1 of involuntary manslaughter and child abuse.

Jurors were told the parents physically abused five of their eight children and lived in squalor.

Stanley Rimer was sentenced previously to eight to 30 years in prison.

Kim Fahey is seen with his Phonehenge monument at his home in Acton, Calif., in a mountainous arid area north of Los Angeles, Tuesday. He constructed the colorful collection of oddball buildings connected by bridges and ramps over nearly 30 years without bothering to get building permits or having the county sign off on the electrical wiring or plumbing.

Sentence Delay for Creator of Odd California Village

BY JOHN ROGERS
The Associated Press

LANCASTER, Calif. • The eccentric builder of a village of odd-shaped structures called Phonehenge West avoided a trip to jail Friday when a judge who was to sentence him on a dozen building code violations learned he has begun to dismantle the colorful Mojave Desert enclave.

Superior Court Judge Daviann L. Mitchell said she was prepared revoke Kim Fahey's bail and send him to jail until prosecutors told her Fahey had begun to follow her orders, shutting off power to most of Phonehenge's buildings and hiring a company to tear down a 70-foot tower that overshadows everything else in his quiet, rural neighborhood 50 miles north of Los Angeles.

Fahey himself wasn't in court. His lawyer said he went to a hospital with a painful kidney stone Thursday and was under powerful painkillers and unable to attend. Fahey's wife, Pat, brought a note from her husband's doctor.

"Please let Mr. Fahey know the court does appreciate his movement on this case," Mitchell said as she rescheduled his sentencing hearing for Aug. 5.

"We've sat through the whole trial kind of bewildered that they're doing it to him. They have no problem displacing someone from their property because they had something wrong that they were not willing to help them fix."

— Kevin Barber, a longtime friend of the creator of Phonehenge West

She said she would be willing to delay it again if Fahey, 59, is not well by then.

He could face a maximum of a year in jail on each conviction but could also receive probation.

Fahey, a retired phone company technician, built Phonehenge West over a period of almost 30 years, mainly out of foraged and bartered materials. He fought with Los Angeles County building inspectors almost from the start over his refusal to submit plans for his buildings and obtain county permits.

In the meantime, he built a replica of a 16th century Viking house and an antique railroad car, a sprawling barn, a small stone structure and numerous other buildings. He linked them together with a series of colorful bridges and catwalks resembling something out of the Tom Sawyer's Island attraction at Disneyland.

Fahey crafted his buildings out of everything from steel beams he salvaged from an ocean pier and a car wash, to discarded power company utility poles, to a spiral staircase he said actor Danny DeVito, one of his phone company clients, was throwing away.

After a jury convicted Fahey last month, Mitchell ordered him to tear down every building on the property except the house that was there when he bought the place.

When he initially ignored her, she threw him in jail. His family bailed him out last week.

Since then, Deputy District Attorney Patrick David Campbell told the judge, Fahey has begun to comply with her order, evicting several tenants who lived in the buildings, shutting off most of the electricity and moving out himself.

The prosecutor added that Fahey has also contracted with a company to begin tearing down the tower Aug. 1. Fahey's lawyer, Jerry Lennon, said his client would take the other buildings down one at a time after that, and the judge and prosecutor seemed satisfied.

"He seemingly has complied with the most urgent orders," Campbell said.

Fahey's supporters, several of whom came to court Friday, have hailed his creation as a stunning example of American folk art and complained that he has a right to do what he wants with his property.

"We've sat through the whole trial kind of bewildered that they're doing it to him," said Kevin Barber, a longtime friend. "They have no problem displacing someone from their property because they had something wrong that they were not willing to help them fix."

Although he's tearing the place down, Fahey said earlier this week he still plans to appeal his conviction.

"They got my place and they ran me out, but the fight's not over," he said.

Chicago Man Once Thought Dead Arrested in Las Vegas

BY MICHELLE RINDELS
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS (AP) • A former Chicago commodities broker who disappeared amid gambling and marital problems 32 years ago and was later declared legally dead has been found living under a false name and working as a bookie in Las Vegas, authorities said Friday.

Arthur Gerald Jones, a husband and father of three, was reported missing May 11, 1979, and declared dead by an Illinois court in 1986.

FBI agents had investigated his disappearance as suspicious and focused on possible mob connections, but they never solved the missing persons case, according to an affidavit filed earlier this week.

Jones, 72, was arrested Tuesday on four felony counts related to identity theft and fraud after officials say he renewed his Nevada driver's license in 2008 under his assumed name, Joseph Richard Sandelli.

Authorities say before Jones disappeared, he paid a friend in Chicago $800 for fake documents and a Social Security number belonging to another man.

Jones' lawyer, Stephen Stein, said the Nevada attorney general's office is offering his client a plea deal that would allow him to plead guilty on one of the charges and face probation. Jones posted bail Thursday and has not yet discussed the plea deal with Stein.

He is set for an Aug. 23 court hearing.

A criminal complaint filed Monday in Las Vegas Justice Court paints the picture of a powerful Chicago financier tormented by snowballing gambling debts.

Jones told investigators he held a seat with the Chicago Board of Trade and lived with his wife, Joanne Esplin, and three young children in Highland Park, Ill.

But Jones said he was forced to sell his board seat to pay debts, according to the affidavit.

Esplin said her husband forged her name to get a second mortgage on the couple's home and pay personal gambling debts, the document alleged. She said she suspected he was delivering money or running errands for the Chicago mob.

His marriage troubled and finances in shambles, Jones told investigators he decided to leave to get a "fresh start," the affidavit said.

Esplin and Jones had been married 17 years when he disappeared. According to the affidavit, Esplin told investigators the last time she saw her husband — whose gambling once led him to bet $30,000 on a basketball game — was May 11, 1979, when he left to run an errand. She said he looked very nervous at the time.

Jones never spoke to his family or friends again. Presuming he had died, Social Security paid his family $47,000 in survivor benefits, the document said.

Attempts by The Associated Press to contact Esplin were unsuccessful Friday.

Earlier this month, investigators from the Social Security Administration contacted Nevada DMV officials. They were investigating Jones for using the Social Security number of a man named Clifton Goodenough, according to the affidavit.

Investigators say Jones used his Joseph Sandelli alias to get a Nevada driver's license when he moved to Nevada in 1988, and renewed it in 2008. Authorities say he also lived in Florida and California after leaving Chicago.

Stein said his client has friends in Las Vegas who "consider him family" and who sprang to his defense after the arrest.

DMV spokesman Kevin Malone said cases like Jones' are turning up more frequently as computer databases improve and law enforcement agencies are better able to communicate among themselves.

"Technology is catching up," he said.

The Social Security Administration is continuing its investigation.

Canadian Man Charged with Arson in Utah Threats

BY JENNIFER DOBNER
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A federal judge on Friday ordered the temporary detention of a British Columbia man who is accused of traveling to Utah to start arson fires as part of an ongoing financial dispute.

Tien Ming Chen, of Vancouver, is charged with two counts each of arson and interstate travel to commit an act of violence.

If convicted, the 29-year-old faces up to 60 years in prison.

U.S. Magistrate Judge David Nuffer appointed federal public defender Benjamin Hamilton as Chen's attorney during an initial court appearance in Salt Lake City.

Hamilton did not immediately return a phone message seeking comment.

Chen has not yet entered a plea. A detention hearing was set for next week and Chen was scheduled to be arraigned Aug. 4.

In court papers, prosecutors say Chen, who also uses the name Isaac Chen, began harassing Utah residents in April, when he made the first of several trips to leave threatening letters at the doorsteps of two homes.

Prosecutors say the first letter, left at a residence in Alpine, included detailed information about its intended recipient and that person's family, although the letter was incorrectly delivered to a neighbor's home. It said the residents had "ignored and hid from us holding our money illegally," and it threatened to continue the harassment until "someone is very, very sorry."

OBITUARY

Norm Carroll

May 26, 1932-July 21, 2011

On Thursday, July 21, 2011, Norm Carroll, 79, of Twin Falls, died peacefully at his home with his family by his side.

He was born May 26, 1932, in Colorado Springs, Colo., to Oliver and Willa Carroll. He attended school in Grand Junction, Colo., and was a star football player for the local high school, where he met his lifelong sweetheart, Patricia. They were married in 1951 and were blessed with three children. He worked for Sears until 1958, when he moved the family to Twin Falls, Idaho. He started Coast to Coast hardware store in 1959 and moved to Jerome. He ventured on from that into a new business, BS&R Equipment Co. in 1968. After selling it to his son, Tim, he retired in 1990 and later moved to Twin Falls.

He had a deep faith and was a mentor to many. He was active in the Presbyterian Church in Jerome as an elder and deacon and taught many classes in theology, which he was very passionate about. He was a member of the Twin Falls Reformed Church in 1995. He and Pat had many happy times exploring the Snake River Basin and Bruneau Canyon. He loved learning about Indian artifacts, hiking, camping, fishing and golf. He was quite talented in his wood shop and made many gifts for his children, grandkids, great-grandkids and friends through the years. He loved his family passionately and spent many hours sharing his interests and teaching them his many talents.

He was preceded in death by his parents, four siblings and one granddaughter. He is survived by his wife of 60 years, Patricia; children, Daniel (Wendy) Carroll, Conni (Dale) Serr and Tim (Jill) Carroll; grandchildren, Kimber (Darwin) Dudley, Terice (Jason) Grigg, Matthew (Jenna) Serr, David Serr, Paula (Seth) Murdock, Andrew Carroll and Jake (Ruthann) Carroll; and five great-grandchildren, Kalise and Jerrica Dudley, Logan and Mackayla Grigg, and Nora Serr.

A special thanks to Travis and Erin from St. Luke's Hospice.

The family suggests memorials be made to the charity of your choice.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, July 25, at Rosenau Funeral Home in Twin Falls. Family and friends may share their thoughts and memories at www.rosenaufuneral-home.com.

Fire Fee a Solution for Strapped Western States

BY DON THOMPSON AND JEFF BARNARD

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. • The wildfire season in California has been tame so far, but that isn't stopping lawmakers from trying to make sure the cash-strapped state has enough money to fight future fires.

They already have a solution: charge an annual fire-fighting fee to people who live in or near forests.

Neighboring states have been using similar fees for years. As more people move closer to forests and wildfires become more costly, a fee may prove more attractive to legislators when the alternative is to cut programs elsewhere in the budget.

Critics of the California fee call it unfair, saying rural residents already pay taxes to the state and should expect basic services in times of emergency. Supporters disagree, saying that people who live in fire-prone areas should pay for their own protection.

"This bill recognizes that a portion of the costs borne by the state for wildland fire prevention and protection services should be funded by the landowners in these areas," Gov. Jerry Brown said in his signing statement.

The West has seen an explosion in the amount of acreage burned by wildfires during the past decade. At the same time, costs have increased to fight fires in the growing communities nestled in what once were remote areas.

Nationwide, the equivalent of California's population — nearly 38 million people — has moved into areas where forests border cities and suburbs over the last 20 years, said Mark Rey, who had oversight of the U.S. Forest Service during the George W. Bush administration. Rey said that vastly complicates the job of fighting wildfires.

The firefighting fees have been helpful in Oregon, Rey said. "I don't think Oregon

"We're moving in the wrong direction if we think we solve this problem by making people pay more taxes. We have to get really serious about thinning and removing debris in the forest and stopping these catastrophic fires."

otherwise would have the quality of firefighting response it has today without those," he said.

In California, a $150 annual firefighting fee will be levied on rural homeowners. According to the state, more than 846,000 homes covered by the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection would be affected.

The department is responsible for preventing and fighting wildfires on 31 million rural acres. The vast area covers about one-third of California, including much of the Sierra Nevada foothills and the coastal mountain ranges from Santa Barbara to the Oregon border.

The federal government is primarily for firefighting on another roughly 40 million acres, mostly at higher elevations.

California expects to collect $50 million in the first year the fee is imposed and ultimately $200 million a year, which would equal 20 percent of the annual budget of the Forestry and Fire Protection department.

The fee and the revenue eclipse much smaller fees on far fewer owners in Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington.

Owners of smaller parcels in Washington pay $18 a year, while most Oregon forest homeowners pay about $66 annually. The assessments date back decades, to the years when private timber companies first taxed themselves to pay for fire protection.

While the dedicated firefighting fee is a budgeting solution where it's been implemented, officials in three Western states that have suffered major wildfire damage this year or last — Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado — say they have no plans to impose one.

To help defray the costs of fighting wildfires, Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper recently signed a bill transferring some $3 million in taxes the state receives from drilling and mining to the state's Wildfire Preparedness Fund. That money typically goes to local governments to offset the effects of drilling, such as damaged roads.

A legislator representing a forested district in eastern Arizona — where a fire this May and June became the largest in state history — said she hasn't heard talk of such a charge.

"We're moving in the wrong direction if we think we solve this problem by making people pay more taxes," Republican Sen. Sylvia Allen said. "We have to get really serious about thinning and removing debris in the forest and stopping these catastrophic fires."

State officials say the state likely used its entire $5 million budget to fight fires for the just-concluded fiscal year in May and June alone.

New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez said this week that her administration is not considering a wildfire fee.

Oregon Associate State Forester Paul Bell said it costs 48 percent more to fight fires around homes than it does in the open forest because of the more intensive use of helicopters and bulldozers and a higher concentration of firefighters. In addition, he said more fires start around homes than in the wild.

Nevada Lawmaker Receives Campaign Funds Case Court Date

BY KEN RITTER

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. • A former Nevada lawmaker who held elected office for 25 years once chaired a powerful Assembly committee is facing a Sept. 8 evidentiary hearing in Las Vegas on felony misuse of campaign funds charges that could get him more than 25 years in state prison.

Former Democratic state Assemblyman Morse Arberry Jr. didn't appear in court Friday while Justice of the Peace Diana Sullivan set the preliminary hearing date, attorneys for both sides said.

The prosecutor, Deputy Nevada Attorney General Thom Gover, said Arberry was processed at the Clark County jail on the criminal charges. He remained free without bail.

Arberry's lawyer, George Kelesis, said later that even before getting a look at the state's case he was confident evidence will show that Arberry did nothing illegal.

"We haven't received discovery, but I believe that based on the evidence he has not committed a crime," Kelesis said.

Arberry, 58, a former mortgage company owner, was first elected to the Assembly in 1984. He served for 14 years as chairman of the powerful Assembly Ways and Means Committee. He resigned in 2010, just before he was set to leave office because of term limits, to become a lobbyist.

A criminal complaint filed June 24 accuses Arberry of six felonies, including perjury and offering a false instrument for filing. It alleges he funneled more than $120,000 in campaign funds to personal accounts. If convicted of all charges, he could face up to 27 years.

Arberry is accused of lying on three separate campaign contribution and expense reports by failing to report more than 100 contributions greater than $100 during the 2008 election cycle.

Those contributions came from donors including casino companies, banks, a gold mining company, real estate agents, firefighters and teacher unions.

Utah Police Raid Seven Homes Following Gang Shooting

BY JOSH LOFTIN

Associated Press

KEARNS, Utah • Police responded to a wave of gang violence in suburban Salt Lake City with raids by more than 100 officers on seven houses Friday morning.

Officers were specifically looking for a gun used during a July 12 shootout at a Kearns park that injured a 17-year-old boy, but they also wanted to send a message to members of two rival gangs in the area that their escalating war needs to stop, said Salt Lake County Sheriff Jim Winder.

Police didn't find the gun, but they did make three arrests. One was of another 17-year-old who they say was one of the shooters at Mountain Man Park. The others were adults not involved in the shooting who were arrested for other crimes.

Since the shootout, five juveniles between ages 14 and 17 have been arrested.

Winder said there has been a series of retaliatory attacks in the area between members of the Surenos and Nortenos gangs. Although none of those involved guns, knives and other weapons were used.

"These things can immediately mushroom. ... It's important that when things gets hot, we need to respond in a big way. That's what we did," Winder said.

The July 12 shootout happened at the park while youth soccer games were under way, and there were at least 150 witnesses, Winder said. It began when one 17-year-old was shot in the leg and escalated from there.

The injured boy was arrested after he was released from the hospital. Nobody else was hurt.

Unified police Lt. Justin Hoyal said his department has become increasingly concerned about gang activity this summer, especially after a drive-by shooting in May. Although not directly tied to the park shootout, it involved juvenile members of the same two gangs.

"These are connected because they're part of the ongoing gang violence that we're trying to put to a stop," Hoyal said.

Winder said the number of juveniles involved in the attacks is worrisome, but because of budget constraints there is little that can be done right now by police or schools to prevent youth involvement in gangs.

"If I had my way, we'd be doing 15 after-school programs a week," Winder said. "But because of the budgets, we're only able to be responsive."

CHEERS AND JEERS

Magic Valley's Archetypal Public Servant Moves On

CHEERS: Magic Valley county commissioners don't come better than Jerry Nance.

Nance, who resigned effective June 30 to move with his wife to Oregon, served for 24 years on the Lincoln County Commission. Besides providing stability and continuity for a county that's been through a lot of different commissioners, the Republican was at the center of nearly every successful collaboration with other counties: the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, the Southern Idaho Solid Waste District and the Idaho County Risk Management Program. The 65-year-old rancher also served as chairman of the Big Wood Canal Co.

"My motto is to always remember who you work for, and that is the taxpayers," said Nance, who was the longest-serving of south-central Idaho's 24 county commissioners. He'll be missed.

JEERS: Want to find out if you're being overcharged for health insurance premiums here in Idaho? Right now, you're out of luck.

So starting Sept. 1, the federal government will step in and play watchdog.

It's all a consequence of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's executive order this year prohibiting the state from carrying out the 2010 health care reform law.

Idaho can't meet the law's demands for health insurance rate oversight, so the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services will do the job.

The state falls short of the federal requirement because of its unwillingness to implement health care reform and its policy of not disclosing health insurance rate increases to the public. That information is considered proprietary.

The cost of health insurance nationally for a family of four has risen 131 percent in the past 12 years. Seems to us that's the public's business.

CHEERS: We don't know what kind of Idaho State Tax Commissioner Rich Jackson will turn out to be. But he's sure saying the right things as he starts the job.

The Tax Commission has received much criticism in recent years, ranging from whistleblowers' allegations that it was cutting secret deals with politically connected taxpayers to the resignation of former Chairman Royce Chigbrow in January amid a criminal investigation. Earlier this month, the Ada County prosecutor announced he wouldn't bring charges against Chigbrow despite having found evidence of wrongdoing on at least one count involving mishandling of checks, because a statute of limitations had expired on that charge. Chigbrow had been accused by commission employees of intervening on behalf of his son's accounting firm and attempting to use his position to help a friend embroiled in a dispute with a former business partner.

Jackson is blunt about the impact of the Chigbrow scandal. "I think it tarnished not only the Tax Commission, but CPAs," he told the Spokane Review of Spokane, Wash.

"I'm hurt over it, it's unfortunate," Jackson said.

The 56-year-old Boise accountant is withdrawing from his CPA partnership, Jackson and Coles in Boise, and said he'll recuse himself from any issues involving former clients, partners or employees of the firm. He's resigning as chairman of the Idaho Legislative Compensation Committee, treasurer of the Boise Metro Chamber PAC, a member of the Idaho Manufactured Housing Board and treasurer of the Idaho House of Representatives Republican Caucus.

Jackson apparently understands that the only thing a public servant really owns is his integrity.

Balanced Budget Amendment? Good Luck With That

Walter E. Dellinger II

For decades, supporting a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution has conveniently allowed many politicians to seem serious about the deficit without actually having to identify a single spending cut or tax increase. It was a neat trick — until now.

Members of the House are poised to vote on such an amendment next week. With President Obama and the House speaker, John Boehner, in negotiations over a major budget deal, and little interest in the Senate, the amendment seems to have little chance of being passed. But the fact that so many House members support the amendment is alarming; if it were to become law, it would do grave harm to our constitutional system, because the process for enforcing it would be uncertain and perilous.

Most versions of the proposal set a seemingly simple rule for the federal budget: "Total outlays for any fiscal year shall not exceed total receipts for that fiscal year." (Some versions also provide that outlays cannot exceed a certain percentage of the previous year's gross domestic product.) But how will it come about? The amendment does not say. Even if every member of Congress favored a combination of taxes and expenditures that would be in balance, there is no way to ensure any particular proposal would gain majority support. And even if Congress was able to agree on a budget in which receipts exceeded expenditures, what happens if later in the fiscal year spending turns out to be greater, or revenue less, than expected?

Could the president take the position that the amendment confers upon him the authority to ignore appropriations and entitlements, or the Impoundment Control Law, which restricts the president from withholding funds for programs he opposes? Under that reading, the amendment would give a president sweeping new powers while providing no guidance on how to exercise them.

Court is where the whole budget process would likely wind up. Unlike older versions of the amendment, the current proposals clearly contemplate judicial involvement and even provide that members of Congress can bring lawsuits to enforce the limits.

What a nightmare. Allowing federal judges to make fundamental decisions about spending whenever outlays threatened to exceed receipts would be an extraordinary expansion of judicial authority. Absolutely nothing in the training or experience of judges remotely equips them to decide whether weapons systems or Social Security should be cut.

Robert H. Bork, a former solicitor general and federal judge, once said an amendment would result in "hundreds, if not thousands, of lawsuits around the country, many of them on inconsistent theories and providing inconsistent results."

"By the time the Supreme Court straightened the whole matter out," he said, "the budget in question would be at least four years out of date and lawsuits involving the next three fiscal years would be slowly climbing toward the Supreme Court."

Because judicial budgeting would so distort our constitutional system, federal judges might find a way to avoid playing such a profoundly inappropriate role. While that would preserve the judiciary as we know it, it would also render the amendment unenforceable.

That is not a good alternative. Placing an empty promise in the Constitution could have a very corrosive effect. It would be wonderful if we could declare that from this day forward the air would be clean, our children well educated and the budget forever in balance. But merely putting such things in the Constitution — as some foreign governments have done — would not make them happen.

Walter Dellinger III was an assistant attorney general and acting solicitor general under President Bill Clinton.

States Enact Record Wave of Anti-Abortion Laws

BY DAVID CRARY AND TIMBERLY ROSS
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) • Inspired by a contentious Nebraska law, abortion opponents in five other states have won passage of measures banning virtually all abortions after five months of pregnancy.

The late-term bans — based on the premise that fetuses at that stage can feel pain, a view that has been disputed — are among a record wave of more than 80 restrictions aimed at reducing access to abortion, all of them approved so far this year in state legislatures. Other measures expand pre-abortion counseling requirements, ban abortion coverage in new insurance exchanges, and subject abortion clinics to tough new regulations.

With only a few legislatures still in session, each side in the abortion debate is now assessing the potential impact of the new laws. They may not drastically slash the overall number of U.S. abortions — 1.2 million a year at last count — but they have emboldened anti-abortion activists, angered abortion providers, and will likely make decisions all the more wrenching for women affected by the late-term bans.

“In almost every instance at that late stage, something has gone terribly wrong with what typically was a very wanted pregnancy,” said Peter Brownlie, head of Planned Parenthood of Kansas and Mid-Missouri. “What we see are parents in anguish over some type of medical condition — and these very cruel laws double or triple that anguish.”

Kansas is one of the five states — along with Alabama, Idaho, Indiana and Oklahoma — that enacted abortion bans this year modeled after the groundbreaking fetal-pain bill passed in Nebraska in 2010. The Kansas ban is effective after 21 weeks, the others after 20 weeks. Exceptions are allowed when the mother’s life is at risk or she faces severe physical impairment.

The bills depart from the standards established by the U.S. Supreme Court which allow states to limit abortions when there’s a reasonable chance the fetus could survive outside of the womb, generally considered to around 23 or 24 weeks.

Mary Spaulding Balch, legislative director for the National Right to Life Committee, said she was pleased the late-term bans got attention from lawmakers amid widespread fiscal problems.

“If we have to pass them in 50 states — and that’s the plan — we will do that,” she said.

In Nebraska, only one woman has come forward publicly to say the fetal-pain law prevented her from terminating a pregnancy. Danielle Deaver, of Grand Island, said she was denied that option at 22 weeks after she learned the baby was nonviable, ended up going into natural pre-term labor, and gave birth to a girl who died after 15 minutes.

Peter Brownlie, president and CEO of Planned Parenthood of Kansas and Mid-Missouri, speaks at a news conference in Kansas City in October 2007.

“It was very frustrating and added to our grief because the waiting compounded everything,” Deaver said in an interview earlier this year.

Anti-abortion activists acknowledge that some late-term cases can be difficult, but believe the bans are warrant-ed for the sake of the fetus.

“The abortion industry always likes to run to the hard cases,” said Julie Schmit-Albin, executive director of Nebraska Right to Life. “Yes, there are situations where tragedies occur, but that doesn’t mean you allow the killing of unborn children beyond 20 weeks who can feel pain.”

She contended that many women in the past who sought late-term abortions cited their own psychological concerns and were not faced with a fetal anomaly.

The Guttmacher Institute, a research organization that supports abortion rights, estimates that only about 1.5 percent of all abortions in the U.S. take place after 20 weeks of pregnancy. That would be roughly 18,000 annually as of the 2008, the last year with nationwide figures — and probably only a few hundred, at most, in states enacting the new bans.

“It’s very small percentage — but it’s a lot of distress,” said Elizabeth Nash, who tracks state legislation for the Guttmacher Institute.

Critics of the late-term bans say other women in predicaments like Deaver’s may be forced to choose between traveling out-of-state to get an abortion or proceeding reluctantly with a pregnancy after learning the fetus has a severe anomaly.

For pregnant women in Kansas who want an abortion after 21 weeks, that could mean a trip to Colorado or New Mexico.

“Some people will probably just give up — the logistics, the expense seems overwhelming,” Brownlie said. “But in general, if women have decided the best thing for their family is to end a pregnancy, they will go to great lengths to do so.”

Of all the anti-abortion measures introduced this year, one of the most ambitious remains pending in Ohio’s Republican-led legislature. It would ban abortions after the first detectable fetal heartbeat, which can occur within six weeks of conception.

Ohio Gov. John Kasich signed a different bill Wednesday that would ban abortions after 20 weeks if the doctor — after a mandatory test — determines that the fetus is viable. There’s no exception for the health or life of the mother.

Abortion-rights advocates say the roughly 200 late abortions performed in Ohio each year are often complex, involving decisions that should be left to women and their doctors.

“I continue to be amazed that legislators believe they should have a voice when I take care of my patients,” said Dr. Catherine Cansino, an obstetrician-gynecologist from Columbus. “They should not dictate which medical interventions are available or not.”

She cited the case of a pregnant patient who wrestled with whether to have an abortion because her fetus had a lethal anomaly.

“Our state’s legislators have decided to force women in these situations to endure weeks, months, of a doomed pregnancy,” Cansino said in an email. “What a cruel situation to inflict on them and their families.”

Overall, according to abortion-rights supporters, the new laws will have the most impact on low-income and rural women, especially in states which already have few abortion providers. In addition to the late-term bans, other new restrictions include:

- Regulations in Kansas specifying what drugs and equipment abortion clinics must stock and setting requirements for room sizes and temperatures. Two of the state’s three abortion providers sued after they were unable to meet the new standards, and a federal judge has blocked the rules until the lawsuit is resolved.

- A Texas law requiring doctors to conduct a pre-abortion sonogram and describe the fetus’ features to the pregnant woman. Doctors who don’t comply would face loss of their medical license and possible prosecution. The law doesn’t allow women to opt out, with exceptions for cases of rape or incest.

The New York-based Center for Reproductive Rights has filed a lawsuit to overturn the law, which is scheduled to take effect Oct. 1.

- A South Dakota law, now under a preliminary injunction, requiring women seeking abortions to face a three-day waiting period and undergo counseling at pregnancy centers that discourage abortion.

- A law in North Dakota, also subject of a lawsuit, that critics say would prevent the state’s only abortion clinic from using medicines to induce abortions.

Another type of law — enacted this year in Wisconsin, Indiana, Kansas and North Carolina — eliminates public funding for Planned Parenthood. The funds had been earmarked for family planning and other non-abortion services, but Planned Parenthood became a target for cut-offs because it also is the nation’s largest provider of abortions.

Rachel Sussman, a Planned Parenthood policy analyst, says the cutoffs could backfire if they undermine family planning programs and increase the number of unintended pregnancies that result in abortions.

Planned Parenthood has filed suit to challenge the funding cutoff in Indiana — one of numerous pending legal challenges to the array of new laws.

So far, however, abortion-rights advocates have not filed suit against any of the Nebraska-style fetal-pain laws — a fact likely to encourage their spread to even more states.

“We will challenge them when the right circumstances present themselves,” said Nancy Northup, president of the Center for Reproductive Rights. “They’re unconstitutional.”

The Nebraska law targeted Dr. LeRoy Carhart, whose clinic near Omaha was one of the nation’s few to provide late-term abortions. After the law passed, he opened a clinic in Germantown, Md.

While some doctors contend that fetuses can feel pain after 20 weeks, the American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists says it knows of no legitimate evidence showing a fetus can ever experience pain.

Diocese Makes $50M Offer to Buy Crystal Cathedral

BY NICOLE SANTA CRUZ
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • The Roman Catholic Diocese of Orange, Calif., said Friday it has made a $50 million offer to buy the bankrupt Crystal Cathedral.

The cash proposal would allow the Garden Grove, Calif., church to lease the entire property for a period of 36 months. At the end of the lease, the ministry would have to find a new location.

“We wanted to be as flexible as possible given their situation,” said Alan Martin, a bankruptcy attorney for the diocese.

The Crystal Cathedral, founded by the Rev. Robert H. Schuller and the home of the weekly “Hour of Power” broadcast, filed for bankruptcy in October, citing more than $50 million in debt.

As the bankruptcy unfolds, the cathedral has received several offers for the property, which includes the glass cathedral, designed by famed architect Phillip Johnson and a 234-foot prayer spire.

A real estate group has offered $46 million for the 40-acre site, as did Chapman University. Both bids would allow the church to lease back its core buildings with the possibility of purchasing the cathedral back.

The cash proposal by the Catholic Church would allow creditors to be paid back in full before the end of the year and would preserve the cathedral’s cemetery.

“We think it would be as quick as a resolution as possible,” Martin said.

Orange Bishop Tod Brown has said the diocese needs a worship space for the more than 1.2 million parishioners in the area and the 3,000-seat cathedral is a less expensive alternative to building a new cathedral. The diocese has considered a project in Santa Ana that would cost at least $1 million.

In recent weeks, the Catholic Church has made it clear that an offer would be solidified. On Friday, the diocese submitted formal proposals to both the Crystal Cathedral board and the creditor’s committee.

Marc Winthrop, an attorney for the cathedral, declined to comment Friday.

The diocese said it would work with the cathedral to find an “acceptable alternative worship space,” possibly another Garden Grove diocese venue, upon expiration or early termination of its lease. It also would renovate portions of the cathedral to bring it in line with worship practices.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Foundation Thanks Tourney Supporters

Just wanted to take a minute to say thank you to all that helped make the 13th annual Minidoka Health Care Foundation golf tournament successful.

A special thank you to major sponsors: Thomas Cuisine, D.L. Evans Bank, Cameron and Seamons, Derlin Taylor and Associates, and KMTV.

Corporate sponsors: David Hruza Insurance, Stryker Orthopedics and Dr. Dac Johnson.

Thank you, Goode Motor, for bringing the car for our Hole-In-One prize and your team to the tournament. Also, Fairfield Inn, Burley Inn, Perkins, Sage Mountain Grill, Pomerelle Ski Resort and Cactus Pete’s for providing raffle prizes.

Thanks to the young volunteers that came out to wash golf carts; those that allowed us to use their personal carts, hole sponsors, the board of directors, and to Bob and Nick at the Rupert Country Club — thank you for all you do to help make our annual tournament a worthwhile event.

In closing, I would like to remind each of you that the funds generated from this event as well as the Caring and Sharing Tree Festival go back into the community for health-related causes.

Again, thank you for making the 13th Annual Minidoka Health Care Foundation golf tournament a great success. Hope to see all of you again next year.

NORWAY HORROR: 80 DIE IN CAMP SHOOTING, 7 IN BLAST

BY NILS MYKLEBOST
AND KARL RITTER

Associated Press

OSLO, Norway (AP) • A Norwegian who dressed as a police officer to gun down summer campers killed at least 80 people at an island retreat, horrified police said early Saturday. It took investigators several hours to begin the realize the full scope of Friday's massacre, which followed an explosion in nearby Oslo that killed seven and that police say was set off by the same suspect.

The mass shootings are among the worst in history. With the blast outside the prime minister's office, they formed the deadliest day of terror in Western Europe since the 2004 Madrid train bombings killed 191.

Police initially said about 10 were killed at the forested camp on the island of Utoya, but some survivors said they thought the toll was much higher. Police director Oystein Maeland told reporters early Saturday they had discovered many more victims.

"It's taken time to search the area. What we know now is that we can say that there are at least 80 killed at Utoya," Maeland said. "It goes without saying that this gives dimensions to this incident that are exceptional."

Maeland said the death toll could rise even more. He said others were severely injured, but police didn't know how many were hurt.

A suspect in the shootings and the Oslo explosion was arrested. Though police did not release his name, Norwegian national broadcaster NRK identified him as 32-year-old Anders Behring Breivik and said police searched his Oslo apartment overnight. NRK and other Norwegian media posted pictures of the blond, blue-eyed Norwegian.

National police chief Sveinung Sponheim told NRK that the suspected gunman's Internet postings "suggest that he has some political traits directed toward the right, and anti-Muslim views, but whether that was a motivation for the actual act remains to be seen."

A police official said the suspect appears to have acted alone in both attacks, and that "it seems like that this is not linked to any international terrorist organizations at all." The official spoke on condition of anonymity because that information had not been officially released by Norway's police.

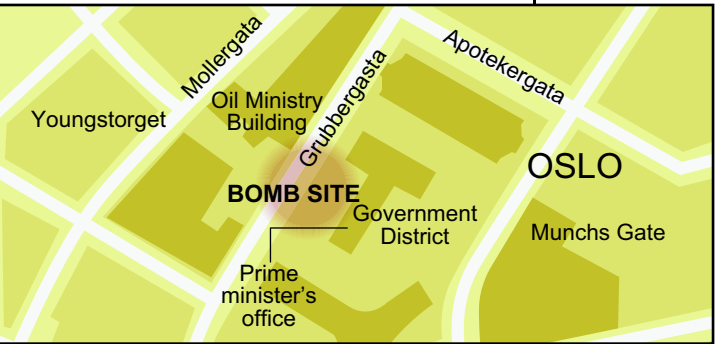

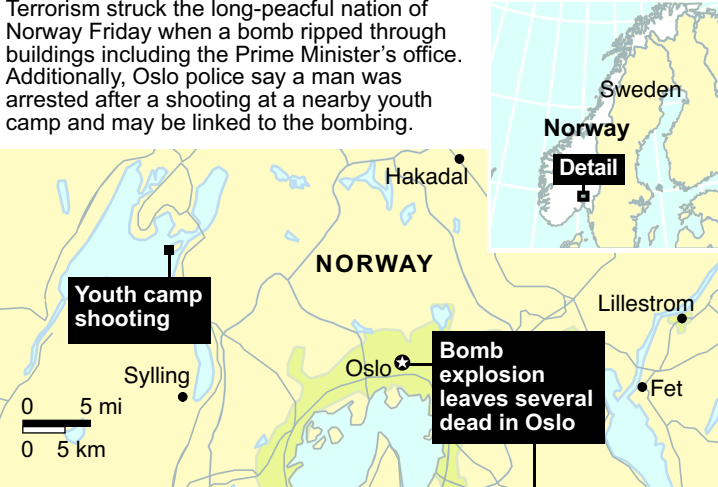

"It seems it's not Islamic-terror related," the official said. "This seems like a madman's work."

The official said the attack "is probably more Norway's Oklahoma City than it is Norway's World Trade Center." Domestic terrorists carried out the 1995 attack on a federal building in Oklahoma City, while foreign terrorists were responsible for the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks.

Debt Talks Crisis: Boehner and Obama Trading Blame

BY DAVID ESPO

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • House Speaker John Boehner abruptly broke off talks with President Barack Obama Friday night on a deal to make major cuts in federal spending and avert a threatened government default, sending already uncertain compromise efforts into instant crisis.

Within minutes, an obviously peevled Obama virtually ordered congressional leaders to the White House Saturday morning for fresh negotiations on raising the nation's debt limit. "We've got to get it done. It is not an option not to do it," he declared.

For the first time since talks began, he declined to offer assurances, when asked, that default would be avoided. Moments later, however, he said he was confident of that outcome.

California Motorcyclist Lands in Van Back Seat

VICTORVILLE, Calif. (AP) • A motorcyclist who plowed into a minivan landed unscathed in the back seat, and the driver didn't realize it until he turned into his nearby driveway, authorities said.

"We're calling this one a non-injury collision with a twist," Karen Hunt, spokeswoman for the San Bernardino County sheriff's Victorville station, told the Victorville Daily Press.

The van was slowing to make a left turn when the motorcycle rear-ended it Thursday.

Callers reporting the accident told authorities: "We don't know where the rider is," and there was concern he might have slid under the van, Hunt said.

"That's when it started to sound ominous," she said.

In reality, the rider had flown through the van's back window and landed in the backseat. The van driver continued to his home less than a half-block away, where he called out to his wife that he'd been rear-ended and needed to return to the accident scene.

Baked Apple: Heat Wave Sizzles Urban Northeast

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) • The urban Northeast baked like a potato wrapped in foil Friday as record-breaking, 100-degree temperatures and steam-bath humidity combined with the heat-trapping effects of asphalt and concrete to make millions of people miserable.

The mercury in Newark, N.J., reached 108, the highest temperature ever recorded in the city. Airports near Washington and Baltimore hit 105. Philadelphia reached 104, Boston 103, Portland, Maine, and Concord, N.H., 101 and Providence, R.I., 100. New York City hit 104 degrees, just 2 short of its all-time high, and with the oppressive humidity, it felt like 113.

Donald Demarque, a handyman, sat outside an auto repair shop in the broiling Bronx, waiting to get the air conditioner checked on his Nissan.

"It's only working at about half power," he said. "I think if it was a regular day I could put up with it, but not today. Today you don't want to have the car windows open."

In Baltimore, a homeless Dale Brown said he buys a $3.50 day pass to ride the commuter rail system to stay cool — and sober.

"I'm surprised more homeless people don't do that," he said. "That kills a lot of the day. One more day successful

Nevada June Jobless Rate Climbs to 12.4 Percent

BY SANDRA CHEREB
Associated Press

CARSON CITY, Nev. • Nevada's unemployment rate rose in June for the first time this year to 12.4 percent, signaling the economic recovery that has been slow to materialize continues to plague the Silver State, the Nevada Department of Employment, Training and Rehabilitation reported Friday.

Nearly 163,000 Nevadans were out of work last month, up from 159,000 in May when the jobless rate was 12.1 percent.

Bill Anderson, chief economist for the department, said non-farm payrolls shed 2,900 jobs between May and June, signaling that weak national market conditions are trickling down to Nevada.

He called the results “well below expectations.” “All things considered, Nevada’s job market is essentially flat,” Anderson said.

He noted that unemployment usually rises in June, “but this month’s increase is twice as large as the average of the last 10 years.”

The Las Vegas metropolitan area continues to post the highest jobless numbers in Nevada. The unemployment rate rose to 13.8 percent in June, up from 12.4 percent the previous month.

An old prison in Cranston, R.I., had to bring in portable air conditioners, fans and cold water for the 100 inmates on a cellblock with a broken AC. It had been out of commission for a month because it was so old a part had to be custom-made to fix it; the part is due Monday.

In Philadelphia, 50 of the city’s 70 pools operated on 45-minute cycles to give everyone a chance to get in. Some New Yorkers were unable to take a dip to cool off at some beaches in Brooklyn and Staten Island after millions of gallons of raw sewage spilled from a wastewater treatment plant.

The heat wave wafted in from the Midwest — it began last weekend and did not break until Friday in Chicago — and is a suspected or confirmed cause in more than a dozen deaths around the country. On Friday, the medical examiner’s office in Chicago listed heat stress or heat stroke as the cause of death for seven people. An 18-year-old landscaper who died Thursday night in Louisville, Ky., had a temperature of 110, the coroner said.

Jake Crouch, a climatologist at the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C., said the heat wave is taking its place in duration alongside deadly hot spells in 1988 and 1995 that lasted a

Haitian Leader Wants Changes in Recovery Panel

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) • President Michel Martelly announced changes to the makeup of a recovery commission Friday that he says will make it more effective as it tries to rebuild from Haiti’s devastating earthquake.

Haiti’s new leader also asked for a yearlong extension on the mandate of the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission, which was set up months after the January 2010 disaster to better coordinate reconstruction. It is led by the U.N. special envoy for Haiti, former U.S. President Bill Clinton, and Haiti’s outgoing Prime Minister Jean-Max Bellevre.

The mandate of the panel is due to expire in October and Martelly’s request for its extension could meet opposition when it goes before Haiti’s legislature for approval.

Since he took office in May, Martelly has been at odds with the opposition-controlled parliament. Lawmakers rejected his first pick for prime minister and seem ready to turn down his second.

At the commission’s meeting Friday, Martelly named Ann Valerie Timothee Milfort, former chief-of-staff for the Ministry of Women’s Affairs, to serve as interim executive director. He also named six members of his inner circle as board members, replacing members who recently resigned as the previous administration handed over power to Martelly.

The panel was set up to give international donors assurances that reconstruction would be orderly and free of the corruption that has long plagued Haiti. But it has come under heavy criticism for accomplishing little since its inception.

To date, the commission has approved 87 projects with a total value of $3.26 billion, of which $1.8 billion is secured, according to the U.N.’s Office of the Special Envoy.

Martelly advisers presented a proposal Friday that aims to move 30,000 people living in six tent camps back into 16 neighborhoods to be redeveloped from the quake’s destruction.

Terror

The official added, however, “it’s still just hours since the incident happened. And the investigation is going on with all available resources.”

The motive was unknown, but both attacks were in areas connected to the ruling Labor Party government. The youth camp, about 20 miles (35 kilometers) northwest of Oslo, is organized by the party’s youth wing, and the prime minister had been scheduled to speak there Saturday.

A 15-year-old camper named Elise said she heard gunshots, but then saw a police officer and thought she was safe. Then he started shooting people right before her eyes.

“I saw many dead people,” said Elise, whose father, Vidar Myhre, didn’t want her to disclose her last name. “He first shot people on the island. Afterward he started shooting people in the water.”

Elise said she hid behind the same rock that the killer was standing on. “I could hear his breathing from the top of the rock,” she said.

She said it was impossible to say how many minutes passed while she was waiting for him to stop.

At a hotel in the village of Sundvollen, where survivors of the shooting were taken, 21-year-old Dana Berzingi wore pants stained with blood. He said the fake police officer ordered people to come closer, then pulled weapons and ammunition from a bag and started shooting.

Several victims “had pretended as if they were dead to survive,” Berzingi said. But after shooting the victims with one gun, the gunman shot them again in the head with a shotgun, he said.

“I lost several friends,” said Berzingi, who used the cell phone of one of those friends to call police.

The blast in Oslo, Norway’s capital and the city where the Nobel Peace Prize is awarded, left a square covered in twisted metal, shattered glass and documents expelled from surrounding buildings. Most of the windows in the 20-floor high-rise where Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg and his administration work were shattered. Other buildings damaged house government offices and the headquarters of some of Norway’s leading newspapers.

The dust-fogged scene after the blast reminded one visitor from New York of Sept. 11.

Ian Dutton, who was in a nearby hotel, said people “just covered in rubble” were walking through “a fog of debris.”

“It wasn’t any sort of a panic,” he said, “It was really just people in disbelief and shock, especially in a such as safe and open country as Norway. You don’t even think something like that is possible.”

Police said the Oslo explosion was caused by “one or more” bombs.

The police official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Oslo bombing occurred at 1:26 p.m. local time, and the camp shootings began one to two hours later. The official said the gunman used both automatic weapons and handguns, and that there was at least one unexploded device at the youth camp that a police bomb disposal team and military experts were working on disarming.

The suspect had only a minor criminal record, the official said.

Sponheim said seven people were killed by the blast in downtown Oslo, four of whom have been identified, and that nine or 10 people were seriously injured.

Sponheim said a man was arrested in the shooting, and the suspect had been observed in Oslo before the explosion there.

Sponheim said the camp shooter “wore a sweater with a police sign on it. I can confirm that he wasn’t a police employee and never has been.”

Aerial images broadcast by Norway’s TV2 showed members of a SWAT team dressed in black arriving at the island in boats and running up the dock. Behind them, people who stripped down to their underwear swam away from the island toward shore, some using flotation devices.

Sponheim said police were still trying to get an overview of the camp shooting and could not say whether there was more than one shooter. He would not give any details about the identity or nationality of the suspect, who was being interrogated by police.

Oslo University Hospital said 12 people were admitted for treatment following the Utoya shooting, and 11 people were taken there from the explosion in Oslo. The hospital asked people to donate blood.

Stoltenberg, who was home when the blast occurred and was not harmed, visited injured people at the hospital late Friday. Earlier he decried what he called “a cowardly attack on young innocent civilians.”

“I have message to those who attacked us,” he said. “It’s a message from all of Norway: You will not destroy our democracy and our commitment to a better world.”

NRK showed video in Oslo of a blackened car lying on its side amid the debris. An AP reporter who was in the office of Norwegian news agency NTB said the building shook from the blast and all employees were evacuated. Down in the street, he saw one person with a bleeding leg being led away from the area.

An AP reporter headed to Utoya was turned away by police before reaching the lake that surrounds the island, as eight ambulances with sirens blaring entered the area. Police blocked off roads leading to the lake.

The United States, European Union, NATO and the U.K., all quickly condemned the bombing, which Britain’s Foreign Secretary William Hague called “horrific” and NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen deemed a “heinous act.”

“It’s a reminder that the entire international community has a stake in preventing this kind of terror from occurring,” President Barack Obama said.

Debt

At a rebuttal news conference of his own a short while later in the Capitol, Boehner said, “I want to be entirely clear, no one wants default on the full faith and credit of the United States government, and I’m convinced that we will not.”

The two men offered sharply different accounts of the compromise efforts so far and who was at fault for the collapse.

“I’ve been left at the altar now a couple of times,” Obama said wryly.

agreement,” Boehner contended.

The speaker said Obama wanted higher taxes and not enough spending cuts.

The president countered that he had offered an “extraordinarily fair deal” that totaled $2.6 trillion in spending cuts and $1.2 trillion in additional revenue.

Strikingly, the two sides had agreed on two highly controversial changes, according to aides on both sides of the talks. One would raise the age of eligibility of Medicare gradually from 65 to 67 for future beneficiaries, while the other would slow the increase in cost-of-living raises in Social Security checks.

Given that accord, it seemed likely those agreements would be among many carrying over to the broader meeting Saturday morning and beyond.

Barring action by Congress by an Aug. 2 deadline, the Treasury will be unable to pay all its bills. Officials say a default could destabilize the already weakened U.S. economy and send major ripple effects across the globe.

Even by the recent standards of divided government, Boehner’s decision triggered an extraordinary evening in which first the Democratic president and then the Republican speaker maneuvered for political position on an issue of enormous national import.

Unspoken, yet unmistakable in all the brinkmanship was the 2012 election campaign, still 18 months away, with the White House and both houses of Congress at stake.

In a letter circulated earlier to the House Republican rank and file, Boehner said he had withdrawn from the talks because the president wanted to raise taxes and was reluctant to agree to cuts in benefit programs.

The disconnect was “not because of different personalities but because of different visions for our country,” he said, and he announced he would now seek agreement with the Democratic-controlled Senate.

Obama was having none of that, announcing instead a morning White House meeting where he said he expected to hear proposed solutions from the top leaders of both parties in both houses.

“One of the questions the Republican Party is going to have to ask itself is, ‘Can they say yes to anything?’” Obama said.

The president avoided direct criticism of Boehner, although he did mention that his phone calls to the speaker had gone unreturned during the day. Administration officials said the president had tried to reach Boehner twice over two days. Asked about the spurned calls, Boehner said he didn’t think his relationship with Obama had been “irreparably damaged.”

He said he would attend the Saturday meeting at the White House.

Private, sometimes-secret negotiations had veered uncertainly for weeks, generating reports as late as Thursday that the two sides were possibly closing in on an agreement to cut $3 trillion in spending and add as much as $1 trillion in possible revenue while increasing the government’s borrowing authority of $2.4 trillion.

Tech Earnings Help Stocks End Week with Solid Gain

NEW YORK (AP) • A big earnings miss from Caterpillar Friday wasn't enough to derail a rally that pushed the stock market up 2 percent for the week. Caterpillar Inc. fell nearly 6 percent after the heavy equipment maker earned less than analysts were expecting last quarter, partly because of the earthquake and tsunami disaster in Japan. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 43.25 points, or 0.3 percent, to 12,681.16. Even with the decline, the Dow gained 1.6 percent for the week. The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 1.22, or 0.1 percent, to 1,345.02. It finished the week with a gain of 2.2 percent.

$1.4 billion

McDonald's net income rises • McDonald's net income rose 15 percent to $1.4 billion, or $1.35 per share, during the quarter. Revenue was up 16 percent to $6.9 billion, topping analysts' estimates of $6.6 billion. Bensen said the company will continue to consider more price increases but doesn't want to drive away customers. In a normal year, he said, a price increase of 2 to 3 percent is enough for the company to maintain margins.

A Boom in Corporate Profits, a Bust in Jobs

BY PAUL WISEMAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Strong second-quarter earnings from McDonald's, General Electric and Caterpillar on Friday are just the latest proof that booming profits have allowed Corporate America to leave the Great Recession far behind. But millions of ordinary Americans are stranded in a labor market that looks like it's still in recession. Unemployment is stuck at 9.2 percent, two years into what economists call a recovery. Job growth has been slow and wages stagnant. "I've never seen labor markets this weak in 35 years of research," says Andrew Sum, director of the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University.

Wages and salaries accounted for just 1 percent of economic growth in the first 18 months after economists declared that the recession had ended in June 2009, according to Sum and other Northeastern researchers.

In the same period after the 2001 recession, wages and salaries accounted for 15 percent. They were 50 percent after the 1991-92 recession and 25 percent after the 1981-82 recession.

Corporate profits, by contrast, accounted for an unprecedented 88 percent of economic growth during those first 18 months. That's compared with 53 percent after the 2001 recession, nothing after the 1991-92 recession and 28 percent after the 1981-82 recession.

What's behind the disconnect between strong corporate profits and a weak labor market? Several factors:

- U.S. corporations are expanding overseas, not so much at home. McDonalds and Caterpillar said overseas sales growth outperformed the U.S. in the April-June quarter. U.S.-based multinational companies have been focused overseas for years: In the 2000s, they added 2.4 million jobs in foreign countries and cut 2.9 million jobs in the United States, according to the Commerce Department.

- Back in the U.S., companies are squeezing more productivity out of staffs thinned out by layoffs during Great Recession. They don't need to hire. And they don't need to be generous with pay raises; they know their employees have nowhere else to go.

- Companies remain reluctant to spend the $1.9 trillion in cash they've accumulated, especially in the United States. They're unconvinced that consumers are ready to spend again with the vigor they showed before the recession, and they are worried about uncertainty in U.S. government policies.

"Lack of clarity on a U.S. deficit-reduction plan, trade policy, regulation, much-needed tax reform and the absence of a long-term plan to improve the country's deteriorating infrastructure do not create an environment that provides our customers with the confidence to invest," Caterpillar CEO Doug Oberhelman said.

Caterpillar said second-quarter earnings shot up 44 percent to $1.02 billion—though that still disappointed Wall Street. General Electric's second-quarter earnings were up 21 percent to $3.76 billion. And McDonald's quarterly earnings increased 15 percent to $1.4 billion.

Still, the U.S. economy is missing the engines that usually drive it out of a recession.

Carl Van Horn, director of the Center for Workforce Development at Rutgers University, says the housing market would normally revive in the early stages of an economic recovery, driving demand for building materials, construction workers and appliances. But that isn't happening this time.

Idaho Unemployment Remains Steady in June

Idaho's labor pool shrank in June as fewer jobs were created and more than 1,800 unemployed workers gave up their job search or left the Idaho.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Labor says statewide unemployment held steady at 9.4 percent in June.

The agency released the latest jobless numbers on Friday, saying the Idaho labor pool shrank for the first time in 10 months as fewer jobs were created and more than 1,800 unemployed workers either gave up their search or left the state in June.

Idaho's jobless rate fell to 9.4 percent in May, down from 9.6 percent in April. Nationally, unemployment ticked up to 9.2 percent in June from 9.1 percent in May.

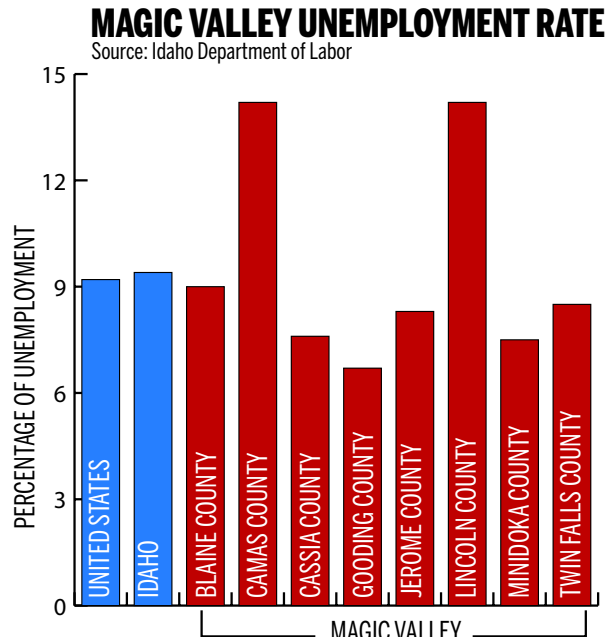

The labor department says more than 30,000 unemployed Idaho workers collected $28.8 million in benefits last month, which is down compared to a year ago when more than 38,000 workers received $41.7 million in June 2010.

Locally, unemployment ranged from 6.7 percent in Gooding County to 14.2 percent in both Camas and Lincoln Counties. Most south-central Idaho counties saw only small changes to unemployment, though the Mini-Cassia area took a hit in June.

According to state labor statistics, unemployment in Cassia County increased from 7.1 percent in May to 7.6 percent in June, while Minidoka County unemployment ticked up from 6.9 percent to 7.5 percent.

Labor statistics show construction and financial services generated jobs ahead of the five-year average, though construction jobs remain about 16,000 below the 2006 peak. Retail sales met expectations, but health care and manufacturing struggled.

The labor department also said that a Conference Board report showed one sign of an improving market for jobseekers, as three unemployed workers are available for every posted job in the state, down from four per job in May.

The state reports more than 10,600 unemployed workers have exhausted their benefits and are still without work.

DOGGIE DELICIOUS

The local-foods trend isn't just for humans. We found five south-central Idaho producers who make specialty treats for your dogs.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

Dogs deserve dessert, too.

So why not treat them to high-quality, locally produced treats? The Times-News found five producers who sell their dog treats online, at farmers markets or through Magic Valley stores.

Carol Rast of Prairie Sun Farm in Fairfield makes baked doggie treats from fresh-ground wheat, free-range chicken broth, mint and parsley. The treats' primary role is to be tasty, but they might sweeten your pup's breath. After baking them, Rast dries them in the oven for three hours to make them extra crunchy — a quality that helps clean dogs' teeth.

"Mint and parsley are both supposed to be good for their breath," Rast said, "but if there's an underlying health problem, it's not going to go away."

But even if dogs' mouths still stink, they are likely to enjoy the treats. Rast's black Labs love them, and her husband has even eaten them with his coffee.

"They're like cookies, but they're not sweet," she said.

The Koddled Kritter, run by Tim and Cathy Voss of Twin Falls, sells baked dog biscuits and jerky treats. Their Slow-um Down treats come in the form of a sterilized cow bone filled with peanut butter and oats. The bone is coated in beef dog biscuit dough and baked.

Lava Lake Lamb in Carey makes dog treats from lamb shoulder and trim left over from producing meat for humans.

"It's all clean trim," said sales coordinator Mike Gordon. "It's not going to be anything weird." The certified organic, grass-fed lamb makes up most of the baked treat, Gordon said, and vegetables like peas, carrots, potatoes and whole-kernel corn round it out.

"We've had a really good response to it," Gordon said.

Not all the dog treats are edible. Gail Ansley of CA Bull Elk Ranch in Hazelton sells elk antler chews. Antler chews — whether from softer new growth or from calcified older antlers — act like chew bones for dogs, Ansley said, but

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

One Treat to Rule Them All? Not Exactly

My dog Shelby is one picky pug.

When we first got her from a rescue organization in 2010, she came with specific feeding instructions from her former owners: three types of food, blended together and topped off with gravy for her daily dinners. For a treat, she likes steamed organic broccoli with butter, the note claimed.

The regimen lasted one day — Shelby wouldn't eat anything but the gravy. Fed up, I transitioned her to the same food we feed our other dog. She soon learned it was the only food she would get and now eats heartily.

But her finicky tastes transitioned to treats. Shelby turns up her pug nose at baked treats from the store, human food dropped on the ground and rawhide chewies. Usually, Montana, our other dog, snags what she leaves behind.

But we finally found something Shelby likes. We got a chicken jerky sample from The Koddled Kritter at the Twin Falls Farmers Market, and Shelby went nuts. We bought five bags.

And Montana? He eats the local jerky but still prefers baked treats. We've resorted to getting different snacks for the two dogs.

Yes, those are paw prints on my shirt from my dogs walking all over me.

3 Hot Hats to Keep You Cool

The Bonnet Style

Inspired by Romantic-era bonnets, this sparkly half-bonnet has only a front brim but will still keep you shaded in style. Light-weight fabric makes this $21 hat perfect for summer heat — it protects your face but won't overheat your head. Find it at Cobble Creek in Twin Falls' Lynwood Shopping Center in both pink and navy versions. Store owner Diane Workman has seen fashion hats become increasingly popular in the past year and plans to stock a wider variety of hats in the fall.

The Fedora Style

This fancy fedora might not be the straw hat you are used to for your outdoors adventures, but it is worthy of a royal wedding. Well, maybe not quite, but with its lacy cover and silk detail it certainly seems wedding-inspired. With garden parties and outdoor weddings in abundance this summer, every fashionable lady needs something to shield her eyes and face from the sun. Flutter on Fillmore Street carries this hat for $14.95 in lace as well as pink floral and blue floral to match any tea party's style.

The Newsboy Style

I'm a newsgirl, but this newsboy-inspired hat caught my eye as the perfect one for sitting by the Snake River watching the sun go down — not for delivering newspapers. It's made with a twill exterior that will keep the heat in after sunset, but the small brim will protect your eyes while the daylight dies. Purity Spa on Twin Falls' Addison Avenue offers this hat for $15.

Learn How Gardeners Beautified Typical Subdivision Lots

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • Maeme Raspberry grows many of the vegetables she uses for Raspberry's restaurants in her tidy garden accented by stone antiques.

Julie Fox-Jones maintains one of the oldest still-productive farmsteads in Hailey on her five-acre spread a block away from Wood River High School.

And Jose Herrera built a beautiful waterfall and fountain in his tidy, colorful yard after he retired as custodian of The Community School.

These are among three of the 11 gardens that will be spotlighted on Hailey's Garden Tour from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today. The tour, an easy one for bicycling, features properties from Fox Acres Road — east of the north end of Hailey's airport — south to the Sweetwater development at 821 Countryside Blvd.

There will be entertainment along the way, as well as garden experts stationed at each garden. And Sweetwater development will serve up free brats and hot dogs for tour participants.

"With a couple of notable exceptions, the properties on this year's tour all began as fairly typical bare lots in typical subdivisions. In a relatively short time span, the owners have

CHURCH NEWS

Ascension Church Celebrates Eucharist

Ascension Episcopal Church, 371 Eastland Drive N. in Twin Falls, will celebrate Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m. Sunday. Pastor Deb Seles will preach on “Broken and Restored Relationships in Christ; Why Jesus is Important.”

Wiggle Worship begins at 9:10 a.m. Ascension Cafe meets at 9 a.m.

Information: www.ascension.episcopalidaho.org or 733-1248.

Baptist Church Hosts Guest Speakers

Guest speakers are currently filling the pulpit at Sunday worship services at First Southern Baptist Church, 492 Washington St. N. The church is temporarily without a pastor, but Sunday school is still being held at 10 a.m. and worship service at 11 a.m.

Lenore Everton is leading “Women on Mission” meetings at 1 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month at the church. The current project is collecting soaps and shampoos for the Salvation Army’s ministry to the homeless and personal hygiene and tissue products for the Victory Home (a live-in rehabilitation center for recovering addicts). Plans are being made to participate in the Pregnancy Crisis Center’s annual fundraising banquet Sept. 24.

The church sponsors a service for Micronesians at 2 p.m. Sundays under the leadership of Peterson Walter, and a service for Nepalese at 8 p.m. Sundays led by Bejay Shah. Shah also teaches a Bible study for Nepalese youth at a new time — 1 p.m. Saturdays, followed by a period of recreation.

Information: Issy Gibbs, 733-0596.

Methodists Begin New DVD Series

A new DVD series will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday at First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E. in Twin Falls. Ron Jones will be the worship leader for this series.

“Living the Fruit of the Spirit” is a presentation by the Rev. Adam Hamilton, pastor of the United Methodist Church of the Resurrection in Leawood, Kan. Hamilton is a noted lecturer on leadership, evangelism and preaching across the country. The first in his series will be “Becoming What We Were Meant to Be.”

Hamilton started this church with four people in 1990. It has grown to more than 12,000 adult members, with an average weekly worship attendance of more than 7,500 in 2008. The church was listed as the most influential mainline church in America in a 2005 survey of American pastors.

Information: 733-5872 or www.tffumc.com.

Seventh-day Adventists Host Free Supper

The Heyburn Seventh-day Adventist Church is hosting its monthly free supper from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

July’s menu will be salads and sandwiches. All are invited to join in the meal for good food and Christian fellowship.

The church is located at 1250 21st St. (Alfredo Road), next to United Electric in Heyburn. Information: Barbara Lankford, 650-0592.

Hollister Church Plans ‘Meeting in the Pines’

The Hollister Community Presbyterian Church will hold its annual “Meeting in the Pines” from July 29-31 at the Porcupine Springs Campground, two miles south of the Magic Mountain Ski Resort in the South Hills. Overnight camping has been reserved. Events begin the evening of July 30, but those who wish are welcome to camp beginning Friday.

Keeping with tradition, the Saturday night (July 30) no-host social gathering will include a hot dog roast and campfire. Donna Lanting will lead a craft project for young people at 10:30 a.m. July 31. The Sunday potluck dinner at noon will feature a variety of Dutch oven dishes. Those attending are asked to bring a salad or dessert, beverage and lawn chairs.

The meeting will close with a worship service at 1:30 p.m., Sunday with Elder Mark Koffer of Twin Falls speaking. Watermelon will be provided after the service.

Visitors are welcome. Information: Bob or Rhea Lanting, 655-4257, or Mildred Jones, 539-1916.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomason at ellen@magicvalley.com. Deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

MISSIONARY

Sister Risa Marie Casperson returned July 19 from serving a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the California Arcadia Spanish-speaking Mission.

Casperson is the daughter of Joe and Lori Casperson of Twin Falls. She plans to continue her studies in communications and physical education at Brigham Young University-Idaho in the fall.

To submit information about missionaries, contact Ellen Thomason at 735-3266, or send email to ellen@magicvalley.com. Deadline is 5 p.m. Wednesday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Survivors Think Twice About Funeral Costs

BY HELEN T. GRAY
McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Joyce Woolridge recently lost two family members, and in each case, cost influenced the funeral decisions.

According to the National Association of Funeral Directors, the average funeral in the U.S. costs $6,560, not including cemetery markers, flowers and other expenses. With the struggling economy, families are considering cheaper ways to send off deceased loved ones.

In Woolridge’s family, cremation was chosen as a less-expensive option.

In one case, the relative told his family he wanted a cremation because he didn’t want funeral expenses to use all of his insurance money, Woolridge said. In the other case, “money definitely was a factor,” she said, because the deceased didn’t have insurance.

The Rev. Eric Laverentz, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Stanley in Overland Park, Kan., said he has noticed more families choosing cremation.

“It used to be rare,” he said. “Perhaps one out of every five deceased would be cremated when I first started in ministry 14 years ago. Now it’s about half.”

The Rev. Trish Nelson, a pastor at Christ Church Anglican in Overland Park, said that in the past 18 months the church has had cremations only. And in recent years, the Rev. Douglas R. Valentine of First Baptist Church in Kansas City has seen many families electing to have their loved one’s body cremated with no memorial service or funeral.

One of the best ways a person can help their families financially is to make pre-arrangements for their funerals, said Mark McGilley, market director for the Dignity Memorial Providers.

“We encourage people to (plan) and fund those plans, and they are frozen at today’s prices,” he said.

Treats

don’t splinter and last longer. Another bonus: There is no bone marrow to leave greasy spots on rugs and carpets.

David Miller of Miller Elk Farm in Buhl also sells antler chews.

“Everybody who’s tried it is really happy with it,” he said, adding his own dogs enjoy the treats.

So how do you know what treat is right for your dog? Go with what your pup likes, said Dr. Zsigmond Szanto of Twin Falls Veterinary Clinic & Hospital.

Then stick with it. Szanto sees plenty of dogs with upset stomachs — and the fewer things you feed to your dog, the easier it will be to find the culprit and cut it out of the diet.

“The less variety, the better,” he said. And don’t worry about the animals getting tired of the same kind of snack.

“They don’t get bored with treats,” Szanto said. “If they like something, they will go back over and over.”

Suggested serving sizes are a good guide for how often and how much of the treat you should give, but don’t take it as gospel. A dog’s breed, size, health and age can all affect how much of a snack they can handle, Szanto said.

“If the dog is gaining weight, you can back off,” he said.

Gardeners

transformed these yards into exquisite places, all distinctly different from one another,” said tour chairwoman Gretchen Wagner.

Indeed, Judy Foster found little more than dirt and a few weeds when she moved into her house at 2270 Winterhaven Drive three years ago. So she covered her yard with several layers of cardboard and newspaper — lasagna style — and deposited four inches of bark on top of that.

The yard now sports shrubs and trees to give her privacy; grapes, raspberries, strawberries and even hardy kiwi in her backyard; and vines spreading along the willow branches she collected and wove above her fence to create a visual and sound buffer.

“I’m a former behavior intervention specialist, so it’s been great fun to do something and see the consequences of my intervention,” said Foster, who is learning to garden in a desert climate after living in the Pacific Northwest. “I love not having to worry about watering and mowing and aerating. And leaves become part of the bark, so I don’t have to worry about raking, either. When a weed comes up it’s easy to spot and pull.”

Just down the street from Foster at 1960 Winterhaven Drive, Stephanie Giacobbi nurtures a very different yard — one that is lush and bursting with color from mock orange, high-altitude hydrangea, bleeding heart, delphinium and clematis.

“We pulled out two tons of sagebrush in the back, chaining it to a truck and dragging it out. Then we built three stone terraces. It took a few years but we finally got it done. And my little boy and I love to go back there and pick strawberries,” Giacobbi said.

Like Foster, Vee Riley had to learn to garden when she moved to Hailey from a beach home in California.

She started by placing foot stones across the backyard to a hillside where she built a meditation garden and a zen garden. Then she covered the yard with grass and planted trees honoring each of her children and other relatives. Finally, she planted a cactus garden in the side yard where she can sit and gaze out onto Della Mountain.

“I’ve used my yard to the utmost,” she said. “And it’s not only a place for people. It’s a bird sanctuary, as well.”

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that by close of fishing on July 20 anglers will have harvested the full sport fishery share of adipose fin clipped salmon destined for the South Fork Salmon River. The fraction of Rapid River hatchery returns in the harvest in the Lower Salmon River is highest in the Park Hole section from the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge upstream to the Mouth of Short's Creek. The fraction of hatchery and natural returns from the South Fork Salmon, Middle Fork Salmon, and Upper Salmon rivers at this point in the season is highest in the river sections of the Lower Salmon River upstream and downstream of the Park Hole section.

To reduce interceptions of hatchery and natural origin fish destined for terminal areas other than the Little Salmon and Rapid rivers while still providing access to harvestable hatchery fish destined to the Little Salmon and Rapid Rivers the Fisheries Bureau recommends closing the section of the Lower Salmon River from the mouth of Short's Creek upstream to the uppermost boat ramp at Vinegar Creek and the sections from the Rice Creek Bridge upstream to the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge to fishing for Chinook salmon.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the section of the Lower Salmon River from the mouth of Short's Creek upstream to the uppermost boat ramp at Vinegar Creek and in the sections from the Rice Creek Bridge upstream to the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge to fishing for Chinook salmon effective the end of fishing on July 24, 2011.

Copies of Order 11-25 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, P.O. Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

Today is Saturday, July 23, the 204th day of 2011. There are 161 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On July 23, 1886, a legend was born as Steve Brodie claimed to have made a daredevil plunge from the Brooklyn Bridge into New York's East River. (However, the exact circumstances of the jump are in dispute, with skeptics saying it never actually occurred.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1829, William Austin Burt received a patent for his "typographer," a forerunner of the typewriter.

In 1885, Ulysses S. Grant, the 18th president of the United States, died in Mount McGregor, N.Y., at age 63.

In 1914, Austria-Hungary issued a list of demands to Serbia following the killing of Archduke Franz Ferdinand by a Serb assassin; the dispute led to World War I.

In 1945, French Marshal Henri Petain, who had headed the Vichy government during World War II, went on trial, charged with treason. (He was convicted and condemned to death, but the sentence was commuted.)

In 1951, Henri Petain died in prison.

In 1952, Egyptian military officers led by Gamal Abdel Nasser launched a successful coup against King Farouk I.

In 1967, a week of deadly race-related rioting that claimed 43 lives erupted in Detroit.

In 1977, a jury in Washington, D.C., convicted 12 Hanafi Muslims of charges stemming from the hostage siege at three buildings the previous March.

In 1986, Britain's Prince Andrew married Sarah Ferguson at Westminster Abbey in London. (The couple divorced in 1996.)

In 1996, at the Atlanta Olympics, Kerri Strug made a heroic final vault despite torn ligaments in her left ankle as the U.S. women gymnasts clinched their first-ever Olympic team gold medal.

Ten years ago: Pope John Paul II urged President George W. Bush in their first meeting, held at Castel Gandolfo, Italy, to bar creation of human embryos for medical research. Indonesia's national assembly ousted President Abdurahman Wahid, electing Megawati Sukarnoputri as head of state. Negotiators from 178 nations rescued the 1997 Kyoto Protocol after marathon talks in Bonn, Germany. Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Eudora Welty died in Jackson, Miss., at age 92.

Five years ago: Former Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was hospitalized on the 17th day of a hunger strike; he appeared thinner but healthy at his trial a few days later. American Floyd Landis won the Tour de France (however, he was later disqualified for doping). Tiger Woods became the first player since Tom Watson in 1982-83 to win consecutive British Open titles. Zuleyka Rivera Mendoza of Puerto Rico was crowned Miss Universe 2006.

One year ago: The city manager, assistant manager and police chief of Bell, Calif., agreed to resign after outraged residents found out through a Los Angeles Times investigation that they were making a total of more than $1.6 million a year. Daniel Schorr, long-time journalist with stints at CBS, CNN and NPR, died in Washington at age 93.

DEAR ABBY: In the past, I made several seriously awful decisions about guys. I also spent two years in high school off and on with a young man who only made my life dramatic and exhausting. Now that I'm a freshman in college, I have encountered several guys I'd love to have a relationship with, but I feel unworthy.

Because of my bad decisions and the fact that I knew these guys before they attended school with me here, I'm worried my past will catch up with me and they'll think I'm still the way I was back then. I have been working on cleaning up my language, and I have sworn off drugs and alcohol trying to make myself more appealing.

Some of my friends have told me I shouldn't have to change who I am for "some guy." Are they right? What should I do to make a connection with one of these young men?

— UNDESERVING

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR UNDESERVING: If these friends are implying that it's all right to drink, use drugs, use foul language and do things with guys that you're ashamed of later, then it's time to change friends.

I believe in the philosophy of constant self-improvement. When you improve yourself to the point that you are proud of yourself, you will attract men who have more to offer than the ones you were involved with in high school.

DEAR ABBY: When I was growing up, manners were taught at home, but now it seems etiquette has been placed on the back burner. As an elementary school teacher, I try to emphasize the importance of good manners, and I'm amazed and disappointed at the lack of interest from the parents of my students. They don't seem to appreciate the importance of a "Thank you," "Yes, Ma'am," "No, Sir," etc.

I am frustrated by the lack of instruction my students receive at home and at the poor manners shown by others in our community. Have you any ideas on how to bring this much-needed skill back to the forefront?

— DOING MY BEST
IN AMARILLO

DEAR DOING YOUR BEST: You have described parents who are not doing their jobs, or who were never taught basic good manners themselves. How sad for the children.

Years ago, parents taught children the "magic" of the words "please" and "thank you" in how their requests were received. Because your students haven't been so fortunate, you are right to deliver that life lesson to them in the classroom. After spending a year with you, they will have it down pat. As for their parents, face it — it's too late.

DEAR ABBY: A good friend has asked me to be a groomsman in his wedding. The problem is, the bachelor party will be in Las Vegas. Ordinarily that wouldn't be an issue, but there is no date set yet for the party. The wedding is in September, so I assume the bachelor party will be in August.

I recently bought an engagement ring for my girlfriend, and I also am hosting my brother's bachelor party in late August. I honestly can't afford a trip to Vegas at this time, especially with short notice. What's the proper protocol? Do I find a way to come up with the money? How do I let my friend know I can't make it without getting him upset?

— FULL CALENDAR
IN PHILLY

DEAR FULL CALENDAR: The proper protocol is to tell your friend ASAP that you cannot attend the bachelor party for the valid reasons you shared with me. You not only do not have the money to make the trip, but you also have a prior family commitment. Your friend may be disappointed, but if he becomes upset, that's his problem, so please do not make it yours.

P.S. If he's truly a friend he'll understand.

— Max Beerbohm

Jeff Meckstroth produces breathtaking coups with remarkable regularity — put yourself in his shoes as declarer in the following deal from the Cavendish pairs.

Against three hearts, Tim Cope led ace and another trump after Meckstroth had opened systemically on very light values. Meckstroth could now infer that West held four spades and six diamonds, with a probable singleton club honor (no club lead) and with the diamond honors split (no top diamond lead).

At trick three he led his singleton club, won the return of the spade queen in dummy, and advanced the club queen, covered and ruffed. What next?

Playing on diamonds lets East win and draw a third round of trumps. Similarly, ruffing a spade in dummy will bring declarer to eight tricks, but not to nine. Meckstroth found the spectacular coup of leading the spade 10 from hand — be honest, would you have thought of it? If West takes the trick and leads a spade back (a diamond is no better), declarer wins, pitching a diamond from dummy. He plays the diamond ace, ruffs a diamond, ruffs a club, and leads his losing heart to end-play East, who has to lead a club into dummy's tenace.

At the table West ducked the spade 10, hoping his partner had the king. That simply let Meckstroth cash the spade king to pitch a diamond, then take the diamond ace and a diamond ruff and cash the top club in dummy with a heart trick to come, for nine tricks.

ANSWER: With your decent diamond support and useful ruffing values, the chances for making game look fractionally too good to me to suggest simple preference to two diamonds, and you are somewhat short of trumps for a limit raise to three diamonds. The middle position is to invite with a call of two no-trump. You can still get to either red suit if it is right to do so.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JULY 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: For the next several weeks, you can pursue your financial or career ambitions with every indication of success. Late August is luckier than usual and might a fabulous time to launch plans, start something new, or to embrace opportunities that pop up. In August, you might get positive attention so make an effort to advertise or to be in the public eye. Tread water in October when your eyes are bigger than your stomach and you could easily mistake glass for diamonds. You can however enjoy a quick vacation or have a fling since your fantasy loving side is on display. January is a great time to make lasting progress with your career, health or relationships.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid new undertakings or starting projects, as situations outside your control can cause misunderstandings later. Do enjoy a romantic starlit summer night and stay up late with that special someone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pay attention to the direction the wind is blowing before you decide to fly your kite. Relationships will be buoyed by the prevailing winds, unless you allow suspicions and discord to drag them down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Meet them and greet them. You are very likely to develop helpful connections. You possess plenty of enthusiasm, but practical experience and expertise needs more polish in order to achieve ambitions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make it your business to be the best you can be. You can enjoy tender moments with loved ones under serene summer stars. You are at your best with business commitments but romance can rock, too.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take pride in your ability to cope with any upset or contingency. Celestial conditions are improving in some sectors and might be good enough to make intelligent investments of your money or heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Just like a door, an open mind lets everything in, including pests. Your mind might be like a steel trap, but traps are only safe to handle when closed. Sidestep disputes and remain skeptical of gossip.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can't please all the people all of the time. Set reasonable goals even if friends or partners start a debate or you are challenged financially. A desire for excitement might not be satisfied.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Security and comfort are just around the corner. This weekend, you might be grasping for straws in an effort to attain the secure position you desire. Wait out temporary misgivings or doubts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pleasant platitudes pass the time. This may be a good day for meditation or to repeat positive mantras. Count on a supportive friend to pass along some valuable information — as well as some juicy gossip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Misunderstandings can place you in mysterious circumstances. Be extremely nice to those you meet and go to great lengths explain your actions and ideas. Business tactics work well in social settings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't defend someone for the wrong reasons. You are likely to jump from the frying pan right into the fire. Quell the urge to take action unless you are positive you possess all the necessary information.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You needn't feel that sacrifice is necessary to accomplish your primary goals. Certain career aspirations might conflict with the needs of family members or vice versa. Take it in your stride.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

A: “ ”

(Answers Monday)

Yesterday's Jumbles: BLUNT TAKEN BOLDLY SUMMER
Answer: The construction project based on the plans drawn by Robert Mills was this — MONUMENTAL

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME
by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Bengals Named to Phil Steele's Preseason All-American Team

TIMES-NEWS

Idaho State's Tavoy Moore, AJ Storms and David Harrington were named to Phil Steele's 2011 Preseason All-American first team and Big Sky Conference first-team. Storms, who led the NCAA Division I Football Championship Subdivision in tackles in 2010, was one of four linebackers named to the first-team while Harrington, who was the nation's leader in punting, was named to the first-team as a punter and Moore as a punt returner. All three were 2010 all-conference and All-American selections. Linebacker Basim Hudeen was named to the preseason Big Sky Conference second team. Hudeen was third on the team in tackles in 2010 with 100, earning honorable mention all-conference accolades. Idaho State opens fall practice Aug. 4 and the season Sept. 3 at Washington. ISU's home opener is Sept. 10 vs. Western State College.

Fox Posts Solid Go-Round at High School Finals Rodeo

Darby Fox had the third-best go in pole bending at the High School Finals Rodeo in Gillette, Wyo. Friday morning. She had her best time of the rodeo with a go of 20.86 seconds.

Kimberly's Cody Rowe finished seventh in boys cutting with a score of 201 Friday morning. The second-go final results were not available at press time Friday evening.

Canton Copes with Loss of Hall of Fame Game

CANTON, Ohio (AP) • Workers assembled the metal framework for outdoor tents in the parking lot of the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Friday, getting ready for its big enshrinement weekend — one that won't include a game for the first time in 45 years. It's much more than just a lost preseason game for the northern Ohio community with deep football roots. The labor dispute between NFL owners and players forced the league to call off the annual Hall of Fame game between Chicago and St. Louis scheduled for Aug. 7. Everything else will go as planned, including the enshrinement on Aug. 6. It's a financial blow to the Hall of Fame, which could lose about $1.5 million out of its $20 million annual operating budget. And it's a big loss for the community, which gets more than just a financial boost from the event.

Twin Falls Hawks Lose to Idaho Falls, in Close Game, End Season

Score 10 runs and knock 12 hits in most games and you've got yourself a win. Not so for the Burley Green Sox against Hillcrest.

The Royals rocked Burley 20-10 Friday night at Bill Ingram Field to advance to the American Legion Baseball Class A Area C Tournament championship game tonight against Pocatello.

The Green Sox will play Idaho Falls this morning at 9 for a spot in the third-place game, with the winner clinching the final seed to the state tournament in Ontario, Ore.

"You've got to tip your hat to Hillcrest. They deserve all the credit," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "They hit the ball hard." Hillcrest smacked Burley for 11 runs in the top of the first inning, led by Nate Elliott, Tyler Clark, Kendall Motes and Kaycee Furukawa, who all hit RBI doubles off Green Sox starter Joe Ferrin.

The Burley pitcher was battling a sore back and was pulled after 2/3 of an inning. "There are two things you can't control in baseball, and that's the weather and injuries," Kunz said. "We thought Joe could go today, but he wasn't feeling too well."

Burley jumped back into the game in the bottom of the frame, scoring eight runs. The rally was short-lived, however, as the Royals punished three more Green Sox pitchers for 20 hits.

Taylor Carson finished 3-for-5 with a double, Jackson Kunz had a double and R.J. Nevarez drove in two runs.

Idaho Falls Rangers 11, Twin Falls Hawks 9

The Twin Falls Hawks fell behind early, briefly took the lead with a furious rally, but eventually lost 11-9 to the Idaho Falls Rangers.

Knowing that he has a 62-point lead in the point standings, Jerry Rice will have to race against Intermountain Pro Trucks drivers plotting how they're going to catch up with the defending series champion in this evening's events.

The margin separating Johnny Pierre, currently second in the race for the championship and Lou Andersen and Kent Jensen, who are tied for seventh, is a slim 30 points. There are only four events remaining on the 2011 schedule and Hannah Newhouse, age 14, would love to capture her first main event win in the series

NFL on Hold as Players Study Deal OK'd by Owners

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Lawyers from both sides of the NFL's labor dispute plan to work through the weekend — although not face-to-face — to try to resolve the differences that are preventing players from voting on the owner-approved proposal to end the lockout.

After the NFL Players Association decided not to vote Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, it's now possible the group won't make any decision until next week. It all depends on how long it takes to resolve the remaining differences.

So the NFL is stuck in a holding pattern. As it is, clubs already were told not to expect players to begin arriving at facilities Saturday, when owners hoped gates would open.

"Now it's just waiting," Carolina Panthers general manager Marty Hurney said at an Atlanta hotel where team executives were briefed Friday on new rules for next season. "Be flexible, and wait and see what happens."

M's Losing Streak Hits 13 Games

BOSTON • Jacoby Ellsbury continued his July power surge with his seventh home run of the month and John Lackey picked up his third consecutive win as the Boston Red Sox extended Seattle's losing streak to 13 with a 7-4 win over the tumbling Mariners on Friday night.

Seattle is one loss away from tying the franchise record for consecutive losses, which was set in September 1992.

Seattle hasn't won since July 5 and is just 6-21 since the Mariners improved to 37-35 and were a half-game out of first place on June 19.

Felix Hernandez (8-9) pitched strongly through six innings, but unraveled in the seventh as the Red Sox added five runs to break open the game.

Rangers 12, Blue Jays 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Nelson Cruz broke out of an extended slump with a career-high eight RBIs and Colby Lewis took a no-hitter into the sixth inning of his 10th victory as the Rangers beat the Blue Jays.

Cruz drove in runs with hits in each of his four at-bats. His RBI double in the second put Texas ahead to stay and he added a three-run homer, his 22nd, in the fourth off Jo-Jo Reyes (5-8). The slugger had only one RBI in his previous 11 games.

Angels 6, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Ervin Santana took a one-hitter into the eighth inning, Vernon Wells hit a grand slam in the ninth, and the Angels beat the Orioles.

It was the Angels' first win against Baltimore since Aug.

Milwaukee Brewers' Prince Fielder (28) and Rickie Weeks (23) celebrate a 4-2 win over the San Francisco Giants in a baseball game in San Francisco, Friday.

17, 2009, when Santana threw six innings in an 8-5 victory. Los Angeles went 0-6 against the Orioles last year.

Yankees 17, Athletics 7

NEW YORK — Mark Teixeira hit a grand slam and Nick Swisher had a three-run drive in a nine-run third inning and the Yankees routed the Athletics.

Swisher and Teixeira homered with two bases-loaded walks in between as the Yankees had their highest-scoring inning of the season — it was also the most runs allowed by the A's in an inning in 2011.

White Sox 3, Indians 0

CLEVELAND — Gavin Floyd allowed four hits over 7 2-3 innings and Carlos Quentin hit a three-run homer in the fifth to give the White Sox a victory over the Indians.

Floyd (8-9) earned his second straight win after going 0-4 over six previous starts. The right-hander struck out five and didn't issue a walk for the first time in 19 starts.

Tigers 8, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Jhonny Peralta finished a triple short of the cycle and had four RBIs to lift Detroit to a victory over the Twins, the Tigers' 11th straight win over their AL Central rivals.

Max Scherzer (11-5) gave up one run and four hits in seven innings and Ryan Raburn also homered for the Tigers, who picked up a game on second-place Cleveland and pushed the Twins seven games back in the division.

Royals 10, Rays 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Melky Cabrera had three hits and drove in three runs and Billy Butler homered for the Royals defeated the Rays.

National League Brewers 4, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Jonathan Lucroy and Yuniesky Betancourt drove in two runs each, and the Milwaukee Brewers held on to beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2 on Friday night.

Shaun Marcum (9-3) pitched seven solid innings to push the Brewers back into first place in the crowded NL Central standings. Pittsburgh and St. Louis are one game back.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Albert Pujols went 4 for 5 and homered for the second straight game to lead the St. Louis Cardinals past the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4 Friday.

Braves 6, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Dan Uggla's first career pinch-hit home run lifted the Braves to a win over the Reds.

Uggla, who missed the last two starts with a strained left calf, batted with two outs in the ninth inning for reliever Jonny Venters (5-1) with Alex Gonzalez on second base. He lofted a 3-2 pitch from Nick Masset (1-4) 402 feet into the right-center field seats for the go-ahead runs.

Phillies 3, Padres 1

PHILADELPHIA — Cole Hamels tossed eight dominant innings and the Phillies beat the Padres for the eighth straight time.

Hamels (12-5) allowed one run and three hits, striking out 10.

Cubs 4, Astros 2

CHICAGO — Aramis Ramirez and Alfonso Soriano hit fifth-inning homers and Chicago beat Houston.

Oakley Holds Gun Raffle

The Oakley High football and girls basketball teams will conduct their second annual gun raffle fundraiser. Last year the teams gave away 10 guns in the form of Sportsman's Warehouse gift certificates ranging from $250 to $1,000. Each ticket costs $50; however, a limited number of only 350 tickets will be sold to increase your chances of winning. Plus, if your ticket is drawn, it will be put back in for future drawings, giving each ticket the chance to win multiple times. See the Hornets at Oakley Park during the 24th of July celebration on July 22-23. Info: Tim Behunin, 420-4508.

Calcavecchia, Rinker Lead American Charge at Senior British Open

WALTON ON THE HILL, England (AP) • Mark Calcavecchia and Lee Rinker headed an American charge in the second round of the Senior British Open on Friday.

Calcavecchia — one of three overnight leaders — made six birdies in his 3-under 69. He was joined on 7 under by Rinker and Canada's Rod Spittle, who each shot 67 at Walton Heath.

Tom Watson had a bogey-free 68 to move into contention. Americans filled six of the top nine places, improving the likelihood of an eighth American winner in nine years.

Defending champion Bernhard Langer faded with a 76, nine shots off the pace.

Fowler, a two-time winner on the Senior European Tour this season, holed a pitch shot for birdie on No. 16. England's Kevin Spurgeon had the low round with eight birdies for a 66.

Bob Tway (70) and 2010 runner-up

Corey Pavin (72) were tied at 3 under with England's Barry Lane (70).

Canadian Open

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Michael Thompson followed up his even-par opening round with a 4-under 66 to move into a tie with fellow American Chad Campbell after the second round of the RBC Canadian Open.

Campbell shot 67 in cloudy morning conditions, and Thompson bettered it on a sunny afternoon, finishing with a birdie on the tough 472-yard, par-4 18th.

Paul Goydos (69) and Lee Janzen (68) had a share of the lead before bogeys on their final hole dropped them to 137 after another tough day in the thick rough along the tight, tree-lined Shaughnessy Golf and Country Club.

Masters champion Charl Schwartzel (67), Geoff Ogilvy (68), Rickie Fowler

(69), Jerry Kelly (67), Canadians David Hearn (68) and Adam Hadwin (66), and first-round leader Kris Blankens (71) were at 2 under.

European Tour

STOCKHOLM — Sweden's Alexander Noren shot a 6-under 66 to take a three-stroke lead after the second round of the Nordea Masters.

He had shared the overnight lead with amateur Robert Karlsson and Jaco Van Zyl of South Africa. Noren left them behind with a round that featured six birdies and no bogeys on the 7,603-yard Bro Hof Slott course. He finished at 11-under 133.

India's Shiv Kapur also shot a 66 and trails by three shots, his eight birdies offset with two bogeys.

American Bubba Watson (67) and Van Zyl (71) were five strokes behind Noren.

Jerome Beats Pocatello to Advance in Class AA

TIMES-NEWS

From a long losing streak to begin the season to qualifying for the state tournament.

Not a bad turnaround for the Jerome Cyclones.

Behind a gusty performance on the mound by Nolan Stouder, Jerome beat Pocatello 7-6 in the American Legion Baseball Class AA Tournament in Pocatello to clinch a spot to the state tournament.

"I've been telling my team all season, it's at the end of the season when we need to play our best," said Jerome coach Kenneth James. "That's what I believed. This was probably one of our best team victories."

The Cyclones will play Twin Falls today in the championship game at 1 p.m.

Stouder pitched a complete game, striking out eight and getting infield good defense behind him.

Tanner Holyoak hit an RBI double to start a five-run inning in the second.

"We had our backs against the wall, and the team responded," James said.

Andy Schleck of Luxembourg, wearing the overall leader's yellow jersey, celebrates on the podium of the 19th stage of the Tour de France cycling race. The stage was more 86 miles starting in Modane Valfrejus and finishing on Alpe d'Huez, Alps region, France, Friday.

Andy Schleck is New Leader in Tour de France

ALPE D'HUEZ, France • Luxembourg's Andy Schleck captured the Tour de France yellow jersey Friday on the famed Alpe d'Huez, setting up a pulsating finish with a weekend time trial and final dash to the Champs Elysees in Paris.

Schleck overtook Frenchman Thomas Voeckler on the final day of racing in the Alps, making up a 15-second deficit during a 68-mile, brutally steep stage.

"My motivation is super, my legs are good, my condition is there," Schleck said. "So I'm confident I can keep this till Paris."

Voeckler cracked on the first of three daunting climbs. He never caught the leaders despite a gritty struggle and gave up the yellow jersey after wearing it for 10 days.

With the race ending Sunday in Paris, Schleck leads brother Frank by 53 seconds. Australia's Cadel Evans is third, 57 seconds behind.

Frenchman Pierre Rolland captured the 19th stage, rewarding thousands of wildly cheering French fans who packed the finish. He attacked near the end of the mountain's 21 punishing bends, dropping three-time champion Alberto Contador and Olympic champ Samuel Sanchez.

"I grew up watching Lance Armstrong and Marco Pantani, watching how they climb the Alpe d'Huez," Rolland said. "Now I've won the Alpe d'Huez. It's going to take a minute to sink in."

Andy Schleck is considered one of the best climbers. But Evans still has every chance of beating both brothers in Saturday's 26-mile time trial in Grenoble, the next-to-last stage.

The time trial, an individual race-against-the-clock race, has long been Schleck's weak point. Evans is strong in this discipline, but it will take a superlative performance to make up 57 seconds and spoil the Schlecks' dream of becoming the first brothers to finish on the winner's podium together in the Tour's 108-year history.

"Everybody tells me it's a time trial that suits me good, so I believe everybody and hope to show a good performance tomorrow," Schleck said.

In 2008, Evans beat Schleck by nearly two minutes in a time trial that was about six miles longer. Schleck was only 23 and riding in his first Tour. Since then he has put significant effort into becoming better in the specialty.

"Of course, I'd like to take more time going into the time trial," Evans said. "I'd much rather be in yellow, with five minutes" going in to the stage.

Evans will follow a simple strategy Saturday: "Start as fast as possible, finish as fast as possible, hope you're fast enough."

Schleck, who lost the 2010 Tour by just 39 seconds to Contador, made good on Thursday's promise to claim the yellow jersey. He had missed a chance to take the lead on top of the Galibier pass following a daring solo attack.

On Friday, Schleck rode much of the time in a small group alongside Contador. But he chose not to follow the Spaniard when he attacked at the bottom of the 8.5-mile Alpe d'Huez.

"I had no interest in chasing Contador or Sanchez," Schleck said, with neither rider in contention for the yellow jersey.

Heavy Rain Wipes Out Practice at Edmonton Indy

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) • Heavy rains washed out the first day of practice at the Edmonton Indy on Friday, and series leader Dario Franchitti says that sets the stage for racing on Sunday that will be closer and a little crazier.

"You're going to see more unpredictability," Franchitti told reporters after IndyCar officials, waiting hours for the rain to let up at the City Centre Airport track, threw in the towel at 3 p.m.

The pools of water put the open-wheel cars at risk of hydroplaning.

The rain was forecast to run its course late Friday night, with clouds on Saturday but sunny and hot for the race on Sunday afternoon.

It means a busy Saturday.

The 26 IndyCar drivers will practice once in the morning, once in the afternoon then run qualifying late in the day.

It will be a bigger test for the drivers in the Indy Lights development series. They will practice and qualify in the morning, then run the first of two races in the afternoon.

Toronto driver Paul Tracy said the wild card is the track, which is new to the IndyCar series this year.

The track underwent a complete change after the closure of a runway forced organizers to scramble. The race was in fact briefly canceled at one point in a dispute between the city and the event organizer, Montreal-based Octane Racing, over who would pay for it.

The drivers will now run counter clockwise on the track.

"It's a perfect storm for a disaster," said Tracy, referring to the weather.

"It doesn't make it easy when the drivers don't know the track condition, and the circuit hasn't had a good chance to rubber in and create a line," he said.

"The good thing about the rain is hopefully it has washed a lot of the debris and the dust from (the construction of) the track."

Franchitti said the wet conditions help the smaller teams that only get track data off one car versus big teams such as Franchitti's Target Chip Ganassi, which pools telemetry among four cars.

That telemetry can dictate how to set up the wings, the camber, the springs and shocks on the cars to balance downforce versus drag and find that extra tenth of a second per lap critical to victory.

"If the track is dry for practice, it gives teams the chance to develop the car and make (setup) changes," Franchitti said.

"If it's not dry and qualifying is the first time we see a dry track, you're going to see the times tumble lap to lap as drivers figure (things) out and come in the pits make changes."

Preparation or no preparation, the race is still considered Franchitti's to lose. The 38 year-old Scotsman is going for his third consecutive points championship and the fourth of his IndyCar career.

He won two weeks ago in Toronto and has captured four of the 10 events this season.

Australian Will Power, with Team Penske, is second, 55 points back.

Scott Dixon, Franchitti's teammate, is third, 83 points off the pace in what has essentially become a three-driver contest.

Alex Tagliani of Lachenaie, Quebec, is tied for 10th, 180 points back.

Tracy, from Toronto, is driving part time again this year, and is 29th.

Rookie James Hinchcliffe of Oakville, Ontario, is 15th, but just 35 points behind J.R. Hildebrand in the race for top rookie.

Hinchcliffe, with Newman/Haas, said the race will go to those who can adapt the quickest.
