Schools Rush to Prepare for Merit Pay Law

Local decisions will direct where 63 percent of an estimated $38 million in teacher bonus pay will go in 2012.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

School districts across Idaho have an additional task to finish this summer before students return to class.

Educators are working on customized plans that will set the stage for future decisions about which teachers are awarded bonuses based on student performance. With the Legislature's approval of a package of education reform bills, districts are now tasked with crafting plans that reflect the needs and priorities of their schools.

It's no simple task. But district-level decisions will determine where 63 percent of the state's pay-for-performance funding goes. Under the new law, school districts have more than a dozen criteria to choose from, with the flexibility to tailor different measurement methods to different grade levels.

The options are plentiful: student test scores, graduation and dropout rates — even parental involvement can all have a role in the plans, which must be sent to the State Department of Education by Sept. 1.

Still, school officials caution that the work will continue beyond then as the new plans are tweaked. And this is all before the first round of bonus checks are distributed to teachers in fall 2012.

Jerome School District's board approved its plan on Tuesday night, with an eye toward improving interaction between teachers and parents in the secondary grade levels. In the

Q&A

Making Sense of the Debt Ceiling Discussion

Congress has until Aug. 2 to raise the federal borrowing limit or the government will run out of money and possibly default on its debt. House Republicans say they won't raise the debt limit without equal spending cuts. President Barack Obama and Democrats have insisted that higher revenues must be included.

What is the debt ceiling?

It's a legal limit on how much debt the government can accumulate. The government takes on debt two ways: It borrows from investors by issuing Treasury bonds, and it borrows from itself, mostly from the Social Security trust fund. The federal government created the debt limit in 1917. Congress has increased the debt limit 10 times since 2001.

What is the federal deficit, and how does it differ from the debt?

The deficit is how much government spending exceeds tax revenue during a year. Last year, the deficit was $1.29 trillion. The debt is the sum of deficits past and present. Right now, the national debt totals $14.3 trillion.

Why is the prospect of not raising the debt ceiling so worrisome?

The government now borrows more than 40 cents of each dollar it spends. If the debt ceiling does not rise, the government would need to choose what to pay and what not. Any default could lead to financial panic weakening the country's credit rating, the dollar and the already hobbled economy. Interest rates would likely rise, increasing the cost of borrowing.

Who holds the $14.3 trillion in outstanding U.S. debt?

The U.S. government owes itself $4.6 trillion, mostly borrowed from Social Security. The remaining $9.7 trillion is owed to investors in Treasury securities. Nearly half of that — $4.5 trillion — is held by foreigners including China with $1.15 trillion and Japan with $907 billion.

How did the debt grow from $5.8 trillion in 2001 to its current $14.3 trillion?

The biggest contributors to the nearly $9 trillion increase over a decade were:

- 2001/2003 tax cuts under President George W. Bush: $1.6 trillion.
- Additional interest costs: $1.4 trillion.
- Iraq/Afghanistan wars: $1.3 trillion.
- Economic stimulus package under Obama: $800 billion.
- 2010 tax cuts to extend jobless benefits and cut payroll taxes: $400 billion.

IDAHO'S DRUG PROBLEM

While some drug seizures are down, marijuana and meth still dominate state drug busts.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE

Twin Falls police recently made arrests for heroin and painkillers, but those narcotics are still in the minority of what's moving through Idaho's drug underworld.

Three people from Ada County face felony charges of trafficking heroin after police busted them in the parking lot of the Twin Falls Buffalo Wild Wings. Also recently arrested was Ryan Hilliard, 25, a

Twin Falls man who is charged with allegedly possessing heroin and selling painkillers to a police informant.

Still, marijuana and methamphetamine remain the predominant drugs in Idaho, according to area police and the latest statewide Crime in Idaho report.

"The majority is obviously marijuana and meth," said Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts. "I don't know if it's a nationwide trend, but prescription drug sales and abuse is up there as well."

ISP's 2010 Crime in Idaho report revealed that the amount of pot and meth seized statewide increased from 2009, while the

The fire began on Tuesday a little after 7 p.m. and remained active throughout the night. On Wednesday, the fire had been contained by 2 p.m. and all hot spots were sched-

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management sent four engines to help both the Twin Falls Fire Department and Rock Creek Rural Fire District fight the fire. The BLM had also planned to send a helicopter, but the Twin Falls

JEROME DEPUTIES RESPOND TO POSSIBLE MURDER, DISCOVER HOAX INSTEAD

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Sheriff's deputies with Jerome County want to know who made a prank call claiming to have murdered people and taken others hostage. The sheriff's office, along with Jerome police, Idaho State Police and Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies, responded to a residence on Silver Beach Drive in southern Jerome County shortly before 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday — only to find that no one was harmed. "We set up a command center and did surveillance on the home," said Sgt. Rick Cowen of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office. "We saw someone outside watering the grass. We made contact with people in the home and found that everyone was safe."

A male subject had called 911 to report killing two people. The male claimed he had two other hostages and that he wanted money and a vehicle. Cowen said the call was made through an Internet phone service, making it difficult to figure where the call originated. Investigators are working with Google to identify the caller. Cowen said criminal charges would be up to the county prosecutor if a suspect is found. "It could be anything from filing a false report to making terrorist threats," Cowen said. "The person could also be held responsible for the costs involved in responding (to the prank call)." Anyone with information on the hoax is asked to call investigators with the Jerome County Sheriff's Office at 644-2770.

Laughlin Gets Trial Date for Reckless Driving Charge

TIMES-NEWS

A trial date was set on Wednesday for Kade Laughlin, the Filer man accused of pursuing Coeur d'Alene teens who later crashed their vehicle and died. Laughlin, 20, is set for a Nov. 23 trial in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court, accused of misdemeanor reckless driving. He was arrested on Sept. 12, 2010, hours after a single-vehicle crash injured 19-year-old Jessica Duran and claimed the lives of Devon Austin, 19, and Ryan Reinhardt, 18. Both men died at the scene of the crash on Clover Road near Filer. Reinhardt rolled his 1998 Toyota Camry, having failed to make a curve on Clover Road. An Idaho Transportation Department crash report noted that Reinhardt's blood-alcohol concentration was .19 after the crash. While the victims' family members maintain that Laughlin is responsible for causing the crash, as he allegedly chased them from a house party, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs has not filed charges against him other than reckless driving. Also, a $5,000 warrant was recently issued for Laughlin. He is accused of violating terms of his probation from a March driving under the influence conviction that he was given a suspended jail sentence for. The maximum penalty for reckless driving is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

T.F. Woman Accused of Stealing $400,000 from Employer

TIMES-NEWS

A Twin Falls woman is accused of embezzling nearly $400,000 from her former employer, a Boise-based title loan company. Marie Watkins, 57, faces a Friday preliminary hearing on the charge of felony grand theft by possession of stolen property in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court. Investigators say company officials from Alliance Title and Escrow of Boise came to them with evidence of embezzlement in March after learning of the theft in the latter months of last year. Watkins worked in the company's Twin Falls branch through November, when she was fired. The police affidavit reports that company officials discovered $366,122.15 missing and then hired an independent accounting company to verify the information. Watkins allegedly told the accounting firm that she had taken money throughout the past 10 years to pay for bills and her children's college expenses. She did not talk with police.

Prosecutors Re-File Child Porn Charges Against Twin Falls Man

TIMES-NEWS

A dozen charges of possession of child pornography were re-filed against Robert Brackett on Tuesday. Brackett, 42, of Twin Falls, was initially slapped in January with the same felony crimes, but all charges were dropped in late June. In addition to the 12 felony counts, Twin Falls County prosecutors have added two charges of felony sexual battery of a minor. A preliminary hearing is set for Aug. 5. Investigators claim to have found pictures of the alleged victim, a 16-year-old girl, on a digital camera at Brackett's residence. In a different case, Brackett is scheduled for trial on Aug. 9 for six counts of sexual battery to a minor and one count of second-degree kidnapping. He remains in the custody of the Twin Falls County Jail.

battalion chief later called in to cancel the aerial assistance. The helicopter was diverted to help fight a fire seven miles northwest of Oakley. The fire near Dierkes Lake came close to damaging homes in the Hidden Lakes Subdivision, but only one house suffered landscape damage. While the subdivision is not unaccustomed to experiencing wildfires throughout the years, it is one of the few certified Firewise Communities in Twin Falls. Firewise Communities is a multi-agency program that teaches homeowners how to prevent and protect against wildfires. "We can only offer suggestions," said Heather Tiel-Nelson, the BLM's Twin Falls District spokeswoman. "It is really up to the homeowner to do the work and do as much as they can to protect their home." The wet spring has not helped in preventing fires in the area either, said Brian Cunningham, Twin Falls Fire Department battalion chief. "Our season has started later, but absolutely everybody ought to be on high alert," he said. "It's dry out here right now and hot. The conditions are right to have these kinds of fire for the rest of the summer." The source of the fire is still being investigated by the Twin Falls Fire Department and BLM fire officials, Cunningham said. Tuesday night, Twin Falls Battalion Chief Jack Barnes said officials believe it was human-caused.

primary grades, the school district will rely on state reading tests. In middle school and high school, the district will look at the level of contact between parents and teachers, including participation in parent-teacher conferences, said Superintendent Dale Layne. Layne said teacher contact with parents tends to drop when students enter the middle school grades, adding that parental involvement is one of the state-approved measures. "Parental involvement has been one that we've been trying to do in the past," he said. "This will be a good chance for us to step that up." The district came up with its plan with input from administrators and teachers from each school. Layne said the timing, which required gathering staff during the summer, was a challenging logistical hurdle. Scott Rogers, superintendent of Minidoka County School District, agreed. In his district, planning efforts will step up when teachers return in mid-August. Rogers said it's too soon to say what the plan will look like, stressing that it's crucial for it to receive the staff's blessing. A 12-member committee

Local Student Achievement Measures

The following tools can be incorporated by school districts in plans to determine the local share of pay for performance money that will go to educators.

- Student test scores
- Student graduation rate
- Student dropout rate
- Percentage of graduates attending postsecondary education or the military
- Making federally approved Adequate Yearly Progress
- Number of students successfully finishing dual credit or advanced placement courses
- Percentage of students involved in extracurricular activities
- Class projects
- Portfolios
- Successful completion of special student assignments
- Parental involvement
- Teacher-assigned grades
- Student attendance rates
- Various other criteria, all subject to state approval

What's Next

The first two measures — statewide ISAT scores and locally determined measures — go into effect for bonuses paid in fall 2012. The following year, the portion for hard-to-fill positions and leadership roles kicks in. The estimated cost is $38 million for the first year, but lawmakers will determine that in 2012.

at Twin Falls School District is scheduled to present a proposed plan to the board on Aug. 8. Its work started in June. Ted Popplewell, the district's director of elementary and middle school education, said the task requires a lot of legwork because educators are starting from scratch — with no prior examples to build upon.

Although they are learning as they go along, Popplewell said he's comfortable with how the planning is going. "We're kind of building the airplane as we fly because we know we need to get something done and turned into the state," he said. Ben Botkin may be reached at 735-3238.

Drugs

amount of other drugs seized tapered off. Marijuana seized is measured in terms of pounds of processed material and number of raw plants. ISP officials in Meridian noted the bulk of the 220,000 pounds reported in 2010 was seized by Boise police, but they did not have a specific figure to disclose. The number of plants seized increased by about 250 from 2009 to 2010 for a total of 4,913. That number still isn't an accurate total — the ISP reports aren't a true reflection of what was seized in the state, only what jurisdictions report. For instance, deputies from Gooding and Jerome counties found 7,200 marijuana plants during July and August 2010, most of which were growing among corn stalks or on public land.

Heroin may have been the big find for city police last week, but police statewide seize far more of other controlled substances. While 138 grams of heroin were reported as seized last year, meth weighed in at 44 pounds and approximately 1,200 grams of cocaine were confiscated.

Deputy Blas Martinez of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office agreed that meth and marijuana continue to dominate the local drug scene. "They're a constant. They're always there," he said, with the majority of the drugs coming from out of the area. Martinez said the trend is moving away from when people cooked up meth in their home garage.

Also, the number of drug-crime arrests increased in many jurisdictions between 2009 and 2010. Nearly 100 more arrests were made last year by law-enforcement agencies within Twin Falls County, the report shows. Many in other counties showed slight bumps in arrests, while some deviated with a downward trend. Across the state, drug arrests were up by 12 percent. Twin Falls police showed an 8.5 percent increase, and it was the jurisdiction with the most arrests — 454 in 2010.

Area officials weren't able to provide a specific reason why seizures and arrests are up, as they don't consider the difference between 2009 and 2010 a huge spike. "I like to think our hard, diligent work is paying off," Lt. Stotts said.

Twin Falls City Looks for Way to Fight Rising Dump Fees

ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

With the threat of rising dump fees taking some of the oomph out of the city of Twin Falls' recycling program, city officials took the issue to the county, which holds weight in the matter.

Trouble is, despite Twin Falls County accounting for more than 40 percent of all the solid waste sent to the regional Milner Butte Landfill, the county might not be big enough to allay city concerns.

Representatives of the city, including City Manager Travis Rothweiler and Councilman Lance Clow, went to the Twin Falls County commissioners on Wednesday to air their grievances with the proposed Southern Idaho Solid Waste budget, which includes a proposed $1-per-ton increase to dumping fees. The increase is at least partly attributable to the city's single-stream recycling program, as the solid waste board works to cover its budget despite falling tonnage.

Clow also said the expense/revenue side of SISW is weighted toward the smaller counties it serves: Paying for the waste operations is proportionally split, while revenue from a methane-capturing utility program is handled differently, meaning Twin Falls County gets 30 percent of any profit despite paying 35 percent of all costs.

Twin Falls County fills only one seat out of seven on the Southern Idaho Solid Waste Board, with Blaine, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Minidoka counties being the others. So, despite Twin Falls having more than three times as much waste as the next county, it would need to convince the others to institute a more favorable policy.

"I think the (Twin Falls) county commissioners do care about what is going on, but their hands are tied with the solid waste district," Clow said after the meeting.

He said he is disappointed in SISW for not inviting the city of Twin Falls — the city that produces the most waste in the county that produces the most waste — to its last regular meeting before local budgets are finalized for the year. Clow said he's made sure the district was aware of the city's concerns over the past several weeks and he nonetheless intends to attend the next meeting.

County Commission Chairman George Urie, who represents Twin Falls County on the waste board, said he brought up the city's concerns to the rest of the board, but it didn't elicit much response. Some of the smaller counties rely on the current funding formula because they have tighter budgets, he said. Plus, he said, the smaller counties founded the waste district and put up the initial costs for it.

"(The other commissioners) didn't act very receptive to change, and if they want to keep it that way, they'll keep it that way," Urie said. "We're just one vote out of seven."

He said he'll work with the city on any solutions it proposes because county residents will benefit as much as city residents. But aside from possibly combining the county's smaller recycling program with the citywide program, he doesn't see any changes to the system in the immediate future.

Grizzly Bear Charges Prompt New Specific Grand Teton Rules

People who don't obey park rangers' orders to get away from wild animals could face a hefty fine, which would be set at a judge's discretion.

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • Grand Teton National Park is clarifying its rules against getting too close to wildlife after a grizzly bear on two separate occasions charged at tourists who were watching her from atop their cars.

The new rules emphasize that people need to heed any ranger or other park official who tells them to move away from wildlife. Park officials say people who don't listen can be fined anywhere from $100 to $5,000, depending on what a judge thinks about what they did.

The rules don't change the distance people are supposed to keep away from grizzlies and wolves, which remains no less than 100 yards.

But the new rules spell out that people must not interfere with the movement of wildlife. The new rules also say people need to make their best effort to move away whenever they've discovered that they're accidentally too close to wildlife.

A grizzly killed a hiker in Yellowstone National Park three weeks ago — Yellowstone's first death from a grizzly in 25 years — but that's not the main reason for the policy change in nearby Grand Teton.

Two female grizzlies with cubs have become big tourist attractions in Grand Teton this summer. The grizzlies have been easily visible and have created traffic jams by spending a lot of time near roads, behavior biologists speculate discourages aggressive male grizzly bears from threatening their cubs.

On two separate occasions this summer, one of the grizzly mothers charged at people who were watching her from on top of cars. Nobody was hurt, and park officials said they're responding with rules that are intended to protect people.

"That was definitely a red flag for us, that she felt threatened or disturbed enough to charge a person who was on top of their car," Grand Teton spokeswoman Jackie Skaggs said Wednesday.

Yellowstone also is clarifying its wildlife viewing rules along the same lines but won't have its changes in place until perhaps this fall, said Yellowstone spokesman Dan Hottle.

"Grand Teton was just in a little different situation that forced them to clarify their rules a little quicker," Hottle said.

Until now, Grand Teton didn't strictly enforce the 100-yard minimum for people who were inside their cars, Skaggs said.

This summer's big traffic jams with tourists sitting on top of their cars, leaning out of windows and sunroofs, and blocking the grizzlies and their cubs from crossing roads forced the change.

"As these wildlife jams have become more congested and bigger we have seen more reaction by the bears to these situations," she said.

Worst of all for bears, some people have tried to feed the grizzlies. Yellowstone and Grand Teton both have gone to great lengths over the past few decades to make sure bears don't get used to eating human food — a bad habit that can make them dangerous to people and require bears to be euthanized.

Park officials so far have been able to beat the bears to food thrown from cars, Skaggs said.

A team of about a dozen volunteers led by a park ranger helps patrol Grand Teton's "critter jams." The duties of the Wildlife Brigade include asking people to move their cars farther up the road if it looks like their vehicles are blocking a bear or other wildlife from crossing.

"For the most part the average park visitor is so thrilled to see these bears, they immediately follow the directives that are given by the Wildlife Brigade. They get in their cars and move their cars when they're asked," Skaggs said.

Getting too close to wildlife in a national park is a misdemeanor. So too is violating a lawful order of a government employee or interfering with a government function by not heeding a ranger's request to back away.

Skaggs said park rangers almost always lean toward educating people instead of punishing them with citations. On average, they only cite one person a year for getting too close to wildlife.

"It's only going to escalate toward a ticket if they fail the attitude test," she said.

Fire Burns Dozens of Cars at E. Idaho Salvage Yard

POCATELLO (AP) • A fire engulfed between 40 and 50 cars at a salvage yard in southeastern Idaho as crews fought to keep the blaze from reaching dozens of nearby propane tanks.

Authorities say a small brush fire was reported to the Pocatello Fire Department at about 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday. Fire crews arrived to find the blaze had quickly spread and was burning about 10 feet away from nearly 60 propane tanks.

The fire was contained at about 4 p.m. and forced closure of nearby U.S. Highway 30 for several hours. Two buildings at the salvage yard were destroyed, along with dozens of vehicles. No one was injured.

Investigators are working to determine the cause of the fire.

Developer Inks Deal to Buy Vacant Parcel in Downtown Boise

BOISE (AP) • A Meridian developer says he has signed a contract to buy a prime chunk of real estate in downtown Boise that has been vacant for years.

Officials from The Gardner Co. say they have agreed to buy the parcel on the corner of 8th and Main streets from Capps Holdings LLC, which acquired the land in a foreclosure auction two years ago.

Gardner Co. Chief Operating Officer Tommy Ahlquist said Wednesday the deal hinges on resolving a handful of issues.

He says the company is doing a study to determine what kind of project best fits the property.

The site has been vacant since 1987 and is nothing more than a hollow pit.

Financial and legal problems scuttled previous plans to build a 25-story tower at the site.

BOISE WOMAN CHARGED WITH SMASHING CARS

BOISE (AP) • A 49-year-old Boise woman is charged with malicious injury to property after police say she intentionally rammed her car into three parked cars, causing $8,500 in damage.

Police say Corianne P. Rogers was in an ongoing dispute with a man and crashed into three cars in front of his house at around 2 a.m. Wednesday. Investigators say police found pieces of a car in the street that matched the vehicle Rogers drives. Rogers was arrested a short distance from the man's house. She was scheduled to make an initial court appearance Wednesday.

ADA CO. DEPUTY SHOOTS PIT BULL

BOISE (AP) • Ada County officials say a sheriff's deputy responding to a report that two dogs had cornered a boy shot a pit bull terrier that charged him.

The department says a Meridian-area homeowner reported her teenage nephew was cornered by dogs she believed were pit bulls. The teen got away from the dogs.

A responding deputy was standing by his patrol car when one of the dogs ran around the back of the car and ran at the deputy. A witness said the deputy "had no other options" than shooting the dog.

The Idaho Statesman reports animal control responded and was eventually able to get the second dog contained. The sheriff's department says the owner will be cited for having a dog at large.

Charges Considered for 26 people Protesting Activist Case

BY JENNIFER DOBNER
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • City prosecutors on Wednesday considered criminal charges for 26 people arrested after they blocked traffic and the light rail downtown while protesting the sentencing of an environmental activist who thwarted a 2008 government auction of oil and gas leases. A federal judge on Tuesday sentenced Tim DeChristopher, 29, to two years in prison and three years of probation, and fined him $10,000. He was accused of running up bids at the auction of oil and gas leases on public land near Utah's Arches and Canyonlands national parks.

DeChristopher maintains his actions were an act of civil disobedience designed to bring attention to the problems of climate change.

The protesters had staged a sit-in outside two entrances at the federal courthouse downtown where the sentencing took place, then used plastic zip ties to link their wrists together to form a human chain and sat in the street in front of the U.S. District Court building.

"We had to make sure that adequate attention was brought to this cause," said Ashley Anderson, the co-founder of DeChristopher's climate change activist nonprofit group and one of those arrested. "Business as usual and the status quo was what we intended to disrupt ... we wanted to show that business as usual is what is killing the planet."

Police Chief Chris Burbank offered protesters the choice of leaving on their own, be cited and released on the spot, or be arrested and taken to jail, spokeswoman Lara Jones said.

"They wanted to be arrested," she said.

All 26 were cited for failing to disperse or comply with a police officer, obstructing the operations of a bus and traffic offenses. Jail records show 19 were booked and released without bail. Seven others were cited, but not booked.

The records shows those booked in jail range in age from 20 to 66. Most were from Salt Lake City, with some from Arizona, Colorado and New York.

Assistant city prosecutor Scott Fisher said the charges include misdemeanors and infractions. Prosecutors were reviewing the cases to decide whether the citations reflected sufficient charges or if different or more serious charges should be filed, Fisher said.

Court appearances are set for Aug. 9 at the Salt Lake City Justice Court.

DeChristopher was convicted on two felony counts of interfering with and making false representations at a government auction in March. He could have received a 10 year prison sentence.

Supporters reacted to the sentencing with tears, shouting and singing of protest songs.

"We've known for a really long time that he would probably go to prison, but when the judge actually said it and he was gone ... that was the shock," said Anderson.

Tribal Leader Calls for Oil Spill Accountability

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Crews reported being a third of the way through the cleanup of a northwestern Montana oil spill Tuesday, as the chairman of the Blackfeet Indian tribe called on state and congressional leaders to ensure that energy companies don't shirk their responsibilities in future spills.

Up to 840 gallons of crude spilled from a broken flow line at an oil field FX Energy Inc. operates on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation before the company discovered and patched the break in June. But the company never reported the spill. It spread almost a mile down a steep ravine and into Cut Bank Creek before a neighboring landowner reported it nearly a month later, on July 12.

About a dozen people are excavating oil-stained soil and draining contaminated pools by hand, as the ravine is so steep and rugged that crews

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ExxonMobil contractors spread absorbent pads to soak up oil along the banks of the Yellowstone River in Billings, Mont., Sunday, July 3, 2011. A company pipeline about 20 miles upriver near Laurel, Mont., ruptured and spilled an estimated 1,000 barrels of crude into the Yellowstone earlier this month.

are unable to use machines to help them with the cleanup.

They are putting the soil into 2,000-pound bags and the oil-slicked water into barrels, and lowering both to staging areas at the bottom of the canyon on the shore of the Cut Bank Creek. Workers have collected eight barrels and eight bags of waste, said

Gabe Renville, senior environmental scientist for Indian County Environmental Associates.

The next problem workers must face is how to get it out of the remote corner of the reservation, he said.

"We're moving along, but we'll have some challenges ahead of us as to how to get our contaminated soil out of the canyon," Renville said.

The site of the cleanup is a high canyon marked by cliffs, switchbacks and waterfalls. Plans are in the works to position a crane at the top of the coulee, attach a long cable to it and drag the barrels and bags up the side. But others involved in the cleanup will have to sign off before that plan can move ahead, Renville said.

Draining and mucking out the numerous spring-fed pools contaminated with oil is expected to continue into next week, if the conditions are right, Renville said.

Once the cleanup is completed, remediation begins. Workers will have to restore what they've disturbed, such as the staging areas and makeshift road at the bottom of the canyon, Renville said.

"We'll replace rocks and restore it back to the natural landscaping as much as possible," he said.

Officials are unsure how much oil spilled into the creek, which connects with the Marias River and ultimately the Missouri River. It is unclear whether the spill has had any effect on wildlife. Workers have found two dead birds, but they did not know whether that was related.

The Environmental Protection Agency is investigating why Salt Lake City-based FX Energy did not report the spill when it happened.

Willie Sharp Jr., chairman of the Blackfeet tribe, sent letters Tuesday to Democratic Sens. Max Baucus and Jon Tester of Montana, along with state Attorney General Steve Bullock, saying he wants them to make sure such spills aren't ignored in the future.

Sharp called on the state and congressional leaders to order all oil and gas producers operating in Montana to attend a mandatory meeting to remind the producers of their responsibilities in the spills such as the one on the reservation and a separate one earlier this month in the Yellowstone River.

OPINION

OUR VIEW

The price tag to replace the Perrine Bridge will be at least $1 billion. How would the Magic Valley pay for it?

Kempthorne sold us a bridge, but the uncertainty is more costly

Six years ago, our horizons were wider here in the Magic Valley.

As part of his debt-funded Connecting Idaho initiative, then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne proposed building a third bridge across the Snake River Canyon at Twin Falls. Cost: $184 million.

This week, as the Idaho Transportation Department completed one its periodic inspections of the 35-year-old Perrine Bridge, and the talk was just about making sure the span reached its planned 50-year life expectancy.

What happened in the meantime to downsize our ambitions?

A recession, of course, and a consequent shift in nation's priorities that left debt financing less an option for government. Plus, it turns out, Kempthorne low-balled the potential cost of a third bridge. The actual price tag would probably be closer to $1 billion.

All of which swept the prospective third bridge off ITD's radar as part of Connecting Idaho, which was funded through grant anticipation revenue vehicle bonds to be paid for by future federal highway payments to Idaho.

The economic impact of constructing a third bridge would have been substantial. Connecting the Highway 93/30 Bypass — completed earlier this year with federal stimulus funds — with an alternate route to Interstate 84 somewhere between Wendell and Jerome could have meant billions of dollars in new revenue to the Magic Valley.

Instead, for better or worse, our economic future is probably tied exclusively to the Perrine Bridge and to the 45-year-old Hansen Bridge.

Trouble is, there's more transportation infrastructure built — and coming — than the Perrine and Hansen bridges can accommodate, forcing us to ration our resources.

When the time comes — and it will — when commute traffic backs up from the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road in Twin Falls to the junction of U.S. Highway 93 and I-84 in Jerome County, what will our response be?

Building more access to the Perrine Bridge would be futile. New bridge or no new bridge, we must look elsewhere — perhaps to a south-bank to north-bank span within the Snake River Canyon somewhere west of the Perrine Bridge, with Canyon Springs Grade and Blue Lakes Grade-style roads on either side.

That's far from an ideal solution, but we have a dwindling range of options in the next few decades.

The bigger question is what happens when the Perrine Bridge itself has to be replaced. It will turn 50 — the end of its nominal lifespan — in 2026.

Another, bigger bridge will have to be built at the same site. But how will we pay for it, and between now and then how best to plan for growth on both sides of the canyon?

The Perrine Bridge is the single most important element in the economy of south-central Idaho. Without it — north side and south side — we'd be out of business.

What the NFL Could Teach Washington

BY ALEXANDRA PETRI

The NFL is coming back. The lockout has ended. Players and owners have reached a decision on how to distribute the vast piles of money that they generate by having heavily padded men run into each other at high speeds, like a hadron collider but with more potential for spinal injury.

Now they've agreed on a settlement that makes everyone happier, ending a 4 1/2 month lockout, I'm wondering what lessons this offers for the debt-ceiling debate. After all, members of Congress and NFL players, aside from a few superficial differences (attire, need for helmets, willingness to take one for the team) are functionally identical.

Alexandra Petri

NFL players, like certain members of Congress, are fond of sending images of their members to women with whom they are not yet acquainted.

Both groups are paid to do things that everyone in an armchair has ideas about how to do better.

Winston Churchill described football as rugby with committee meetings. So's congressional politics.

Of course, there are differences. If the NFL didn't exist, people would actively be sad. If the debt ceiling doesn't get raised, we'll still have something to do on Sundays. (Sure, some folks called Moody's will be upset with us, but with a name like that, I would expect nothing less.)

To the untrained eye, football seems like a lot of people running in strange formations and accomplishing little. The same could be said of Congress and President Obama on the subject of the debt.

But perhaps that wouldn't be fair to the NFL.

There is a 100 percent injury rate in the NFL. Players keep going until they can no longer move their fingers to send ill-advised texts to strange women. They keep playing to put food in front of their families. They keep playing because if they don't, they won't get paid, and they will have to get a smaller decorative pool shaped like an expressionistic vision of a kidney.

NFLers are paid serious money to play a frivolous game. But that game has real stakes and ramifications. There are ticket collectors, stadium cleaners, T-shirt sellers and all sorts of other Real People who will suffer if the festival of running and punting and tossing doesn't go as planned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dance Camp

As mothers of dancers who attend the CSI Dance Camp, we are shocked and angry at Mark Browne's comments in Monday's paper. Browne stated that the dance routine that he viewed was sexually provocative and violated community morality.

Browne's article was based on uneducated opinions. He claimed to have seen bumping, grinding, etc. In reality what he was watching was a hip-hop class. This camp employs the best teachers from around the country with the highest accolades and qualifications.

The instructor did not give her full name in order to protect the dancers and herself from strangers. He accused her of being embarrassed of teaching such moves. In reality, Browne should be ashamed of the comments he made about sexual feelings he was having, waving at the dancers and for returning to the same area another day. Dance instructors around the area commented later that they have seen more hip movements in Zumba than in this class. Browne obviously does not know what bumping and grinding are.

The IDAA dance camp has been in existence for 28 years and provides scholarships and dance opportunities for thousands of dancers who live in Idaho and other states.

We challenge Browne's behavior! What is a wholesome dance move? What is not? Browne's opinion does not match those of thousands who support the arts. This camp offers ballet, tap, jazz, lyrical, modern, musical theater and hip-hop. Browne viewed one class. The community should be proud that this quality of a dance camp has been offered at CSI. This community benefits from the camp with 200-plus dancers that attend each year.

We would like to encourage the community to watch the dance showcase on Friday at 6 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center to view the superior quality of this dance camp.

Fair Trade?

The deliberate economic destruction of America by elitist socialists accelerates. Governors are begging for communist Chinese investment money to "save" our economy. Since Obama took office, 2.4 million jobs have been lost.

Since China joined the World Trade Organization in 2000, about 46,000 factories have moved to Asia and nearly 2.4 million jobs (32 percent of manufacturing jobs) have been lost to China due to the trade deficit. Since 2005, China has sold us $1.1 trillion while purchasing only $272 billion.

Due to draconian environment regulations, litigation, Federal Reserve actions, high taxes, labor and energy costs, and so-called international unfair "free" trade agreements, U.S. industry has moved elsewhere. Before the North American Free Trade Agreement, we had a trade surplus with Mexico, but in 2010 the deficit was $97 billion costing 682,000 U.S. jobs.

China is a brutal communist dictatorship which has killed nearly 60 million people to retain power. China has slave labor, few human rights and no environmental pollution regulations. Thus, they manufacture cheap. The U.S. is China's No. 1 enemy. They send us lead-painted toys, contaminated pet food, counterfeit microchips, steal and copy our technology and intellectual property, hack into our computers and manipulate their currency.

Now China is buying America through the foreign direct investment program. Rich Chinese elites are colonizing the United States with their manufacturing money. Through the corrupt EB-5 Visa program, they can get a "green card" and citizenship in five years with an investment of $500,000. They want a foreign trade zone in Idaho which would be an espionage center.

The solutions to our economic problem are to void unfair international trade agreements; reduce regulations by eliminating the Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Energy; abolish the Federal Reserve System; force revaluation of China's undervalued currency; stop implementing fraudulent climate change carbon reductions; and get out of the United Nations.

Opening Statements Set for Thursday in Jeffs Trial

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) • A judge on Wednesday dealt a blow to the defense of polygamist religious leader Warren Jeffs, refusing to suppress evidence police seized during a 2008 raid on his sect's remote West Texas compound.

District Judge Barbara Walther's decision clears the way for a small mountain of documents — including marriage and birth records, and thousands of pages of Jeffs' own writing in personal journals — to be presented to the jury during Jeffs' sexual assault trial. Jurors also may be able to see DNA evidence collected from children living on the compound.

Opening statements in the case are now set for Thursday morning, after one more suppression hearing.

This time, Jeffs' attorneys are seeking the suppression of evidence recovered when Jeffs was arrested, after a 2006 traffic stop along a highway outside Apex, Nevada. Walther said she would hear arguments on that for about an hour before the jury is seated, then wanted both sides to be ready with opening statements.

Jeffs, head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is charged with sexually assaulting two underage girls. If convicted, he could receive a maximum sentence of 119 years to life in prison.

He also is scheduled to go to trial on a separate bigamy charge in October. Jeffs' sect is a radical offshoot of the mainstream Mormon church that believes polygamy brings exaltation in heaven. It has more than 10,000 members nationwide, and his high-powered defense team — which has included seven attorneys — is being financed by an FLDS land trust believed to be worth more than $110 million.

Jeffs was in hiding and had made the FBI's "Most-Wanted" list by August 2006.

MAN WHO POSED AS TEXAS STUDENT GETS PRISON TIME

BY BETSY BLANEY
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas • A former star athlete who posed as a teenager to play high school basketball in West Texas was sentenced Wednesday to three years in prison after reaching a plea deal, a prosecutor said.

Guerdwich Montimere, 23, pleaded guilty to two counts of sexual assault and three counts of tampering with government records, said Ector County District Attorney Bobby Bland.

Officials say the naturalized U.S. citizen from Haiti had graduated from high school in Florida, where he also played basketball, years before he moved to Odessa and presented himself as a ninth-grader named Jerry Joseph. Montimere was 21 and 22 when he played one season at Odessa Permian High, the same rabidly competitive school that inspired the book and movie "Friday Night Lights" about high school football. Montimere helped lead the Panthers to the 2010 state playoffs, but the team had to forfeit after his story unraveled.

Montimere was indicted last year on six felony charges, including sexual assault and tampering with government records. His trial was to begin next week in Odessa, and he had faced up to 20 years in prison if convicted on the original counts. The indictment accused him of identity theft. The sexual assault counts accused him of having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

"Sometimes your best defense is to take the road with the least amount of risk. He could have gotten 20 years," Montimere's attorney, Dusty Gallivan, said.

A message was also left with Montimere's mother, Manikisse Montimere.

Suspicious were raised about Joseph after coaches from Florida at a post-season amateur basketball tournament in Arkansas said they recognized him as Montimere, a 2007 graduate of a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., high school.

Because he was living with Odessa basketball coach Danny Wright and not a parent or guardian, Montimere had to apply to the University Interscholastic League in Austin to play high school basketball. A waiver was granted and he was the star of the team.

Wright, who still calls Montimere by the name Jerry, said he was livid once he learned Joseph wasn't who he said he was.

"I was blindsided," Wright said. "I never saw it coming. I just thought he was a big kid."

Montimere was named the District 2-5A Newcomer of the Year, an honor that was stripped when his deception was exposed. The Panthers also forfeited their 16 wins, although Wright said the "team would have been good with or without Jerry."

Bland noted Montimere will have to register as a sex offender. Gallivan said that was "one of the biggest obstacles to overcome" when it came to reaching a deal, but that Bland wouldn't budge on the issue.

9 PERCENT DROP IN NEB. ABORTIONS SO FAR IN '11

BY TIMBERLY ROSS
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. • The number of abortions performed in Nebraska dropped 9 percent in the first half of the year over the same period in 2010, according to figures available Wednesday from the state Department of Health and Human Services.

Nebraska Right to Life attributed the decline in large part to enactment of a state abortion ban tied to the disputed notion that a fetus can feel pain at 20 weeks. The law that went into effect in October targeted Dr. LeRoy Carhart and his Bellevue clinic.

"Legislation does save lives," said the group's executive director, Julie Schmit-Albin. "Carhart admitted when (the ban) was enacted last fall that he would be forced by the law to do late-term abortions out of the state."

After the Nebraska law went into effect in October, Carhart opened a clinic in Germantown, Md., and has been pursuing one in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He still offers abortions in Nebraska.

The Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services said preliminary reports show there were 1,153 abortions performed in Nebraska in the first six months of 2011. The figure was 1,288 for the same period last year.

State law requires doctors to file reports with the state Department of Health and Human Services on each abortion performed. Until this year, the reporting of gestational age was optional and the vast majority of reports didn't include it. So, there was no way for the state to know how many abortions were performed after 20 weeks.

GOP Leaders Ramp Up Pressure to Pass Debt Plan

House Speaker John Boehner gave marching orders for other Republicans to support their plan over Democrat options.

BY PAUL KANE AND LORI MONTGOMERY

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • House GOP leaders mounted a furious bid Wednesday to win support for legislation designed to ease the nation's debt crisis, delivering a tongue-lashing to their most conservative lawmakers and casting Thursday's roll call as nothing less than a vote of confidence in their stewardship of the chamber.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, began Wednesday by ordering his fellow Republicans to fall in line and continued pushing for support throughout the day. He and his lieutenants repeatedly warned rank-and-file Republicans that Boehner's plan was their only alternative to a Democratic option offered by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., or the financial calamity that could be precipitated by a government default.

With investors growing increasingly anxious about whether Washington will make the Aug. 2 deadline for raising the federal debt ceiling, the stock market tumbled Wednesday, sending the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index down 2 percent, the most in nearly two months.

Republicans claimed that momentum was on their side as Boehner spent Wednesday afternoon huddling with members of the 87-strong class of freshmen that delivered him the gavel after the 2010 midterm elections. But aides and lawmakers suggested the decisive votes could belong to about two dozen veterans with no strong allegiance to their leadership. Some estimates showed nearly 20 Republicans declaring their intent to oppose the bill.

Republicans received a dose of good news when congressional budget analysts credited Boehner's legislation with $917 billion in spending cuts. Boehner's team had revised the bill Tuesday night after the Congressional Budget Office estimated that the initial draft represented $850 billion in cuts, far less than he had advertised.

Across the Capitol, Reid continued to oppose Boehner's two-step approach to lifting the debt ceiling, which would entail expanding the government's borrowing authority for a few months and then holding another vote early next year on a further increase.

Reid's own deficit-reduction plan, which calls for raising the debt ceiling enough to cover federal obligations into 2013, faced challenges of its own from the GOP, which objects to the accounting in the bill.

N. KOREA PREDICTS NUCLEAR ARMS RACE

North Korea warns that U.S. could start another Cold War-like arms race if it keeps modernizing nuke stockpile and missile defense systems.

BY EDITH M. LEDERER

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS • North Korea's U.N. ambassador said Wednesday that U.S. modernization of its nuclear weapons and expansion of its missile defense systems will eventually spark a new nuclear arms race.

Sin Son Ho told a General Assembly meeting on revitalizing the Conference on Disarmament, which North Korea chairs this month, that if "the largest nuclear weapon state" — a reference to the United States — wants to stop the spread of nuclear weapons "it should show its good example by negotiating the Treaty of Abolishing Nuclear Weapons."

"The total and complete elimination of nuclear weapons remains the consistent policy of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea," he said, using his country's official name.

But Sin said modernization projects including making small nuclear weapons that can be used like conventional weapons and expanding missile defense systems show that the U.S. "has lost its legal or moral justifications to talk of proliferation issues."

His remarks came on the eve of talks between U.S. Ambassador Stephen Bosworth and North Korean Vice Foreign Minister Kim Kye Gwan in New York on Thursday and Friday on the possibility of reviving disarmament talks after more than a year of animosity and high tension between the rival Koreas.

The discussions aim to build on last week's talks between nuclear negotiators from North and South Korea in Indonesia, the first such meeting since disarmament talks collapsed in 2008.

Sin challenged the missile defense systems "being pushed under the pretext of responding to so-called ballistic missile developments by what they call 'rogue states'."

The nature and scope of these systems demonstrate that the real target is "none other than the gaining of absolute nuclear superiority and global hegemony over the other nuclear power rivals," he said.

The 65-nation Conference on Disarmament, the world's only multilateral forum for nuclear arms diplomacy, hasn't produced anything substantial since the 1996 nuclear test-ban treaty, a pact now on hold because key nations, including the U.S., have not ratified it.

Last September, Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon hosted a high-level meeting at the U.N. to try to revitalize the conference, but the deep divisions that have stalled action were still evident — and they were evident at Wednesday's follow-up meeting as well.

The Conference on Disarmament works on the basis of consensus, which means one country can hold up action.

The U.S. and others warned last September that either the Conference on Disarmament gets moving on a long-proposed treaty to ban production of atomic bomb material, or they would start negotiations outside the conference. The warning was aimed at Pakistan, the latest nation to block negotiation of a Fissile Material Cutoff Treaty.

Graduates listen to the commencement address in June 2010 at Kalamazoo Central High School in Kalamazoo, Mich. States across the nation are bracing for drops in their high school graduation rates as the nation changes the math used by districts to measure their success. States that converted to the new formula have seen drops ranging from modest to massive. Michigan, which made the switch in 2007, saw a nearly 10 percentage point fall.

States Brace for Grad Rate Dips as Formula Changes

BY HEATHER HOLLINGSWORTH AND DORIE TURNER

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • States are bracing for plummeting high school graduation rates as districts nationwide dump flawed measurement formulas that often undercounted dropouts and produced inflated results.

Education wonks long have suspected the statistics used by some people to determine how their neighborhood high school is faring — or even where to buy a house — can be figured using various formulas that produce wildly different results.

Now, many states are facing a sobering reset: Some could see numbers fall by as many as 20 percentage points.

Liz Utrup, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Education Department, said graduation rate numbers will soon appear to decrease "across the board" as states move to a uniform calculation that requires them to track each student individually, giving a more accurate count of how many actually finish high school.

"Through this uniform method, states are raising the bar on data standards, and simply being more honest," U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan said.

Most states are required to convert to the new calculation this year, but the number won't count as part of federal No Child Left Behind benchmarks until the 2012-13 school year. Schools that consistently miss those measures face sanctions.

All but two states — Idaho and Kentucky, which need more time to develop student tracking systems — will start submitting the

JEOPARDY! HOST INJURED AFTER CHASING BURGLAR IN SF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • "Jeopardy!" host Alex Trebek says he snapped his Achilles tendon while running after a burglar who had stolen cash, a bracelet and other items from his San Francisco hotel room.

The 71-year-old Trebek tells KGO-TV that he also injured his other leg while falling down during the chase early Wednesday. He was on crutches later Wednesday when he hosted the National Geographic World Championship at Google headquarters in Mountain View.

San Francisco police Lt. Troy Dangerfield says 56-year-old old Lucinda Moyers was arrested on suspicion of felony burglary and receiving stolen property. The cash and bracelet haven't been found but other items were recovered. Dangerfield says officers found several items near the hotel ice machine. Trebek is scheduled for surgery on Friday and is expected to be in a cast for six weeks.

Rural US Population Share Hits Low

Is rural America disappearing from ... America? The 2010 U.S. Census says people are moving from the country to the city.

BY HOPE YEN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Rural America now accounts for just 16 percent of the nation's population, the lowest ever.

The latest 2010 census numbers hint at an emerging America where, by midcentury, city boundaries become indistinct and rural areas grow ever less relevant. Many communities could shrink to virtual ghost towns as they shutter businesses and close down schools, demographers say.

More metro areas are booming into sprawling megalopolises. Barring fresh investment that could bring jobs, however,

SPACE STATION TO PLUNGE INTO OCEAN AT END IN 2020

MOSCOW (AP) • A Russian space official said Wednesday that once the mammoth International Space Station is no longer needed it will be sent into the Pacific Ocean.

It's a plan that's long been in the works and is a step to avoid the station becoming dangerous space junk.

It was supposed to plunge into the ocean as early as 2015. The U.S. recently extended its life until at least 2020.

New Hampshire State Police officers watch as a woman identified by the NH Attorney General's office as Celina Cass's mother, under blanket, is escorted from the family home in Stewartstown, N.H., Wednesday. Cass, 11, has been reported missing since she was last seen at her home on Monday evening a few miles from the area they were searching.

FBI Abduction Team Searches for Missing N. Hampshire Girl

BY JOHN CURRAN
Associated Press

STEWARTSTOWN, N.H. •

The disappearance of an 11-year-old girl from her house just a mile from the Canadian border rattled nerves in her small town Wednesday as crews searched the Connecticut River and cordoned the house with police tape and the FBI deployed a team that specializes in child abductions.

Celina Cass was last seen in her house at a computer around 9 p.m. Monday and was gone the next morning, authorities said. Police have said that there's no indication she ran away or that someone took her, and there are no signs of a struggle.

Prosecutors from the attorney general's office arrived in Stewartstown on Wednesday and took charge of the investigation into the girl's disappearance, which was being treated as a missing-person case.

"We are still desperately looking for her," said Senior Assistant Attorney General Jane Young, who typically handles homicide cases.

She held a press conference Wednesday night with the head of the local FBI office, Kieran Ramsay, but wouldn't take questions.

The specter of the girl's disappearance hung heavy over Stewartstown, a community of 800 residents with one blinking streetlight and a handful of stores.

"It's creepy," said Shannon Towle, who owns Towle's Mini-Mart on Route 3. "Things like this don't happen here. I know that's kind of a tired phrase. I'm an overprotective mom as it is. Now it's going to be way worse."

About 80 people, many with candles in hand and tears in their eyes, gathered for a nighttime vigil for Celina in neighboring Canaan, Vt. A framed picture of the girl sat on a picnic table, surrounded by candles.

Friends and classmates and people who didn't know Celina were among those in the sobbing crowd.

A family friend, Rebecca Goodrum, of nearby Beecher Falls, Vt., said she was praying Celina, whom she's known since she was 2, is safe.

"It feels like a lost section of the town," Goodrum said Wednesday night. "She was beautiful. She was the light of everything."

Celina's stepfather, Wendell Noyes, described her as a quiet girl who would not have left home on her own. He declined to comment further on her disappearance.

Residents described Celina as a sweet, friendly child. One of Celina's best friends, 11-year-old Makayla Riendeau, said Celina loves her mother and likes her stepfather and wouldn't run away. She said Celina is very athletic, is a stickler about getting her school work done on time and loves having friends over to her house.

By Wednesday afternoon, family members and friends were camped out on the porch of the three-story wooden home and shooed away reporters.

new numbers to the federal government starting late this summer.

States that converted to the new formula already have seen drops ranging from modest to massive. Michigan had a nearly 10 percentage point fall when they made the switch in 2007. About half of states are not yet using the new calculation.

Florida's graduation rate remained about stable, at 79 percent, when it adopted the new graduation rate in the 2009-10 school year. It would have been nearly two points higher if it had continued under the old calculation.

States making the switch this year are offering estimates of expected dips and discussing the change in school board meetings. In Kansas, the graduation rate is expected to tumble from 89 percent to 80 percent, with one district in the state anticipating a 20-point drop. Georgia said its overall rate — now at 80 percent — could plummet about 15 percentage points.

"We're certainly concerned no matter what with that number under 100 percent," said Kelly Smith, superintendent of Belle Plaine schools in Minnesota, which is transitioning to the new formula this year. "The new system isn't changing what we're doing in our schools, and we need to get that point across."

Matt Cardoza, a spokesman for Georgia's Department of Education, said while he worries the public may think that high numbers of students are suddenly failing to finish school, the new formula could produce "a more accurate picture of how many of our students are actually finishing high school with a diploma."

Rural

decade as young adults left and the people who stayed got older, moving past childbearing years.

"This place ain't dead yet, but it's got about half a foot in the grave," said Bob Frees, 61, of Moundsville, W.Va., which now has a population of just over 9,000. "The big-money jobs are all gone. We used to have the big mills and the rolling plants and stuff like that, and you could walk out of high school when you were 16 or 17 and get a $15-an-hour job."

Demographers put it a bit more formally.

"Some of the most isolated rural areas face a major uphill battle, with a broad area of the country emptying out," said Mark Mather, associate vice president of the Population Reference Bureau, a research group in Washington, D.C. "Many rural areas can't attract workers because there aren't any jobs, and businesses won't relocate there because there aren't enough qualified workers. So they are caught in a downward spiral."

Rural towns are scrambling to attract new residents and stave off heavy funding cuts from financially strapped federal and state governments.

Delta Air Lines recently announced it would end flight service to 24 small airports, several of them in the Great Plains, and the U.S. Postal Service is mulling plans to close thousands of branches in mostly rural areas of the country. The University of Kansas this month opened a new medical school with a class of eight in Salina, a regional hub of nearly 50,000 people, in hopes of supporting nearby rural communities that have no doctors at all.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks plunged Wednesday as the U.S. edged closer to defaulting on its debt and the economy showed more signs of deteriorating. Major indexes gave up all of their gains for the month.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 198.75 points, or 1.6 percent, to 12,302.55, its biggest one-day drop since early June. It has fallen for four days straight. The S&P 500 fell 27.05 points, or 2 percent, to 1,304.89. The technology-focused Nasdaq composite index fell 75.17 points, or 2.6 percent, to 2,764.79, its worst day in five months.

The Dow is headed for its worst weekly decline in nearly a year and is now 4 percent below the 2011 high it reached on April 29.

IRS Says Airlines Can Issue Ticket-Tax Refunds

DALLAS (AP) • The IRS is asking airlines to refund taxes to people who bought tickets before last weekend but are just now taking their trips.

Those travelers might be owed a refund because Congress let the taxes expire.

The Internal Revenue Service said on its website Wednesday that airlines can refund the taxes, just as they do when exchanging a refundable ticket that wasn't used.

But the airlines aren't required to issue the refund, and some are directing customers to the IRS.

STATE-FUNDED PROGRAM TEACHES JOB SKILLS

Idaho Youth Corps program helps young Idahoans find summer work and sharpen their work force skills.

BY BLAIR KOCH

For the Times-News

JEROME • Newly married and fresh off her first year of veterinary technician studies at the College of Southern Idaho in May, Jessica Cowen hoped to find summer work around animals.

Through the Idaho Youth Corps summer job program administered by the Idaho Department of Labor, Cowen's wish came true.

"I love my job," Cowen said Monday while exercising a husky cross shelter dog she's nicknamed Fang.

The gig is part-time; Cowen works about four hours a day at the shelter answering the phone, cleaning kennels, feeding animals, filling out paperwork and dealing with the public.

"The hardest part is handling rude people over the phone. That gets tricky," said Cowen, a 21-year-old Wendell resident. "I don't like that part of the job."

Cowen plans to gain full-time employment as a veterinary technician after she finishes a two-year program at CSI, and the skills she's learned this summer should come in handy with that pursuit.

"The program gives young people an opportunity to learn some soft skills: coming to work on time, learning what appropriate work attire is, how to work with a team, following instruction. It's that first notch in their belt that will hopefully help them secure better work later in life," said Ben Phillips, IDL grants manager.

The program began in 2009 with an infusion of $2.9 million in federal stimulus funds. More than 830 young Idahoans were able to participate that year. Although those stimulus funds are now spent, the department saw the benefit of the program — which pays half of employees' minimum $7.25 hourly wage — and decided to keep it going.

This year, IDL budgeted $250,000 for the program and has put about 130 participants to work.

The falling availability of jobs through the program came just as the need for them has risen. In July 2009, when the program began, unemployment among Americans age 16-24 was at 18.5 percent, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. It increased to 19.1 percent last year and has continued to rise.

Idaho Department of Labor Regional Economist Jan Roeser said that means young people who want to work have to get out and find it.

"There aren't as many jobs as there were in 2006-2007, but there still are positions in fast food, medium service, restaurants," Roeser said. "However, some businesses may want candidates with additional skills ... maybe someone who speaks Spanish. ... or they want a resume. Some teens may not want to take the trouble."

Youth Corps participants are working in a variety of jobs, from outdoor conservation projects to office work for government agencies, schools, non-profits and other organizations.

Jerome Animal Control Officer Gordon Leininger said without the program, the city wouldn't be able to afford Cowen's service.

"We're closing in on the end of our budget year and it's always tight anyway," he said. "This program has meant a world of difference for the shelter because we're always in need for extra help."

Cowen will likely volunteer at the shelter once her run with the program expires in mid-August, but she's enjoying her paycheck for now.

U.S. IKEA Plant Workers Vote to Join Union

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Customers wait in line Wednesday at the IKEA grand opening in the Denver suburb of Centennial, Colo.

"Everything's on the table," said Bill Street, who led the successful union drive in this rural community of 43,000 near the North Carolina border.

A handful of workers left the sprawling Swedwood plant several miles outside of Danville and celebrated at a local hotel, where their new union leaders encamped for the vote.

"I wanted to cry from the excitement," said worker Tawanda Tarpley, 33, who was among the union organizers at Swedwood. "We just want to be heard. Today we have victory."

Swedwood acknowledged the vote and said it would honor its workers' wishes.

"As we have communicated from the start of this process, we fully support the right of our co-workers to make this decision," Ken Brown, site manager at the plant, said in a statement. "We accept their decision and will work with their union in a mutually cooperative and respectful manner."

Street had listed a litany of grievances — lower pay than their Swedish counterparts, unsafe working conditions, racial discrimination — that was in stark contrast with IKEA's vaunted global reputation as labor- and environment-friendly.

IKEA denied the allegations and said its own and independent reviews found the workers' complaints groundless.

Salmon Season Ends in Some Areas

A number of Idaho’s chinook salmon seasons will close this week because fish have moved through the fishery areas and anglers have harvested a number of the available fish.

Areas that will close at the end of fishing hours today include the Park Hole section of the lower Salmon River and the South Fork Salmon River.

Closing the Park Hole section means all lower mainstem sections of the Salmon River will be closed to salmon fishing. The Little Salmon River will remain open.

All sections of the South Fork Salmon River will close to salmon fishing at the end of fishing hours today.

The daily limit in the southern section is six jack salmon smaller than 24 inches in total length, and the possession limit is 18 jack salmon. No adult salmon may be kept.

The upper Salmon River, from about the town of North Fork upstream to Ellis, remains open to salmon fishing.

In the Clearwater River drainage, all sections remain open to chinook salmon fishing. In the mainstem Clearwater River downstream of Orofino Bridge and the North Fork Clearwater River, anglers may harvest only jack salmon. The Snake River from Dug Bar upstream to Hells Canyon Dam also will remain open.

Who Needs a Canoe When You’ve Got Cardboard?

The Twin Falls chamber’s cardboard boat regatta is a memorable way to enjoy the outdoors — if you’re willing to risk a soggy sinking.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

Jill McCaslin has never been in a canoe or used a kayak, but come mid-August that will change.

Instead of using a typical fiberglass craft, however, the Twin Falls woman will use a homemade one built of cardboard.

She won’t be the only one. If the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta, held Aug. 20 at Dierkes Lake, turns out anything like last year, a variety of homemade boats will be on the water. The goal: to complete three trips around a 200-yard course.

Participants in the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce-sponsored event also will be judged for creativity. Last year boats included some that looked like an alligator, shark and rubber duck.

Members of Longview Fibre Paper and Packaging Inc., which is supplying cardboard for the race, set up shop in the chamber’s parking lot on July 16 to answer questions and show people how to construct their cardboard boats. Detailed instructions described what There’s still time to sign up and build your boat. Folks from Longview Fibre will set up shop from 10 a.m. to noon Aug. 6 at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce parking lot, 858 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., to help get you started.

The race: The Great Cardboard Boat Regatta, sponsored by the chamber, will be held Aug. 20 at Dierkes Lake. Cost is $150 for chamber businesses, $200 for non-members and $75 for nonprofit groups. Registration forms are available at the chamber office.

A DIFFERENT Kind of Trail Riding

A growing group of mountain bikers find their ‘adrenaline rush’ at a complex trail system south of Kimberly.

BY EVA STUTZMAN
estutzman@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • With knobby tires rolling over boulders and dusty terrain, mountain bikers of southern Idaho describe their sport as “thrilling,” “exciting” and an “adrenaline rush.”

One trail system south of Kimberly, called the Indian Spring Trail System, helps the sport live up to its reputation.

“There is something for everyone,” said Nathan Fuller, president of the Southern Idaho Mountain Biking Association. “The lower trails are easier and there are technical trails for the experts.”

Earlier this year, the Bureau of Land Management, with help from the International Mountain Biking Association, started planning new trails and maintenance for the old ones.

SIMBA also is talking with the BLM. The group hopes the trails extension will increase the number of riders who enjoy this outdoor activity and sustain the trails that already are in existence.

When the trail system was originally marked the bikers rode illegally because the BLM didn’t allow bikes or other mechanical vehicles on the land. Over the years, however, the BLM has eased its restrictions on the area and now there are nearly 40 miles of bike trials.

New bikers find it easy to better their skills on these trails because there are some that are challenging and some that are not.

“You can find anything you want out here,” said Theresa Hyndman of Twin Falls, who started riding two years ago. Hyndman and some of the other bikers bring their dogs with them when they ride.

“They beat me up (the hills) but I beat them down,” Hyndman said.

The area has created a community of bikers from the Magic Valley and elsewhere. Riders that aren’t associated with SIMBA also share the trail with the organization.

“Mountain biking is really growing in this area,” said Joe Aguirre of Twin Falls, who is not a member of SIMBA but rides the Indian Spring Trails at least once a week.

From the City ...

Events such as the Great Adventure Race, held recently in Twin Falls, helps people get acquainted with some of the area's outdoor opportunities.

BY BLAIR KOCH

For the Times-News

Spoiler: Team Koch didn't break any records nor did my team, comprised of my husband, Walter, and sons Parker, 11, and Riley, 5, place in the College of Southern Idaho's Great Adventure Race on July 23.

We did, however, complete every challenge with about 30 seconds to spare and had tons of fun kayaking and paddle boarding in the Snake River canyon, towered a climbing wall at the CSI's Challenge Course, solved clues leading us to several Twin Falls businesses and ate the hottest hot wings in southern Idaho.

"So far, this is the best day of summer vacation," said Parker while we loaded back into our rig for the drive home. Although we didn't come close to winning, no one felt disappointed. Victory was felt by simply completing the course.

Twelve four-person teams began the race at the CSI Student Recreation Center. After a brief introduction of what to expect, Scott Rogers, CSI recreation director, gave each team its first clue. The clue led teams to their next destination, where a challenge awaited them.

"Last year, one of the biggest and most frequent complaints was about clues being way too easy," Rogers told the Times-News. "So this year we tried to make them a bit harder."

Millie Zarate, 21, of Gooding and CSI student said the clues weren't too hard but her team did get off course once, driving to the wrong park before catching their mistake.

"It's been a lot of fun," Zarate said. "Since I'm from here, I know about a lot of these places, but it's fun to do some of these things you wouldn't normally do and see parts of the city you may not see."

Greg Nutsch, with High Adventure River Tours manned a dock at Dierkes Lake, keeping an eye on racing kayakers.

"It's sad to see so many people not getting out and doing things like this because they don't know about all the activities our area has to offer," Nutsch said. "I hope events like the race help raise awareness of those activities. ... There really is no reason to simply sit inside when you could be out on the river."

Rogers expects the race to grow.

A 2010 study by the Outdoor Foundation showed that adventure races of all types are increasing in popularity. The study showed there were more than one million nationwide participants in 2009, up 18 percent from 2008.

"These kinds of events are popular across the globe and Twin Falls needed something like this," Rogers said.

The adventure race was held in order to raise funds to maintain the CSI Fitness Trail.

F&G Commission Still Reviewing Wolf Season, Quotas

Question: "I bought my 2011 wolf tag when I purchased my elk and deer tags. When will we know what the wolf seasons and quotas will be?"

Answer: The Idaho Fish and Game Commission is taking public input right now to use with recommendations from the department to set the 2011 wolf season when it meets in Salmon on July 27 and 28.

The department's proposal for the 2011 wolf season includes hunting and trapping and can be viewed in detail on the department's website listed below.

The primary objective this year is to use hunting and trapping as a means to reduce the statewide wolf populations to a level that is sustainable, meets federal recovery goals and reduces conflicts statewide. Specific proposals seek to maximize wolf harvest where wolf conflicts are the greatest.

Mandatory harvest reporting provides valuable information for ongoing monitoring and future season adjustments.

Part of the process to obtain public input involves a random survey of sportsmen and Idaho citizens. Input will be taken online from through July 25.

Below is a synopsis of the department's proposal; for more detail check out the website below.

- Wolf hunting seasons throughout most of the state are proposed to run from Aug. 30 to March 31. Limit two wolves per hunter, per year.

- Harvest quotas will be proposed in the Salmon, Southern Mountain, Beaverhead, Island Park and Sawtooth elk hunting zones, where hunting proved effective and additional wolf mortality occurs from control actions to resolve ongoing livestock depredations. Actual quotas have not yet been determined. These areas are also important corridors for population continuity within Yellowstone, Wyo., and Montana populations. In the Beaverhead and Island Park zones the hunting season would close on Dec. 31.

Gary Hompland

Ask the Officer

- The remainder of the state will not have wolf harvest quotas. For biologists to monitor statewide harvest a requirement to report harvested wolves within 72 hours would also be implemented.

- Based on hunter success in 2009 and the inability of hunting pressure to manage wolves across most of their range in North America, a trapping season has been proposed from Dec. 1 through Feb. 15 in all or some of the Panhandle, Lolo, Dworshak-Elk City, Selway and Middle Fork Zones.

- With support of the Idaho Trappers Association, state regulations would require wolf-specific training before trapping for wolves, reporting requirements and restrictions on the types of traps used. The department proposal is for a bag limit of five wolves for trapping.

- Fish and Game reviewed trapping seasons in Alaska and western Canada in developing its proposal. A 10-week trapping season will be evaluated for Idaho trapper participation, catch rates, gear effectiveness, incidental take and potential conflicts with other uses.

As soon as the commission sets the wolf seasons, department staff will post the new rules at license vendors and regional offices.

Gary Hompland, regional conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, may be reached at 324-4350.

FISHING REPORT

Fish are rising at Silver Creek

Boat anglers on Magic Reservoir are reporting good success. Fish being caught regularly are 15 inches or larger. Most fishermen are using worms, marshmallows and PowerBait.

Anglers at Salmon Falls Reservoir report good catches of walleye, trout, bass, crappie and perch. Walleye and perch seem to be more plentiful between the Gravel Pit and Greys Landing. Anglers have been catching trout across the reservoir. All kinds of bait and lures are being used.

There are reports of good trout fishing at Roseworth Reservoir.

Anglers fishing Little Camas are having a good time. Trout and smallmouth bass are being caught.

Kokanee are the catch at Anderson Reservoir. Thirteen-inch fish are being caught from the bank at the dam. Anglers have had good success with spinners. Boat anglers are finding kokanee about 50 to 60 feet deep, and fishing seems to be better from about Fall Creek on up.

Silver Creek is your main fly fishery, but fish also are rising at the Big Wood River. Be careful of fast-moving water.

The South Fork of the Boise is still high.

NEARLY 35-POUND RAINBOW TROUT CAUGHT IN IDAHO

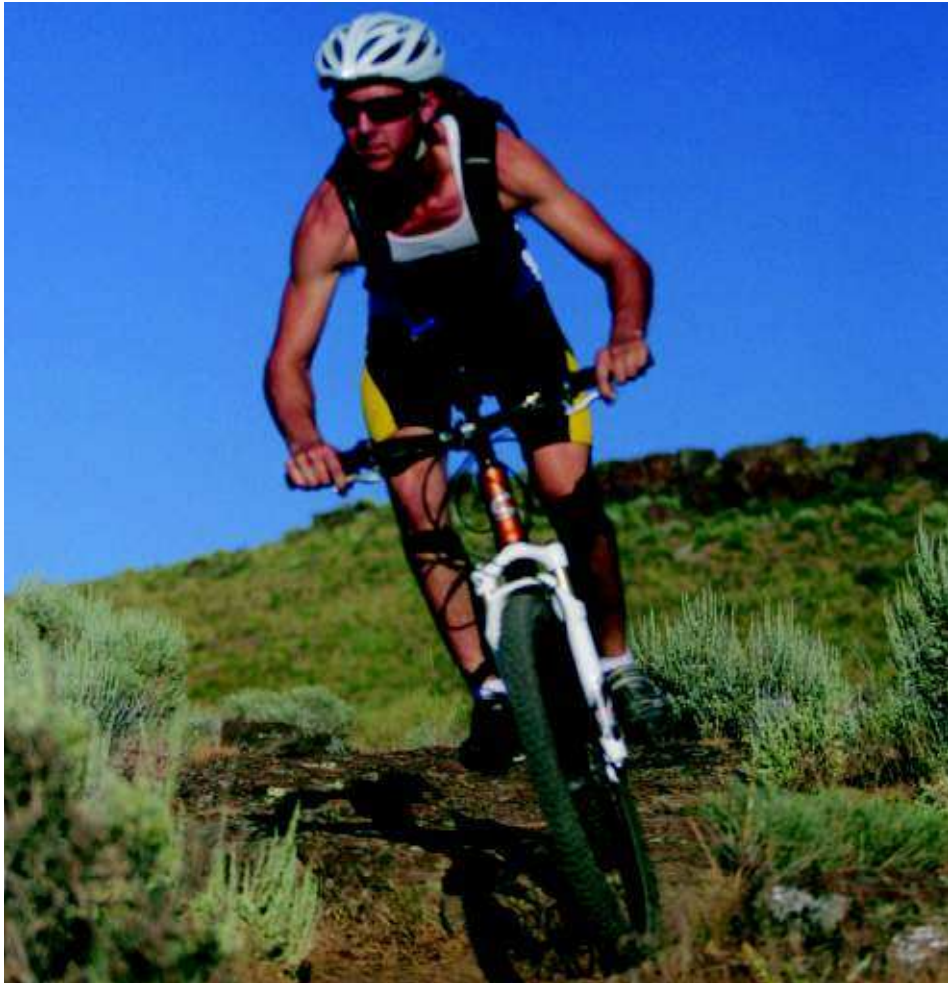

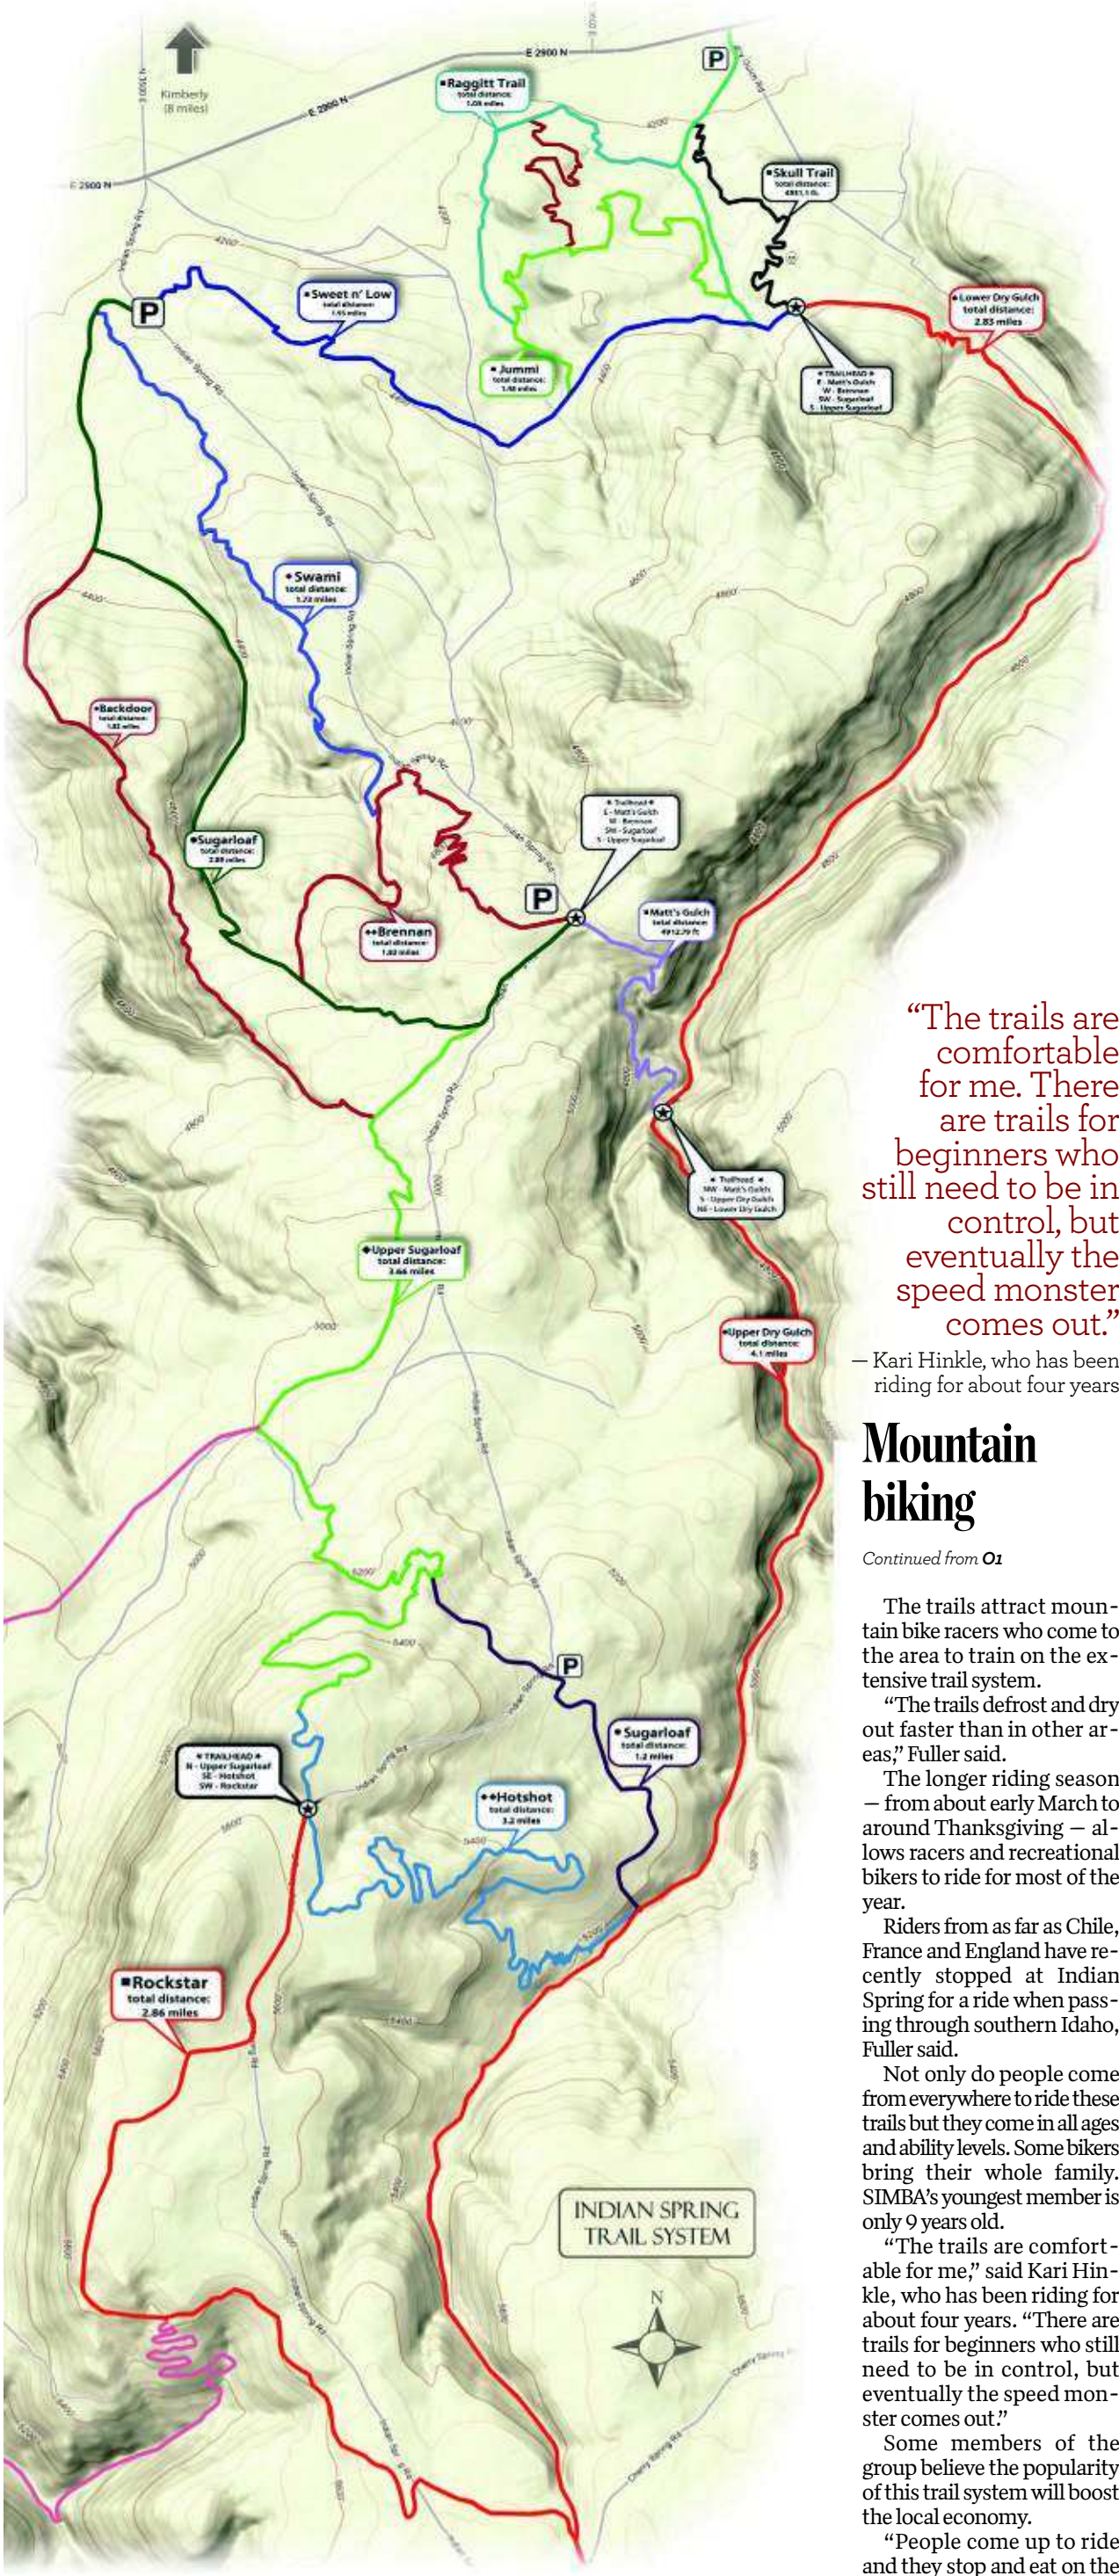

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) • Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials say a 41-year-old Pocatello man has shattered a state record by catching a 34.74-pound rainbow trout.

Union Pacific Railroad locomotive engineer Mark Adams caught the lunger in American Falls Reservoir Monday morning. It took Adams 15 minutes to bring in the trout, which broke old state record by 14.72 pounds. Adams tells the Idaho State Journal that he and his fishing buddy first thought the fish was a carp because it didn't have a lot of color. Adams called another friend who advised him to get his catch to a certified scale.

Regional Fisheries Biologist David Teuscher said he's checking national records to see how Adams' catch measures up.

Montana records show a 33.1-pound rainbow was caught in the Kootenai River in 1997.

Mountain biking

The trails attract mountain bike racers who come to the area to train on the extensive trail system. “The trails defrost and dry out faster than in other areas,” Fuller said. The longer riding season — from about early March to around Thanksgiving — allows racers and recreational bikers to ride for most of the year.

Riders from as far as Chile, France and England have recently stopped at Indian Spring for a ride when passing through southern Idaho, Fuller said.

Not only do people come from everywhere to ride these trails but they come in all ages and ability levels. Some bikers bring their whole family. SIMBA’s youngest member is only 9 years old.

“The trails are comfortable for me,” said Kari Hinkle, who has been riding for about four years. “There are trails for beginners who still need to be in control, but eventually the speed monster comes out.”

Some members of the group believe the popularity of this trail system will boost the local economy.

“People come up to ride and they stop and eat on the way home,” Fuller said.

Even though the bikers ride for fun they still have to be concerned about safety on the trail. The major necessities for mountain biking, other than a bike, are a helmet and gloves to protect from falls.

“When I first started riding I fell quite a bit,” Hyndman said.

Even those that have been riding for years take a spill every now and again.

“You know you are going to fall at least once,” Fuller said. “Everyone falls hard at least once a year.”

So what do the bikers say is the most important thing to have for biking? It’s not strength or speed, but courage.

What Comes After the Hubble Space Telescope?

With the space shuttles now embarking on their second careers as museum exhibits, there’s no shortage of opinions on what constitutes the program’s greatest achievements. As an alumnus of the Hubble Space Telescope project, perhaps I may be forgiven for my bias in voting for the dramatic 1993 repair of Hubble’s flawed optics.

But the shuttle can boast of another Hubble-related achievement that’s often overlooked: Five visits to Hubble over 15 years not only swapped old equipment for state-of-the-art upgrades, but also boosted its decaying orbit to forestall eventual atmospheric re-entry. Without further shuttle reboosts, many have asked what will replace Hubble when (sometime after 2019) it plummets into the Pacific Ocean on a controlled, fiery death dive.

The canonical answer is that Hubble’s successor will be the James Webb Space Telescope, with a mirror 2.7 times wider. Webb is scheduled for launch no earlier than 2018, although recent Congressional budget slashing may force its total cancellation (despite $6.5 billion having already been spent, and construction of the telescope nearing completion). But Webb is actually not an optical telescope; its instruments will operate exclusively in the infrared part of the spectrum. So unlike Hubble, none of Webb’s images will appear in natural colors.

But make no mistake: Assuming it survives its brush with the austerity axe, Webb will produce spectacular science which will build on Hubble’s accomplishments. Still, to most eyes, it won’t be Hubble’s successor.

Big science requires long-term thinking, and drafts of a largest-ever optical space telescope are already on the drawing board. At Hubble’s home, the Space Telescope Science Institute, astro-engineers are dreaming of the Advanced Technology Large-Aperture Space Telescope (ATLAST), a behemoth 3.4 to 7 times wider than Hubble. Currently, ATLAST would launch no sooner than 2025, but when — or if — it actually happens remains to be seen.

tools you’ll need and how to fold cardboard to build a waterproof “tray,” or the bottom of the boat.

The most difficult part, perhaps, is coming up with a unique design. Dave Bahr, a structural designer for the company, suggests that you first make a boat out of paper before attempting it in cardboard. Or, you can opt to buy a kit that has everything you need to build a boat in just a couple of hours.

You can add your own unique style and decorations as long as you follow the rules. Boats can hold up to eight people, Bahr said.

McCaslin, who as an AAA employee is a member of the chamber, said she plans to spend weekends in her garage building her boat. She was still deciding on a design earlier this month, but said her homemade kayak will be painted red and blue in honor of her business.

Despite her determination to build a seaworthy craft, she hasn’t yet been able to talk her husband, Phil, into joining her in the regatta.

“I have nothing to do with this,” he said with a chuckle. “I’m just here to haul the cardboard.”

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments

Question: I have to file bankruptcy, but need to keep my only car. I owe way more than it’s worth. I think I can make the payments.

Answer: In a Ch. 7 bankruptcy, your choices are to surrender the car or to keep it and pay. If you keep it, you must agree to reaffirm your debt and continue making the monthly payments, or redeem it by paying what the car is worth instead of what you owe on it. To redeem, you ordinarily have to pay in a lump sum. Chances are, if you could afford to redeem, you would not have to file bankruptcy.

In a Ch. 13 bankruptcy, you may be able to do the equivalent of redemption by paying back only the value of the car, with reduced interest, over the life of your Ch. 13 Plan. This is called a “cram down” because you don’t pay the entire loan, only the value of the car. Your payments will probably go down because the loan term can be extended. Whether you qualify for a “cram down” depends in part on whether the loan was for the purpose of buying the car, or whether the title to the car was taken as collateral for a personal or business loan. If the loan was not for the purpose of buying the car, you probably qualify for a “cram down”. However, this is a highly technical point in a very complex body of law. An experienced bankruptcy attorney can identify the best option for you very quickly.

Pilot Michael W. Trapp, 42, of Gouverneur, N.Y., is placed into an ambulance Wednesday in Harbor Beach, Mich. Trapp was rescued from Lake Huron Wednesday morning by a passing fishing boat after his small plane crashed and flipped in Lake Huron Tuesday evening.

NY PILOT RESCUED FROM LAKE HURON: PEOPLE DEPEND ON ME

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. (AP) • A New York pilot who crashed into Lake Huron and survived without a life jacket by swimming and treading water for about 17 hours says he was finally rescued Wednesday when he frantically waved a sock to get the attention of people on a boat.

Michael Trapp, 42, said he shed his pants and shoes to stay afloat amid daylight, darkness and high waves off Michigan's eastern coast. He told a TV station that he was inspired to keep going because "there's a lot of people that depend on me."

"It's amazing what goes on in your mind when you're laying in water and you look up at the skies and watch the shooting stars and watch meteorites go round. Gives you time to realize what's important in life at that point," Trapp told WWNW-TV in Watertown, N.Y., from a hospital in Harbor Beach, Mich.

Later Wednesday, he was transferred to a Covenant HealthCare hospital in Saginaw, Mich. There, he issued a brief statement of appreciation.

"Feeling good, really sore from treading water ... anxious to see family, in good spirits, happy to be out of the water," the statement said. "Currently, extremely thankful to the good folks at Harbor Beach and Covenant HealthCare."

The Gouverneur, N.Y., man, who owns an auto repair shop, was flying a small plane alone to a family reunion in Eau Claire, Wis., when his engine began stalling over Lake Huron on Tuesday. He said he contacted the Federal Aviation Administration and declared, "I'm going in right now."

"Holy moley," Trapp thought to himself, "what in the world just went on?"

He told the TV station that he took off his pants and shoes and "just went into survival mode." He doesn't consider himself physically fit at 5 feet, 10 inches tall and 200 pounds.

"I kept going, kept going. There's a lot of things I want to do yet," Trapp said.

He said he was unsuccessful in using a credit card to try to reflect the sun and get the attention of several boats that were in the area. Finally, people on a boat called Eagle's Nest spotted him waving a sock around 10:30 a.m. Wednesday and pulled him aboard — "by the grace of God," he said.

Trapp believes he swam 15 miles after his two-seat Cessna crashed 17 miles from shore, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

Harbor Beach Police Chief Sid Schock said Trapp was "quite chilled" but talking when he was put in an ambulance, about 125 miles northeast of Detroit. He was examined at a local hospital, then transferred about 90 miles to Covenant HealthCare in Saginaw where he was in good condition, spokeswoman Kristin Knoll said.

Trapp told WWNW that he couldn't walk. He did not immediately return a phone message from The Associated Press seeking comment about his extraordinary ordeal.

The president of the Harbor Beach hospital, Ed Gamache, would not discuss Trapp's health but said he was talking to doctors and in "excellent spirits."

"It's a remarkable story," Gamache said.

At Trapp's auto garage in Gouverneur, N.Y., there was high praise for the boss.

"He's just strong-willed," Mike Cutway said of Trapp's survival swim.

Jim Dreyer, a Grand Rapids-area man who has swum across Lake Huron and other Great Lakes, said Trapp's weight probably helped insulate him against cold water.

"It's amazing what the human spirit is capable of," Dreyer told the AP.

Soldier Found Guilty of Killing Afghan Civilian

A military jury convicted Sgt. Derrick Miller of the U.S. Army National Guard, not believing his legal defense of self-defense.

BY KRISTIN M. HALL
Associated Press

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. • A U.S. Army National Guardsman was sentenced Wednesday to life in prison with the chance of parole for the murder of an Afghan civilian.

Sgt. Derrick Miller of Hagerstown, Md., shook hands with several soldiers in his unit after the 10-member military jury delivered the sentence at Fort Campbell after two hours of deliberation. The 28-year-old was found guilty of premeditated murder.

His attorney had argued during two days of testimony that Miller acted in self-defense when he shot a man last September. The military has identified him as Atta Mohammed but his name was not used in court.

Defense attorney Charles Gittins told the jury that Miller stopped the man for questioning when he walked through a defensive perimeter that Miller's unit had set up around a mortar unit.

Gittins said Miller believed the man could be a threat to his unit and that during questioning the man tried to grab Miller's weapon.

Gittins told the military panel during closing arguments that if they believed

Miller acted in self-defense, they must acquit him.

"You have Sgt. Miller's life in your hands," Gittins said.

But Spc. Charles Miller, an eyewitness and Guardsman from Maryland, testified he heard Sgt. Miller threatening to kill the man if he didn't tell the truth and then straddling the man, who was lying on his back, before shooting him in the head.

Prosecuting attorney Maj. Matt Calarco said during closing arguments, "Immediately following the event the accused said, 'I shot him. He was a liar.'"

The jury deliberated for less than three hours before finding Miller guilty.

Miller showed no reaction to the jury's decision to convict, but family members cried quietly in their seats.

Miller, a husband and father of two, was assigned to a Connecticut National Guard unit and attached to the 101st Airborne Division at the time of the shooting in Eastern Afghanistan. After joining the National Guard in 2006, Miller had three combat deployments and had recently been promoted, said Capt. Michael Tregle, one of his two attorneys.

"Derrick Miller made a bad decision, but he deserves the opportunity for life," Tregle said during the sentencing phase.

Calarco said Miller's shooting of an unarmed Afghan civilian and leaving his body in a latrine, was not in accordance with military standards.

KERRY LIFTS HOLD ON CASH FOR CUBA DEMOCRACY PROMOTION

WASHINGTON (AP) • A senior U.S. senator says the Obama administration has agreed to review its democracy promotion programs in communist Cuba.

Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts had been blocking $20 million in funding for the programs. Frederick Jones, who is Kerry's spokesman, says Kerry on Wednesday lifted his hold. But the funds still face a hold from fellow Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont.

Jones has said the State Department and USAID have agreed to report results of their review to lawmakers.

Kerry has said he was seeking to ensure the effectiveness of the program to promote human rights and basic freedoms.

Established in 1996, the Cuba Program has been beset with reports that some grantees misused funds and the government provided little oversight.

Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida, the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee who was born in Havana and fled with her parents following the Cuban Revolution, praised Kerry and expressed disappointment with Leahy.

"The people of Cuba certainly don't deserve to be victims of this type of political wrangling or manipulation," Ros-Lehtinen said.

"Each day this hold remains is another day that those seeking freedom and democracy on the island are denied the critical assistance these programs would provide."

San Diego Police: Sailboat Too Crowded in Fatal Calif. Mishap

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO • Too many people were on board a sailboat that capsized and killed two passengers during an outing in San Diego Bay for people with special needs, police said Wednesday.

The San Diego Harbor Police found that overloading, the vessel's condition and the absence of lifejackets contributed to the March 27 mishap.

Investigators said the sail was held together with duct tape and staples, and the vessel had wear and tear to be expected of a boat made in 1988.

When it capsized, there were 10 people aboard the 26-foot boat, which is designed to sleep six people, said Harbor Police Chief John Bolduc. Investigators also found the weight on board was unevenly distributed.

San Diego County prosecutors reviewed the findings and do not plan criminal charges.

"We just don't feel like we have enough evidence to support a charge of criminal negligence," Bolduc said. "We can't re-create exactly what happened that evening, but we think there are some contributing factors, but certainly none that rise to the level of criminal charges."

Police had strong words for Heart of Sailing Foundation founder George Saidah, who was piloting the boat and frequently took passengers on trips for the Bloomington, Ind.-based charity.

"We are not labeling him an experienced captain, he's labeled himself as that," Bolduc said at a news conference. "We don't know what his specific experience was, but certainly every vessel operator needs to know the limitations of their vessel and they ultimately have to oversee the safety of their passengers."

Saidah did not immediately respond to an email seeking comment.

John Shean, an attorney and Heart of Sailing's board president, said he had not seen the police report and could not comment on its findings.

"They spent four months looking into this," Shean said. "I'm sure they've done a thorough job."

In March, Shean said a gust of wind caused the boat to tip. He said Wednesday that he still believed that was a factor. However, Bolduc said investigators found no evidence that weather contributed to the mishap.

Chao Chen, 73, and his son, Jun Chen, 48, of San Diego, died from drowning. They were the grandfather and uncle of an 11-year-old autistic boy on the boat. Bolduc said neither adult was wearing a life jacket, though there were "plenty" available on board.

All eight others aboard, including an adult with special needs, were dumped into 55-degree water.

Life jackets are required for children under 16 and recommended for adults.

Heart of Sailing was founded in 2004 by Saidah, a software entrepreneur and sailor who was motivated by his experience with a loved one with a cognitive disorder. Shean said the group has voluntarily suspended voyages on the West Coast since the March mishap and hopes the trips can resume now that the investigation is complete.

The sailboat's manufacturer, Costa Mesa-based MacGregor Yacht Corp., has said that when a 1,200-pound water tank that runs along the centerline of the hull is full, the boat should spring back up immediately if it leans too far into the water.

Investigators said they found the tank empty after it was upside down for three hours but could not determine if it was full when the boat capsized.

HOUSE WORKS TO TRIM OVERSEAS SPENDING

WASHINGTON (AP) • Legislation that would sharply cut U.S. foreign aid programs and slash support for family planning advanced Wednesday in the Republican-controlled House, drawing protests from State Department officials and relief agencies.

The bill, approved by voice vote by a House Appropriations subcommittee, also would clamp new restrictions on aid for Pakistan as well as Middle East allies such as Egypt and Yemen, requiring the State Department to first certify that those countries are cooperating in the fight against terrorism.

A Republican-backed provision would cut aid for family planning organizations and reinstate the "Global Gag Rule," which prohibits agencies that receive U.S. funds from either performing abortions or providing advice or information about the procedure. The rule was repealed by President Barack Obama in January 2009.

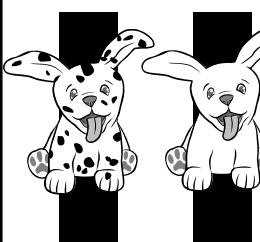

Although the bill's prospects are uncertain — the measure would need to be approved by the Democrat-controlled Senate and signed by Obama — international relief groups attacked some of the proposed aid cuts as irresponsible, saying they would hamper global efforts to reduce poverty and respond to famines and other crises. The measure would cut foreign-aid funding by about 11 percent from current levels.

The cuts "will have a huge impact on the lives of those who are already marginalized in the poorest corners of the Earth," said Samuel Worthington, president of InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based international nongovernmental organizations.

Republican lawmakers said the bill would prioritize programs that serve U.S. national interests while scaling back overall spending. "In this difficult geopolitical and economic climate, the American people deserve a policy that is based on American principles, looks out for American interests and wisely invests American dollars," Rep. Kay Granger, R-Texas, chairwoman of the Appropriations subcommittee on State and foreign operations, said Wednesday.

Republicans and Democrats agreed on several key provisions, including an increase in aid for "frontline states" — Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iraq. Granger and the subcommittee's ranking Democrat, Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., both favored attaching strings to aid for Pakistan and several Middle Eastern countries, though Lowey decried cuts in disaster relief, health programs and family planning.

Serb Mob Sets Kosovo Border Post on Fire

BY ZVEZDAN DJUKANOVIC AND NEBI QENA

Associated Press

JARINJE, Kosovo • Polish and American peacekeepers exchanged fire with attackers in northern Kosovo late Wednesday and fired tear gas to disperse a mob of violent Serbs attacking an outpost at Kosovo's border post with Serbia, a NATO official said.

The violence erupted hours after Kosovo's special police ended an operation to take over control of two border posts leaving once policeman dead. A mob of about 200 Serbs hurled firebombs and set a customs post ablaze soon after Kosovo police withdrew.

NATO responded by sending hundreds of troops in an attempt to quell the violence and came under fire as it did so, NATO spokesman, Cpt. Hans Wichter told The Associated Press. No injuries were reported.

"The gate is now clear," Wichter said, but added there was a risk of further attacks on the border post as around one hundred demonstrators are close to the checkpoint.

Additional French and American troops were sent to a second post bordering Serbia, also under threat of attack.

The violence is a setback for NATO-led efforts to broker a deal that would leave Kosovo officials in charge of the border crossings after special police units and local Serbs remove roadblocks.

NATO's Kosovo commander, Maj. Gen. Erhard Buehler is still talking to both sides in search of a solution, Wichter said.

Video shown on Serbia's state-run RTS television showed masked men demolishing the border post as European Union police leapt in to cars and evacuated the area. The mobs attacked a crew from the official Serbian Tanjug news agency, seriously injuring one of two cameramen and slightly injuring another.

The attacks follow days of mounting tension between ethnic Albanians and minority Serbs after Kosovo Prime Minister, Hashim Thaci ordered special police units to take over two disputed border posts that were previously manned by Serb members of the police under EU supervision.

Thaci blamed the attack on Serbia's top leaders saying they want to partition Kosovo along ethnic lines.

"There will be no turning back and Serbia's plan for the division of Kosovo's north will never happen."

Earlier on Wednesday Kosovo authorities declared the operation over, and said special police units withdrew from the area.

Nicholas Hawton, spokesman for the EU police mission in Kosovo, condemned the attack and appealed for people to remain calm, while Serbia's President Boris Tadic also urged an "immediate end" to violence in the north of Kosovo, a statement from his office said.

"(The) hooligans who cause violence are not defending Serbia or the Serbian citizens," said Tadic. He also called on Kosovo Serbs to remain calm.

The European Union has condemned the police action that led to the rise in tensions in Kosovo.

Crowds of Serbs staged a similar attack on the same border posts in 2008 in reaction to Kosovo's declaration of independence.

The borderposts were torched and United Nations staff — then in charge of the checkpoints — forced to abandon them. Customs controls were never fully established ever since.

Thomas R. Pilkinton

July 6, 1945-July 26, 2011

SEATTLE • Thomas R. Pilkinton, of Seattle, Wash., and formerly of Wendell, Idaho, joined his parents, Evelyn and Ray Pilkinton; and his sister, Gail Pilkinton, in whatever world lies beyond our own.

when he adopted his 15-year-old niece, Heather, who was the light of his life and the bane of his existence; he often quipped that it was easier getting shot down in Vietnam than it was to live with a teenager. Thom loved to travel, especially with his life partner, Frank Dominguez. They spent a lot of time in Europe and Australia, Thom's home away from home. One of his favorite things was to experience the richness of life and of other cultures, and the other was spending time with his family and multitude of friends.

Thom is survived by his partner, Frank; and his niece, Heather; as well as his best friends in this world, Rich Denio and John Stoddart, along with all their extended and growing broods. In addition to his family, he was preceded in death by his mentor, Bill Okell; and best friends Donny McClain and Karen Selland; and, of course, his favorite, Daddy Tom.

At Thom's request, there will be no service. Cremation is under the direction of the Neptune Society in Seattle, Wash.; he will finally be able to join his parents and sister in the mountains of Ely, Nev.

In lieu of flowers or plants or anything like that, please have a good meal and a drink in his memory; that is all he ever wanted. If anyone feels the need to do more, make a donation to your favorite charity in his name; that is all we could ask for.

Evelyn Lena Burns

Dec. 21, 1919-July 25, 2011

RUPERT • On a cold winter day, Dec. 21, 1919, Evelyn was born on the family homestead in the Kimama area. She joined her older brothers, Carl and Walter, and was later joined by Henry, Melvin, Louise, Margaret, Marie and Robert.

As a child, she helped raise her siblings, attended school at Paul and Big Ben and graduated from Rupert High School in 1938. After high school, she worked for a short time as a telephone operator. On March 28, 1941, she married Earl Burns. They spent 69 years together. They lived in Long Beach, Calif., for a short period of time. While living in Long Beach, they had their first child, Joann. Shortly after that, they returned to Idaho, where in 1942, they purchased their farm north of Paul in the Pioneer District. Here, they worked side-by-side, day and night, clearing sagebrush-covered land, turning it into farmland and later building their house. Their family grew, adding Terry, Larry, John, Brenda and Kevin.

Evelyn was known for her fabulous apple pies and delicious bread rolls. She was a member of the Pioneer Social Club, United Methodist Women and the Paul Methodist Church. Upon retiring from farming, Evelyn opened a flower boutique in her home. She and Earl traveled to various arts and craft shows, enjoying woodworking and gathering ideas for the boutique.

Evelyn enjoyed spending time with her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, as well as short overnight vacations, playing slots in Jackpot, Nev., and enjoying yard sales all along the way. Evelyn lived on the farm in Paul until her death on Monday, July 25, 2011, when God reached for her hand and led her home. Her family surrounded her.

Evelyn is survived by her children, Joann and Frank Hutton of Craig, Colo., Larry and Judy Burns of Paul, John and Pam Burns of Pasco, Wash., Brenda and Joe Clark of Somers, Mont., and Kevin Burns of Rupert; 17 grandchildren; 27 great-grandchildren (with the 28th great-grandson to be born in September); one sister and her husband, Margaret and Bob Cameron of Rupert; two sisters-in-law, Pauline Lawson and Elaine White, both of Rupert; as well as numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, Earl Burns; a son, Terry Burns; a grandson, Shawn; her parents, Carl and Maria Stark; her father and mother-in-law, Clifford and Hazel Burns; and her brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and a lifetime of friends.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 30, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley. Burial will be in the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, July 29, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home.

Cynthia Jacquelyne Plastino

Jan. 13, 1950-July 21, 2011

Cynthia Jacquelyne Plastino, 61, of Twin Falls, passed away Thursday, July 21, 2011, at her home.

She was born Jan. 13, 1950, in Santa Monica, Calif., the daughter of Felix and Edythe Plastino. "Jackie" Plastino loved learning, as well as teaching, and her professors and students would say she was adept at both. She attended the University of Idaho and received her bachelor's degree in Spanish and later continued her education at the University of Arizona, where she earned her master's degree in ESL. Though she loved teaching at Twin Falls High School, her first love was adventure — traveling to new places, engaging with people, going camping or hiking, and kayaking wherever there was water. A consummate explorer at heart, Jackie set out to experience the beauty of this planet in a way that few people ever do, capturing it all on film so as to share it with others. All one has to do is look at her photographs to see her positive and optimistic outlook on life itself, so full of wonder and diversity, much like herself.

All in all, she covered five continents in her travels, learning four languages in the process and befriending more people than could possibly be counted. Not only did she explore externally but within herself as well. Her spirituality was so much a part of her life that she embodied it. She was a teacher and an inspiration to all those who knew her.

Jackie definitely created her own path. None who knew her would call her a follower except to say she followed her dreams. She will be missed by so many, but if one's death mirrors one's life, there's no doubt that Jackie has new horizons to explore and, undoubtedly, there's a kayak paddle in her hand and a smile on her face.

Jackie is survived by her family and her many friends too numerous to mention.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 30, at the Heider Pavilion at the Rock Creek Park. Arrangements are under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home in Twin Falls.

Carl Gunnard Anderson

Aug. 19, 1919-July 24, 2011

Carl Gunnard Anderson was the first child born to Caroline Sorensen (a Norwegian) and Frank Salmon Anderson (a Swede) in Stavanger, Norway, on Aug. 19, 1919.

Frank immigrated to Montana in 1923, moved around the Northwest states and eventually settled near Willow Creek in the Camas Prairie near Fairfield, Idaho, to farm and run a small dairy. Frank died in 1929, leaving Caroline alone with six young children: four sons, Carl, Fred (Fritz), Sigfried (Sig) and Alf Leland (Fat); and two daughters, Esther and Della, who all went to work at a very early age. The children attended a one-room schoolhouse a few miles from their farm. After Frank died, the family left the farm and moved into Fairfield, where Caroline baked pies for the local restaurant. The children went to work for local farmers and merchants before and after school.

Carl attended Idaho State University, where he played basketball, baseball and football. He served in the Merchant Marines from 1941 to 1946, traveling the world to places such as Australia, Iran, Hawaiian Islands and Abadan, shipping goods for the war. Soon after being discharged from the service, he married Marjean Cleek. They worked and managed the Emmett and Louetta Cleek ranch, later known as Hill City — Bliss Farms, and ran cattle between Bliss and Lime Creek. They had two sons, Greg and Kenny. Carl's siblings and their families frequently visited the ranch for hunting trips and summer vacations. The nieces and nephews spent many memorable hours horseback riding, cow punching and washing "it" all off at the Hot Hole. Carl was director of Idaho Cattlemen's Association from 1969 to 1971 and helped to promote the welfare and guidance of Idaho's beef industry. Carl and Marjean sold the ranch and were divorced in 1971.

In 1972, Carl married Margaret Jordan. (Margaret had four sons Andrew, Chris, Tim and Robert.) They bought a farm in Wendell, where they ran Soldier Mountain Herefords, a purebred Hereford operation. He raised prize winning Hereford bulls and was named Gooding County Farmer of the Year in 1981. Carl retired around age 65 when he and Margaret sold the farm and moved to Twin Falls. Carl took up golf and it immediately became his passion. He had two career hole-in-ones. They traveled around the western states in their fifth-wheel trailer, spending winters in Arizona, seeing family and friends along the way. Carl and Margaret enjoyed 23 years of marriage before she passed away in 1995.

Carl married JoAnn Musuto in 1996, and they spent several winters in Mesa, Ariz., and Brentwood, Calif., where her daughter, Judy Hoaby, husband and three grandchildren resided. They enjoyed attending the grandchildren's sporting events and playing pinochle with friends.

Carl spent countless hours in the saddle on his favorite horses, Snip, Chip and many others, as well as with his favorite dogs, George, Smokey, Speck and Penny. His last ride was at sunset Sunday, July 24, 2011. He was the eldest of six siblings and outlived them all. He was 91.

Carl is survived by his wife, JoAnn; sons, Greg (Linda) and Kenneth (Tami); and grandchildren, Keegan, Kenny and Camas; as well as numerous stepchildren and grandchildren.

We will all miss you, Carl. The family requests memorial contributions in Carl's name be made to the Salvation Army or a charity of your choice.

A funeral service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Friday, July 29, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Burial will follow at the Elmwood Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

States Brace for Grad Rate Dips as Formula Changes

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — States are bracing for plummeting high school graduation rates as districts nationwide dump flawed measurement formulas that often undercounted dropouts and produced inflated results. The statistics used to determine how neighborhood high schools are faring can be figured using various formulas that produce wildly different results. Now, many states could see numbers fall by as many as 20 percentage points. Most states are required to convert to the new calculation this year.

Broncos Can’t Wear All Blue at Home

Rival coaches claim the all-blue setup provides Boise State an unfair advantage because it makes it harder to break down game film.

BOISE (AP) • Boise State players will no longer sport their all-blue uniforms for conference games on Bronco Stadium’s iconic blue turf, the result of a concession school officials say they made last year as part of the team’s entrance into the Mountain West Conference.

League Commissioner Craig Thompson said Tuesday during the league meeting that coaches believe Boise State gets a competitive edge when players wear blue helmets, jerseys and pants at home.

The Broncos have worn all blue at home for several years and built a 77-2 record and a 32-game winning streak on their home turf since 1999.

Coach Chris Petersen says his team intends to wear the signature all-blue uniforms for nonconference games against Tulsa and Nevada, but he finds the restriction for league games silly and an erosion of the team’s identity.

football,” Petersen told The Idaho Statesman. “I thought it was ridiculous. That’s our colors. That’s who we are. That’s who our fans have wanted us to be since I’ve been at Boise State. That’s what it’s been through and through.”

Petersen also notes the rule doesn’t apply to schools that wear all green uniforms and play on green turf or natural grass, like Colorado State or Hawaii.

The Broncos have other fashion options for home games — gray, orange or white jerseys and white pants. Team officials will have to apply for an NCAA waiver if they opt to don white jerseys at home.

“We have some combinations, and we’ll have to use them,” Petersen said.

Boise State’s blue advantage has never been scientifically proven. But opposing coaches and players for years have complained about difficulties watching game film and tracking nuances in Boise State’s pre-snap movements. Petersen argues the use of high-definition cameras and film has remedied any visual challenges, but the league’s members and commissioner aren’t buying it.

“What we heard from our coaches is ‘a competitive advantage.’ It’s as simple as that,” Thompson said.

Jerome Drops State Opener

BY EVA STUTZMAN

Jerome is used to doing things the hard way. That’s what it’s now going to take for the Cyclones to make any headway in the American Legion Baseball Class AA state tournament.

Eagle overcame an early deficit to beat Jerome 9-4 in the opening game of the tournament Wednesday at Skip Walker Field, sending the Cyclones to the losers’ bracket. They’ll play Prairie today to stay alive in the tournament.

Tyler Powell homered in the second inning to give Jerome a 3-1 lead, but it was all Eagle after that despite pitcher control issues. The Vipers walked eight Cyclones but allowed only three hits.

“There were a couple of times when we had the bases loaded, but we didn’t take advantage of it,” said Jerome coach Kenneth James. “It’s hard to win when you’re outthit 13-3.”

Ben Millick gave the Vipers the lead for good with a two-run shot in the fourth inning. Mason Stidham added a solo shot for the Vipers, who had five extra-base hits in the game.

Eagle scored in every inning but the first and eighth.

Jerome, meanwhile, went tamely the rest of the way, adding a run in the seventh. But the Cyclones went down in order in three of the last five innings.

Pac-12 Launches Network

NEW YORK (AP) • Even during its run to the BCS title game last season, Oregon played one contest that wasn’t televised.

Ducks coach Chip Kelly will no longer have to hedge when out-of-state recruits’ parents ask if they’ll be able to watch their sons on TV. The Pac-12 announced Wednesday that it was launching its own networks.

“Instead of saying, ‘As long as we’re playing well, we’re on TV,’ it’s a guarantee now that every game is available,” Kelly said.

The location of the announcement was appropriate: Commissioner Larry Scott made it while holding a media day far from the Pacific in New York City for the second straight year. The nationwide network and the cross-country trips are part of Scott’s grand plan to raise the conference’s profile all over America.

The new venture is actually the Pac-12 Networks, plural. There will be a national channel along with six regional offerings: Washington, Oregon, Northern California, Southern California, Arizona and Mountain.

Scott called it “a truly unique, one-of-a-kind initiative to create exposure that’s unprecedented.” The Big Ten showed the value of a conference network when it launched one in 2007, but this is the first to combine national and regional channels.

The Pac-12 partnered with cable companies Comcast, Cox, Time Warner and Bright House to distribute the networks but wholly owns them.

Once the channels launch in August 2012, they will broadcast about 850 sporting events a year — 350 nationally and 500 regionally. Subscribers will also be able to watch games on mobile devices.

Matt Hasselbeck, let go by the Seattle Seahawks on Tuesday, will ply his trade with the Tennessee Titans.

Hasselbeck Leaves ’Hawks

RENTON, Wash. (AP) • When the NFL lockout sent players scrambling to look for structure and organization to stay sharp, it was Matt Hasselbeck serving as the de facto leader for players based in the Seattle area, regardless of what team they played for last season.

It was just part of the role Hasselbeck grew into during his decade as the Seahawks quarterback. And it’s a massive void the Seahawks will need to quickly fill when training camp begins on Thursday, with Hasselbeck now a member of the Tennessee Titans and the only two quarterbacks on Seattle’s roster with NFL experience having a total of 22 NFL starts.

“It’s weird because you think of the Seattle Seahawks: Matt Hasselbeck, and now he’s not going to be a part of the team,” receiver Golden Tate said after learning that Hasselbeck Seattle had lost 17 straight games before beating the Yankees 9-2 on Wednesday.

NEW YORK (AP) • Dustin Ackley and the rest of the Seattle Mariners had the same thought as they piled up the hits Wednesday: Don’t stop.

By the time they were done, everyone was happy to talk about the No. 17.

The Mariners snapped their 17-game losing streak with a 9-2 victory over the New York Yankees, boosted by a season-high 17-hit attack that featured strong performances by Ichiro Suzuki and Ackley.

“It seemed like everything was clicking today,” Ackley said. “It’s a good feeling.”

Felix Hernandez pitched seven innings for his third straight win in the Bronx. Suzuki had four hits and scored two runs. Ackley tripled among his three hits and drove in three runs as the Mariners did something they failed to accomplish during the skid: They turned an opponent’s mistake into a big inning.

Seattle took 21 days worth of frustration out on three relievers, scoring five runs in the seventh inning — highlighted by Mike Carp’s bases-loaded triple — after Robinson Cano flubbed a flip to Derek Jeter at second base for an error.

The Mariners added two more in the ninth when Adam Kennedy hit an RBI double that center fielder Curtis Granderson lost in the sun, then scored on Carp’s single to give Seattle its most runs since it had nine in a win against Tampa Bay on June 5.

“These guys haven’t felt good in a long time,” manager Eric Wedge said. “We’ve got a long flight, an off day tomorrow and this is a real big win for us. When you’ve got a monkey on your back that size, it’s damn hard to get it off.”

Angels' Santana No-hits Indians

CLEVELAND • Ervin Santana pitched the first solo no-hitter for the Angels in nearly 27 years, striking out 10 and leading Los Angeles over Cleveland 3-1 on Wednesday.

Santana allowed two runners — an error on the lead-off batter that resulted in a first-inning run and a walk in the eighth.

Santana (6-8) threw the Angels' first complete-game no-hitter since Mike Witt's perfect game on Sept. 30, 1984, against Texas. Mark Langston (7 innings) and Witt (2 innings) combined to hold Seattle hitless on April 11, 1990.

This was the third no-hitter in the major leagues this season. Minnesota's Francisco Liriano did it against the White Sox on May 3 and Detroit's Justin Verlander beat Toronto on May 7.

This was the first no-hitter at Progressive Field, a ballpark that opened as Jacobs Field in 1994. The last pitcher to hold the Indians hitless was Jim Abbott of the Yankees on Sept. 4, 1993.

The win was Santana's third in 11 starts since May 30.

Atlanta and Pittsburgh played 19 innings Tuesday night before Julio Lugo scored the winning run on a controversial call at the plate that umpire Jerry Meals later acknowledged was incorrect.

would not be returning. "I'm sure a lot of people are hurt like I am, especially the fans."

Pete Carroll's second training camp in charge of the Seahawks already has a specific question: who will be the quarterback when the season begins on Sept. 11 at San Francisco?

It could have been a simple answer had Seattle and Hasselbeck reached agreement on a new contract that likely would have kept him in a Seahawks uniform for the rest of his career.

In what turned out to be his final game as a Seahawk at home, Hasselbeck threw a playoff career-high four touchdown passes as he directed one of the biggest upsets in playoff history when Seattle beat New Orleans 41-36 in January.

The final image from that night was Hasselbeck walking off the field with his son hoisted on his shoulders and his daughters at his side. Hindsight shows it was a storybook final image to a career in Seattle that started off shaky but eventually saw Hasselbeck lead the Seahawks to the highest points in their history, including their only Super Bowl appearance.

"I wish he was here, because he's a good friend of mine and he's a leader for this team and this organization," Seattle tight end John Carlson said. "He's beloved in this city for what he does on the field but also what he does off the field, so he will be greatly missed."

With Hasselbeck gone the job will fall immediately to Charlie Whitehurst — at least until Aug. 4, when Tarvaris Jackson can get on the field along with the rest of Seattle's free agent signings. Jackson was Seattle's first free agent target, agreeing to a deal that ultimately allowed Seattle to pull back from Hasselbeck. After Jackson was locked up, Seattle spent Day 2 of free agency agreeing to a three-year deal with offensive lineman Robert Gallery, plugging the final gap in Seattle's line.

Bringing in Gallery was expected the moment Tom Cable was hired as an assistant head coach in charge of the offensive line and revamping Seattle's running game.

Later Wednesday, the Seahawks added another big name when a person with knowledge of the agreement told The Associated Press that Seattle had agreed to terms with former Minnesota wide receiver Sidney Rice. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because free agents aren't allowed to sign contracts until Friday.

Foxsports.com first reported Rice's five-year deal with Seattle. Two seasons ago, Rice was a Pro Bowl selection after catching 83 passes for 1,312 yards and eight touchdowns.

While Rice and Gallery bring big names to the Seahawks, much of the focus during training camp will be on Whitehurst and whether he can make the strides he failed to make last year when he was first brought over from San Diego in a trade and given an opportunity to win the starting job.

The only two starts Whitehurst made last season came in games that Hasselbeck was injured, although one of those was the season finale when Whitehurst managed the Seahawks to a 16-6 win over St. Louis to wrap up the division title.

"It's an opportunity for me obviously, and I'm excited about this season for the Seahawks," Whitehurst said.

Wednesday's Notable NFL Moves

- Santonio Holmes re-signed with the New York Jets.
- The Redskins and Vikings agreed on a deal to send quarterback Donovan McNabb to Minnesota.
- DeAngelo Williams, the Panthers' career rushing leader, agreed to remain in Carolina.
- They also signed former Boise State fullback Richie Brockel.
- Placekicker Adam Vinatieri agreed to a three-year contract with Indianapolis.
- Cincinnati reached an agreement with Bruce Gradkowski, who knows the team's new offensive system and will help develop rookie Andy Dalton.
- Incumbent Carson Palmer has told the team he would retire rather than play another season in Cincinnati.
- The Texans agreed to terms with backup quarterback Matt Leinart, despite reports Tuesday he too was headed to Seattle.
- The Jaguars hooked up with linebacker Paul Posluszny for a six-year contract worth $45 million, including $15 million guaranteed.
- Former University of Idaho players Nate Enderle (Chicago) and Aaron Lavarias (New England) also landed rookie free agent deals.

Thousands of people pack Trafalgar Square in London on Wednesday to celebrate the city's marking of one year until the 2012 Olympic Games.

London Calling: One Year Left Until 2012 Olympics

LONDON (AP) • London celebrated the one-year countdown to the 2012 Games with the first dive into the new Olympic pool, the presentation of medals and a call to the world's athletes to compete in the country that "invented modern sport."

Exactly one year from Wednesday — on July 27, 2012 — London will be staging the opening ceremony of the Olympics, the first city to host the world's biggest sports festival for a third time after previous games in 1908 and 1948.

In a live televised ceremony in Trafalgar Square, IOC President Jacques Rogge formally invited 202 national Olympic committees from around the world to send their athletes to the British capital.

"The athletes will be ready, so will London," he said.

The ceremony took place in the same square where thousands of people celebrated on July 6, 2005, when Rogge opened a sealed envelope in Singapore and announced that London had won the right to host the Olympics, beating rival bids from Madrid, Paris, New York and Moscow.

"A dream was born when the IOC awarded the 2012 Games to London," Rogge said. "The world's finest athletes began dreaming of competing in this magnificent city, in packed state-of-the-art venues, and in front of passionate crowds."

"As in 1908 and 1948, they knew they would be coming to the nation that invented modern sport and the concept of fair play."

British Prime Minister David Cameron said the Olympics would showcase the nation at its best.

"This has the makings of a great British success story," he said at the ceremony. "With a year to go, it's on time, it's on budget. ... We must offer the greatest ever games."

The festivities started across town at the new, gleaming aquatics center in the Olympic Park in east London, where 2009 world champion Tom Daley performed the first dive into the pool, knifing cleanly into the water with an inward 1 1/2 somersault pike.

"It was great — a bit cold actually," Daley said. "It's going to be awesome."

A few minutes later, several former British Olympic athletes — including javelin throwers Steve Backley and Tessa Sanderson and 400-meter runner Roger Black — took part in the first "race" in the pool. Olympic swimmer Mark Foster was the easy winner.

The ceremony also featured the unveiling of the Olympic medals by Princess Anne, an IOC member and former Olympic equestrian competitor. The medals are the biggest for a Summer Olympics — measuring 3.35 inches in diameter and weighing 13.2 to 14.1 ounces.

Designed by British artist David Watkins, the medals feature Nike, the Greek goddess of victory, on one side. On the other is a complex image containing five symbolic elements, including the River Thames.

The show also included a performance of David Bowie's song "Heroes" by British pop group The Feeling and a typically bombastic speech by colorful London Mayor Boris Johnson.

"The streets will be ready," he said. "The trains will be ready. The taxis will be ready. The theaters will be ready. The buses will be ready. The hotels will be ready."

"The Olympic venues are already so ready that we might as well call a snap (early) Olympics tomorrow and catch the rest of the world napping. The people of London will be ready to welcome the world's finest athletes to the greatest games that have ever been held."

Friends Remember Peterson

The troubled Olympic freestyle skier was found dead Monday in Utah, in what police ruled a suicide.

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) • Hans Gardner shouted as he headed down the steep ramp and slapped his thigh the way Olympic silver medalist Jeret "Speedy" Peterson often did.

"I wanted to go out there and be as strong as I could ... while letting him motivate me," the rookie said Wednesday, a day after learning that police said one of the world's most innovative freestyle skiers had killed himself just miles down the road in Lambs Canyon.

"It definitely was hard. I cried up on the ramp," Gardner said. "We're all going to miss him a lot. I want to let his legacy influence me in a positive way."

Though the 29-year-old Peterson gained fame for his moves — the one-of-a-kind Hurricane — he also had personal problems. He had been cited for drunken driving Friday in Hailey, Idaho, and had pleaded not guilty.

Monday night, Utah authorities say he called 911 before shooting himself.

Police found Peterson near his car along the canyon road between Salt Lake City and Park City. They said a suicide note was found nearby. Authorities will turn it over to Peterson's family, but don't plan to release it.

Before a scheduled training session, ski team members took time to remember their colleague.

"Showing up this morning I didn't really know what to expect, how everybody would be doing," Olympian Scotty Bahrke said. "But it was really good to see everybody and get all the hugs and get to laugh for a bit. (The news) devastated everybody."

LEGAL NOTICE
The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that harvest objectives for targeted hatchery returns in fisheries in the Lower Salmon River, and the mainstem of the South Fork Salmon River have been met. These fisheries also intercept and impact salmon destined to other areas where they are needed to meet harvest goals and for hatchery broodstock and natural spawning.

To reduce interceptions of salmon required for hatchery broodstocks and natural spawning and to meet harvest goals for fisheries in other areas, the Fisheries Bureau recommends closing the Lower Salmon River from the Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge upstream to the mouth of Short's Creek and the mainstem South Fork Salmon River from the posted boundary about one mile upstream of Fourmile Campground upstream to the posted boundary about 100 yards downstream of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game weir and trap to fishing for Chinook salmon.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the Lower Salmon River from the Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge upstream to the mouth of Short's Creek and the mainstem South Fork Salmon River from the posted boundary about one mile upstream of Fourmile Campground upstream to the posted boundary about 100 yards downstream of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game weir and trap to fishing for Chinook salmon effective the end of fishing on July 28, 2011.

Copies of Order 11-26 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

DATED this 25th day of July 2011.

ANSWER: This hand is ideal for a Michaels cue-bid, invented by Mike Michaels 50 years ago. The cue-bid of either major at one's first turn to speak shows a two-suiter, at least 5-5 pattern, with the other major and a minor. This hand is minimum in both shape and values; indeed at unfavorable vulnerability one might simply overcall one spade rather than cue-bid two hearts.

Today is Thursday, July 28, the 209th day of 2011. There are 156 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight:
On July 28, 1914, World War I began as Austria-Hungary declared war on Serbia.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1540, King Henry VIII's chief minister, Thomas Cromwell, was executed, the same day Henry married his fifth wife, Catherine Howard.
In 1609, the English ship Sea Venture, commanded by Adm. Sir George Somers, ran ashore on Bermuda, where the passengers and crew founded a colony.
In 1794, Maximilien Robespierre, a leading figure of the French Revolution, was sent to the guillotine.
In 1821, Peru declared its independence from Spain.
In 1932, federal troops forcibly dispersed the so-called "Bonus Army" of World War I veterans who had gathered in Washington to demand money they weren't scheduled to receive until 1945.
In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced the end of coffee rationing, which had limited people to one pound of coffee every five weeks since it began in Nov. 1942.
In 1945, a U.S. Army bomber crashed into the 79th floor of New York's Empire State Building, killing 14 people. The U.S. Senate ratified the United Nations Charter by a vote of 89-2.
In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson announced he was increasing the number of American troops in South Vietnam from 75,000 to 125,000 "almost immediately".
In 1976, an earthquake devastated northern China, killing at least 242,000 people, according to an official estimate.
In 2002, nine coal miners trapped in the flooded Quecreek Mine in Somerset, Pa., were rescued after 77 hours underground.
Ten years ago: Alejandro Toledo, Peru's first freely elected president of Indian descent, was sworn into office.
Five years ago: Actor-director Mel Gibson went into an anti-Semitic tirade as he was being arrested on the Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu, Calif., for suspicion of driving while drunk; Gibson later apologized and was sentenced to probation and alcohol treatment. A gunman who witnesses said identified himself as a Muslim American walked into the offices of the Jewish Federation of Greater Seattle and opened fire, killing one woman and wounding five others before he was arrested. (Naveed Haq was later convicted of aggravated first-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison without possibility of release.) Former Peruvian President Alan Garcia was inaugurated for a second term, 16 years after leaving office.
One year ago: A federal judge put most of Arizona's toughest-in-the-nation immigration law on hold just hours before it was to take effect. A Pakistani Airbus crashed into the hills overlooking Islamabad, killing all 152 people aboard.

DEAR ABBY: "In the Dark in Texas" (May 27) was wondering about the correct way to tilt blinds. Light coming in through a window should not be the deciding factor for which way the blinds close. Privacy should be of highest importance.

After years of living in apartments, I have learned the direction of a blind's slats should change depending on the location of the window.

If the window is on the ground floor, the blind should be closed slats up. Otherwise, people can see in from the floors above. This information is particularly useful in multistory neighborhoods and apartment complexes.

If, however, you are on an upper floor and the slats are up, anyone can see in from the ground floor. For that reason blinds on an upper floor should close slats down.

If you live in the middle, your best bet is curtains.

— AZALIAH IN WASHINGTON STATE
DEAR AZALIAH:

Readers' views on this subject came from varying perspectives — privacy, light, heat, etc. But the general consensus was the same. Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "In the Dark" asked whether blinds should be closed with the slats up or down. As you said, it's a matter of personal preference. However, as a former apartment manager, I can say from experience that closing them with the slats in a downward position will allow in enough sunlight to fade carpets, furniture and drapes. I close mine with the slats up — for privacy and to prevent the fading of items near the window.

— FORMER APARTMENT MANAGER IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: My husband had a window treatment store years ago and this is what we learned: If you are upstairs, the slats go down. If you are downstairs, they go up. To check this out, after dark with the lights on inside, go outside and look inside. You will be able to see clearly what is going on in the house. Follow this rule to keep Peeping Toms at bay.

— SHANNON IN OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: It is common knowledge (I thought) that slats tilted up deflect both heat and light. Blinds tilted down let light in from above as well as heat in the summer and cold in the winter.

Like toilet paper rolls, toothpaste tube squeezing and thermostat setting, this is yet another bone of contention in marriage.

— COOLING DOWN IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR ABBY: Dust and clothing have started to build up in my bedroom. I have told my mom and she doesn't do anything about it, and I'm tired of telling her! The mess makes it hard to live in. I think she does not love me since she will not do anything about the mess. What should I do?

— UNLOVED GIRL IN SPOKANE, WASH.

DEAR UNLOVED GIRL: Your mother does love you. What she's doing is trying to teach you how to be independent. The first thing you should do is pick up the clothes that are lying around in your bedroom. Any items that are soiled should go into the hamper to be washed. The rest should be hung up or folded and put away. Once that's done you will need to clean any surfaces that are dusty, including under the bed. If you don't know how, ask your mother to show you.

IF JULY 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Life offers you the experience you need to achieve your ambitions in the year ahead. Between now and late October, you are intense about material success and willing to work hard to achieve your goals. Build strong ties with others and prepare yourself to handle extra responsibilities. During February, remain alert for a unique opportunity or help from a kind-hearted acquaintance. If you are single, you might meet the soul mate you have always dreamed of or you might land the job you want. You may have a brief chance to make major improvements that solve some longstanding problems.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can't win a competition, but you can prevail by acting independently. Rather than trying to outdo someone else, just judge your success on your own barometer. A partner has excellent business savvy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Jeepers, creepers, there are lots of peepers. Your privacy may be invaded by those peeking over your shoulder to see what has gripped your attention. Someone might admire your business finesse.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Learning comes easily. You don't need to be in a classroom or glued to a book in order to gather knowledge. Jot down creative or inspirational ideas, as they might be extremely useful in the future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If money grew on tress, you could pick the fruit today. People are very willing to deal with you or will be happy to donate to your favorite causes. Consider innovative ways to provide a community service.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Raise the stakes. Put the pedal to the metal in your job while the light remains green for success. You can follow through and make a commitment to set in motion a beneficial change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay up to par. Your network of friends and business acquaintances can keep you in the know and up to date. You may be in a position to help a partner make a profit because you are alert to subtle nuances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Flaunt your social skills and attractiveness at the office or on the job. Your "put-together" appearance will impress the boss or might even provoke a visiting salesperson to give you a better deal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be given an opportunity to enhance your reputation. Go the extra mile to fulfill a pledge or find ways to be helpful to an underdog and the news will travel along the grapevine to your benefit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Live and let live. Let everyone else do their own thing while you do your thing in comfort and style. Remain objective; you can keep up with the Joneses without compromising principles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cash in on inventive ideas. Exercise your magnetic personality to get your own way in business or love. In any transaction, both parties must benefit, so be sure to give as good as you get today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make headway by being a live wire. You are at your best on the social scene and can get ahead by being a networking maven. Make contact with your friends but don't lose sight of business referrals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your eyes and ears wide open. You might learn about the latest advances in technology that will improve your productivity or hear news about political or legal changes that impact your situation favorably.

Charges Considered for 26 people Protesting Activist Case

BY JENNIFER DOBNER
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • City prosecutors on Wednesday considered criminal charges for 26 people arrested after they blocked traffic and the light rail downtown while protesting the sentencing of an environmental activist who thwarted a 2008 government auction of oil and gas leases.

A federal judge on Tuesday sentenced Tim DeChristopher, 29, to two years in prison and three years of probation, and fined him $10,000. He was accused of running up bids at the auction of oil and gas leases on public land near Utah's Arches and Canyonlands national parks.

DeChristopher maintains his actions were an act of civil disobedience designed to bring attention to the problems of climate change.

The protesters had staged a sit-in outside two entrances at the federal courthouse downtown where the sentencing took place, then used plastic zip ties to link their wrists together to form a human chain and sat in the street in front of the U.S. District Court building.

"We had to make sure that adequate attention was brought to this cause," said Ashley Anderson, the co-founder of DeChristopher's climate change activist nonprofit group and one of those arrested. "Business as usual and the status quo was what we intended to disrupt ... we wanted to show that business as usual is what is killing the planet."

Tribal Leader Calls for Oil Spill Accountability

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Crews reported being a third of the way through the cleanup of a northwestern Montana oil spill Tuesday, as the chairman of the Blackfoot Indian tribe called on state and congressional leaders to ensure that energy companies don't shirk their responsibilities in future spills.

Up to 840 gallons of crude spilled from a broken flow line at an oil field FX Energy Inc. operates on the Blackfoot Indian Reservation before the company discovered and patched the break in June. But the company never reported the spill. It spread almost a mile down a steep ravine and into Cut Bank Creek before a neighboring landowner reported it nearly a month later, on July 12.

Opening Statements Set for Thursday in Jeffs Trial

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) • A judge on Wednesday dealt a blow to the defense of polygamist religious leader Warren Jeffs, refusing to suppress evidence police seized during a 2008 raid on his sect’s remote West Texas compound.

District Judge Barbara Walther’s decision clears the way for a small mountain of documents — including marriage and birth records, and thousands of pages of Jeffs’ own writing in personal journals — to be presented to the jury during Jeffs’ sexual assault trial. Jurors also may be able to see DNA evidence collected from children living on the compound.

Opening statements in the case are now set for Thursday morning, after one more suppression hearing.

This time, Jeffs’ attorneys are seeking the suppression of evidence recovered when Jeffs was arrested, after a 2006 traffic stop along a highway outside Apex, Nevada. Walther said she would hear arguments on that for about an hour before the jury is seated, then wanted both sides to be ready with opening statements.

Jeffs, head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is charged with sexually assaulting two underage girls. If convicted, he could receive a maximum sentence of 119 years to life in prison.

He also is scheduled to go to trial on a separate bigamy charge in October. Jeffs’ sect is a radical offshoot of the mainstream Mormon church that believes polygamy brings exaltation in heaven. It has more than 10,000 members nationwide, and his high-powered defense team — which has included seven attorneys — is being financed by an FLDS land trust believed to be worth more than $110 million.

Jeffs was in hiding and had made the FBI’s “Most-Wanted” list by August 2006, when Nevada highway patrolman Eddie Dutchover pulled over a new, red Cadillac Escalade for having an obstructed license plate. A tall, lanky passenger in the back said his name was John Findley, then nervously began eating a salad. When pressed, the man finally blurted out his real, full name: Warren Steed Jeffs.

The vehicle was registered to another church member and the driver, Warren’s brother Isaac, authorized authorities to search the Escalade. They uncovered laptops and thumb-drives and are believed to have found audio recordings where Jeffs admits to marrying underage girls.

Jeffs’ attorneys don’t want that evidence admitted in his trial, and Thursday’s hearing is to determine whether Jeffs has the standing — as someone other than the driver or owner — to challenge the search of the vehicle. Expected to testify are Dutchover and an FBI agent who was called to the scene the night of the arrest.

But Jeffs and the FLDS didn’t become a national story until nearly two years later in April 2008, when the FBI and police SWAT teams raided the church’s Yearning For Zion compound outside tiny Eldorado, about 45 miles south of the oil and gas town of San Angelo, where Jeffs’ trial is taking place. More than 400 children were placed in protective custody, and women who live on the ranch appeared on airwaves across the country wearing their traditional, frontier-style dresses and hairdos from the 19th century.

Police moved in after receiving an anonymous call to an abuse shelter, alleging that girls were being forced into polygamist marriages. Based on that report, Walther signed the search warrant authorizing the raid.

The call turned out to be a hoax, made by a woman in Colorado. But once on the ranch, police saw underage girls who were clearly pregnant and were told about polygamist marriages — prompting the charges against Jeffs and 11 other FLDS men.

MAN WHO POSED AS TEXAS STUDENT GETS PRISON TIME

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) • A former star athlete who posed as a teenager to play high school basketball in West Texas was sentenced Wednesday to three years in prison after reaching a plea deal, a prosecutor said.

Guerdwich Montimere, 23, pleaded guilty to two counts of sexual assault and three counts of tampering with government records.

Officials say the naturalized U.S. citizen from Haiti had graduated from high school in Florida years before he moved to Odessa.

9 PERCENT DROP IN NEB. ABORTIONS SO FAR IN '11

BY TIMBERLY ROSS
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. • The number of abortions performed in Nebraska dropped 9 percent in the first half of the year over the same period in 2010, according to figures available Wednesday from the state Department of Health and Human Services.

Nebraska Right to Life attributed the decline in large part to enactment of a state abortion ban tied to the disputed notion that a fetus can feel pain at 20 weeks. The law that went into effect in October targeted Dr. LeRoy Carhart and his Bellevue clinic.

“Legislation does save lives,” said the group’s executive director, Julie Schmit-Albin. “Carhart admitted when (the ban) was enacted last fall that he would be forced by the law to do late-term abortions out of the state.”

After the Nebraska law went into effect in October, Carhart opened a clinic in Germantown, Md., and has been pursuing one in Council Bluffs, Iowa. He still offers abortions in Nebraska.

The Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services said preliminary reports show there were 1,153 abortions performed in Nebraska in the first six months of 2011. The figure was 1,288 for the same period last year.

State law requires doctors to file reports with the state Department of Health and Human Services on each abortion performed. Until this year, the reporting of gestational age was optional and the vast majority of reports didn’t include it. So, there was no way for the state to know how many abortions were performed after 20 weeks.
