HOUSE OKS DEBT BILL

House passage to raise the nation's debt ceiling, marked by Ariz. Rep. Giffords' return to House chamber, sets the stage for today's Senate vote.

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Crisis legislation to yank the nation past the threat of a historic financial default sped through the House Monday night, breaking weeks of deadlock. The rare moment of cooperation turned celebratory when Rep. Gabrielle Giffords strode in for the first time since she was shot in the head nearly seven months ago.

The vote was 269-161, a scant day ahead of the deadline for action. But all eyes were on Giffords, who drew thunderous applause as she walked into the House chamber unannounced and cast her vote in favor of the bill.

A final Senate sign-off for the measure is virtually assured today.

Aside from raising the debt limit, the bill would slice federal spending by at least $2.1 trillion, and perhaps much more.

"If the bill were presented to the president, he would sign it," the White House said, an understatement of enormous proportions.

After months of fierce struggle, the House's top Republican and Democratic leaders swung behind the bill, ratifying a deal sealed Sunday night with a phone call from House Speaker John Boehner to President Barack Obama.

Many Republicans contended the bill still would cut too little from federal spending; many Democrats said much too much. Still, Republican lawmakers supported the compromise, 174-66, while Democrats split, 95-95.

"The legislation will solve this debt crisis and help get the American people back to work," Boehner said at a news conference a few hours before the vote.

The Democratic leader, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, was far less effusive. "I'm not happy with it, but I'm proud of some of the accomplishments in it. That's why I'm voting for it."

Officials Still Reviewing Gateway West Study Draft

Three days after the BLM released its study of the potential impacts of a massive electrical transmission project in Idaho and Wyoming, area officials are still getting familiar with the assessment.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI AND LAURIE WELCH
lkruesi@magicvalley.com

The heavily anticipated draft study of how a massive electrical transmission project across southern Idaho and Wyoming would affect nearby land and people is still being read by many public officials.

On Friday, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management released its draft review of the Gateway West Transmission Line project's effects and proposed routes. The 1,100 mile project would upgrade electric transmission capabilities for southern Idaho and southern Wyoming.

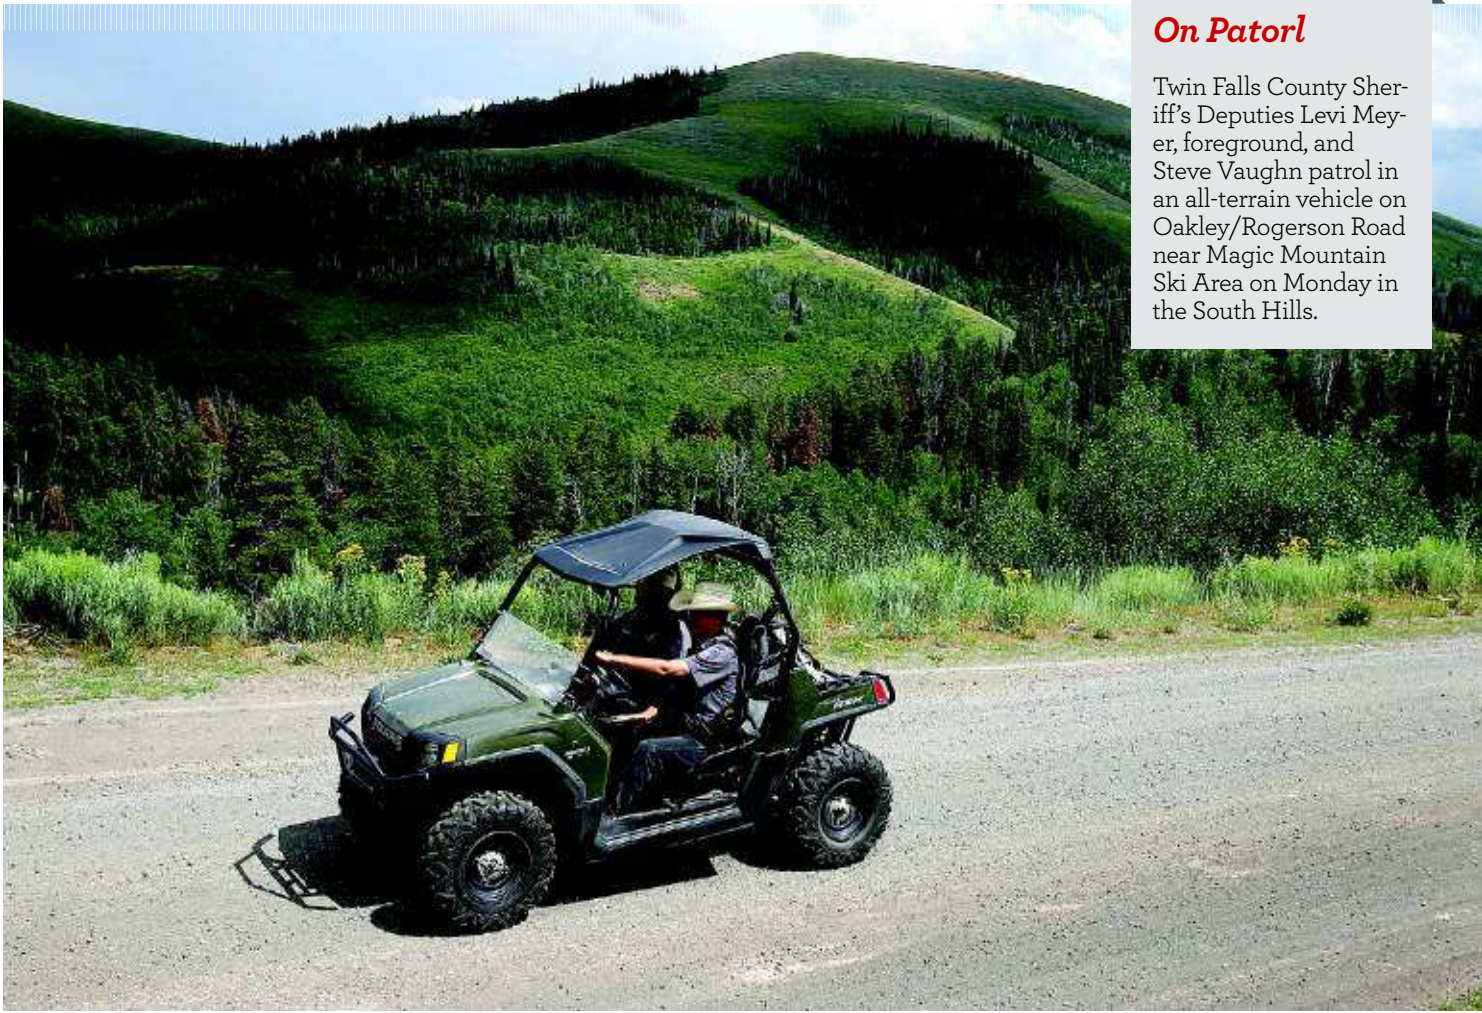

As of Monday, many public officials were just beginning to leaf through the draft. However, Twin Falls County Commissioner Terry Kramer said at first glance, he was excited for the proposed route that would go through Twin Falls County, which he worked to help craft.

The draft study breaks the route into segments that list the route as proposed by Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power, along with suggested alternatives. As of now, the route going through Twin Falls would span up to 128 miles of BLM land and

An Army veteran accused of malicious harassment was sentenced on Monday to probation and mental health court.

John C. Larsen, 42, of Twin Falls, had a prison term of three to five years suspended. He will instead serve a four-year probation and participate in the 5th Judicial District Mental Health Court with a specialized treatment program tailored to his needs. Larsen has previously described himself as a 20-year veteran who was declared 100 percent disabled based on a diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder.

He was accused of screaming at a Muslim woman, Amna Schultz, of Jerome, while both were shopping near the Twin Falls Walmart's electronics department last December.

Minidoka County 5th District Judge Jonathan Brody accepted Larsen's entry of an Alford plea to the felony malicious harassment charge, which allows a defendant to maintain innocence to gain the benefits of a plea agreement, on the second day of Larsen's June trial. The charge was not amended or reduced as part of the plea.

"You're going to need to gain insight as to what happened and to yourself, because you're going to need to be able to control yourself," Brody said.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs and Larsen's attorney, Joe Rockstahl, worked together on the plea agreement to utilize aspects of a Veterans' Court available in Ada County through the 4th Judicial District. As there is no such program in the 5th Judicial District, Larsen will be the first to benefit from the creation of a new program track here.

"It will allow him to maintain appropriate behavior when he's in a stressful situation," Loebs said at the sentencing.

Schultz was not present at Monday's hearing, as Loebs noted she has left the country.

IDAHO SCHOOLS STAGNATE IN TESTING PROGRESS

Magic Valley's large school districts fall short of progress marks, while small districts fare better.

The rate that Idaho schools meet annual progress goals has stagnated after prior years of growth.

Just 62 percent of Idaho schools made adequate yearly progress on student tests, which reflect the standard set by the state under the federal No Child Left Behind Act. It's the same level of overall school success as 2010.

But the 62 percent level of 2010 was actually a dip from 2009, when 66 percent of Idaho schools made

The final days of Idaho's favorite storm trooper

After 70 years, we're learning more about the death of the man who literally put Sun Valley on the map.

In 1935, Union Pacific Railroad Chairman Averell Harriman hired Austrian nobleman and famed international sportsman Felix Schaffgotsch to pick a site for America's first ski resort.

Late in the winter of 1935-36, Schaffgotsch settled on a remote, high-desert Idaho sheep town called Ketchum.

By that time, the count — a dilettante, skilled skier and lady's man of international repute who counted Harriman and British actor David Niven as friends — was an enthusiastic admirer of Adolf Hitler and a supporter of "Austrofascism," the right-wing, anti-Semitic political movement that dominated his homeland before Hitler's troops overran the nation in 1938.

How enthusiastic? Schaffgotsch enlisted in the Waffen-SS soon after it was created in 1939, and was commissioned as an officer.

Schaffgotsch was the equivalent of a first lieutenant in either the Wiking division (an armored unit made up mostly of volunteers from the Netherlands, Belgium, Norway and Denmark) or the Florian Geyer division (a cavalry outfit composed largely of ethnic Germans from outside Germany).

He was almost certainly on the front lines when Germany invaded the Soviet Union in June 1941, and family records show that he was killed at Kurganaja in what's now southern Russia on Aug. 11, 1942. He was 38 years old.

Ironically, at the time Harriman was U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union. The vast amount of American Lend-Lease aid to the Russians that Harriman brokered may have included the bullet that killed Schaffgotsch.

At the time of his death, Schaffgotsch was part of Operation Edelweiss — a campaign by the German army to capture the oil-rich Caucasus Mountains region. Ten days after he died, a German unit raised the flag on Mount Elburus, a three-mile-high peak that's the summit of the Caucasus. But the Germans could advance no farther east, and six months later were routed at Stalingrad.

Schaffgotsch was one of few Austrians with anything to do with Sun Valley who ended up on the wrong side of history. Many of the German and Austrian ski instructors who were in Blaine County when Germany declared war on the U.S. in December 1941 — interned during hostilities — returned to Idaho after the war.

28 miles of private property.

"I think it's great they are using our comments," he said. "It shows that the BLM is listening to real people who will be affected by this."

Twin Falls County hasn't offered as much resistance to the project as other counties, since the proposed route suggests using primarily public land, Kramer said. Cassia County is a different story, as the power companies' proposal is slated to go through private and environmentally sensitive land.

Brent Stoker, chairman of the Cassia County Gateway West Task Force, said his group had not yet reviewed the draft.

Stoker said the task force will analyze the draft.

Now that the draft study has been released, the BLM has opened a public comment period until Oct. 28.

"The comments we need must be substantive," said Beverly Gorny, a BLM spokeswoman. "Someone saying one person doesn't like this one part or another person really likes one part of the route won't be used."

Instead, Gorny said that comments should offer detailed information about why a route should or should not be used.

"No route will be perfect, but with the public information we hope to select the best one," she said.

Debt

So, too, did many of the first-term Republicans whose election in 2010 handed the GOP control of the House and set the federal government on a new, more conservative course.

"It's about time that Congress come together and figure out a way to live within our means," said one of them, Sean Duffy of Wisconsin. "This bill is going to start that process although it doesn't go far enough."

The measure would cut federal spending by at least $2.1 trillion over a decade — and possibly considerably more — and would not require tax increases. The U.S. debt limit would rise by at least $2.1 trillion, tiding the Treasury over through the 2012 elections.

Without legislation in place by the end of today, the Treasury would run out of cash needed to pay all its bill. Administration officials say a default would ensue that would severely damage the economy.

Beyond merely avoiding disaster, Obama and congressional leaders hoped their extraordinary accord would reassure investors at home and around the world, preserve the United States' AAA credit rating and begin to slow the growth in America's soaring debt. In a roller-coaster day on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average surged, then sank and finally finished down for a seventh straight session but only slightly.

After months of suspense, Monday night's vote was anticlimactic.

Not so the moment when Giffords' presence became known.

She greeted some fellow lawmakers who crowded around her and blew kisses to others, beaming the whole while. Her hair was dark and close cropped and she wore glasses — nothing like the image America had of her six months ago when she was shot while greeting constituents outside a supermarket in Tucson.

As for the legislation, after months of wrangling over a deal, there was little time left for lawmakers to decide how to vote.

The White House dispatched Vice President Joe Biden to the Capitol to lobby recalcitrant Democrats in both houses.

He said the deal "has one overwhelming redeeming feature" — postponing the next debt limit battle until 2013 and putting the current fight behind. "We have to get this out of the way to get to the issue of growing the economy," he said.

Republicans lobbied their rank and file as well, and the results were far more positive for them than a week ago when they were forced to delay a vote on an earlier measure.

AYP, the highest level in the state's history. The latest results come amid a recent push by public schools chief Tom Luna to not increase the benchmarks used for measuring a school's progress.

Idaho froze its targets for measuring a school's proficiency this year at last year's levels: 85.6 percent for reading and 83 percent for math. That's coming as Luna works toward a growth-based model for accountability, a proposal that State Board of Education voted 4-2 to accept last week.

"When you realize that these schools must have at least 85 percent of students proficient in reading and at least 83 percent of students proficient in mathematics to meet Adequate Yearly Progress, these are remarkable results, especially in these tough economic times," Luna said in prepared remarks. "While I am pleased with this progress, I know we must do better to truly prepare every student for the 21st century. We will build on these successes through the 'Students Come First' reform laws to ensure every child has access to the best possible education."

The U.S. Department of Education has also agreed to the proposal.

Just because the state's overall level of progress is stagnant doesn't mean that's the case for every school district. While each of the Magic Valley's largest districts failed to hit AYP marks — a variety of their individual schools succeeded — smaller, rural districts and Xavier Charter School in Twin Falls fared better.

Murtaugh School District, for example, was highlighted by Luna. The district's middle school was struggling in 2010, when its test-

About AYP

What it is: Adequate Yearly Progress is the academic benchmark that states set and report annually to the public and the federal government under the federal No Child Left Behind Act. In Idaho, it's measured with the result of the Idaho Standards Achievement Test.

Who gets tested: All public school students are tested each year from third-through eighth-grade in reading, math and language usage. All students also are tested in science in fifth, seventh and 10th grades.

What are the standards: For a school to make AYP, a specific number of students must score high enough on the tests—85.6 percent of students for reading, and 83 percent of students for math. The standards are applied to 41 targets that schools must meet, such as disabled students, those with limited English skills and from low-income homes. But many educators, including Idaho public schools chief Tom Luna, want the state to move to a model based on student growth, saying it's a better gauge of progress.

ing results made it one of the state's low-achieving schools. But the district made AYP this year.

In a statement, Michele Capps, superintendent of Murtaugh School District, thanked her staff and students for their hard work and dedication.

"Although we are excited to move toward a growth model, this level of proficiency is a great reason to celebrate success," she said.

Crapo: Debt Ceiling Proposal ‘An Important First Step’

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Crapo U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo on Monday called the proposal to raise the nation's debt ceiling “an important first step,” but stopped well short of praising every part of the last-minute deal.

The Idaho Republican made his comments in an appearance on CNN before the U.S. House passed the bill 269-161. Republican Rep. Mike Simpson supported the bill in the House, while fellow GOP Rep. Raul Labrador opposed it. A Senate vote awaits.

Crapo, while stressing he agreed with House Speaker John Boehner's analysis that the bill's structure doesn't allow more taxes, said others believe there could be ways to get around that.

“There are still those, including President Obama, who are saying that he thinks there's a way to wrench taxes back into the deal later on, and that's raising concern among Republicans,” Crapo said.

At the same time, Crapo, a member of the bipartisan “Gang of Six” senators that has worked on deficit reduction plans, said the bill is gaining acceptance.

“I think all in all, though, there is a growing sense that this is a first step — not necessarily the best step and not the only step — but it's an important first step to changing the paradigm in Washington from ‘How much do we raise taxes and how much do we spend?’ to ‘How much deficit reduction can we achieve?’”

Crapo said he wasn't in favor of the bill's aim to spread spending cuts equally across defense and non-defense areas if a 12-member panel created by the legislation fails to successfully recommend spending cuts to Congress. That committee, with members from the House and Senate, would be charged with recommending up to $1.5 trillion in deficit cuts over a decade.

“Many of us, myself included, feel that that's the wrong balance,” he said. “I think, however, that that is one of the reasons why the pressure will be on for this committee to deliver.”

Sen. Jim Risch said he's reviewing the measure ahead of making a decision.

T.F. Council Ups Budget Limit While Knocking Increases

Council argues higher limit will allow wiggle room as budget season winds down, but signals little intention to increase spending or taxes.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls City Council agreed to a higher ceiling on spending next year than proposed earlier, but wants people to know they have no real inclination to finalize it that way.

Five of the six council members present voted for a roughly $380,000 increase to the proposed budget, bringing its total spending cap to $46.2 million. The council can still vote to spend less than that in the upcoming fiscal year, and several council members said they fully expect to; for this vote, they just wanted to create wiggle room in case a major need arises or citizens raise a concern the council hadn't considered.

“I'm willing to go that way, though, because maybe something unforeseen is coming down the pipe, something that's not expected, so I'll give you the leeway,” Councilman Trip Craig said. “I just don't know if I'll give you the 1 percent at the end when we find out everything is going to be OK.”

So far, Mayor Don Hall has raised the idea of a 1 percent increase to the budget — about $157,000 — to be earmarked for road maintenance, but there hasn't been any major discussions on it yet. The council is allowed by state law to increase its spending by 3 percent.

Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sofka was the lone dissenting vote on the higher spending cap, with Councilman David E. Johnson absent. She said she had zero intention to increase spending or taxes and wouldn't support any budget item that included it.

Councilman Will Kezele said that while he voted for the increase, he planned for “heartburn” later on as he whittled it down. He added that he hopes people will take this time to tell the council what they want or don't want in the budget.

Fire in Shoshone Claims Outbuilding, Old Cars

TIMES-NEWS

A brushfire on the western outskirts of Shoshone claimed one outbuilding and several old cars Monday afternoon, officials said.

The roughly five-acre blaze started at about 12:30 p.m. and tore through the property along U.S. Highway 26 until firefighters brought it under control at about 2:15 p.m., Shoshone Police Chief Jon Daubner said. The cause of the fire is still under investigation, he said, but appears to have originated from the burned outbuilding. He said it looks like the building was a shop or shed. The cars that burned appeared to be just parked on the property and not driven, he said.

No one was injured. The Shoshone and Dietrich fire departments and the Bureau of Land Management responded to the blaze.

Jerome May Seek Judge's Approval For Wastewater Project Debt

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The city of Jerome may decide to seek a judge's permission to take on long-term debt to solve its wastewater system's problems.

The Jerome City Council will consider the first step in the process, commonly called judicial confirmation, at its meeting at 5:30 p.m. today in Council Chambers, 100 E. Ave. A. In recent months, city officials have been notified by the Environmental Protection Agency that improvements are needed to get the wastewater system into compliance, with costs estimated at $3.25 million.

If city leaders pursue judicial confirmation, Jerome would ask for a judge's permission to take out a bond for wastewater improvements. State law allows local government agencies to bypass bond approval votes if they can prove to a judge that an emergency exists.

The council won't make a final decision at tonight's meeting. Instead, they'll discuss whether to hire the Boise law firm Moore, Smith, Buxton & Turcke, Chartered, for the necessary legal work. That cost is estimated at $10,500.

The council also would need to have a later public hearing if the city pursues judicial confirmation. The council will discuss whether to have a public comment hearing on Aug. 22.

ITD Begins Work on Golf Course Road Signal

TIMES-NEWS

Construction has started on a traffic signal at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Golf Course Road in southern Jerome County, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Work will primarily continue in the median and roadway shoulders during the project's early stages, as crews work to set the foundation for new signal and light poles. A northbound turn lane and widening of Golf Course Road will be included in the plan, with much of that work performed at night. The Jerome Highway District began roadway base work this spring in preparation for the project.

Work is expected to finish by early September.

Lane restrictions and short delays are expected in the work zone.

Twin Falls-based Gordon Paving, Inc., is the contractor for the $985,000 federal-funded project.

Jerome Co. Scraps Firearms Ordinance

JEROME • Jerome County commissioners on Monday discussed whether they should ban firearms from the county fairgrounds, but ended up scrapping a proposed ordinance because of legal hitches.

The proposal, which would have barred firearms from all county properties, not just the fairgrounds, came five days before the Jerome County Fair is scheduled to begin. Although the proposal was rejected, county commissioners left the door open to possibly put a policy outlining what's expected of fairgrounds attendees without a formal ordinance.

Polygamist Leader Says God Demands Judge’s Removal

BY WILL WEISSERT
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO, Texas • Polygamist sect leader Warren Jeffs made a third attempt Monday to remove the Texas judge overseeing his child sex assault case — this time claiming God himself demands a change.

The head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints filed a motion purporting to quote God as saying state District Judge Barbara Walther should “step away from this abuse of power against a religious and pure faith in the Lord.”

Walther ruled the trial would continue under new Texas Supreme Court rules that no longer require an immediate hearing to recuse a judge after a case has begun. A hearing will eventually be held on Jeffs’ motion, but it’s unclear when.

The trial continued with forensic analyst Amy Smuts, of the Human Identification Center at the University of North Texas in Fort Worth, testifying that a DNA sample collected from Jeffs had 15 major markers that matched a sample taken from a girl born to a 15-year-old mother. Smuts said that made her more than 99.99 percent certain that Jeffs fathered the child, who was born in October 2005.

Jeffs is accused of sexually assaulting two girls, ages 12 and 15, he took as brides in “spiritual marriages.” His church is an offshoot of mainstream Mormonism that believes polygamy brings exaltation in Heaven, and followers see Jeffs as God’s earthly spokesman.

Monday’s session ended in the late evening with lead prosecutor Eric Nichols showing a series of pictures where Jeffs was seen cuddling with, then kissing a red-head girl on the mouth.

She had recently turned 12. The image caused some in the public to gasp, but there was no visible reaction among jurors.

Jeffs, 55, fired his attorneys last week and has been representing himself. On Friday, he read a statement he said was from God, promising “sickness and death” for all involved unless the trial stops. The charges against him stem from a police raid in April 2008 at Yearning For Zion, a West Texas church compound about 45 miles south of San Angelo.

Authorities moved in after receiving an anonymous call to an abuse shelter, alleging that girls at the compound were being forced into polygamist marriages. The call turned out to be a hoax, and more than 400 children who had been placed in state custody were returned to their families.

But police seized marriage records and thousands of pages of documents and eventually charged Jeffs and 11 other FLDS men. All seven sect members who have been prosecuted so far were convicted of crimes including sexual assault and bigamy and received prison sentences of between six and 75 years.

Jeffs has repeatedly called the raid an illegal search and wants a separate hearing on whether authorities violated his First Amendment rights to freedom of religion. Walther has refused.

Jeffs tried to recuse Walther twice before, but was then represented by attorneys who argued on his behalf. His latest motion, however, was based on a revelation Jeffs said the Lord gave him Sunday and addressed the judge directly, stating, “I, your lord, say to you, I shall bring to light your evil intent now, before all people, to destroy my Church on earth.”

Utah Pot Farm Suspects Arraigned in Federal Court

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • A federal magistrate set an Oct. 11 trial date for 21 defendants who police say were involved in a large marijuana growing operation near St. George.

All but one of the suspects arraigned Monday in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City are Mexican nationals, said Paul Kohler, an assistant U.S. attorney.

State and federal police arrested the suspects July 16 in a raid on the operation. More than 13,000 plants were removed from the site and destroyed, authorities said.

The 21 defendants were indicted last week on three counts each: conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance by cultivation, manufacture of a controlled substance by cultivation and possession of a firearm during a drug trafficking crime.

The first two charges each carry a possible life sentence, with a mandatory minimum prison sentence of 10 years.

Kohler said nine additional defendants have been charged in a federal complaint in St. George. He said a handful more of those arrested July 16 are juveniles and will be dealt with by state officials.

Twenty of the 21 arraigned Monday before federal magistrate Brooke C. Wells have immigration holds on them, meaning even if they could post bail they would have to automatically surrender to immigration custody.

The 21st defendant is a legal permanent resident and has a detention hearing set for Wednesday.

All of the suspects are believed to be connected to a drug-trafficking ring operating in Southern California and Nevada, according to authorities.

Robert Breeze, who represents one of the defendants, wouldn’t comment on the specifics of the case but said the majority of those arrested in past large-scale growing operations have been “poverty-stricken” peasants hired by others to maintain or harvest the plants.

Sue Thomas, a supervisory special agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration in Salt Lake City, said the suspects are hired and paid by Mexican drug trafficking organizations and thus are “part of them.”

Louis ‘Lou’ DeWald

April 29, 1927-July 31, 2011

RUPERT • The hand of God has helped a great man, Louis DeWald of Rupert, through the gates of Heaven to be with Him.

Louis, the youngest of 13 brothers and sisters, was born in Minidoka, Idaho, to John and Margaret DeWald, original homesteaders in northern Minidoka County in 1914. About the time Lou was born, the family moved the farm to Shamrock Lane in Rupert. Louis was raised in a very strict German family. He learned how to farm, milk cows and raise chickens. After graduating from Rupert High School in 1945, Louis joined the U.S. Navy and served in the South Pacific with the fleet for the invasion of Japan at the end of World War II. Later, he was stationed at Alameda, Calif., during the Korean Conflict.

After his service in the military, Louis moved back to Rupert and bought the farm on Shamrock Lane. In July of 1964, Lou married Dee Anne Reeves. Their daughter, Amy, was born in 1966. After their divorce, Louis moved to Blackfoot and became a charter member and served as business manager of the Elks for two years. After a short transfer to Pocatello, Louis returned to Rupert and started a painting business. In 1968, Lou became a dealer for Boise Cascade Homes. On Aug. 28, 1970, Louis married the love of his life, Ann McMurray. Ann had three children from a previous marriage, which Lou adopted as his own — Mark, Matt and Maureen.

Louis retired from house building in 1982 and promptly started woodworking in his shop. He dedicated many hours building furniture for friends and family members and, oftentimes, used freshly cut trees to produce his finished product. In 2004, Louis retired from woodworking, sold their house and moved into Rupert.

Over the past 20 years, Louis was an active, dedicated member of the St. Nicholas Catholic Church. In 2000, the Knights of Columbus honored Lou as Knight. He served for five years as business manager, finance manager and building commission spokesperson for St. Nicholas.

One of Louis’ favorite things to do was making his famous pickles. A meticulous and passionate pickler, one friend described Lou’s process as, “From the vine to the brine.”

A compassionate and giving friend and community member, Lou was available at any time of need.

Louis is survived by his wife, Ann DeWald of Rupert; his children, Mark (Benny) DeWald of Baytown, Texas, Matt DeWald of Ashland, Ore., Amy Oyler of Twin Falls and Maureen (Brian) Conley of Salt Lake City, Utah; two sisters, Bertha Craythorn of Payson, Utah, and Marie (Harold) Wheeler of Sacramento, Calif.; 13 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, eight brothers and two sisters.

A vigil service will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 4, at the St. Nicholas Catholic Church, 802 F St. in Rupert.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 5, also at the St. Nicholas Catholic Church. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Friends may call one hour prior to the vigil service Thursday and one hour prior to the funeral Mass on Friday, both at the St. Nicholas Catholic Church.

Quadriplegic Man Dies in Mont. Skydiving Accident

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) • A quadriplegic man with five years of skydiving experience died in a weekend skydiving accident in northwestern Montana, Flathead County officials said Monday.

Sheriff Chuck Curry said Zack Fogle, 27, of Kingston, Wash., died Saturday afternoon when his parachute did not open during a jump at the 44th annual Lost Prairie Boogie, a 10-day skydiving event near Marion that typically draws hundreds of participants.

Fogle had limited mobility in his extremities after being struck by a car in high school, but had a custom-built parachute with handles that were located where he could operate them with his hands, Undersheriff Jordan White said. Fogle had completed more than 125 jumps and had participated in the Lost Prairie Boogie before.

The accident happened on Fogle’s first jump at this year’s event.

“He jumped with someone who assisted him out of the airplane,” White said.

Fogle apparently was on his back while he was falling and was unable to get turned around and facing down so he could deploy his chute, White said. “It was more of a state of being out-of-control in his free fall,” he said.

Fogle didn’t deploy his primary or emergency parachutes, and an emergency deployment mechanism that would have released his emergency chute as a fail-safe had not been properly activated prior to the jump.

“His equipment was determined to be current in inspections and service and was in proper working order,” Curry said in a news release.

White said he learned that Fogle also had a custom motorcycle built to accommodate his disability.

“It isn’t the greatest deal in the world, but it shows how much we’ve changed the terms of the debate in this town.”

— House Speaker John Boehner after President Barack Obama and congressional leaders announced a historic agreement on emergency legislation to avert the nation’s first-ever financial default.

OUR VIEW

Give Cops Power to Do Something About Stray Livestock

People who make a living from animals generally keep them in check, but there are exceptions. Sheriff’s deputies need the authority to deal with them.

Wandering cattle are a more serious – and costly – problem for Magic Valley law enforcement than you think.

That’s why we hope the Twin Falls County commissioners will approve a proposed ordinance to fine owners who don’t keep their animals in check.

It’s intended to provide a tool to streamline how the county holds owners accountable for their livestock. The law is aimed at those who habitually fail to keep their animals off roads and other people’s property.

It’s also a safety issue: The collision of a vehicle and a 1,300-pound cow isn’t a minor matter.

Last month, deputies responded to an incident near Hollister with 30 loose cows. Officers kept watch over the cattle to make sure they didn’t approach U.S. Highway 93 until the animals’ owner arrived; in a Delaware-size county, those are cops who weren’t available for other calls.

And the taxpayers paid them for their time as they baby-sat livestock.

As it stands, if the county wants to recoup costs from responding to runaway animals, a civil action and a lengthy court process against the livestock’s owner is required.

This ordinance would allow officers to write a citation, as they do with traffic offenses. That’s as it should be: Some egregious offenders need to be fined right away.

For the first violation, the fine is up to $50 per animal, per day. A second offense within two years results in a fine of $100 per animal, per day. A third offense is a misdemeanor, which can result in a fine of up to $1,000 and six months in jail.

That doesn’t mean deputies can’t issue first-offense warnings. It just means they have the authority to take more robust action when it’s called for.

OTHER VIEWS

Japan’s Task

Think the U.S. political system has problems? Things in Japan aren’t a whole lot better. Uncertainty reigns in Tokyo, where Prime Minister Naoto Kan’s approval rating has sunk to 17 percent. Initial praise for his handling of the March 11 tsunami and nuclear disaster has given way to frustration and anger. Kan’s response – a promise to resign but only on an unspecified date after the damaged Fukushima reactors are definitively under control and the Diet, Japan’s parliament, finishes es work on fiscal legislation – has only deepened the confusion.

Disruptions to the manufacturing supply chain are ending, the stock market has recovered most of what it lost after the disaster, and economic growth is on course to hit nearly 3 percent in the second half of this year. With two-thirds of the nation’s nuclear generators idle, Japan’s people have rallied to the cause of electricity conservation, with the result that Tokyo’s peak electric power demand has been almost a quarter less than last year.

Five Myths About Extreme Weather

THE WASHINGTON POST

It’s too darn hot. From Maine to Hawaii, the mercury has been rising relentlessly. The oven-like conditions in the United States are just the latest in a series of extreme weather events over the past year – epic floods in Pakistan and Australia, record heat waves in Moscow. What is driving this phenomenon? Here are five myths about forces behind the heat.

1. This summer is much hotter than normal.

Last month’s global average land surface temperature was the fourth-warmest on record. According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, 49 states – all except Delaware – have had record highs in the past three weeks.

Globally, June was the 316th month in a row that had a higher temperature than the 20th century average. We may be witnessing a new normal in heat and other extreme weather.

2. “Hundred year” weather events happen only once every 100 years.

Hundred-year weather events no longer live up to their name. In 2005, for instance, a devastating “once a century” drought hit the Amazon, only to be followed by another in 2010. Globally, previously rare weather events have been occurring with startling frequency. Consider the massive floods that inundated a fifth of Pakistan last year, and submerged eastern Australia and America’s

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

“We the People”

Their time is up!

Our federal House and Senate members are proving that they are willing to plunge this country into the abyss, and they do not care. They will say anything to keep us, the small people, in our place. They do not care that millions of us are hurting while the rich and ultra-rich go unscathed.

To me, this is the definition of terrorists. It is time to take strong steps. It is time to call upon our armed forces to protect “we the people” from those who swore to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States and now worry only about where they will plant their seats in 2012. It is time to stop – not tomorrow, today.

Don’t try to blame this on the Democrats or Republicans or the Tea Party; blame it on all of them, including yourselves. We have all failed to take a stand and say, enough!

It is now time for the terrorists that occupy the House and Senate be tried and punished for their refusal to perform their duties, and I, for one, would suggest a stint in a very handy cell in Quantico, Cuba.

Time’s up! It is our future, our kids’ future and our grandkids’ future that is at stake; and if we fail to act en masse, the problems we see today will look like the good old days mere months from now.

You know I speak the truth! So now, it is time to act.

A Simple Thank You

As the Twin Falls Correctional Work Center begins its last week open, I would like to take the time to say thank you to the medical community of Twins Falls for taking care of our correctional inmates’ medical and dental needs.

Over the years, the inmates have received great medical/dental services heartland this year.

3. Extreme droughts and extreme floods can’t both be due to climate change.

It seems counterintuitive that climate change could be responsible for both withering droughts and devastating floods. Yet it can. Scientists have found that climate change can trigger periods of intense and heavy rainfall followed by long periods of dry weather. This combination of severe rainstorm and droughts, can lead to more flooding, landslides, soil erosion and other disasters.

4. An extra one or two degrees in temperature is no big deal.

Since pre-industrial times, the global average surface temperature has increased by 1.4 degrees – with more than one degree of that warming happening in the past three decades. And we are already witnessing significant changes. In many parts of the world, cold days and nights have become rarer, and hot days and nights more common, over the past half-century. Arctic sea ice, Greenland’s ice sheet, and glaciers in the Alps and the Antarctic Peninsula are all melting faster. The oceans have become more acidic as a result of the buildup of greenhouse gases, and the warming of rivers and lakes is affecting freshwater fish and other species.

5. Everyone complains about the weather, but no one does anything about it.

There is a lot that governments, businesses and individuals around the world can do – and are already doing – to cut back on heat-trapping gases and prepare for extreme weather.

At least 85 nations have pledged to reduce greenhouse gas emissions or limit their growth by 2020 by shifting to renewable energy, increasing energy efficiency and protecting forests, among other efforts. Similarly, some Fortune 500 companies and even the U.S. military are working to reduce their carbon emissions. A good start, but not nearly enough.

Idaho Power

Questioning Idaho Power’s simple promises, I gave a hearty laugh. When stepping out of the shower recently, the electricity went off and I discovered that an Idaho Power representative had swiftly switched out my electric meter for a supposedly smarter one. The quandary was that nobody had knocked on my door to inform me as the company had promised in their widely mailed, sleek glossy brochure. And it’s too bad that this simple discourteous oversight happened because, as a former meter reader myself, I was positively looking forward to a healthy face-to-face discussion with the representative.

I had planned on asking the experienced tradesman questions, such as what happens to those who want to opt out of their new forceful system? And what do they say to those who don’t desire a higher level of complexity? Perusing the brochure closer, I saw that Idaho Power assures that these up-to-the-minute smart meters are secure. And I agree that they are well over 99 percent secure. The problem is that the old-style meters were 100 percent hacker proof. Nobody had remotely penetrated even one, nor ever could.

I wonder if I’ll laugh as nearly as much when we see this next secure promise broken.

‘Promising Lead’ in D.B. Cooper Case Won’t Solve Mystery Soon, FBI Says

BY STEVE MILETICH
The Seattle Times

SEATTLE • The FBI’s “promising lead” in the D.B. Cooper skyjacking case has led to a man who died 10 years ago, an FBI spokesman said Monday. FBI spokesman Fred Gutt said the bureau’s Seattle office has been investigating for more than a year a lead that has “more credibility and detail” than other tips regarding the unsolved sky-jacking of a Seattle-bound flight on Thanksgiving Eve 1971. Gutt did not identify the man. “There is a basic story that seems logical,” Gutt said. Gutt noted there is not a lot of contradictory information that would rule out the suspect, but said that doesn’t mean the case is about to be solved. He said the lead is one of a handful the FBI is actively pursuing in the fabled sky-jacking, in which the hijacker parachuted into history from the rear of a Boeing 727 with $200,000 in cash. FBI spokeswoman Ayn Sandalo Dietrich said on Sunday that agents were investigating a “promising lead,” a day after a British newspaper reported the development in a lengthy feature story on the notorious case. Dietrich, of the Seattle FBI office, cautioned that the bureau is not on the verge of a “big break” but is carrying out “due diligence” on the new information. “It’s a routine part of our investigation,” she said. Dietrich said the FBI received a tip in the past year from a member of law enforcement who directed the bureau to a credible person who might have helpful information on a suspect. The FBI obtained an item from the person to determine if fingerprints can be extracted from it for comparison to the partial prints the hijacker left on a magazine left behind on the plane and parts of the airliner he touched, Dietrich said. The item has been sent to the FBI Laboratory in Quantico, Va., she said. Asked to characterize the significance of the lead, Dietrich said, “It’s good,” but the case is “not on the brink of a solution.” She also called the new information the “most promising lead we have right now.” Dietrich said the FBI disclosed the information to a reporter from The Telegraph newspaper in London, but didn’t think the article was going to appear until November. In the story, Dietrich is quoted as saying, “The credible lead is somebody whose possible connection to the hijacker is strong. And the suspect is not a name that’s come up before.” The development is the latest in a case filled with lore, including the name D.B. Cooper, which was a media creation. The hijacker who jumped from the plane Nov. 24, 1971, identified himself as “Dan Cooper,” but a day after the skyjacking FBI agents checked out a Portland man with the name “D.B. Cooper” and quickly cleared him. The moniker stuck, however.

A 1971 artist’s sketch shows the suspect known as D.B. Cooper, who hijacked Northwest Flight 305 between Portland and Seattle in November 1971.

DEADHEADING

Deadheading is the term used for the removal of flowers from plants when they are fading or dead. It is done to keep plants looking attractive and encourage more blooms.

Most flowers lose their attraction as they fade, spoiling the overall appearance of beds, borders and containers, and are best removed. However, there are other reasons: Once the flowers are pollinated; seed heads, pods or capsules form at the expense of further growth and flower development. Regular deadheading directs energy into stronger growth and more flowers

It can prevent plants with numerous petals, such as peonies, some camellias and many roses, scattering debris widely. When to remove the spent flowers as soon as they look scruffy. In practice, gardeners usually have to remove them as soon as they can and, thankfully, a few days delay won't make a difference.

The simplest method is to just pinch off the faded blooms with finger and thumb. Aim to remove the flower with its stalk to ensure the plant looks tidy. To deadhead plants with tough or stringy stems, use secateurs, scissors or a knife. This includes “<http://apps.rhs.org.uk/AdviceSearch/profile.aspx?PID=592>” dahlias, calendulas, marigolds and shrubs such as lilac.

For border perennials and annuals, trim away the old flowers, generally cutting back to a bud or leaf

Some hardy geraniums, delphiniums and lupins produce a second flush of flowers if cut back close to ground level. Others, such as lady's mantle and oriental poppies, can still be cut back near ground level but, usually, only produce fresh foliage

Gently snap off the faded flowers of “<http://apps.rhs.org.uk/AdviceSearch/profile.aspx?PID=153>” roses, breaking the stalk just below the head (rather than cutting just above a leaf, as the snapping method results in more blooms being produced more quickly on repeat-flowering cultivars)

NATIONWIDE COMPANY IN BURLEY THIS WEEK PAYING CASH FOR GOLD, SILVER AND COINS.

By David Morgan
STAFF WRITER

Been following the gold and silver market lately? Well if you have a jewelry box, a lock box full of gold or a coffee can full of old coins, you should be, according to Ohio Valley Refinery spokesperson John Miller. “The gold and silver markets have not been this strong for over 30 years” said Miller. Typically when the U.S. dollar is weak and the economy is flat, gold and silver markets soar. “That’s good news if you are sitting on a few gold necklaces or an old class ring” says Miller.

Starting Tuesday at 9am and every day this week through Saturday, the Ohio Valley Refinery is setting up a satellite refinery right here in Burley at the Best Western. During their 5 day stay, anyone can bring gold, silver or platinum items and turn them in for immediate payment, explains John Miller. “Just about everybody has some amount of gold or silver just lying around collecting dust and this week anybody can sell theirs direct to our refinery. Typically selling direct to a refinery is reserved for larger wholesale customers like jewelry stores, pawn shops and laboratories” says Miller. “We are changing how business is done,” he explains “we want to do business with everybody so we took our business to the streets”. “Our teams visit various cities around the country hosting 5 day events and allowing the general public to take advantage of our services. “The turnout has been overwhelming” says Miller. “Usually each day is busier than the previous day. It seems once people come to us and sell something, they are so amazed what an old ring or gold coin is worth, they go home and start digging around for more and telling relatives, friends and neighbors. It’s like a feeding frenzy by the third day. People line up with everything from gold jewelry to sterling silver flatware sets to old coins. I think during this bad economy everybody can use extra money, but most people say they are taking advantage of selling direct to our refinery because of the higher prices we pay”.

During this special event, anyone is welcome to bring all types of gold, silver and platinum to the refinery and turn it in for instant payment. The types of items they will accept include all gold jewelry, gold coins, gold ounces, dental gold, old coins made before 1965 including silver dollars, halves, quarters and dimes, anything marked “sterling” including flatware sets, tea pots, silver bars, silver ounces and all industrial precious metals.

What should you expect if you go to the event to sell your gold and/or silver? Just gather up all gold, silver and platinum in any form. If you are not sure if it’s gold or silver, bring it in and they will test it for free. When you arrive at the event you will be asked to fill out a simple registration card and will be issued a number. Seating will be available. When your number is called you will be escorted to a table where your items will be examined, tested and sorted. This only takes a few minutes, using their expertise and specialized equipment. Items will be counted and/or weighed. The value of the items will be determined based on up to the minute market prices. Live feeds will be available at the event displaying current market prices of all precious metals. If you choose to sell your items, they will be bagged and tagged and you will be escorted to the cashier to collect your payment. Waiting time to sell your items may range from just a few minutes to 1 hour, so bring something to read. If you are the owner of a jewelry store, pawn shop, dentist office or a dealer you are encouraged to call ahead to make an appointment with the smelt master to discuss their special dealer programs. They can be reached during Refinery hours at (217) 787-7767.

Ohio Valley Refinery will open for business Tuesday from 9am–6pm. The event continues every day through Saturday. No appointment is needed for the general public.

SILVER AND GOLD COIN PRICES UP DURING POOR ECONOMY.

Collectors and Enthusiasts in Burley with $200,000 to Purchase Yours!

By Ken McIntosh
STAFF WRITER

Got Coin? It might be just the time to cash in. This week, starting Tuesday and continuing through Saturday, the International Collectors Association in conjunction with the Ohio Valley Gold & Silver Refinery will be purchasing all types of silver and gold coins direct from the public. All types are welcome and the event is free.

Collectors will be on hand to identify and sort your coins. Then the quality or grade will be determined. The better the grade the more they are worth, according to collectors I talked to. With the silver and gold markets high, prices of older coins are too. Any coins minted before 1965 in the U.S. are 90% silver, except nickels and pennies.

The coin’s worth is determined by the rarity and the grade. Old silver dollars are worth a great premium right now, even well worn heavily circulated ones are bringing good premiums. Franklin and Kennedy half dollars, Washington quarters, Mercury and Roosevelt dimes are all worth many times the face value. While older types like Seated Liberty, Standing Liberties, and Barber coins are worth even more.

Gold coins are really worth a lot right now, according to Brian Eades of the International Collectors Association. “This country didn’t start minting coins until 1792” says Eades. He explained, “Before that, people would trade goods using gold dust and nuggets. Some shop keepers would take more gold than needed to pay for items purchased. There was no uniform system of making change.”

The government opened the first mints and began distributing the coins in 1792. By the beginning of the 19th century, coins and paper currency were wide spread and our monetary system was here to stay. In 1933 Roosevelt required all banking institutions to turn in all gold coins. Once all banks turned in this gold, the president raised the gold standard from $20.00 per ounce to $33.00 per ounce. This was his way of stimulating the economy during the great depression. However, gold coins were never redistributed after the recall. But not all gold coins were turned in. “Many folks during that time didn’t completely trust the government and chose to keep their gold” said Eades.

These gold coins are sought after by collectors today and bring many times the face value. Any gold coins with the mint marks of CC, D or O will bring nice premiums. Collectors at the event will be glad to show you where to look. Other types of coins will also be purchased including foreign coins, Indian cents, two cent pieces, half dimes, three cent pieces and buffalo nickels to name a few.

Collectors warn people against trying to clean their coins, as significant damage can be done and the coin’s value lessened.

LOCAL RESIDENTS ARE READY TO CASH IN! International buyers in town this week and ready to stimulate economy!

By David Morgan

Hundreds of phone calls from local residents poured in to the corporate office of the Ohio Valley Gold and Silver Refinery this week—inquiring about items to be purchased by the team of buyers that is on site with OVGSR.

The team of buyers this week are purchasing a vast array of vintage items, along with the coins, gold jewelry and sterling silver items the refinery deals in. It is a local shot in the arm for our economy—the spokesperson for the event expects to spend in excess of $200,000.00 this week at the Best Western, paying local residents on the spot. The spokesperson for the company has explained that these collectors are paying collector prices for the vintage items and it is great way for people to get a great value for their items.

TV: Israel Agrees to Talks Based on Pre-1967 Lines

BY IAN DEITCH
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • In a dramatic policy shift, Israel's prime minister has agreed to negotiate the borders of a Palestinian state based on the cease-fire line that marks off the West Bank, a TV station reported Monday.

Up to now, Benjamin Netanyahu has refused to spell out his plan for negotiating the border. A senior Israeli official would not confirm outright that the prime minister was now willing to adopt the cease-fire line as a starting point, but said Israel was willing to try new formulas to restart peace talks based on a proposal made by President Barack Obama.

In a speech about the Middle East in May, Obama proposed negotiations based on the pre-1967 line with agreed swaps of territory between Israel and a Palestinian state. Netanyahu reacted angrily, insisting that Israel would not withdraw from all of the West Bank, though that was not what Obama proposed.

Now Netanyahu is basically accepting that framework, according to Channel 2 TV, offering to trade Israeli territory on its side of the line for West Bank land where its main settlements are located.

The official, who has been briefed on the talks, spoke on condition of anonymity because the contacts are still in progress. He said he would not deny the TV report, while refusing to confirm the specifics. He emphasized that Israel would not withdraw from all of the West Bank.

"We are willing in a framework of restarting the peace talks to accept a proposal that would contain elements that would be difficult for Israel and we would find very difficult to endorse," he said, answering a question about the Obama proposal.

Missing Girl's Body Found in River

Celina Cass was last seen at her home computer at around 9 p.m. on July 25 in Stewartstown, N.H., and was gone the next morning. Police say there was no sign of a struggle.

STEWARTSTOWN, N.H. • The body of an 11-year-old New Hampshire girl who disappeared almost a week ago was discovered Monday in a river less than half a mile from her home, and authorities said they considered her death suspicious.

Celina Cass was reported missing July 26. Divers found her body late Monday morning near a hydroelectric dam that spans the Connecticut River between her hometown of Stewartstown and Canaan, Vt., ending a massive search, Senior Assistant Attorney General Jane Young said. It was recovered from the river Monday evening.

"We have brought Celina home, obviously not the way we wanted to bring her home," said Young, her voice breaking with emotion.

Authorities had said that Celina, who lived with her older sister, mother and stepfather a mile from the Canadian border, was last seen at her home computer around 9 p.m. on July 25 and was gone the next morning. Police said there was no sign of a struggle, and there was no indication she ran away or that someone took her.

Young declined to say whether there were any suspects in the girl's death. "We have made no determination on where her body was eventually put in the river," she said.

An autopsy was scheduled for Tuesday to determine the cause and manner of death.

Coverage With No Copay Extended to Birth Control

Tens of millions of women are expected to benefit when the women's prevention package becomes available Jan. 1, 2013.

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A half-century after the advent of the pill, the Obama administration on Monday ushered in a change in women's health care potentially as transformative: coverage of birth control as prevention, with no copays.

Services ranging from breast pumps for new mothers to counseling on domestic violence were also included in the broad expansion of women's preventive care under President Barack Obama's health care overhaul.

Since birth control is the most common drug prescribed to women, health plans should make sure it's easily available, said Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius. "Not doing it would be like not covering flu shots," she said.

Officials said the women's prevention package will be available Jan. 1, 2013, in most cases, resulting in a slight overall increase in premiums. Tens of millions of women are expected to benefit initially, a number that is likely to grow with time. At first, some plans may be exempt due to an arcane provision of the health care law known as the "grandfather" clause. But those plans could face pressure from their members to include the new coverage.

Earlier requirements under the health care law improved preventive coverage generally for people of both sexes.

Senate Plan to End FAA Shutdown Falls Apart

BY JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Republicans late Monday blocked a bipartisan Senate plan to end the partial shutdown of the Federal Aviation Administration, making it increasingly likely Congress will be unable to resolve the legislative standoff before September.

Having resolved the federal debt crisis, Congress is expected to leave at the end of the week for its August recess. If that happens, lost revenue from uncollected airline ticket taxes could exceed $1.2 billion before lawmakers return to work a month later, senators said.

The Democratic-controlled Senate and the Republican-controlled House are at odds over proposals to cut rural air service subsidies and to change a federal labor rule to make it more difficult for airline workers to unionize. Unable to resolve their differences, the FAA's operating authority was allowed to expire at midnight on July 22.

Syrian Troops Attack City of Hama for 2nd Day. Page N2.

Syrian Forces Intensify Assault on Hama

WASHINGTON POST

BEIRUT • Syrian forces launched a renewed assault on the flash point city of Hama on Monday, extending their effort to crush a four-month-old rebellion into the first day of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan despite growing world condemnation.

At least nine people were killed Monday, according to the human rights group Insan, four of them in Hama. The other five were killed in the two eastern towns of Deir el-Zour and Abu Kamal, which also have been targeted by the regime in its offensive to suppress the uprising and by the opposition to escalate anti-government demonstrations during Ramadan.

But the toll in Hama was expected to rise because residents reported a sudden and intense increase in the scale of bombardments against the city Monday night, with shells crashing into residential neighborhoods, a hospital and the courthouse.

Activist Saleh Hamawi, reached by telephone, said it was impossible to know exactly what was happening because of the darkness and the intensity of the fire. "The bombing is very big, and they are using some bombs that are bigger than tanks," he said, adding that he knew of several casualties but could not specify a number.

The offensive suggests that the government of President Bashar al-Assad has not been swayed by sensitivities surrounding deaths in the holy month, during which observant Muslims fast between sunrise and sunset. In the attack Sunday, 102 people died, 76 of them in Hama, Insan reported.

Justice Dept. challenges Alabama on immigration

BY BOB JOHNSON
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. • The Obama administration is challenging Alabama's new law that would let police detain those stopped for traffic offenses who they suspect are in the country illegally, a statute described as one of the toughest immigration regulations nationwide.

In a complaint Monday, the U.S. Justice Department said Alabama's law conflicts with federal law and undermines federal immigration priorities. The lawsuit argues that the state law also expands opportunities for police to push immigrants toward jail for various new immigration crimes.

The law is set to take effect Sept. 1. It also makes it a crime to knowingly give a ride or provide shelter to an illegal immigrant and requires schools to report the immigration status of students. Alabama employers would be required to use a federal system called E-Verify to determine if new workers are in the country legally.

The Justice Department, in its filing in Birmingham federal court, said a state cannot set its own immigration policy and cannot pass laws that conflict with federal immigration laws.

"To put it in terms we relate to here in Alabama, you can only have one quarterback in a football game. In immigration, the federal government is the quarterback," said Joyce Vance, U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Alabama.

Already the law is facing mounting opposition.

Also Monday, a coalition of religious leaders challenged its legality. The lawsuit by Roman Catholic, United Methodist and Episcopal bishops says it "makes it a crime to follow God's command to be Good Samaritans."

The showdown began last month when the House passed a GOP bill to extend the FAA's operating authority that cut air service subsidies by $16.5 million. Democrats said the House was trying to impose policies that hadn't been negotiated with the Senate and using the subsidies as leverage to force them to cut a deal on the labor issue. The labor provision is in a separate, long-term FAA funding bill.

On Monday, Sens. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., chairman of the committee that oversees the FAA, and Kay Bailey Hutchison of Texas, the senior Republican on the committee, floated a proposal to restore full operating authority to the FAA while cutting air service subsidies $71 million. The plan fell apart when Sen. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., said he would use parliamentary procedures to tie up the Senate in an effort to prevent a vote on the measure.

Hutchison questioned the logic of allowing a stalemate over relatively small savings in subsidy cuts to prevent the government from collecting many times that amount in revenues designated for the operation of the nation's air traffic system.

"This just does not make sense," Hutchison said.

The subsidies program was created after airlines were deregulated in 1978 to ensure continued air service on less profitable routes to remote communities. The program has grown to provide service to about 150 communities, from Muscle Shoals, Ala., to Pelican, Alaska, and costs about $200 million a year. Critics say the subsidies are too high and some of the communities are within a reasonable drive from a hub airport.

Coburn told reporters earlier in the day he would block any bill to end the shutdown that doesn't eliminate air service subsidies for communities that are within 90 miles of a hub airport. The Rockefeller-Hutchison plan used a different formula for deciding which communities would be eliminated from the program.

The Rockefeller plan would spare subsidies for Morgantown, W.Va.; the GOP plan would eliminate them.

Later, Rockefeller sought a vote on a "clean" bill to end the shutdown that didn't include any subsidy cuts or other policy provisions. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, blocked the vote, saying he was concerned about the labor issue, although the bill didn't contain a labor provision.

The FAA's long-term operating authority expired in 2007. Since then, Congress has been unable to agree on a long-term funding plan. The agency has continued to operate under a series of 20 short-term extensions.

When the FAA's operating authority expired, airlines also lost their authority to collect the ticket taxes that provide the majority of the trust fund's revenue, costing the government an estimated $200 million a week.

The FAA has been forced to furlough nearly 4,000 employees and issue stop-work orders on more than 200 construction and other projects paid for with trust fund monies. Work on another $2.5 billion in airport construction grants has stopped because employees who handle the grants have been furloughed. Tens of thousands of private sector workers have been affected.

The agency has a budget of more than $16 billion this year and employs 47,000 people. Air traffic controllers have remained on the job. Administration officials have vowed that safety won't be compromised and travelers won't be inconvenienced.

But FAA Administrator Randy Babbitt revealed Monday that airport safety inspectors nationwide have been working without pay and shouldering travel expenses themselves since the shutdown began.

Birth Control

Social and religious conservatives objected to the birth control mandate, saying a conscience exception unveiled by the administration is insufficient.

Sebelius acted after a near-unanimous recommendation last month from a panel of experts at the prestigious Institute of Medicine, which advises the government. Panel chairwoman Linda Rosenstock, dean of public health at the University of California, Los Angeles, said that prevention of unintended pregnancies is essential for the psychological, emotional and physical health of women.

"Over a span of generations from grandmothers to granddaughters, we have come from birth control being a hope and a wish — and almost luck — to being recognized as a part of health care that improves women's health," said Cynthia Pearson of the National Women's Health Network, a group supporting the change.

Some public health experts predicted the change will promote the use of costlier long-acting contraceptives, such as hormonal implants. More reliable than the pill, they are gaining popularity in other economically advanced countries.

As recently as the 1990s, many health insurance plans didn't even cover birth control. Protests, court cases, and new state laws led to dramatic changes. Today, almost all plans cover prescription contraceptives — with varying copays. Medicaid, the health care program for low-income people, also covers birth control.

A government study last summer found that birth control use is virtually universal in the United States. Still, about half of all pregnancies are unplanned. Many are among women using some form of contraception, and forgetting to take the pill is a major reason.

Preventing unwanted pregnancies is only one goal of the new requirement.

Contraception can help make a woman's next pregnancy healthier by spacing births far enough apart, generally 18 months to two years. Research links closely spaced births to a risk of prematurity, low birth weight, even autism. Other research has shown that even modest copays for medical care can discourage use.

In a nod to social and religious conservatives, the rules issued Monday by Sebelius include a provision that would allow religious institutions to opt out of offering birth control coverage. However, many conservatives are supporting legislation by Rep. Jeff Fortenberry, R-Neb., that would codify a range of exceptions to the new health care law on religious and conscience grounds.

"It's a step in the right direction, but it's not enough," said Jeanne Monahan, a policy expert for the conservative Family Research Council. The conscience clause offers only a "fig leaf" of protection, she added, because it may not cover all faith-based organizations.

Highlights of the Pending Debt Deal

TRIBUNE WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON • The complex debt-ceiling and deficit-reduction agreement includes the following highlights:

- If Congress approves it, the compromise would raise the government's borrowing limit in stages by at least $2.1 trillion and up to $2.4 trillion, while providing a dollar-for-dollar exchange in spending cuts. The package would resolve the issue until 2013, after the presidential election.

- The framework of the deal cuts spending more than it increases borrowing authority and does not raise taxes. It also protects several programs from cuts, including Social Security, Medicaid, veterans' benefits and pensions, civil and military pay, and programs for women, infants and children. Medicare would be cut no more than 2 percent, with the cuts falling on payments to doctors, hospitals and other providers of medical services.

- Passage of the proposal would give President Barack Obama authority to immediately increase the debt by $400 billion. It also establishes procedures to raise the debt ceiling by an additional $500 billion as soon as September for a total of $900 billion.

- The initial increases are offset by $917 billion in spending cuts through caps on discretionary spending through 2021.

- The subsequent increase would be $1.2 trillion to $1.5 trillion, depending on the work of a 12-member bipartisan congressional committee, which will identify future deficit reductions that are approved by Congress and the president.

- The joint committee, six Democrats and six Republicans, is charged with making a recommendation on further deficit reductions by Nov. 23 and can consider tax reform as well as cuts in spending. If the committee produces a proposal, it is guaranteed an up-or-down vote in both chambers of Congress, without amendments, by Dec. 23. But even if Congress approves it, the president retains veto power.

- Actions taken by the joint committee could trigger several potential scenarios:

1. If the bipartisan committee agrees on at least $1.5 trillion in deficit reductions and the legislation is enacted by Congress, the debt ceiling will rise by $1.5 trillion.

2. If the total is between $1.2 trillion and $1.5 trillion, the debt limit increases dollar for dollar.

3. If the amount is less than $1.2 trillion or the committee gridlocks and cannot agree on a proposal, it will trigger a debt ceiling increase of $1.2 trillion and across-the-board cuts totaling the same amount. Those cuts would be split 50-50 between defense and non-defense spending, with the exception of the programs listed above that would be shielded from cuts.

- The deal also requires that the House of Representatives and the Senate vote before the end of 2011 on a joint resolution proposing a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, though passage is not required. However, if such an amendment passed, the second $1.5 trillion debt ceiling would be authorized.

ANALYSIS

BY BEN FELLER and CHARLES BABINGTON

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • It took the threat of economic calamity to force Congress and President Barack Obama to finally reach a debt deal. Just like it took a near government shutdown to compel them to strike a budget agreement in April. And the prospect of an unpopular tax hike at the start of the year to force them to compromise in December.

So what have we learned from the default crisis? Expect more to come, America.

The same messy forces of divisive politics, decisions-on-deadline and vastly differing visions for the country will apply to the two overlapping stories barreling in on everyone. The first is the 2012 campaign, in which the White House and Congress are on the line. The second is the coming period of governing in which the debt fight will only get harder.

In the least, one lesson for the next year and a half is that the government can work when it absolutely has to do so. The deal moving through Congress gives the country enough borrowing power to pay all its bills come Wednesday morning, cuts spending and sets in motion a vote on broader deficit reduction this year.

Yet to expect more — say, a bipartisan jobs agenda — is a real reach before the next election. And oh, what a mess to get this far.

Washington always has stalemates, but this one brought the country to the brink of defaulting for the first time in history.

By the end, Obama found it more effective to plead with the public to lobby lawmakers through Twitter than to negotiate with them.

No leader emerged talking about how this all built trust between these two branches of government. It was more like an endurance contest that left much of the world in disbelief.

A Pew Research Center poll out Monday found that most Americans of all political persuasions found the default fight to be ridiculous.

Tom Teska, a 52-year-old data analyst in Chicago, captured the sentiment of many on Monday when he said the fight in Congress will hurt Democrats and Republicans alike come election time. "They're all going to have a hard time recovering from this," he said.

The standoff revealed that the Republicans, despite controlling just half of Congress, exert enormous influence over what gets done and what does not. They were unyielding in insisting on spending cuts, even above the amount the debt limit would be increased, a condition never before attached.

Obama wanted tax increases on wealthy Americans to be part of the deal but the Republicans refused to go along, and the president relented. Obama, though, achieved his final bottom line, winning an assurance the country would not have to endure the same mess or the threat of default until at least after the 2012 election.

In essence, it was another forced compromise for both sides, not a willing one, which is how the pattern is sure to continue.

The debacle also said something about the country itself.

People want less squabbling from their elected leaders. Yet many times they vote in ways that practically ensure it, by ousting moderates in party primaries and electing, in some cases, candidates who proudly say they will not compromise.

And what about those millions of missing jobs? All

Debt Deal Would Have Little Impact on Economy Till 2014

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The deal reached by Congress to raise the debt ceiling and cut more than $2 trillion in public spending should have only a minor impact on the economy for the next two years.

Almost all the cuts would be made in 2014 or beyond. The approach heeds a warning by Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke and many private economists: Cutting too much too soon could harm the weak economic recovery.

Yet the deal won't do much to help the economy, either, at least in the short term, economists said.

Under the debt deal, discretionary spending, which excludes Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, would be cut $21 billion in 2012 and $42 billion in 2013, according to an analysis by the Congressional Budget Office.

Combined, those cuts come to less than 1 percent of the nation's $14 trillion economy. The impact "should be relatively minor," says Brian Gardner, senior vice president at Keefe, Bruyette and Wood, an investment bank.

The spending cuts would increase to $75 billion in 2015 and $156 billion in 2021, the CBO estimates.

Overall, the first phase of cuts would reduce spending by $917 billion over 10 years.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A congressional committee would decide on a second phase of cuts totaling $1.5 trillion.

Reduced government spending could mean less money for highway construction, housing assistance, government-sponsored scientific research or any number of other federal programs.

Companies that work on Defense Department contracts could suffer, too. The stocks of Lockheed Martin Corp., General Dynamics Corp. and Raytheon Co. all sank about 1 percent Monday.

If lawmakers fail to reach a deal on a second round of cuts, the Pentagon's budget would be cut automatically by about $500 billion. That measure is designed as a threat, to make sure congressional negotiators have strong incentives to compromise.

Delaying the deepest cuts buys time for the economy to recover. Right now, it can't absorb shocks very well: Unemployment is still 9.2 percent, people are spending less, worker pay has stagnated, and economic growth is the slowest since the end of the recession in June 2009.

Worries about the economy, including the weakest manufacturing in two years, were one reason the stock market couldn't sustain a rally after the debt deal was struck. The market was flat Monday.

The Federal Reserve meets next week. Economists will watch for any signals that the Fed is considering new steps to help the economy, such as re-investing its government bond holdings indefinitely to keep interest rates down.

Fine Print in Debt Deal Scares Defense Hawks

BY JASON UKMAN

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • The fine print in the deal to raise the debt limit scares the daylights out of defense hawks — and even some middle-of-the-roads on Pentagon spending — and not without reason.

Here's how it's supposed to work: Assuming passage of the first round of spending cuts, a joint bipartisan committee will set to work on recommendations for a second round, negotiating for about four months before reporting back. If the committee reaches agreement, great. If it doesn't, a "trigger" mechanism kicks in.

And that trigger mechanism would force automatic across-the-board cuts of $1.2 trillion to agency budgets over the next decade, split half and half between domestic programs and defense.

To put that $600 billion in perspective, it's worth noting that the federal government was already looking at reducing projected spending on national security by about $400 billion over the next 12 years. That has prompted the Pentagon to initiate a "comprehensive review" of its spending and, in doing so, to confront huge questions about how to trim costs while recalibrating the military's ambitions.

The question now is what even bigger cuts might mean.

Last week, Army Gen. Martin Dempsey, President Obama's nominee to be chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was asked at his confirmation hearing what a proposal to cut, say, $800 billion over the next decade would mean for military readiness.

sides say they care about that issue the most. Obama's re-election will likely be driven by it.

Yet another takeaway from this episode is that Washington is immersed in issues that target employment only indirectly: the size of the debt, the need to inject fairness into the tax system, the political will to reform Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security, the very role of government.

Obama said from the start he wanted to take on big deficit reform. But Republicans, particularly the boisterously conservative tea party-flank of the party, forced the issue by winning the 2010 elections. Regardless, the true test of leadership on the debt is coming soon.

Almost overlooked in the mad push to avoid a meltdown this week is what would have to happen by Christmas.

The debt legislation would force Congress to vote on up to $1.5 trillion in deficit reduction by Dec. 23, taking on tough issues that have proved elusive for decades. And if Congress fails to do so, it would have to live with about $1 trillion in automatic cuts both parties would hate, a built-in penalty intended as incentive.

So that action will frame up the next five months in Washington and set a crucial tone for the 2012 elections.

Campaign strategists say it's too early to know how the debt-ceiling issue will affect the mindset of voters.

Democrats are in serious danger of losing their 53-47 edge in the Senate in the 2012 elections. They have far more competitive seats to defend, including those in Missouri, Montana and Nebraska. In the House, it is conceivable Democrats could regain control, but it would take a big wave election in their favor.

"Based on the difficulty of achieving the $400 billion cut, I — I believe $800 billion would be extraordinarily difficult and very high risk," Dempsey replied.

And, indeed, defense hawks do see something approaching apocalypse.

"While the trigger mechanism comes into play only if the Congressional negotiators fail to reach agreement on the second phase of spending cuts, it verges on catastrophe to take such a national security risk," John Bolton, ambassador to the United Nations under President George W. Bush and now a senior fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, wrote even before Sunday night's deal was done.

There are some defense experts who don't see the situation as quite that bleak. Even if it would mean a reduction in personnel, that reduction would come as the war in Afghanistan winds down. And spending reductions overall would represent a much smaller percentage decline than the Pentagon undertook at the end of the Cold War.

"It's not like it would be whacking America's defense budget to the bone," Gordon Adams, who oversaw national-security budgets for the Clinton White House, told The Post this month, when the Pentagon was already bracing itself for cuts exceeding $400 billion.

The hope among many at the Defense Department — and on Capitol Hill — is that the joint bipartisan committee can strike a deal that spreads around the pain just enough to win agreement, and that the Pentagon won't end up bearing an outsized burden.

Scentsy to match up to $300,000 of Idaho Foodbank donations this month

TIMES-NEWS

The Idaho Foodbank will receive up to $300,000 in matching funds provided by the Meridian-based Scentsy company for donations it receives this month. It's the largest matching campaign in the 27-year history of the Idaho Foodbank, which provides meal assistance to thousands of Idahoans per year. The Halt the Hunger campaign seeks to provide 1.8 million meals for struggling Idahoans, and Scentsy will match up to $300,000 in new donations to the food bank. According to a press release, donations to the food bank historically decline in the summer. For more information on the program, or to donate, visit www.haltthehunger.com.

Manufacturing Growth Hits Lowest Level in 2 Years

BY DANIEL WAGNER
AP Business Writer

WASHINGTON • Manufacturers had their weakest growth in two years in July, a sign that the economy could weaken this summer. The Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing executives, said Monday that its index of manufacturing activity fell to 50.9 percent in July from 55.3 percent in June. The reading was the lowest since July 2009 — one month after the recession officially ended. Any level above 50 indicates growth. The manufacturing sector has expanded for 23 straight months.

New orders shrank for the first time since the recession ended. Companies slashed their inventories after building them up in June. Output, employment, and prices paid by manufacturers all grew more slowly in July. The disappointing report on manufacturing is the first major reading on how the economy performed in July. It suggests the dismal economic growth in the first half of the year could extend into the July-September quarter. “The ISM manufacturing report for July is a shocker and strongly suggests that the disappointing performance of the economy in the first half of the year was not just temporary,” said Paul Dales, a senior U.S. economist for Capital Economics. The news of weak factory growth in July also cooled what looked to be a strong day on Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average had risen nearly 140 points in the first half-hour of trading, after President Barack Obama and lawmakers announced a deal to raise the nation's borrowing limit. But the Dow erased all of those gains after the manufacturing report was released, and then fell another 145 points. It later pared most of the day's losses to close 11 points down. The Commerce Department said builders began work on more projects in June, pushing construction spending higher. Construction spending rose 0.2 percent in June, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $772.3 billion, the government said. But even with the gains, spending remains slightly above an 11-year low hit in March and is just half of the $1.5 trillion pace considered healthy by most economists. The economy expanded at a dismal 1.3 percent annual rate in the April-June period after an even worse 0.4 percent increase in the first three months of the year, the government said Friday.

New Owners Preparing Myspace for a Remodel

BY ANDREW KHOURI
Los Angeles Times

Just a week after acquiring Myspace, Orange County, Calif., brothers Tim and Chris Vanderhook strolled through the firm's Beverly Hills headquarters and settled into a corner office with a stunning view of the Hollywood Hills. It could not have been a better backdrop for the duo who see Myspace's future in Justin Timberlake, Hollywood producers and rock bands.

“We are going to make Myspace cool again,” said Tim, the chief executive of Specific Media. The little-known online advertising company from Irvine, Calif., paid $35 million for Myspace, once the world's largest social network worth $65 billion. The purchase threw the brothers onto the national stage. But as the Vanderhooks settle into their new digs, analysts are questioning how the brothers can resuscitate a business that has been spiraling downward for years.

“I see a long, steady death for MySpace,” social media analyst Shel Israel of SI Associates said. Myspace, like other older Internet companies, he said, “failed to listen to their users and missed fundamental changes in the marketplace.” The Vanderhook brothers insist they can return Myspace to glory.

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 2, the 214th day of 2011. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 2, 1876, frontiersman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot and killed while playing poker at a saloon in Deadwood, Dakota Territory, by Jack McCall, who was later hanged. (Legend holds that Hickok died holding a pair of aces and a pair of eights, now known in poker parlance as "the Dead Man's Hand.")

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1610, during his fourth voyage to the Western Hemisphere, English explorer Henry Hudson sailed into what is now known as Hudson Bay.

In 1776, members of the Continental Congress began attaching their signatures to the Declaration of Independence.

In 1909, the original Lincoln "wheat" penny first went into circulation, replacing the "Indian Head" cent.

In 1921, a jury in Chicago acquitted several former members of the Chicago White Sox baseball team and two others of conspiring to defraud the public in the notorious "Black Sox" scandal. Opera singer Enrico Caruso, 48, died in Naples, Italy.

In 1923, the 29th president of the United States, Warren G. Harding, died in San Francisco; Vice President Calvin Coolidge became president.

In 1934, German President Paul von Hindenburg died, paving the way for Adolf Hitler's complete takeover.

In 1943, during World War II, Navy boat PT-109, commanded by Lt. John F. Kennedy, sank after being rammed by the Japanese destroyer Amagiri off the Solomon Islands.

In 1974, former White House counsel John W. Dean III was sentenced to one to four years in prison for obstruction of justice in the Watergate coverup. (Dean ended up serving four months.)

In 1985, 135 people were killed when a Delta Air Lines jetliner crashed while attempting to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

In 1990, Iraq invaded Kuwait, seizing control of the oil-rich emirate. (The Iraqis were later driven out in Operation Desert Storm.)

Ten years ago: The Yugoslav war crimes tribunal handed down its first conviction for genocide, finding a Bosnian Serb general (Radislav Krstic) guilty of the deaths of up to 8,000 Muslims. (He's serving a 35-year prison term.) Solid Democratic opposition sank President George W. Bush's nomination of Mary Sheila Gall to be chairwoman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Ron Townson, the centerpiece singer for the pop group the 5th Dimension, died in Las Vegas at age 68.

Five years ago: Five days after being pulled over by police, actor-director Mel Gibson was charged with misdemeanor drunken driving, having an elevated blood-alcohol level and having an open container of liquor in his car. (Gibson later pleaded no contest to drunken driving under a deal in which he received three years' probation, paid a fine and agreed to attend alcohol rehabilitation classes.)

One year ago: President Barack Obama, addressing the Disabled American Veterans in Atlanta, said the U.S. would leave Iraq "as promised and on schedule," portraying the end of America's combat role in the 7-year war as a personal promise kept. Actress Lindsay Lohan was released from a Los Angeles jail after serving 14 days of a 90-day sentence for violating her probation in a 2007 drug case. The Washington Post Co. announced that billionaire Sidney Harman would buy Newsweek for $1 and assume the magazine's debts.

IF AUGUST 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next six to eight weeks, you can relax and enjoy social contacts and community gatherings. You might take this too far, however, and let yourself be distracted from pursuing your own personal ambitions. The time for getting career, job and finances in shape could be the last half of October, but in November don't go chasing after the proverbial wild geese. Next February might be a good time to change jobs or make major financial decisions. Amorous dreams could come true in April or June, so put relationships at the top of your list or take a long-awaited vacation.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Break free from the lack of financial security by squeezing those pennies. Use your imagination or the latest technologies to create savings. As Ben Franklin said, "A penny saved is a penny earned."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Originality, as well as orderliness, is next to godliness. It is possible to be neat and efficient without losing your utter uniqueness. You may be the current that illuminates the light bulb in someone's brain.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The moving finger writes – and, having writ, moves on. A secret is no longer a secret once shared. You take confidentiality more seriously than usual and may find significance in a casual conversation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not all who wander are lost. You might have the urge to help someone who doesn't actually need help. Get your sympathies under control before you embarrass yourself by overstepping boundaries.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People are trending back to natural sweeteners, and so should you. You don't need to apologize for being yourself. In the same vein, the greatest gift you can give to others is to allow them to be themselves.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Learn to filter out irrelevant information. You can process more than one single stream of facts at a time but must discriminate between what is worthy of attention and what is background noise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Perfection can be a passion. You are happiest when the t's are crossed and the desk is organized. Today, you might meet up with those who prefer the please-and-thank-you type of etiquette.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try some of the hair of the dog that bit you. The cure for a problem can be found if you locate the cause. A small blockage or setback is not likely to cause grief unless you refuse to face it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Delilah tricked Samson into a haircut or he would have remained a strongman and possibly have changed history. Don't let someone take advantage of your good nature when much is at stake.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sometimes you can fly by the seat of your pants and sometimes you can't. Listen when a little voice that says important matters should be planned carefully before taking irrevocable steps.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can keep the bad things out or keep the good things in. When you are overly protected and insulated from all potential dangers, however, you might feel as though you are in a prison cell.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love helps you fill spaces you didn't even know were empty. When you meet someone who fulfills a need you want that person in your life forever. Sometimes, however, that new person is not meant for always.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“There is nothing so well known as that we should not expect something for nothing — but we all do and call it Hope.”

— Edgar Howe

As South you make a slightly heavy pre-empt of four spades. (Many would bid this without a club honor.) So when dummy comes down with trump support and a near opening bid, your partner will feel very disappointed if you cannot find a way to 10 tricks. Of course, if the red aces are poorly placed, you may be doomed — but you should focus on the circumstances you can control, not the ones you can't.

You win West's club lead in hand and play a top trump, discovering the 3-0 break. You now realize that you no longer have a sure entry to dummy in the trump suit. What should you do next?

It looks logical to play a heart, and West starts an echo to show an even number, allowing East to take the trick. Back comes the club king, and the natural play is to ruff and try the spade nine. If East wins, you can use the spade 10 as an entry to dummy. But a sly East will duck, and now you will find that you need the diamond ace onside — unlucky!

Maybe a better plan is to duck the club king, pitching a diamond. Unless East started with a singleton diamond, whatever he returns will let you reach dummy to discard two of your diamonds on dummy's hearts.

The diamond finesse is a 50-50 shot; the chance of a bad diamond break is far smaller, even given the bad trump break.

ANSWER: Your partner's call of one spade shows at least five (with only four he would have started with a negative double); nonetheless, you should rebid one no-trump. With a completely balanced hand and a decent heart stop, you want to convey your hand-type as accurately as possible; with a side-suit doubleton, a spade raise would be fine.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to respond to “Old Mama in Washington State” (June 1), whose pregnancy at 40 is unwelcome to her husband and two teens. My parents had a “bonus baby” when they were in their early 40s. I was 17 and my brother was 13 when we found out. It was hard for us to accept at first. I was grossed out by the idea of my parents having sex, and I was afraid people would think the baby was mine after she was born. All our worries disappeared when we first laid eyes on our baby sister. I love her to death, and she is lucky to have my brother as her protector. It was a good thing that we were nearly 18 years apart, because I got the benefits of a sister without having to share a room! Now, at 12, she's a fabulous friend to my 8-year-old and will soon be big enough to baby-sit the 4-year-old and the baby.

I'm sure “Mama's” family will become more accepting over time. When they see that baby, they'll know their family is finally complete.

— PROUD BIG SISTER

IN CHICAGO

DEAR BIG SISTER: Thank you for writing. I received a mountain of mail in response to that letter. Readers were enthusiastic in expressing their firsthand experiences being families with unexpected pregnancies. Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I was pregnant with twins at 45 and my then-18-year-old daughter was furious with me, going as far as banning me from her high school graduation. It hurt, and I agonized over the decision, but in the end I waddled in anyway. I'm so glad I did. Fast-forward: The twins are almost 3 now, and they worship their older sister and brother, and the feeling is mutual. As soon as “Mama's” husband sees the baby, I'm sure he'll be over the moon as well. Yes, the future looks exhausting, but it's well worth it. This time around you'll have so much more patience and wisdom — and you'll pick your battles more wisely.

— BEEN THERE, DONE THAT

DEAR ABBY: I have to agree with “Mama's” family. Pregnant at 40 is not a miracle, and she's deluded to think so. I was born when my mother was 42. I'm 16 years younger than my oldest sibling, and all my cousins are older. It is hard growing up with no siblings to play with and no cousins to really talk to because they're all in high school and don't want a “kid” tagging along. I felt unwanted most of my childhood. It gets better for a while, but then you watch your parents age and die. I didn't have the kind of relationship with my grandparents that my siblings did. And because I was born so many years behind everyone, I missed out on most of the fun family times.

Please tell “Mama” not to take it personally, to be sure her new addition is paid attention to and assured that he/she is much loved and wanted.

— UNEXPECTED

SURPRISE IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I was 42, with children ages 12 and 17, when we were surprised by an unplanned pregnancy. We were concerned, of course, with the statistics for a complicated pregnancy, so we had the testing done and trusted that everything would be OK. My pregnancy and delivery were the best of all three, and my little girl has been a blessing to everyone. She's now 13, and living with a teenager when you're in your 50s is a surefire way to stave off dementia. You have to stay on your toes, and we thank God that he chose to send us one last bundle of joy. “Mama,” don't let the resentment of your family steal your happiness. They will either have a change of heart or not, but that baby will be loved, because she has a mom with a lot of experience.

— ANOTHER OLD MOM IN RICHMOND

Twin Falls Soccer Player Claims National Title

Twin Falls High School junior-to-be Claire Goss and SuperNova Elite, out of Meridian, picked up their second national tournament championship of the summer on Monday, beating Virginia's DC Elite 2-1 in the 16U Super Group championship match at the U.S. Soccer National Cup in Meridian. The team went 2-0-1 in preliminary play, finishing tied with FC Portland (Ore.) atop their group. All tiebreaking criteria failed to separate the two teams, so a penalty shootout was staged to determine the group's representative in the final, and SuperNova Elite advanced 4-3. SuperNova Elite won the U.S. Youth Soccer President's Cup last month, where Goss scored the winner in extra time of the championship match. On Monday she played wingback, drawing the primary role of marking one of DC Elite's top forwards, according to father and Wendell boys coach Jon Goss.

Moss Waves Goodbye

Randy Moss is calling it a career after 13 seasons in the NFL as one of the most dynamic and polarizing players the league has ever seen. Moss's agent, Joel Segal, said Monday that the receiver was considering offers from several teams, but made the decision to retire. Segal declined to comment specifically on the offers, instead saying his 34-year-old client felt the time was right to step away.

Sharpe Has Grandma to Thank

As the longtime Denver Broncos star tight end enters the Pro Football Hall of Fame this weekend, he owes many people for making him into a legendary player. But he owes one for making him a man.

DENVER (AP) • Shannon Sharpe grew up under a leaky tin roof in a tiny house in rural Georgia overflowing with relatives and love. He overcame his hard-scrabble childhood to become one of the greatest tight ends in NFL history.

When he's inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday, he'll thank his brother Sterling, who motivated him; Dan Reeves, who drafted him; Albert Lewis, who challenged him; John Elway, who believed in him; and Mike Shanahan, who pushed him.

He said he owed his biggest debt of gratitude to his grandmother, Mary Porter, who raised him, and who died July 6 at age 89, one month shy of his induction ceremony.

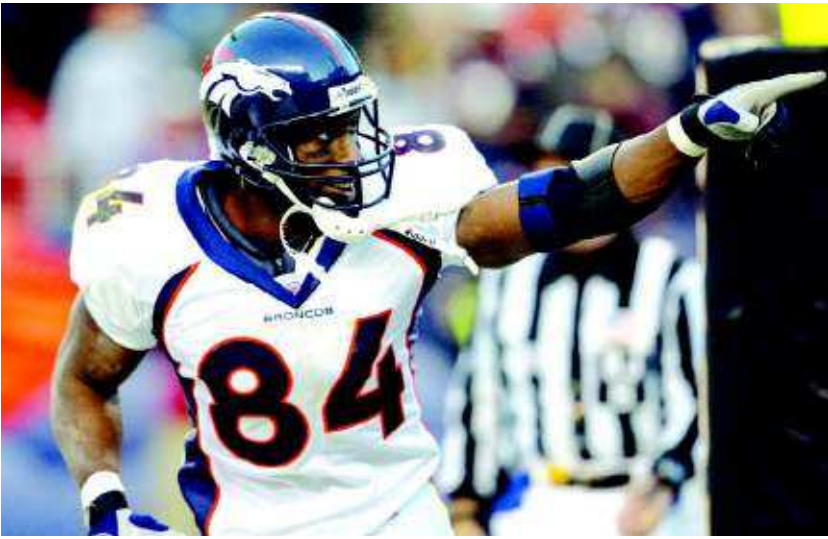

Sharpe so badly wanted to be a first-ballot Hall of Famer before diabetes finished ravaging his grandmother's body, but he said he now saw it as a blessing that he didn't get to Canton, Ohio, until his third year of eligibility.

"She's going to be able to hear my speech now," Sharpe said. "She's going to be able to hear me talk about her."

As usual, he'll have plenty to say.

"My grandmother didn't teach me how to throw a ball. She didn't teach me how to catch a ball. She didn't teach me technique, how to run fast," Sharpe said. "She didn't teach me anything about sports. She taught me how to be a man."

Raising him on her own after her husband died of a heart attack in 1977, Longtime Denver Broncos tight end Shannon Sharpe will be enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday.

Porter instilled in Sharpe a relentless work ethic that he would combine with an uncanny mix of size and speed to revolutionize the tight end position in the NFL.

Sharpe caught 815 passes for 10,060 yards and 62 touchdowns during his 14-year career that included eight Pro Bowl berths, four first-team All-Pro honors and three Super Bowl titles over a four-year span, two in Denver and one in Baltimore.

Sharpe "set the standard" at his position, Hall of Fame tight end Ozzie Newsome said.

"The best," agreed Shanahan. "Shannon was the best at what he did, no question. He dominated. His work ethic was at the top. He played his best in big games, and he did it all over a long period of time."

Broncos safety Brian Dawkins said

Sharpe's most notable attribute was "his desire to block. He was a tight end that would stick his face in there."

And then run his mouth.

"Let's just say he was one of the best trash-talkers to ever play the game," Dawkins said.

Sharpe will be presented by his older brother Sterling, the former Green Bay star receiver whose own path to Canton was cut short by a neck injury. Sharpe gave his first Super Bowl ring to Sterling, who averaged 85 catches in his seven seasons — 10 more than Jerry Rice averaged in his first seven years.

"Sterling was supposed to be in the Hall first," Sharpe said. "I was supposed to introduce him for his speech, for his introduction and then take his bronze bust into the Hall."

"But now we're going in together. I'm taking him in with me."

Klinsmann: U.S. 'Quite a Long Way Away'

NEW YORK (AP) • Jürgen Klinsmann sometimes sounds more like a youth development director for U.S. Soccer than the new men's national team coach.

The former Germany player and coach was introduced Monday, and he spent much of the time talking about how to mold future American stars, not managing current ones.

"It all starts down to develop the next Landon Donovan," Klinsmann said of the United States one day contending for World Cup titles.

And "one day" is the key phrase; he believes "we still are quite a long way away from that."

"You need maybe 10 Landon Donovans at different positions with different characteristics in order to one day be there," Klinsmann said in an interview.

Perhaps it's partly a way to temper expectations as he takes over from Bob Bradley, whose firing was announced Thursday. The U.S. reached the round of 16 at last year's World Cup, but blew a two-goal lead in a Gold Cup final loss to Mexico in June.

Still, Klinsmann makes it clear he views his charge as bigger than just preparing Donovan and his teammates for major tournaments.

"It also is vital I am involved in all the discussions with a lot of coaches out there, how we improve the grass-roots level," Klinsmann said. "I'm fascinated by that approach."

He contends his background of international experience plus American savvy is the perfect blend to accomplish that. He won a World Cup title as a player and starred for elite European clubs, then coached Germany to a third-place finish at the 2006 World Cup.

But he has also lived in the United States for 13 years and sounds right at home talking about Oakland A's general manager Billy Beane's statistical analysis of baseball.

"I'm not coming in here to play the European guy,"

Klinsmann said. His wife is American and he concedes his two soccer-playing kids consider themselves more American than German. Klinsmann feels fluent in his adopted country's culture, that he'll know which parts of the European system will work here and what must be uniquely American.

"It took me years to understand how important this whole education path for people is in this country," said Klinsmann, who just turned 47.

That means college soccer will remain a piece of the development pipeline, as different as that is from other countries. Klinsmann plans to consult with college coaches as he hones his approach. He repeatedly mentioned MLS teams' growing youth academies as hugely positive development. And he can influence the future of American soccer in a more indirect way, as well. The marketing and success of the national team have the power to inspire young players to spend more time working on their sport.

If there's one area Klinsmann fears the United States lags behind the rest of the world, it's in the amount of time kids spend kicking the ball around — especially on their own. Basketball has a thriving pick-up culture in America; soccer doesn't.

"That has been the difference even on the highest level when you have a men's national team," Klinsmann said. "What are their technical capabilities? What is their vision on the field? What is their spontaneous decisions — are they making the right calls? Can they deal with emotions on the field?"

Then there's the puzzle of adopting a universal style of play in the U.S. In soccer powers, there's an identity all the way from the national team down to kids first kicking a ball.

"You have such a melting pot in this country," Klinsmann said, "so many different opinions and ideas floating out there."

NBA Labor Talks Short on Optimism

NEW YORK (AP) • David Stern returned to the bargaining table Monday and said "nothing" gave him reason for encouragement.

And for that, the NBA Commissioner pointed the blame in one place.

"I don't feel optimistic about the players' willingness to engage in a serious way," Stern said.

So the first meeting to include leadership from owners and players since the lockout began exactly a

Phils Stun Rockies With Late Homers

Colorado led 3-1 with two outs in the ninth, but a home run tied it and then another won it for Philadelphia in the 10th.

DENVER • Pinch-hitter John Mayberry Jr. hit a game-tying two-run homer in the ninth inning and Shane Victorino homered to lead off the 10th as the Philadelphia Phillies overtook the Colorado Rockies 4-3 on Monday night for their fourth straight win.

Down to their last out and trailing 3-1 in the ninth, the Phillies rallied against Rockies closer Huston Street. Carlos Ruiz hit a two-out double and Mayberry pinch-hit for reliever Michael Stutes.

Mayberry worked the count full before putting Street's 83 mph slider into the bleachers in left for his seventh homer.

It was Mayberry's first pinch-homer of the year and the third of his career. It was the third pinch-homer by the Phillies this season.

Rex Brothers (1-2) came on to pitch the 10th and Victorino greeted him with a drive clearing the wall in left for the Phillies' 29th come-from-behind victory this season.

Nationals 5, Braves 3

WASHINGTON • Rick Ankiel hit two home runs, and Livan Hernandez allowed one run over six innings and drove in a run.

Cubs 5, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH • Starlin Castro had three hits and Carlos Zambrano survived six choppy innings as the Chicago Cubs spoiled slugger Derrek Lee's two-homer debut with his new team.

Marlins 7, Mets 3, 10 innings

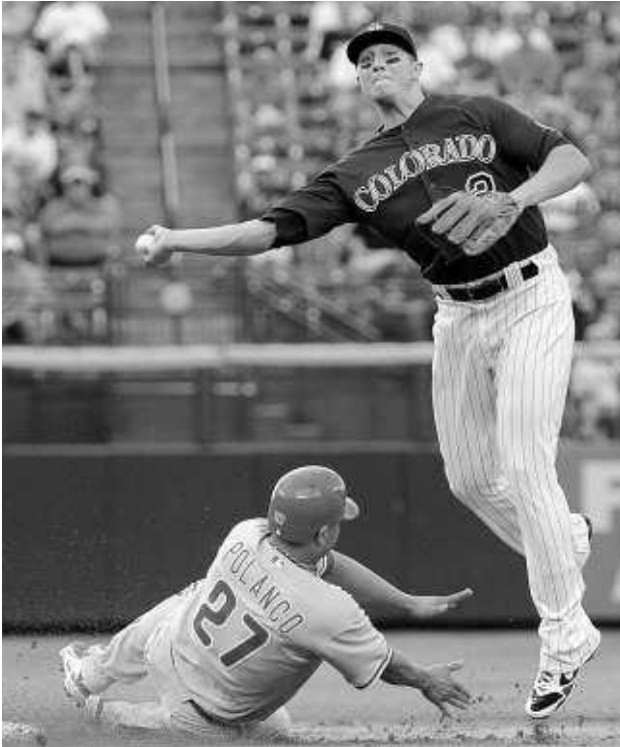

NEW YORK • Mike Stanton hit a grand slam in the 10th inning and the Florida Marlins quickly recovered from Lucas Duda's tying homer with two outs in the ninth.

Brewers 6, Cardinals 2

MILWAUKEE • Nyjer Morgan hit a go-ahead, three-run double and the surging Milwaukee Brewers scored five runs in the fifth inning off Cardinals ace Chris Carpenter.

Astros 4, Reds 3, 10 innings

HOUSTON • Rookie Jose Altuve drove in a run on a fielder's choice in the 10th inning to lift the new-look Houston Astros.

Colorado Rockies shortstop Troy Tulowitzki, right, avoids the slide by Philadelphia Phillies infielder Placido Polanco to throw to first and turn a double play during the second inning of Monday's game in Denver.

American League Yankees 3, White Sox 2

CHICAGO • CC Sabathia pitched eight strong innings to earn his major league-best 16th win and the New York Yankees got their fourth consecutive victory.

Indians 9, Red Sox 6

BOSTON • Asdrubal Cabrera's second two-run homer of the game, originally ruled a single off the short wall in right field and overturned by replay review, broke an eighth-inning tie and lifted Cleveland past Boston.

A's Owner Calls for Quick Sale of Dodgers

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) • Oakland Athletics owner Lew Wolff is hopeful that Frank McCourt will soon sell the financially troubled Los Angeles Dodgers so baseball can move forward from the sticky situation.

Wolff, a successful retail developer based in L.A., told The Associated Press on Monday he spoke out publicly on the topic in support of Commissioner Bud Selig, a longtime friend and former fraternity brother at Wisconsin. Wolff first discussed his thoughts in an interview with the Los Angeles Times.

"For the good of baseball, I sense that all of us would like to get the Dodger situation behind us for everybody's benefit," Wolff said in a phone interview with the AP on Monday. "I was prompted to do this because of the attorney accusing Bud Selig of taking more money. Bud has been a friend of mine for 50 years. It's just not fair. I was just upset."

The Dodgers filed for bankruptcy protection in June, about two months after Major League Baseball assumed control of the club's day-to-day operations. McCourt blamed a cash-flow crisis on MLB's refusal to approve a multi-billion-dollar TV deal McCourt was counting on to keep the franchise afloat.

Selig expressed concern about McCourt using that money toward his "personal needs" in the wake of losing control of the team and the owner's bitter divorce from Jamie McCourt.

Prosecutors: Suspect Kicked Injured Giants Fan

LOS ANGELES (AP) • The brawling began soon after the Dodgers beat the rival San Francisco Giants on opening day, and ended with a paramedic on the ground with a brain injury.

Newly released details in the attack that outraged baseball fans across the nation indicate that suspects Louie Sanchez and Marvin Norwood initially went after a group of young Giants fans in the stadium parking lot, with Sanchez taking a swing at one of them.

Detectives think he may have hit other fans in the same group, though no one else has come forward.

Then, Bryan Stow and a group of friends walked past as Sanchez stood by his sister's car. Sanchez hit two of them before chasing down Stow and punching him from behind in the side of his head, prosecutors said in a court document filed Monday.

"Stow's friends, who are paramedics, describe that Stow immediately lost consciousness and fell sideways to the ground without breaking his fall," the document states. "When Stow's head hit the ground witnesses heard his head impact the concrete and saw it bounce."

Sanchez then kicked the unconscious Stow several times in the head while Stow's friends tried to shield him with their bodies, prosecutors said.

Norwood is also accused of kicking Stow then standing over his prone body and saying, "Who else wants to fight?"

The document, filed as part of a bail reduction hearing for Sanchez, provided the fullest account yet of the attack that left Stow near death and has kept him hospitalized for four months.

NBA

month ago produced nothing new — except blame.

A downcast Stern, who long maintained he was optimistic during this collective bargaining process, said that was no longer the case. He added nothing had changed since the last meeting on June 30, hours before the old deal expired, and said he doesn't feel players are bargaining in good faith.

Players contend that although owners insist they are committed to making a deal, their proposals say otherwise.

Neither side offered a new one Monday, exactly three months before the Nov. 1 scheduled opening of the regular season that seems more in doubt than ever.

Stern and Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver were joined by San Antonio owner Peter Holt, who heads the labor relations committee, and Board of Governors chairman and Minnesota owner Glen Taylor represented ownership.

Players' association Executive Director Billy Hunter, and President Derek Fisher and Vice President Theo Ratliff, both of the Lakers, attended along with union attorneys.

"It's a tough position to be in," Fisher said. "I think Peter, Glen Taylor, Commissioner Stern, Adam Silver are articulating certain things in the room, expressing their desire to get a deal done, but where their proposal lies makes it hard to believe that."

"So we're continuing to try to work around what's been said and really focus on the deal on the table, and right now we're still a very, very long way from getting a deal done."

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY
"Every individual has the power to change his or her material or financial status by first changing the nature of his or her beliefs."

Three Stars to Enter U.S. Hockey Hall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris Chelios hasn't completely closed the door on a comeback.

Sure, the longtime NHL defenseman is 49 years old. And yes, he sat out all of last season. But pulling the plug on his playing days is something he just can't bring himself to do.

"I'm not going to ever say that," Chelios said with a chuckle.

His retirement last year did pave the way for this: Chelios was selected for induction into the United States Hockey Hall of Fame on Monday, joining former NHL stars Keith Tkachuk and Gary Suter.

Philadelphia Flyers founder and current owner Ed Snider and play-by-play announcer Mike "Doc" Emrick also were selected. The formal induction will take place this fall in Eveleth, Minn.

Chelios played 26 NHL seasons with Montreal, Chicago, Detroit and Atlanta. He left the NHL after the 2009-10 season as the all-time leader in games played by a defenseman (1,651). He also was part of three Stanley Cup championships.

Now, he's trying to figure out his next move. Chelios may throw himself into coaching or possibly a front-office role. He may even return to the ice.

"I'm trying to find my niche, what I want to do," Chelios said. "I'm going to remain with hockey for the rest of life — it's all I really know and love."

As an adviser for the Red Wings, Chelios has worked with some of the organization's up-and-coming defensemen. It's a role he's relishing.

"Nothing like being on the ice," said Chelios, whose two sons play for Michigan State. "Coaching is something I really enjoy."

Chelios has long been regarded as the godfather of U.S. hockey, partly for his sage wisdom but mostly since he's one of two male players to represent the team at four Winter Games.

"Just the way he carries himself both on and off the ice. It's something that makes a team better," Tkachuk said. "It was always about the team with Chris."

Security Tests Ongoing

Olympic security officials said Monday that testing is under way to ensure protection at the 2012 London Summer Games.

LONDON (AP) • Olympic security officials said Monday that testing is under way for the mammoth task of making the 2012 London Games safe — trials that include testing body scan machines, communications equipment, response time and extra closed-circuit security cameras.

Testing events have already begun to allow security officials to gauge how well they're able to communicate between venues and Scotland Yard's headquarters, as well as how quickly they feed important data into a government system of dealing with potential crises.

The next big testing cluster of events will start Saturday and end next week. Teams will be on hand to test communications equipment and other systems during such events as sailing and beach volleyball — events meant to test Olympic venues ahead of the games.

"There is a lot to be done; a lot to be tested," said Commander Bob Broadhurst, head of Scotland Yard's Olympics safety and security operation.

Thousands of extra closed-circuit cameras will be added to Olympic venues — Britain already has some of the most extensive surveillance powers in the world and has become a leader in what critics call "Big Brother" techniques with its more than 4.3 million CCTV cameras in operation.

Years ago, officials considered using special cameras equipped with eavesdropping microphones. Ultimately, however, the cameras were considered too intrusive and are no longer part

"of our main plan," according to Ian Johnston, director of security and resilience with the Olympic Organizing Committee.

Johnston wouldn't elaborate on other types of security gadgets and equipment being deployed for the games.

Authorities have identified 20 potential risks to the Olympics. The top four include terrorism, serious crime — specifically ticket fraud — protests and natural disasters such as floods or heat waves.

British authorities will also be on alert for cybersecurity breaches. The government is investing an extra 650 million pounds (about $1 billion) in the country's electronic defenses since it was identified as one of the country's major security risks.

Lulz Security, a hacking collective, has previously claimed hacks on major entertainment companies, FBI partner organizations and the CIA. Another group also claimed it hacked into NATO's computer system.

Security at the Olympics has been a critical issue ever since the 1972 Munich massacre, even more so after the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attacks. A day after London was awarded the games in 2005, suicide bombers attacked London's transport network, killing 52 people.

The British government is planning for the national terror threat to be "severe" during the Olympics, meaning an attempted attack is highly likely.

More than 300 screening points will be installed at Olympic venues. Officials hope the waiting time for spectators will be kept "within single digits," but say the time will largely depend on the venue and the crowds queuing for an event.

Spectators should expect the same type of screening as they encounter at airports — bags will be put through screening and people will need to walk past a screening point.

About 12,000 police officers will be on duty each day of the July 27-Aug. 12 games, which have a security budget of 475 million pounds ($770 million).

U.S. Files Preliminary Paperwork for 2020 Bid

LONDON (AP) • The United States and South Africa are among at least five countries that have filed preliminary paperwork required by the IOC ahead of any potential bids for the 2020 Olympics.

The U.S. and South African Olympic committees told The Associated Press on Monday that they submitted forms confirming compliance with rules of the World Anti-Doping Agency and Court of Arbitration for Sport.

The documents were filed before Saturday, the deadline set by the International Olympic Committee.

Italy, Japan and Spain also said they sent their forms. Turkey and Qatar would not confirm they filed the papers, but are believed to have done so.

The compliance forms are a new IOC requirement ahead of the formal bid process.

National Olympic Committees have until Sept. 1 to submit the names of any 2020 applicant cities to the IOC.

The IOC said it would not disclose which countries filed the compliance forms and would wait until Sept. 1 to confirm any bids.

The possibility of a U.S. or South Africa bid remains uncertain.

"We submitted compliance papers as a matter of protocol," USOC spokesman Patrick Sandusky said in an email. "We did not submit a city name along with them. We just signed them as the NOC."

Rome, Tokyo and Madrid have all formally declared their 2020 bids, while Istanbul is expected to announce its candidacy soon.

Doha, Qatar, is also a potential contender if the IOC approves a change in dates because of the searing summer temperatures in the Gulf city.

The USOC reiterated that it would not consider a bid unless and until it finalizes a new revenue-sharing deal with the IOC.

"At this point our focus is on completing our financial deal with the IOC and we are not currently considering a 2020 bid," Sandusky said.

The two sides reported significant progress in their latest revenue talks in New York on July 22 and said they hope to sign a final deal soon.

The dispute centers on the USOC's long-standing 20 percent cut of global sponsorship revenues and 12.75 share of U.S. broadcast rights deals. Many IOC and international sports officials consider the U.S. share excessive. Any new formula would take effect after 2020.

The U.S. hasn't hosted a Summer Olympics since the 1996 Atlanta Games. Among U.S. cities mentioned as potential bidders for 2020 include New York, Los Angeles, Dallas, Minneapolis and Tulsa, Okla.

South Africa announced in May that it would not bid for the 2020 Olympics, saying it had more pressing national priorities. Since then, however, Sports Minister Fikile Mbalula has sought to revive a bid. He is scheduled to petition the cabinet in the next week and a decision is expected around Aug. 10.
