State Vets New Water Calls

Two senior water users say their water rights have been harmed and the state hasn't done enough to fix a declining aquifer

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

The Idaho Department of Water Resources has scheduled a pre-hearing to consider recently filed water calls that could affect water availability in the Magic Valley. John W. Jones and SeaPac of Idaho submitted water calls on July 8, claiming area groundwater users with water rights dated later than theirs are infringing on their senior water use. In Idaho, water calls operate under a "first in time, first in right" system, where users with senior rights get first priority to fulfill the amount of water they're allotted. "The last thing I want to do is go to the court system, but by the same token, we have to protect our interest," said Ken Ashley, president of SeaPac, a Snake River fish farm. SeaPac holds water rights for 193 cubic feet per second from Thousand Springs; company officials argue they are only receiving a little more than 94 cfs. Jones holds water rights for a delivery of 73.05 cfs from Weatherby Springs,

Three Springs and Hoagland Tunnel. He claims he's receiving a little more than 32 cfs. The water calls will not affect a 2008 agreement in which area groundwater pumpers purchased 10 cfs of Pristine Springs, affecting a different chunk of SeaPac's operation. Ashley said IDWR has not addressed the depleting Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer. He says the diminishing water he receives has impaired his business. "We didn't want to have to make a water call, but I'm not seeing anyone come up with a better solution," he said. The decision now goes to IDWR

Why It Matters

A water call happens when a senior water right owner accuses owners of newer water rights of depriving them of the water they're due. If that's found to be true, junior water users are asked to reduce or discontinue their water usage so the senior user receives the water covered by its right. That process is called curtailment. Curtailing water can have a much broader impact on a community, as cities, businesses and farmers may be junior water users. Water calls can influence the cost and availability of water.

schedules through the coming week. Don't let Jerome County's strong agricultural roots fool you into thinking that the fair is only for dairymen eyeballing heifers for flaws. To be sure, agriculture and 4-H projects play valued roles, as always. But there's much, much more than that at this fair in the heart of Idaho's dairy country. Saturday night's demolition derby kicks off the fun in DePew Arena, which is expected to fill on Tuesday for the fair's well-attended annual night of pig wrestling. And on Aug. 12, the focus will turn from live beef to the grilled variety for a tri-tip steak cook-off. The annual carnival's also expected to get a boost with more rides provided through Brown's Amusements of Mesa, Ariz. The array of rides will include the Zipper and plenty others oriented toward children, such as bumper cars, said Danny Brown, the amusement company's co-owner. Just like the fair has more than farm animals, the fair's rodeo has more than bucking horses and unpredictable bulls. "We kind of created some momentum last year with some things," said Gary Warr, president of the fair's board. This year's rodeo will also include 15-minute performances of the Pro Tour FMX Motocross Show featuring daredevils on motorcycles doing flips and other assorted stunts. "These guys are going to get lots of air," Warr said. "It should be a good hit again." Warr said that many fairgoers who took in last year's motocross show appreciated the addition. "It also created an excitement factor at the end of the rodeo each night," Warr said. Don't forget Tuesday's 5 p.m. parade, either. It won't be a short one. So far, about 75 entries are scheduled to participate, said Kathleen Diederich, the fair manager. Ben Botkin may be reached at 735-3238.

Temporary workers clean up the Jerome County Fairgrounds on Thursday in preparation for Saturday's start to the Jerome County Fair. This year's fair will last through Aug. 13, and will feature a number of popular attractions including pig wrestling, rodeos, a demolition derby and motocross show.

Police Arrest Man for Trying to Pass Counterfeit Money

bguire@magicvalley.com

A Twin Falls man faces two counts of felony forgery for allegedly trying to buy a Big Mac with a phony $50 bill.

Lua

Twin Falls police say Alfredo Lua, 34, was at the drive-through window at the Addison Avenue McDonald's on Tuesday when a cashier became suspicious of his method of payment. Upon being interviewed by an officer, Lua claimed he received $200 in cash from WinCo Foods, where he cashed a check. The police report notes that WinCo has no record of cashing any checks from Lua.

The report states that Lua then claimed to have received the funny money from a friend he didn't know that well and wouldn't name. Lua did say that he spent another $50 at the Stinker gas station on Shoshone Street West. When police found that bill, they noted it had the same serial number as the McDonald's bill.

Lua was released on his own recognizance upon his first appearance in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Wednesday. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Aug. 12.

Twin Falls police say they've recovered approximately $400 in counterfeit money since mid-July — the bills range in denomination from $10 to $100 — along with items used to counterfeit legal U.S. currency, including a computer, printers, copiers and $1,400 in uncirculated or destroyed counterfeit money.

Police continue to investigate, as they believe more individuals are involved, and they urge citizens to call Officer Luke Allen at 735-7358 to report possible counterfeit money.

T.F. Commission Tables Livestock Ordinance

Officials say new fines would promote safety and enforcement, not target livestock production; six-month delay provides time for more feedback.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls County Commission voted Thursday to extend public comment on a proposed livestock control ordinance for six months so the sheriff's department can hear out more cattlemen and livestock owners. The ordinance would allow Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies to write citations to livestock owners whose animals get out onto public roads and private property. The fines — $50 per animal per day for a first violation, $100 for a second violation and a misdemeanor for a third violation in two years — worried some ranchers because of their severity. At a Thursday morning meeting that drew more people with a stake in the matter than the public hearing last week, Commissioner Terry Kramer, a Castleford farmer, said he realized it's the wrong time of year to gather input from ranchers and livestock owners. The season now is so busy that many professional livestock organizations, such as the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association, aren't holding regular meetings, he said. "The intent (of the ordinance) is a safety issue," Kramer said. "We want to make sure we don't have livestock on the roads and we want you to help us accomplish that." Commission Chairman George Urie said there will be at least one

They Got the Horse Right Here: Albion's Amazing Parke Family

In 2005, Caldwell's Gary Stevens — a jockey who had won three Kentucky Derbys, two Preaknesses and three Belmonts — retired after a 26-year career in the saddle.

That kind of longevity was unknown in Ivan and Burley Parkes' day.

The Albion-born Parke family of horsemen — seven brothers — dominated horse racing in an era when jockeys outgrew their mounts in the blink of an eye.

Ivan Parke, for example. Parke was riding quarter-horses at county fairs when he was spotted by western horseman Bennett Creech, who introduced the young rider to thoroughbred racing.

Parke's success as a rider was immediate. He led all North American jockeys in wins as an apprentice with 173 in 1923. The next year, Parke again topped the standings with 205 wins and also led all riders in purse earnings as a contract rider for H.P. Whitney.

Among Parke's most notable victories was the inaugural Wood Memorial aboard Backbone in 1925. He also rode the winner in the first race ever won at Hialeah in 1923.

By 19, he was done — too big to be a jockey anymore. But Parke returned as a steeplechase rider for Greentree Stable in 1930 and 1931, and finished second in wins among steeplechase jockeys in 1931.

In 1933, Parke was among 10 horsemen indicted by a federal grand jury in Chicago under the Harrison Anti-Narcotic Act for allegedly drugging horses. He was never convicted.

Parke switched to training thoroughbreds in 1935 and went on to saddle 27 stakes winners. He conditioned Fred Hooper's Hoop, Jr., winner of the 1945 Kentucky Derby, as well as top sprinter Olympia.

Parke bred Olympia and then sold him to Hooper. When Olympia won the 1949 Wood Memorial, Parke became one of the few individuals to ride, train and breed a winner of a major stakes race.

Parke's brother Burley, born in 1905, started out as a jockey in Reno, Nev., and then went on to success at the Santa Anita and Tijuana tracks. He was the second-leading rider in the country in 1921, but after a couple of seasons he became too big for a jockey and moved on to become an assistant trainer. Charles Howard, who owned Seabiscuit, hired Parke to run his racing stable in the late 1940s. It was then that Howard bought future Hall of Fame horse Noor from the Aga Khan and brought him to America.

Parke saw a horse with great promise, but one that was stubborn and had a nasty temper. Having raced in Europe, the American tracks and style of racing were unfamiliar to Noor. Parke used his skill and patience to slowly convince Noor to use his speed to become a great racehorse.

The highlight of Parke's career was training Noor to beat Citation in four consecutive stakes, including two in world-record time. Parke then left the sport for almost 10 years to attend to his fruit ranch in California before being lured back by Lou Wolfson.

For Wolfson, Parke prepped the speedy Raise a Native and 1965 co-Horse of the Year Roman Brother. Parke ranked among America's top five trainers on seven occasions before his death in 1977.

Ivan Parke was inducted into the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame in 1978. Burley Parke joined him in 1986.

Bank Foundation Gives $30K to Community Groups

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Thursday's gathering of community members was to celebrate many gifts, not just one.

Nearly $30,000 in donations from the First Federal Foundation, the charitable arm of First Federal Bank, were sprinkled throughout the Magic Valley, touching 12 nonprofits.

The needs were varied: Hansen School District, for example, got $2,000 for playground equipment.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Magic Valley received $5,000 for tables and chairs.

Alan Horner, president of the bank, thanked the organizations, saying they help make the Magic Valley special.

And each group spoke of how their received gift will help.

The Twin Falls County Historical Society is getting $2,990 for an alarm system for its museum. Ron Yates, president of the organization's board, drew laughter from the audience when he said it's an upgrade from a system that's been compared to "rock chucks with cell phones."

Livestock

Lt. Daron Brown of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, the author of the ordinance, said it is not intended to target livestock producers, just irresponsible livestock owners.

Stay Informed

Twin Falls County commissioners said they'll notify interested parties of any developments with the livestock ordinance. They can be reached at 736-4068.

"If you own livestock, they are going to get out," said Brown, a non-ranching member of the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association. The difference is the animals' owners — some make seemingly no effort to fix their fences and draw out deputies several times a week because of loose livestock, he said.

"Right now, there's not really anything we can do but say 'Put your cows up or else we'll come back and tell you to put your cows up!'"

John Ricketts, the association's immediate past president, said the ordinance has the right intentions, but his group is worried about the fines. And if Twin Falls County passes it, he said, it may set precedent for the surrounding counties that the cattlemen operate in, so they want to work to get it as perfect as possible beforehand — a goal Brown agreed with.

"We just want to take some of the heartburn out of it," Ricketts said of his group's goal.

Water

Continued from the front page Interim Director Gary Spackman. He has scheduled a conference on Monday, when both sides will present their cases to see if the calls merit further investigation.

"The department wants to respond as quickly as practical," said Rich Rigby, senior adviser for IDWR. "We've had experience with situations like this in the past and we're going to be using the same process."

If the department decides the water rights have been violated, the junior groundwater users could face curtailment.

Sorting out the precise details can be a lengthy process, and past calls have taken years to straighten out both before IDWR and in the courts. As Idaho water law continues to evolve, other recent water calls in the Magic Valley have worked their way up to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Before any initial decision can be made, Jones and Sea-Pac must provide enough data to back their claims, said Lynn Tominaga, executive director of the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators.

"Everyone is laying their cards on the table on Monday," Tominaga said. "We have to come in and take a look to see if this call is legitimate and make sure there is enough information."

Storms Spark Other Local Wildfires

TIMES-NEWS

Recent turbulent lightning storms caused at least two other wildfires in rural Twin Falls County. The U.S. Bureau of Land Management reports two wildfires were caused by lightning, while one more is still under investigation. The largest fire, Sailor Creek, began nine miles west of Roseworth. The BLM sent five engines along with helicopter assistance. Fire crews expected to contain the blaze by 10 p.m. on Thursday and control it by 8 p.m. today. The fire burned 2,500 acres. Six miles south of Three Creek Road, the Pole Creek Fire burned 1,294 acres. Five fire engines and one Hot Shot crew were sent to put it out. The fire was contained by Wednesday evening and was estimated to be controlled Thursday. The smallest fire was reported just north of Nat Soo Pah Hot Springs and has burned only 8.7 acres. The fire was contained by 6 p.m. Thursday and expected to be controlled by 8 p.m. that day.

Lightning Storms Lead to Fires, Power Problems

BY NATE POPPINO

READ the latest on fires across the region at Magic-valley.com. Lightning storms led to fires and power outages across much of south-central Idaho Thursday evening, sending emergency crews scrambling in response.

Though details were scarce, notable fires were reported near Bliss, Shoshone, Jerome, Ketchum and King Hill. The Windmill Fire near Bliss was reportedly large enough to be seen from Twin Falls.

The culprit: Thunderstorms moving north from the Idaho border. The clouds brought some precipitation with them. A storm observer at Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport near Twin Falls reported hail falling for about 10 minutes at 4:20 p.m., according to the National Weather Service. But Twin Falls and Burley weather stations measured only trace amounts of water Thursday. The evening was all about the lightning.

At about 9 p.m., Taylor Hunsaker, a supervisor with the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, said 19 separate brush fires had sprung up across his dispatch center's four-county area. The fires were largely north of the Snake River.

Kyli Astle, a spokeswoman with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, said her agency's fire crews were responding across the region, addressing larger blazes like those near Bliss while also helping rural fire crews with the smaller fires. The BLM was tracking about 10 fires by 9:45 p.m.

As the storms moved through, Idaho Power reported three major outages in the evening: of 442 customers in Buhl, 1,220 customers in Twin Falls and 197 customers in the Burley and Oakley areas. Though the exact cause for each wasn't immediately known, they appeared related to the storms, according to messages on the utility's outage line.

No fires or other large weather-related issues were reported by Minidoka and Cassia county dispatchers.

Trial Date Set for Man Accused of Starting Auger Falls Fire

TIMES-NEWS

A trial date has been set for the Buhl man suspected of starting last year's Auger Falls Fire.

Don Garibaldi, 55, appeared in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court this week for a pretrial conference, when Judge Nicole Cannon set a trial start date of Aug. 31. Garibaldi faces three misdemeanor charges, as prosecutors say he started a fire that burned nearly 600 acres in the Snake River Canyon near Twin Falls, including Auger Falls Park.

According to the police report, Garibaldi is believed to have thrown out a still-lit cigarette butt while working on private land west of Twin Falls. The charges of damage to forage on public lands from throwing away or leaving lighted substances carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine for each conviction.

Auger Falls Park is jointly managed by the city of Twin Falls and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Jerome to Seek Judicial Permission for Wastewater Fixes

BY BEN BOTKIN

bbotkin@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The city of Jerome is taking the first steps toward getting a judge's permission to take on long-term debt for wastewater system improvements.

The Jerome City Council on Tuesday approved hiring Boise law firm Moore, Smith, Buxton and Turcke for the legal work that's needed to pursue judicial confirmation. The move comes following word from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency that the system must be improved to comply with laws.

The cost of the project is estimated at $3.25 million. Mayor John Shine said the city is talking with three industrial users to reach an agreement in which they would help with the costs. Those three users — Idaho Milk Products, Jerome Cheese and Darigold — make up 63 percent of what is discharged into the city's system.

Shine said the negotiations have been going well.

After sewer overflow problems, the EPA in February warned the city that it intends to bring an enforcement action with possible fines of up to $37,500 a day. The city is now trying to reach an agreement to avoid the fees.

What is Judicial Confirmation?

In Jerome's case, the city seeks a judge's permission to take out a bond without voter approval. The process is usually used when an emergency exists that merits taking on long-term debt.

The public will have a chance to weigh in before the judge's decision, even though they cannot cast ballots.

The council plans a public hearing for the judicial confirmation on Aug. 22.

ROADWORK SET FOR IDAHO HIGHWAY 75 NEAR KETCHUM

About 28 miles of Idaho Highway 75 north of Ketchum will be under construction through August. The Idaho Transportation Department said Thursday it will oversee a full-width asphalt overlay of the road from near Frenchman Creek to Stanley. Work hinges on an approved asphalt test strip, but will fix rutting and potholes and restore smoothness. Work is expected to take three weeks, during which flaggers will be on site and a pilot car will guide traffic around the work. Boise-based Knife River Corporation Northwest is the contractor for the $4.26 million project.

Man Charged With Robbing Bank Waives Hearing

LEWISTON (AP) • A 69-year-old Clarkston, Wash., man charged with robbing a Lewiston bank on Feb. 3 has waived his right to a preliminary hearing and was bound over to 2nd District Court for arraignment.

The Lewiston-Tribune reports David Payton walked with the aid of a cane during Wednesday's hearing due to injuries suffered when he was shot by law enforcement officers shortly after the robbery.

Payton, who spent about a month in the hospital, is charged with robbery and four counts of aggravated assault for allegedly pointing a gun at officers.

Payton's arraignment is set for Aug. 17. Nez Perce County Prosecutor Dan Spickler says he has a tentative plea agreement, but declined to elaborate.

The $3,000 taken from the bank has not been recovered.

Filer Council to Hammer Out Details of Fiscal 2012 Budget During August

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • The Filer City Council plans to use the month of August to hammer out a budget for the 2012 fiscal year, which begins in October.

Part of Tuesday's public meeting focused on how the maintenance and operation expense for a $12 million sewer treatment plant, expected online by the end of summer, will affect budget projections.

"There's a membrane system comparable to our own in operation up in Bellevue that we can use to get some M and O projections from,"

Filer to Try Out Recycling Program

The Filer City Council approved a proposal from Western Waste Systems on Tuesday to set up a recycling test program. The limited program will run from Sept. 1 through Oct. 31 and focus on 100 homes in the city.

"We already have a program going in Kimberly and the good thing is that everyone wants to do it," said Jay Markle with Western Waste. "Within the last few months we've collected about a ton of recyclable trash that would have gone into the landfill."

Mayor Bob Templeman said. "Ours is newer and more energy-efficient but what they have will give us a pretty good idea."

A proposed 3 percent to 5 percent employee wage increase also must be resolved before city officials can build a workable budget. Discussions of the idea so far have split the council.

Councilwoman Suellen Lammers was comfortable with a 3 percent wage hike and Councilman David Gaither supported one at 5 percent. But councilmen Don Barkley and Bob Parent both voiced concern about an unsure economy.

"We've been generous in the past and gave 3 percent last year, but we're going to have to sharpen our pencils," Parent said. "I'm not really comfortable with this, but I say we hold off giving an increase this time."

A second public budget workshop is scheduled for 5 p.m. Tuesday in the council chambers on Main Street.

"I don't have anything solid added up right now," City Clerk Shari Hart said, "and we really won't know anything for sure until those two issues have been decided."

Gerrymandering 101: GOP Redistricting Plan a Non-Starter

The once-every-10-years exercise in redistricting has been characterized as "pure blood sport." To a degree that's unavoidable, but not at the expense of citizens.

Five years from now, let's say you're a farmer in Dietrich who wants to have a word with your elected state legislator.

Trouble is, he or she lives in Salmon — 226 miles, or a four-hour drive, away.

That's what the three Republican members of the state redistricting commission have in mind.

They also want to put part of Twin Falls County in the same legislative district with Mountain Home, but what they really seem to be after is driving as many Republican moderates as possible out of office.

All eight of the GOP senators who voted against Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's controversial education reform plan earlier this year would be running against another incumbent according to the GOP plan, including Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, vs. Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert.

Some of those Endangered Eight, as Idaho Statesman political analyst Dan Popkey calls them, smell a rat.

It happens that Jason Hancock, Luna's numbers guy and the brains behind Luna's Students Come First initiative, is working part-time for the GOP redistricting commissioners.

Conservatives in the Legislature, by and large, respect Hancock. Moderate Republicans and Democrats find him arrogant.

But there's little question that he belongs to the far right wing of the Idaho GOP.

The author of the Republican redistricting plan, George Esposito, denies that Hancock's fingerprints are all over the proposal.

"Perhaps Esposito worked his magic while Hancock was away," Popkey wrote. "But he didn't begin with a blank slate. GOP Commissioner Evan Frasure submitted a plan May 16. Democrats released theirs July 19. Hancock's junior colleague, Nathan Drashner, helped Esposito and is bright enough to respect his elders."

Whatever the politics, the GOP blueprint is impractical for south-central Idaho. It groups Gooding and Elmore counties and part of Twin Falls County in one district and throws Blaine, Lincoln and Camas counties in with Butte, Lemhi and Custer counties. Minidoka and Cassia counties would be in one district; there would also be an all-Twin Falls County district and another split between Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

The three Democratic commissioners have proposed a map on which none of the south-central Idaho counties would be grouped with counties from other regions in legislative districts. To us, that's ideal, and fortunately they're in a position to block the Republican plan.

Trade Commission. These non-binding suggestions ask that the industry market real food to kids instead of the junk they so famously favor selling. But the industry argues that the recommendations are effectively mandatory because non-compliance would lead to retaliation and eliminate all food advertising to adolescents, as well as 74,000 jobs.

On the phone last week, Rep. Rosa DeLauro, a Democrat from Connecticut, told me that even though the guidelines are "without teeth," the pushback from the industry has been formidable: "We have seen political showmanship, misinformation about the impact of these voluntary guidelines, insistence that the industry has been successful in self-regulation and that these efforts would violate the First Amendment."

That voluntary guidelines could curb the right to free speech is absurd, but not as wacky as letting the industry set its own standards. Yet that's what has happened: The Children's Food and Beverage Advertising Initiative, a group of food manufacturers that includes McDonald's, Burger King, PepsiCo and Kraft Foods came up with its own guidelines defining foods healthy enough to market to kids.

CFBAI is a champion of "self-regulation," which means repeating a series of mantras that include "facts" like "there is no such thing as good food and bad food," or that Cookie Crisp cereal "can be a part of a balanced diet," all the while micro-adjusting hyper-processed food so that "more fiber" and "less sugar" aren't outright lies. With self-regulation, even Kraft Singles can be considered "part of a balanced diet."

And guess what? In general, the companies fare well in meeting their own standards: Two-thirds of the products they advertise are A-OK, with the remainder requiring just modest adjustments. See? Mission accomplished! Corn Pops are now healthy!

Self-regulation may be immediate, non-threatening and magical, but it doesn't work.

But despite the seal of approval of our first lady/self-appointed nutrition expert, a Happy Meal with a piece of apple is still a box of branded, overpriced junk food sold not by its value but by its marketing scheme.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A 'Bait and Switch'

On Thursday, July 14, I was shopping for a new-to-me pickup. I saw a pickup I liked with a reasonable price posted on the windshield at a car dealership. I stopped to inquire about this truck and after a test drive and with a call to my bank's loan officer, I had decided to make the deal.

Midway through the process, I was approached by the sales manager who informed me that the price on the pickup was incorrect and that it is actually $11,000 more than was posted on the truck. I ended the sale and walked out and snapped a picture of the vehicle before I left.

I contacted their out-of-state main office on July 15 and spoke to a consumer complaint representative. I forwarded the picture of the truck with the price posted on the truck and was told that someone would contact me. I was contacted by the general manager of the dealership later that evening and was told by him that the truck was mis-marked and he would not sell it to me at the posted price on the truck.

I have since found three other people who told me the same exact story; they also were half-way or more through the purchase (one was driving his new truck home with a signed contract) when they were also informed that the price was wrong and that it was actually more. They didn't fall for the ruse either. Two of the unfortunate buyers informed me that they hadn't pursued the matter, but I feel that it's important that this action be reported in hopes that a history of the "bait and switch" can be documented by the attorney general's office and hopefully curtail this practice.

This affects all car dealerships when this happens. I won't be shopping for a pickup for a long while.

States, Nation Should Wake Up

With everyone complaining about the state that the national debt is in, I believe that we need to look into our own backyards.

For example, a few years ago the state of Idaho gave a grant of a few million to the city of Gooding to help improve its industrial park. The government officials called to the businesses that are part of the industrial park asking what they could use help on. When it was all said and done, the only business that got money was Keifer Built, which has since shut down. But there are other business out there that are still operating that could have put some of that grant money to good use.

Then you go into certain businesses in town years later and hear the city officials discussing how they are going to account for that grant money and why it only went to one business rather than the five businesses that were there at the time. And the state just seems to forget to get an account of the taxpayers' hard-earned money.

If the small cities and communities and states would start looking into the wasted money, maybe we could get ourselves out of some of the financial mess we are in. Not to mention if the nation didn't give financial support to Middle East countries that don't even like Americans and we took care of the people in this country that don't have food on the table or shoes on their feet or the medical help they desperately need.

Our nation needs to wake up and take stock of what is really going on, and our government needs to start making the cities and counties accountable for making sure their respected cities and counties are getting the job done and done right.

*Be Careful
What Pledges
You Make*

When they first ran for governor, both Jon Huntsman and Mitt Romney were asked to sign no-new-tax pledges.

Although opposed to higher taxes, Huntsman refused to put his name on an ironclad vow limiting his options.

Since then, Huntsman told me, he's "maintained the same philosophical approach." Thus as a Republican presidential candidate, he has said no to signing pledges, including Americans for Tax Reform's pledge to oppose tax increases and the "cut, cap, and balance" budgetary promise conservatives like Republican Sen. Jim DeMint of South Carolina are pushing.

"Once you have signed one, you are pretty much obligated to sign them all, and that takes away your ability to govern," Huntsman said. Besides, he added, "records matter more than pledges."

In his 2002 gubernatorial campaign, Romney took a similar stand.

"I'm not intending to, at this stage, sign a document which would prevent me from being able to look specifically at the revenue needs of the Commonwealth," he said. Eric Fehrstrom, Romney's spokesman, went further, calling such pledges "government by gimmickry."

As he runs for president, however, Romney has left that admirable independence behind. So far, he's signed both the Americans for Tax Reform's no-new-taxes promise — officially, the “Taxpayer Protection Pledge” — and the “cut, cap, and balance” pledge, which calls for amending the Constitution to require both a balanced budget and congressional super-majorities to raise taxes.

The no-new-taxes pledge, which has the signature of every noteworthy GOP candidate save Huntsman and Tim Pawlenty, has helped make compromise difficult in today's Congress. The proposed amendment, meanwhile, fairly defines political gimmickry; still, all but Huntsman are aboard.

Now, litmus-test politics is hardly a one-party phenomenon. When there's a Democratic presidential primary campaign, left-leaning groups are always ready with detailed questionnaires designed to pin candidates to their priorities. Labor, meanwhile, regularly tries to commit hopefuls to dubious measures aimed at enhancing union clout.

Still, high-profile pledge-signing is litmus-test politics taken to an extreme. There's something both revealing and disquieting about watching the GOP's would-be presidents sign away their future right to exercise careful consideration.

In this campaign, we've also seen the Susan B. Anthony pledge, committing signers — Michele Bachmann, Newt Gingrich, Ron Paul, Tim Pawlenty, and Rick Santorum — to appoint abortion opponents to important cabinet and executive office posts and to deny all funding to Planned Parenthood and any other organization or institution that funds or performs abortions.

Iowa religious conservatives, meanwhile, are pushing a "marriage vow" committing adherents to, among other things, fidelity to their spouse, a constitutional amendment against gay marriage, "cooling off" periods before "quickie" divorces, opposition to "intrusively intimate commingling" in the military, and an appreciation of "robust childbearing."

As a rule, pledges diminish candidates, while enlarging self-styled political kingmakers. Witness Bob Dole's experience. Campaigning for president in 1988, Dole refused to sign the no-new-taxes pledge, considering it an abandonment of principle. But when he ran in 1996, the Kansas Republican acquiesced — only to have Grover Norquist, proprietor of the pledge, privately liken his capitulation to Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Conservative icon Edmund Burke's classic formulation about an elected official's responsibility to his constituents also rings true here.

"It is his duty to sacrifice his repose, his pleasures, his satisfactions, to theirs; and above all, ever, and in all cases, to prefer their interest to his own," Burke said.

Huntsman obviously hopes voters will reward his Burkean refusal to pledge away his mature judgment.

Who's Poor in America, Anyway?

For two decades, the Census Bureau has reported almost yearly that more than 35 million Americans live in "poverty." Last fall, census officials grabbed headlines by saying 43.5 million persons were poor. That's one in seven Americans.

But what does it mean to be “poor” in America? What is poverty? For most U.S. residents, the word “poverty” suggests destitution: an inability to provide yourself and your family with reasonable shelter, nutritious food and clothing.

A Poverty Pulse poll taken by the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, for example, asked: "How would you describe being poor in the U.S.?" The vast majority of responses focused on homelessness, hunger or inability to eat properly, and failure to meet basic needs.

The dominant news media amplifies this link in the public mind between poverty and severe deprivation. Most stories on poverty feature homeless families, or folks living in crumbling shacks, or lines of the down-trodden waiting to eat in soup kitchens.

Fortunately, such images have little or nothing to do with the actual living conditions of most of the more than 40 million Americans defined as "poor" by the Census Bureau.

The government's own survey data shows that in 2005, the average poor household lived in a house or apartment equipped with air conditioning and cable television. The family had a car — and a third of the poor have at least two cars.

For entertainment, the average poor household enjoyed two color TVs, a DVD player and a VCR.

A microwave, refrigerator, oven and stove were all in the kitchen of the average poor household. Other conveniences included clothes washer and dryer, ceiling fans, cordless phone and coffee maker.

The home of this average poor family also was in good repair and not overcrowded, according to government data. In fact, the typical poor American had more living space than the average European.

Not only was the average poor family able to obtain necessary medical care, but when asked most families said they had enough money in the past year to meet all essential needs.

By the family's own report, it wasn't hungry. In fact, the average intake of protein, vitamins and minerals by poor children is indistinguishable from that of kids in the upper middle class. In most cases, it's above norms.

Poor young men today are actually taller and heavier at age 18 or 19 than young men in the middle class were in the late 1950s.

The main dietary problem faced by poor Americans is eating too much, not too little. The majority of poor adults, like most Americans, are overweight.

Should a family that lives this way be considered poor? The overwhelming answer from the public is no.

Rammell Pleads Guilty to Contempt in Tampering Case

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • Former Republican gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell has pleaded guilty to criminal contempt and will serve nine months of probation to end a case that started when he was arrested for tampering with jurors in his poaching trial.

In an agreement reached with the Bonneville County prosecutor's office, Rammell pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and was given a withheld judgment, meaning the conviction can be erased from his record if he completes terms of the sentence.

Rammell, a former elk rancher who also ran for the U.S. Senate in 2008, was charged in May with a felony for attempting to influence jurors. He was charged after he passed out leaflets from the Fully Informed Jury Association to potential jurors called to serve on his elk poaching case.

The plea agreement not only ended Rammell's latest legal tiff, but also ensured he can pursue political office without having to wait to clear a felony from his record.

"I still believe that what I did was innocent and harmless and not against the law, but a guy has to pick and choose his battles," Rammell said. "This is a battle for someone else for another day."

The judge also ordered Rammell to pay $500 in fines, but suspended $250.

Former Republican gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell

Rammell ran last year in the GOP gubernatorial primary, finishing second with 26 percent of the vote to incumbent C.L. "Butch" Otter. He lost in the primary in 2008 in his bid for the GOP nomination in the race for an open U.S. Senate seat, ultimately won by Jim Risch.

Rammell said moving past the jury tampering case enables him to focus instead on appealing his conviction in the poaching case. He was convicted July 1 of unlawful possession of wildlife for killing an elk in November in a different hunting zone than allowed on his hunting tag.

"There are issues in that case that I am still furious about," Rammell said. "I think I can prove that I did not get a fair trial."

Some Republican Senators Suspect GOP Redistricting Effort Targets Luna Foes

BOISE (AP) • Eight Republican senators who voted against schools chief Tom Luna's education reforms would run against incumbents under a new GOP-backed proposal for redrawing Idaho's political boundaries that's raising concerns of payback in the Capitol.

The plan was introduced by Republican Redistricting Commissioner Lou Esposito.

Under Esposito's plan, more than a third of the Legislature's current members — 41 lawmakers in all — could face incumbent competition.

The Idaho Statesman reported Thursday there's suspicion among some hit by his proposed changes that he's targeting moderates who didn't agree with Luna.

The Republicans who opposed Luna's plan and would face incumbents include Sen. Shawn Keough of Sandpoint; Sen. Joyce Broadsword of Sagle; Joe Stegner of Lewiston; Tim Corder of Mountain Home; John Andreason in Boise; Dean Cameron and Denton Darrington from Rupert and Declo, respectively; and Bart Davis in Idaho Falls.

Andreason, for one, suspects the plan would force him to face Sen. Les Bock, a Boise Democrat, because of his disloyalty to Luna and Gov. Butch Otter for voting against the K-12 reforms.

"I haven't studied it enough to be sure, but I fully suspect that's the case," Andreason said.

Esposito insisted he never looked specifically at who would be affected when he drew up his map.

"I know people are calling me a liar," Esposito said. "But until the map was done, I couldn't tell you where most of the people were. Our job was to put together the very best possible map."

Boise State political scientist Gary Moncrief said some head-to-head races are inevitable in redistricting because of population shifts and geography.

And some of those lawmakers who voted against Luna's plan were already considered to be the most likely to be forced into incumbent face-offs during this latest round of boundary drawing based on the 2010 census, he said, due to population growth patterns and efforts to consolidate unwieldy districts created in 2001.

Democrats have a competing plan up for consideration in which many of the same lawmakers affected by Esposito's proposal would also be forced into races with incumbents.

Debate over which plan to adopt — a new one could emerge, too — is expected to extend into September.

Another senator who would face an incumbent, Tim Corder, suggested that Esposito's plan is a product of conservative Idaho Republicans who have been on the march since 2008. Ever more emboldened, they aim to make life difficult for perceived moderates like him.

"The state that's the reddest of the red, and it's not red enough," Corder said. "You lock out independents, you run Republicans against Republicans. What is that but eating our own?"

Luna's spokeswoman, Melissa McGrath, told the Statesman, "Superintendent Luna has not been involved in the redistricting process."

Reid Says Compromise In Hand to Reopen FAA

Senators have scattered for August recess, but measure can be approved if leaders of both parties agree to adopt it by ‘unanimous consent.’

BY JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Congress has reached a bipartisan compromise to end the two-week partial shutdown of the Federal Aviation Administration that has idled 74,000 federal employees and construction workers and cost the government about $30 million a day in uncollected airline ticket taxes, Senate Democratic leader Harry Reid said Thursday.

Reid

The deal would allow the Senate to approve a House bill extending the FAA’s operating authority through mid-September, including a provision that eliminates $16.5 million in air service subsidies to 13 rural communities. Passage of the bill is expected Friday. Senators have scattered for their August recess, but the measure can be approved if leaders from both parties agree to adopt it by “unanimous consent.”

Republicans had insisted on the subsidy cuts as their price for restoring the FAA to full operation. But the cuts may become moot.

The bill includes language that gives Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood the authority to continue subsidized service to the 13 communities if he decides it’s necessary.

“Only LaHood can decide how he will use his waiver authority,” said Adam Jentleson, a spokesman for Reid.

Jeffs Guilty of Child Sex Abuse

Polygamist sect leader had claimed his religious rights were being trampled on and that God would seek revenge if the trial continued. He now faces up to life in prison.

BY WILL WEISSERT
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO, Texas • A Texas jury convicted polygamist sect leader Warren Jeffs of child sexual assault on Thursday, in a case stemming from two young followers he took as brides in what his church calls “spiritual marriages.”

The head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints stood stone-faced as the verdict was read. Jeffs, who acted as his own attorney, stood mostly mute for his closing argument, staring at the floor, for all but a few seconds of the half hour he was allotted. At one point he mumbled, “I am peace,” and said no more. The only noise in the courtroom was the creaking of wooden benches brimming with spectators.

Jeffs, 55, had claimed his religious rights were being trampled on and that God would seek revenge if the trial continued. He now faces up to life in prison. The sentencing phase of the trial was starting after the verdict, and Texas’ attorney general said it could take three days.

Prosecutors used DNA evidence to show Jeffs fathered a child with a 15-year-old girl and played an audio recording of what they said was him sexually assaulting a 12-year-old.

Va. Tech Locked Down Over Report of Gunman

Three teens attending a summer program on campus tell police they saw a man walking quickly across the grounds with what might have been a handgun, touching off the alert.

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) • A report of a possible gunman at Virginia Tech on Thursday set off the longest, most extensive lockdown and search on campus since the bloodbath four years ago that led the university to overhaul its emergency procedures.

No gunman was found, and the school gave the all-clear just before 3 p.m., about five hours after sirens began wailing and students and staff members started receiving warnings by phone, email and text message to lock themselves indoors. Alerts were also posted on the university’s website and Twitter accounts.

Maddie Potter, a 19-year-old from Virginia Beach, holed up inside a campus wood shop, where she had been working on a class project. Staff members locked the doors and turned off the lights. “I was pretty anxious. We had family friends who were up here when the shooting took place in 2007, so it was kind of surreal,” she said. “I had my phone with me and I called both my parents.”

The emergency was triggered by three teens who were attending a summer program on campus and told police they saw a man walking quickly across the grounds with what might have been a handgun covered by a cloth, authorities said.

Police searched some 150 buildings on the square-mile campus and issued a composite sketch of a baby-faced man who was said to be wearing shorts and sandals, but they found no sign of him. They continued to patrol the grounds as a precaution even after the lockdown was lifted.

“We’re in a new era. Obviously this campus experienced something pretty terrible four years ago,” said Virginia Tech spokesman Larry Hincker. He added: “Regardless of what your intuition and your experience as a public safety officer tells you, you are really forced to issue an alert.”

It was the first time that the entire campus was locked down since the shooting rampage in 2007 that left 33 people dead, and the second major test of Virginia Tech’s improved emergency alert system.

Why Did it Take So Long to Recall Tainted Ground Turkey?

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The first sickness was in March and the first signs of a salmonella outbreak appeared in May. Two months later, investigators linked the outbreak to ground turkey and a Cargill meat processing plant in Arkansas.

On Wednesday, almost five months after the first illness, the Agriculture Department asked Minnesota-based Cargill to recall 36 million pounds of ground turkey, saying the meat was linked to a death in California and at least 77 illnesses.

Tracking down the source of an illness is a difficult, complicated business, and federal officials defended the months-long process Thursday by saying they wanted to be absolutely sure before they asked Cargill to initiate the third-largest meat recall in history.

“It is simply unacceptable that after more than four months of illnesses and more than 10 weeks of investigation by both the CDC and the USDA we have so few answers to the obvious questions surrounding this outbreak.”

Clinton: More Than 2,000 Dead in Syrian Crackdown on Protesters

WASHINGTON (AP) • Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Thursday accused the Syrian government of killing more than 2,000 of its own citizens during its ongoing brutal crackdown against opposition protesters as the Obama administration moved to further isolate President Bashar Assad and his inner circle.

The administration is unhappy with Assad’s actions in trying to quell the five-month-old uprising. “We think, to date, the government is responsible for the deaths of more than 2,000 people of all ages,” Clinton said, repeating the administration’s position that “Assad has lost his legitimacy to govern the Syrian people.”

She said the U.S. would “continue to support the Syrians themselves in their efforts to begin a peaceful and orderly transition to democracy” and renewed calls for the international community to unify behind steps to isolate Assad and his regime.

Clinton’s comments, made at a news conference with visiting Canadian Foreign Minister John Baird, came just hours after White House press secretary Jay Carney said Assad is “on his way out” and the administration hit a prominent pro-regime businessman and his firm with sanctions.

“The actions that he has taken ... are reprehensible and appalling,” Carney told reporters. “And we believe that country will be better off without him.”

Recall

“There was an aggressive and thorough investigation that came together over time to paint one picture of this outbreak,” said Dr. Christopher Braden, an epidemiologist at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which investigated the outbreak with the Agriculture Department.

Investigations are often delayed because victims can’t remember what they ate or aren’t cooperative, says Caroline Smith DeWaal, food safety director for the Center for Science in the Public Interest. But DeWaal says she believes the government should have told the company — and the public — about the possible outbreak much sooner.

“Clearly this kind of delay in an outbreak situation is one that puts the public health at risk,” DeWaal said.

Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., a longtime advocate for stronger food safety laws, sent Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack and CDC Director Thomas Frieden a letter Thursday questioning why it took so long to announce the recall.

“It is simply unacceptable that after more than four months of illnesses and more than 10 weeks of investigation by both the CDC and the USDA we have so few answers to the obvious questions surrounding this outbreak,” DeLauro wrote.

Braden and David Goldman of the USDA’s Food Safety and Inspection Service said at a briefing Thursday that authorities weren’t sure about the source of the outbreak until July, when they identified it through shopper’s card information from victims who had purchased the Cargill turkey, and a left-over sample of turkey from a victim’s home. Previous evidence from the investigation had pointed not just to Cargill, but other companies as well, they said.

Less conclusive evidence had pointed toward the Cargill plant in Springdale, Ark., much earlier, however. Samples of Cargill ground turkey purchased at four retail locations as part of routine testing between March 7 and June 27 showed contamination with the same strain of salmonella, though those samples were not specifically linked to the illnesses. Routine salmonella testing in 2010 also showed the pathogen at the plant.

Part of the difficulty for investigators is that USDA rules make it harder to investigate and recall salmonella-tainted poultry. Because salmonella is so common in poultry, it is not illegal for meat to be tainted with the pathogen. General guidance to consumers is to cook ground turkey to 165 degrees and to handle it properly before it is cooked. If it is cooked and handled properly, it is safe.

TEXAS DROUGHT MAY LAST ANOTHER YEAR

The drought that has turned Texas and parts of the Plains into a parched moonscape of cracked earth could persist into next year, prolonging the misery of farmers and ranchers and making it the state’s worst since the 1950s. The U.S. Climate Prediction Center said Thursday that the La Nina weather phenomenon blamed for the crippling lack of rain might be back soon, just two months after the last La Nina ended.

Military Money on Chopping Block During Austere Time

BY LOLITA C. BALDOR and DONNA CASSATA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Pentagon got nearly everything it asked for during a decade of two wars shadowed by the Sept. 11 terror attacks and the rise of al-Qaida. No more.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Adm. Mike Mullen acknowledged that reality Thursday, saying the military is resigned to budget cuts of around $350 billion over a decade to meet the public clamor for reducing the nation’s debt. But they warned that more than doubling those cuts along the lines of the “doomsday mechanism” spelled out in the new debt-limit law would undermine the military.

“If it happened — and, God willing, that would not be the case — but if it did happen, it would result in a further round of very dangerous cuts across the board, defense cuts that I believe would do real damage to our security, our troops and their families, and our military’s ability to protect the nation,” Panetta told reporters at his first Pentagon news conference.

Mullen, who has said repeatedly that the debt is the greatest national security threat, said any cut on that order “jeopardizes our ability to deal with the other very real and very serious threats we face around the world.”

Reflecting the widespread demand for fiscal austerity, the compromise debt deal struck by President Barack Obama and congressional leaders this week will slice $350 billion from projected military spending over the next 10 years, and it leaves open the possibility of more than $500 billion in additional reductions.

Defense spending, which has nearly doubled in the last decade, is no longer untouchable in Washington.

Tea partiers and fierce fiscal conservatives in Congress are more willing to include Pentagon dollars in their mix of budget cuts despite opposition from veteran defense hawks. The death of Osama bin Laden, the diminished role of al-Qaida and the winding down of wars in Iraq and Afghanistan have prompted some lawmakers to question the need for such robust military spending.

Among the things that could be on the block: A troubled new jet fighter, expensive plans to modernize the nation’s nuclear arsenal and perhaps some of the gold-plated benefits now guaranteed to military retirees.

“I think programs that can’t meet schedule, that can’t meet cost ... requirements are very much in jeopardy and will be very much under scrutiny,” Mullen said.

The prospect of nearly $1 trillion in cuts unnerves military leaders, troubles lawmakers protective of the Pentagon and has touched off a scramble in the defense industry as contractors look to spare their multibillion-dollar weapons programs.

In sounding an alarm, Panetta is pressuring Democrats and Republicans to consider making concessions on their core priorities — entitlement programs such as Medicare and Social Security defended by Democrats, and increases in taxes resisted by Republicans — before taking a sharper knife to defense. The former Democratic congressman and budget chief in the Clinton administration delivered a clear message to leaders of both parties.

“You cannot deal with the size deficits that this country is confronting by simply cutting the discretionary side of the budget,” said Panetta. “If you’re going to deal with those size deficits, you’ve got to look at the mandatory side of the budget, which is two-thirds of the federal budget, and you also have to look at revenues as part of that answer.”

Kraft Sees Brighter Future With Split

CHICAGO (MCT) • Just 18 months after bulking up through the $19 billion acquisition of British chocolate Cadbury, Kraft Foods Inc. plans to break in two.

The Northfield, Ill.-based conglomerate, currently the world’s second-largest food company, plans to divide itself into two publicly traded companies: a $16 billion North American grocery business and a $32 billion global snacking business. Both companies, currently being referred to as “Global Snacks” and “North American Grocery,” will be based in the Chicago area.

Proponents say the plan will unlock value in the $50.46 billion company, while detractors say it all but undoes a deal that has yet to realize its potential.

Dividing is expected to take about a year, and it will establish Kraft’s North American grocery business as a stand-alone company, with brands such as Kraft Macaroni & Cheese, Philadelphia Cream Cheese, Maxwell House coffee and Oscar Mayer hot dogs and meats.

Kraft’s North American snacking business, European and international divisions will make up the other company, which will include brands like Oreo, Tang, Trident, Cadbury Dairy Milk and Jacobs Coffee.

Documents: Suspect in NY Child Slaying ‘Heard Voices’

BY TOM HAYS

Associated Press

NEW YORK • The man accused in the kidnapping and dismemberment killing of an 8-year-old New York City boy told detectives his victim put up a struggle and that afterward he was hearing voices telling him “to take his own life for what he did,” according to court papers made public Thursday.

Police say Levi Aron made the remarks last month around the time he directed them to a trash bin where he dumped a red suitcase containing body parts. As the interrogation wore on, Aron told them, “I’m famous,” the papers say.

The 35-year-old defendant also was asked if he knew anything about past sex crimes against children. The papers say he recounted how a man groped him on a subway train when he was a teenager.

“But I never did that to a child because I don’t swing that way,” he said.

The alleged statements, including a written confession, were turned over to the defense on Thursday at an arraignment where Aron pleaded not guilty. His lawyers also learned that a court-ordered psychiatric evaluation had found him competent to stand trial.

The lawyers — who claim Aron has complained of hearing voices — said they still plan to conduct their own exams to determine whether to pursue an insanity defense.

Outraged members of the victim’s ultra-Orthodox Jewish community “should allow the judicial process to take its course,” one of the attorneys, Pierre Bazile, said outside court.

Bazile entered the not guilty plea for his Jewish client, who did not speak at a brief arraignment in State Supreme Court in Brooklyn. The defendant appeared in an orange jail jumpsuit with his hands cuffed in front of him.

“Now that Mr. Aron has been found fit to proceed we will move forward expeditiously to bring his case to trial,” District Attorney Charles Hynes said in a statement. “I want to reaffirm that this case will go to trial and that there are absolutely no circumstances which would lead me to accept a plea bargain.”

Leiby Kletzky got lost on his walk home from a religious day camp on July 11 and asked Aron, whom he met on the street, for help, prosecutors said. It was the first time the little boy was allowed to walk alone, and he was supposed to travel about seven blocks to meet his mother but missed a turn.

The boy first asked for a ride to a book store. But “on the way, he changed his mind and wasn’t sure he wanted to go,” Aron wrote in his confession, according to the court papers.

Warren Jeffs

They also played audio recordings in which Jeffs was heard instructing young women on how to please him sexually.

The FLDS, which has at least 10,000 members nationwide, is a radical offshoot of mainstream Mormonism and believes polygamy brings exaltation in heaven. They see Jeffs as God’s spokesman on earth.

Police had raided the group’s remote West Texas ranch in April 2008, finding women dressed in frontier-style dresses and hairdos from the 19th century as well as seeing underage girls who were clearly pregnant. The call to an abuse hotline that spurred the raid turned out to be a hoax, and more than 400 children who had been placed in protective custody were eventually returned to their families.

But authorities brought charges against several men from the group, with Jeffs by far the highest-profile defendant.

Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott said he expects the penalty phase to take three days. “There will be a tremendous amount of evidence, showing a lot more detail to the jury,” he said. “The jurors, and Texans in general, are going to learn a lot more about the background of Warren Jeffs.”

Abbott and prosecutors said the case had nothing to do with Jeffs’ church or his beliefs.

“Make no mistake, this case is not about any people, this case is not about any religion. It is about one individual, Warren Steed Jeffs, and his actions,” said lead prosecutor Eric Nichols.

Prosecutors relied heavily on information seized from the compound, which is in the town of Eldorado, 45 miles south of San Angelo, and features a four-story temple of white limestone. Much of the material was discovered in a vault at the end of a secret passageway in the temple and another vault in an annex building.

Aviation

But Democrats said they expect the administration to effectively waive or negate the cuts.

“I just know that the White House has provided assurances that they (the communities) will be held harmless,” said a Senate Democratic leadership aide who asked not to be named because he wasn’t authorized to speak publicly about the deal.

The shutdown began when much of Washington was transfixed by the stalemate over raising the government’s debt ceiling. During that time, the FAA furloughed 4,000 workers but kept air traffic controllers and most safety inspectors on the job. Forty airport safety inspectors worked without pay, picking up their own travel expenses. Some 70,000 workers on construction-related jobs on airport projects from Palm Springs, Calif., to New York City were idled as the FAA couldn’t pay for the work.

But airline passengers in the busy travel season hardly noticed any changes. Airlines continued to work as normal, but they were no longer authorized to collect federal ticket taxes at a rate of $30 million a day. For a few lucky ticket buyers, prices dropped. But for the vast majority, nothing changed because airlines raised their base prices to match the tax.

Some passengers will now be eligible for tax refunds if they bought their tickets before July 23 and their travel took place during the shutdown.

OBITUARIES

Helen Fern Curtis Miller

Dec. 17, 1926-July 31, 2011

Helen Fern Curtis Miller passed from this life Sunday, July 31, 2011, to join her loving husband, Stanley. After 65 years of marriage, they were only apart for 3½ months.

Helen was born Dec. 17, 1926, at home near Manhattan, Mont., to Tom and Fern Curtis; she was the youngest of four children. Helen was always extremely proud of her Curtis heritage as her relatives were some of the original settlers in the Gallatin Valley during the 1860s.

After graduating from Belgrade High School in 1944, she married her high school sweetheart, Stanley Miller, and began her life's journey as a devoted wife, mother and homemaker. In 1959, the young family moved to the north side of Rupert, Idaho, where the adventure began as they transformed their desert homestead from sagebrush into a thriving irrigated farm.

During this time, Helen also was employed as a program assistant by the USDA-ASCS office in Rupert until she retired in 1988. Following her retirement, she continued to fill her days with gardening, knitting, crocheting, sewing, playing bridge and square dancing. She also was able to spend more time with her beloved children and their families.

In 2004, Stanley and Helen left the family farm and moved to Twin Falls to be closer to family. Helen was a longtime and committed member of the National Secretaries Association and the National Active and Retired Federal Employees (NARFE).

Helen was preceded in death by her husband, Stanley; her parents; and two brothers and their spouses. She is survived by her son, David Miller; daughters, Marcia Miller and Nancy (Galen) Hieb; grandchildren, Brandon (Christina) Miller, Danna Cox, Lodie Steen, Rebecca (Marc) Ramsey, Sara Hieb, John (Leslie) Hieb and Michael Hieb; and seven great-grandchildren. Helen is also survived by her sister, Alice Cook; and a large extended family in the Gallatin Valley of Montana.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Monday, Aug. 8, at Rosenau Funeral Home and Crematory, with a reception to follow. Burial for Stanley and Helen will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 10, at the Meadowview Cemetery in Manhattan, Mont., with a reception following at the Comfort Inn in Bozeman.

Family and friends may share their memories of Helen at www.rosenau-funeralhome.com.

Mexican Town's Police Force Quits After Attack

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) • A 20-man police force resigned in a northern Mexican town after a series of attacks that killed the police chief and five officers over the last three months, state officials said Thursday.

The officers' resignation Thursday left the 13,000 people of Ascension without local police services, Chihuahua state chief prosecutor Carlos Manuel Salas said. State and federal police have moved in to take over police work, he said.

The mass resignation appeared to be connected to a Tuesday attack by gunmen that killed three of the town's officers, Salas said.

But it wasn't the first deadly attack on the police department this year.

In mid-May, Police Chief Manuel Martinez, who had been in office just seven months, was gunned down with two other officers on a nearby highway. The three had been kidnapped a day before police found their bodies riddled with bullets in the back seat of a sedan.

The town's police force was relatively new. Angry residents had led authorities to replace the entire force last September after the mob killings of two teenagers who had allegedly kidnapped a girl from a seafood restaurant.

Teenager Buried on California Beach Thought He Would Die

BY GILLIAN FLACCUS and JOHN MONE

Associated Press

ORANGE, Calif. • A teenager who was buried in 6 feet of sand while digging a trench on a California beach said Thursday he was certain he would die and thought about his mother before lifeguards, paramedics and beachgoers dug him out in a frantic rescue caught on video.

Matt Mina, 17, was visiting his aunt and uncle and was spending the day in Newport Beach with his older cousin and other friends when he decided to dig a 6-foot pit and a trench that branched off to the side.

The sand on the sides of the trench collapsed on him suddenly while the others in his group were nearby playing bocce ball, he told The Associated Press.

As the sand pressed down on him, he wiggled his head to get a small pocket of air but then began to panic and lost consciousness after a few minutes. He realized no one could see what had happened because he had been hidden from view by the depth of the trench.

“It was really scary. I thought I'd just die,” said Mina, who lives in Free Union, Va. “I didn't expect to be rescued. I didn't even know if anybody could hear me screaming for help or if anybody knew I was trapped.”

A few minutes later, Mina's cousin, Eyan Alferos, went to tell him two pretty girls had arrived at the beach and wanted to hang out with them. He saw the sand was flat where the trench had been just moments before — and there was no sign of his cousin.

Alferos, 26, immediately began to dig but at first was shoveling sand from the wrong spot. Then the sand began to collapse on him, as well, and he had to be pulled out by another cousin when the sand reached his waist.

“There was a split second when I thought, ‘He's not going to make it because he's been down there way too long,’” Alferos recalled. “It's a miracle he's alive because his body shut down and he went unconscious. Who knows how long he was unconscious for?”

Lifeguards were at the scene almost immediately, followed by paramedics, and bystanders quickly began to help dig, using everything from snorkeling fins to toy shovels, Alferos said. Some surfers came in from the waves to help.

Video taken at the scene by a bystander shows dozens of people digging frantically then Mina being pulled out of the sand, half-conscious, in a black-and-white bathing suit. Alferos estimates his cousin was under the sand for 20 to 30 minutes.

“I just remember hearing people and people, like, pulling at me. I didn't expect it,” Mina said. “I was surprised when I woke up.”

‘Hundred Pounds of Clay’ Singer Gene McDaniels, 76, Dies

BY CLARKE CANFIELD

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine • Gene McDaniels, who recorded the 1961 hit “A Hundred Pounds of Clay” and later wrote Roberta Flack's chart-topping single “Feel Like Makin' Love,” has died. He was 76.

McDaniels died Friday at his home in Kittery after a brief illness, his wife, Karen McDaniels, told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

During his career, he has had hits as a producer, writer and artist.

McDaniels' first hit was “A Hundred Pounds of Clay.” The song, which featured his take on the Biblical account of the creation of the first woman, peaked at No. 3 on the Billboard pop chart in 1961, the same year his song “Tower of Strength” hit No. 5. McDaniels also recorded other hits, including “Point of No Return” and “Another Tear Falls.”

As his success as a pop singer faded, McDaniels emerged as a successful songwriter. His most famous song, “Feel Like Makin' Love,” went to No. 1 for Flack in 1974 and was also nominated for a Grammy. McDaniels' songs were also recorded by top artists like Aretha Franklin, Gladys Knight & the Pips, Johnny Mathis and Ray Charles.

In 1986, McDaniels received an award from BMI for his work on “Feel Like Makin' Love.” His website says the song has achieved more than 6 million performances and has been recorded on 400 albums.

His song “Compared to What,” received new life recently when it was re-recorded and released by John Legend and The Roots on their 2010 album, “Wake Up.” Its socially conscious lyrics also led it to be used in eight motion pictures, including “The Ice Storm” and “Casino.”

Even though McDaniels is best known for music that made the pop charts, his wife, Karen, says her husband's first love was jazz and he continued into the genre long after his pop career ended. He was working on music projects as a singer, writer and producer until his death, releasing an album of his own as recently as 2009.

“He is music. He cannot not do music. Every day was about music and his family,” Karen McDaniels said.

Gordon ‘Gordie’ Duane, a pioneering Huntington Beach surfboard maker whose boards were prized for their craftsmanship and design, has died. He was 80.

Pioneering Surfboard Maker Gordie Duane Dies at 80

BY VALERIE J. NELSON

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • Pioneering surfboard maker Gordie Duane was helping to transform Huntington Beach, Calif., into a surfing capital when he received the city's first ticket — for surfing illegally.

The surfboard shop he opened at the foot of the town's pier in 1956 also served as a hangout for local kids who skipped school to catch waves.

Huntington Beach took aim at the behavior by banning surfing after 10 a.m., then made a statement by singling out Duane as the first official scofflaw, he later recalled.

“Back in 1956, they didn't want surfing in this town. Man, that was a bad element,” Duane told the Los Angeles Times in 1997, the year he was inducted into the Huntington Beach Surfing Walk of Fame.

Duane, whose surfboards were prized for their craftsmanship and design, died July 27 of natural causes in Huntington Beach, said Jim Amormino, a spokesman for the Orange County Sheriff's Department. He was 80.

“He was sort of the Mr. Big of board making in Huntington Beach when Huntington was the board-making center of the world,” in the late 1950s and early 1960s, said Matt Warshaw, author of “The Encyclopedia of Surfing.”

When Duane opened Gordie Surfboards, dozens of other surfers were making and selling boards, but only his good friends Dale Velzy and Hobie Alter had similar storefront retail operations in Southern California, Warshaw said.

As balsa wood gave way to polyurethane foam-core surfboards, Duane was among the first manufacturers to strengthen them in 1958 by incorporating a thin strip of wood — called a stringer — down the center from nose to tail. The look endured.

“They're still like that,” Duane told the Times in 1980. “I have a reputation for being a rebel ... but history is still history. God, if I'd have patented that!”

The surfing community nicknamed him the Compton Cabinet Maker, a nod to his beginnings. Regarded as a talented surfboard shaper, he originally honed his skill with wood while working at his uncle's cabinet shop.

“Gordie was a supreme craftsman and his shapes were better than most,” Steve Pezman, publisher of the Surfer's Journal, wrote in a remembrance.

In the late 1950s, Duane was also known as the “King of the Abstracts” for dramatic designs that ran the length of the board, according to Pezman.

After a 1958 fire destroyed Duane's shop, he reopened nearby on Pacific Coast Highway and remained in business until 1988.

“He truly helped turn Huntington Beach into ‘Surf City,’ ” said Tom Hamilton, who joined the local surfing scene in the 1960s. “He was one of the giants.”

Ameristar's Jackpot Casinos Post $15.8M Quarterly Profits

TIMES-NEWS

Ameristar Casinos recently announced its Jackpot, Nev., casinos posted $15.8 million in second-quarter net revenue this year. That mark was down from $16.3 million generated at Cactus Petes Resort Casino and Horseshu Hotel & Casino for the same quarter last year, though the company's quarterly and annual revenue so far have outpaced 2010 marks. Those figures weren't enough to keep Ameristar operating in the black, as it incurred a net loss of $41.3 million for the quarter. A company release said pre-tax loss on early retirement of debt of $85.3 million adversely affected the bottom line. Ameristar stock (Nasdaq: ASCA) closed at $21.72 per share Thursday.

Websites Selling Fake IDs a Booming Business

BY BONNIE MILLER RUBIN

Chicago Tribune (MCT)

CHICAGO • Fake IDs for underage drinkers have graduated from being a dorm room enterprise to a China-based Internet business, say authorities who are scrambling to stay a step ahead of the counterfeiters. "We've gone from the days of having a friend with an X-ACTO knife and IDs so bad it's amazing that anyone would believe it ... to now, when they look so real, it's frightening," Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart said. "And they're everywhere." More than 1,700 fake

IDs from China have been intercepted in the Chicago area in the first six months of 2011 compared with about 10 per month last year, said Brian Bell, a Chicago spokesman for U.S. Customs and Border Protection. A recent seizure at O'Hare International Airport included knock-offs hidden inside boxes of books, toys and electronics headed for Chicago and the north suburbs, especially Wheeling, Northbrook and Arlington Heights, Bell said. The packages typically contained two IDs per customer, an extra "in case you lose one," he said. The intended recipi-

"a perfect storm of selling," said Ryan Larson, head of U.S. equity trading for RBC Global Asset Management. Not long ago, Wall Street had mostly convinced itself that the U.S. economy would improve in the second half of the year. Gas prices were falling, and Japanese factories were resuming production after disruptions from the March earthquake. Then one report after another began to show that the economy was much weaker than first thought. Manufacturing is barely growing. The service sector, which covers about 90 percent of the American work force, is growing at the slowest rate in a year and a half. People spent less in June than in May, the first decline since September 2009. And the overall economy is expanding at the slowest pace since the end of the Great Recession. It grew at an annual rate of less than 1 percent for the first six months of this year, raising the risk of another recession.

A Twin Falls bar is promoting itself to regional musicians as a stopover between big cities. Its latest catch: an unsigned LA duo that's getting a little national attention.

Why wait for the weekend for lively music and good food?

Los Angeles-based band Jamestown Revival hopes to win over Twin Falls music fans at its Aug. 17 show. The duo's folksy bluegrass fits well with Anchor Bistro & Bar's eclectic music lineup, as the Twin Falls restaurant tries to brand itself as a hot spot for bands.

Texas natives and long-time friends Jonathan Clay and Zach Chance are Jamestown Revival. In the duo, Clay primarily plays electric guitar and Chance primarily plays keyboard. Both sing and occasionally change up their instruments.

Both Clay and Chance have performed as solo artists for years, but they collaborated on songs that played on shows such as "The Hills," "The Real World," "Lincoln Heights" and "Newport Harbor."

Though the Jamestown Revival collaboration came naturally to the friends, "it was an adjustment going from solo to more of a band feel," Chance said. The two had to learn how to trust each other, and Clay had to deal with control issues. But the endeavor is going well, Clay said.

Though the band is fairly new, the two received attention for making it to the first round of Rolling Stone's cover contest earlier this year. They're now touring the West and promoting "The Knives and Pipes EP."

"I feel like the reception has been a very — I say as humbly as I can — just an overwhelmingly positive one," Clay said. "I feel like it genuinely excites people, which excites us."

The band plays everywhere it can. In addition to the Anchor, Jamestown Revival is performing at small bars, at the House of Blues in Las Vegas and at Ford Amphitheatre in Los Angeles, which seats 1,500 people, Clay said.

Bob Maloney of Anchor Bistro is promoting his restaurant as a good venue for artists on their way to and from larger cities like Salt Lake City, Spokane, Wash., and Boise. Recently, it has hosted artists from Portland, Ore., Boise and Seattle, in addition to local acts like Dillon Mayes. You won't hear hard rock at the venue — Maloney sticks to sounds that are easier on listeners' ears, he said.

"We just like to try to get some really unique music," Maloney said.

Plum Fantastic

As the independent movie 'Peter Plum' films in Twin Falls, the crew is working around downtown's daily life.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

Salt Lake City actor Jeffrey Meyers sat shoeless outside O'Dunkens Draught House as a production crew set up nearby in downtown Twin Falls.

"We've been running his feet ragged," said Aaron Kuerth of Twin Falls, co-director of the independent film "Peter Plum."

Meyers wasn't the only tired one July 29. Throughout late July, the cast and crew of "Peter Plum" worked up to 18 hours a day shooting and producing the movie, which is being marketed by One World Media of Twin Falls. The film uses Twin Falls businesses, apartments and offices as its set.

In the film, the sociopathic title character, played by Meyers, orchestrates problems for co-workers after being passed up for a promotion.

The alliterative name — Peter Plum — is meant to evoke comic book characters like Spiderman's Peter Parker, X-Men's Scott Summers and Superman's Lois Lane.

Don't confuse Peter Plum with a superhero, though.

"He's mendacious and cruel," said Kuerth, who studied psychology in college.

But "Peter Plum" isn't a dark movie,

Glen Silcock, director of photography with Twin Falls-based One World Media, prepares for a scene in the 'Peter Plum' film.

Kuerth said — rather, he hopes it will make people laugh.

The film mixes local actors, including Jud Harmon and Mike Winterholler, with talent from across the United States. In mid-July, New York City-based actor Ryan Murray flew to Twin Falls to film his part.

The July 29 filming generated plenty of curious looks. Crew members hadn't planned for the Friday Night Market but decided that wouldn't slow them down. They continued filming without sound through musician Laura Taylor's streetside performance and planned to add sound later — including music by Twin Falls teen Tanner Bingham.

The crew is always careful not to get bystanders in the shot, Kuerth said, but people often walk into the frame. As they shot footage of Meyers walking down the street, children jumped up and down in the background and made faces. Other people stared and asked what was going on.

Main Avenue isn't the only Twin Falls location that will make an appearance in the movie. The cast and crew filmed office scenes at an insurance company, borrowed an apartment and spent a couple of late nights at Zulu Bagels on Addison Avenue.

Castleford Comeback

Buhl Bunch Car Club is preparing its annual show of collector cars, with diverse offerings meant to lure crowds to tiny Castleford.

When Joe Gellings met his wife, Cheryl, nearly 40 years ago, they were both eastern Idaho high schoolers and he drove a Chevy Nova.

Cruising around Idaho

Falls was the thing to do. Gellings, now 57, cruised in a Chevy Nova — similar to one of the cars he'll display during next weekend's Buhl Bunch Car Club Show & Shine car show in Castleford.

"I couldn't track down the car I had in high school so it's a replica," Gellings said of the '72 Nova Super Sport he's fashioned to remind of him of those cruising days. "There's something about classic and collector cars. Back in my day you were known for the car you drove, so being involved in classic cars now is nostalgic."

Hearing the beautiful strains of music from John Nilsen, the audience couldn't help but relax on this special evening. His impromptu casual program combined hymns, boogie and original selections entertaining everyone. John Lennon's "Imagine" was a real crowd pleaser along with a Christmas tune for hot July weather.

Rarely has a play entertained me this much. These villains and heroes intermingled with the audience, passing out fudge samples and posing for pictures. They had us on our feet singing "I've Been Working on the Railroad" each time a train passed through town. It's well worth the drive for an evening of laughter.

Muddy Fun: Porkers in Jerome

There's a slippery, squealing, mud-splattered reason that you can count on Tuesday being the Jerome County Fair's top-attendance night.

What's the big attraction? Pigwrestling, of course — a competition with a mystifying capacity to turn finicky people into happily bruised and filthy ones. Teams of beauty queens, burly men or tiny girls attempt to heave their pigs into a barrel of mud, and that's a spectacle that packs the arena and draws more than twice the contestants it can accommodate.

Best place for art lovers: You can't beat Ketchum's free Gallery Walk tonight for a sophisticated date. More than a dozen galleries open their doors to show off new exhibits — many of them with nationally notable pieces of art — and you can enjoy wine while meeting artists. If you're a fan of minimalism, be sure to include the Sun Valley Center's fresh exhibit, "The Literal Line," in your walking tour. "Best party of the summer": That's what one fan calls the two-day Northern Rockies Folk Festival, kicking off this evening in Hailey with a varied musical lineup. The folk festival is paired with a car show and, for the first time, an arts and crafts fair.

Last chance: Thursday's free outdoor concert in City Park is the final one of the season for the Twin Falls Municipal Band. That signals the beginning of the end for Magic Valley's summer, so relish it while you can.

"The (Zulu) owners have been great," said co-director Darren Meyers of Twin Falls, who is Jeffrey's brother. Employees kept Zulu open two hours after closing just for the movie.

During shooting, the crew had to get creative. Without a lift or dolly, which allows smooth camera motions for moving shots, camera operator Glen Silcock climbed in the back of an open hatchback while Darren drove the car slowly down the street. They repeated the process until Darren, Kuerth and Silcock were satisfied with the footage.

Between editing and shooting multiple points of view, it takes about 20 minutes of filming to produce one minute of film, Silcock said. That doesn't include preparations like setting up the equipment.

Most movie makers shoot a page and a half of script per day, but because of the actors' tight schedules, the "Peter Plum" crew plowed through most of the movie in a week. One morning, they worked until 2:30 a.m., Kuerth said.

After sending Jeffrey down the street nearly 10 times and shooting him from multiple angles, Darren told them to cut. They decided to grab one more shot of Jeffrey walking in an alley off Shoshone Street.

Jeffrey checked his hair in the reflection of a barber shop window and prepared his feet for more abuse.

Castleford

Gellings is among many enthusiasts expected to descend on Castleford on Aug. 13-14 for the seventh annual car show, which also includes a burnout competition, horseshoe tournament, poker run, beer garden, live music and vendors.

The Buhl Bunch event has drawn well more than 100 vehicles for the show and shine competition in the past, and registrations are arriving daily, show coordinator Mindy Snyder said. Registration of $25 per vehicle includes entry into all events. Participants can enter vehicles through the morning of Aug. 14 for judging.

Castleford hosted another car show and mud drag competition just a few weeks ago. So Snyder said it's been important for this particular event to stay well rounded to draw the crowds.

"We have a lot of extra activities in addition to the car show. Kids get bored looking at cars pretty quickly, so we've been increasing the number of activities for them," Snyder said.

A plus for parents? A lot of the games and activities are free.

Of course, the show is geared for automobile lovers, and the weekend offers ample opportunity to show off or to stand in awe of others' works.

"The burnout and poker run is always a lot of fun for people, even if they don't want to enter the actual show and shine," Snyder said.

Bob Wildman of Twin Falls is already getting exposure for his '55 Chevy — featured on this year's show T-shirt. The vehicle took best-of-show honors last year and is returning to defend the title.

"It's great because when you get into a hobby like this, having awards and such is something to strive for," Wildman said.

Explore Minimalism in New Ketchum Exhibit

TIMES-NEWS

The 1960s and '70s art movement known as Minimalism — and its influence among today's artists — is the subject of a new exhibition at the Sun Valley Center for the Arts.

It opens with a reception from 5 to 8 p.m. today during Ketchum's Gallery Walk. You can enjoy a glass of wine or a cocktail as you view the exhibition that night — and, perhaps, develop a newfound appreciation for simplicity.

Titled "The Literal Line: Minimalism Then and Now," the Ketchum exhibit includes paintings, works on paper and sculpture by Carl Andre, Ruth Laskey, Sol LeWitt, Brice Marden, Agnes Martin, Wes Mills, Fred Sandback and Richard Tuttle. The works are borrowed almost entirely from private collections.

"Andre, LeWitt, Marden, Martin — these are really some of the giants of mid-to late-20th century American art, and it's unusual to see their work outside major museums," exhibit curator Kristin Poole said in a press release.

Don't be put off by the -ism term.

"Minimalism is very much about what is there in front of you," Poole said. "Of course there is a larger historical context, but a viewer doesn't need to be schooled in art to appreciate color, form and line."

Minimalism is about surface and line — about materials and their properties rather than expression or illusion.

Yet there's great variety among the work on view, ranging from Andre's sculptures made of commercially available, usually unmodified units, to Martin's ethereal paintings and drawings. Tuttle makes small three-dimensional objects out of familiar materials like foam or cardboard that are pinned or stacked in the gallery.

Sandback starts with a set of instructions which outline mathematical formulas for determining angles and dimensions. His lines of yarn strung in space are a kind of sculpture that depends on the viewer's intuitive ability to fill in the form.

Marden's calligraphic style joins Minimalist spareness with a romantic sensibility. Laskey's works are made of thread that she hand-dyes and then weaves into bleached linen.

At Tonight's Gallery Walk: Quantum Physics and Art Glass

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

It's up to you how you view Quantum Man or Quantum Woman.

Julian Voss-Andreae's stainless steel sculptures almost disappear when viewed from some angles. At others, they resemble hulking shadows.

Frederic Boloix will show the new 6-foot sculptures by the German physicist-turned-sculptor — which Voss-Andreae based on the quantum physics idea of a moving object consisting of waves — during tonight's free Gallery Walk in Ketchum.

"He's an incredible artist who's been featured in Science magazine and on national TV," Boloix said. "He just finished welding together 1,336 individual pieces of stainless steel for a piece he calls 'antibody molecule,' for the Scripps Institute."

Boloix will display Voss-Andreae's work, along with vivid red portraits by contemporary Spanish artist Salustiano, at his gallery on the second floor of the Friesen Gallery, at 320 First Ave. N. in Ketchum.

Tonight's Gallery Walk, from 5 to 8 p.m., gives strollers the chance to see new pieces, talk with many of the artists who created them and enjoy wine and sparkling water.

One floor below Boloix's gallery, Andria Friesen is bubbling about the new exhibition of glasswork she is showing. The exhibit, curated by part-time Sun Valley resident Geoff Isles, features eight artists including German glass artist Sybille Pereti and Swedish artist Ann Wolff. The latter was recently honored with the 2011 Glass Art Society Lifetime Achievement in Glass award.

"You can't even tell that many of the pieces are glass — they look like wax, or resin. These artists are pushing the concept of glass art as we're used to seeing it," Friesen said.

Isles, a glass artist and collector himself, said he developed the show primarily around glass wall art because it takes a different form than people are used to.

"Glass is always tableware. These are not traditional craft sense of glass but are learning toward the art side. I have no criticism of crafts ... But I wanted something that people would not normally see. And many of these have never been seen before in the Northwest."

Exhibit's Photos Depict Inmates-Turned-Caregivers

TIMES-NEWS

Inmates are becoming volunteer hospice caregivers at a Louisiana prison, and for a week, a small art display depicting that gesture will be at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science at the College of Southern Idaho.

"Grace Before Dying" is the work of photographer Lori Waselchuk. Her photos, taken over three years at the maximum-security Louisiana State Prison at Angola, show inmates caring for fellow inmates who are elderly or terminally ill in a volunteer hospice within the prison. Many of the caregiving inmates' sentences were imposed for murder.

The prison's program has been featured on Oprah Winfrey's OWN network in the "Serving Life" show. Produced and narrated by Academy Award winner Forest Whitaker, the program features testimonials from convicted murderers who are transformed by the experience of providing hospice care to their fellow inmates, CSI's press release said.

The exhibit will be available for free public viewing during the Herrett Center's regular hours Aug. 23-27. The center is open 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays; 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays; and 1 to 9 p.m. Saturdays. NEW ON THE BOOKSHELF

‘Oasis: Escape from Earth’

(Createspace, $14.95)

Former Filer resident Ivis Bo Davis took notice when he heard a report that the electromagnetic field around the planet was beginning to weaken. A question occurred to him: What would happen if Earth's electromagnetic field failed?

Davis

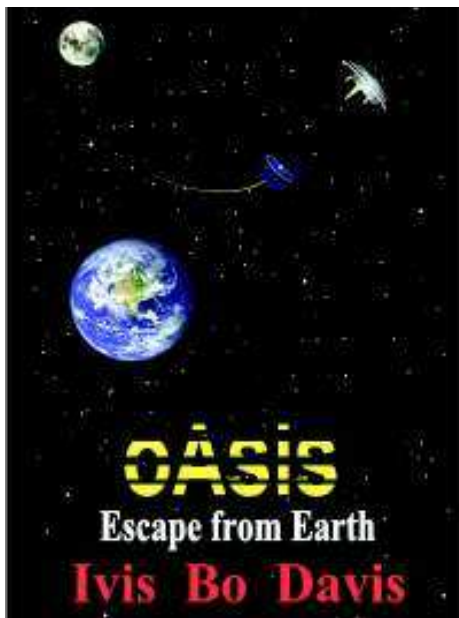

Davis figured all life on Earth would be destroyed. But he also wanted to imagine what would happen to humans on an individual level, and how people would react.

“We couldn't put 8 million people on starships,” Davis said. “The world would turn to anarchy mixed in a pressure cooker of fear and terror.”

So the Texas man set to writing his first novel. The book, which is set in March of 2100, has a Christian element that Davis says is lacking in most science fiction novels.

“I attempt to introduce people to the concept that when they are in trouble there is Jesus who will help them,” Davis said.

The book is part of a trilogy that Davis plans to write. The second in the series will be released by the end of the year.

Davis said he has been in talks with a producer about making “Oasis” into a movie but has signed a confidentiality agreement and couldn't say more.

Vandals Kick Off Fall Camp

BY JOSH WRIGHT
For the Times-News

MOSCOW • Day after day this summer, Idaho football players — the ones who stayed in town — stuck to the same routine. They would make their way through the sleepy campus streets and congregate at the Vandals' practice field for workouts and drills and scrimmages.

Twice the Vandals even traveled to Pullman to go against players from Washington State. Another time they hosted members of Eastern Washington University.

No matter the occasion, Idaho's veterans noticed more players taking part in the summer program than in years past. But more than the number of participants, senior defensive tackle Michael Cosgrove picked up on something else.

"I think we had the most commitment we've ever had," said Cosgrove, a long-haired defensive captain. "We had more guys coming in on extra time and doing 7-on-7 (drills) or trying set-up drills or trying to watch film together."

The time spent working together in June and July started to pay off Thursday, when Idaho gathered for its first practice of fall camp. For some, it felt like just another toasty afternoon on the Sprinturf — only much more official.

"There was a lot more (players here) because the guys know it makes a big difference when the majority of guys are all here during the summer," middle linebacker Tre'Shawn Robinson said after practice. "The camaraderie is a lot better when the guys stay through the summer."

Robb Akey, Idaho's fifth-year coach, was pleased with the work accomplished on the first day. Except for a few players who have yet to become eligible, the bulk of the Vandals' recruiting class — and a host of walk-ons — reported Wednesday and went through conditioning tests Thursday morning.

The most notable missing players were starting defensive end Benson Mayowa and junior college transfers Aaron Lazaro, Brady Lisoski and Su'a Tuala. The coaching staff is waiting on paperwork with

BRONCOS BEGIN

Boise State University hit full speed right out of the chute on the first day college football programs could begin fall practices.

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Players piled into the back of their teammate's trucks by the handful and squeezed their massive bodies inside tiny cars to make the short drive from Bronco Stadium to Dona Larsen Park for the opening of Boise State's fall camp Thursday morning.

For seniors Doug Martin and Tyler Shoemaker, Boise State football's opening practice was the "last first day" of their careers.

"It hasn't hit me yet, that that was my last first day of camp," said Martin, who is coming off a career season of 1,260 rushing yards. "I just want to have a good season and be productive for this offense and the team in general."

Shoemaker, the new leader of the Broncos' wide receiver squad, roamed the sidelines without the familiar faces of departed receivers Titus Young and Austin Pettis by his side.

"It was weird. It was almost surreal," Shoemaker said. "I remember the first day last year, saying that to Titus and Austin and those guys, and now they're really not there and I'm like, 'Oh no. ... Alright, alright we're good, we're good.' It's cool. It's fun."

Martin and Shoemaker practiced along with the other veterans in the morning session of the first day of fall camp for the 2011 season.

After a summer of lifting and training on their own, the players welcomed the change to team football activities and an up-tempo setting from coach Chris Petersen.

"Guys brought a lot of energy today. It's easy on the first day to get excited and be out there, but it's (tougher) next week, day seven or practice No. 9, to bring that same energy," Shoemaker said.

"That's our challenge this whole camp, but I think everyone's excited to get back at it and get back on the field."

One standout in the light rain that hung around Thursday morning's practice was senior cornerback Jerrell Gavins.

Broncos No. 7 in Preseason Coaches Poll

For the second year in a row, the Boise State football team is a Top 10 team in the preseason.

The Broncos, who opened fall camp Thursday, are ranked No. 7 in the preseason USA Today Coaches' Poll released Thursday. It's the second-highest preseason ranking in school history and only the fifth time Boise State has been ranked in the preseason. Last year, the Broncos ranked third in The Associated Press Top 25 and fifth in the USA Today poll going into the season.

"As far as polls go, we don't really look at that. It's preseason," said defensive lineman Shea McClellin. "We'll just do our job during the season and whatever happens at the end we'll see where we are."

The Broncos open the season Sept. 3 against No. 22 Georgia. It is the third straight year Boise State will open the year with a ranked opponent, after playing No. 6 Virginia Tech last year and No. 14 Oregon in 2009.

For the full poll, see S3.

Georgia Eyes Turnaround

Boise State's first opponent starts camp looking to bounce back from a subpar 2010.

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) • Mark Richt dusted off an old speech on the eve of Georgia's first practice.

He hopes it works out like it did in 2002.

The Bulldogs began preseason workouts in sweltering conditions Thursday, only appropriate since their coach is definitely on the hot seat with Georgia coming off its first losing season of the Richt era.

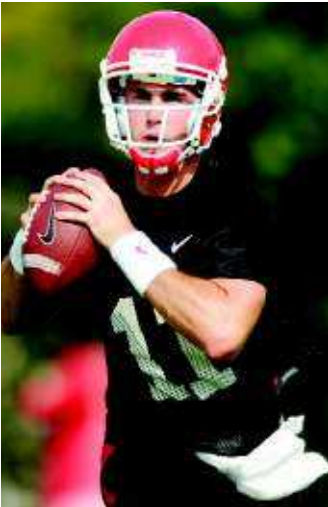

Heading into his 11th season in Athens, the coach knows he must turn things around quickly. His players are eager to do their part.

"We all take it very personally," defensive end Abry Jones said. "We don't really want to be seen as the Georgia years where they had the down years. No one wants that on their record when they leave here."

Speaking with his team the night before, Richt brought up many of the same things he said before the '02 season. The Bulldogs went on to capture their first Southeastern Conference championship in 20 years.

Georgia won the SEC again in 2005 but has been surpassed in recent years by conference rivals such as Florida, Alabama, LSU and Auburn — all of which have won national titles.

Kramer Era Officially Starts at Idaho State

The four-time Big Sky coach of the year started his first fall camp in Pocatello on Thursday afternoon.

BY MARK LIPTAK
For the Times-News

POCATELLO • For Mike Kramer, new head football coach at Idaho State, four years in football purgatory was almost too much to bear.

Kramer, a four time Big Sky Conference coach of the year, was dismissed by Montana State in 2008 after issues involving some of his players off the field. When you love to do something and can't, the fact that you get another chance is meaningful and as the Bengals completed their first day of fall camp under his leadership, he reflected back on what the moment meant.

"I called my attorneys last night who helped make this possible for me, along with friends and some other coaches," he said. "It was very poignant, and I got a little emotional. Just to be back out here, I appreciate the chance that Idaho State has given me."

Kramer seemed to be everywhere the first day, running around on the brand new, state-of-the-art field inside Holt Arena. His players sure noticed him.

"The energy he brings to the field is amazing," said punter David Harrington. "He's always talking. We can't seem to keep him quiet."

Burley graduate Braeden Clayson, expected to be one of the leaders on the offensive line, noted the energy Kramer brought to the program but also something else.

"He's in total control of everything that's going on out on the field. He sees everything and if you aren't doing what you're supposed to he'll tell you exactly what needs to be done ... and he'll keep doing it until you do," Clayson said. A.J. Storms was one of the top linebackers in the nation last year. The senior has been one of the bright spots in a program that's won all of two games the last two seasons. He was asked what was going to be different about the program this year under Kramer.

"Our discipline is so much better than in the past, the people care about one another and as seniors we don't want to go out with a legacy of failure," Storms said. "That drives a lot of us."

"I'm having fun right now," Kramer said with a grin, "and I want my players to have fun. I think we will and I think you'll see a better effort as we get ready for the season."

Broncos

The 5-9, 175-pounder mixed it up with receivers all day, swatting away at least four passes and picking off Kellen Moore on a pass intended for receiver Geraldo Boldewijn in the first team session of the season.

"Overall it was a good practice. People got their legs back under them and people did good today," Martin said. "I felt like everyone was on track. Everyone knew what to do. We'll see how the young guys do."

Boise State continues camp today, splitting practices between veterans in the morning and newcomers in the afternoon through Sunday, before they don the pads for a full-squad practice Monday.

Boise State's public scrimmage will be held Aug. 20 at Bronco Stadium at 7 p.m.

Note: Former running back Malcolm Johnson returned to the field Thursday after re-joining the program as a walk-on.

He was suspended in 2010 and attended Mt. Hood Community College (Ore.), which doesn't have a football team, last year.

Johnson joins Martin, D.J. Harper, Raphael Lambert and Jay Ajayi in the backfield.

Vandals

Lazaro, a defensive tackle, while the rest are wrapping up classes, Akey said.

Linebacker Jeffrey Bediako, a sophomore from Boise who figures to be in the fold for playing time, missed practice with a boot on his right leg because of a stress fracture. He could be out for two weeks or longer, depending on how he heals, Akey said.

If healthy, Bediako and a host of other emerging players will get the chance to grab the coaches' attention.

"With new faces, we're going to find out which of those are going to be able to get into the mix and be factors for us this fall," Akey said. "That's going to be an ongoing process over the next several weeks."

The Vandals, who went 6-7 last year and were picked sixth in the preseason WAC polls, kick off the year on Sept. 1 with Bowling Green at home. Several key position battles remain unsettled — namely on the offensive line and at running back and linebacker — but there are enough returners to give the coaches at least some clarity.

Wideout Justin Veltung was one of the stars of spring camp, and he stood out again with a circus catch on deep route that prompted Akey to hum the SportsCenter theme — his trademark move after a big play in practice. Veltung will compete with Preston Davis and Armauni Johnson for a starting spot.

Faulk's Mind the Secret Weapon in Hall of Fame Career

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) • Kurt Warner understood what made the Greatest Show on Turf work.

It wasn't his strong, accurate arm or those speedy receivers who stretched defenses to the limit. No, the Rams' secret weapon was Marshall Faulk's uncanny mind.

"He was designing plays and coming up with thoughts that would make our team better, not just make him better," Warner said of the newest Rams inductee into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. "Mike Martz allowed all of us to have some input in what was happening, and Marshall always had ideas about how certain things could be better, how to run routes, how to do this or that. You never knew where it came from, but I knew he was a big part of helping develop that offense."

Faulk always saw things differently — on and off the field. He left the tough streets of New Orleans' ninth ward for the sunny skies of San Diego because he was determined to play running back in college. Still, he never forgot about his roots in the impoverished Desire housing project where he grew up.

And while others touted his incredible skills, Faulk never thought the NFL was a real possibility until his freshman season at San Diego State. Even the thought of becoming a part of football's greatest shrine was, well, incomprehensible. That's how Faulk viewed football, as a small part of life. "There is a celebration aspect to it," he said of Saturday's induction ceremony in Canton, Ohio. "But going in is really more of an acknowledgment that kids in poverty, in their situations, can get out of it, and it doesn't always come from sports."

Football was Faulk's escape, but it was the lessons he learned in New Orleans that propelled him

DEAR ABBY: Like other people my age, I'm supposed to get a colonoscopy. The difficulty is that someone has to go to the two-hour appointment with me, as well as supervise me for 3 to 4 hours afterward until the anesthesia wears off.

I don't have family here, and my friends all work full time, so I hesitate to ask them. Can I hire a home health aide to go along with me? Is there a volunteer organization that provides companions? Could I stay in the recovery room for several hours and then take a taxi or drive myself home? The lack of a person to accompany me is the major reason I haven't gotten the procedure yet. I know I must not be the only person in this boat. What do you suggest?

— ON MY OWN IN BLOOMINGTON, IND.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ON YOUR OWN: You're definitely not the only person who has faced this problem, which is why I'm printing your letter.

Do you belong to a church? If so, contact your clergyperson and ask if he or she knows someone in your congregation who would be willing to accompany you for the procedure, drive you home and stay for a few hours. If not, because you live in a university town, contact the school and ask if one of the students would like to earn some extra money by providing you with transportation and supervision.

Or, ask your doctor for a referral to a healthcare aide who might be available to help you. Now stop procrastinating and schedule this very important appointment.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 28-year-old married woman. I work full time, own a house with my husband and have a great family life. As an only child, I have always been close with my parents. I talk to Mom sometimes twice a day and stay at their house when my husband has to work the night shift.

I mentioned to my parents that I want to get a small tattoo on my foot. They went nuts. Mom screamed at me to get out of her house. She said if I get a tattoo I am no longer welcome in her house. I tried explaining that I am an adult and although she may not agree with my choice, the decision is not hers. Dad said tattoos are trashy. Mom wouldn't speak to me for two weeks. I had to send her flowers to smooth things over.

I don't know what to do. I still want the tattoo. My husband isn't wild about the idea, but respects my decision. How do I get my parents to come around on this matter, and on my judgment in general?

— TIME TO CUT THE CORD

DEAR TIME TO CUT THE CORD: You might start by being less dependent on their approval. Tattoos have become so common they are now mainstream — worn by doctors, lawyers and people in just about every profession. A tattoo on your foot would not be a sign you are a fallen woman.

However, think carefully about this decision because once it's on, it's there to stay. And be sure that getting it isn't a delayed form of teenage rebellion on your part and that you can live with the flak that's sure to come with it.

Your letter reminds me of the time I told my mother I wanted to get my ears pierced. Her response was: "I gave you a perfect body. If you want two more holes in your head, it's up to you." I did and never regretted it, but it made me think twice. And that's what you should do.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I created you while I was happy, while I was sad, With so many incidents, so many details."

—Constantine Cavafy

Sometimes, even when you can foresee the general thrust of the defense, the finer point of the play may escape you. In today's deal from a team game, the defenders followed general principles at one table, but looked a little deeper at the other.

Both Souths were in four hearts on the lead of the fourth-highest spade, the six, both Wests wisely deciding that they should not go after club ruffs. Declarer put up dummy's ace, led a club to his king, then played to dummy's diamond king. Both Easts won the diamond ace and cashed the spade king as West followed with the four, making it clear that no more spades would stand up.

In both rooms East could see that declarer planned to discard a diamond loser on the clubs. To prevent ruffs in dummy, one defender played a trump. Declarer won the ace, ruffed a diamond, and pitched his last diamond on the club ace. Although West could ruff in, the remaining trumps fell and declarer claimed the balance in due course.

In the other room East decided to play West for three decent trumps. By continuing with a third spade, he unintentionally set the defense up for a trump promotion. Declarer ruffed the spade, ruffed a diamond in dummy, then threw a diamond on the club ace. The difference was that when West ruffed in and played a fourth round of spades, East ruffed with the jack. This promoted West's heart queen to the setting trick.

ANSWER: If you decide to force this hand to game, bid two diamonds, the fourth suit, then bid hearts. An alternative and quite reasonable approach is to treat the club king as a broken reed, in which case your hand is not worth driving to game. If so, the direct invitational jump to three hearts would be quite sufficient now.

IF AUGUST 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Life is sometimes a messy business, but you might prefer that everything is logical and reasonable in the month to come. Use your penchant for rational numbers to your advantage in September by analyzing investments and bank figures. Your businesslike approach works well for the next few months, but you could be swept away by fantasies in November or December and lose your way. A new romantic someone who grabs your attention could turn out to be less than desirable. February is the very best month to interview for new positions or make financial decisions — and April is the best month to make decisions about love.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Flattery can be your downfall. You may be so pleased to be singled out for praise that you might pay too much for something unsuitable or agree to something that is not in your best interest financially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): When you think you are invincible, maybe you are. Your high opinion of yourself however, should be kept to yourself. A touch of humility will soothe powerful egos and perhaps enrich the bank account.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Goody, gushing sentimentality sometimes goes against the grain. You may be put off by people who lay it on too thick. A significant other could provide the wise advice that is needed to achieve your goals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Insist on your own Patriot Act. Wave the red, white and blue, but be sure to stick to black and white. It is tempting to get your way with false assurances or white lies. Others might camouflage the facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pay the piper to prevent problems. Being sociable and affable can win friends and influence people, but don't overlook financial obligations. Partners and associates could surprise you with unusual views.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Gain the cooperation of associates and loved ones by being sincere about your wants and needs. Keep a careful eye on finances, however, and don't take a bite of any carrot dangled in your face.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are the only person whose opinion counts. Don't crow too much about your accomplishments, as this could spur envy. Make your mark by emphasizing family values and politically correct attitudes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Remember to cool down when the pressure cooker heats up. Quell a brief burst of desire for expensive playthings that aren't really necessary to your happiness. Keep tabs on family members who will back you up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be led by an inspiring example. Someone with high moral values can light the way. Even if people appeal to your generous nature, don't give in to coercion or act against your best interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When romance doesn't fall into place, you can throw your energies into business and career. Extra dollars may satisfy your hunger, so search for helpful contacts to pave the way to riches.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Others may nod their heads in approval while secretly disagreeing. Your heart is surely in the right place, but it is possible to be a bit awkward in social situations. Let the future take care of itself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trust your intuition to guide you where work or service is concerned. A tendency to be overly generous might benefit those selling on commission, but if someone is selling something to you, be skeptical.

Who's Poor in America, Anyway?

For two decades, the Census Bureau has reported almost yearly that more than 35 million Americans live in "poverty." Last fall, census officials grabbed headlines by saying 43.5 million persons were poor. That's one in seven Americans.

But what does it mean to be "poor" in America? What is poverty?

For most U.S. residents, the word "poverty" suggests destitution: an inability to provide yourself and your family with reasonable shelter, nutritious food and clothing.

A Poverty Pulse poll taken by the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, for example, asked: "How would you describe being poor in the U.S.?" The vast majority of responses focused on homelessness, hunger or inability to eat properly, and failure to meet basic needs.

The dominant news media amplifies this link in the public mind between poverty and severe deprivation. Most stories on poverty feature homeless families, or folks living in crumbling shacks, or lines of the downtrodden waiting to eat in soup kitchens.

Fortunately, such images have little or nothing to do with the actual living conditions of most of the more than 40 million Americans defined as "poor" by the Census Bureau.

The government's own survey data shows that in 2005, the average poor household lived in a house or apartment equipped with air conditioning and cable television. The family had a car — and a third of the poor have at least two cars.

For entertainment, the average poor household enjoyed two color TVs, a DVD player and a VCR. If children were in the home (especially boys), the family had a video game system such as Xbox or PlayStation.

A microwave, refrigerator, oven and stove were all in the kitchen of the average poor household. Other conveniences included clothes washer and dryer, ceiling fans, cordless phone and coffee maker.

Not only was the average poor family able to obtain necessary medical care, but when asked most families said they had enough money in the past year to meet all essential needs.

By the family's own report, it wasn't hungry. In fact, the average intake of protein, vitamins and minerals by poor children is indistinguishable from that of kids in the upper middle class. In most cases, it's well above recommended norms.

Poor young men today are actually taller and heavier at age 18 or 19 than young men in the middle class were in the late 1950s.

Should a family that lives this way be considered poor? The overwhelming answer from the public is no. A scientific national poll conducted in 2009 for The Heritage Foundation asked individuals whether they agreed or disagreed with this statement:

"A family in the U.S. that has a decent, uncrowded house or apartment to live in, ample food to eat, access to medical care, a car, cable television, air conditioning and a microwave at home should not be considered poor."

These living conditions closely match those of the typical family defined as "poor" by the Census Bureau. But the vast majority of Americans said they wouldn't regard such a family as poor. That includes 80 percent of Republicans and 77 percent of Democrats.

Does this mean there are few poor families in the United States? Of course not. Many families experience significant material hardship. Fortunately, they are a distinct minority among the more than 40 million Americans the government calls poor.

During the recession year of 2009, for example, the majority of poor families had an adequate and reasonably steady supply of food. However, many worried at times about having enough money for food. One in five temporarily ran short on food at various times.

Although the overwhelming majority of the poor were well-housed, the government numbers show, roughly 4 percent became temporarily homeless during 2009.

Such problems remain a real concern. But effective government policy and programs must be based on accurate information, not sensation-mongering.

In the long run, grossly exaggerating the extent and severity of material deprivation in America won't benefit the poor, the economy or society as a whole.

Profiles in Sleaze and Courage

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday, Aug. 3:

It is often said, and usually supported by polls, that Americans distrust Congress but like their own representatives.

There are times when it is useful to distinguish between the whole and its parts, and one such moment was on display this week during the climactic conclusion of the debate over raising the national debt ceiling.

U.S. Rep. David Wu's story is an all-too-familiar tale of sexual recklessness and the elevation of self-indulgence over loyalty to family, party or principle. According to the Portland Oregonian, which broke this particular scandal, Wu last year pressed himself on an 18-year-old woman who happened to be the daughter of a supporter. She says the encounter was against her will; he reportedly defended himself to aides by saying it was consensual. He stuck around in Washington long enough to cast his vote in favor of raising the debt ceiling, after which he said he would resign his office and head back to Oregon, where he belatedly plans to tend to his family. It is safe to say he will not be widely missed on the floor of Congress — nor, in all likelihood, much welcomed by his family.

By happy contrast, the return of Giffords also was linked to the fateful vote. At first feared dead, she bravely fought back and returned to the floor of the House on Monday just as the vote was being tallied. Her colleagues cheered lustily for the congresswoman, whose radiant smile survived her ordeal. She, too, voted in favor of raising the debt ceiling, perhaps the only thing the gutsy Giffords and the sleazy Wu have in common.

Members of Congress are smaller than the Congress itself, for better and for worse. Some joyously come; some thankfully go.
