Redistricting Plans Pile Up as Talks Continue

Anatomical comparisons aside, this decade's redistricting process has prompted no shortage of plans. With less than a month to go before the Sept. 4 deadline, it remains anyone's guess how legislative district boundaries will be redrawn for south-central Idaho.

Redistricting, which comes once every 10 years following the U.S. census, redraws the state's 35 legislative districts to reflect where the state's population has boomed and waned. When the shakeup is How Could the U.S. Downgrade Affect You?

After more than four years of a housing crisis and major changes in credit card terms, it may be hard to believe that many consumers don't know what types of loans they have. Do you have a fixed-rate mortgage or adjustable? What might change your interest rate? What about credit cards? Here are questions to ask as you assess whether your loans could be affected by market turmoil. For more on the debt downgrade, see the Money page in Nation & World:

Can my interest rate increase?

If you can't find the note in your mortgage packet, contact your bank and ask if the rate on your home loan is adjustable or fixed. For credit cards, if you tossed the last update of your terms, you may find some details on your statement, or you might have to call the number on the back of your card.

What is my loan or card tied to?

Mortgage rates are often tied to the yields, or interest rates, on Treasury bonds. This makes home loans the most vulnerable to the downgrade. So far there's been little evidence that investors view U.S. Treasuries as risky investments - that would have to change in order for rates to climb. Home equity loans and credit cards are more often linked to the prime rate, which is less likely to change based on the downgrade.

How much might my monthly payments increase?

Many adjustable rate mortgages set caps on how much interest rates or payments may rise. For credit cards, your existing balance is protected from rate hikes even on variable rate cards. But new charges would carry the higher rate, which would drive up payments.

How many times per year can my rate adjust?

Home equity loans are most likely to adjust on a monthly basis, followed by credit cards. Mortgages often have limits on the number of times per year rates can change, but that varies widely depending on the source of the loan and when it was opened.

Idaho Educators Weigh In on No Child Left Behind Waivers

BY BEN BOTKIN bbotkin@magicvalley.com

U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan introduced Monday a new waiver system that will change the existing student testing mandates in the federal No Child Left Behind law.

With the law four years overdue for a federal update, Idaho has already moved away from current mandates, seeking and receiving federal approval to hold schools accountable for achievement based on student growth from year to year instead of whether they pass a test.

Here's what two Idaho educators said of the change.

"It's important for people to understand we're not talking about a waiver from accountability. What talking we're about is a waiver from a law (NCLB Act) that was supposed to be reauthorized four years ago. ... You're seeing that the U.S. Department of Education is deciding they can't wait for Congress to Please see WAIVERS, M3

CONSULTANT: OPPORTUNITY REMAINS DESPITE LACK OF BANNER BUILDING TENANT

At budget hearing, consultant reassures URA while downtown proprietor blasts 'spending money on advice' instead of downtown investments.

BY NICK COLTRAIN ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency's 90 days of exclusive rights to a downtown Twin Falls building will pass without a definite new tenant. But consultant Mark Rivers says interest in the old Banner Furniture building remains.

In May, the URA paid $6,000 for the exclusive rights to buy or broker a deal for the for-sale building for 90 days. Rivers told the board he was pursuing art and creativity-related uses for the building at 201 Main Ave. S.

"There is good interest in that building," Rivers told the URA board Monday. "I've met with or discussed with at least half a dozen different arts organizations or businesses that would Please see URA, M2 ho's the premier bass player on the planet? In the jazz world, it's hard to get an argument that it's not Burley's Gary Peacock.

At 76, Burley's Own Zenmeister Peacock May Be World's Best Bassist

Peacock, born in Burley in 1935, has performed with Miles Davis, Art Pepper and most of the big-name jazz musicians of the past 45

He grew up in Yakima, Wash., studied piano at the Westlake College of Music in Los Angeles and played piano in the Army until the group's bassist quit and Peacock took over the chair. After his discharge, Peacock worked on the West Coast with Bud Shank and Pepper among others — and on the East Coast with Davis, Don Cherry and other widely-known musicians.

In 1964, Peacock left the music scene to study eastern medicine in Japan, then came back to America to major in biology at the University of Washington and teach music theory at Cornish College of the Arts. Gradually he started playing again and in the early 1980s he started working with Keith Jarrett and Jack DeJohnette, a collaboration that continues to this day.

A true Zen master, Peacock now lives on a farm in upstate New York where, among other things, he runs a Zen group in a prison.

Peacock told the Web magazine allaboutjazz.com recently that his has been a complicated relationship with the bass.

"At first it was me and the bass," he said. "Something to conquer, something to control. It gave me a sense of identity and a purpose in life. One thing in my life that wasn't flipping out all over the place, something I could count on. As a result of that, it produced a lot of anxiety, because once I became that identified with the instrument, then let's say something happened to my hands, I wouldn't have an identity."

Peacock told Bass Player magazine that Davis, the jazz trumpeter who was perhaps the most influential musician of the 20th century, taught him the art of listening - which helped Peacock master his own art.

"He didn't miss one thing. He heard everything that was happening all the time," Peacock said. "I could hear that he was hearing it. There was that kind of focus, that kind of attention, that kind of commitment to what's happening. It was a great experience, really a great lesson. Miles was a great teacher, without teaching. He didn't teach everything, or anything, and yet taught everything."

At 76, Peacock still gets up at 5 every morning and communes with his bass.

"I have a very strict routine," he told Bass Player. "I have tea and then sit and do zazen. I have yogurt and coffee and then play the bass for an hour and a half or two hours ... usually don't answer the phone until 10 o'clock in the morning."

IDWR Proposes Measuring Wood River Valley Water Levels

An effort to measure the aguifer that runs under the Wood River Valley would form the state's only active water measurement district.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Concerns over the Wood River Valley's water supply are fueling a debate over whether state water officials should measure groundwater levels in the area.

The Idaho Department of Water Resources is in the middle of deciding whether the Upper Big and Little Wood River basins should be managed as the state's only active water measurement district. The new district would measure aquifer levels and monitor area groundwater diversions.

Some surface water users are concerned that groundwater pumping is infringing out their senior water rights.

"Groundwater rights tend to be younger than the surface water rights," said James Bartolino, groundwater hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey. "You can't fairly manage the aquifer system without taking groundwater pumping into account."

IDWR cited the Wood River Valley's growing population and a 2007 USGS report on aquifer levels as some of the reasons why a measurement district would be necessary for the area. "In 2007, we mapped water flows and saw a steady decline," Bartolino said. "But we haven't been measuring since, so we don't know if the water is still declining."

The 2007 report was part one of a four-phase federal study measuring the aquifer under the Wood River Valley. Bartolino, the lead scientist on the project, just finished the third phase, which measured the depth of the aquifer. The results of the third report will be released later this fall.

According to the IDWR website, there are no active water measurement districts in the state. Aquifer measurement in most districts ceased between 2002 and 2007, when several Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer water districts were expanded.

Here's a look at some of the latest possibilities the commission is mulling:

Republican plans

Currently, Twin Falls County is in two districts: District 23, which stretches into Owyhee County, and District 24. That would change to four districts.

One district would hold Elmore and Gooding counties and 3,726 people from Twin Falls County.

Another district would solely be part of Twin Falls County, covering part of the city, Kimberly and Filer. Yet another would encompass the northern edge of Twin Falls County and dip into rural Buhl to form a district with Jerome County.

That's where the changes hit Mini-Cassia, which currently has two legislative districts. One GOP proposal would put the two counties together into one district, along with a 3,747-person sliver of Twin Falls County that covers Hansen and Murtaugh.

Blaine County's legislative district, which also has Lincoln, Gooding, and Camas counties, would lose Gooding County but grow north and east to include Custer, Lemhi, Clark and Butte counties.

But that's not the only prospect. For example, another GOP-proposed plan would put Blaine, Lincoln and Minidoka counties together.

Democratic plans

Twin Falls County would also be split in four parts, but with differences. The city of Twin Falls would have its own district. Much of the rest of rural Twin Falls County would be combined with Jerome County.

The plan would put another 2,641 Twin Falls County residents in with District 26, which currently has Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties. Unlike the GOP proposal that stretches the district north, that would be the only change for the Wood River Valley's district.

Here's one similarity: Both sides of the aisle have plans out that put Mini-Cassia together as one district, with the eastern edge of Twin Falls County rounding out the district with a few thousand more people.

Emma Thalken, 16, has spent her summer vacation from school volunteering at the Assistance League Hollywood Senior Center delivering food to seniors.

College Experts Say Youths Who Volunteer Close to Home Are on the Right Track

BY DEBORAH NETBURN

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • Emma Thalken's best friend is spending August in Ghana, where she will tour the country and do some volunteer work. If all goes well, it will be a life-changing, eyeopening experience. Thalken is spending her summer volunteering with the Hollywood Senior Multipurpose Center, 10 minutes from her parents' Hancock Park, Los Angeles, home.

Both of them could use their summer experience to write a compelling essay as they try to find their way to the college of their dreams. But perhaps surprisingly, college admissions officials say the senior center experience is just as valuable - and maybe more so - than the exotic trip to Africa.

"I've had other friends that have gone, but for me I just wanted to stay and help people in my neighborhood that needed help," said Thalken, who has been volunteering with Assisteens, the teen arm of the Assistance League, for three years.

"There is never any reason to ship off to do volunteer work," said Michelle Hernandez, author of "A Is for Admission" and founder of Hernandez College Consulting, currently based in Vermont. "And if you have to pay to volunteer, it doesn't count. You should look lo-

It's a message that upper middle-class parents have started to internalize. Over the last decade, increased competition for choice college spots has spawned an industry of international travel with a volunteer bent and a hefty price tag for high school sophomores and juniors. But as doing reforestation in Costa Rica becomes more cliche than cool, some families are starting to think that paying for an amazing summer experience won't give their child the edge.

This should come as a relief to parents who don't have the cash to pay for expensive trips, and for kids who need to work during the summer.

Colleen Gold, whose twin daughters will be seniors this fall at two of L.A.'s most prestigious high schools — Marlborough and Harvard-Westlake — said both girls were told by their college advisers that volunteering at home would be more impressive to colleges than volunteering abroad. "I still know a lot of people that do it," Gold said, "but we were told that to some colleges it looks like an excuse for an exotic vacation."

Nancy Forman, who runs the West Coast office for Camp Experts and Teen

"We are finding that the private high schools and colleges want the kids to be able to show they are learning entrepre-neurial skills. So, a lot of our teens will say, we really need to develop our own projects."

– Brian Hawkins, a marketing consultant for Kids Korps USA, an organization that pairs kids with volunteer projects

Summers, a company that helps place kids in summer programs, said she's seen a dramatic drop in the number of parents willing to pay $5,000 to $7,000 to send a teenager to do far-off volunteer work. Part of that is the economy, she said, and part of it is a growing realization that a few weeks of work with elephants in Thailand doesn't mean admission to Greg McKinnon, director of college counseling at the Sage Hill School in Long Beach, Calif., and the president of the Western Association for College Admissions Counseling, said there can be a place for elaborate and expensive volunteer trips on a college application. "Like everything with admissions, if it feels organic to the kids and is explored in other ways in their life, then it is one more affirmation that this is what they are passionate about," he said.

Still, he rarely encourages it: "I've had lots of kids who've done it, and it opens their eyes, but it's not a golden ticket?"

But parents, be forewarned: Just as the era of the elaborate community service trip has lost its luster, a new trend is raising its head: teenage-run nonprofits.

Brian Hawkins, a marketing consultant for Kids Korps USA, a San Diego-based organization that pairs kids with volunteer projects, said he's hearing from his teens that simply volunteering is no longer enough - now they have to show colleges that they surveyed a community, assessed its needs, and created an organization to help serve those needs.

"We are finding that the private high schools and colleges want the kids to be able to show they are learning entrepreneurial skills," he said. "So, a lot of our teens will say, we really need to develop our own projects?"

Wolf Decision Appealed as Hunting Tags Go on Sale

BY MATT GOURAS Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Wolf hunting licenses went on sale Monday in Montana as environmentalists appealed a federal judge's decision to uphold the removal of the Northern Rockies gray wolf from the endangered species list.

Congress this spring removed federal protections for wolves in Montana, Idaho and parts of Utah, Washington and Oregon. U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy earlier this month was critical of the congressional budget rider that removed the predator's status, but said court precedent required him to rule it consti-

The Alliance for the Wild Rockies appealed that decision to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday, arguing it still believes the way Congress made the move was unconstitutional.

Montana hunters will be able to shoot as many as 220 gray wolves in Montana in a hunt scheduled to begin in early September, first with an archery season and then later with a rifle season. The state expects that the hunt will reduce the predator's Montana population by about 25 percent to a minimum 425 wolves.

Environmentalists say they believe the population will be reduced further than

Without a hunt, the Montana population under state estimates was projected to increase to more than 600 animals.

There is no limit on the number of licenses sold, but the hunting season will be closed in hunting districts around the state as regional quotas are reached.

State wildlife managers say the target quota makes good use of available science to make sure there remains a viable population controlled to limit conflicts with livestock owners and reduce predation on big game prized by hunters.

Idaho's hunt starts at the end of August, although managers say they plan to keep the wolf population above 150 animals and 15 breeding pairs.

Mike Garrity, Executive Director of the Alliance for the Wild Rockies, said the planned hunts will kill far too many wolves and result in long-term damage to the recovery of the species.

He was particularly critical of political leaders who designed the maneuver in Congress - Democratic Sen. Jon Tester of Montana and Republican Rep. Mike Simpson of Idaho – exempting wolves from endangered species action and the court decisions surrounding it.

"We are doing all we can to hold back the tide of wolfkilling in Montana, Idaho, and elsewhere in the Northern Rockies," Garrity said in a release. "This ecologically important species is being unfairly targeted out of ignorance and intolerance and now lack a federal shield from being killed."

Garrity said a decision has not yet been made on whether to ask the courts to intervene quickly in order to stop this season's planned

Congress' action did not include wolves in Wyoming. Wyoming officials and the U.S. Department of Interior earlier this month reached a separate, tentative agreement over how to end federal protections for wolves

Retired Cop Seeks Solitude as Guard Station Host

BY BECKY KRAMER

BONNERS FERRY • Jay Lightner brought along a computer and television when he moved to the Snyder Guard Station in Idaho's Moyie River Valley. He also packed candles, a cast iron skillet for cooking on a woodstove and a backup power generator.

His new home is an old Forest Service work camp eight miles south of the Canadian border. Since May, he's been the camp host -avolunteer position that comes with stunning scenery, a one-bedroom cabin and the potential for electrical outages.

Listed on the National Historic Register, the guard station is in the Idaho Panhandle National Forests' rental pool. People sign up six months in advance to stay at the ranger's house, a rustic white frame dwelling with green shutters. Extra cabins and an RV park allow the guard station to accommodate up to 70 overnight guests.

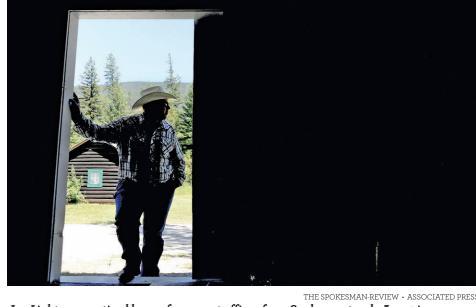

Lightner came across an advertisement for the camp host position this spring. "That's me," he immediately thought.

The remote setting appealed to the retired law enforcement officer from Spokane, who backpacked part of the Pacific Crest Trail in his younger days and once rode his motorcycle to Colorado traveling mostly dirt

When Lightner visited the guard station on March 30, the snow was still kneedeep. That didn't deter him from applying for the host position. He's a fan of "Alone in the Wilderness'' - "that PBS show about the old guy in Alaska who builds the cabin on the lake," he said.

The guard station dates to 1908, the early days of the Forest Service. Rangers who marked timber sales and patrolled federal forestlands lived there. Later, the guard station became a fire dispatch center.

Last week, Janice and George Hunter, of Pasco, Wash., rented the Snyder Guard Station for a family reunion. Janice Hunter had visited her cousins there during summer vacations in the 1950s. Her uncle was the Forest Service ranger onsite.

"There were lots of Forest Service guys, and mules and horses used by the packers," she said. "It was really busy. The guys would all be around, and then they'd all be gone" to a fire.

The cookhouse, bathhouse and building that housed the fire dispatch equipment are still standing. Someday, Hart hopes to set up a small exhibit on the site's history.

Alaska Governor Has Idaho Couple's Back in EPA Fight

If they win U.S. Supreme Court case, it could radically change how and when courts intervene in EPA enforcements, giving people more incentive to take on environmental regulators.

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • Alaska Gov. Sean Parnell wants an Idaho family fighting the federal government to know he's got their back.

In an editorial Sunday, Parnell said Alaska will file a brief supporting a northern Idaho couple when the U.S. Supreme Court hears their case, which stems from the Environmental Protection Agency's move in 2007 blocking them from building on their property near Priest Lake

The EPA determined Mike and Chantell Sackett's land contained a wetland protected by the federal Clean Water Act. It issued a "compliance order" to remove fill material and restore it to its original state — or else face fines of up to $32,500 per day.

The Sacketts sued in 2008 in federal court, contending their land wasn't a wetland, at all.

They lost — a federal judge said their lawsuit was premature — and a subsequent appeal was rejected by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last fall, but this year were granted a Supreme Court audience, likely this December or January.

If they win, it could dramatically change how and when courts intervene in EPA enforcements, potentially giving people more incentive to take on environmental regulators over orders they don't like.

For his part, Alaska's Parnell is in the midst of an ongoing beef of his own with the EPA over its draft guidance governing just which water and wetlands will be protected by the Clean Water Act in the wake of recent court decisions. The Republican governor says he's wading into the Sacketts' case because its resolution will have a "profound impact on Alaska."

"The Sackett family began building a modest home, only to have the EPA show up on the property, shut down the construction, force the family to replant the disturbed land with native vegetation, and then wait for three years before they could apply for a permit," Parnell wrote in an editorial that appeared in the Anchorage Daily News. "In violation of their rights, the Sacketts were denied due process."

Parnell's spokeswoman didn't return a phone call and email seeking comment.

An EPA spokesman declined to comment on pending litigation — or on Parnell entering the fray in Idaho.

Attorneys from the conservative, pro-property rights Pacific Legal Foundation in Sacramento will make their case with high court justices that U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge in Idaho erred when he ruled in 2008 that the Sacketts improperly challenged the EPA's jurisdiction.

Their claim was too early, the judge said, because the EPA hadn't filed an actual lawsuit.

"Congress intended to preclude judicial review of compliance orders prior to the initiation of a civil action," Lodge wrote three rears ago.

But Damien Schiff, the foundation attorney, contends Lodge left the couple with two equally untenable options: Defy the EPA order and risk hundreds of thousands in fines from an uncertain court process; or spend thousands to remove the fill material, plant native grasses and eventually apply for a proper wetlands alteration permit — on property they don't believe is a wetland in the first place.

"It puts people like the Sacketts in a very difficult position, because the Sacketts, first of all, don't believe that the EPA has any regulatory control over their property," he told The Associated Press. "We don't believe that Congress, in fact, intended to foreclose pre-enforcement judicial review of compliance orders."

Chantell Sackett says she just wanted to build a three-bedroom home, not prompt a challenge that could turn the 1972 law to protect the nation's water on its head.

Now, however, her fight with the EPA, which she concedes is a "longshot," has become something of a crusade against an agency she says has overstepped its authority.

"Wow," she said, upon learning Alaska's governor was in her corner. "We want our day in court because we think they tried to bully us."

If justices agree with her lawyers, the case would likely be returned to Lodge's court where she'd be able to argue that her property just up the hill from Priest Lake shouldn't come under EPA control. There's no standing water, no creek that flows into Priest Lake, she said.

"Why would they assign a sewer hookup to this piece of property if it was wetlands?" Sackett said.

Oil Companies Seek to Move Big Loads Through Washington State

BY NICHOLAS GERANIOS
Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. • ExxonMobil and Imperial Oil are seeking permission from the state of Washington to ship giant oil sands processing equipment to the Port of Pasco, and then move the loads by truck across eastern Washington for eventual shipment to Canada. The companies say they are seeking the new route because intense opposition has slowed their original plans to ship the equipment to the Port of Lewiston in Idaho and then truck it over scenic U.S. 12 into Montana and finally up to the Kearl oil sands in Canada.

The oil companies say the equipment to be moved through Washington would be cut down to a smaller size than the megaloads planned for movement across U.S. 12.

"Because of delays, we need to pursue other routes to keep the project on track," ExxonMobil spokeswoman Cynthia Bergman White said.

Regulators in Washington, Idaho and Montana must approve the new shipments, which would last for more than a year.

She was a dedicated state of Idaho employee for nearly 35 years. Marilyn loved and appreciated her co-workers, many of whom she considered part of her family. She enjoyed her work and the opportunities it gave her to help those in need.

Marilyn married Russ Lively on Aug. 12, 1978, and they had many years of happiness together with their children and grandchildren. Her grandchildren were the pride and joy of her existence. Many times, she would hear of someone in need and would help any way she could without question, often anonymously. She enjoyed "putzing" in her yard and spending time with her family, friends and animals.

She was an animal lover and took a great deal of pride in the efforts she put in to helping animals. Marilyn volunteered during animal adoption events and devoted countless hours raising money to build a new Twin Falls Animal Shelter. One of her favorite projects was "Randy's Buddy," a onewoman operation she started after meeting a mentally ill man who inspired her to collect and distribute dog and cat food

Donna Mae Sloneker-Hannah

Sept. 5, 1941-July 26, 2011

Donna is preceded in death by her parents, Delores A. Smith and Harold Sloneker. Donna is survived by six siblings, Jerry (Pat), Robert (Sherry), Jo Ann, Vicki (Rick) Gebhardt, Mark and Dave, all of Minnesota; her five children, Jerrod (Jennifer) of Meridian, Kim (Ken) Menck of Bellevue, Jennifer (Hannah) Vanquill of Twin Falls, Melinda Reed of Meridian and Michelle Goodwin of Boise; eight grandchildren Braeden Hannah of Meridian, Kyle Menck of Bellevue, Kira (Gary) Menck-Workman of New York, Allyson Hesteness and Ashley Hesteness of Hailey, Zachary Goodwin, and Makenzie Goodwin and Madison Goodwin of Boise; and one great-grandchild, Jaycee Menck of New York.

Donna was born in Benson, Minn.. She moved to Twin Falls in 1978. In 1981, Donna began working for the College of Southern Idaho, where she dedicated 26 years of her life before retiring in 2007. While she was recognized as a hard worker, she was best known for her homemade soups she would bring in to work every week.

Donna also found tremendous joy preparing wonderful meals for her family; they were always made from scratch and with love.

In 2009, Donna moved to Meridian. This allowed her to see her children more often and spend quality time with her grandbabies. Seeing or hearing from any of them was easily the highlight of Donna's day. They were the light of her life.

Donna's last wish was to be at home. While the final day came much too soon, she was in her own room, among family, pictures and memories. We love her and miss her very much.

The Hannah family would like to thank the wonderful staff at St. Luke's in Meridian and Harrison's Hope Hospice in Meridian.

To honor Donna's wishes, no formal service will be held. Cremation is under the direction of Cremation Society of Idaho. If you would like to send condolences or memories of Donna, please email them to TheHannahs@cableone.net.

Former U.S. Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon Dies at 89

BY TERRENCE PETTY Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. • As a 23year-old Navy officer in 1945, Mark Hatfield was among the first American servicemen to personally see the destruction wrought upon Hiroshima by an atomic bomb.

It was an experience that helped shape Hatfield into an outspoken critic of war as he went on to become a two-term Republican Oregon governor then the longest-serving U.S. senator in Oregon history.

Hatfield – one of the most influential politicians the state has seen - died in Portland Sunday night at age 89, said his longtime friend and former aide, Gerry Frank.

The Oregonian reported he passed away at a care center. The cause of death was not immediately released. Hatfield had become increasingly frail over the years.

He was elected governor of Oregon in 1958 and re-elected in 1962 before winning his first U.S. Senate campaign in 1966. He served five terms in the Senate, from 1967 to 1997.

Hatfield is best known at the national level for his pacifist ways, which often put him at odds with fellow Republicans but endeared him to many Oregonians.

At the 1965 National Governors Conference in Los Angeles, he was denounced as a traitor for casting the lone "no" vote among 50 governors on a resolution supporting President Johnson's policy in Vietnam. In the early 1970s, he joined then-Democratic Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota to sponsor an amendment seeking to end the Vietnam War. A decade later, he helped launch a campaign for a nuclear weapons freeze.

Oregonians remembered Hatfield for his considerable accomplishments and for an independent streak the moder-Republican ate showed during five decades in public of-

"Senator Hatfield Hatfield played an enormous role in making Ore> gon what it is today," said U.S. Sen. Jeff Merkley, a Democrat. "He should also be remembered, in this age of bitter partisanship, for his bipartisan and gracious diplomacy."

A similar message came from U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden, another Democrat: "He was a giant and the kind of senator America needs now more than ever. He was the person who brought the Senate together on issue after issue."

As chairman and later ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, Hatfield steered millions of dollars to public works projects in his home state. The projects ranged from national scenic areas and hydropower dams to the state university system and the Marine Science Center that bears his name in Newport, Ore.

"No one has had a more profound impact on Oregon in the last half-century than Mark Hatfield," said Gov. John Kitzhaber, a Democrat.

"The adrenaline's flowing now. I don't believe much in destiny, but you have to take what you can get, and this is what I dreamed of: a silver platter."

— American endurance swimmer Diana Nyad before setting off in a bid to become the first person to swim across the Florida Straits without the aid of a shark cage.

OUR VIEW

T.F.'s West, South Underrepresented on Council; Does it Matter?

When you're 20 cars deep in a street construction project in south Twin Falls, it's tempting to wonder whether your City Council representatives are enduring the same commute.

he Progressives who were the intellectual authors of Idaho's system of government — from the state level down to the school districts — took one look at the ward-heeling corruption of America's big cities and decided they wanted something better here.

So while there are congressional and legislative districts and county commission zones, on the city level they encouraged a system under which council members didn't have just a single constituency but the whole community.

The tradition of at-large representation — most Idaho city council members don't answer only to constituents in specific geographic districts — has served the state pretty well, although it's concentrated the governing class in many cases.

Financially secure people — the kind of folks most likely to run for city council — tend to live in similar neighborhoods. And sometimes, the same neighborhoods.

A majority of the Twin Falls City Council, for example, lives within about one-third of a square mile in the northeastern part of town.

And seven council members reside east of Blue Lakes Boulevard and north of Elizabeth Boulevard. But that's usual, even by Idaho standards.

Take the two Idaho cities — Coeur d'Alene (44,137) and Caldwell (46,237) — whose populations come closest to Twin Falls' (44,125).

In Coeur d'Alene, the more affluent neighborhoods are located north of Interstate 90, and three of the seven City Council members live there.

But four councilmen reside in the city's core, and three live north of East Sherman Avenue and east of North Government Way — the part of Coeur d'Alene where property values are lowest.

Caldwell's council members are likewise spread out geographically. Four live in generally more prosperous areas east of Interstate 84. But of the three who reside west of I-84, none lives east Kimball Avenue in the crime-prone downtown area.

Yet in Twin Falls, many longtime city council members — Howard Allen, Chris Talkington and Gale Kleinkopf, for example — have mostly resided in the same northeast neighborhood for decades.

So what does that mean if you live in say, South Park, and can't get to work on time because Blue Lakes Boulevard or Washington Street — or both — are always torn up?

It won't do you much good to complain to your alderman — they're city council members of represent specific districts — because you don't have one. So are your complaints taken as seriously by the council as those of someone who lives, for example, on Eastland Drive in the city's northeast corner?

Council members say yes, and that they get an earful from constituents all over the city.

But if you're not inclined to believe them, there's one surefire remedy:

How Does Democracy Do in an Aging Society?

emocracies and brutal dictatorships alike have managed to industrialize their economies, but freedom and the rule of law have been essential for the jump into advanced prosperity. Singapore is arguably the sole, tiny (population: 4.3 million) exception to that rule; China's Communist Party is betting it can shape the first giant one.

But how well does democracy work once countries enter what you might call the AARP stage of life? We don't know. It's the key question reflected in the political turmoil roiling Europe, Japan and the United States.

In all three, economies are slowing and populations are aging. In the 34 advanced democracies that make up the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, there are on average 4.2 people of working age (20 to 64) for every one who is 65 or older. By 2050, OECD projects the ratio will be down to 2.1 to 1.

That's a stark decline, and it helps explain why politics in Berlin, Tokyo and, not least, Washington are so difficult. The only hope for an AARP society is to keep investing in children's health, schools and colleges, roads, rail, fiber optics, and research and development to stoke economic growth.

Fred

Hiatt

A lot of that investment has to come from the private sector, but a lot has to come from government. That in turn requires sufficient revenue (which many Republicans oppose) and making sure that future-oriented spending isn't crowded out by pension and retiree health costs. So in different ways, both American parties are representing the interests of the past and present against the future - and the constituency of the future is growing, proportionately. smaller and smaller.

What's both encouraging and frustrating about the debate that has Washington tied up in knots is that America is better off than most other countries, and its problems more solvable. With strong political leadership the country still has the potential to be prosperous and powerful for a long time.

Start with the basics: ample space (we're the world's third-biggest country); sizable population (also third in the world); natural resources; a friendly neighborhood; and wealth virtually unmatched in history or geography.

U.S. total economic output, or GDP, was $47,186 per person in 2008, compared with $33,748 for the OECD as a whole. Among those 34, only Norway and Luxembourg's were higher. U.S. income is less equally shared than it should be, but a poor American is still wealthier than an average Chinese, whose per capita GDP was $7,600 in 2010, according to the CIA World Factbook.

And thanks to immigration and a higher birth rate, the United States is better off than most advanced countries when it comes to the aging of its population. There are 4.7 working-age Americans for every one of retirement age today, compared with only 2.8 in Japan. And even in 2050, the OECD estimates that the U.S. ratio will be 2.6, more favorable than the OECD average and far higher than Japan's astonishing 1.2.

Still, in some key measures, the United States is weakening: in college completion rates, investment in roads and other infrastructure, and, crucially, in accumulation of government debt. What unites those three things is AARP-stage thinking: It's the next generation that will pay the debt, drive the pitted roads and suffer declining prosperity due to inadequate education

There's no reason to think that non-democracies will handle this challenge better. As Nicholas Eberstadt of the American Enterprise Institute has pointed out, China will be the first country to be simultaneously aging and developing, in part because its rigidly enforced one-child rule has already reduced its worker-to-retiree ratio to 8 and will help bring it to 2.4 in 2050, according to the OECD.

Moreover, the Chinese Communist Party will fret over its legitimacy as long as it deprives people of political liberty and so may find itself more prone to economic populism.

But a failure of autocracy would be no comfort to democracies that can't rise to their challenge. It's true, as Eberstadt writes, that "demography need not be economic destiny," but overcoming the political challenge imposed by demography means appealing to voters' larger sense of patriotism, and their hopes for their children and grandchildren, above the special interests that fan the Iwant-mine mentality and the parties that can thrive on the fears of older voters.

That's a lot to ask of Barack Obama and John Boehner. But it is what the country needs.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Redistricting Would Benefit Magic Valley

I urge the Times-News and Magic Valley residents to support legislative redistricting map L28. It does the best job of keeping Magic Valley counties from being sliced and diced and reunites Twin Falls City into a single legislative district (see http://www.legislature.idaho.gov/redistricting/PlanHtml/L28.pdf).

Map L28 joins all but a few precincts of rural Twin Falls County with Jerome County which are united by families, jobs and congregations that stretch across the canyon. Twin Falls and Jerome counties have interdependent businesses that service our populations and enterprises, including auto and farm equipment dealers, farm supply outlets, a beet sugar refinery, a cheese factory and other food processing industries. A broad spectrum of interdependent home and business services serve one another across the two communities.

We have very similar agriculture. Our canal companies have a history of working together to steward our precious water resources. We enjoy numerous shared recreational resources. We are united in supporting the CSI taxing district which provides the Magic Valley our most important educational, cultural, careerbuilding and labor-force training resource.

Legislative redistricting proposal L28 does the best job of holding our Magic Valley communities of interest as closely together as possible, given all the constitutional and statutory requirements. L28 also largely fixes the bifurcation of Twin Falls City and County into the current legislative Districts 23 and 24. District 23 currently takes half the population of Twin Falls City and County, cutting through School District 411, the CSI funding district, our law enforcement and social services infrastructure and every other aspect of our community and grafts it incompatibly onto Owyhee County, whose population center is west of the Bruneau Gorge, stretches to the Oregon border, and has virtually no commerce, civic cultural or state service ties with Twin Falls City or County.

Forget S&P; Europe is the Real Danger

urope may no longer be able to save itself. Too many countries have too much debt. Its economic growth which helps countries service their debts — is too feeble. And nervous financial markets seem increasingly prone to dump the bonds of vulnerable countries. This is the real risk to the global and U.S. economic recoveries, far overshadowing Standard & Poor's downgrade of U.S. Treasury debt and Monday's sharp stock market decline.

Europe represents about one-fifth of the world economy and buys about a quarter of American exports. While Europe's debt crisis was confined to a few small countries, they could be rescued; other European countries supplied loans to substitute for the credit denied by private lending markets. In 2010, Greek, Irish and Portuguese government debt totaled about $910 billion, less than 7 percent of the 9.8 trillion euros of debt of all members of the European Union.

With Spain, Italy and possibly France now under financial assault, the situation changes dramatically. There are more debtor nations and more debt at risk. In 2010, Italy's debt was 1.8 trillion euros; Spain's 639 billion euros; and France's 1.6 trillion euros. But there are fewer countries that can support a rescue; and some of them have heavy debts. Even Germany's ratio of debt-to-gross domestic product, a measure of debt in relation to its economy, was a hefty 83 percent last year, similar to France's.

Idaho's Returning Warriors Need Our Support

Our nation's National Guard and Army Reserve members are a tremendously valuable component of our nation's full-time military, particularly as we face global unrest and natural disasters. This all-volunteer citizen force, representing less than 1 percent of our population, shoulders the responsibility of protecting our nation. The loved ones and employers of these citizen warriors have stood by their side and quietly braved their long deployments. It should be remembered that the men and women of the Guard and Reserve do not serve for shows of appreciation, medals or adulation. Their call is for service, patriotism and that America is worth defending.

However, it must be understood that their ability to answer when called relies on the support of our communities. One of the most meaningful ways we can assist is to ensure that they have meaningful jobs when they come home.

In the past decade, more that 2,500 of Idaho citizen soldiers have put their civilian lives on hold to answer the call to mount up and ride into battle. In the next few months alone, Idaho will have 2,100 of these soldiers coming home and wanting to get back into the civilian life. A large number of these returning warriors need jobs. Providing jobs to these extraordinary Americans honors their service and restores some of the security and comfort they sacrifice to keep the rest of us safe. Their families have also borne burdens during this time, especially the many forced to adjust child care, household chores and all the responsibilities of daily life without the support network of a nearby military base.

Employing Guard and Reserve members also brings their military training and experience to the civilian work place. Our military instills an innate drive, work ethic and loyalty in these men and women and remember these service members lead and perform under incredibly stressful conditions. The Department of Defense is dedicated to keeping the relationship between Guard and Reserve members and their employers positive.

National fefense is one of the sacred duties of an American citizen.

"In times of war and not before, God and soldiers men adore. But in times of peace, with all things righted, God is forgotten and the soldier slighted."

Let us each make an effort to find a way to support our neighbors and colleagues in the Part Time Military Force and ensure

Follow the Rules While Recreating

Magic Valley affords us the opportunity to participate in many recreational and outdoor activities. As a walker and golfer, I share space with others on the Canyon Springs grade. It is evident that sharing space has become a problem that needs to be addressed.

As a walker, my responsibility is to adhere to the rules of the road: walk single file and face the traffic. Along with this, I also need to follow the speed limit laws while traveling back and forth on this grade. It is simple, follow and respect the laws and others while utilizing the grade.

It is great to see so many people participating in fitness activities such as walking and golfing. Working together is a better choice. Please follow the rules and remember: Safety First!

We Failed to Control Those We Voted into Office

It happened once before, but then it was to an enemy force. We thought it would never happen again, prayed it never would. This time it's due to a number of our own citizens and one with questionable documentation.

On its own, the place isn't much and, until recently, had no legal or political standing.

We lost it first in 1814 when foreign invading forces came like termites, unseen, unheard, undetected. They took what they wanted and burned the rest. They came, they saw, they destroyed. Then they went home.

In the 20th and 21st centuries, the destroyers, the defilers came and were greeted with banners and shouts of praise. They came, they saw, they destroyed, but they didn't go home. They bought expensive homes, took their place among us and have been accepted as friends, neighbors, saviors.

Once long ago, congressmen and senators were respected, revered by some but mostly tolerated by the majority. The incidence of lewd and lascivious behavior, passing of bad checks, evading income taxes, hiring illegal servants, extramarital affairs, illegal drug use, immoral misuse of travel privileges, influence peddling, favoritism in contract awarding and other offenses too numerous to mention set them apart as much as if they had come wearing foreign combat troop uniforms. Had they done that, we might have had a chance.

Anyway, we lost Washington, D.C., the first time due to strategic misdirected troops. This time, we lost it due to an inability to control those we hired to work for us. You should realize that the city is just the start. Eventually, unless we wake up, the whole nation will go the same way. It's already started.

If there's anybody in D.C. representing my wishes, they must be in a box where they can't be heard. Where's Sheriff Joe Arpiao when we need him?

Social Security Going to Those Who Didn't Pay

The federal government's "welcome wagon" for millions of illegal immigrants while the economy falters is insanity.

If citizens cannot receive Social Security payments, as Obama warned, entitlements to non-citizens should stop. In California, illegal immigration created a burden on schools with overcrowded classrooms, lack of supplies and curriculum changes. Teachers needed a special credential (CLAD) to teach non-English speakers or LEP students.

To counteract the huge massive invasion of non-citizens and drain on the state's budget, Californians voted for Prop 197 to deny benefits for illegal aliens. Hispanics protested, waving Mexican flags. Unfortunately, one federal judge overturned the will of the voters.

Furthermore, working citizens who paid into the Social Security system for years cannot draw full payments if they teach later because of the Windfall Elimination Provision. Yet, the federal government continues to dispense SSI checks to illegal immigrants crossing the border to have babies.

With the economic crisis and high jobless rate, amnesty should not be on the table. For the 47 percent or more not paying taxes, to quote Richard Dreyfuss in Close Encounters of the Third Kind, "Who are you people?"

Citizens should fax, phone, write and vote. It is our tax dollars.

Salaries for All Congressmen Should Be Cut

Let us start a campaign on reducing all congressional, etc., salaries. Didn't we read where they said "everything is on the table"?

After all, presidents get $400,000 and retired presidents $180,000 for life. The House and Senate now get $174,000; Speaker of the House, $223,500; majority and minority leaders, $193,400 a year. We have four retired presidents I can recall and three or four vice presidents. These people all get free medical, dental, eye care at our expense; untold numbers of senators and representatives are retired receiving excellent retirement, especially if they've been in there six years, to collect the rest of their lives. Boise Leaders Ponder New River Rec Rules

BOISE (AP) • Leaders in Boise are considering giving police more flexibility to issue tickets and fines quickly to people who jump from bridges into the Boise River or harass people floating down the popular urban stream.

Officials say the proposed changes have been prompted by an increase in reports of drug and alcohol use along the river and complaints from floaters who say they are being harassed or endangered by swimmers.

In 2009 and 2010, Boise bicycle patrols responded to 43 reports, while the city's volunteer rangers who patrol the greenbelt noted 36 other complaints. But this year, police are getting calls daily about troublesome behavior on the river, according to a story published Monday by the Idaho Statesman.

The Boise City Council had intended to take up a plan Tuesday to fast track changes designed to make it easier for police to issue citations and fines to bridge jumpers and other offenders before the summer floating season ends.

But Mayor Dave Bieter announced Monday the council would take a little more time and seek input from the public before making any changes.

"This issue needs more time for public input and a more thorough policy discussion," Bieter said in a press release.

The Statesman reports that the proposal would make offenses like bridge jumping or surfing the river by using a board tied to a fixed object - a bridge or concrete abutment - an infraction,punishable with a $98 fine.

Currently, those offenses are misdemeanors, and enforcement involves making an arrest and sending the case through the juvenile or adult court system. Boise Police Department Sgt. Clair Walker told city officials the current court process is time consuming, burdensome and lacks natural consequences or deterrents for juvenile offenders.

Police say problems are most severe on or near the several pedestrian bridges where kids gather to jump or hang out, leading to fights and other confrontations.

Last year, a 17-year-old boy jumped off the bridge intent on "bombing" the rafts below. The jumper struck a 4-year-old girl in a raft, sending her to the hospital.

Alaska Solves Mystery of Orange Beach Goo

BY RACHEL D'ORO Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska • Scientists have identified an orange-colored gunk that appeared along the shore of a remote Alaska village as millions of microscopic eggs filled with fatty droplets. But the mystery is not quite solved. Officials with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Monday they don't know for sure what species the eggs are, although they believe they are some kind of crustacean eggs or em-

They also don't know if the eggs or if they are toxic, and that worries many of the 374 residents of Kivalina, an Inupiat Eskimo community located at the tip of an 8-mile barrier reef on Alaska's northwest coast.

There's been at least one report of dead minnows found in the lagoon of the village the night the eggs appeared last week. Residents also are worried about the community's dwindling reserves in village water tanks even though the orange mass has dissipated from the lagoon and Wulik River, said city administrator Janet Mitchell.

"It seems to be all gone," she said. "But if they're microscopic eggs, who's to say they're not still in the river?"

Scientists also don't know why the unidentified eggs suddenly emerged on the shores of Kivalina last week. Villagers say they've never seen such a phenomenon before.

"We'll probably find some clues, but we'll likely never have a definitive answer on that," NOAA spokeswoman Julie Speegle said.

Samples are being sent to a NOAA laboratory in Charleston, S.C., for further analysis. The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation also sent samples Monday to the Institute for Marine Science at the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

Earwigs particularly enjoy the flowers and young leaves of clematis, dahlia and chrysanthemums, but in years when earwigs are abundant many other plants may also be damaged.

What are earwigs? - Earwigs are yellowish brown insects, up to 13-15 mm long (about 1/2 in), that have a pair of distinctive pincers or forceps on their rear end.

Biology - Earwigs overwinter as adult insects in the soil and other sheltered places. Batches of eggs are laid in the soil in midwinter and again in early summer. Female earwigs remain with their eggs until they have older foliage is reduced to a tattered network of veins Inspect plants by torchlight on a mild night to find earwigs feeding on the flowers Other nocturnal pests that could be responsible are slugs, snails or caterpillars Control - Earwigs hide in sheltered places during the day and emerge to feed after dark. Avoid growing susceptible plants against wooden fences, which provide daytime hiding places.

They can eat small insects and eggs, as well as plant material. Symptoms - Flower petals and young leaves are eaten;

Non-chemical control - Trap earwigs by placing upturned flower pots loosely stuffed with hay or straw on canes among plants being attacked. Every morning shake out the pots and remove the earwigs. This may not protect plants when earwigs are abundant, but it is a useful means of monitoring their numbers

Chemical control - Before resorting to chemicals remember that earwigs are omnivores and can be of benefit in the garden by eating small insect pests and

A shop is set on fire as rioters gather in Croydon, south London, Monday. Violence and looting spread across some of London's most impoverished neighborhoods on Monday, with youths setting fire to shops and vehicles, during a third day of rioting in the city that will host next summer's Olympic Games.

Rioting by Youth Gangs Spreads in Britain

Youths wearing balaclavas, and wielding sticks and iron rods, meet up to vandalize and loot shops. Police flood the streets and announce scores of new arrests.

BY JANET STOBART Los Angeles Times

LONDON • Looting and arson by gangs of youths spread Monday from poor northern districts of London to the south, to tourist areas of the capital and to Britain's second-largest city as police flooded the streets and announced scores of new arrests.

Prime Minister David Cameron and other senior officials broke off their vacations and returned to London to try to stem the worst outbreak of urban violence in Britain in a quarter-century. It started Saturday night in the aftermath of a peaceful protest over the police shooting of a 29-year-old man in an operation to control illegal firearms.

But some community leaders say the violence appears to also be a reaction to frustration over high unemployment and cutbacks in government services in mixed-race, low-income neighborhoods.

Youths wearing balaclavas, and wielding sticks and iron rods, use social media to stay in touch. They meet up to vandalize and loot shops where they can smash windows or break open the doors.

Shops shut early Monday evening and all London's district governing councils were on alert. Police warned residents to be vigilant as news of rioters fanned through the city.

Some people out shopping or on errands found themselves caught up in aggressive mobs of youths.

By Monday afternoon London police had arrested 215 people and charged 27 with burglary, theft and violent disorder.

Home Secretary Theresa May, who broke off her vacation to deal with the crisis, said 35 police had been injured in the two days' of riots. May called the violence unacceptable. "There is no excuse for looters, thuggery or violence going on in the streets," she said.

Maid Sues Strauss-Kahn Over Hotel Encounter

Deadly Crash Highlights Special Forces' Role

U.S. military releases new details about helicopter crash in dangerous area of Afghanistan that killed 30 U.S. troops, seven Afghan commandos and interpreter.

BY DEB RIECHMANN and LOLITA C. BALDOR

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • The loss of dozens of elite American troops to a Taliban rocket-propelled grenade is a window on the war to come - focused increasingly on the type of special operations the troops were pursuing when their helicopter crashed. The U.S. military released new details Monday about the crash in the Tangi Valley, a dangerous area of Wardak province on the doorstep of the Afghan capital. The 30 U.S. troops, seven Afghan commandos and an Afghan interpreter who died were taking part in one of thousands of nighttime operations being conducted annually across the nation. The sheer number of these missions is evidence that progress in the nearly decadelong war depends more on efforts to kill or capture insurgents than the overarching strategy of building support for the Afghan government at grassroots levels. And these missions will take on relatively more importance as troop levels decline.

Jeffs Heard on Tape Girls for Sex

BY PAUL J. WEBER Associated Press

SAN ANGELO, Texas • Softly telling five girls to "set aside all your inhibitions," convicted polygamist leader Warren Jeffs was heard Monday giving his child brides instructions on how to please him sexually during a graphic 10-minute tape played for a Texas jury.

Prosecutors later rested their case, and jurors could hand down their punishment to Jeffs as early as Tuesday. He faces life in prison after the same jury convicted him last week of sexually assaulting two of his "brides," who were 12 and 15.

Jeffs' attorneys rested without calling any witnesses. They did so as Jeffs sat in another room of the courthouse, boycotting the proceedings for a third straight day.

He was not in the courtroom Monday when an FBI agent introduced a 2004 audiotape that he said preceded Jeffs having sex at the same time with five girls, who were 15 and younger.

Ed. Chief: States to Get Waivers on No Child Left Behind

BY DORIE TURNER

Associated Press

The Obama administration effectively gutted the Bush-era No Child Left Behind law Monday, giving states a way out of a decade-long policy that focused on holding schools accountable but labeled many of them failures even if they made progress.

To get a waiver from the program, however, states must agree to host of education reforms the White House favors - from tougher evaluation systems for teachers and principals to programs tackling the achievement gap for minority students.

The federal law, which requires every student to be proficient in science and math by 2014, is four years past due for reauthorization. But it has become mired in the increasingly bipartisan mood on Capitol Hill despite repeated calls from President Barack Obama and Education Secretary Arne Duncan for changes to be made before the school year starts. Obama sent an overhaul proposal to Congress 16 months ago.

Duncan has warned that 82 percent of U.S. schools could be labeled failures next year if the law is not changed. Education experts have questioned that estimate, but state officials report a growing number of schools facing sanctions under the law from having to offer free tutoring to being forced to shut down entirely.

Tired of waiting for Congress to act, Obama has told Duncan to move forward with waivers, said Melody Barnes, director of the Domestic Policy Council for the White House.

"We have a federal law that's an impediment, that's getting in the way as a disincentive for the great work states are doing, Duncan said in a call with reporters Monday afternoon. "That just doesn't make sense at a time when we have to get better faster than ever be-

Goodbye, House Pages

House Speaker John Boehner and Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi say 200-year-old program can no longer be justified when messages and other materials are delivered electronically.

BY LARRY MARGASAK Associated Press

WASHINGTON • After nearly 200 years, the House page program that allowed high school students to serve as messengers and learn about Congress is ending, rendered obsolete by the Internet and email in costcutting times.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, and Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said Monday that the $5 million annual expense can no longer be justified when messages and other materials are delivered electronically. The bluejacketed pages, who have been a common sight in the House since the 1820s, now have little to do, according to the two leaders.

The program, which also has been touched by scandal, will end by Aug. 31.

Before the Internet and personal electronic devices, pages "crisscrossed the congressional complex each day delivering countless messages and documents to members, committees and leadership offices," the two leaders said in a letter to House members - delivered

Two studies begun in 2008 found that while the young aides were once "stretched to the limit delivering large numbers of urgently needed documents and other packages," they now are "rarely called upon for such deliveries, as most documents are now transmitted electronically."

Today, the pages "are severely underutilized," the letter said.

Boehner and Pelosi wrote that while they are "mindful of the special place their unique experience holds in the memories of the young Americans privileged to serve as pages over the years, our decision to close the program reflects two current realities: Changes in technology have obviated the need for most page services, and the program's high costs are difficult to justify, especially in light of diminished benefits to the House?"

While the page program usually functioned as a government learning experience, it had its share of occasional headline-grabbing scandals.

In 1983, the House censured Republican Dan Crane of Illinois and Democrat Gerry Studds of Massachusetts for sexual relationships with pages; Crane with a young woman and Studds with a young man.

More recently, in 2006, Republican Mark Foley of Florida resigned in disgrace after it was learned he had sexually suggestive email communications with former male pages.

After the Foley case, the House overhauled the board that supervised pages, including giving both parties an equal say in overseeing the program. The Republican chairman of the board during the Foley scandal had failed to notify other board members of Foley's questionable emails. The board also was expanded to include a former page and the parent of a page.

The pages have their own school, with a regular faculty, and live in a dormitory near the Capitol. A study calculated the per-page cost for a two-semester school year at $69,000-$80,000 annually, depending on the size of each semester's class.

Several jurors squirmed or wiped away tears during the sometimesscratchy recording. Jeffs breaths heavily on the tape while giving the girls explicit instructions.

During the sentencing phase, prosecutors showed a page from one of Jeffs' journals.

"If the world knew what I was doing, they would hang me from the highest tree," Jeffs wrote in 2005, according to one of thousands of pages of notes seized along with the audio recordings from his Texas ranch.

The 55-year-old is the ecclesiastical head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. More than 10,000 followers consider him God's spokesman on Prosecutors on Monday showed the jury evidence that Jeffs had taken 24 underage followers as his bride. Jurors also saw photos of Jeffs intimately kissing several of the young girls in wedding photos.

In all, prosecutors showed records from 1989 to 2006 of Jeffs having 78 wives. Not counting his own wives, Jeffs officiated or was a witness to 550 illegal marriages, according to prosecutors.

Jeffs made a brief courtroom appearance Monday after being summoned by state District Judge Barbara Walther. She told Jeffs' attorney, Deric Walpole, that she wanted to make sure Jeffs hadn't changed his mind.

Wearing a charcoal suit and carrying a blank yellow legal pad, Jeffs walked back into court but never spoke. Walpole said Jeffs wanted to stay outside, and Jeffs was escorted back to another room in the courthouse.

Soon after, prosecutors played the tapes. Jeffs is heard telling the girls that what "the five of you are about to do is important." The recording ends with him asking the girls if his instructions are detailed enough. The voices of at least two girls responded, "Yes."

Jeffs kept meticulous records – as jurors found out during the conviction phase of the trial. Last week, they heard a tape of what prosecutors said was Jeffs sexually assaulting the 12-year-old victim.

Prosecutors suggested that the polygamist leader told the girls they needed to have sex with him - inwhat Jeffs called "heavenly" or "celestial" sessions – to atone for sins in his community. Several times in his journals, Jeffs wrote of God telling him to take more and more young girls as brides "who can be worked with and easily taught."

They said the lawsuit, seeking unspecified damages, would "redress the violent and sadistic attack by defendant Strauss-Kahn on Nafissatou Diallo when he sexually assaulted" her on May 14 at the Sofitel hotel in midtown Manhattan.

The lawsuit says Strauss-Kahn injured Diallo's shoulder, bruised her vagina, tore her pantyhose and violently grabbed the back of her head during the attack.

The lawsuit, filed in state court in the Bronx, accuses Strauss-Kahn of acting like a common criminal afterward, fleeing the hotel so quickly that he left behind traces of his semen, along with bloody tissues.

"In his haste to flee the scene of a crime, he rushed out of the hotel with toothpaste smeared on the outside of his mouth and was looking over his shoulders;" the lawsuit says.

The attack has left Diallo physically and psychologically harmed, with permanent damage done to her professional and personal reputations along with severe mental anguish from which she may never fully recover, the lawsuit says. She suffers great emotional distress, humiliation, depression and physical pain, and the experience has "left Ms. Diallo's life and her young daughter's life in shambles," it says.

Lawyers for Strauss-Kahn said the maid's lawsuit has no merit and their client will fight it vigorous-

"We have maintained from the beginning that the motivation of Mr. Thompson and his client was to make money," attorneys William W. Taylor and Benjamin Brafman said. "The filing of this lawsuit ends any doubt on that question."

The filing of a civil lawsuit so quickly after an arrest provides an avenue for lawyers to pursue evidence and interview witnesses for a potential civil trial while memories are fresh.

Saturday's crash of the CH-47 Chinook helicopter was the deadliest single loss for U.S. forces in the war and raised anew questions in the United States about why U.S. troops are still fighting the unpopular conflict.

U.S. leaders vowed on Monday not to let the loss rewrite the war strategy. "We will press on and we will succeed," President Barack Obama said at the White House. Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta said, "As heavy a loss as this was, it would even be more tragic if we allowed it to derail this country from our efforts to defeat al-Qaida and deny them a safe haven in Afghanistan."

In Kabul, German Brig. Gen. Carsten Jacobson, a spokesman for the U.S.-led coalition, said, "The incident, as tragic as it was in its magnitude, will have no influence on the conduct of operations."

Jacobson said troops continued Monday to recover every last piece of the helicopter and that no one was being allowed in or out of the heavily secured crash site during the investigation. A ceremony was held at Bagram Air Field, a massive military installation north of Kabul, to pay respect to fallen service members being sent back to the United States.

Marine Gen. John Allen, the new top commander of U.S. and coalition forces in Afghanistan, released a statement early Tuesday in honor of the fallen American and Afghan troops. "In life they were comrades in arms and in death they are bound forever in this vital cause," he said. "We cherish this selfless sacrifice."

Pentagon officials said two C-17 aircraft carrying the remains of U.S. and Afghan troops killed in the crash left Afghanistan Monday night en route to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Downgrade Drives Dow Down

NEW YORK (AP) • The Dow Jones industrials fell 634.76 points. It was the sixth worst point decline for the Dow in the last 112 years and the worst one-day drop since December 2008. Every stock in the Standard & Poor's 500 index declined Monday.

The Dow was down 5.5 percent a 10,809.85. The sharp drop extended Wall Street's almost uninterrupted decline since late July, when the Dow was flirting with 13,000. It fell below 11,000 for the first time since November.

The S&P 500 fell 79.92, or 6.7 percent, to 1,119.49. The Nasdaq composite index fell 174.72, or 6.9 percent, to 2,357.69.

STOCKS PLUNGE WORLDWIDE DOW SUFFERS 6TH-WORST LOSS

BY PAUL WISEMAN

Associated Press

The stock market buckled Monday under the weight of a crisis in Europe and danger of recession at home. Reeling from a downgrade of American debt, the Dow Jones industrials plunged 634 points. It was the worst day for the market since the financial crisis in the fall of 2008 and extended Wall Street's sudden, sharp decline. Stocks have lost 15 percent of their value in just two and a half weeks. Monday was the first trading day since Standard and Poor's downgraded the United States' risk-free credit rating, and the selling started at the opening bell. The Dow dropped 250 points in minutes. For the rest of the day, investors looked for safer places for their money. With few buyers left for stocks, the market could only drift low-

Traders work on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange on Monday in New York.

The Dow finished the day down 5.5 percent. The point decline was the worst since Dec. 1, 2008, and the sixthsteepest ever. The average ended at 10,809.85, its first close under 11,000 since No-

In a bit of irony following the S&P downgrade, investors decided U.S. debt was one of the safest places to be. They also sought refuge in gold, which set a record

"The S&P downgrade of U.S. government debt is the least of our problems," said economist Scott Brown at Raymond James & Associates. "The bigger worry is subpar economic growth and the threat of a new recession."

Economists at Goldman Sachs peg the chances of another recession at one in three, most likely in the next six to nine months. The threat was barely talked about earlier this summer.

The U.S. economy grew at a feeble 0.8 percent annual pace the first half of 2011, its slowest since the end of the Great Recession in June 2009. Manufacturing and consumer spending have slowed dramatically.

Oil prices plunged 6 percent to the lowest price of the year Monday - $81.31 a barrel. Investors predict a weakening economy means that consumers and businesses will buy less gasoline.

The turmoil in the U.S. markets was the end of a daylong rout that swept the world. Stocks lost 4 percent in South Korea and 2 percent in Japan, then 5 percent in Germany and 4 percent in

In the U.S., stocks fell even though Moody's, another major credit rating agency, stood by its top rating of Aaa for the United States. It said it could downgrade the U.S. if it did not cut its deficit, "but it is early to conclude that such measures will not be forthcoming."

Financial markets were not comforted by an afternoon statement by President Barack Obama, who said Washington needs more "common sense and compromise" to tame its debt.

"Markets will rise and fall," he said. "But this is the United States of America. No matter what some agency may say, we've always been and always will be a triple-A country."

Warehousing Company Readies for Gooding Opening

WEL Companies' new location in Gooding's industrial park is expected to help attract other investors.

BY BLAIR KOCH For the Times-News

GOODING • Six months after it announced a planned expansion into Gooding, national warehousing, transportation and storage company WEL Companies is ready to open its new facility's doors on Wednesday. The De Pere, Wisc.-based company's Gooding location is its newest, said warehouse and terminal manager Greg Krall. The 120,000 squarefoot facility will serve as a prime location to store and transport dairy and other food products to customers, Krall said. "We looked at locations in Kimberly and Glenns Ferry, but this location was ideally located next to rail for more efficient transportation of products throughout the country," he said. "Plus, it has convenient highway access, making it a prime location for our operations."

LEGAL NOTICE NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING PROPOSED BUDGET FOR FISCAL YEAR 2012 URBAN RENEWAL AGENCY OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME, IDAHO

A public hearing for consideration of the proposed budget for the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency for the fiscal year that begins October 1, 2011, and ends September 30, 2012, will be held at the Jerome County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, on Thursday, August 25, 2011, at 12:00 noon, pursuant to Idaho Code 50-1002. Written or oral comments about the proposed budget are welcome. Written comment may be submitted prior to the meeting to: Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency, c/o Mr. Joseph Davidson, Chairman, c/o Board of County Commissioners, County of Jerome, 300 North Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, ID

The Agency budget funds the programs, services and capital projects that the Agency Board has determined to be important to meet the Agency's strategic goals as outlined in the Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan.

During 2008 and 2010 the Agency worked on the preparation of the original urban renewal plan and the subsequent plan amendment. The Agency expenses were limited to legal expenses, consultant expenses, and other planning expenses. Those activities were funded through an initial commitment from the County of Jerome not to exceed $30,000. Expenses through June 30, 2009, totaled approximately $17,000. Under Idaho Code $50-1002, the two prior fiscal years' information is required for publication of the tentative budget. The budget below shows the actual expenses for FY 2010 and budgeted and actual expenses through July 1, 2011. For FY 2011, the Agency's revenues were again limited to the County's advance of $18,000. Activities during FY 2011 have been limited to discussions and negotiations with a developer within the Project Area concerning public improvement infrastructure and reimbursement.

This public hearing on the proposed budget is required for formal adoption of the FY 2012 budget. The proposed expenditures and revenues for FY 2012 have been tentatively approved by the

Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency Board of Directors on August 4, 2011. DEAR ABBY: I'm an only child by default. My parents have been married 30 years and had two children. When I was 9 and my sister was 6, we were in a car accident with my mother that resulted in my sister's death. Her death changed my life in ways I can never explain. My father began abusing drugs and beating me. My mother started stealing and was always unemployed. She became severely depressed and also abused prescription drugs. I was left to raise myself, and now, as an adult, I don't want a relationship with either of them.

How can I get my mother to accept that despite her wishes, I do not want to live my life watching her waste hers? It leaves me feeling depressed, angry and hopeless. I have been diagnosed as bipolar. Almost all my life I have known only death, drugs, abuse and pain. I just want peace from these people. Please help.

- FRUSTRATED SON IN GEORGIA

DEAR \mathbf{A} BBY Jeanne Phillips

FRUSTRATED DEAR SON: You have my deepest sympathy for the tragedy that destroyed your family. Had your parents received the professional help they needed at the time of the accident, much of it might have been prevented. Tell your parents that unless they seek help NOW for their problems, they will have lost not one, but two, children.

However, if they choose to continue as they have been - which is likely - then you must go on with your life. The answer to a toxic situation such as what you have experienced is to divorce yourself. Because you can't fix them, you must save yourself. You have been damaged enough.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Kate," is 27 and has a 3year-old son. She and the father are not married. He is self-centered, controlling and keeps her stranded. She has no car and no money. They currently live with his family - a far from ideal situation.

I am struggling because I'm unable to help her financially, and she feels lost and alone. My husband (her stepfather) won't allow them to live with us, which I understand. We're scrimping to get by. I have located several online sites for single moms regarding assistance, but I feel it is up to Kate to pursue them.

What else can I offer her regarding steering her in the right direction? If she could contact others in her situation, perhaps they might point her in directions I cannot. Your advice would be welcomed.

- GRANDMA IN PRESCOTT, ARIZ. DEAR GRANDMA:

Because of your financial situation there is a limit to what vou can do. Give your daughter the websites and explain that she may find support and suggestions there from other single mothers — the rest is up to her. But please, realize that until your daughter is willing to take charge of her life, will change. nothing Continue to be caring and supportive, and let your daughter know you love her.

DEAR ABBY: When someone elopes, is a bridal shower after the fact appropriate? There will be a reception later this summer where a wedding gift seems expected. I think having a bridal shower is not proper etiquette. What do you say? - ASKANCE

IN VERMONT

DEAR ASKANCE: The intent of a wedding shower is to extend good wishes to the bride – and with increasing frequency, the groom. Having one after a hastily planned wedding or an elopement is not a breach of etiquette. However, if you disapprove, no law says you must attend.

FOOTBALL?

On Monday, high school football teams with a Zero Week game on their schedule were allowed to begin practicing. Fifteen teams in District IV have that privilege, while teams without Zero Week games teams can begin on Friday.

BY DAVID BASHORE

dbashore@magicvalley.com

For 15 District IV high school football teams, that date circled on the calendar is finally here.

From Castleford to Carey, and Hailey to Mini-Cassia, practice started in earnest Monday, the opening date of football season for teams participating in Zero Week (Aug. 26) games.

On the red side of Blue Lakes Boulevard in Twin Falls, the Dave Slotten era formally got under way at Canyon Ridge High School.

While the Riverhawks hope an improved record is in the cards this season, Monday's opening session was all about getting things up to speed with athletes at varying stages of fitness.

"It's going to be a process," he said. "It's about the little things, and I don't expect we'll be in tip-top shape by the end of this week. But there are some kids who are in great shape

Around 75 students went through the wringer on the opening morning at Canyon Ridge. Ninety-three checked out gear, Slotten said.

In Jerome, the numbers were about the same. But with a thin upper class and a strong sophomore class coming through, Day 1 wasn't ever going to create separation when it comes to playing time.

In fact, it might not be until closer to the season opener at Middleton – or later – before roles start gaining true definition in J-Town.

"Some of those sophomores are going to have to be out there early, and we're going to have some guys who are going to have to play a lot. It's going to be tough the first time around," said Jerome coach Gary Krumm, who will take his team to Middleton and reigning Class 4A champ Bishop Kelly in the first two games of the season. "It'll be tough with just a few starters back, but we'll have a better idea in a couple weeks where we're at."

Burley also began practice Monday, though the Bobcats didn't perform two-a-days. They started Monday evening in the buildup to their seasonopener against Century. There they'll try and get a win for the first time since 2009.

"When you have a guy next to you who you can trust, and he's willing to put forth the effort and sacrifice as much as you, you are going to be successful," said Burley senior Antonio Ramirez.

Hansen, Lighthouse Christian, Castleford, Wood River and Minico were among the teams that started Monday morning, while Shoshone, Carey and Dietrich started Monday night.

Raft River starts its preseason preparation tonight. Oakley, Jackpot and Glenns Ferry also have Zero Week games.

Times-News writer Ryan Howe contributed to this ABOVE: Members of the Jerome football team complete a drill Monday morning at Jerome High School. Jerome is one of 15 area high schools eligible to begin football practice Monday morning in preparation for Zero Week games on Aug. 26.

Dedication the Key Word as Castleford Opens

The last two seasons Castleford has started practice at 5 a.m. on the first day possible. In each of those seasons the Wolves reached the state semifinals, and now they want to go one step further and play for a title.

dbashore@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • At 5:59 a.m. in this sleepy West End town, the temperature on the Castleford High School marquee read 54 degrees.

The sun wouldn't rise for another 39 minutes, but 23 members of the Wolves football program were already wrapping up their first hour of fall practice under eight banks of light visible for nearly 10

At 6:26, the team gathered for a break. Destry Weekes, one of the team leaders, quipped: "There's a lot of people in Castleford still sleeping. Let's wake 'em up."

With the ensuing team yell, prep football season formally dawned on the Magic Valley.

It's the third year Castleford has kicked off the preseason with an early morning start. Part of the reason is to schedule around work, but it's also a means of proving commitment. Put plainly, when practice starts at 5 a.m., you have to want to be there.

"Dedication is the big thing," said senior Cody Hansen. "You always need about 12 good guys that you can play out there, but having (close to) 25 is even Those players also have to be hellbent on getting better.

"Where have we finished the last two years?" Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore asked his team post-practice. Third place, the answer came. "I'm kind of tired of that," he added.

Two seasons ago, Oakley beat Castleford comfortably on its way to the Class 1A Division I title. Last year, Carey handled the Wolves at Holt Arena on the road to the Division II Crown.

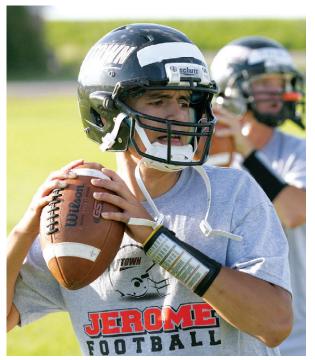

Ever since they lost that semifinal game, senior Mitch Howard said, Carey has been the motivation.

Players are asked what they think Carey is doing to get better that day. How fast the Carey kids are. As Castleford assistant coach Jackie Roberts said to a player doing push-ups Monday morning, what did he think Carey's push-ups looked like?

"That's going to be our motivation until the Monday of that first game," Howard said.

These Wolves have a big test to open the season, at Raft River on Aug. 26. Following that are tough home games against Hagerman and Oakley.

For now, though, it's all about getting up early, under the lights, and being willing to push it to the limit so that staying late under the Friday night lights is a little more fun.

Jerome quarterback Simon Espinoza executes a drill during Monday morning's practice at Jerome High School to open the team's preseason training.

Tour of Utah Kicks Off Today

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Mention the Tour de France, and David Zabriskie thinks not about yellow jerseys but bright yellow cycling shoes skidding across the pavement in front of him during a highspeed descent.

And rather than fragrant flowers for stage winners, he remembers the stench of cigarettes on the French doctor who treated him after he crashed July 10 through a guardrail then down a European hillside.

July's Tour de France obviously didn't go the way Zabriskie had envisioned – not when it ended with him shouting for whiskey in a local hospital instead of sipping champagne in Paris two weeks later with Garmin-Cervelo, which claimed the team prize.

But a month after the crash, the Salt Lake City native is literally back in the saddle, mostly healed from injuries suffered in the Stage 9 crash and ready to tackle what is billed as America's Toughest Stage Race.

"A couple of people have mentioned, 'Is that healthy?' I guess I'll see if I die," Zabriskie said before leaving California on Sunday for the Tour of Utah. "But I think I'll be fine."

The six-day, 409-mile road race, elevated this year to one of only three top stage races in North America, starts today in Park City and finishes Sunday at Snowbird Ski and Summer Resort.

While Zabriskie is not the only racer making his way to Utah after the Tour de France, he is the only one to have crashed out so severely and returned to action so quickly.

"When I first saw the (Stage 9 crash), my first thought was he's out," said Tour of Utah President Steve Miller. "It's amazing how resilient these guys are. The fact that he is coming is amazing."

Whether he's a contender remains to be seen since he can't do a pushup because of a hand injury and still has restricted movement in his left knee. But his head is clear despite smacking a concrete post, and he's been pushing hard the past week and feels

He wants to work in Utah's altitude, and use the experience to prepare for the world championships in Denmark in mid-September and ultimately qualify for the 2012 Olympics.

Utah also is where he learned to ride, and with plenty of friends watching this week, there is motivation to excel.

"When I go back and see Mount Olympus (and Emigration Canyon), it seems like that's the place that created me," Zabriskie said. "You get to the top of those canyons and want to take a moment and contemplate life."

While the 11th-year pro has come a long way from his formative years in racing, so has the Tour of Utah itself.

"It's moved from a great national race to a top-level international event," said Steve Johnson, USA Cycling CEO.

George Hincapie, who set a record by helping a teammate capture a ninth Tour de France last month, headlines a BMC Racing Team fresh off the effort that helped Australian Cadel Evans claim the historic win.

Were it not for a three-day celebration Down Under this week, Evans would be riding in Utah for BMC, having just extended his contract through 2014. Ninth-place Tour de France finisher Tom Danielson will race in Utah, as will defending Tour of Utah champ Levi Leipheimer and Spaniard Francisco Mancebo, the 2009 Tour of Utah win-Zabriskie said BMC's Jeff while Tejay Van Garderen tops a list of young Americans who have come through the national development pro-Hincapie certainly has motivation to do well, having

Louder could be a favorite, crashed out of the race last year in Stage 2, leaving a gash in his right knee that required 18 stitches. "I just hit some gravel on a corner, something that was hard to miss ... happens all the time in cycling," Hincapie said last week. There's also incentive after signing a new contract with BMC through 2012, which he acknowledges will probably be his final season racing after 19 years as a pro.

"It's a long career, a lot longer than average," said Hincapie, who helped Lance Armstrong win all seven of his Tour de France titles and in 2007 did the same for Alberto Contador.

He said he wants to spend more time with his children, not travel as much, and perhaps even start his own team. "I think it would be a good time to stop," Hincapie said.

Like so many racers, Hincapie is worried about Utah's altitude, especially coming from the East Coast after an exhausting Tour de France.

The event actually has one less mountain stage this year so the sprinters have something to showcase. But Tuesday's prologue won't be easy. After a quick downhill, a killer 1.2-mile climb to the top of the Nordic ski jump at Utah Olympic Park awaits.

Miller expects the Park City-to-Snowbird finale Sunday to be the decisive stage. But Johnson is looking forward to Stage 4, which starts at the Utah State Capitol on Saturday and takes 11 circuits through the city and up through the San Francisco-steep streets of the historic Avenues.

"The race in the Avenues is going to be a spectacle," Johnson said. "Anything goes. I know the terrain and it's going to be challenging. It's the kind of race that could surprise folks and change the outcome with no real sustained climbing."

Orton Named Denver's Starting QB on First Team Depth Chart

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) • Tim Tebow is winning Denver's quarterback competition — for the No. 2 job behind starter Kyle Orton.

The Broncos released their depth chart Monday in advance of their preseason opener at Dallas this week and there was no change in the order from a year ago: 1. Orton; 2. Tebow; 3. Brady Orton has been taking almost all the first-team snaps with Tebow and Quinn sharing work with the second and third units.

Tebow is winning the popularity contest.

The crowds at the team's Dove Valley headquarters are dotted with Tebow jerseys his No. 15 is one of the league's best-sellers — while it's hard to find an Orton jer-

Even the team's pro shop had 60 adult Tebow jerseys for sale Monday and just five of Orton's No. 8 jerseys.

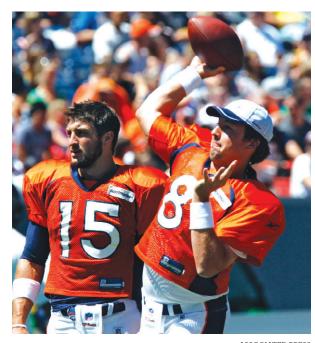

There's a similar disparity in the stands, and Orton was asked after Monday's nearly three-hour workout about Tebow being the people's

"Thank God the people don't make the decisions" on who's starting, Orton said. "That's really all I've got to say about it."

Orton said his job is to win over his teammates and the coaching staff and "my last goal is to win over the fans."

And winning football games, "that's how you win over everybody," Orton said.

As for the preseason opener Thursday night, Orton said he doesn't necessarily want to play more than usual given the lack of team work during the 41/2-month lockout.

"No, I think you want to go out and play successfully and once you've had some good success, get off the field," Orton said. "And whether you had the OTA reps or not, still your No. 1 goal is to get your best players into the first (regular season) game.

"So, hopefully we can go out, have a little success, get a little confidence going and get off the field."

Plenty of rookies will get some meaningful snaps against the Cowboys.

Von Miller, the second overall pick in the draft, is listed as the starter at strongside linebacker and rookie Rahim Moore is the starter at free safety. Rookie Orlando Franklin is listed atop the depth chart at right

"My whole life, I've been blessed and fortunate to be able to be thrown into the fire," Moore said. "I always realize that you've got to grow up someday."

Miller, who grew up a Cowboys fan in Dallas and attended Texas A&M, said he was especially eager for his NFL debut.

He said no one should be surprised, either, that so many rookies are getting meaningful snaps after just two weeks of workouts.

"We put in work over the offseason. It wasn't like OTAs or anything like that, but we were all working," he said. "Everybody started from the same spot. We've got a new coach and a new playbook, so everybody's on even ground. So coming in, it gives everybody a fair state, and I think (Minico) will be pretty good the next couple years as well."

Shepard totaled 348 wins and 12 state tournament appearances in 23 seasons as a head coach. Prior to Minico, Shepard coached at Buhl and Twin Falls.

During 15 seasons at Buhl, he led the Indians to the Class 3A championship in 1997 and consolation trophies in 1989, 1999 and 2001.

Shepard took over the Twin Falls program in 2002. Under his watch, the Bruins made four Class 5A state tournament appearances in five seasons, including the 2004 consolation trophy and a thirdplace finish in 2005.

Shepard resigned his coaching position at Twin Falls in August 2007, took a year off and joined Minico for the 2008-09 season. In 2010 he retired from the Twin Falls School District where he worked as a school psycholo-

Given the short timing before school starts in two weeks, Arritt said Minico's administration would work to fill the vacant position "as quick as we can." Since Shepard was not a teacher at the school, no teaching position came available by virtue of his departure.

"We've got it opened up and the sooner we can get it filled, the better off we are," Arritt said. "We've got a lot of people who maybe would have been eligible that have maybe taken other jobs, but all we can do is wait and see.

Idaho's Returning Warriors Need Our Support

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our nation's National Guard and Army Reserve members are a tremendously valuable component of our nation's full-time military, particularly as we face global unrest and natural disasters. This all-volunteer citizen force, representing less than 1 percent of our population, shoulders the responsibility of protecting our nation. The loved ones and employers of these citizen warriors have stood by their side and quietly braved their long deployments. It should be remembered that the men and women of the Guard and Reserve do not serve for shows of appreciation, medals or adulation. Their call is for service, patriotism and that America is worth defending.

However, it must be understood that their ability to answer when called relies on the support of our communities. One of the most meaningful ways we can assist is to ensure that they have meaningful jobs when they come home.

In the past decade, more that 2,500 of Idaho citizen soldiers have put their civilian lives on hold to answer the call to mount up and ride into battle. In the next few months alone, Idaho will have 2,100 of these soldiers coming home and wanting to get back into the civilian life. A large number of these returning warriors need jobs. Providing jobs to these extraordinary Americans honors their service and restores some of the security and comfort they sacrifice to keep the rest of us safe. Their families have also borne burdens during this time, especially the many forced to adjust child care, household chores and all the responsibilities of daily life without the support network of a nearby military base.

Employing Guard and Reserve members also brings their military training and experience to the civilian work place. Our military instills an innate drive, work ethic and loyalty in these men and women and remember these service members lead and perform under incredibly stressful conditions. The Department of Defense is dedicated to keeping the relationship between Guard and Reserve members and their employers positive.

National fefense is one of the sacred duties of an American citizen.

"In times of war and not before, God and soldiers men adore. But in times of peace, with all things righted, God is forgotten and the soldier slighted."

Let us each make an effort to find a way to support our neighbors and colleagues in the Part Time Military Force and ensure they alone do not carry the weight of keeping our nation safe. For information on how you can help, go to www.esgr.mil.

Follow the Rules While Recreating

Magic Valley affords us the opportunity to participate in many recreational and outdoor activities. As a walker and golfer, I share space with others on the Canyon Springs grade. It is evident that sharing space has become a problem that needs to be addressed.

As a walker, my responsibility is to adhere to the rules of the road: walk single file and face the traffic. Along with this, I also need to follow the speed limit laws while traveling back and forth on this grade. It is simple, follow and respect the laws and others while utilizing the grade.

It is great to see so many people participating in fitness activities such as walking and golfing. Working together is a better choice. Please follow the rules and remember: Safety First!

Social Security Going to Those Who Didn't Pay

The federal government's "welcome wagon" for millions of illegal immigrants while the economy falters is insanity.

If citizens cannot receive Social Security payments, as Obama warned, entitlements to non-citizens should stop. In California, illegal immigration created a burden on schools with overcrowded classrooms, lack of supplies and curriculum changes. Teachers needed a special credential (CLAD) to teach non-English speakers or LEP students.

To counteract the huge massive invasion of noncitizens and drain on the state's budget, Californians voted for Prop 197 to deny benefits for illegal aliens. Hispanics protested, waving Mexican flags. Unfortunately, one federal judge overturned the will of the voters.

Furthermore, working citizens who paid into the Social Security system for years cannot draw full payments if they teach later because of the Windfall Elimination Provision. Yet, the federal government continues to dispense SSI checks to illegal immigrants crossing the border to have babies.

With the economic crisis and high jobless rate, amnesty should not be on the table. For the 47 percent or more not paying taxes, to quote Richard Dreyfuss in Close Encounters of the Third Kind, "Who are you people?"

Citizens should fax, phone, write and vote. It is our tax dollars.

read where they said "everything is on the table"?

After all, presidents get $400,000 and retired presidents $180,000 for life. The House and Senate now get $174,000; Speaker of the House, $223,500; majority and minority leaders, $193,400 a year. We have four retired presidents I can recall and three or four vice presidents. These people all get free medical, dental, eye care at our expense; untold numbers of senators and representatives are retired receiving excellent retirement, especially if they've been in there six years, to collect the rest of their lives. Put them on Medicare like the rest of us.

They spent the Social Security money and put IOUs in the kitty - all $2.5 to $3 trillion and then say Social Security is broke. Sure it's broke, they spent money that wasn't theirs to spend. It was an entitlement.

How about it? Everyone in Idaho and in the nation should write in and demand their salaries must be included.

We Failed to Control Those We Voted into Office

It happened once before, but then it was to an enemy force. We thought it would never happen again, prayed it never would. This time it's due to a number of our own citizens and one with questionable documentation.

On its own, the place isn't much and, until recently, had no legal or political standing.

We lost it first in 1814 when foreign invading forces came like termites, unseen, unheard, undetected. They took what they wanted and burned the rest. They came, they saw, they destroyed. Then they went home.

In the 20th and 21st centuries, the destroyers, the defilers came and were greeted with banners and shouts of praise. They came, they saw, they destroyed, but they didn't go home. They bought expensive homes, took their place among us and have been accepted as friends, neighbors, saviors.

Once long ago, congressmen and senators were respected, revered by some but mostly tolerated by the majority. The incidence of lewd and lascivious behavior, passing of bad checks, evading income taxes, hiring illegal servants, extramarital affairs, illegal drug use, immoral misuse of travel privileges, influence peddling, favoritism in contract awarding and other offenses too numerous to mention set them apart as much as if they had come wearing foreign combat troop uniforms. Had they done that, we might have had a chance.

Anyway, we lost Washington, D.C., the first time due to strategic misdirected troops. This time, we lost it due to an inability to control those we hired to work for us. You should realize that the city is just the start. Eventually, unless we wake up, the whole nation will go the same way. It's already started.

If there's anybody in D.C. representing my wishes, they must be in a box where they can't be heard. Where's Sheriff Joe Arpiao when we need him?

But my screens are still dirty and I cannot clean all the Cleaning Center owner embedded grime that has settled into the mesh. Surely you've already come up with a solution!

"Screaming Screen Cleaner!"

nswer: Quit screaming and start cleaning with the Don Revolving Screen Brush. No need to remove the screen. Just roll the revolving brush across the window or door screen meshes. After S&P's Downgrade, This 'Supercommittee' Should Have an Easier Time

The following editorial appeared in the Chicago Tribune on Monday.

Sunday was splendid for beach-goers and bikers. But it also brought nasty tail winds from the first credit downgrade in United States history:

• For the half of U.S. households that own stocks, the news from Tel Aviv – where Sunday is a trading day - suggested a turbulent Monday as world markets digest the downgrade: Israel's blue-chip stock index tumbled 6.99 percent.

• Speaking on ABC's "This Week," Standard & Poor's managing director John Chambers defended his agency's decision to drop the U.S. government's rating: "Our job is to hold the mirror up to nature, and what we are telling investors is that we have a spectrum that runs from AAA to D. And what we're seeing is a threat the United States government is slightly less creditworthy." He put at 1-in-3 the chance that, in coming months, S&P will drop the rating another notch. And he warned that to reclaim the lost rating, fractious U.S. leaders need to unite and deliver "stabilization AND EVENTUAL DECLINE" of U.S. debt. (Emphasis ours, intended for deniers in caves who still rate everrising deficits as A-OK.)
