GROWTH FOR THE M.V. CHARTERS

As a new school year nears, Heritage Academy in Jerome prepares to open its doors to students. Paired with a grade expansion at Wings Charter Middle School in Twin Falls, the opening marks continued growth of the area charter school scene.

JEROME • Chancie Kirk moved furniture around her classroom at Heritage Academy and stood atop a chair to set up Idaho's state flag.

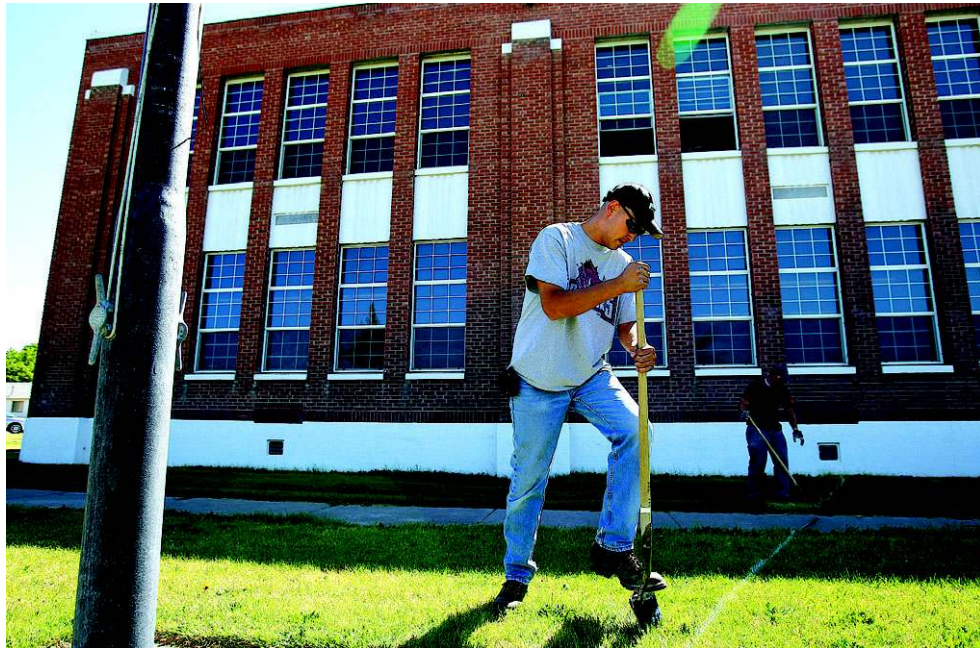

Kirk spent Thursday moving into her classroom, which will soon be home to fifth- and sixth-grade students in the Jerome charter school that opens this fall for its first year.

The school's opening reflects continued charter school growth in the Magic Valley.

Once a rarity, charter schools have slowly but steadily increased their presence in the region — and their enrollment. That expansion is also unfolding at Wings Charter Middle School in Twin Falls, which is adding another grade this fall.

Charter schools aren't meant to be a replica of their traditional public school counterparts. At Heritage Academy, for example, students will participate in interest-based groups to work on projects. The school will also focus on individual students' strengths, using them as

About charter schools

What are charter schools?

Charter schools are public schools, but they have more flexibility than traditional schools to try different approaches to education. They receive public funding, but cannot seek property tax bonds like public schools.

How many are there?

There are 43 active charter schools in Idaho, five of them in the Magic Valley. They are: Xavier Charter School, Wings Charter Middle School, both in T.F., Heritage Academy in Jerome, North Valley Academy in Gooding, and ARTEC Regional Professional Technical Charter School, which works with districts throughout the region.

How did they get their start?

Charter schools began opening in Idaho after the Legislature passed a law in 1998.

Up to six new charter schools can open each year in the state, which sets a cap on each school's enrollment.

Twin Falls' Hispanic Heritage Car Show turns 12 on Saturday, with custom rides from around the West and a lineup of live hip-hop music.

This marks the fourth year Victor Hernandez, president of the Salt Lake Riders, has made the drive from Utah to show off his club's lowriders in Twin Falls' Hispanic Heritage Car Show.

The afternoon show is Saturday at Twin Falls City Park, and Hernandez is salivating to have attention cast on his '85 Buick Regal.

"It's custom," the University of Utah fan said during a phone interview Monday. His car is dedicated the Utes and painted the school's crimson and white. "It has new interior, new paint, new 13-inch wheels, new everything."

He makes the drive to Twin Falls because the show has made a name for itself, drawing lowrider and hip-hop culture enthusiasts from across the West and as far away as southern California.

"I like it because you get to see a lot of different cars," Hernandez said. "And it's small enough that you get to see all of them. A lot of the shows are so big you end up

Bids for T.F. Bond Projects Lower Than Expected

Lift station repairs will be almost 30 percent less than what city officials anticipated — creating optimism for money saved, but concern if too much bond money is taken.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

The city of Twin Falls won judicial approval for an $8 million bond to cover a variety of projects last spring. Now, those projects may cost 10 percent less than anticipated.

The cost of UV equipment for the wastewater treatment plan is about $50,000 less than expected, or about $480,000. Earlier, bids for building a redundant lift station in the Rock Creek area ended up under cutting the in-house estimates of $2.75 million by $800,000.

"It was kind of a surprise to us," city staff engineer Mike Trabert said.

He said the original estimates were made during the economic boom years, when labor was more expensive because every firm was busier. The lower price has created a sense of cautious hope that the lift station and a slew of improvements to the treatment plant will continue to come in under planned costs.

"I'm optimistic this will be the continued product from a favorable bidding environment," City Manager Travis Rothweiler said.

In April, Fifth District Judge G. Richard Bevan gave the OK for the city to take on up to $8 million in debt under the state constitution's "ordinary and necessary" clause. This part

Voles Retreat Throughout Northside Counties

Last year's crop-killing critter infestation has tapered off in Jerome and Lincoln counties, leaving cities and farmers to repair the damage done.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

It was like something out of a low-grade horror film: The Year the Voles Came out in Masses.

Tales of the mouse-like rodents invading lawns, destroying fields and eventually crippling the area's agricultural economy abound throughout the Lincoln and Jerome Counties.

However, this year is surprisingly quiet. After last year's massive increase in population, the voles have seemingly vanished without as much as a goodbye or a warning.

Yet what remains is the damage they caused.

Aaron Aggeler, the Shoshone city maintenance supervisor, said he's still repairing what the voles either chewed through or dug up.

"We are working towards it," he said, "but I can't fill in every hole."

The Black Idahoan Who Ruled the Range

In the 1920s and '30s, Idaho's small black community — mostly concentrated in Pocatello and Boise — thought itself lucky just to find jobs.

Henry Harris, a buckaroo by trade, already had one. In fact, the cattle foreman who called Twin Falls County home may have been the first successful black businessman in Idaho history.

He worked for legendary Nevada cattlemen John Sparks and Louis Harrell, running a string of cattle ranches around Jackpot. Harris started out as a house servant, became a cook, and worked his way up to punchin' cows. For 30 years, he supervised white cowboys — virtually unheard of for an African-American in Jim Crow America.

His story is remarkable considering how far he came. Harris was a Texan, as were most black cowboys in the West in the late 19th century because tending cattle was one of the first jobs that blacks emancipated after the Civil War could find.

Sparks — who later became governor of Nevada — was a rancher who ran cattle in Texas Hill Country. Harris, the son of slaves, went to work for Sparks as a teenager.

In 1873, Sparks moved his operation west — first to Cheyenne, Wyo., and eventually to Elko County. At age 16, Harris followed.

Within 15 years, he was a supervisor — working at various times for Sparks, Harrell and the Utah Construction Co., which ran cattle in Elko and Twin Falls counties.

In 1897, Harris was subpoenaed to testify at Diamondfield Jack Davis' murder trial in Albion. Davis, a cattle company enforcer accused of gunning down two sheepherders south of what's now Twin Falls, was convicted, but Harris said on the stand that Davis wasn't guilty. Sentenced to death, Davis was later reprieved and pardoned.

Harris never married, and he died in Twin Falls in 1937 of pneumonia at age 71. He's buried in the Twin Falls Cemetery.

Years after Harris' passing, Les Sweeney of

Of buckaroos and vaqueros

What's a buckaroo? Don't call them cowboys. They're buckaroos — horsemen of the vaquero tradition who plied their craft in the Great Basin and California. Vaquero is Spanish for "herder of cattle." But where the heck does buckaroo come from? It derives from Efik, a language spoken in southeastern Nigeria. Mbakara means "white man, master or boss." Others say it comes from the Arabic word baquar, meaning cattle.

What's the vaquero tradition?

It stems from the horsemen of the Iberian Peninsula who became the cattle herders of Spanish Mexico and later colonial California. In contemporary America, remnants of two major and distinct vaquero traditions remain — known today as the "Texas" tradition and the "Spanish," "Vaquero," or "California" tradition. The popular "horse whisperer" style of natural horsemanship was originally developed by practitioners predominantly from California and the Northwestern states, combining the attitudes and philosophy of the California vaquero with the equipment and outward look of the Texas cowboy.

Payette began to campaign to have his accomplishments recognized. In 2008, Harris was inducted into the Buckaroo Hall of Fame in Winnemucca, Nev., and in 2009 into the National Cowboys of Color Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, Texas.

Sweeney is still looking for possible relatives of Harris in the Magic Valley — or artifacts he may have owned. If you know of any, call 208-642-8178.

Roof Repairs, Patrol Cars Among TFPD Budget Request

BY BRADLEY GUIRE

bguire@magicvalley.com

There are leaks in the Twin Falls Police Department.

Instead of sensitive information getting out, water is getting into the building on Second Avenue East because of an aging roof. The police headquarters is 30 years old, said Chief Brian Pike, who has spent his entire career with the city. He doesn't recall any major work done to HQ in that time.

"Last year, we had a number of leaks into sensitive areas, places where there are computer servers," Pike said. "It's probably time to replace the roof."

A $50,000 proposal to replace it is one of the largest capital requests for the department's fiscal 2012 budget request — $7.98 million, which is on par with last year's mark. Pike said it's a tight budget, but he can't put off a roof replacement any longer.

"This is probably one of the leanest budgets we've produced," he said. "I think it reflects our current times. There's not a lot of additional money for capital requests. There's no fluff in this."

Police are also asking for $25,000 to remodel the station's restrooms and locker room, which were adequate to serve a smaller staff in the early 1980s but not today. Pike said money from this year's budget was set aside to hire an architect to develop potential plans, but Pike is reluctant to spend that money until he knows whether he'll get funding for the actual work. The remodel will not add space onto the 13,000 square-foot building.

Other proposed expenditures in 2012 include $135,000 for three new patrol cars. That money will purchase Dodge Chargers and the specialty equipment that goes into them for police use, such as the rear passenger cage.

Money for a K-9 unit and evidence management software will be funded in part by asset forfeitures and restitution monies paid to the city. The department received approximately $85,000 to use.

The $20,000 slated for the K-9 includes the Belgian Malinois and 10 weeks of training at the Alabama Canine Law Enforcement Officers Training Center. With the addition, the city will have four K-9 units when Staff Sgt. Clint Doer resumes his duties. He is a member of the Idaho National Guard's 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team and is deployed in Iraq.

The evidence management software will allow officers to tag and enter evidence into a computer system much like how a department store tracks inventory, Capt. Matt Hicks said. He said the software will offer better accountability for sensitive material, which is always on the move. Hicks said the department aims to have the software installed and running by the end of the calendar year.

A public hearing is scheduled for 6 p.m. Monday at Twin Falls City Council Chambers regarding the city's proposed $45.8 million budget. A final budget will likely be set on Aug. 22.

Vole

Aggeler suggested that vole population explosions come and go in cycles.

"When we have years with a lot of rain and vegetation, it provides a favorable year for voles," he said. "It usually takes one to two years of favorable conditions to build up for an explosion."

Another reason the numbers are down were because there were too many of them.

"You will often see when a species heavily doubles their numbers," Aggeler said. "Then the peak just dives because they either eat their food source out or disease gets to them."

While voles have always been present in the valley, their population increase forced vole victims to spend thousands on poisons.

This year's heavy spring rain should have been perfect for a vole population boom; however, there was one distinct ingredient in this winter's weather.

"We had a mild winter, but we had an early thaw and then a refreeze," said Shoshone farmer Jeff Weber.

Having a refreeze occur after the water had thawed into the critters' holes managed to kill off the majority of the pests, he said.

Last year, Weber and his wife put vole bait on their lawn at night. In the morning, Weber said, they would find 200 dead voles. On top of that, the voles destroyed most of his grain and barley crops.

"We are almost vole free this year," Weber said. "We're pretty glad they're gone."

As farmers and cities take comfort in this year's relief from the vole attack, no one seems quite sure what next year will have in store.

"It's going to depend on a number of factors but we will probably be all right," Weber said.

Bike Ride Pumps Visitors, Dollars into Wood River Valley

Hundreds of bicyclists making a two-night layover in Hailey are expected to pump thousands of dollars into the Wood River Valley economy before Ride Idaho reaches its final leg.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • The sun rose Thursday over an impromptu tent city in Hailey, catching the gleam of hundreds of bicycle spokes during its steady rise.

Below, the 350 bicyclists who pedaled into town Wednesday afternoon — support staff and family members in tow — readied for a day of rest, recreation and a little spending in the Wood River Valley. They came as participants in Ride Idaho, a seven-day supported bike ride taking bicyclists from 31 states and Canada on a tour of the central Gem State’s scenic highways.

“It’s really fun to bike the roads you’ve driven. You see things you’ve never seen from a car,” said Janelle Brown, a Boise resident who paid $695 for the trek.

Hailey officials greeted riders with a street party and two nights of live music. Hailey Chamber of Commerce Director Heather Deckard was among the volunteers who climbed out of bed at 5 a.m. Thursday to fire up a breakfast of eggs, sausage, oatmeal and yogurt for the riders. And though they woke in tents, the riders had many comforts of home during their layover.

Russ Severyn brought in a trailer housing 16 showers serviced by fire hydrant water that’s heated by propane tanks. Joe 2 U, a Boise coffee company, sent a couple baristas along on the ride, and their mobile coffee stand has done brisk business.

A tourism tent directs riders to local attractions, and Boisean Ed Dehne was one of five massage therapists following the ride who are giddy to see days of 75-mile treks and rugged mountain climbs on the tour’s schedule.

“We work eight hours on those days,” he said.

Chuck Shinn, a former employee at Boise’s Hewlett-Packard location, is on his fourth ride since he found a new job in Fort Collins, Colo. This year he’s riding tandem with his 13-year-old son, Alex.

“I miss Idaho, so this is a way to get my Idaho fix,” he said. “And I’m trying to instill a bike culture in my son. Bicycling is a very healthy lifestyle. And we’ve got to cut down on all the oil we use.”

the old Dollar Cabin in Sun Valley in 1967, when he cooked up to 23 dozen hamburgers every lunch hour for Hollywood’s A-listers. This is his first trip back to the valley in years.

“I can’t believe the change,” he said. “Bellevue is now as big as Hailey used to be. I can’t imagine what changes I’ll find in Sun Valley when I bike up there later today.”

While bicyclists gushed about area beauty, Hailey officials were equally pleased with the money that flowed in with each turning spoke. Ride Idaho officials bought $12,000 in Chamber Bucks, giving each rider $25 to spend at area stores. The organization also donated bicycle racks to Hailey’s new rodeo and ice arena, along with a $2,600 Neutron Spinner play set for the Hailey Elementary School playground.

“Last September we installed one of these at Carey Elementary, and during the grand opening there were 20 kids spinning around on a device meant for 10,” said Lester Wilson, maintenance engineer for the Blaine County School District. “Once the kids find out it’s here, you won’t be able to keep them off it.”

Refreshed from a layover involving activities ranging from whitewater rafting to mountain biking on Bald Mountain, the riders will head toward Stanley today.

“They’ll have breakfast at 6:30, and the bicyclists will be on the road by 7:30,” Dehne said. “By 8, everything will be gone. It’ll just disappear.”

Crapo in Magic Valley on Monday

TIMES-NEWS

U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, will be in the Magic Valley on Monday for a series of events.

His trip comes shortly after Congress passed a historic increase of the debt ceiling after intense debate about how much to cut from the federal budget.

Here’s a look at his schedule on Monday:

Noon: Jerome Chamber of Commerce luncheon, Jerome Country Club, 649 Golf Course Road, Jerome. Reservations required online at visitjeromeidaho.com/events.

1:30 p.m.: Economic roundtable discussion sponsored by the Federal Home Bank of Seattle, La Quinta Inn, 539 Pole Line Road, Twin Falls.

3:45 p.m.: Talks about health care issues with staff at Hospice Visions Home, 539 E. 100 S., Jerome.

5 p.m.: Town hall discussion, College of Southern Idaho, Fine Arts Center Auditorium, 615 Falls Ave., Twin Falls.

Bond

Continued from the front page of the law allows municipalities to incur debt if a judge rules the project it will finance is vital to their function.

In his ruling, Bevan echoed city concerns that the plant and lift station will fall out of compliance with federal and state regulations — with potential problems as grave as raw sewage overflowing into Rock Creek — if repairs aren’t made soon. The city stated in its petition that the $550,000 in anticipated annual payments would come from wastewater fees, not general taxes.

The Twin Falls City Council has not decided that the projects will be paid for with debt, but it wanted to keep the option open. The city’s Citizen Finance and Planning Committee has been tasked with exploring the best way to pay for the projects, Rothweiler said.

With the news of the substantially lower bid, Rothweiler said there was even potential for no debt being needed to pay for the project.

It also means the city, if the council decides to bond, will want to wait until final construction bids come in, likely in the fall, Rothweiler said. Not knowing the final costs of the projects puts the city in the position of not bonding enough, or in the even trickier position of taking too much bond money.

If that happens, “then we’re in the very strange position where we have money we shouldn’t legally have,” Rothweiler said.

The city can’t legally make money off the debt. It also can’t return the cash to investors early unless it pays early-return fees to lenders who anticipated several years of steady payments.

“It’s developing an individual education plan for each child fitting their needs, using their strengths to overcome their weaknesses,” said Kelly Bangertner, the school board’s chairman.

For example, if students’ strengths are in reading and their weaknesses are in math, the teacher would use story problems that youngsters read first — then solve.

Projects will unfold as classes begin and groups start brainstorming. In schools that have used a similar model, projects have included researching the conditions of a pond where ducks frequently died and analyzing police records to find out where drunk driving offenses most frequently occur in a city.

The school is already filling up. Its limit is 150 students in kindergarten through sixth grade — 145 are already enrolled.

Eventually, the school wants to grow and add seventh- and eighth-grade students, and have up to 350 enrolled.

But that goal is seven or eight years away, Bangertner said.

The school will have about a dozen employees this year, including six teachers, several classroom aides, a principal and office staff.

Heritage Academy has been preparing its building, which was formerly used by a private Christian school that closed in January.

The school provides students with smaller classes of 15 to 20, and offers hands-on activities and mentoring programs with high school students.

Prescribed Burn in Shoshone Rescheduled

THE TIMES-NEWS

SHOSHONE • The Bureau of Land Management has rescheduled a 20-acre prescribed fire in the Tuttle area near the Shoshone Wildlife Tract.

Initially, the burn was set for the end of July, but weather conditions were not favorable. Now, the Twin Falls District Fuels Program is preparing to start the burn on Friday morning. With twice the resources available this time around, the burn is only expected to take a day. If there is any threat for a wildfire, the burn will not take place.

In the fall, the BLM hopes to reseed the burned area with species that will promote a better habitat for wildlife. There may be residual smoke that settles in the Tuttle area in the afternoon, but it is not expected to stay long.

OUR VIEW

Why Doesn’t Butch Otter Push Back?

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has won 12 statewide elections and is unlikely to have to face voters again — he’ll be 72 on Election Day 2014. Now would be a good time to use the bully pulpit.

On July 16, the Idaho Republican Central Committee essentially voted to call Idaho’s Republican governor a liar. In its annual meeting in Moscow, the committee approved a resolution questioning Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s Project 60 economic development initiative and whether it was a front for illicit Chinese control of Idaho’s economy. That sort of tripe is par for the course in the current Idaho Republican Party. What’s remarkable is that Otter didn’t respond more forcefully. If something similar had happened during the administrations of former Govs. Jim Risch, Dirk Kempthorne or Phil Batt, state GOP Chairman Norman Semanko would have found himself sitting the governor’s office and having a very bad day.

Not on this governor’s watch. Otter lost his well-regarded Department of Commerce director, Don Dietrich, who announced this week he’s leaving in September. In the John Birch Society-fueled fantasy that was behind the “China beachhead” resolution approved by the state GOP central committee, Dietrich was cast as the chief enabler of Chinese infiltration.

Dietrich, who played a major role in steering C3’s call center and its 900 jobs to Twin Falls, certainly has better career options than being a Bircher dartboard. He’s a former executive with Aspen Technology and Cargill Inc. But how long is this governor going to let himself and his administration be whipsawed by the extremists who control the state GOP? Otter’s entire persona — dating back from his days as a maverick libertarian legislator from Canyon County in the 1970s — has been public accountability. He prides himself on being a stand-up guy. So it’s long past time he told the flat-earthers who hijacked his party in 2008 where to get off. By attracting C3, Don Dietrich and Project 60 were partly responsible for pouring more than $22 million directly and $20.7 million indirectly into the Twin Falls area economy. What have the Birchers done for us lately?

Is S&P an Honest Broker? Not So Much

The credit rating agencies are taking advantage of the country’s financial problems to increase their own political power. They want to ensure that regulators do not reduce their autonomy and influence. Their strategy is brilliant. They are not piling on all at once by downgrading the United States in concert. Standard & Poor’s is the bad cop for now, taking the first swipe at the United States last Friday, and seeing its influence confirmed by the stock market’s dramatic reaction. Moody’s and Fitch are playing the good cop — exercising restraint about a potential downgrade, yet still flexing their muscles by criticizing the government both publicly and behind the scenes. The rating agencies have the federal government over a barrel. If politicians ignore rating agencies’ warnings, they risk a withering assault of additional downgrades that could undercut confidence in the government and inflict soaring interest rates. The good-cop, bad-cop routine is especially potent because a downgrade by two of the three major rating agencies could lead to negative consequences, such as requiring some bond issuers to secure additional collateral. Since the 1970s, federal statutes and regulations have mandated that debt issuers obtain ratings as evidence of creditworthiness. An oligopoly of rating agencies used this authority to effectively control access to the financial system. Even a threat of a downgrade from a rating agency could cause credit to dry up, and few inside or outside of Washington dared to challenge their dominance. The financial crisis jeopardized the agencies’ privileged position. Politicians and pundits accused them of being asleep at the wheel, if not complicit with issuers, in camouflaging risks and misleading investors during the run-up to the subprime mortgage crisis. The Dodd-Frank Wall Street reform law, enacted a year ago but not fully implemented yet, threatened to introduce unprecedented oversight and regulation. The law called for exposing rating agencies to civil liability in securities lawsuits if their ratings were inaccurate. It also challenged the oligopoly’s dominance by calling for the Securities and Exchange Commission to explore the feasibility of having an independent organization select rating agencies for asset-backed securities, instead of having the bond issuers select and pay the agencies, as they now do. But the rating agencies struck back, first through civil disobedience. To evade potential liability, they threatened to freeze the markets for asset-backed securities by refusing to allow their ratings to be quoted in SEC filings. The SEC quickly caved and suspended the rule. Meanwhile, the rating agencies have begun a guerrilla campaign of behind-the-scenes lobbying to weaken the commission’s efforts to carry out other parts of Dodd-Frank. The S&P downgrade has elevated this simmering standoff to an overt clash. Politicians will be tempted to wave a white flag by granting the agencies a pass from tough regulation in exchange for the agencies’ not downgrading federal debt further. While that approach may give the United States breathing room in the short run, the government should not give in to such extortion. Instead, politicians must take the hard medicine of a downgrade in stride and get America’s house in order, because the country faces ruin if the budget imbalances continue, regardless of what rating agencies say. At the same time, they should not forget the rating agencies’ role in the crisis and allow these monitors of creditworthiness to revert to their pre-crisis ways of lax ratings and blindness to deception. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Paper Owes Miss. an Apology

I recently read an article in which you slammed Mississippi on several fronts from income to food. I’ve never been to Idaho, so I do not make any comments except that it looks like a wonderful place to live. However, from your comments, it’s obvious that you have never been to Mississippi. Before you slam any state and its citizens, why not make a visit to that state; then and only then would you be qualified to make the disparaging comments that you so easily seem to make.

By the way, we actually do wear shoes and not all homes are on wheels. As Momma would say, I think an apology is in order!

Congressmen Needed Scolding

Cheers to the editor of the Times-News for a wonderful, on-the-mark editorial Sunday, Aug. 7, to Idaho congressmen (to be extrapolated to all senators and congressmen); for scolding our elected representatives for acting so childlike and irresponsible in the past few weeks. The message is “Don’t go home until you do what you were elected for: work together to get our nation and economy back on track.” The speaker of the House said he got 98 percent of what he wanted! What did the nation get? Certainly not what we needed.

Article on Traffic Was Irresponsible

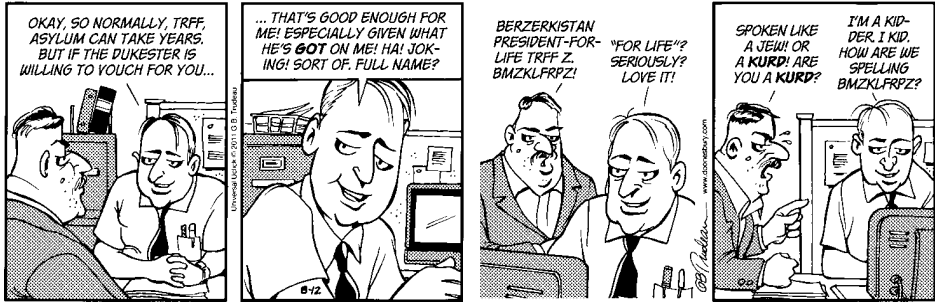

I want to address the “Magic Valley commuters frustrated by construction delays, detours and poor etiquette” article. Though it specifically referenced construction zones, the feelings expressed can’t help but resound with all of us who experience the frustration of construction delays, often in lines formed well before the actual posted signs. You should have clarified that the behaviors of motorists described as idiots and cheaters may actually be the best driving practices up until the construction zone or merge is reached. Motorists must understand that until they reach the posted area, they are on a regular road and must obey all laws to keep conditions safe. The U.S. Department of Transportation Federal Highway Administration publicizes the use of two lanes up to the point of merging as the safest and most efficient method of driving through bottle-necks. Straddling the middle line to block two lanes of traffic is dangerous and illegal. As one of the main information sources in the area, The Times-News has a responsibility to consider the effect its presentation of information has on the public. As one of many who commutes home from Twin Falls every day, it seems the effect this article has had on traffic has been to perpetuate ignorance, validate feelings of road rage, and empower those who are not following correct preconstruction zone protocol to hate those who are, leading to even more dangerous driving conditions in areas before the construction zones begin. There were no citations of any sources of valid safety practices (such as the USDOT recommended “zipper merge”) or correct legal information (two lanes are open until signs tell you to merge) to balance out the opinions that made up the substance of this news article. It’s hardly responsible journalism to publish opinions in the news section without also offering to educate the public on the truth.

Southeast Idaho Sage Grouse Hunts Considered

POCATELLO (AP) • The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is considering a sage grouse hunting season in southeast Idaho despite concerns the population of chicken-sized birds in that part of the state is declining due to habitat loss.

Fish and Game officials took public comments this week about the proposed hunts in three southeast Idaho management areas — Big Desert, Curlew and East Idaho Uplands.

The agency has proposed a seven-day hunt starting Oct. 1 with a one-bird limit per day in the Big Desert and the Curlew areas, but no season in the East Idaho Uplands unit.

Comments at the public meeting Monday were mixed, with some speaking in favor of the hunts and some concerned hunting only exacerbates the bird's population struggles.

Toby Boudreau, regional wildlife manager with Fish and Game, said a hunt could help the agency better understand trends in the sage grouse population by collecting sage grouse wings from hunters. Those wings would be used to determine age and sex of a bird and possibly provide information about sage grouse populations.

Boudreau also said the agency is partnering with researchers at Utah State University to determine why population numbers are declining in the East Idaho Uplands unit.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced last year that sage grouse deserved federal protection but said other species in greater peril are higher priorities to protect as threatened or endangered.

Support for the agency's limited hunting plan came from an Idaho State University professor who specializes in ornithology.

The Idaho State Journal reports that Dave Delehanty told Fish and Game officials at Monday's meeting that hunts can be held in areas where there are healthy populations of the upland game birds.

"It's not like there's a shortage of sage grouse, but the habitat is being ruined," Delehanty said. "Sage grouse could restore themselves if we took care of the habitat."

2 Teen Runaways Charged in Attack on N. Idaho Woman

SANDPOINT (AP) • Authorities say two teenage runaways brutally attacked a 66-year-old northern Idaho woman who offered them a ride.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports Marshall O. Dittrich, of Danville, Calif., and Joseph J. Martin, of Denver, each face a felony charge of battery with intent to commit robbery in Idaho's 1st District Court.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled Wednesday.

Bonner County Sheriff's Det. Phil Stella says the 17-year-olds ran away from a boarding school in Montana and were hitchhiking Sunday when Vera Gadman, of Hope, offered them a ride in her SUV.

Stella says Gadman was choked with a cord and hit with a bottle before she managed to flee the attack.

Northwest Power Group: Natural Gas Glut to Cut Electricity Prices

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • The council that helps ensure Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington have affordable electricity now expects a glut of natural gas supplies to last for years, potentially reducing costs for residential and business customers but also creating challenges for developers of alternative energy.

Staff at the Northwest Power and Conservation Council on Wednesday suggested changes to its fuel price forecasts, citing a "fundamental shift" in expectations. They now see natural gas prices falling as new technologies help tap the resource from deep within shale formations such as those in Pennsylvania or Wyoming.

The council hasn't formally adopted the proposed changes, but if they're right, natural gas customers would benefit directly, much as they currently are from falling prices.

But customers of electricity utilities that produce a healthy share of their power from natural gas-fired plants, like Idaho Power Co.'s 300-megawatt Langley Gulch facility to be completed next year, could also see long-term relief.

"The wholesale prices for electricity should be impacted by this lower natural gas price," Massoud Jourabchi, the Northwest Power and Conservation Council's manager of economic analysis, told The Associated Press on Thursday. "That, in turn, will have an impact on customer retail rates. How much, it really depends on the particulars of the utility."

What has changed to make the four-state power council increasingly bullish on natural gas supplies? Companies are getting better at sucking natural gas from deep beneath the earth's surface, doing it more cheaply than ever before.

Intermountain Gas general manager Frank Morehouse in Boise noted that companies are even drilling in Idaho, despite the state's history as a natural-gas dead zone.

"The rapid development of shale gas has created a glut of natural gas that is likely to last for several years and depress prices," according to the northwest council's updated forecast. "The likely effect of the revised fuel price forecast on a revised power plan would be to reduce the forecast of electricity prices."

The council's Jourabchi cautioned against too-optimistic expectations: Many other factors go into electricity rates, such as weather, legislative action, environmental regulations, even the economy.

For instance, if the U.S. were to enter a prolonged economic malaise, it's possible some people could see electricity rates actually rise to offset a shrinking customer base.

"We always say, 'Your mileage may vary,'" Jourabchi said from his Portland, Ore., offices. "There's a whole slew of issues that come in ... because the customer rates are not wholly dependent on natural gas prices."

A potential side-effect of rising natural gas supplies and falling prices could be that some renewable energy projects like wind and solar may become less lucrative. That's because the prices

Judge Removes ISU From Fired Professor’s Lawsuit

Habib Sadid said he was fired for voicing his discontent with Idaho State University policies.

POCATELLO (AP) • A federal judge has removed Idaho State University from a lawsuit filed by a former professor who claims he was wrongfully terminated, but claims against school President Arthur Vailas and a former college dean will move forward.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill ruled Wednesday in the case of Habib Sadid, who said he was fired for voicing his discontent with administration policies.

Sadid also said Idaho State University administrators defamed his character by leaking comments that were published in the student newspaper that said the civil engineering professor posed a safety threat on campus, according to his attorney.

While the judge will allow Sadid’s lawsuit against Vailas and former College of Engineering Dean Richard Jacobsen to proceed, no timeline was set for the case.

The Idaho State Journal reports that it was unclear whether Vailas or Jacobson, who are no longer being sued in their official university capacities but as individuals, will continue to be represented by the school’s legal counsel.

University spokesman Mark Levine and general counsel Brad Hall declined to comment, citing university policy.

Sadid was suspended from the Pocatello-based university in August 2009 and terminated a month later for what administrators called unprofessional and insubordinate conduct. But Sadid said his history of speaking out about campus problems led to his termination.

He initially sued the university in state court last year, but that case was dismissed and his appeal is pending before the Idaho Supreme Court. Justices are expected to consider that case sometime in November, said attorney Ron Coulter, who is representing Sadid.

Sadid filed a second lawsuit, this time in federal court, on March 15. At the time, Coulter said federal court was a better venue to argue the free speech case.

Spokesman Says Perry Running for President

BY APRIL CASTRO
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas • Texas Gov. Rick Perry is running for president, a spokesman confirmed Thursday, a move certain to shake up the race for the GOP nomination much to the delight of conservatives looking for a candidate to embrace.

Perry spokesman Mark Miner said the governor would make his intentions known on Saturday while visiting South Carolina and New Hampshire just as most of his presidential rivals compete in a test vote in Iowa.

Official word of Perry's entrance into the race came just hours before eight candidates, including GOP front-runner Mitt Romney, were to appear on stage during a nationally

It wasn't much of a surprise. The longest-serving governor in Texas history has flirted with a presidential run since spring and has spent the past few months courting Republicans in early voting states and laying the groundwork for a campaign. He met privately with potential donors from California to New York and gave rousing speeches to party faithful, casting himself as a fiscally responsible social conservative. His intentions became even clearer over the past few days when officials disclosed that he would visit an important trio of states, a campaign-like schedule timed to overshadow the debate and the Iowa straw poll and, perhaps, wreak havoc on a field led by Romney.

Stick-on Patch Proposed for Patient Monitoring

Researchers embed electronic sensors in a film thinner than the diameter of a human hair.

BY RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON • One day, monitoring a patient's vital signs like temperature and heart rate could be as simple as sticking on a tiny, wireless patch, sort of like a temporary tattoo.

Eliminating the bulky wiring and electrodes used in current monitors would make the devices more comfortable for patients, says an international team of researchers who report their findings in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

"What we are trying to do here is to really reshape and redefine electronics ... to look a lot more like the human body, in this case the surface layers of the skin," said John A. Rogers of the University of Illinois. "The goal is really to blur the distinction between electronics and biological tissue."

The researchers embedded electronic sensors in a film thinner than the diameter of a human hair, which was placed on a polyester backing like those used for the temporary tattoos popular with kids. The result was a sensor that was flexible enough to move with the skin and would adhere without adhesives.

The researchers said the devices had remained in place for up to 24 hours. Rogers said in an briefing that, while normal shedding of skin cells would eventually cause the monitors to come off, he thought they could remain in place as long as two weeks.

In addition to monitoring patients in hospitals, other uses for the devices could

Republicans Take Gloves Off at Presidential Debate

Though everyone on the stage assailed President Obama, it was clear from the quarreling between Tim Pawlenty and Michele Bachmann during the debate who had the most on the line.

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT
and PHILIP ELLIOTT

AMES, Iowa • Minnesota rivals Tim Pawlenty and Michele Bachmann sparred bitterly Thursday night during an eight-candidate Republican debate, seeking to break out of the GOP presidential pack ahead of an Iowa test vote with huge consequences. Each seeks to become the main challenger to Republican front-runner Mitt Romney.

Their efforts were newly complicated by Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who stole some of the spotlight from afar by making it known hours before the debate that he was running for the GOP nomination. That was the latest twist in the most consequential week yet in the 2012 Republican presidential nomination fight.

Though everyone on the stage assailed President Barack Obama, it was clear from the quarreling between Pawlenty and Bachmann during the feisty two-hour debate who had the most on the line ahead of Saturday's straw poll that could well winnow the field.

On stage just a few minutes, Pawlenty, who is struggling to gain traction, went after Bachmann, accusing the congresswoman of achieving nothing significant in Congress, lacking executive experience and having a history of fabrications.

"She's got a record of misstating and making false statements," Pawlenty said.

Bachmann, who has risen in polls since entering the race this summer and has eclipsed Pawlenty, quickly responded with a list of what she called Pawlenty's liberal policies when he was Minnesota's governor, including his support for legislation to curb industrial emissions.

"You said the era of small government is over," she told Pawlenty. "That sounds a lot like Barack Obama if you ask me."

Other jousting broke out later in the

DES MOINES, Iowa • Mitt Romney's visit to the Iowa State Fair on Thursday may have been the best debate prep session he could've hoped for.

Romney's appearance at the fair's soapbox grew unusually testy when, in a question-and-answer session, a few angry people heckled the Republican presidential candidate over his declaration not to raise taxes. They urged the campaign frontrunner to raise taxes on the wealthy to help fund entitlement programs like Social Security and Medicare.

Romney explained that one way to fulfill promises on entitlement programs is to "raise taxes on people," but before he could articulate his position of not raising taxes, someone interrupted. "Corporations!" a protester shouted, apparently urging Romney to raise taxes on corporations that have benefited

Afghans: Copter Ablaze When it Crashed

BY DEB RIECHMANN
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • Afghan children retrieved souvenir-sized pieces of a helicopter shot down by the Taliban in eastern Afghanistan where witnesses on Thursday described seeing the chopper burst into flames and break apart before falling from the sky, killing 30 U.S. troops and eight Afghans.

Coalition forces finished recovering the victims' remains and big sections of the wreckage. Yet small, twisted pieces of the Chinook CH-47 remain scattered on both sides of a slow-flowing river in Wardak Province where it crashed before dawn Saturday.

Farhad, a local resident, told Associated Press Television News that the helicopter was shot down by a rocket-propelled grenade fired from a nearby knoll as it was preparing to land.

"As soon as it was hit, it started burning," he said, standing in a field still littered with small pieces of the chopper, including a part of a scorched rifle stamped "Made in Germany" and a piece of charred paper with typewritten first aid instructions.

"After it started burning, it crashed. It came down in three pieces," he added. "We could see it burning from our homes."

Many of the victims' bodies were badly mangled and burned, said Farhad, who like many Afghans uses only one name.

of Kabul was the deadliest single loss for U.S. forces in the nearly 10-year Afghan war.

The crash comes amid fears that the country is far from stable even though U.S. and NATO forces have begun to leave Afghanistan. U.S. military officials have tried to counter those fears, saying that while the downing of the Chinook was a tragic setback, one crash will not determine the course of the war.

The victims included 17 members of the elite Navy SEALs, five Naval Special Warfare personnel who support the SEALs, three Air Force Special Operations personnel, an Army helicopter crew of five, seven Afghan commandos and an Afghan interpreter.

Gul Agha, another resident of Tangi Valley, also said that after the helicopter crashed, parts were burning on either side of the Tangi River. Some of the debris also ended up on a nearby hillside, he said.

"When the helicopter came at night, the Taliban were hiding in the bushes around the area," he said.

“I’m not going to eat Barack Obama’s dog food,” Romney said when asked whether he would have vetoed the compromise legislation that Congress gave to the president that raised the debt ceiling. “What he served up is not what I would have as president of the United States.”

Notably absent from the eight-candidate spectacle were Perry, who was in Texas preparing for a weekend announcement tour to early primary states, and former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, who isn’t a candidate but was stoking presidential speculation anew with a visit to the Iowa State Fair.

The nation’s teetering economic situation shadowed the debate, with stock market volatility and a downgrade in the U.S. credit rating giving Republicans ample opportunities to criticize Obama. The Democratic president will get his shot to counter the criticism next week during a Midwestern bus tour that will take him through this state that helped launch him on the path to the White House four years ago.

On Thursday, he, too, tried to align himself with a public fed up with economic uncertainty and Washington gridlock. “There is nothing

Fugitive: ‘I Deserved to Get Shot’

Three siblings face charges after allegedly firing AK-47 at four patrol cars during a chase on Interstate 25 in Colorado.

BY KRISTEN WYATT
Associated Press

PUEBLO, Colo. • A woman caught with her two brothers after a nationwide manhunt told Colorado authorities she “deserved to get shot” after pointing a gun at a police chief at the end of the siblings’ run from the law, according to a court document.

Lee Grace Dougherty, 29, Dylan Dougherty Stanley, 26, and Ryan Edward Dougherty, 21, are being held in Pueblo County, Colo., on bonds of $1.25 million each. The three made their first court appearance Thursday by video from jail, and none made any statement during the brief hearing.

They face charges of attempted murder of a peace officer and assault on a peace officer. The charges stem from allegations that they shot rounds from an AK-47 at four patrol cars during a chase Wednesday on Interstate 25 in Colorado. The chase ended when troopers deployed spike strips to puncture the tires of the trio’s Subaru, and the vehicle rolled and crashed into a guardrail.

According to an arrest affidavit, Lee Dougherty ran from the crash and was shot in the leg by Walsenburg Police Chief James Chamblerein after she pointed a “machine pistol” at him. The document says she later told police, “I deserved to get shot.”

Investigators said that when they asked her about gunfire during the chase, Lee Dougherty said she thought authorities were firing at them. Authorities said they didn’t fire at the fugitives’ car and believe she might have mistaken the sound of the spike strips for gunshots.

“We weren’t trying to hurt anyone; we just wanted them to get back. They were way back and we could barely see them,” she said, according to the affidavit. Separate affidavits for the three don’t include statements from the brothers.

The trio’s mother, Barbara Bell of East Palatka, Fla., spoke briefly Thursday to The Associated Press but declined to discuss their ordeal, saying she didn’t think it would help them in the long run.

“Thank God they’re not tried by the media,” she said. “They’re tried in a court of law and their story will come out at that time.”

Cameron: U.K. Will Seek Anti-Gang Ideas From U.S.

LONDON (AP) • Prime Minister David Cameron said Thursday that Britain would look to the United States for solutions to gang violence after nights of riots and looting, and promised authorities would get strong powers to stop street mayhem from erupting again.

Cameron told lawmakers he was “acting decisively to restore order on our streets,” as police raided houses to round up suspects from four nights of unrest in London and other English cities.

Steve Kavanagh, the deputy assistant commissioner of London’s Metropolitan Police, admitted the force initially did not deploy enough officers to control the outbreak of violence.

Cameron also acknowledged that police had been overwhelmed by mobile groups of looters in the first nights of the rioting and said authorities were considering new powers, including allowing police to order thugs to remove masks or hoods, evicting troublemakers from subsidized housing and temporarily disabling cell phone instant messaging.

He said the 16,000 police deployed on London’s streets to deter rioters and reassure residents would remain through the weekend.

and in Washington have misplaced priorities,” she said in a statement, calling the comment a “shocking admission.”

There were other tense moments in Romney’s 20-minute appearance at the fair. People interrupted the former Massachusetts governor with chants of “Wall Street greed!” Some in the audience tried to shout questions over Romney, and he at times shouted back.

“Hold on a moment, let me speak! Hold on a moment!” he said.

“You get to ask your question, I get to give my answer and if you don’t like my answer you can vote for someone else,” Romney said.

At one point, Romney poked fun at the hecklers, saying, “My guess is they won’t be voting for me.”

Frances Mary Tittsworth

Aug. 27, 1918-Aug. 9, 2011

Frances Mary Tittsworth, 92 years old, passed away Tuesday, Aug. 9, 2011, from natural causes at her home with family. She will always be remembered by her family for her love, support and gentle spirit.

She is survived by her two daughters and sons-in-law, Peggy and Rod Good of Twin Falls, and Debra and Bob McLaughlin of Playa Ocotol, Costa Rica. Also, Frances had four grandchildren, Zef Medina (35), Cruz Medina (31), Rodrick Good (30) and Adam Good (27). Her first great-grandson is expected Aug. 12.

Frances was born Aug. 27, 1918, in Salt Lake City, Utah, the youngest of three children. She attended high school in Salt Lake City and worked at Kresses Department Store. Her older brother, Melvin, remained in Salt Lake City while Frances moved to Los Angeles with her sister, Eleanor. It was during World War II when she met the love of her life, Leon Tittsworth, on a blind date arranged by her sister. Leon had just been discharged from the Army when they met, fell in love and were married six weeks later on June 21, 1941, in Los Angeles, Calif. Frances and Leon lived for a short time in Los Angeles and then traveled around the Northwest, settling in Idaho, working for a brief time at Lava Hot Springs and the Galena Lodge. Finally, they settled in Twin Falls, where Leon opened a welding shop. They lived in Idaho for 10 years, enjoying the hunting, fishing and camping with their many friends. During this time, their two daughters were born.

Frances had always hoped for girls so she would have them to sew for. She was an excellent seamstress and put a lot of love into everything she made. In 1955, Frances and Leon decided to move to Ontario, Calif. During this time, Frances was a devoted wife and mother. She also served in Relief Society and helped with the Girl Scouts. After their daughters were married and Leon retired, they moved to Lake Havasu, Ariz., for seven years, always returning to Twin Falls during the summer.

It was one summer that they found their 18-acre farm where they lived full time for the next 20 years. In 1992, Peggy Good moved back to Twin Falls with her family to be close to her parents. Frances and Leon remained content to live on the farm and enjoy the company of old friends and family until Frances' beloved husband of 68 years, Leon, passed away at the family home on Sept. 12, 2009. Frances continued to live by herself on the farm with her cat until Tuesday.

Highlights of her life included three trips she made to England to visit her cousins she felt very close to and the numerous trips she made with her sister, Elly, that included an Alaskan cruise, Hawaii and the Caribbean.

A graveside service for Frances will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, Aug. 12, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Services are under the direction of White Mortuary, "Chapel by the Park." To share a memory of Frances or to offer condolences to Frances' family, please visit www.whitemortuary.com.

Rear Adm. Maurice Rindskopf, 93; Youngest U.S. Sub Commander in World War II

BY EMILY LANGER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Retired Rear Adm. Maurice "Mike" Rindskopf, who became the youngest commander of a U.S. submarine during World War II and helped his vessel achieve one of the best fighting records of the war, died July 27 of prostate cancer at his home in Annapolis, Md. He was 93.

In June 1944, Rindskopf was a 26-year-old lieutenant commander aboard the USS Drum, a state-of-the-art submarine fighting in the Pacific. The captain developed gallstones.

"I was given two choices," Rindskopf wrote in an unpublished autobiography. "To take command, or to break in yet another skipper. The decision was easy, and I became the first in the (U.S. Naval Academy) class of 1938 to command a fleet boat on patrol."

During his 11 patrols aboard the Drum, the last two of which he led, Rindskopf helped sink at least 15 enemy ships and damage 11 more. With that record, the Drum ranked eighth among U.S. submarines in terms of tonnage sank, according to James Scott, author of a forthcoming book about submarine warfare in the Pacific.

Rindskopf received the Navy Cross for his "extraordinary heroism" as commanding officer of the 11th patrol, which took place in Japanese-controlled waters during the fall of 1944. He "launched five well-planned and brilliantly executed torpedo attacks" that sank four ships totaling more than 25,000 tons and damaged two others.

"By his expert seamanship," the citation reads, "Commander Rindskopf avoided severe enemy countermeasures and brought his ship safe to port."

Phillip "Willy" Williamson of Paulsboro, N.J., served on nearly all of Rindskopf's patrols aboard the Drum.

"I think Rindskopf was the reason that we made it through the war," he said.

During the two missions Rindskopf led, he found himself in control of a multimillion-dollar war machine that typically carried a crew of about 80 men on patrols lasting two months or more.

He had joined the crew of the Drum less than three years earlier as a junior officer, shortly before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941, and had distinguished himself for his skill in gunnery.

Firing torpedoes is "all about mathematics," Scott said, and Rindskopf — who was known for his quick mind for math — played a critical role in firing 125 of them. He often volunteered for the night watch, drinking hot soup while decoding messages about the movements of enemy targets. Fellow crew members always knew when it was time.

"I would don a garish yellow aloha shirt I had purchased in Honolulu," Rindskopf wrote in his memoir, "and lo! we went to Battle Stations."

After World War II, Rindskopf was a torpedo and gunnery instructor at the submarine school in New London, Conn., where he would later return as the officer in charge. In the 1960s, he commanded two submarine flotillas.

He was promoted to admiral in 1967 and for the next two years served as deputy assistant chief of staff for intelligence to Adm. John McCain Jr., the commander of the U.S. Pacific Command during the Vietnam War and father of Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

After Rindskopf retired from the Navy in 1972, he worked for Westinghouse as a marketing manager.

Besides the Navy Cross, the highest award for valor after the Medal of Honor, Rindskopf's decorations included the Distinguished Service Medal, the Silver Star and the Bronze Star.

Executives See Bright Spots, No Reason to Panic

BY MICHAEL LIEDTKE

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • Americans are still spending money at casinos, amusement parks and concerts. Some are even shopping at Bloomingdales and looking at new homes.

Even as the stock market's wild swings heighten fears of another recession, many business executives see bright spots. Worrisome signs abound, too, especially for companies struggling to recover. But for a lot of corporate leaders, the general state of the economy has not changed much in the past three weeks of upheaval.

Executives addressed the turmoil this week during earnings conference calls and in interviews with The Associated Press. From their vantage point, the economy looks less troubled than major stock indicators like the Dow Jones Industrial average, which has tumbled by 12 percent since July 21.

“Overall, it’s kind of business as usual,” said Michael Rapino, CEO of concert promoter Live Nation Entertainment Inc. He expects all of the company’s shows to go on this fall after seeing North American attendance rise by 13 percent in the April-June period.

Executives at rebounding companies still sound upbeat. Despite the confusion and uncertainty, they aren’t panicking — at least not yet.

In some ways, the recent market upheaval has been easier for business leaders to endure because it’s not entirely surprising. The outlook in corporate America had been darkening even before the stock market’s harrowing plunges began to evoke memories of the recession’s nadir in late 2008.

A survey of 1,200 senior executives taken last month by the Corporate Executive Board produced the lowest level of confidence since 2009. The same poll found only 38 percent planned to expand payrolls in the next year, down from 58 percent six months ago.

That doesn’t bode well for a U.S. economy that lost as many as 8.6 million jobs and has only regained 1.7 million since the recession officially ended two years ago. Unemployment remains above 9 percent.

However, the jobless lines probably won’t get much longer right away because companies are unlikely to lay off workers as quickly as they did during the financial calamity of late 2008 and early 2009.

Businesses are leaner and, even more important, in a stronger financial position than they were three years ago. The companies in the Standard & Poor’s 500 now have nearly $1 trillion in cash, up from $648 billion in September 2008. With more money in the bank, companies won’t be as apt to take drastic measures.

2010 Personal Income Modestly Higher in Rural and Urban Idaho

TIMES-NEWS

Total personal income rose modestly in both rural and urban Idaho in 2010 after significant recession-imposed declines in 2009.

The U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis estimated personal income for Idaho’s five metropolitan areas at $34.7 billion, up 2.7 percent from a year earlier, while personal income in the remaining 33 rural counties — including Twin Falls, Cassia, Jerome and Minidoka counties — rose 2.6 percent to nearly $15.9 billion.

Statewide, personal income — the total of wages, salaries, business profits, investment earnings and transfer payments like retirement, Social Security and unemployment benefits — rose 2.7 percent.

Typically, the range in income growth — or loss — is significant between rural and urban Idaho. The last time the two performed so similarly was 1978, when both rural and urban growth was 15.4 percent.

But the ways rural and urban Idaho got to similar growth rates were significantly different. Wages and salaries in the 11 urban counties were up 1.4 percent after falling almost 7 percent over the two previous years, while wages continued to fall in rural Idaho, dropping 0.8 percent in 2010 after falling 2.5 percent in 2009.

Last year, rural farmers and business operators posted a 13 percent increase in their income compared to 5.3 percent for their urban counterparts. Urban business proprietors suffered losses the two previous years, while rural business operators suffered a 27 percent loss in 2009.

A 17 percent increase in farm earnings and a more than 9 percent jump in earnings from health care fueled personal income growth in rural Idaho, but the increases were offset by losses in construction, manufacturing, retail trade, financial services, real estate and entertainment.

In urban Idaho, growth was more muted, with modest increases spread over every sector except construction and real estate.

Downtown Twin Falls Arts Business Moves, Expands

TIMES-NEWS

Twin Falls Creative Arts Center has moved into a new location in downtown Twin Falls’ Main Street Plaza.

The center, now at 132 Main Ave. S., No. 7, will hold a grand re-opening, 2-5 p.m. Aug. 20. Owners Leon and Cheryl Bruce will be on hand to answer questions and pre-register students for classes. There will be refreshments, door prizes, free face painting, free art project for kids and registration discounts.

The center has expanded its art-class offerings for both children and adults. Weekly children’s art classes will run from Sept. 6 through May 31, 2012. For a list and schedule: tfcreativeartscenter.com or 737-9111. Some scholarships are available for weekly classes; deadline for scholarship applications is Sept. 30.

IDAHO GAS UTILITY PLANS TO CUT PRICES

BOISE (AP) • Intermountain Gas Co. plans to reduce its prices by a combined $14.4 million starting in October, citing strong supplies keeping its cost of natural gas down.

Thursday’s proposal, which still needs to be vetted by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, would reduce the average residential customer’s yearly cost by about $25.92, or 4.2 percent.

The average commercial customer’s cost would fall by 7.7 percent, or $228, according to the proposal.

The company wants these price cuts to take effect on Oct. 1.

Intermountain general manager Frank Morehouse says U.S. natural gas production is at an all-time high, with companies even drilling in Idaho.

He says that supply strength is driving the lower prices.

Officials: View Idaho's Economic Forecasts Warily

BOISE (AP) • Idaho released new economic and tax revenue forecasts, but state officials say there’s no telling if these numbers will weather the test of time, especially given this week’s stock-market turbulence that followed a downgrade of the nation’s debt rating.

Thursday’s forecasts includes good and bad news. For instance, tax revenue for fiscal year 2012 is now expected to be $80 million more than a previous estimate.

Meanwhile, economic growth forecasts were slightly downgraded, even though Idaho’s economy is still expected to expand through 2014.

Given these mixed signals, Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s budget chief, Wayne Hammon, says there’s ample reason for caution amid Wall Street turmoil and the shaky finances of European governments.

Case in point: Moody’s Investors Services told Hammon Wednesday the likelihood of a double-dip recession is growing.

KETCHUM • Marybeth Flower likes to go into the woods and try to capture the flavor of great paintings she’s seen. She and her husband, Joe Bauwens, then print their photographs on watercolor paper, giving them a rich look. “We love to do both realistic and abstract works that look painterly — mostly of nature,” Flower said.

The Ketchum hobbyists must be doing something right. They were among 130 artists from all over the country chosen to participate in the juried Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival, held today through Sunday at Atkinsons’ Park in Ketchum.

The festival, considered one of the nation’s top arts and crafts festivals, will feature wide varieties of sculpture, glasswork, fiber, woodworking and paintings.

“For me, it’s the epitome of what we do — an opportunity to showcase artists, an opportunity for people to see really great art, an opportunity for people to ask questions of artists and an opportunity to relax and listen to some good music,” said Kristin Poole, co-director of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts. “And it’s even a good place to bring the kids, since we have an arts and crafts corner set aside for the kids.”

Flower and Bauwens will show realistic and abstract works of Idaho sunflowers, aspens, the Camas Prairie and Trail Creek beaver ponds, and even a few pictures they took during a lengthy sojourn in Italy for their coffee table book “Piazza.”

They will be joined at the festival by three other Wood River Valley artists:

- Sun Valley photographer Sue Dumke will show photographs inspired by Monet’s impressionist paintings, by Hemingway’s Parisian haunts and by Buddhas and exotic flowers she has encountered on her world travels.
- Martha Andrea, a former art professor now living in Bellevue, will show her mixed-media work influenced by ancient Greek, Roman and Egyptian cultures.

Eleven women, all with different stories about their lives, loves and obsessions, will take the stage Aug. 18-20 to benefit Valley House.

OutCast Theater, one of the smallest and newest theater groups in Magic Valley, chose “Talking With” to raise money for Valley House because of the connection between the play’s characters — who are all at turning points in their lives or enduring hard times — and the nonprofit homeless shelter.

“There is a homeless character in the cast, yes, but we chose Valley House because some of the issues in the play parallel the struggle of the Valley House residents — displacement, confusion, paradigm shifts, issues in the home and family, and a need for rescue or escape,” director Jennifer Miller wrote in an emailed response to questions.

BLUEGRASS
SATURDAY

Enjoy nine bands and do some jamming yourself at Heyburn’s signature Snake River Bluegrass Festival.

BY EVA STUTZMAN
estutzman@magicvalley.com

On Saturday morning, there will be more twang in the air at the Heyburn Riverside Park Amphitheater.

The city of Heyburn will host the third annual Snake River Bluegrass Festival with music from nine local and regional bluegrass bands. The festival also features a banjo workshop and a jam session, so bring your instrument.

“We have some homegrown local bands coming,” said Chris James, one of the event’s organizers. Among them, Strings Attached and Front Porch Flavor from Twin Falls and Idaho Stillwaters from Hagerman.

So what should you expect from these bands at a bluegrass festival? Mostly acoustic shows.

“Bluegrass music has a wide range of acoustic instruments,” Strings Attached banjo player Mike McCarthy said. “There are usually fiddles, banjos and mandolins.”

Front Porch Flavor describes its music as a fusion of country, island and rock music and is known for its covers of Jimmy Buffett songs.

Bluegrass is somewhere between jazz and country music, said fiddler Jenni Jacobson of Strings Attached. “There are a lot of instrumentals where people take breaks and one person has a solo.”

The music has a driving beat that Jacobson described as peppy. McCarthy’s description: “It’s very upbeat.”

"Everyone brings an instrument so they can play with other artists," McCarthy said.

The event is for all ages with a bounce house and food vendors set up around the park.

OutCast

Actors described the play as moving, emotional and deep, with parts that are hilarious and others that will make you cry.

"It is a thoughtful play," Miller said. "You will get home and still be thinking about it."

The 11 actors have spent the past month thinking — in some cases, obsessing — about their characters' lives. In late July, the cast began watching the other actors' performances.

"I completely changed my view of my character," said Janaan Kindelbarger, who plays Marks, a tattooed woman who escaped attack but is marked by events and people in her past.

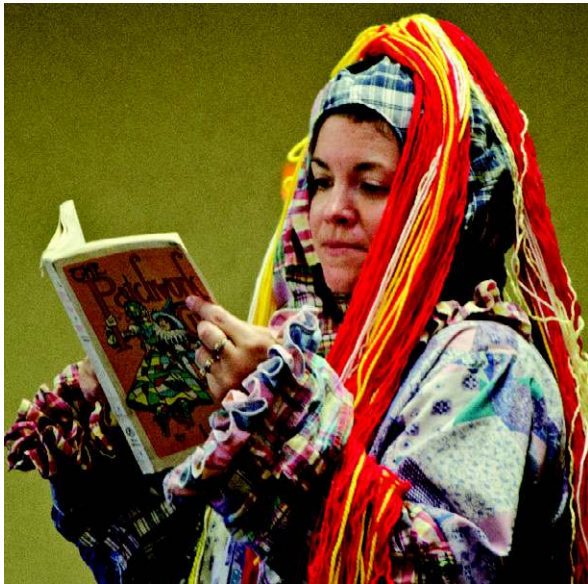

"I watched a YouTube clip of my character and she was annoying," Kindelbarger said. "But I found I was more like her." Everyone, she added, has scars from her past.

"We either let them hurt us or we wear them proudly," Kindelbarger said. "She was proud of her scars, proud that they created who she was."

Insight from the group has helped the actors build the persona, emotion and presence on stage to portray the play's unforgettable characters — a woman who dresses up in secret while doing housework, another who deals with aging and loss by collecting lamps.

"I had an epiphany last week," said Penni Aufderheide of Twin Falls, who plays French Fries. "You learn a lot from other people's ideas about your character."

"I didn't understand why she liked plastic so much," Aufderheide said. "Plastic wasn't something that stained or scratched; it was more permanent. Diane Stevens talked with me about how my character was older and maybe looking for something that was worth having in her life or some kind of legacy, and for her it was plastic."

For some of the actors, "Talking With" has been one of their most challenging plays. Nikki Harms is only 20 and has never had a child, but her character

Expect Big Set, Authentic Period from Sun Valley Shakespeare

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • William Shakespeare wrote the world's best-known love story near the turn of the 17th century. But the tale is still being played out daily around the world — even in Muslim countries where sometimes a teen girl is jailed for falling in love with a teen boy.

"The world is struggling with decency and kindness. We struggle because people won't let us be all we can be," said Jamey Reynolds, a former theater professor who is taking part in Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival's upcoming production of "Romeo and Juliet." "The love between Romeo and Juliet is very beautiful and innocent, and look what we did to them."

"Romeo and Juliet," to be staged Aug. 18-28 in Ketchum, features the young pair who fall in love despite their families' long-running feud. K.O. Ogilvie, who is directing her first Shakespeare play, opted to keep the play true to period, rather than setting it in more modern times.

"You can put 'Romeo and Juliet' in any language, but you won't find it any more beautifully put than the way Shakespeare put it," said Ogilvie, who directed "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" for Company of Fools last summer. "And, after 400 years, 'Romeo and Juliet' still bears a lot of relevance."

Reynolds is building a big set. Based on Shakespeare's Globe Theatre in London, it's dark, setting the stage for romantic tragedy.

"Within a page, you go from the joy of Juliet's wedding day to tragedy. How do you get your motor running for that?" Reynolds said.

Joe Golden, a College of Idaho theater professor, has been coaching the cast in sword fighting. Golden, who does short comic sketches called Greenshows with Tom Willmorth prior to Idaho Shakespeare Festival performances, also choreographed the fight scenes.

Kevin Wade, who recently graduated from the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University, returned home to Sun Valley to play Romeo. "I'm loving that we're really allowing ourselves to portray the honesty of this text — and it's easy not to," he said.

Wade's counterpart is Jacquelyn King, a high school junior.

"'Romeo and Juliet' has been done so many times — they're even coming out with a new movie," she said. "But the emotions in it are so strong. It's timeless."

Musicians, Fans Are Family at Braun Reunion

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

CHALLIS • Idaho musician Muzzie Braun is coming down from the mountain today for the annual family reunion.

He'll be joined by about 3,000 others on the high-desert floor of Challis. They're not all blood relatives, mind you. But, then, Braun notes, fellow singers and fans often feel like family.

The occasion is the annual Braun Brothers Reunion today and Saturday in Challis. This year's festival features Muzzie, his brothers and his sons' two bands — Micky and the Motorcars and Reckless Kelly, both based in Austin, Texas.

The reunion also features a host of other familiar names in the country music business, including Rodney Crowell, Robert Earl Keen and Pinto Bennett and the Famous Motel Cowboys.

"It's a one-of-a-kind unique gathering of musicians," said Hailey resident Erica White, a relative of the Braun clan. "I don't know of any other place where you'll find a lineup of truly talented musicians like this offering up a variety of country music from Texas western to traditional country to alternative country."

Though the "family reunion" is now held in Challis, it all started in Twin Falls where Eustacious "Musty" Braun moved his family in the 1950s from North Dakota. Musty played his Hammond B-3 organ at Club 93 in Jackpot, Nev., while building his three sons a stage in the basement of their Twin Falls home.

The Braun Brothers, as they became known, started out playing teen dances in the area with a rock band they called the Syndicate. Over time, they segued into Western music to play "Cool Water" on the local rodeo and fair circuit.

The Braun family still has a loyal following from Magic Valley, many of whom make the journey each summer to the Braun Brothers Reunion. The festival is held at a natural grass amphitheater on the Challis Golf Course. Gates open at 3 p.m. today with the music starting at 4. They open at noon on Saturday with the music going from 1 p.m. until 10 p.m. The entire town has turned into a campground.

A two-day pass is $74.95. Single-day tickets are $45 at the gate. Children 6 through 12 are admitted for $15 a day.

CSI Rodeo Hires Former Golden Eagle Cowboy

Cody DeMers was a cowboy at CSI for two seasons in 2000-'01, winning the all-around title both years at CNFR. He'll coach roughstock for the team this season.

TIMES-NEWS

College of Southern Idaho Rodeo Coach Steve Birnie added a familiar face to the CSI Rodeo coaching staff Thursday, hiring former Golden Eagle cowboy Cody DeMers to coach roughstock and help run the CSI Expo Center.

DeMers rode saddle bronc and bareback at CSI in 2000 and 2001, winning the all-around title both years at the CNFR. In 2001, DeMers was the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association Saddle Bronc Riding World Champion and was the reserve world champion in bareback twice.

"I am very excited to have Cody join the CSI Rodeo Program as a coach," said Birnie in a release. "He had a lot of success here when he competed for CSI and I look forward to working with him and watching him succeed as our rough stock coach. His experience and knowledge will definitely help our program and all of our kids."

DeMers is currently ranked 10th in the world in bareback riding. Throughout his career, he has won 10 Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rodeos in saddle bronc riding and 52 PRCA rodeos in bareback riding. DeMers' PRCA career earnings is $834,018.

"We are very fortunate to find someone with Cody's skill and background," said CSI athletic director Joel Bate in a release. "He will be an asset to our program."

CSI also adds bareback rider Bradley Dyck of Gladstone, Manitoba to its roster for 2011-12.

Boise State Starts Search for New Athletic Director

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boise State president Bob Kustra talks to media Wednesday in Boise. He had announced earlier he decided to let go of athletic director Gene Bleymaier in the wake of the NCAA investigation into the Broncos' athletic department.

BOISE • Boise State President Bob Kustra made clear his top priority in the job description for a new athletic director: Candidates must play by NCAA rules as they strive to advance Bronco sports to the next level.

But interested candidates should also have the skill to help Boise State transition into a tougher new conference, and quite possibly deal with the stigma and challenges of NCAA sanctions the school faces for violations in the football program and other sports.

The next Bronco sports chief should also know how to raise money — either from a small base of fans, alumni and corporate donors or through innovative marketing — needed to expand the Bronco Stadium, build a swanky new football complex and sweeten the contract that keeps football coach Chris Petersen from trading southwestern Idaho for the next high-profile coaching vacancy.

Kustra, a former Illinois lieutenant governor who came to Boise nine years ago, announced Wednesday the ouster of longtime athletic director Gene Bleymaier. Kustra praised Bleymaier's achievements over the last 30 years, but said the university needs new leadership as it emerges from its first investigation into NCAA infractions.

Kustra was out of town and did not respond to an interview request from The Associated Press on Thursday. He intends to appoint an interim athletic director after Bleymaier officially steps down on Sept. 8 then being a national search for a permanent athletic director.

Tiger Woods hits out of a bunker on the 13th hole during the first round of the PGA Championship golf tournament Thursday at the Atlanta Athletic Club in Johns Creek, Ga.

Wild First Day at PGA Championship

Steve Stricker shot a first-round 63 at the PGA Championship, while Tigers Woods staggered to a 7-over 77.

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press

JOHNS CREEK, Ga. • Steve Stricker had a shot at history and Tiger Woods made some of his own.

Just not the kind he wanted. What a wild first day at the PGA Championship.

Stricker missed a 10-foot birdie putt at his final hole Thursday, just a hair away from becoming the first player to shoot 62 in a major championship. He had no complaints, though, about settling for a 7-under score and the opening-round lead at Atlanta Athletic Club.

"I realized it was for 62 but didn't realize it was for history," Stricker said. "I hit a good putt. It just didn't go in. All in all, a good day"

For Woods, a miserable one.

Seemingly spending as much time in water and sand as he did on the green stuff, Woods returned to the major scene with a major thud — a 77 that was his worst round ever at the PGA.

A 15th major title? Forget about it. Woods will need a major turnaround just to make the cut.

Beyond Stricker and Woods, there was Rory McIlroy banging his hand on an ill-advised shot off a tree root, Ryo Ishikawa spending so much time in the water he needed a snorkel, and two patched-up greens caused by mowers gone wild.

Stricker showed it was possible to go low by keeping the ball in the fairway. He tore up the tough back nine with a 5-under 30 and played a bogey-free round, leaving him two shots ahead of Jerry Kelly among those with morning tee times.

It was the 11th time a player has shot 63 in the year's final major, and the 25th time overall.

"I really had no expectations coming into today's round," the 44-year-old Stricker said. "I didn't make too many birdies the first three days during the practice rounds. I got off to a good start, and it kind of got me going."

McIlroy, the U.S. Open champion, got off to a painful start, taking an ill-advised swing at his ball resting against a tree root on the third hole.

He let the 7-iron fall from his hands as soon as he struck the ball, and flexed his wrist in obvious pain. He walked to the next hole holding an ice compress on his arm. Finally, at the fifth, he was checked out by PGA Tour physical therapist Jeff Hendra.

Apparently reassured that he couldn't hurt it any worse, McIlroy played on. He had the wrist taped up to provide extra support and managed to grind out an even-par 70.

Stricker has never won one of golf's biggest championships — he's 0-for-52 — and the Americans are mired in their longest major drought of the modern era.

It's early, but maybe he'll take care of both in the same week.

Stricker amazingly made birdies at Too Flush, Too Mechanical or Just Plain Lost?

ATLANTA • The excuse at last week's tournament was that he was hitting it too flush. When this one began, Tiger Woods said he was too mechanical. Let's try lost.

It's no longer about playing up to the standard he once set. Since slinking back into the game after a self-inflicted scandal, then battling leg injuries, Woods has been competitive on no more than a handful of occasions. He can't stop spraying his drives, his short game isn't good enough to save him — especially from greenside bunkers — and he isn't making putts. In his opening round at the PGA Championship, that totaled up to a 7-over 77.

To those who expected Woods to come back the way Michael Jordan did after revelations of late-night gambling escapades during the NBA playoffs almost two decades ago — by dropping 55 points on the Knicks the next night, en route to yet another NBA championship — quit holding your breath. Right now, he looks more like Jordan in a Washington Wizards jersey.

"I'm not down. I'm really angry right now," Woods said Thursday, both hands gripping the lectern he stood behind. "There's a lot of words I could use beyond that."

Woods has tried changing his swing, his coach and, most recently, his caddie. On this day he started 3-under through the first five holes focused on what he called "mechanical thoughts" — shorthand for the swing changes he and coach Sean Foley have been working on. For reasons he didn't bother to explain, Woods said he shifted his focus to playing the way he used to. He proceeded to play the next 13 holes in 10-over.

"I thought, 'I can let it go, and play by instinct and feel,'" he said. "And it just screwed up my whole round. I'm not at that point where I can do that yet."

Rockies Fall to Cueto and the Reds

CINCINNATI • Johnny Cueto and two relievers made a pair of first-inning runs stand up and the Cincinnati Reds salvaged a split of their four-game series against the Colorado Rockies with a 2-1 win on Thursday.

Cueto, hampered by an upset stomach while pitching a season-low 3 2-3 innings in his last start at Wrigley Field, bounced back to throw three-hit ball for seven shutout innings. He took over the NL ERA lead, lowering his mark from 2.06 to 1.94.

Cueto (8-5) struck out a season-high nine, including Carlos Gonzalez with the bases loaded to end the fifth inning.

Aroldis Chapman allowed the first two Rockies to reach in the eighth before getting Gonzalez to ground into a double play and striking out Eliezer Alfonzo. Francisco Cordero allowed Seth Smith's 12th home run of the season leading off the ninth, then earned his 22nd save in 27 chances.

Jhoulys Chacin (9-9) pitched eight innings for Colorado, allowing six hits and tying his season high with nine strikeouts.

Cubs 4, Nationals 3

CHICAGO • Aramis Ramirez and Carlos Pena hit back-to-back homers to lead the Cubs to the victory.

Ramirez's two-run shot in the seventh was his 21st of the season, and gave him 16 homers since June 25, tops in the major leagues in that stretch.

Padres 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK • Cameron Maybin homered and stole two bases before scoring the tiebreaking run on an error by substitute shortstop Ruben Tejada, rallying the Padres to a split of their four-game series against the Mets.

Heath Bell pitched a perfect ninth and the last-place Padres improved to 5-2 on a 10-game trip that takes them to Cincinnati this weekend.

Cardinals 5, Brewers 2

ST. LOUIS • Albert Pujols kicked off a 4-for-4 night with a solo homer and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 on Thursday to avoid a three-game sweep.

American League Yankees 6, Angels 5

NEW YORK • Robinson Cano hit a grand slam after Maicer Izturis' two-out error in the seventh inning and the New York Yankees overcame another shaky performance by Mariano Rivera to beat the Los Angeles Angels 6-5 Thursday.

Rivera gave up a three-run homer to pinch-hitter Russell Branyan on his first pitch in the ninth before getting two outs for his 30th save.

Bobby Abreu connected against Rivera on Tuesday night for the first homer off the All-Star closer at Yankee Stadium since May 16, 2010. Rivera also faltered at Boston on Sunday night.

Tigers 4, Indians 3

CLEVELAND • Justin Verlander gave Detroit exactly what it needed, becoming baseball's first 17-game winner as the division-leading Tigers avoided being swept by Cleveland and opened a three-game lead over the Indians in the AL Central.

Verlander (17-5) allowed three hits and struck out 10 in seven innings to earn career win No. 100 as the Tigers ended a 13-game losing streak in Cleveland. He was also on the mound for Detroit's previous win at Progressive Field on May 8, 2010.

Rays 4, Royals 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Jeff Niemann won his sixth consecutive decision, Ben Zobrist had a two-run triple and Tampa Bay completed a four-game sweep.

Niemann (7-4) allowed one run and nine hits over 6 1-3 innings. The right-hander is 6-0 in nine starts since returning from a strained lower back.

Athletics 10, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO • Conor Jackson drove in three runs and Hideki Matsui had four hits, leading the Athletics to the victory.

Oakland failed to hit a home run for the first time in nine games but still finished with its most runs since scoring 13 against Tampa Bay on July 27.

White Sox 6, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE • Mark Buehrle pitched eight solid innings, Alexei Ramirez homered in a four-run first inning, and the Chicago White Sox cruised past the Baltimore Orioles.

Buehrle (10-5) gave up three runs and six hits, struck out six and walked none. The left-hander has allowed three runs or fewer in 18 straight starts, matching the club record set by Frank Smith in 1909, the White Sox said with research by the Elias Sports Bureau.

Rivers Sharp for Chargers, Seattle Rallies Late

SAN DIEGO • The Seattle Seahawks can only hope Tarvaris Jackson someday runs their offense as smoothly as Philip Rivers controls the San Diego Chargers.

Rivers went 5 for 6 while leading an 89-yard scoring in his only series for the Chargers, but Thomas Clayton rushed for a tiebreaking 25-yard touchdown with 3:05 left in the Seahawks' 24-17 victory over San Diego on Thursday night in both clubs' exhibition opener.

Cornell graduate Bryan Walters returned a kickoff 103 yards for a touchdown late in the third quarter for the Chargers, while Mike Tolbert caught an 8-yard scoring pass to cap the only drive by Rivers, who was nearly flawless in his first game back after starting last season's Pro Bowl. Jackson passed for 13 yards over two moderately successful series in his debut as Matt Hasselbeck's replacement with the Seahawks, who trailed 10-0 at halftime.

Cowboys 24, Broncos 23

ARLINGTON, Texas • Tim Tebow showed off his fancy moves on a wild play that didn't even count.

Tebow's failed scramble just before halftime stood as the play of the game, until Stephen McGee — another option quarterback in college — ran around to throw a 13-yard touchdown pass and a two-point conversion with 15 seconds left, giving the Dallas Cowboys a 24-23 victory over the Denver Broncos in a preseason opener Thursday night.

Tebow led the Broncos to two field goals in four drives. The first came on a drive that started on his own 10-yard line, the other on a series that started 7 yards from the end zone. He completed 6 of 7 passes for 91 yards. He also ran twice for 15 yards.

Patriots 47, Jaguars 12

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. • Blaine Gabbert had an inconsistent NFL debut and his Jacksonville Jaguars teammates didn't do any better as the New England Patriots won 47-12 in an exhibition opener on Thursday night.

Playing against mostly backups as top players for both teams sat out the game, the Jaguars scored three field goals on Gabbert's six possessions.

The 10th pick of the draft from Missouri completed 9 of 16 passes for 85 yards. He played the entire first half with starting quarterback David Garrard unavailable with a back injury.

Another rookie quarterback, third-rounder Ryan Mallett of the Patriots, did better.

The former Arkansas standout played the whole second half and drove the Patriots to touchdowns on his first four series, helping to turn a 19-9 halftime lead into a 35-point rout.

Eagles 13, Ravens 6

PHILADELPHIA • Michael Vick picked up where he left off last year and then quickly took a safe seat on the sideline.

Vick threw for 74 yards and a touchdown pass in his only series and the new-look Philadelphia Eagles beat the Baltimore Ravens 13-6 Thursday night in their preseason opener.

Nnamdi Asomugha, Vince Young and several other big-name acquisitions made their debut for the Eagles, who've signed a slew of free agents with impressive resumes in the past two weeks.

Joe Flacco played two series and led the Ravens to a field goal on the opening possession. He completed 3 of 6 passes for 60 yards. Ricky Williams, who signed with Baltimore on Monday, was inactive. Vick, the runner-up to Tom Brady for NFL MVP, completed 4 of 6 passes, including a 3-yard TD toss to Brent Celek.

Fame. That wasn't my job," Rodman said. "My job was to go out there and win ball games, have a good time and take care of my family. As long as the people had a good time, that was my main objective."

Dressed in all black, wearing sunglasses, an Ed Hardy tattooing hat and a scarf that read "The Worm, HOF '11" on the inside, the five-time NBA champion was the center of attention during Thursday's news conferences.

Exactly the way he likes it.

"I just love living life free. And for me to shine, I shine every damn day," Rodman said. "This is for other people here that don't get to see these famous people that's going to come in this building tomorrow."

Dream Teamer and two-time Olympic gold medalist Chris Mullin is the other headline name in the class, though much of the focus was on Rodman. Looking toward him, Stanford women's coach Tara VanDerveer joked she was so excited she was "gonna go out and get a tattoo."

VanDerveer, who has led Stanford to two national championships and won more than 800 games, joins Winter and Division II Philadelphia University coach Herb Magee, the career leader at the collegiate level with more than 900 wins, as the coaches being enshrined. Jackson will present both Rodman and Winter, whose triangle offense was used by Jackson to build dynasties in Chicago and Los Angeles.

"I don't know what's more shocking, that they didn't put Tex in 30 years ago, or they didn't make Dennis wait another 30 years," said Winter's son, Chris.

Eight-time NBA champion Tom "Satch" Sanders, big men Artis Gilmore and Arvydas Sabonis; the late Reese "Goose" Tatum of the Harlem Globetrotters, and women's star Teresa Edwards, who won five Olympic medals — four golds — and is entering her fifth Hall of Fame, also will be honored at Symphony Hall.

None of their speeches figures to be like Rodman's, whose seven straight rebounding titles set an NBA record and who won 70 percent of the games he played in. He wouldn't reveal what he planned to say, though did allow that he's listened to Pearl Jam as motivation for 20 years and that Vedder was an inspiration.

"It's hard to be an entertainer and an athlete and try to be a smart basketball player all at the same time. As you can see, some guys try to do it but they don't know how to actually put the game of basketball first," Rodman said, mentioning Ron Artest as an example. "And that's one thing I did, I put the game of basketball first. Entertainment could come any time of the ballgame."

dello, a professor at Florida State University's sports management school and researcher focused on money in college sports. "How do they want to deal with the fundraising pressure? What role do they want athletics to play if they really value the academic growth. It's a tough business model."

With the financial and compliance challenges facing the next Bronco sports chief, Mondello said Boise State could be the latest school to look beyond career administrators or former coaches to fill the job. Last year, Michigan hired the former CEO of Domino's Pizza to manage the athletic department and its $122 million budget.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The best you get is an even break."

— Franklin P. Adams

In competitive bidding, when their side has hearts and yours has spades, it is often a good idea to keep on bidding to four spades over four hearts. Even if your contract fails, theirs may make. And sometimes both contracts can come home.

At one table, the contract was four hearts, and the spade king was led. Declarer had little choice but to win, overtake his diamond king with dummy's ace, and cash the diamond queen, pitching a spade. He now ruffed a diamond and played a heart to dummy's jack. East ducked this, but declarer accurately ran winning diamonds from the dummy. Whenever East ruffed in, declarer could overruff and play a second trump, ultimately reaching dummy via a club ruff.

It might appear that East could have done better by winning the heart ace and forcing the dummy with three rounds of clubs. However, declarer simply ruffs the third club in dummy and plays a winning diamond as before. East ruffs and declarer overruffs, ruffs a club high in the dummy and plays more winning diamonds.

In the other room, hearts were never mentioned when East initially treated his hand as a raise to three spades — something of an overbid — and West declared four spades. Here North led a club, which declarer won to play a trump. When South won the spade ace and played the diamond king, North missed his only chance to beat the contract. When he failed to overtake, four spades could no longer be beaten.

ANSWER: Determining what to open with a hand having 10 or 11 high-card points and a moderate six-card suit is often a problem. I upgrade to a one-level opening bid if I can. Factors such as decent controls and guarded side-suit honors, as here, persuade me to open one diamond. If I had a queen in both hearts and clubs instead of my king and a jack, you might tempt me to open two diamonds — but only if vulnerable.

Today is Friday, Aug. 12, the 224th day of 2011. There are 141 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 12, 1981, IBM introduced its first personal computer, the model 5150, at a press conference in New York. The 5150 that was presented had an Intel 8088 microprocessor running at 4.77 MHz (megahertz), 16 kB (kilobytes) of random-access memory (RAM), no disk drives, and a pricetag of $1,565 (allowing for inflation, that would be nearly $4,000 today).

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1867, President Andrew Johnson sparked a move to impeach him as he defied Congress by suspending Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton.

In 1898, fighting in the Spanish-American War came to an end.

In 1911, actor-comedian Cantinflas was born Fortino Mario Alfonso Moreno Reyes in Mexico City.

In 1941, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, head of the government of Vichy France, called on his countrymen to give full support to Nazi Germany.

In 1944, during World War II, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., eldest son of Joseph and Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, was killed with his co-pilot when their explosives-laden Navy plane blew up over England.

In 1953, the Soviet Union conducted a secret test of its first hydrogen bomb.

In 1960, the first balloon communications satellite — the Echo 1 — was launched by the United States from Cape Canaveral.

In 1962, one day after launching Andrian Nikolayev into orbit, the Soviet Union also sent up cosmonaut Pavel Popovich; both men landed safely Aug. 15.

In 1978, Pope Paul VI, who had died Aug. 6 at age 80, was buried in St. Peter's Basilica.

In 1985, the world's worst single-aircraft disaster occurred as a crippled Japan Air Lines Boeing 747 on a domestic flight crashed into a mountain, killing 520 people. (Four people survived.)

Ten years ago: A suicide bomber blew himself up on the patio of a restaurant near the northern Israeli coastal town of Haifa, killing himself and wounding 21 people.

Five years ago: Thousands of people gathered across from the White House, even though President George W. Bush was out of town, to condemn U.S. and Israeli policies in the Middle East.

Bike Ride Pumps Visitors, Dollars into Wood River Valley

Hundreds of bicyclists making a two-night layover in Hailey are expected to pump thousands of dollars into the Wood River Valley economy before Ride Idaho reaches its final leg.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • The sun rose Thursday over an impromptu tent city in Hailey, catching the gleam of hundreds of bicycle spokes during its steady rise.

Below, the 350 bicyclists who pedaled into town Wednesday afternoon — support staff and family members in tow — readied for a day of rest, recreation and a little spending in the Wood River Valley. They came as participants in Ride Idaho, a seven-day supported bike ride taking bicyclists from 31 states and Canada on a tour of the central Gem State's scenic highways.

"It's really fun to bike the roads you've driven. You see things you've never seen from a car," said Janelle Brown, a Boise resident who paid $695 for the trek.

Hailey officials greeted riders with a street party and two nights of live music. Hailey Chamber of Commerce Director Heather Deckard was among the volunteers who climbed out of bed at 5 a.m. Thursday to fire up a breakfast of eggs, sausage, oatmeal and yogurt for the riders. And though they woke in tents, the riders had many comforts of home during their layover.

Russ Severyn brought in a trailer housing 16 showers serviced by fire hydrant water that's heated by propane tanks. Joe 2 U, a Boise coffee company, sent a couple baristas along on the ride, and their mobile coffee stand has done brisk business.

KAREN BOSSICK • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

New Zealand native Katie Humphrey, a nurse who now lives in California, gets a warm drink early Thursday after spending the night in Hailey during the Ride Idaho bike ride. More than 350 participants registered for the seven-day supported ride through central Idaho, which wraps up in Lowman on Saturday.

A tourism tent directs riders to local attractions, and Boisean Ed Dehne was one of five massage therapists following the ride who are giddy to see days of 75-mile treks and rugged mountain climbs on the tour's schedule.

"We work eight hours on those days," he said.

Chuck Shinn, a former employee at Boise's Hewlett-Packard location, is on his fourth ride since he found a new job in Fort Collins, Colo. This year he's riding tandem with his 13-year-old son, Alex.

"I miss Idaho, so this is a way to get my Idaho fix," he said. "And I'm trying to instill a bike culture in my son. Bicycling is a very healthy lifestyle. And we've got to cut down on all the oil we use."

Bill Reeb was a fry cook at the old Dollar Cabin in Sun Valley in 1967, when he cooked up to 23 dozen hamburgers every lunch hour for Hollywood's A-listers. This is his first trip back to the valley in years.

"I can't believe the change," he said. "Bellevue is now as big as Hailey used to be. I can't imagine what changes I'll find in Sun Valley when I bike up there later today."

While bicyclists gushed about area beauty, Hailey officials were equally pleased with the money that flowed in with each turning spoke. Ride Idaho officials bought $12,000 in Chamber Bucks, giving each rider $25 to spend at area stores. The organization also donated bicycle racks to Hailey's new rodeo and ice arena, along with a $2,600 Neutron Spinner play set for the Hailey Elementary School playground.

"Last September we installed one of these at Carey Elementary, and during the grand opening there were 20 kids spinning around on a device meant for 10," said Lester Wilson, maintenance engineer for the Blaine County School District. "Once the kids find out it's here, you won't be able to keep them off it."

Refreshed from a layover involving activities ranging from whitewater rafting to mountain biking on Bald Mountain, the riders will head toward Stanley today.

"They'll have breakfast at 6:30, and the bicyclists will be on the road by 7:30," Dehne said. "By 8, everything will be gone. It'll just disappear."

Prescribed Burn in Shoshone Wildlife Area Rescheduled

THE TIMES-NEWS

SHOSHONE • The Bureau of Land Management has rescheduled a 20-acre prescribed fire in the Tuttle area near the Shoshone Wildlife Tract.

Initially, the burn was set for the end of July, but weather conditions were not favorable. Now, the Twin Falls District Fuels Program is preparing to start the burn on Friday morning. With twice the resources available this time around, the burn is only expected to take a day. If there is any threat for a wildfire, the burn will not take place.

In the fall, the BLM hopes to reseed the burned area with species that will promote a better habitat for wildlife. There may be residual smoke that settles in the Tuttle area in the afternoon, but it is not expected to stay long.

Vole

Aggeler suggested that vole population explosions come and go in cycles.

"When we have years with a lot of rain and vegetation, it provides a favorable year for voles," he said. "It usually takes one to two years of favorable conditions to build up for an explosion."

Another reason the numbers are down may be because, ironically, there were just too many of them.

"You will often see when a species heavily doubles their numbers," Aggeler said. "Then the peak just dives because they either eat their food source out or disease gets to them."

While voles have always been present in the valley, their population increase forced vole victims to spend thousands on poisons or alternative killing methods.

This year's heavy spring rain should have been perfect for a vole population boom; however, there was one distinct ingredient in this winter's weather.

"We had a mild winter, but we had an early thaw and then a refreeze," said Shoshone farmer Jeff Weber.

Having a refreeze occur after the water had thawed into the critters' holes managed to kill off the majority of the pests, he said.

Last year, Weber and his wife put vole bait on their lawn at night. In the morning, Weber said, they would find 200 dead voles. On top of that, the voles destroyed most of his grain and barley crops.

"We are almost vole free this year," Weber said. "We're pretty glad they're gone."

As farmers and cities take comfort in this year's relief from the vole attack, no one seems quite sure what next year will have in store.

"It's going to depend on a number of factors but we will probably be all right," Weber said.

Charter

a gateway to overcome weaknesses.

"It's developing an individual education plan for each child fitting their needs, using their strengths to overcome their weaknesses," said Kelly Bangerter, the school board's chairman.

For example, if students' strengths are in reading and their weaknesses are in math, the teacher would use story problems that youngsters read first — then solve.

Projects will unfold as classes begin and groups start brainstorming. In schools that have used a similar model, projects have included researching the conditions of a pond where ducks frequently died and analyzing police records to find out where drunk driving offenses most frequently occur in a city.

The school is already filling up. Its limit is 150 students in kindergarten through sixth grade — 145 are already enrolled.

Eventually, the school wants to grow and add seventh- and eighth-grade students, and have up to 350 enrolled.

That goal is seven or eight years away, Bangerter said.

The school will have about a dozen employees this year, including six teachers, several classroom aides, a principal and office staff.

Heritage Academy has been preparing its building, which was formerly used by a private Christian school that closed in January.

At Wings, the addition of eighth-grade classes will allow up to 80 more students. The sixth- through eighth-grade school's limit is 240 students.

Administrator Letha Blick said the school still has openings for students in all grades. Wings aims to help challenged students succeed in the middle school years, a critical time of transition for youngsters before they enter high school.

The school provides students with smaller classes of 15 to 20, and offers hands-on activities and mentoring programs with high school students.

"This is the last phase of the growth," Blick said. "We're here to support all the schools in the Magic Valley."

The students aren't just from Twin Falls. Others come from Buhl, Hagerman and even as far away as Burley.

Elsewhere, other charter schools have steady enroll-

At Xavier Charter School in Twin Falls, the K-12 school is at capacity for kindergarten through sixth grades, and slots are open in the upper grades. There's also a lottery system for parents who want to put their child on a waiting list if the grade is filled up.
