Animal Cruelty Should it Be a Felony Crime?

Idaho is one of three states that doesn't press felony charges for animal abuse. Groups from around the Magic Valley are working together to change that.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Thomas Ragain has always had a soft spot for animals. He adopts rescue animals and donates to animal shelters habitually. Yet between raising a family and meeting life's daily demands, he has always kept a low profile when it came to animal welfare advocacy.

That all changed the day he read that Idaho was one of three states that does not press felony charges for extreme animal abusers.

In addition to Idaho, only North Dakota and South Dakota don't charge felonies for animal abuse.

"It boggles my mind. I was shocked when I read it," he said.

So, he began working toward raising awareness of Idaho's animal cruelty laws by contacting Idaho 1 of 3. The group is comprised of 18 organizations working toward getting an initiative amending animal cruelty on the 2012 ballot.

The amendment would increase fines for first- and second-time offenders. It would give a specific definition of animal torture not present in the current legislative language.

Most significantly,

Castleford's Blick Leaving ITD Board in January

The Magic Valley representative has been on the board more than a decade; a replacement will be appointed by the governor.

BY BEN BOTKIN

Blick

Longtime Idaho Transportation Department Board member Gary Blick is stepping down from his post next year when his term ends Jan. 31.

His upcoming departure from the seven-member board creates a vacancy that will need to be filled by someone else from south-central Idaho. Except for the chairman, the board's other six seats are configured based on regions of Idaho, and Blick has represented the Magic Valley region in that capacity since 1999.

Board members are appointed by the governor. Blick was named to the seat in 1999 by then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. The vacancy was created when newly-elected Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, left the ITD board for the Legislature.

"That will be 13 years for me on the board," Blick, also the board's vice-chairman, told the Times-News. "I think it's time for someone else."

Blick, a Castleford resident who owns a trucking business, said he's trying to solicit names of people interested in serving on the board that he can recommend to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

"It's been really a learning experience," he said. "I've always enjoyed it. It was once more fun early in my term because we had some money. We could do the projects that needed to be done. Now the money's tighter."

Darrell Manning, chairman of the ITD board, said Blick's knowledge of the trucking industry and farming has been an asset.

South-central Idaho has seen its share of recent big-ticket transportation projects, like the Twin Falls alternate route.

Blick's tenure also has had its share of controversy. Blick is named in a lawsuit filed in 2009 against the agency and its board members by former ITD Director Pamela Lowe after she was fired from her job.

In court records filed by Lowe, she alleges that when the board considered

Munn

Former Twin Falls Police Chief Jim Munn Jr. said he will seek the seat of exiting Twin Falls City Councilman David E. Johnson this November.

Munn said Johnson did "a fantastic job" on the council, but with Johnson deciding not to seek another term it made sense to pursue it. He said he wants to keep serving the community after spending 30 years with the TFPD.

Munn declared his council intention in May, only two months after he retired. He is the only person so far to openly declare candidacy in the November election. Filing opens Aug. 26, with a deadline of Sept. 9.

He said he'll focus on public safety, quality of life and economy issues.

legislative branch was using a "quintessential" power — its constitutional ability to regulate interstate commerce, including the health care industry — when it passed the overhaul law. Administration officials said they are confident the ruling will not stand. The Justice Department can ask the full 11th Circuit to review the panel's ruling and will also likely appeal to the Supreme Court.

"Individuals who choose to go without health insurance are making an economic decision that affects all of us — when people without insurance obtain health care they cannot pay for, those with insurance and taxpayers are often left to pick up the tab," said White House adviser Stephanie Cutter.

The 11th Circuit's ruling, which sided with 26 states that had sued to stop the law from taking effect, is the latest contradictory judicial opinion on the health care debate. The federal appeals court in Cincinnati upheld the individual mandate in June, and an appeals court in Richmond has heard similar challenges to the law. Several lower court judges have also issued differing opinions on the debate.

Legal observers long expected the case would ultimately land in the Supreme Court, but experts said Friday's ruling could finally force the justices to take the case.

"There needs to be a pronouncement that's nationwide," said Carl Tobias, a professor at the University of Richmond School of Law. "It would be almost impossible to implement it if we have splintered decisions from different geographic circuits. The Supreme Court may feel now it has to take it."

He said the latter is why he attended an 8 a.m. Citizen Finance and Planning Committee meeting on city long-term budget projections Friday.

"We have to create an environment where small businesses can thrive and people can live safely, and that does take an examination of our infrastructure and how to do business in general," Munn said.

He said he will also insist on listening to residents — a trait he picked up as a police officer and chief who emphasized community policing.

The case, in which Lowe alleges her termination was illegal, hasn't been resolved.

language. Most significantly, third-time offenders would be charged with a felony which carries a punishment of three years in prison and a $9,000 fine.

This won't be the first time groups have attempted to amend the laws; most attempts have died before being passed through the Legislature.

To be placed on the ballot

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

(LEFT) Twin Falls resident Ken Cazier signs a petition Friday at the Twin Falls Animal Shelter. Idaho animal advocates hope to put an anti-animal cruelty initiative on the 2012 ballot to make a third animal cruelty conviction punishable by a three-year prison sentence and $9,000 fine.

for public vote, volunteers will need to gather 60,000 signatures by April 30, 2012.

"It's very difficult getting signatures," Ragain said. "I've tried door to door, but that's time consuming. I've tried standing outside of PetSmart, but you can't petition there."

Animal abuse in Idaho is just as much of a problem as any other state, but that doesn't mean laws shouldn't be enforced, said Debbie Blackwood, director of the Twin Falls Animal Shelter and a former animal control officer.

"Idaho is a little bit of a safe haven," she said. "We attract those who would otherwise be afraid of a harsher penalty. We have not risen to the level of making sure we are protecting our animals like most of the rest of the United States."

One of the reasons why a harsher law has not been set in the past is because the state has been strapped for resources.

"Our state is facing so many other problems right now and funds are so limited that the question is, 'Who is going to pay for all this if the state intervenes?'" Blackwood said.

While the Magic Valley does have animal torture cases, neglect is much more common, said Deputy Matt Radmall, Twin Falls County animal control officer.

He says he receives 15-20 phone calls a day. Out of those, one to two are animal abuse related. Usually, someone reports a dog locked in a car on a sunny day or a concern that an animal is being starved, he said.

"When we do find there is some sort of abuse going on we try to work with the person on the problem," he said. "Sometimes there are repeat offenders but not many. Really, there's an amazing amount of people in this area who love their animals"

As a native Idahoan, Ragain understands why there would be resistance to the initiative.

"This is a conservative state and I'm totally against government intrusion, but this is something that is necessary," he said. "I don't want the government telling me what to do more, but does that mean we give up laws telling us to ignore murder or child abuse? Where do we draw the line?"

Merit Pay Plan Crafted for T.F. Teachers

Achievement testing and teacher tasks to be the measuring sticks for TFSD teachers' merit-based pay bonuses.

BY BEN BOTKIN

bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls School District will soon have a merit pay system for teachers.

It's a plan that teachers in the school district have worked on this summer after the Legislature passed bills tied to "Students Come First," a series of education changes, including one putting a system of merit-based bonuses for teachers in place.

Part of merit pay — 63 percent — is tied to what Idaho's public school districts put in place, with the other 37 percent based on how well schools fare on Idaho Standards Achievement Tests.

Part of the local pay for performance plan will be based on tasks teachers work on like course plans, setting goals and writing class tests.

Most of it will be based on a variety of tests that cover all grades and measure well students achieve compared to prior years. Those include reading tests and end-of-course assessments given to students.

"We felt really strongly about making sure we weren't just doing something to just get it done — that we were actually utilizing a plan that allowed kids to achieve and that teachers could be rewarded," said James Haycock, a drama and speech teacher at Twin Falls High School who worked on the plan with other educators.

Haycock said there was good collaboration among the group working on the plan, with plenty of input from all grade levels.

School teachers don't know what size of bonuses they might receive. The first round of bonuses won't come until fall 2012, and the amount of state funding for the new program won't be known until next year.

The school board will vote on the pay plan on Aug. 24.

Funding Crisis Solved? Filer Board Postpones Education Levy

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE

Times-News correspondent

FILER • The Filer School District has postponed a planned November vote to raise more money for schools.

In anticipation of a $600,000 funding shortfall, district officials had intended to ask citizens to support a two-year, $300,000 annual levy. But district trustees decided to delay that request Wednesday after learning more about the district's financial outlook.

Earlier this year, a finance committee recommend $600,000 in cuts to salaries, general fund spending and repairs. But state revenues that outpaced June projections led to a more than $300,000 influx of additional state funding for the district. An expected increase in enrollment is also expected to bring in an additional $100,000 in state funds.

Superintendent John Graham cautioned that enrollment numbers and the corresponding dollars the district would receive remain uncertain, and moving forward with a levy campaign might cause voters to question the district's needs for supplemental income.

"This is about what we had projected being short and why I'm recommending that we void what was sent into the county for a supplemental vote," Graham said. "Right now, it looks like we may be $50,000 to $100,000 short, but less than originally projected."

Surplus state funds are not permanent, however, so the need for a supplemental levy could come up again in 2013.

"I had an opportunity to talk with (Idaho Republican Sen.) Bert Brackett," said school board member Fred Jaynes, "He says revenue in the state is climbing, despite what we see around the country, but that you can't count on it and there are no more funding pots to go to, so we'd be wise to consider this one-time money"

A dime increase for lunches

In other action, the school board approved a 10 cent increase to this year's school lunch prices. The cost for students in kindergarten through third grade will be $1.70 per meal, while fourth through sixth graders will be charged $1.75. Middle school students will be charged a $1.80, and $1.90 will be the cost at the high school. Adult lunch prices are increasing by 25 cents

New federal regulations require districts nationwide to charge closer to what it costs to produce meals for higher income students. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the move is to insure that subsidies intended for free and reduced priced meals go where they are intended.

Utah Man Pleads Guilty to Murder of 10-Year-Old

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)

• A Utah man pleaded guilty to murder Friday in the 1998 stabbing death of a 10-year-old girl, after authorities said DNA evidence linked him to the crime.

Matthew John Breck, 32, was sentenced to life in prison without parole after he entered the guilty plea in 3rd District Court in Salt Lake City.

With the plea, Breck avoids a potential death sentence. Prosecutors also dropped a felony charge of aggravated sex with a child.

Breck was arrested and extradited to Utah from an Idaho prison in 2010 after police used DNA testing to link him to the death of Anna Palmer. At the time, he was serving a sentence for a 2001 conviction of child sodomy.

Palmer was found unconscious and bleeding on the front porch of her Salt Lake City home on Sept. 10, 1998. The girl suffered five fatal stab wounds to the throat, including one that severed her spinal cord.

Nancy Palmer, the girl's mother, said after the hearing the plea was an important part of the family's healing.

"Hopefully now we can look past the death and remember the good things," she said. "The most important thing was that justice was done and the person responsible ... will be there for the rest of his life."

Idaho Man Finds Quarter He Painted as a Youth

POST FALLS (AP)

• Coeur d'Alene resident Tim Kirk was just another bored 12-year-old kid when he decided to turn the contents of his piggy bank into an art project.

Using his mom's nail polish, he carefully painted the letter "T" on one side of each quarter, the letter "K" on the other.

Kirk, now 36, says he probably spent the painted quarters on candy all those years ago. And he promptly forgot about them, until recently.

Somehow, the Coeur d'Alene Press reports, one of those painted quarters made its way back into his pocket change. He found it when he was throwing a handful of coins into a change dish at home.

This time, Kirk says he won't be spending the coin on candy. He plans on hanging on to it a while.

Clyde and Barbara Chovan, who is terminally ill, talk about their wedding after being married Thursday in their apartment at Legends Park in Coeur d'Alene.

Coeur d'Alene Couple Finally Ties the Knot After Nearly 60 Years

BY BILL BULEY

The Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Barbara Chovan is dying.

So on Thursday, she got married to her partner of 55 years, Clyde Heck. And yes, she still has her sense of humor.

Her eyes opened wide and a frown crossed her face when Heck answered "I don't know," to a question about how it felt to finally be a married man.

"What?" she said out loud, which caused the 10 people in the room to roar with laughter.

"Where's the knife he cut the cake with?" Chovan asked, as still more laughs filled the air.

Heck, sitting next to his bride lying in bed in a cozy room at Legends Park Assisted Living, grinned and raised his eyebrows. "She's the comedian," he said.

She is now, after all these years, his wife, too.

Mary Beth Hassell, Legends executive director, said Clyde, 80, and Barbara, 84, have been together more than five decades. Yet, they never traded vows.

In the past weeks, as terminally ill Barbara battled for breath, Clyde questioned their decision to never stroll down the aisle.

"He'd say to me all the time, 'I don't know why I never married her. I don't know why,'" Hassell said.

"I just thought I'd wait a little while," he explained.

But with Barbara diagnosed with only days to live, Clyde, himself fighting dementia, said no more waiting. It's time to make it official.

That was fine by his wife-to-be. She would become Barbara Heck.

"It was a good idea," she agreed.

The staff at Legends, where the couple have lived two years, quickly arranged a ceremony on a sunny Thursday afternoon, complete with pastor, witnesses, champagne and cake.

George Forgacs with River City Hospice performed a short service. He read from the Bible, quoting from Ecclesiastes and 2nd Corinthians. God is love, he said, and as Barbara faces the end of her life, God continues working in it.

"(Clyde) is convicted strongly that he needed to marry her, and that can only come from one place," Forgacs said.

"He knows that she's going and he loves her deeply. He loves her truly. To see that, is just a joy," Forgacs said. "There's no other words you can say."

Clyde and Barbara met at the Palladium in Los Angeles. They fell in love and remained at each other's sides through five decades. He worked for many years at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel as a bellman.

"That was good work," Clyde said, rubbing his thumb and forefinger together. "You get into a good place, you're going to make it."

'Green Tag' Battle Highlights Unsettled Idaho Power Market

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho's unsettled renewable energy landscape is again bedeviling the state utilities regulator, with a solar developer in Elmore County battling Idaho Power Co. over the lucrative renewable energy certificates that accompany its 20-megawatt project.

Grand View PV Solar Two, building the second phase of its project in southern Idaho, has lodged a complaint with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, alleging the utility is trying to steal its credits, also known as "green tags."

These are the lucrative certificates that small renewables developers can sell to utilities in states like Washington or Oregon that are under the gun to satisfy statutory green-power mandates.

"Idaho Power no legal right to them in the first place," said Peter Richardson, the lawyer for the solar project, on Thursday. "They're stealing our RECs, by forcing us to give them half of them before signing a contract."

For its part, Idaho Power Co. says it wants to boost the electricity it gets from solar projects, but it's not willing to do so under just any terms.

Idaho's biggest utility says it needs to secure a share of these green tags from Grand View's development in Elmore County — and other projects, too — because it may eventually need them to fulfill federal renewables requirements, if they're ever passed by Congress.

"What we don't want to do is give up any of the rights to 20 years of the RECS, when we may, in fact, need them in the future," said Mark Stokes, the utility's power supply manager. "All of these projects are getting developed in some of the prime locations. If one of those standards gets passed, and we have to go out and develop our own, we're basically missing out on the opportunity."

Why are the credits so hotly disputed? They're worth a bundle. Earlier this year, Seattle City Light, the utility for Washington state's biggest city, bought the renewable energy credits from a 22-megawatt Idaho wind farm for approximately $1 million annually. And Idaho Power, under regulator orders, must sell its green tags — from its Oregon wind projects and U.S. Geothermal's Raft River geothermal power plant — for millions that help offset ratepayers' bills.

A profusion of new energy technologies now being added to legacy electricity systems like Idaho Power's is rattling the regulatory world, sometimes creating confusion and conflict as the Public Utilities Commission tries to keep up with the changes — and fulfill its mandate of giving ratepayers a fair deal.

Over the past year, wind turbines were largely the focus. Regulators were forced to intervene when wind farms split themselves up into small, 10-megawatt developments to take advantage of federal laws that allowed them to force themselves onto Idaho Power's electricity grid at attractive rates.

Currently, the state commission is trying to figure out how best to determine just how much solar developers should be paid by utilities for their electricity. That's to the chagrin of at least one developer, Interconnect Solar of Boise, which fears a delay ordered last week so the state could get a handle on things could doom its project.

And now, the Public Utilities Commission is being asked to referee the green-tag street fight.

Gene Fadness, the commission spokesman, says staying abreast of these changes makes for a brave new regulatory world — and Idaho isn't alone. He said other states are also trying to find the best way to mesh small, entrepreneurial electricity producers into the systems of utilities that have had a monopoly for decades.

U.S. Ports Spend Big on Post-9/11 Security

Feds have spent $2.5B on a sweeping security overhaul at seaports from Seattle to Maine.

SAVANNAH, Ga. • The marshlands around the nation's fourth-busiest container port used to be considered enough of a barrier that Port of Savannah officials didn't bother to build a full fence around the bustling main terminal. Now security is so tight that roughly 4,000 times a day, steel containers from arriving ships are loaded onto tractor-trailers that, before hitting the highway, must pass through giant radiation detectors designed to sniff out nuclear bombs. In the 10 years since the Sept. 11 attacks, the federal government has spent $2.5 billion on a sweeping security overhaul at U.S. seaports from Seattle to New Orleans to Eastport, Maine, paying for everything from perimeter fencing to motion sensors and training for security officers. Federal agencies with a direct role in safeguarding seaports, namely the Coast Guard and Customs and Border Protection, have added whopping sums such as $420 million for a unified ID card system for 1.6 million truck drivers, long-shoremen and other port workers nationwide. The big challenge has been keeping a closer watch on imported cargo without imposing a costly slowdown on foreign trade. There's also a huge cost to the nation's 185 public seaports themselves, often

Brother Describes Oregon Defendant as Maniacal

COQUILLE, Ore. (AP) • Relatives of a 34-year-old man on trial in Coos County on charges of murdering his mother and her boyfriend have testified that he was losing touch with reality in the time leading up to the shootings. Gabriel Morris is charged with two counts of aggravated murder in the 2010 slayings of 65-year-old Robin Anstey and her boyfriend, 45-year-old Robert Kennelly, in their home outside Bandon. Morris has waived his right to a jury trial. Defense lawyer Michael Barker has said he will ask for a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity if the judge finds Morris responsible for the killings. The World newspaper reports that Jesse McCoy testified Wednesday that his brother went through some abrupt changes in his life. Morris dropped out of college, moved in with his wife's parents, became a sheriff's deputy in Idaho, then moved to Las Vegas

Iowa Takes Measure of GOP Presidential Pack

Part state fair, part political convention, Ames Straw Poll is also a test of candidates' organizational strength.

AMES, Iowa • The news landed with a thud this week. Not a single candidate had hired Hickory Park, the Ames barbecue institution, to provide food for Saturday's Republican presidential straw poll. "That is crazy," said Shane Vander Hart, editor of the political blog Caffeinated Thoughts. "I am assuming that is a mistake on the part of the campaigns." Former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty is bringing in barbecue from Minnesota-based Famous Dave's, "but that's just wrong," Vander Hart said. In a nod to the Iowa State Fair, taking place nearby, Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann will sate her supporters with fair-style food: meat sundaes. "Mashed potatoes with brown gravy that looks like chocolate, with a cherry tomato on top," said Alice Stewart, Bachmann's press secretary. "I Googled a picture and it looks like something someone else would eat." Syrians Call for Assad's Death; 14 Killed

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton urges countries to stop buying Syrian oil and gas or selling the regime weapons.

BY BASSEM MROUE and ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY
Associated Press

BEIRUT (AP) • Tens of thousands of Syrian protesters shouted for President Bashar Assad's death Friday in a dramatic escalation of their rage and frustration, defying bullets and rooftop snipers after more than a week of intensified military assaults on rebellious cities, activists and witnesses said. Security forces killed at least 14 protesters, according to human rights groups.

The calls for Assad's execution were a stark sign of how much the protest movement has changed since it erupted in March seeking minor reforms but making no calls for regime change. The protests grew dramatically over the five months that followed, driven in part by anger over the government's bloody crackdown in which rights groups say at least 1,700 civilians have been killed. But with the regime shrugging off even the most blistering condemnation, the uprising has become a test of endurance as both sides draw on a deep well of energy and conviction. U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Friday urged countries to stop buying Syrian oil and gas or selling the regime weapons,

CLASSICAL MUSIC CURES LOITERING

Shoppers and employees say an Ohio convenience store has fewer people hanging around and hassling customers since the business started blaring classical music. Customers tell WBNS-TV that loitering has declined quickly outside the United Dairy Farmers location in the Short North neighborhood of Columbus, Ohio. Workers who've also noticed a change say the new music went on earlier this week as part of upgrades at the store. Shopper Allie Beck says the classical music is loud — she can hear it all the way down the street. But she says it's an improvement over all the people who used to ask for change or bother passers-by outside the store. — The Associated Press

JUDGE: ANTHONY MUST RETURN FOR PROBATION

Casey Anthony must return to Orlando, Fla., within two weeks to serve a year’s probation for check fraud, a Florida judge ruled Friday. Judge Belvin Perry said Anthony must follow an order issued by another judge and report to a probation officer in Orange County no later than Aug. 26 at noon. The other judge, Stan Strickland, had sentenced Anthony in January 2010 to one year of probation after she pleaded guilty to stealing checks from a friend.

Police Say Nearly 700 Charged in London Riots

LONDON (AP) • Thousands of extra police officers were stationed on Britain’s streets, as the country faced its first weekend since riots raged through the country’s suburbs and town centers, leaving a scarred landscape of broken glass and torched buildings.

Police in London, which saw the worst violence, have charged almost 700 people with violence, disorder and looting, and the city’s mayor said Londoners wanted to see tough sentences handed out to the guilty. Hundreds of stores were looted, buildings were set ablaze and five people died amid the mayhem that broke out Saturday in London but then spread out across England over four nights.

Police, meanwhile, hit back Friday against claims they were too soft in their initial response to the disorder.

Prime Minister David Cameron said officers had been overwhelmed at first, outmaneuvered by mobile gangs of rioters. He said “far too few police were deployed onto the streets. And the tactics they were using weren’t working.”

That changed Tuesday, when 16,000 officers were out on London’s streets — almost three times the number of the night before. Cameron said those officers will remain on patrol through the weekend.

Hugh Orde, president of the Association of Chief Police Officers, acknowledged that police had faced “an unprecedented situation, unique circumstances” — but said it was police themselves, rather than “political interference,” that got the situation under control.

A $412-Million Bird That Just Won’t Fly

BY W.J. HENNIGAN

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • It’s the most expensive fighter jet ever built. Yet the F-22 Raptor has never seen a day of combat, and its future is clouded by a government safety investigation that has grounded the jet for months.

The fleet of 158 F-22s has been sidelined since May 3, following more than a dozen incidents in which oxygen was cut off to pilots, making them woozy. The malfunction is suspected of contributing to at least one fatal accident.

At an estimated cost of $412 million each, the F-22s amount to about $65 billion sitting on the tarmac. The grounding is the latest dark chapter for an aircraft plagued by problems, and whose need was called into question even before its first test flight.

The sleek, diamond-winged fighter was conceived during the Cold War in the early 1980s to thump a new generation of Soviet fighter jets in dogfights. But

Skyrocketing costs

The estimated cost per F-22 Raptor fighter jet has nearly tripled over the last 20 years. During that time, the Pentagon cut orders from 648 jets to 188.

with the collapse of the Soviet Union, the Soviet fighters that the U.S. military planners feared never moved beyond development and were never built.

Now, while other U.S. warplanes pummel targets, the F-22 has sat silently throughout battles in Afghanistan. It has gone unused in Iraq. There has been no call for it in the conflict above Libya.

“For all that gigantic cost, you have a system you can’t even use,” said Winslow T. Wheeler, a defense budget specialist and frequent Pentagon critic at the Center for Defense Information. “It’s a fundamental explanation on how the country has gotten itself in the financial mess that it’s in today.”

Designed in Burbank, Calif., and built in Marietta, Ga., the F-22 won the final go-ahead from Congress in 1991, thanks in part to a lobbying campaign by the plane’s manufacturer, Lockheed Martin Corp. — then Lockheed Corp. — and its near 1,100 subcontractors in 44 states.

“The Cold War was over; it didn’t make any sense to go forward with the program,” said Thomas Christie, a retired official who worked 50 years at the Pentagon. “But the Air Force built up such a large constituency up on the Hill that it couldn’t be killed.”

The Air Force wanted an engineering marvel with unmatched features of any other aircraft. Lockheed Martin delivered.

F-22 engines have thrust-vectoring nozzles that can move up and down, making the plane exceptionally agile. It can reach supersonic speeds without using afterburners, enabling the plane to fly faster and farther. It’s also packed with cutting-edge radar and sensors, allowing the pilot to identify, track and shoot an aircraft before the enemy pilot can detect the F-22.

“The Air Force piled it all on,” said Pierre Sprey, an aeronautical engineer who helped design the F-16 and A-10 jets. “It became a vehicle to carry a laundry list of technologies. The plane is a textbook case on the dangers of complexity.”

As the Air Force saw more opportunities for design changes, the F-22 grew in cost. When the plane first entered service in 2005, it didn’t take long for problems to arise.

In 2006, an F-22 pilot was stuck in the plane on the ground for five hours because the canopy wouldn’t pop open. Firefighters had to cut the pilot out. A replacement canopy cost about $71,000, the Air Force said.

In 2007, a software error in the navigational systems caused 12 F-22s to turn around from a flight to Okinawa, Japan, from Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam in Hawaii. Six days later, engineers corrected the error at a cost of between $200,000 and $300,000, the Air Force estimated.

Last year, the fighters were inspected for rust corrosion “due to poorly designed drainage in the cockpit,” according to the House Armed Services Committee. Fourteen F-22s had rusting parts in the cockpit replaced, the Air Force said.

Corrosion has also been an issue with the plane’s radar-evading skin, which, the U.S. Government Accountability Office said, is “difficult to manage and maintain, requiring nearly twice the number of maintenance personnel as anticipated.”

The plane takes about 3,000 people to maintain, the Air Force said. The service calculated that for every hour in the air, the F-22 spends 45 hours undergoing maintenance.

Two decades ago, the U.S. government planned to buy 648 of the fighters for $139 million apiece; the cost has almost tripled since then to $412 million, the Government Accountability Office said.

Iowa

of a candidate’s organizational strength, and what some might describe as an institutionalized if genteel day of bribery.

But the quirky poll is also testimony to the paradoxical ability of Iowans, who pride themselves on their modesty, to capture the media spotlight. More than 700 news outlets have been credentialed this year, including organizations from Australia, South Korea, Slovenia and Sweden, said Iowa GOP spokesman Casey Mills.

Conducted only by Republicans, the straw poll requires candidates to fork over thousands of dollars to the state party to pitch their tents. They spend hundreds of thousands of dollars, if not more, on food, entertainment and transportation, commandeering fleets of buses to get supporters to Ames from around the state. Attendance is erratic; in 2007 slightly more than 14,000 people cast ballots. Eight years earlier, 24,000 voted.

“That’s because all the excitement was on the Democratic side in 2008,” said GOP strategist Robert Haus. “The overall dynamic was so polluted by the Bush hangover.”

It is perhaps the only contest where voters pay a “poll tax” — $30 to cast a ballot, down from $35 last time in a nod to the poor economy — though candidates usually foot the bill.

In its 32-year history, the straw poll has had a history of minor chicanery seemingly at odds with the state’s heartland values.

Until 1999, supporters were brought in from other states to cast votes. In 1995, a handful of voters washed off the hand stamps indicating they’d already cast ballots, and voted some more. “That was the year Bob Dole and Phil Gramm tied, 2,582 each,” said Haus, who is producing the program inside the arena. “I think the handwashing was probably happening on both sides.”

Of course, they were serving beer at the straw poll then, which may have contributed to the looser atmosphere. Alcohol has since been banned.

Casting multiple votes is “almost impossible to do now,” said Chuck Laudner, the state GOP executive director in 2007. “The Iraqis showed us how to ink fingers, so we didn’t have that problem last time.”

Now, Iowa driver’s licenses are swiped, and voters roll their thumbs in bright red, indelible ink.

The all-day event takes place at Iowa State University’s basketball arena, the Hilton Coliseum. Outside the looming concrete building, candidates erect their tents and stages.

The locations, purchased at auction in June, are afforded great meaning. This year, Ron Paul got the choice spot, right in front of the entrance to the arena. He spent $31,000 for the same location that cost George W. Bush $63,000 in 1999.

Craig Robinson, founder of the Iowa Republican website, devoted an entire story to the subject of placement, determining Paul the winner and Pawlenty the big loser because his spot is away from the other candidates’ spots, farthest from the voting booths, and will be obscured by a wall of satellite trucks.

“Pawlenty better hope for good weather,” wrote Robinson. “If it rains, his area is going to be soggy.” (Saturday’s forecast calls for isolated thunderstorms.)

Candidates don’t have to participate and the results are non-binding — and not even predictive of success in the Iowa caucuses, let alone the eventual presidential nomination. Only one candidate — George W. Bush — won the straw poll, the caucus and the nomination. Though Romney won the 2007 poll, the party’s eventual nominee, Sen. John McCain, didn’t even bother to campaign. He placed 10th.

and asked for a divorce, before reuniting with his wife and moving to Oregon.

McCoy said Morris began telling stories about having special powers from God.

“He became more maniacal. I couldn’t get a word in anymore,” McCoy said.

McCoy said he was relieved when Morris returned to his wife and moved in with his mother. McCoy said in their last conversation before the shooting, Morris rambled about God, his distrust of Kennelly, and his feelings of being abandoned by his mother.

A sheriff’s deputy discovered the bodies on a call to check on an abandoned truck. Morris had already fled with his wife, Jessica, and their 4-year-old daughter.

The discovery set off a nationwide manhunt, with Morris arrested in Virginia.

Morris’ stepsister, Isabelle Anstey-Hayden, said she noticed a stark change in his personality when he returned to Oregon in September 2009, preaching about the end of the world, and telling stories about being involved in secret military missions.

“He progressively got worse,” Anstey-Hayden said. “The last couple of times I really didn’t want to answer the door, but I had to answer the door, it was Gabe.”

“There are security checkpoints every 200 meters (655 feet), they have lists and they’re searching people ... the mosques are surrounded by soldiers,” a Hama-based activist told The Associated Press by telephone, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisals.

Ports

passed along in tariffs and fees to the shippers. The Savannah port, for example, tacks on a $5.75 security fee for every cargo container it handles.

“It clearly is unfortunate and an extreme cost financially on international commerce,” said Curtis Foltz, executive director of the Georgia Ports Authority, who can see the lines of trucks pulling their cargo through radiation scanners from his office window. “But there’s no real alternative today.”

U.S. ports worry Congress will make deep cuts in port security funding in the fiscal 2012 budget. An appropriations bill that recently passed the House included $1 billion in cuts to the Department of Homeland Security, largely by slashing its grant programs.

The American Association of Port Authorities says U.S. ports stand to lose half or more of the funding they’re counting on to fulfill security improvement plans that look five years ahead.

“With the debt-ceiling crisis, we’re just getting hammered,” said Susan Monteverde, the group’s vice president for government affairs.

At the Port of Long Beach, Calif., the nation’s second-busiest, operations director Sean Strawbridge estimates that every dollar his port has received in federal security grants — $100 million since 2002 — has required an equivalent amount of the port’s own money. While grants may pay for new technology, such as sonar to watch for underwater intruders, they don’t pay for additional staff to operate such equipment, he said.

The security upgrades at Long Beach and its next-door neighbor, the top-performing U.S. port at Los Angeles, have a payoff that goes beyond guarding against nuclear bombs and saboteurs, Strawbridge said.

“We don’t just look at this from a standpoint of protecting against terrorism,” he said. “But also how do we keep the port resilient against catastrophic events, such as earthquakes.”

Before 9/11, state port authorities typically established their own security rules and terrorists weren’t really on their radar. U.S. ports were primarily on the lookout for cargo thieves, stowaways, drug smuggling and human trafficking. In those days, there wasn’t even a fence around some parts of the 6-mile perimeter of Savannah’s sprawling main terminal, said Kevin Doyle, security chief for the Georgia ports. Marsh and other natural barriers in those gaps were deemed adequate.

Not anymore. The fencing got replaced, or installed where there was none before, and motion sensors were added. Security cameras and patrol officers keep watch at the Savannah port’s perimeter around the clock.

The Coast Guard now cross-checks crew lists for arriving ships in advance against terror watch lists. Customs and Border Protection officers screen similar cargo manifests submitted at least a day before arrival.

They essentially flag potentially suspicious cargo containers for closer inspection by doing what airport security officers aren’t allowed to do with passengers — they use a form of profiling. Containers coming from an unfamiliar shipper, or with unusual or suspect goods inside, may get opened for physical inspection or scanned with an X-ray machine or similar imaging device.

CHEERS AND JEERS

BSU President Botched Popular Athletic Director's Exit

JEERS: Bob Kustra was a politician — lieutenant governor of Illinois — before he became a university president, so he ought to understand the importance of perceptions.

The Boise State University boss fired 29-year Athletic Director Gene Bleymaier on Aug. 4. Then he left town and delivered the news by press release six days after Bleymaier had been shown the door.

In so doing, Kustra couldn't have made a bigger pig's breakfast of the matter had he tried.

Kustra says Bleymaier — who, frankly, single-handedly built the dreadnought that is the BSU athletic program — was dismissed because of pending action by the NCAA over lack of institutional control at BSU.

Colleges should take compliance with NCAA rules seriously — you need look no further than the smoldering wrecks of the athletic programs at Ohio State University and the University of Southern California to see why — but even in a worst-case scenario BSU's infractions didn't rise to that level.

It's equally likely that Kustra — who doesn't comfortably share the spotlight — seized an opportunity to make a change he's been wanting to make all along.

BSU has a long history of bad breakups — Bleymaier's 1995 dismissal of men's basketball coach Bob Dye and the 2008 departure of longtime radio play-by-play announcer Paul J. Schneider, a Twin Falls native, were artless. But this particular divorce comes with real dollar signs attached, and not just the half-million the university still owes Bleymaier under his contract.

If Bleymaier's successor can't keep up the mojo, BSU stands to lose millions. And that will get the attention of the Idaho State Board of Education, Kustra's bosses.

Kustra went all-in when he sacked Bleymaier. Let's hope he has the cards.

CHEERS: To Idaho State

Treasurer Ron Crane, who presided over an upgrade in the state's credit rating this year — in contrast to what recently befell the federal government.

Moody's raised Idaho's rating from AA2 to AA1, and Standard & Poor's upgraded from AA to AA+.

"That's one notch below the AAA," Crane told the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash.

Because the Idaho Constitution forbids general long-term debt, that rating applies only to a few areas, including GARVEE bonds for road work, the state's bond bank and the state building authority. Most of Idaho's borrowing comes in short-term tax anticipation notes, for which the state long has had the highest rating from all three rating agencies: MIG-1 from Moody's, SP-1+ from Standard & Poor's and F-1+ from Fitch.

Those short-term debt ratings are important, Crane said. "That translates to every bond that's issued in the state, all debt from all subdivisions in the state." As a result, when Idaho did its last issue of short-term tax-anticipation notes in late June, the entire $500 million was snapped up at a highly favorable interest rate of just 26 basis points, or 26 one-hundredths of a percent interest for a year.

"That's virtually free money," Crane said.

Idaho pays its bills as it goes along, and that has tangible benefits for taxpayers.

JEERS: A disproportionate share of borrowed money for the Connecting Idaho program has been spent on projects in just two counties — Ada and Canyon.

Including — coming soon — a "road to nowhere."

According to the Idaho Statesman, the state Transportation Department planned to connect Idaho Highway 16 to Interstate 84 via a new 6.5-mile four-lane expressway with a crossing over the Boise River. It would provide a new north-south route through the Treasure Valley and offer a freewaylike passage to Boise's suburbs. Trouble is, ITD only has enough money to build the 2.5-mile first phase — a new bridge and a divided four-lane road, which will cost about $140 million.

Until the agency finds the funds to connect the new road to the freeway, motorists will have to wend their way through side streets.

So why start the project at all? Aren't there more pressing transportation needs elsewhere in Idaho?

Since 2007, ITD has built 13 projects on I-84 that total $310 million. The money comes from Grants Anticipation Revenue Vehicles, bonds backed by future federal highway payments to the state.

Of the $855 million authorized by the Legislature for Connecting Idaho, just over one-fourth has so far been budgeted for projects outside the Treasure Valley, according to ITD's most recent GARVEE report. None of them are in south-central Idaho.

I have recently had a cataract removed from my left eye. I want to thank Dr. Michael Taylor for the care he has given me. His office staff are excellent people (they even laugh at my jokes).

I also want to thank the Sawtooth Surgery staff. Everything is looking up! People like Dr. Taylor and his staff prove some people still care.

Five Myths About the Dow

Down 600 points one day, up 400 points the next, down another 500 points a day later, then up another 400 points the day after that — yes, the Dow Jones industrial average is back in the news. Charles Dow devised the index in 1896 to give investors a snapshot of the performance of big manufacturing stocks (and of the U.S. economy) each day. The Dow still has an antique feel to it, but as a metaphor for the stock market, it remains unsurpassed: endlessly cited, parsed, followed, predicted — and misunderstood.

1. The Dow is an index of very large industrial companies.

Not anymore. The Dow's components change every few years to reflect the breadth of the U.S. economy and to drop troubled companies. The 30 companies it currently comprises include four financial firms, two giant retailers, one restaurant chain, five consumer-products makers, two telecommunications firms, three drug companies, five high-tech firms and an entertainment conglomerate. There are only five traditional manufacturers — Caterpillar, Alcoa, United Technologies, 3M and the highly diversified General Electric — plus a couple of energy companies.

Most indexes, including the Standard and Poor's 500, are weighted by market cap: Bigger companies affect the index's value more than smaller ones. But the Dow is weighted by stock price — an arbitrary figure that has little to do with size or value. Both McDonald's (market cap:

$89 billion) and Intel ($109 billion) are part of the Dow. But because McDonald's trades at $86 a share, it has more than four times the impact on the Dow's movements as Intel, which trades at $21. IBM is the Dow's top dog, with a greater impact on the index than Alcoa, Bank of America, Cisco, Intel, Pfizer, AT&T, GE and Hewlett Packard combined.

2. Movements in the Dow are driven largely by corporate data such as earnings and revenue.

If only it were that simple. The market value of the Dow, like that of any individual stock, is determined by a consensus view of buyers and sellers, who guess the company's value today by trying to forecast what it will earn in the future. Those projected profits are influenced by all sorts of things, including domestic politics and the federal budget. And for the blue-chip companies that inhabit the Dow, the overall performance of the U.S. economy may be most important of all.

3. It's not easy for an individual investor to purchase the Dow as a whole.

That used to be true, but in recent years, the markets have undergone genuine democratization. It's now relatively easy and cheap to buy sophisticated securities, such as baskets of diverse stocks or funds that move in the opposite direction of the overall market. If you like the Dow, your ticket is the SPDR Dow Jones Industrial Average Trust, an exchange-traded fund that you can buy and sell on the New York Stock Exchange as if it were an individual company. The fund, which goes by the nickname "Dow Diamonds" (DIA), trades at roughly 1 percent of the value of the Dow (in other words, you buy it for $110 a share when the Dow is at 11,000).

4. With just 30 stocks, the Dow is not a reasonable reflection of the broader market.

Surprisingly, the Dow is an awfully good barometer of the overall market. It closely tracks broader indexes, such as the S&P 500. Between its start on March 4, 1957, and Aug. 5, the S & P increased an average of 6.1 percent in price each year; over the same period, the Dow increased 5.9 percent annually. The Dow, because it is composed of larger, more established companies, tends to be a little less volatile than the broad market. For example, in 2008, when the S&P dropped 37 percent for the year, the Dow fell 34 percent; in 2009, when the S&P rose 23 percent, the Dow rose 19 percent.

5. Over the long run, investing in the Dow is all the average investor needs to do.

That might have been true 10 or 20 years ago, when the United States dominated the global economy. In these complicated times, when previously unthinkable events can dramatically affect stock prices, investors need to protect themselves on the downside. The easiest way to do that is through a portfolio that is weighted more toward bonds — both government and corporate — than before. Bonds often go up in price when stocks go down, as they did on Monday, when the Dow lost 634 points. Since bonds offer lower returns, they may reduce your upside, but they cushion your downside.

Dow Finishes Wild Week

NEW YORK (AP) • The wildest week in Wall Street history ended with a second day of gains. The Dow Jones industrial average finished Friday with a gain of 125 points. Most other times it would have been a fairly big day. By this week's standards, it was a sleeper. Friday capped a week when the blue-chip index had four 400-point swings in a row for the first time in its 115-year history. The Dow finished the week down 1.5 percent after being down as much as 6.3 percent for the week. The broader S&P 500 index rose 6.17 points, or 0.5 percent, to 1,178.81. It finished with a the week down 1.7 percent.

Honda to Build Cars in Mexico

LOS ANGELES (MCT) • Honda plans to spend $800 million building a new automobile plant in Mexico for fuel-efficient subcompact vehicles such as the Fit. Cars coming out of the factory, which is expected to begin operation in 2014, will be sold in the Mexican and U.S. markets. The plant will be built in a suburb of Celaya in the state of Guanajuato, and have the capacity to turn out about 200,000 cars annually. The factory will be the eighth Honda auto plant in North America and will increase its automobile production capacity in North America from 1.63 million units to 1.83 million. Last year, more than 87 percent of Honda and Acura cars and light trucks sold in America were produced in North America.

Report Could Nudge Corn Prices Up

A reduced nationwide corn yield may be good news for growers' pocketbooks come harvest time, but Idaho livestock producers could feel the sting of $8-per-bushel feed.

BY CINDY SNYDER

For the Times-News

A reduced projection of this year's U.S. corn yields has both crop growers and livestock producers taking notice — for very different reasons.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reduced its projected corn yields and harvested acres in its latest monthly grain balance sheet, leading some analysts to predict that corn prices could jump to as much as $8.50 per bushel. Buoyed by the bullish report, September corn futures contract closed at more than $7.01 on Friday. A year ago, the September contract traded around $4.11 per bushel.

That's good news for growers looking to turn a buck, but a potentially budget-busting information for end users including Idaho cattlemen.

Despite its reduction of five bushels per acre off earlier estimates, USDA still predicts a bigger harvest than last year. In fact, if a 153 bushel-per-acre average holds, the 12.9 billion bushels harvested would be the fourth-largest yield on record.

Jack Scoville, vice president of Chicago-based Price Futures Group, wasn't surprised by USDA's reduced estimates based on Aug. 1 field conditions, but thinks yields could still gain a bit.

"If we get a good finish to the crop year, we could see yield estimates creep up, especially on corn and beans," he said during a conference call following Thursday's release of USDA's World Agriculture Supply and Demand Estimate.

Extreme heat and dry conditions in the Midwest have led to the greatest loss of yield potential.

Growth in the ethanol industry is largely responsible for increased corn demand. For the first time, ethanol plants will consume more corn than animals will eat. Feed usage has dropped by 20 percent since 2005 and is now at the lowest level since 1995.

End users who penciled in $7 to $7.50 per-bushel corn into their budgets may want to add an extra 50 cents to $1 to those estimates, Scoville said.

That's bad news for livestock producers, who watched Thursday as corn futures traded up and milk futures fell. Although dairies indicated they held relatively large numbers of replacement heifers, the hot, humid Midwest weather and relatively high-priced feed may constrain milk growth per cow.

Fed cattle were losing $70 per head on average last week, according to Sterling Marketing, a Vale, Ore.-based firm. Higher feed costs are expected to slow the pace of cattle marketings later this year, as cattle are kept on forage longer.

Long-term Outlook

Jack Scoville, vice president of Chicago-based Price Futures Group, expects grain markets to remain firm through 2011. Corn and soybean prices will help pull up wheat prices, especially if corn hits $8 per bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade. Scoville warns that grain farmers and livestock producers should keep watch of the financial markets, as "grains have been performing pretty well" in the face of an investment world reeling from the U.S.' downgraded debt rating. Funds are likely to return to the grain markets, Scoville said, as demand increases and the economy keeps bumping along.

SHOPPERS HELP LIFT ECONOMY, BUT WILL THEY KEEP SPENDING?

WASHINGTON (AP) • The economy might not be on the brink of another recession after all.

Consumers, who drive most economic growth, spent more on cars, furniture, electronics and other goods in July — and more in May and June than previously thought. That burst of activity is encouraging because it shows many Americans were willing to spend despite high unemployment, scant pay raises, steep gas prices and diminished wealth.

If it keeps up, the economy might rebound after growing at an annual rate of just 0.8 percent in the first half of 2011.

That's a big if. Whether Americans remain willing to spend freely despite the stock markets' wild swings will determine whether the second half of the year is any better than the first. A sustained stock-market decline tends to slow consumer spending because it reduces wealth, especially for upper-income Americans. The richest 10 percent of Americans own 80 percent of stocks. And the richest 20 percent drive about 40 percent of consumer spending, analysts say.

That loss of wealth may help explain a report Friday that consumer sentiment hit a 31-year low in August. The Thomson Reuters/University of Michigan's survey, completed early this week, showed market turmoil and the political strife over raising the federal debt ceiling rattled consumers. "The fact that retail sales held up over the last few months ... is a positive economic development," said Joseph LaVorgna, chief U.S. economist at Deutsche Bank. "However, the true test will be to see if consumer activity held up in the face of recent financial market gyrations and slumping economic confidence."

BEYOND BACKACHES

There are dozens of chiropractors in south-central Idaho, but how do you pick which one to visit? They differentiate themselves with unique techniques.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdvalin@magicvalley.com

Chronic headaches? Heartburn? Stuffy nose?

Chiropractors address a surprising range of problems — and employ treatment techniques and instruments that set themselves apart in a crowded field. Many say you won't find another approach like theirs in the valley or the state.

So the Times-News invited Magic Valley chiropractors to tell us what makes their practices unique. Some offerings are specific to certain ailments, like allergies or herniated discs, while others are unique techniques that treat a range of maladies.

It's a competitive field, but not a nasty one. Though chiropractors want to find customers, few of them knock their colleagues. "We support each other," said Dr. Chad Nielson of Nielson Family Chiropractic.

Dr. Rusty Arrington of Blue Lakes Chiropractic agreed: "There's a lot of different ways that chiropractors can specialize."

Most of the chiropractors' treatments extend beyond the office. Many offer nutritional counseling and encourage their patients to exercise. If clients don't make healthy changes in their lives, the quick fixes at chiropractic offices won't stick, said Dr. Samuel Barker of Magic Valley Spine & Joint. Giving patients physical therapy-type exercises to do helps reinforce their work.

"When it comes to specific conditions, we put together a special protocol to help with whatever specific problem they have," said Arrington, who is a board-certified nutritionist with the American Chiropractic Association Council on Clinical Nutrition.

Prenatal and Pediatric

Dr. Jill Adepoju uses the Webster technique to help pregnant women. The technique makes sure the sacrum, a bone at the base of the spine, is aligned properly.

"In pregnant women, if the sacrum is out of alignment that can cause uterine constraint," Adepoju said. And a stressed uterus is bad news for both the baby and mother.

The adjustments help the mother feel better, and can often help breach babies get into

So How Much Does It Cost?

First visits often cost more, as doctors take the time to learn about your medical history and give you a full exam. Some doctors offer a free first exam to get you in the door, while others do an extensive work-up that can cost as much as $350.

Costs vary based on techniques, but for standard adjustments, expect to pay between $30 and $60. Add-ons with special equipment or techniques may cost more.

Dr. Samuel Barker of Magic Valley Spine & Joint said some chiropractors nationwide are offering monthly memberships instead of charging by the appointment — for example, charging patients $50 per month for up to six adjustments.

"I think it's going to become the norm," Barker said.

Fans of Fountains

Homeowners say water fountains add character to their yards. They might be just the boost you need to overcome your landscape's late-summer blahs.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

Now that George Parker is retired, he and his wife spend a lot of time working in their yard.

Their backyard is nicely landscaped with flowers, shrubs and trees. They'll often sit on the patio, sometimes with family or friends, enjoying the fruits of their labor. And nearby: the soothing sounds of trickling water in a three-tiered fountain.

"When it's up and running it's kind of a focal point," Parker said. "It's relaxing."

The Twin Falls couple purchased the fountain several years ago when they lived in Arizona. In Grand Canyon State fashion, it's decorated with a coyote and cactus. But it fits well with southern Idaho, too.

"We've got coyotes here," Parker said.

Even in dry southern Idaho, water fountains have become popular in recent years, said

Travis Mallory, garden manager of Southern Idaho Landscape Center in Filer. They come in a variety of styles — cottage, old English, Mediterranean or looking like natural rock — and are fairly easy to install and manage.

- Some tips:
- If you plan to put a fountain in a flower bed or garden, make sure the ground is level so that water flow is even. This often requires preparing some sort of platform or base.

- Treat water with chlorine or another algae-killing substance to prevent unwanted buildup.
- In winter, remove the pump, drain the water and cover the fountain. Many of today's fountains, such as the ones the Filer store sells by Henri Studios, are made to better withstand cold

Party Supports Olympic Ski Effort

It may be the dog days of August, but the Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation is preparing for the winter of 2012.

The foundation is throwing a "6 at Sochi" celebration Thursday to raise money for the Ski Education Foundation's Olympic Development Team. The team wants to put at least six athletes on the U.S. Olympic Team in Sochi, Russia, in 2014, said Don Wiseman, the foundation's executive director.

The celebration and fundraiser will be 5-9 p.m. at the Ketchum Town Plaza across from Atkinsons' Market.

Cow Says Moo will kick off the entertainment with its country-fried flavor at 5 p.m. Guitar-playing Moe Dixon will start strumming at 6 p.m. And Safety Orange, a California surf rock reggae band, will play from 7:30 p.m. until the lights go out.

Entry is free, but participants can buy a $10 raffle ticket toward a Sun Valley season ski pass or a Scott Sportser P3 bike. There'll be a dunk tank. Prospective Olympians will be on hand to schmooze the crowd. Local restaurants will serve eats, and there will be a Sochi Vodka tent to get people in the mood for the Russian games.

the correct position. Adepoju recommends women visit once a week throughout their pregnancy, starting as soon as they get a positive pregnancy test.

Nielson uses an ArthroStem instrument to gently adjust pregnant women. Though the device wasn’t developed specifically for pregnancy, “for me, it works really well with pregnant women,” he said.

Nielson treats kids. “We’re working with infants and children for colic and ear infections and bed wetting,” he said.

Dr. Alan Fox of Fox Chiropractic Wellness Center in Twin Falls uses an Impulse Adjusting Instrument to adjust all his patients, but said it works especially well for children. “This little 10-week-old baby received four adjustments, and it completely resolved the colic,” Fox said.

Equipment to Diagnose and Treat

Dr. Brad Turner of Turner Chiropractic uses the Atlas Orthogonal, an instrument that helps him precisely adjust the upper vertebrae.

“We don’t do any twisting or popping of the neck,” he said.

Turner said the instrument has helped him improve his technique. “I feel like I’m more precise than I was when I was doing the manual manipulation.”

Barker uses a decompression table, which positions patients in a way that relieves pressure on the spine. The table is popular in some parts of the country — “I know a guy in St. Louis that has five of them in his office,” Barker said — but not as much in Idaho.

With the table, Barker can treat most patients with herniated discs. He is also working on getting certified as a family nurse practitioner, which will help him incorporate mainstream medical care into his chiropractic clinic.

Fox uses direct digital radiography analysis to look at patients’ X-rays. He also uses surface electromyography to analyze the temperature around the spine. If the temperature is off by more than .5 degrees in either direction, something is probably wrong, he said.

Dr. Lori Gumper of The Gentle Chiropractor offers Nutri-Energetic Systems, a computerized system that analyzes the body with a fingerprint scan.

“It’s very, very different,” she said. Gumper also adjusts using a gentle technique involving slight vibrations from her fingertips.

Dr. Tony Sirucek of Sirucek Chiropractic has two machines: The Multi-Cervical Unit and the EVALTECH Functional Testing System. The EVALTECH evaluates injured patients after physical therapy or treatment to see if they’re improving.

“Everything is going toward functional improvement,” Sirucek said.

The MCU tracks neck range of motion and strength, then treats it. “This is really the state of the art when it comes to taking care of neck pain, neck injury,” Sirucek said, adding that neck strength can double in four to six weeks.

New Life for Old Techniques

Dr. Craig Manning of Canyon Springs Chiropractic Health Center incorporates acupuncture into his practice.

Manning performs both acupuncture and chiropractic care as standalone treatments but estimated about 30 percent of his patients receive a combination of the two. The dual treatment, he said, helps those with allergies, shin splints, rotator cuff injuries and migraines.

Dr. Tim Coiner of Lifestyle Chiropractic in Twin Falls uses the Sacral Occipital Technique, one of chiropractic’s oldest methods. Coiner uses triangle-shaped blocks and gravity to help gently adjust patients. The technique helps with sciatica, disc bulges and other ailments.

“We’ve got before and after MRIs to prove that we can reduce disc bulges with this,” Coiner said.

Dr. Tyler Hurst of Hurst

Chiropractic Center in Burley uses an allergy elimination treatment called Nambudripad’s Allergy Elimination Technique. Hurst uses muscle testing to find which allergens patients are sensitive to, he said, then uses acupressure points to treat the allergy.

The technique has its roots in acupressure and Chinese medicine, Hurst said, “but it has been revamped to do something new.”

Remember the Muscles

Dr. Spencer Williams of Williams Chiropractic Clinic uses Total Body Modification, which uses muscle testing to evaluate potential problems in the body. He then uses reflex points to address those problems.

“Every organ, every function of the body, has a reflex point,” Williams said. Stimulating the reflex point helps the body heal itself.

Williams and Nielson both use the Advanced Muscle Integration Technique to test muscle integrity. A weak muscle indicates systemic problems, Williams said.

“This is extremely helpful for acute sports injuries, shoulders, knees, hips, lower back,” Nielsen said.

Dr. Rusty Arrington of Blue Lakes Chiropractic said it’s important to consider more than just the joints and spine in chiropractic care. If you ignore ligaments and muscles, “sometimes you’re missing an opportunity to help the patient heal faster,” he said.

In Jerusalem, Scholars Trace Bible's Evolution

BY MATTI FRIEDMAN
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • A dull-looking chart projected on the wall of a university office in Jerusalem displayed a revelation that would startle many readers of the Old Testament: the sacred text that people revered in the past was not the same one we study today.

An ancient version of one book has an extra phrase. Another appears to have been revised to retroactively insert a prophecy after the events happened.

Scholars in this out-of-the-way corner of the Hebrew University campus have been quietly at work for 53 years on one of the most ambitious projects attempted in biblical studies — publishing the authoritative edition of the Old Testament, also known as the Hebrew Bible, and tracking every single evolution of the text over centuries and millennia.

And it has evolved, despite deeply held beliefs to the contrary.

For many Jews and Christians, religion dictates that the words of the Bible in the original Hebrew are divine, unaltered and unalterable. For Orthodox Jews, the accuracy is considered so inviolable that if a synagogue's Torah scroll is found to have a minute error in a single letter, the entire scroll is unusable.

But the ongoing work of the academic detectives of the Bible Project, as their undertaking is known, shows that this text at the root of Judaism, Christianity and Islam was somewhat fluid for long periods of its history, and that its transmission through the ages was messier and more human than most of us imagine.

The project's scholars have been at work on their critical edition of the Hebrew Bible, a version intended mainly for the use of other scholars, since 1958.

"What we're doing here must be of interest for anyone interested in the Bible," said Michael Segal, the scholar who heads the project.

The sheer volume of information makes the Bible Project's version "the most comprehensive critical edition of the Hebrew Bible in existence at the present time," said David Marcus, a Bible scholar at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York, who is not involved with the project.

But Segal and his colleagues toil in relative anonymity. Their undertaking is nearly unknown outside a circle of Bible experts numbering several hundred people at most, and a visitor asking directions to the Bible Project's office on the university campus will find that many members of the university's own staff have never heard of it.

This is an endeavor so meticulous, its pace so disconnected from that of the world outside, that in more than five decades of work the scholars have published a grand total of three of the Hebrew Bible's 24 books. (Christians count the same books differently, for a total of 39.) A fourth is due out during the upcoming academic year.

If the pace is maintained, the final product will be complete a little over 200 years from now. This is both a point of pride and a matter of some mild self-deprecation around the office.

Bible Project scholars have spent years combing through manuscripts such as the Dead Sea Scrolls, Greek translations on papyrus from Egypt, a printed Bible from 1525 Venice, parchment books in handwritten Hebrew, the Samaritan Torah, and scrolls in Aramaic and Latin. The last member of the original team died last year at age 90.

The scholars note where the text we have now differs from older versions — differences that are evidence of the inevitable textual hiccups, scribal errors and other human fingerprints that became part of the Bible as it was passed on, orally and in writing.

A Microsoft Excel chart projected on one wall on a recent Sunday showed variations in a single phrase from the Book of Malachi, a prophet.

The verse in question, from the text we know today, makes reference to "those who swear falsely." The scholars have found that in quotes from rabbinic writings around the 5th century A.D., the phrase was longer: "those who swear falsely in my name."

In another example, this one from the Book of Deuteronomy, a passage referring to commandments given by God "to you" once read "to us," a significant change in meaning.

Other differences are more striking.

The Book of Jeremiah is now one-seventh longer than the one that appears in some of the 2,000-year-old manuscripts known as the Dead Sea Scrolls. Some verses, including ones containing a prophecy about the seizure and return of Temple implements by Babylonian soldiers, appear to have been added after the events happened.

The year the Bible Project began, 1958, was the year a priceless Hebrew Bible manuscript arrived in Jerusalem after it was smuggled out of Aleppo, Syria, by a Jewish cheese merchant who hid it in his washing machine. This was the 1,100-year-old Aleppo Codex, considered the oldest and most accurate version of the complete biblical text in Hebrew.

The Bible Project's version of the core text — the one to which the others are compared — is based on this manuscript. Other critical editions of the Bible, such as one currently being prepared in Stuttgart, Germany, are based on a slightly newer manuscript held in St. Petersburg, Russia.

Considering that the nature of their work would be considered controversial, if not offensive, by many religious people, it is perhaps surprising that most of the project's scholars are themselves Orthodox Jews.

"A believing Jew claims that the source of the Bible is prophecy," said the project's bearded academic secretary, Rafael Zer. "But as soon as the words are given to human beings — with God's agreement, and at his initiative — the holiness of the biblical text remains, even if mistakes are made when the text is passed on."

Rome Police Crack Down on Latter-Day Gladiators

BY ALESSANDRA RIZZO
Associated Press

ROME • Undercover police have donned togas, capes and sandals to stop a turf battle among Italians who impersonate gladiators outside the Colosseum and other landmarks in Rome and make money by posing for camera-carrying tourists.

The trade has been tolerated for years, but that was before about 20 of the practitioners began assaulting and intimidating their competitors to take over lucrative tourist spots such as the Colosseum, the Forum and the Vatican, officials and police said Friday.

So police decided to intervene disguised as gladiators, garbage collectors and tourists, but their operation at the ancient arena and the nearby Piazza Venezia wasn't easy.

On Wednesday, police impersonating gladiators were attacked when they told competitors to leave the scene, but police, dressed as garbage collectors and tourists came to their rescue.

Funeral for Man Entombed for 27 Years in Chimney

BY MARY FOSTER
Associated Press

ABBEVILLE, La. • The narrow, brick chimney of a Louisiana bank became his tomb for 27 years and now Joseph Schexnider will be laid to rest Sunday in a proper grave with a proper farewell by his family. Still, his brother Robert wonders, how did he wind up in that chimney? Didn't anyone hear any cries for help? Was it a robbery attempt gone awry, an accident or something more sinister?

"At least we know where he is now," Schexnider, 48, said, tears welling in his eyes ahead of his brother's weekend funeral and burial. "At least he's home."

Nearly three decades after he disappeared, much mystery lingers about the case of Joseph Schexnider and involving a small town bank in the southern Louisiana city of Abbeville. Police say Schexnider became trapped and apparently died in the bank's chimney in 1984. But beyond that, they know little more.

"Everybody has an opinion," said Lt. David Hardy, chief of investigations for the Abbeville Police Department. "But no one has evidence to say one way or another."

If Joseph Schexnider did cry out for help, no one heard his pleas. The stench of death was never detected.

The decades rolled on until last May when a construction worker helping turn the bank's vacant second floor into offices tugged some fabric out of the chimney and was showered with old clothes and human bones.

Described as sweet-natured and relaxed by the few who remember him, Joseph Schexnider was 22 when his family last saw him in January 1984. He had no criminal record, but was wanted for possessing a stolen car.

A lanky, rambling man, Schexnider was prone to wandering at an early age.

In the years after they last saw them, his family, his mother, and two brothers and a sister, had not reported him missing — and no one searched for him.

"My mother worried about him, but I just said, 'Mom, that's just Joseph being Joseph,'" Robert Schexnider said. "He was always taking off for somewhere."

Joseph first ran off around the age of 9 or 10, Robert recalled, adding his brother had dropped out of high school in the ninth grade.

He worked now and then at this and that, quitting jobs when he became tired and moving on. He was briefly in the Louisiana National Guard, leaving with a medical discharge. One of the few pictures of him shows him in uniform, his dark eyes looking off into the distance.

"He was always going off somewhere," Robert Schexnider said. "He told me he'd seen every state in the country."

Schexnider followed carnivals and once traveled with a circus. He told his brother he hawked cotton candy and peanuts with the shows, traveling with the circus to New York where he was stranded when it left to go overseas.

"He didn't have enough money to get home, so the church helped him out," recalled Francis Plaisance, a city councilman and the pastor of the church the Schexnidrs attended. "I remember him as being a nice kid."

Boise State Scoffs
at Mountain West
Uniform Flap

BY TIM BOOTH
Associated Press

BOISE • If Chris Petersen had ever been brought into the discussion, Boise State might not be embarking on its first season in the Mountain West.

By the time Petersen was approached with the news the Broncos wouldn't be allowed to wear their trademark all-blue attire on their already famous blue turf, the university presidents of the Mountain West had already agreed upon the decision.

"He said, 'This is what they're going to do,' because if he had asked me what I think I would say 'don't join the league,'" Petersen recalled. "What are they going to say, 'no, we're not going to take you because of your uniforms?' That's my opinion. Maybe they would have. But I think that is ridiculous."

In a day of uniform combination overload, where schools like Oregon and Oklahoma State are turning the field into a fashion runway, it's Boise State's uniforms that are drawing the most attention.

As part of the Broncos joining the Mountain West, the league presidents required that Boise State not be allowed to wear its all-blue attire — blue helmets, blue shirts, blue pants — for conference games played at home. Nonconference is still OK, and the Broncos will be decked out in all blue against Tulsa and Nevada. But come Oct. 22, when Air Force comes to Boise for the first Mountain West game played on the blue turf, the Broncos will be forced to be non-monochromatic.

"It is what it is. As stupid as it sounds, it's really not going to affect the games. I don't think it had any impact in games, I hope it didn't. Hopefully we weren't winning all these games at home because people couldn't see our receivers. Somehow I found them," Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore said. "I think we'll be just fine. We have plenty of colors now ... we'll have plenty of options. We'll look good out there and have some fun."

The rule was first implemented more than a year ago around the time Boise State was formally invited to join the conference. What irritates many Boise fans is that the presidents of TCU, Utah and BYU were all at the table when the rule was established as part of the Broncos' arrival. By the start of the 2012 season, none of the three schools will be members of the Mountain West.

The issue is how the all-blue uniforms look on the game film coaches comb through for the slightest advantages. Petersen admitted as much last week when he noted that while watching game film from last year's 51-0 rout of Fresno State, when the Broncos wore all orange at home, the numbers were difficult to differentiate.

Boise State will begin this season with the most uniform options in school history. Along with the blue tops and blue pants, there are all-orange, all-white and all-gray options and the various combinations that come from those sets.

Castleford an Unknown
in Sawtooth Conference

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • It's not exactly "best team you've never heard of," but Castleford enters the 2011 season as a somewhat unknown quantity.

Opposing coaches know the Wolves will be good — they've been to the state semis in each of the past two seasons — but the question is about who will step up and fill the void left by departed seniors like Kale Weekes, Tyler Hansen and Cody Quinn.

Mitch Howard, Destry Weekes and Cody Hansen are three of the 25 players vying to fill the shoes of a strong class and trying to get Castleford over the hump and into the championship game.

The Wolves believed a soft schedule was their downfall last season against Carey, so they've loaded up with Hagerman, Oakley and Raft River in the first three weeks. With North Gem the talk of the Sawtooth Conference's South Division and a resurgent Lighthouse Christian poised to contend as well, Castleford will be well positioned to again challenge for a state title — as long as they survive the tougher slate of games.

Hansen Shifting Players to New Positions

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

HANSEN • New faces and new places.

That's the story in Hansen as the Huskies prepare for the upcoming football season. They're low on numbers — 20 in the program and an estimated 13 that will dress on Friday nights — and the team will break in a new quarterback in sophomore Seth Williams.

Last season's starter, Kevin Fuller, moves to tight end as Hansen shifts from a team that could rely on two bruising backs to one that needs to spread the ball around and get players into space.

"It was a combination of things. We thought getting Kevin out gives us more strength in that receiving corps, and Seth makes good decisions," said Hansen coach Tee Jay Berry.

It's going to be a work in progress, but if Hansen can get its new offense together and stay healthy, the Huskies could make some hay in a topsy-turvy Snake River Conference.

KELLEN MOORE A CANDIDATE TO CHALLENGE LUCK FOR HEISMAN

Boise State's Kellen Moore runs against Idaho in Moscow, last season. He is an early Heisman candidate.

Stanford quarterback Andrew Luck is the heavy favorite to win the Heisman, but Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore may have something to say about that.

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

The Heisman Trophy race might be over before the season even starts.

Stanford quarterback Andrew Luck is such a heavy favorite to win the Heisman, it seems all he needs to do this season is stay healthy and play about as well as everyone expects and the bronze statute will be his.

It might not be so easy. As we've learned in the past few years, players are more likely than ever to go from relative unknowns to Heisman contenders. Exhibit A being last year's winner, Cam Newton.

So with the understanding that the 2011 Heisman Trophy winner could be a player with little name recognition outside of the region in which he plays, let's take a look at some players who could give Luck a run for the Heisman.

Moore doesn't have the cachet of being a top-notch NFL prospect, but he is on his way to finishing his career as one of the most accomplished quarterbacks in

Tonight at MVS: Clash of the Champions

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

They conquered the Modified Series, excelled in a Late Model, but can they tame a Hornet?

That question will be answered this evening as former track champions converge at Magic Valley Speedway to compete for the distinction of 'Driver and Commander' at least for one race.

Tonight's inaugural event features former track legends with familiar names such as Quale, Latham, Vest, Pohlman and McKean who will be out of their higher performance vehicles and 'equalized' in four-cylinder Hornet Series cars. The course path in the Race of Champions has not yet been determined but it will most likely differ from the usual left-hand turns the drivers have mastered over the years.

"We have seen other tracks do this and thought this would be a cool thing to do," MVS owner/promoter and former track champion Eddy McKean said. "We're using the Hornet cars because we didn't want to eliminate any division champion from racing. It's all for fun and we want to be able to include everybody."

Drivers included in tonight's inaugural Race of Champions point to their names on the Feature Division Champions billboard at Magic Valley Speedway. Jeff Pohlman (lower right) not only hopes to win tonight's event but have his name permanently affixed to the sign at the end of the season as the most recent feature series champion.

Any MVS track champion over the age of 14 is eligible, but recently some of the past top division titleholders gathered to discuss their expectations for tonight's event.

In that meeting Bruce Quale, five-time feature series champion, tried to convince the other drivers that he really doesn't know what he's doing behind

Woods Heads Home
After Missing Cut

BY DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

JOHNS CREEK, Ga. • Hardly anyone knows the two guys leading the PGA Championship.

No one even recognized Tiger Woods.

Once identified by either his No. 1 ranking or his 14 majors, Woods missed the cut Friday at Atlanta Athletic Club with a performance that was even more shocking because of the numbers he compiled.

He hit into 22 bunkers. He put four balls in the water. His five double bogeys were the most he ever made in one tournament.

With one final bogey for a 3-over 73, Woods finished out of the top 100 for the first time ever in a major. He was 15 shots behind Jason Dufner, who has never won

Braves 10, Cubs 4

Dan Uggla belted a pair of solo homers off Carlos Zambrano to extend his hitting streak to an Atlanta-record 32 games and lead the Braves to a 10-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Friday night.
Uggla passed Rico Carty's 31-game streak in 1970 for the longest in Atlanta Braves history when he led off the second with his 25th homer.
Zambrano (9-7) gave up eight runs and eight hits, including a career-worst five homers, in 4 1-3 innings.

Brewers 7, Pirates 2

Ryan Braun and Prince Fielder hit back-to-back homers and Zack Greinke remained perfect at Miller Park to lift the NL Central-leading Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Friday night.
Braun and Fielder homered in the eighth after the Pirates had chased Greinke (11-4) with two runs earlier in the inning. Milwaukee won its 10th straight at Miller Park against Pittsburgh and is a major league best 42-15 at home this year.

Nationals 4, Phillies 2

Livan Hernandez pitched 6 2-3 strong innings and drove in two runs with a pair of singles, helping Washington beat streaking Philadelphia.
Hernandez (7-11) out-pitched All-Star Cole Hamels (13-7) to rebound from a rough outing at Colorado last Saturday. He gave up one unearned run and four hits.

Marlins 2, Giants 1

Ricky Nolasco allowed one run in eight innings and Florida snapped a seven-game losing streak and improved to 4-0 this season against the defending World Series champions.
The erratic Marlins had been 0-7 on their homestand, but Nolasco (9-8) out-pitched All-Star Matt Cain (9-9). Nolasco struck out four, walked one and gave up six hits.

Reds 5, Padres 3

Jay Bruce hit a three-run homer with two out in the eighth inning to propel

American League Angels 5, Blue Jays 1

Ervin Santana won his fifth straight start, Vernon Wells homered against his former club and the Los Angeles Angels beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1 Friday night.

Grossman Leads Redskins Over Steelers

Rex Grossman completed 19 of 26 passes for 207 yards and a touchdown to help the Washington Redskins beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-7 on Friday night in the preseason opener for both teams.
Hoping to gain over early edge over an injured John Beck for the starting job, Grossman hit Santana Moss for an 8-yard score in the second quarter — although the drive came against Pittsburgh's second-string defense.
Beck did not play. He sat out after tweaking his groin in practice last week.

Lions 34, Bengals 3

Matthew Stafford threw touchdown passes on his two drives, backup quarterback Shaun Hill ran for a score and Jason Hanson kicked a field goal to give Detroit a 24-3 lead at halftime.
Bengals quarterback Andy

Dalton was hit by Ndamukong Sung after taking his first NFL snap and Chris Houston intercepted the underthrown pass. Dalton, a second-round pick, finished 11 of 15 for 69 yards. He put Cincinnati in a position to attempt two field goals and Mike Nugent made one to make it 14-3.
Stafford was 6 of 7 for 71 yards. He threw a 26-yard TD pass to Calvin Johnson, who didn't return to the field, and a 7-yarder to Nate Burleson for another score on an over-turned play.
Saints 24, 49ers 3
Mark Ingram had a spinning, tackle-breaking touchdown run in his NFL debut, and New Orleans beat San Francisco.
Ingram's 14-yard scoring run highlighted a performance in which the 2009 Heisman Trophy winner out of Alabama carried six times for 23 yards. Saints undrafted rookie Joseph Morgan, a little known prospect out of Walsh University, added a spectacular 78-yard punt return for a score.

David Akers hit a 59-yard field goal for San Francisco, a kick set up by rookie quarterback Colin Kaepernick's 28-yard scramble late in the first half.
Dolphins 28, Falcons 23
Phillip Livas scored on a 75-yard punt return in the third quarter to help Miami overcome a difficult start by quarterback Chad Henne in the Dolphins' victory over Atlanta.
Atlanta rookie receiver Julio Jones, quarterback Matt Ryan and running back Michael Turner contributed on first-quarter scoring drives that gave the Falcons a 17-0 lead.

Henne threw interceptions on two of Miami's first three possessions before connecting with Brian Hartline for a 44-yard touchdown pass that made it 17-7 early in the second quarter. Henne, who completed 4 of 8 passes for 77 yards, did his best work against Atlanta's defensive reserves.
Buccaneers 25, Chiefs 0
Josh Freeman was smooth and efficient while leading Tampa Bay to points on three of the four series he played, and the third-year quarterback helped the Buccaneers take advantage of every bobble and blunder that the Chiefs made.
Freeman was 9 of 13 for 73 yards while playing for the first time at Arrowhead Stadium, just a few miles from where he grew into a high school star.

Heisman

college football history. The Broncos aren't quite as loaded this season as last, so if Moore can lead them to another undefeated season the Heisman could be his.

LaMichael James, RB, Oregon

James led the nation in rushing

(144.3 per game) and touchdowns (24) last season and those numbers should be within reach again playing in the Ducks' mile-a-minute offense.

Trent Richardson, RB, Alabama

Mark Ingram is gone and the Crimson Tide will have a new starting quarterback. That means there will be plenty of carries for Richardson, who might be the most talented runner in the country.

Denard Robinson, QB, Michigan

For the first month of last season, "Shoelace" was college football's biggest star and one of the most thrilling players the Big Ten has ever seen. He couldn't keep up the record-setting pace and as the losses mounted for Michigan, Robinson became an afterthought in the Heisman voting.

Justin Blackmon, WR, Oklahoma State

In his first season as a starter, Blackmon was spectacular with 1,782 yards and 20 touchdowns. If the Cowboys can make a run at the national championship and knock off the mighty Sooners along the way, Blackmon could become the first receiver to win the Heisman since Michigan's

Another Road Course for NASCAR

Jeff Gordon (pictured) and Jeff Burton are set to tangle Sunday in the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series auto race at Watkins Glen International in Watkins Glen, N.Y. The Cup series races twice a year on road courses, in June at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif., and in August at Watkins Glen. The Glen's 2.45-mile lay-out, with its sweeping turns and long straightaways, produces speeds that make it seem more like a superspeedway.

Woods

"I got some time off again," said Woods, who doesn't expect to tee it up again until the Australian Open in November.

Based on the last two days, he has a lot of work to do.

Dufner, who hasn't made a cut since the last week in May, holed a 25-foot eagle putt on the fifth hole and threw in five birdies for a 5-under 65 that put him atop the leaderboard for the first time in a major. Bradley, a tour rookie and the nephew of LPGA great Pat Bradley, did even better with a bogey-free round of 64.

They played a game with which Woods is no longer familiar.

Even as Steve Stricker followed up his record-tying 63 with a 74, and as Rory McIlroy made it through another round with a heavily taped right wrist, Woods captivated the crowd on another steamy day in Atlanta.

There were times the fans wanted to cover their eyes.

Woods blasted out of a bunker and went into the pond on the other side of the green for a double bogey. On his next hole, he hooked his drive into the trees, chipped out sideways, then hit a snap-hook back into the trees for another double bogey.

At least he went out in style — one more bunker off the tee at No. 18, one more shot into the pond fronting the green.

He was angry Thursday when he opened with a 77. He looked numb when he left.

"Obviously frustration, disappointment that I'm not contending in the tournament," Woods said.

Now the only question is when — and where — he will play next.

Woods failed to qualifying for the FedEx Cup playoffs, which he has won two of the last four years, meaning he is ineligible for any PGA Tour event for the next six weeks. The next tournament on his schedule is the Australian Open, starting Nov. 10, although he would not rule out playing somewhere — perhaps a Fall Series event — before then.

Woods left behind a championship that has 16 players under par, all of them separated by only four shots, even if the mainstream sporting audience might not be familiar with the some of the names.

Bradley, who won the Byron Nelson Championship in May and contended last week at Firestone, and Dufner were at 5-under 135. They will be in the final group, playing behind D.A. Points (67) and John Senden (68), who were in the group one shot behind.

Emotional Dennis Rodman Caps Hall of Fame Ceremony

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) • Thanking his coaches and apologizing to his family for his shortcomings, Dennis Rodman was enshrined in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame on Friday night.

Choking up often during an emotional speech, Rodman said his regret was not being a better father, and praised his coaches for being a father to him, after his own father left when he was a child and he never had a relationship with afterward.

The enshrinement of the flamboyant five-time champion capped the enshrinement of the 10-member class of 2011. Chris Mullin, the two-time Olympic gold medalist, opened the night as the other headliner.

Rodman wore two outfits to the event, but said his many looks were an "illusion" and that he loved "to just be an individual that's very colorful."

He thanked Commissioner David Stern and the NBA community "to even just have me in the building" and saved his deepest appreciation for coaches Phil Jackson and Chuck Daly, Lakers owner Jerry Buss, and James Rich, whose family took Rodman in after his mother threw him out of the house.

Rodman described them as men "you can call any time of day" who ignored his antics and "looked at an individual that had a good heart."

Dennis Rodman delivers his address at his Basketball Hall of Fame enshrinement during a ceremony as his former coach Phil Jackson looks on in Springfield, Mass., Friday.

He apologized to his mother, who was in the crowd that didn't know quite what to expect from the always-entertaining Rodman but probably wasn't expecting to see such a look inside of him. He said he was like so many players who fought to get out the projects and make something of himself. "I did that, but it took a lot of hard work and it took a lot of bumps along the road," Rodman said.

Mullin's journey began in New York.

A five-time All-Star with one of the game's best jump shots, he was enshrined last year with the 1992 U.S. Olympic Dream Team and also won a gold medal at the 1984 Olympics.

The left-hander followed a decorated amateur career by scoring more than 17,000 points in the NBA. The New York City product recalled his hometown in his speech, saying "Looking out, I realize I'm a long way from Flatbush Ave., but Brooklyn's definitely in the house tonight."

The class also included coaches Tara VanDerveer, who has led Stanford to two national championships and won more than 800 games, Tex Winter and Division II Philadelphia University coach Herb Magee, the career leader at the collegiate level with more than 900 wins.

Eight-time NBA champion Tom "Satch" Sanders, big men Artis Gilmore and Arvydas Sabonis; the late Reece "Goose" Tatam of the Harlem Globetrotters, and women's star Teresa Edwards, who won five Olympic medals — four golds — and is entering her fifth Hall of Fame, also were to be honored at Symphony Hall.

VanDerveer called her enshrinement an "exciting homecoming for my mother, Rita," because her parents met at Springfield College. She ignored her father's pleas to focus on her algebra homework instead of basketball, learning from whatever coaches she could and going on to win a gold medal coaching the 1996 U.S. women's Olympic team.

The induction of Rodman and Winter, the architect of the triangle offense, brought back Scottie Pippen and other players and coaches from the Bulls' dynasty of the 1990s. Winter, an assistant to Jackson on nine NBA championship teams, has been slowed after a stroke and struggles with his speaking, but felt well enough to make the trip for the weekend and what many considered overdue enshrinement.

Van Garderen Wins Individual Time Trial in Tour of Utah

TOOELE, Utah (AP) • Tejay Van Garderen won the individual time trial in the Tour of Utah on Friday night, racing through the 9.7-mile Miller Motorsports Park course in 17 minutes, 33.64 seconds.

A day after failing in a late bid to win the second stage, the Bozeman, Mont., rider won on his 23rd birthday.

"It feels incredible," said Van Garderen, who races for HTC Highroad. "This is the perfect day to do it."

Defending Tour of Utah champion Levi Leipheimer, from Butte, Mont., was

"I needed every second I could get going into the next two days."

— Defending Tour of Utah champion Levi Leipheimer second in 17:39.58, giving him the overall lead with two stages left.

Once Van Garderen recorded a split time of 5:09 — slightly ahead of teammate Patrick Gretsch, who was the stage leader at that point — he felt confident he could finish off the stage.

"He's been junior world champion," Van Garderen said. "He's always in the top 10 of every time trial he does. So when I knew — getting the split time — I was a little bit up on him, I knew that I was in for a good chance of winning because he is one of the best in the world."

Gretsch, a German rider, was third in 17:43.75.

Leipheimer has a 27-second lead over Slovakia's Janez Brajkovic, with Spain's Oscar Sevilla another two seconds back. Colombia's Sergio Henao relinquished the yellow jersey, falling to fourth place — 56 seconds behind Leipheimer.

Getting a top-three finish was crucial for Leipheimer with the top five riders in the overall standings still bunched so closely together. He anticipates the other teams will be aggressive in trying to overtake him and Team RadioShack on the final two days.

"You have to capitalize on the time trial," Leipheimer said. "I needed every second I could get going into the next two days."

If the Montana rider holds on, winning the Tour of Utah will feel much more significant than a year ago. It is a different race now from Leipheimer's perspective with the bump to a 2.1 classification by the UCI and the inclusion of pro teams in 2011.

"It's a more prestigious race now," Leipheimer said. "The field is stronger. We have bigger teams and bigger names here. That's a good thing for everyone involved. It provides riders on the smaller teams a chance to shine."

Today is Saturday, Aug. 13, the 225th day of 2011. There are 140 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight :

On Aug. 13, 1961, Berlin was divided as East Germany sealed off the border between the city's eastern and western sectors and began building a wall that would stand for the next 28 years until it finally came down in 1989.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1521, Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Tenochtitlan, present-day Mexico City, from the Aztecs.

In 1624, King Louis XIII of France appointed Cardinal Richelieu his first minister.

In 1704, the Battle of Blenheim was fought during the War of the Spanish Succession, resulting in a victory for English-led forces over French and Bavarian soldiers.

In 1846, the American flag was raised for the first time in Los Angeles.

In 1910, Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing, died in London at age 90.

In 1932, Adolf Hitler rejected the post of vice chancellor of Germany, saying he was prepared to hold out "for all or nothing."

In 1934, the satirical comic strip "Li'l Abner," created by Al Capp, made its debut.

In 1960, the first two-way telephone conversation by satellite took place with the help of Echo 1. The Central African Republic became totally independent of French rule.

In 1981, in a ceremony at his California ranch, President Ronald Reagan signed a historic package of tax and budget reductions.

In 1989, searchers in Ethiopia found the wreckage of a plane which had disappeared almost a week earlier while carrying Texas Congressman Mickey Leland and 14 other people — there were no survivors.

Ten years ago: Macedonia's rival political leaders signed a landmark peace accord aimed at ending six months of bloody conflict and clearing the way for NATO troops to disarm ethnic Albanian rebels. Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi (joon-ee-chee-roh koh-ee-zoom-ee) tried, with little apparent success, to ease the anger of Asian neighbors by visiting a controversial war shrine two days before the actual anniversary of Japan's World War II surrender.

Five years ago: Israel's Cabinet became the final party to sign on to a U.N. cease-fire deal with Hezbollah. Fidel Castro sent Cubans a sober greeting on his 80th birthday, saying he faced a long recovery from surgery.

One year ago: Weighing in for the first time on a controversy gripping New York City and the nation, President Barack Obama endorsed allowing a mosque near ground zero, telling a White House dinner celebrating the Islamic holy month of Ramadan that the country's founding principles demanded no less. Former veteran NBC newsmen Edwin Newman died in Oxford, England, at age 91.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Beware, I say, the failure and the shame
Of losing that for which you now aspire
So blindly, and of hazarding entire
The gift that I was bringing when I came.”

— Edwin Arlington Robinson

Today’s deal saw a missed opportunity of sorts. Do you think that South might have found the winning line in his delicate contract?

Having climbed to the precarious heights of four hearts, declarer won the club lead in his hand with the ace, ruffed a club, then took a trump finesse. He drew all the trumps, then ducked a spade to East, ruffed the club return, and played a second spade. West won the trick and shifted to a diamond, and declarer could not avoid losing at least two further diamond tricks when the diamond queen was offside.

This was a perfectly reasonable line of play — in a sense. But as the cards lie, the contract could have been made. The auction strongly suggests that East has seven clubs, since he had jumped to the three-level when vulnerable, facing a passing partner. Once East turns up with three trumps, it must surely be right to go after diamonds before spades. And best is to duck a diamond completely, then repeat the process if the first diamond play loses to anything but the ace, playing East for a bare spade honor plus the doubleton diamond ace, or the bare diamond ace.

Note that even if East has (say) the doubleton diamond A-9, losing the first diamond cheaply will not be fatal. East can unblock his spade honor and play a club, but you ruff and duck a second diamond, later finessing in diamonds to pitch your spade loser.

ANSWER: Although you appear to be very weak, bear in mind that after your first two calls, your partner already knew that and still invited game. Without wanting to appear to be too much of a mastermind, I think this hand is very close to a try for game. If so, a bid of three diamonds would be natural and suggest this sort of hand. However, a lot depends on how much you trust your partner.

IF AUGUST 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have a wonderful year ahead and should thank your lucky stars that you will have the peace and tranquility to enjoy it. This month, you may fall under the spell of an idea or a person you think is the real thing. Don't reinvent your life around this fantasy-laden notion as a professional, businesslike touch is necessary. Ambitions for material success take precedence in the year ahead, especially in October when responsible handling of obligations is your byline. The best time to launch successful projects, make headway with your career or meet someone who is true blue appears in March.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine
Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Git along little dogies. This is a good day to ride herd on social activities and spend quality time with a significant other who is in a loving mood. Accept invitations or call your friends together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Care enough to cater to a change of heart. If an apology is offered, it is up to you to graciously accept it. A recent problem or quarrel might offer a chance to look at things from a different perspective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Close ties are enhanced by harmony. You and a partner can make wise decisions about joint funds or debts. Someone in your circle may sense your kind heartedness and take you in to their confidence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Play hide and seek. Take advantage of the sense of adventure in the air. You will enjoy uncovering new ideas, places, and things. Any excursions you undertake will be certain to broaden your horizons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The window of opportunity is open wide. This could be a fine day to envision what the future can hold — if you stretch your imagination. Plans developed now will have every chance to be fulfilled successfully.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sincerity rings true. It takes more than facts and figures to get a point across. Right now, you have your best chance to persuade others and to influence the future through the spoken word.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unleash the laughter. Get your mind off your problems by watching a comedy or reading jokes. This evening could be ideal for meeting someone on the prowl for lighthearted fun at a party or in a chat room.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People are charmed by your street smarts and professionalism, but someone may wish to get to know your personal side. You may get a chance to meet up with someone recommended by a mutual friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Explore and explain. This is a good day to wander off to see new sights and sounds. While you are at it you can set things right with a special someone and clear up any possible misunderstandings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can earn more if you are eager to be educated. It can pay off to read a trade magazine, attend a seminar or view a video about your pet subject. This is a good day to mend social fences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spontaneity is a springboard for sincerity. When others exert themselves in an honest desire to please, it warms the cockles of your heart. Relationships take a turn for the better when you just dive in feet first.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be tolerant with others even when you are tough on yourself. Rather than behaving with formal and businesslike stiffness, you will get better results in social situations by letting your hair down a bit.

This won't be the first time groups have attempted to amend the laws; most attempts have died before being passed through the Legislature.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

(LEFT) Twin Falls resident Ken Cazier signs a petition Friday at the Twin Falls Animal Shelter. Idaho animal advocates hope to put an anti-animal cruelty initiative on the 2012 ballot to make a third animal cruelty conviction punishable by a three-year prison sentence and $9,000 fine.

for public vote, volunteers will need to gather 60,000 signatures by April 30, 2012.

"It's very difficult getting signatures," Ragain said. "I've tried door to door, but that's time consuming. I've tried standing outside of PetSmart, but you can't petition there."

One of the reasons why a harsher law has not been set in the past is because the state has been strapped for resources.

"Our state is facing so many other problems right now and funds are so limited that the question is, 'Who is going to pay for all this if the state intervenes?'" Blackwood said.

While the Magic Valley does have animal torture cases, neglect is much more common, said Deputy Matt Radmall, Twin Falls County animal control officer.

He says he receives 15-20 phone calls a day. Out of those, one to two are animal abuse related. Usually, someone reports a dog locked in a car on a sunny day or a concern that an animal is being starved, he said.

"When we do find there is some sort of abuse going on we try to work with the person on the problem," he said. "Sometimes there are repeat offenders but not many. Really, there's an amazing amount of people in this area who love their animals"

As a native Idahoan, Ragain understands why there would be resistance to the initiative.

"This is a conservative state and I'm totally against government intrusion, but this is something that is necessary," he said. "I don't want the government telling me what to do more, but does that mean we give up laws telling us to ignore murder or child abuse? Where do we draw the line?"

Merit Pay Plan Crafted for T.F. Teachers

Achievement testing, teacher tasks to be the measuring sticks for TFSD teachers' merit-based pay bonuses.

Twin Falls School District will soon have a merit pay system for teachers.

It's a plan that teachers in the school district have worked on this summer after the Legislature passed bills tied to "Students Come First," a series of education changes, including one putting a system of merit-based bonuses for teachers in place.

Part of merit pay — 63 percent — is tied to what Idaho's public school districts put in place, with the other 37 percent based on how well schools fare on Idaho Standards Achievement Tests.

Part of the local pay for performance plan will be based on tasks teachers work on like course plans, setting goals and writing class tests.

Most of it will be based on a variety of tests that cover all grades and measure well students achieve compared to prior years. Those include reading tests and end-of-course assessments given to students.

"We felt really strongly about making sure we weren't just doing something to just get it done — that we were actually utilizing a plan that allowed kids to achieve and that teachers could be rewarded," said James Haycock, a drama and speech teacher at Twin Falls High School who worked on the plan with other educators.

Haycock said there was good collaboration among the group working on the plan, with plenty of input from all grade levels.

School teachers don't know what size of bonuses they might receive. The first round of bonuses won't come until fall 2012, and the amount of state funding for the new program won't be known until next year.

The school board will vote on the pay plan on Aug. 24.

Funding Crisis Solved? Filer Board Postpones Education Levy

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE

Times-News correspondent

FILER • The Filer School District has postponed a planned November vote to raise more money for schools.

In anticipation of a $600,000 funding shortfall, district officials had intended to ask citizens to support a two-year, $300,000 annual levy. But district trustees decided to delay that request Wednesday after learning more about the district's financial outlook.

Earlier this year, a finance committee recommend $600,000 in cuts to salaries, general fund spending and repairs. But state revenues that outpaced June projections led to a more than $300,000 influx of additional state funding for the district. An expected increase in enrollment is also expected to bring in an additional $100,000 in state funds.

Superintendent John Graham cautioned that enrollment numbers and the corresponding dollars the district would receive remain uncertain, and moving forward with a levy campaign might cause voters to question the district's needs for supplemental income.

"This is about what we had projected being short and why I'm recommending that we void what was sent into the county for a supplemental vote," Graham said. "Right now, it looks like we may be $50,000 to $100,000 short, but less than originally projected."

Surplus state funds are not permanent, however, so the need for a supplemental levy could come up again in 2013.

"I had an opportunity to talk with (Idaho Republican Sen.) Bert Brackett," said school board member Fred Jaynes, "He says revenue in the state is climbing, despite what we see around the country, but that you can't count on it and there are no more funding pots to

A dime increase for lunches

In other action, the school board approved a 10 cent increase to this year's school lunch prices. The cost for students in kindergarten through third grade will be $1.70 per meal, while fourth through sixth graders will be charged $1.75. Middle school students will be charged a $1.80, and $1.90 will be the cost at the high school. Adult lunch prices are increasing by 25 cents

New federal regulations require districts nationwide to charge closer to what it costs to produce meals for higher income students. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the move is to insure that subsidies intended for free and reduced priced meals go where they are intended.

CASTLEFORD'S BLICK LEAVING ITD BOARD IN JANUARY

The Magic Valley representative has been on the board more than a decade; a replacement will be appointed by the governor.

Blick

Longtime Idaho Transportation Department Board member Gary Blick is stepping down from his post next year when his term ends Jan. 31.

His upcoming departure from the seven-member board creates a vacancy that will need to be filled by someone else from south-central Idaho. Except for the chairman, the board's other six seats are configured based on regions of Idaho, and Blick has represented the Magic Valley region in that capacity since 1999.

Board members are appointed by the governor. Blick was named to the seat in 1999 by then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne. The vacancy was created when newly-elected Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, left the ITD board for the Legislature.

"That will be 13 years for me on the board," Blick, also the board's vice-chairman, told the Times-News. "I think it's time for someone else."

Blick, a Castleford resident who owns a trucking business, said he's trying to solicit names of people interested in serving on the board that he can recommend to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

"It's been really a learning experience," he said. "I've always enjoyed it. It was once more fun early in my term because we had some money. We could do the projects that needed to be done. Now the money's tighter."

Darrell Manning, chairman of the ITD board, said Blick's knowledge of the trucking industry and farming has been an asset.

South-central Idaho has seen its share of recent big-ticket transportation projects, like the Twin Falls alternate route.

Blick's tenure also has had its share of controversy. Blick is named in a lawsuit filed in 2009 against the agency and its board members by former ITD Director Pamela Lowe after she was fired from her job.

In court records filed by Lowe, she alleges that when the board considered appointing Lowe as the director, Blick said that "no little girl would be able to run this department," or similar words.

The case, in which Lowe alleges her termination was illegal, hasn't been resolved.

Blick said the lawsuit is working its way through the legal system and isn't tied to his decision to leave at the end of his term.

"I just am going to turn 73 pretty quick and I think it's time to get somebody else in my place," Blick said.
