USPS to Move T.F. Mail Processing to Boise

Facing usage and revenue reductions, USPS will close the Twin Falls sorting center that currently handles all Magic Valley mail and move that function to Boise. Locally, it means the potential loss of 26 jobs, but little change to delivery.

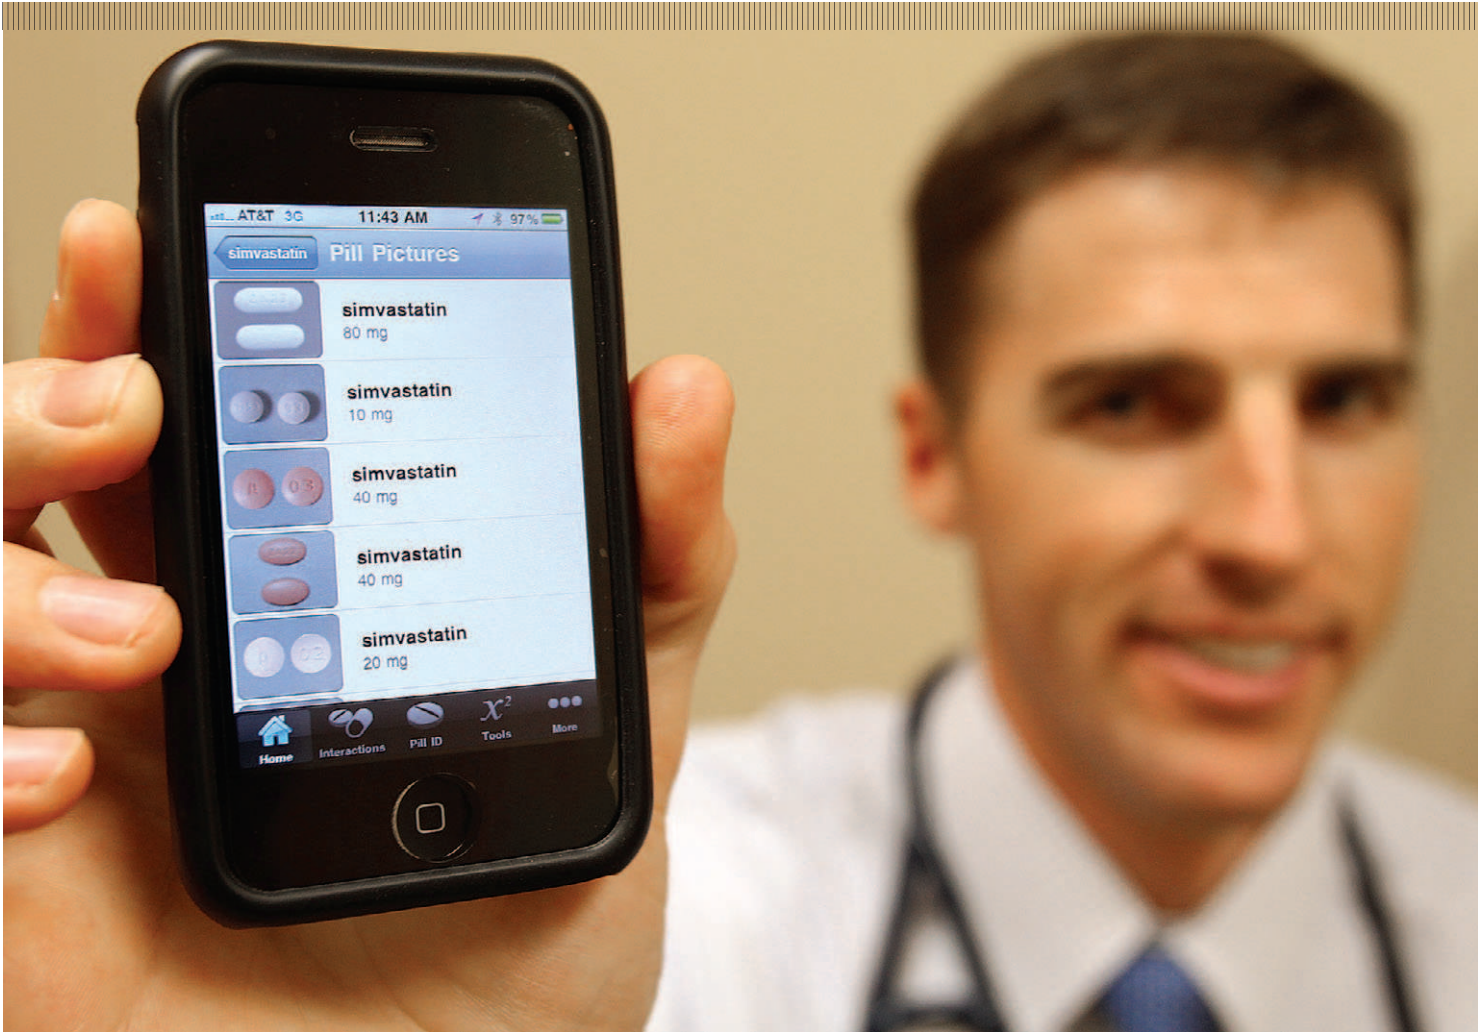

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

The U.S. Postal Service will move Magic Valley mail processing to Boise, consolidating the handling of 545,000 pieces of mail that move daily through the Twin Falls sorting center and saving $623,000 annually. In April, USPS started a study to analyze the cost of running its Fillmore Street mail processing location. The study showed that local mail could be sorted in Boise without increasing local delivery time. “Business as usual is not an option,” said Brian Sperry, USPS spokesman. “The Postal Service lost $8.5 billion last year and projects to lose $9 billion next year. The Postal Service has to make changes and make changes quickly.”

As a physician, it’s not uncommon for Dr. Trevor Satterfield to meet with patients who can remember what a pill looks like, but the name escapes them. That’s where his iPhone has become his best friend. While his patients play Angry Birds on their smartphones in the waiting room, Satterfield is referencing his phone as he would a medical encyclopedia. Satterfield, a physician at St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, commonly uses an application called Epocrates. He inputs the pill’s descriptions — color, shape and clarity — into the app. It then responds with a list of possible medication matches with images. Among him, the patient and the phone, the pill mystery is quickly solved. Satterfield is one of the many physicians across the nation using smartphones in their daily medical practice. According to Manhattan Research, a health care research firm, almost 82 percent of physicians use smartphones. Besides looking up medications, doctors use smartphone apps to retrieve instructional diagrams and videos for patients. “I’ll tell my patient how often they need to get a particular cancer exam, but then look it up on my phone to double-check,” Satterfield said. “Guidelines are always changing, but my phone is always updating.” Medical schools and residency programs are also jumping on board with the smartphone trend. Family Medicine Residency of Idaho, a nonprofit residency program, gives its residents a smartphone allowance. The residents use the phones to look up articles, log procedures and measure medicinal dosages. “We used to encourage

ID Auditors: Pharmacist’s $358K Deal is Excessive

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Every time the pharmacist at the State Veterans Home in Boise dispenses an over-the-counter or prescription medication to one of the residents, he’s due $11. Jan Poreba, the private pharmacist with the veterans home contract, has used this arrangement with Idaho to take in an average $14,884 every month — on top of a separate, $15,000 monthly fee that pushed the state’s payments to him to $358,619 in the 2010 fiscal year. State Legislative Services auditors now say Poreba’s contract, first negotiated in 2007, is too generous compared to less-costly compensation agreements that Idaho’s other two veterans homes in Pocatello and Lewiston have struck with their pharmacists. They don’t include this extra medication fee. “Costs for contract pharmacy services at the Boise facility are excessive when compared with the other facilities,” auditors wrote in their report released Thursday. “Every effort should still be made to obtain the most favorable terms, conditions and price possible.” Boise’s veterans home, tucked away on the shady campus of the Old Soldiers Home that dates back to 1895, includes 167 beds, with an 88 percent occupancy rate. Lewiston and Pocatello have just 66 beds each, so it’s to be expected that Boise’s home’s monthly Recession is Culprit in High U.S. Debt.

It’s the loud and clear consensus of Republicans in Congress and on the presidential campaign trail: Run-away government spending is the problem, not taxes. But the math isn’t so simple. The number at the heart of the battle cry of the Republicans and their tea party allies — that federal spending has risen to an alarming 25 percent of the economy — is skewed by recession dynamics. The mathematical reality is that during recessions, tax revenues go down sharply because people and companies make less money and so pay less in taxes. Federal spending goes up with an increasing demand from the government’s safety net programs.

Glenns Ferry Fire Contained

TIMES-NEWS

Wildfires started by an Aug. 14 lightning storm have finally been controlled by fire crews. U.S. Bureau of Land Management crews contained the seven wildfires, including the two fires north of Glenns Ferry, on Thursday. The fires are expected to be controlled by the end of today. Almost 137,000 acres have burned in western Idaho since the August storm, sending clouds of smoke east into the Magic Valley. At the peak of the fire activity, 550 firefighters were used to put out the flames.

Mitch Fullmer runs test mail through an automated sorting system in April at the U.S. Postal Service's Pioneer Station office on Fillmore Street in Twin Falls. The Postal Service announced Friday that it will move Magic Valley mail sorting currently done in Twin Falls to its Boise processing facility by October.

The move could affect up to 26 USPS employees who sort the mail in Twin Falls. Plans include creating 20 jobs at the Boise sorting center, but the remaining six employees may be reassigned or transferred.

Locally, mail services will not be affected, with the exception of some overnight mail service. Overnight delivery will no longer be available when sending mail between ZIP codes starting with 832, 833 and 834 — such service only makes up 1 percent of local mail volume.

Twin Falls Postmaster Bill Reese said employees weren't that shocked to hear the news.

"Most of them expected it. It's a good thing that the uncertainty is now cleared up," he said. "It's the right decision with the way mail volume has dropped."

The Fillmore Street location will still maintain all retail services. There are talks of moving Twin Falls' downtown office from its Second Street location to a smaller building, but nothing is concrete yet, Reese said.

"The building is too big for what we do down there," he said. "Nothing is set in stone yet, but we may move to a smaller, cheaper building."

If employees don't want to relocate within USPS, they'll have a hard time finding a job with the same benefits and wages, said Jan Rogers, executive director of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization.

"They have outstanding benefits — not just health benefits, but they have impressive retirement plans," she said. "These are jobs that people don't leave. This will be a difficult transition because many of the employees have probably been there for a long time. There are mental stresses for all people who are laid off, but particularly for those who thought they would be retiring at that job."

The median wage for a postal sorter is $24.44 per hour, Rogers said, almost 76 percent higher than the median wage for the Magic Valley.

Rogers said the best option for the employees would be to transfer to Boise.

"It is not realistic people will be able to get the same-paying job," she said. "They would have to have some other skill. Wages that high in this region go to registered nurses, accountants and some engineers."

The move is expected to be finalized by October.

THERE'S MORE THAN ONE WAY TO PICK A WINNER

From studying the numbers to just liking a name, horse-race betters rely on a variety of tricks to choose their charges.

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A pack of seven horses burst from the gate Friday, bringing fans, speculators, owners and trainers to their feet. Twenty-eight pounding hooves flung bits of earth into the sky, where they fell like dirty rain behind the passing horses.

In less than 14 seconds it was all over — except for the smiles that crossed the winners' faces and the exchange of money for winning tickets after the first race of the two-day parimutuel horse racing event at the Cassia County Fair and Rodeo in Burley. The races continue at 1 p.m. today.

Ed Jensen, a resident of the southeastern Idaho hamlet of Thatcher and owner of the first winning quarter horse, Mvr Cheeky Cartel, lined up to place his bets on other races after the first run.

For horse racing fans, the methods of choosing a winning pony range from mathematics to simply liking a horse's name.

"I've seen them all run before, so I have a pretty good idea what I'm looking at," Jensen said.

pharmacy payments are higher.

But it shouldn't be more than three times higher, auditors said. Lewiston's contract was worth $107,316 in 2010, Pocatello's just $103,800.

State Rep. Janice McGeachin, the chairwoman of the House Health and Welfare Committee, said on Friday that Boise's home should justify the extra medication charge that amounts to $178,619 annually, given it's not part of the deal in Lewiston or Pocatello.

"Why are we charging an $11 fee on top of their monthly contract rate?" said McGeachin said. "That's $178,000 that could be going to helping another veteran that isn't."

Poreba, a former federal Veterans Administration pharmacist, didn't return phone calls seeking comment.

While Idaho State Division of Veterans Services administrator David Brasuell conceded Friday that the pharmacy contract is "probably a little high," he defended Poreba as a skilled, dedicated pharmacist whose tenure at the Boise facility has been a marked improvement from problems the home had in the past with previous contractors.

In 2003, for instance, the failure of the Boise home's pharmacy contractor to use the federal Veterans Administration drug formula resulted in large potential losses — losses that were only avoided when the federal agency agreed to make an exception.

Poreba's small company, Apothecary Professional Services, took over that year, before winning the existing contract in 2007.

"The current contract is providing superior service to Idaho's veterans," Brasuell told the AP. "Although it was a little high, our veterans are being cared for in Idaho. And that's our mission. We're not going to waver in the care for our veterans."

In addition, the contract's price tag should come as no surprise to the state.

The Associated Press obtained a 2007 letter — from Brasuell to the Department of Administration — that proposes an agreement of up to five years, not to exceed an initial annual cost of $300,000, with increases based on inflation.

In that letter, Brasuell successfully sought a waiver of Idaho's normal competitive solicitation procedure, an attempt to narrow the field of prospective candidates in what he said at the time was a bid to avoid past problems the Boise veterans home had with contract pharmacists.

This comes up in the Legislative Services audit this week, too, where the reviewers contend Brasuell's agency's 2007 solicitation included very restrictive requirements aimed at ensuring Poreba won the contract.

Brasuell defended the process, telling the AP, "We have a lot of peculiar situations in the medical area, which most of the state agencies do not have."

Teresa Luna, director of the Idaho Department of Administration, said Friday that Brasuell fulfilled all the commitments he made to secure the 2007 waiver, including a written pledge to solicit bids from at least two pharmacy services providers other than Poreba's.

Poreba's contract expires in 2012.

And when it does, Brasuell said, he'll make sure a new solicitation is distributed more broadly to a list of area pharmacists, so they'll have a shot, too.

"We look forward to more people bidding," he said. "And we hope they do."

Semitrailer Hits Buhl Stoplight

TIMES-NEWS

The Idaho Transportation Department was working late Friday to fix a stoplight knocked over at the intersection of Broadway Avenue South and Clear Lakes Road in Buhl.

According to the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, a semitrailer hit the stoplight earlier that evening. Dispatchers received the call about the accident at 9:49 p.m. Further details were not immediately available.

Broadway is also U.S. Highway 30, prompting ITD's response. Idaho State Police, Buhl police and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office also responded to the scene.

residents to get PDAs, but now the evolution has moved towards iPhones and Androids," said Holly Taniguchi, the program's residency coordinator.

While there are more doctors and students using the technology, there is very little regulation on what is being put into the apps.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration recently released a draft guideline for smartphone apps designed to be used as medical devices. But for the majority of the apps, no one is overseeing what kinds of information companies are placing into them.

According to both Satterfield and Taniguchi, it all boils down to reputation.

"We go by the best reputation," Satterfield said.

"They all have a disclaimer that they aren't responsible for medical decisions."

Satterfield doesn't see the technology leaving anytime soon. He says many of his older coworkers have started asking how they, too, can use the phones.

"It's an unrealistic expectation that a doctor can keep up on everything," he said. "I just want to be accurate and use the best information out there."

bravery displayed on what should have been an otherwise lazy summer morning in late June. He only had smiles and hugs for his family.

Restaurant owner David McClain chose to honor his employee with a surprise presentation of a pair of plaques — one for the store and one for Haviland.

"We wanted to show how proud we all are of you," McClain said.

A firefighter himself, McClain could understand the situation Haviland found himself in when the crackling of fire awoke the latter at his father's home.

Haviland said it was that sound, not the smell of smoke, that woke him up. He heard it, jumped from his half-asleep state and rushed his family out of the home. His stepmother, Dersay Haviland, and his girlfriend, Cecilia Marziteli, safely made it outside the home as the fire, which started outside, soon engulfed the roof.

But his young siblings — Payton Harris, 11, and Taylee Harris, 7 — became scared and confused, separated from the group and trapped in the basement. Haviland tried to go back inside to get them but couldn't get down the stairs. Instead, he raced outside and with the help of a passing neighbor smashed a basement window, crawled inside the burning structure and hoisted Payton and Taylee to safety.

The home suffered major damage, but no one was hurt.

"The (Ogden) fire chief said those kids would have perished," McClain said.

Weeks have passed since the horrific inferno threatened the family, and Haviland said life has calmed back down.

"At first, everything was all a rush," he said. "As time progressed, I started for getting about it. Then this happened."

McClain scheduled the small ceremony during Haviland's Friday-night shift and kept him secluded in the prep area so he couldn't see people gathering in the restaurant lobby. When McClain went to fetch Haviland, he had to prod him out into the lobby a bit.

After all, Haviland's not a professional. He's not looking for awards and recognition. He's just a high school junior who thought only of his family, but became a hero.

Wendell Councilman Criticizes Handling of Library Problems

BY EMILY KATSEANES
For the Times-News

WENDELL • Wendell City Councilman Kent Bates made clear Thursday his displeasure with the council's handling of the tension surrounding the city's library board.

Bates, the council's liaison to the board, voiced his frustration with what he called a lack of support from the council and community in resolving the personnel issues that have plagued the library since March.

Library Director Elaine Dalton, who had served as director since August 2010, and her staff resigned about three weeks ago. Dalton had had conflicts with the library board since February, and the resignations prompted a short closure of the library.

"We have a mess on our hands. We all have egg on our face, the whole city," Bates said at Thursday's council meeting. "There's people that burn bridges and people that build bridges and quite often, you'll see people on both sides yelling at each other for burning the damn bridge."

Bates commended library board member Gene Estes for stepping up to help keep the library open until a new director is hired. He also thanked former board member Marilyn Neal for stepping down after Mayor Brad Christopherson asked most of the board to resign.

Bates said he has had no luck finding people willing to fill the vacant seat on the board and, with Estes dealing with personal issues that may lead to his resignation, the issue may become more pressing.

"I have no volunteers to get on the board. People say 'not until that board's

Also Thursday

Wendell Treasurer Deb Gibbs said an employee review of city policies could help cut down on the city's insurance costs.

Gibbs said the city's current high costs stem from prior insurance issues. Any infractions remain on the city's bill for five years.

"We're paying for the sins of our forefathers," she said. If Wendell employees review three policies — vehicle, work place harassment and personnel — and pass quizzes on each with an 80 percent or better score, the Idaho Counties Risk Management Program will lower Wendell's rates by 5 percent.

gone," Bates said. "We have a problem, folks. If we want a library, we got to step up."

Bates also expressed disappointment at the failure of the entire City Council to support the removal of the library board. The council deadlocked on July 21 votes to remove board chairwoman Jan Gooding and members Rosalie Eberhard and Wilma Butigan.

"I'm very hurt that I was thrown into this situation and then you voted against us," Bates said.

Bates asked the council to help him find board members to fill the vacant seats, and requested that another vote to remove the current board be added to the council's next agenda.

During public comment, Wendell resident and former library volunteer Bill Huffer suggested the library be shut down until the infrastructure to run it properly is in place.

"There are folks who say, 'I will never enter that library again' and these are people who used that library 10, 20, 30 years," Huffer said.

Feds Bust Ring that Sent Illegal Meds to Mexico

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO • A doctor who wrote prescriptions for nearly a million tablets of the painkiller hydroccone last year has been charged with seven others in what authorities described as a strike against a ring that smuggled prescription drugs to Mexico from the U.S., according to federal indictments obtained Friday.

The unusual operation brought a flood of yellow and blue hydrocodone tablets to Tijuana pharmacies, where American addicts snapped them up over the counter on jaunts across the border from San Diego, investigators said.

Authorities speculate that it was easier for smugglers to unload large batches of pills at those loosely regulated pharmacies than to distribute them in small amounts through American street dealers.

It's also profitable: A smuggler who buys a pill for about $2 in the United States can sell it to a Mexican pharmacy for about $3.50, and the American addict pays about $6 to bring it back home.

"We got Tijuana in the palm of our hand," Jason Lewis, one of the accused smugglers, said in a wire-tapped conversation, according to a search warrant affidavit filed in the case. "We've been doing this for years, bro."

The risk of getting caught carrying drugs across the border into Mexico is minuscule. Motorists and pedestrians are almost never stopped for questioning, unlike the tough scrutiny they face when entering the United States.

No hydrocodone pills and only 90 oxycodone pills were seized from Mexico-bound travelers at U.S. border crossings in fiscal 2009, the year before the investigation began.

"This organization found the black market in Mexico as the least risky way to conduct their business," said Derek Benner, special agent in charge of investigations at U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement in San Diego.

WORLD BRIEFS

20 Killed in Syria Despite Assad's Pledge

BEIRUT • Syrian security forces killed at least 20 protesters Friday despite promises by President Bashar Assad that the military operations against the 5-month-old uprising are over.

The killings, which came as thousands poured into the streets across Syria, suggest the autocratic leader is either unwilling to stop the violence — or not fully in control of his own regime.

Assad, who inherited power from his father in 2000, is facing the most serious international isolation of his rule. On Thursday, the United States and its European allies demanded he step down.

Libya Rebels Take Key Town

ZAWIYA, Libya • Rebels closed in on Moammar Gadhafi Friday, pushing back his fighters in a fierce battle in one key coastal city and seizing another town as they advanced toward his remaining bastion, the capital of Tripoli.

The territory remaining under Gadhafi's control has been shrinking dramatically in the past three weeks, with opposition fighters moving closer to Tripoli, a metropolis of 2 million people, from the west, south and east.

At the nearest point, rebel fighters are just 30 miles west of Tripoli, in the coastal city of Zawiya, where battles raged Friday over control of the city center.

Hero Admits He's Illegal

New Mexico man who saved girl during abduction attempt says legal residency process was too difficult and expensive.

BY JERI CLAUSING
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • The man who chased down a suspected child abductor and saved a 6-year-old girl from what could have been a horrible fate was honored as a hero Friday. But he is also gaining a new kind of celebrity: as a poster child of sorts for immigration rights in state and national immigration debates.

Antonio Diaz Chacon, 23, is married to an American and has been in the country for four years. But Chacon says he abandoned attempts to get legal residency because the process was difficult and expensive.

Diaz Chacon revealed his immigration status to Univision this week and confirmed to The Associated Press that he is illegal, prompting chatter on the Internet and social networking sites that his case underscored immigrant rights positions in two ongoing political debates.

Some argue he is an example of the kind of immigrant the federal government will now largely leave alone. The Department of Homeland Security announced Thursday that deportations would focus on criminals.

"As exceptional as his story is," said Christina Parker, a spokeswoman for

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Antonio Diaz Chacon is interviewed outside his home Tuesday about his rescue of a 6-year-old girl in Albuquerque, N.M.

Border Network for Human Rights in El Paso, Texas, "it points to the fact that most undocumented immigrants living in the United States are not criminals. He's more than not a criminal now. He's a hero."

Others used it to blast New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez's ongoing attempts to repeal a state law that allows illegal immigrants to obtain a driver's license. The governor has put the repeal, which was defeated in the regular session earlier this year, on the agenda for a September special session.

"Most are just working to support their families and to take away their driver's license would be detrimental to that," Parker said.

Diaz Chacon's status didn't play a role in Albuquerque's decision to honor his bravery. Mayor Richard Berry declared Friday Antonio Diaz Chacon Day in Albuquerque and held an afternoon ceremony where he presented Diaz Chacon a Spanish language plaque recognizing his bravery in jumping in his pickup and chasing the suspect until the latter crashed into a light pole. Diaz Chacon then rescued the girl as the driver of the disabled van ran into the desert. The suspect was arrested later by police.

Three Men Convicted in 1993 Cub Scout Slayings Go Free

BY JEANNIE NUSS
Associated Press

JONESBORO, Ark. • Three men convicted in the nightmarish slayings of three Cub Scouts went free Friday, nearly two decades after they were sent to prison in a case so gruesome it raised suspicions the children had been sacrificed in a Satanic ritual.

Doubts about the evidence against the trio had persisted for years and threatened to force prosecutors to put on a second trial in 2012.

Instead, the so-called West Memphis Three were permitted to plead guilty to murder in exchange for time served, ending a long-running legal battle that had raised questions about DNA and key witnesses — and attracted support from celebrities such as Eddie Vedder.

The men entered the pleas under a legal provision that allowed them to maintain their innocence while acknowledging that prosecutors had enough evidence to convict them.

"Although I am innocent, this plea is in my best interest," Jessie Misskelley said.

Damien Echols had been on Arkansas' death row and in 1994 came within three weeks of execution. He remained defiant Friday, accusing prosecutors of using innuendo and faulty evidence to convict them.

In the event of a new trial, "they knew there would be more people watching, more attention on the case, so they wouldn't be able to pull the same tricks," Echols said.

Prosecutor Scott Ellington said it would be "practically impossible" to put on a proper trial after 18 years. The mother of a witness who testified about Echols' confession has publicly questioned her daughter's truthfulness. And a crime lab employee who collected fiber evidence at two of the defendants' homes has died.

Since the original jury convictions, two of the victims' families have joined forces with the defense, declaring that the men are innocent, he added.

The victims' families were notified about the pact ahead of time but were not asked to approve it.

Echols said he and the others would keep working to clear their names. The men, who were teenagers when they were convicted, have spent half their lives in prison.

3 Die, Cars Submerged in Pittsburgh Flash Flood

PITTSBURGH (AP) • Three people died in a flash flood on Friday after heavy rains submerged cars in Pittsburgh and authorities said they were searching for other possible victims.

Many vehicles were submerged in the area near Washington Boulevard, which runs parallel to the Allegheny River in the city's Highland Park neighborhood, after thunderstorms dropped up to 3 inches of rain in an hour, the National Weather Service reported.

Rescue crews used inflatable boats to reach other stranded drivers, some of whom say the water near the city zoo was 6 feet deep.

KDKA-TV reported that the three victims were found in the same minivan. Emergency officials said a fourth person was missing, according to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Some drivers had to swim to safety from their cars. Rhoadland "Bob" Bailey, 79, of Penn Hills, was rescued from the roof of his car.

"I can swim a little bit and was looking at a tree branch," Bailey told the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review. "I heard one woman yelling for help, but the water was coming down so fast, I couldn't see."

CHEERS AND JEERS

Otter's Fuzzy Medicaid Math

JEERS: To Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter, for touting Idaho’s Medicaid cuts as a model America should follow in responsible financial management.

Financially responsible? Really? By cutting $34 million in state Medicaid funds, Idaho left $74 million in matching federal money on the table.

Let’s put that number into context: Seventy-four million would run the College of Southern Idaho for two years.

In a telephone interview earlier this month with Fox News’ Greta Van Susteren, the governor said, “People became more responsible for their own needs. And when they had to share the cost when there was co-pay for some of the entitlements they were getting, then they were more judicious in how they spent that money. The second thing that happened was churches and the rest of the community said we can help a little, but you have to help yourself.”

Otter clearly doesn’t hang out with many Medicaid recipients. More than 42,000 poor or disabled Idahoans lost their non-emergency dental coverage; dozens of patients are being discharged from nursing homes to home-based care; treatments like chiropractic care, podiatry, vision coverage and hearing aids were cut.

Jobs were lost and some providers went out of business.

And this happened in a state that ended up with a $85 million budget surplus, some of which could have been spent to stanch the loss of some of those federal funds.

Go figure.

CHEERS: To Cassia County and the city of Burley for finding common ground on their joint law enforcement dispute.

The Burley City Council unanimously approved a one-year law enforcement service contract with Cassia County Tuesday. The day before, Cassia County commissioners signed off on a $1.35 million offer from the city that will slash Burley’s costs by $179,000 for one year.

Under the contract, the sheriff’s office will set up a city division with Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell acting as liaison between the sheriff’s office and Burley’s mayor. Patrol cars in the city will carry a city insignia. The new arrangement will go into effect Oct. 1.

Burley has received police coverage from Cassia County since 1986 but ran into a stalemate while negotiating a new contract for the coming fiscal year.

Cassia County can’t afford to provide police protection for Burley at the current rate beyond next year, but at least this compromise will give time for Burley to get through the coming municipal elections in which the contract would have been a divisive issue.

Setting up a separate police department would be expensive for Burley. Good for the commissioners — and Sheriff Randy Kidd — for finding a face-saving compromise.

CHEERS: To the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, for hitting its trouble-prone Medicaid claims processing manager in the pocketbook.

The agenda is docking Molina Medical Solutions by $3 million because of the major problems the company had implementing its new system last year. Meanwhile, the state is still trying to recover nearly $10 million in double payments that were made to Medicaid-covered health care providers amid the chaos.

Molina took over the $106 million Medicaid claims processing contract in May 2010, but it still hasn’t been paid for the work by the state because Idaho officials said the company wasn’t meeting the standards under the contract. The first payment — of roughly $12 million, instead of the originally negotiated $15 million — will go out shortly.

Now the company will work under a pay-for-performance plan, facing monetary penalties whenever it fails to meet contract standards. Instead of the guaranteed $1.5 million a month set under the original contract, that amount will be the maximum payment the company may receive.

The department switched to California-based Molina last year in an effort to comply with federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services standards. But problems arose immediately after Molina took over the contract, and thousands of payments were delayed to health care businesses that give Medicaid-covered services to the poor and disabled.

Many companies went two months without payments, bringing some to the brink of insolvency. A few went out of business altogether.

In an effort to keep the companies running, the department advanced providers a total of $117 in interim payments. But the companies were paid again once their original claims were finally processed, and Idaho was left trying to recoup the double payments.

Molina should never have signed a contract with which it couldn’t comply, and though it’s taken awhile we’re gratified to see Health and Welfare holding its feet to the fire.

Washington Needs a Montana State of Mind

With the debt crisis and the weakening economy fresh on their minds, most Americans have probably concluded that government, as a rule, cannot manage money responsibly. But it can. Just look at Montana.

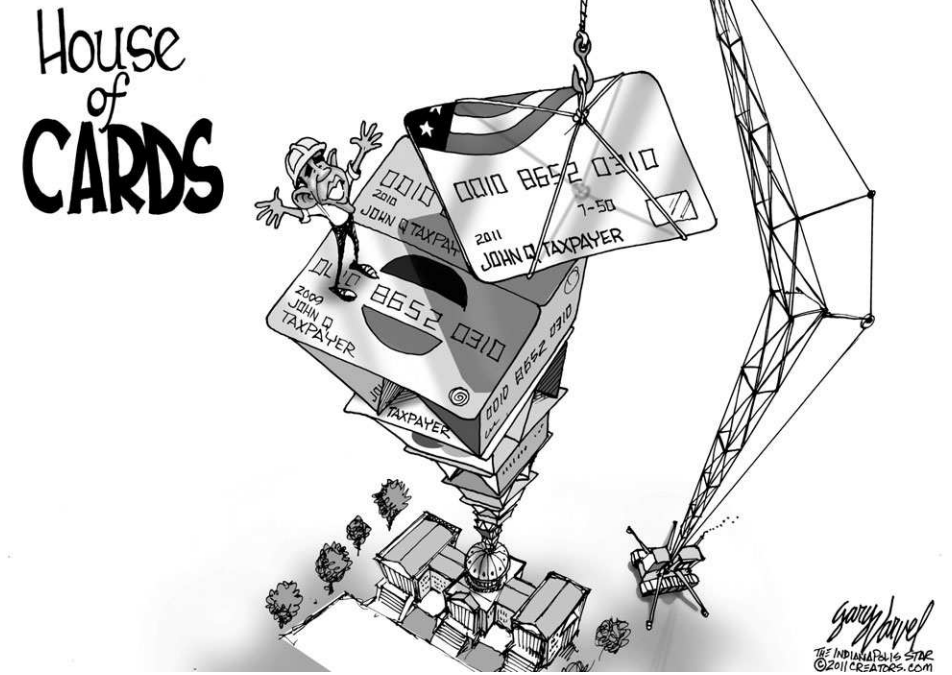

For six years it has been one of the only states in America with a budget surplus: this year it is a record $433 million, proportionally equivalent to a federal surplus of $858 billion. Thus we’ve been able to cut taxes, invest in education and infrastructure and keep essential services intact. We recently got our first bond rating upgrade in 26 years.

And we’re not simply riding the Western energy boom. The recession has driven unemployment to 7.5 percent, and while we’ve had a great run with oil, coal and gas, royalties from these commodities account for only 9 percent of our budget surplus.

How do we accomplish what most states and the federal government cannot? I like to say we run government like a ranch. In ranching — my old job — you either pinch pennies or go belly-up. We do the same in government. Perhaps Washington can try it.

For one thing, we challenge every expense. If it isn’t absolutely necessary, we eliminate it. When the recession came we found $80 million in savings, which helped us avert a budget crisis. Little things added up: we renegotiated state contracts, cut our energy consumption by 20 percent, auctioned off state vehicles and canceled building projects and computer upgrades.

We even saved by spending: We stepped up our efforts to collect unpaid tax bills from out-of-state and foreign corporations, an undertaking that more than paid for itself.

This type of penny-pinching rarely occurs in Washington. As a small example, I was recently at a military base where a private firm ran security. Why, with the toughest soldiers on Earth, would the federal government spend extra cash to rent security guards rather than let troops take turns guarding the fort? Sure, there might be a convenience to contracting, but is it worth the billions spent? No doubt the lobbyists for the security firm sprinkled plenty of money around Capitol Hill to get the contract.

The federal budget contains thousands of similar line items. A government serious about tightening its belt would eliminate them all.

But we don’t just cut costs. Like good ranchers, we also leave some grain in the bin in case of drought.

When times were good, we stashed away cash in a special savings account. This was a political challenge, because almost every state legislator, from both parties, wanted to spend it instead. But the account proved to be a big help in getting us through the recession in solid financial shape.

I cannot recall the federal government’s ever banking surplus funds in a protected account, even during the surplus-laden 1990s. If Washington ever digs out of the current hole and runs a cash balance, Congress should likewise put some grain in the bin.

Finally, we don’t spend money until we’ve found the lowest price. Around here, government contracts aren’t a way to take care of friends. Quite the opposite: we use our purchasing power to get the lowest possible rate. When the real estate market softened, we told commercial landlords who rented space to the state that if we didn’t see rent reductions, we’d move to cheaper premises when our leases were up. Most complied, saving the state almost $4 million.

How does the federal government negotiate? Consider Medicare drug purchases, one of the largest federal budget items. We are often told the cost of entitlements can be brought down only by cutting services. Nonsense. In 2003, in one of the greatest sweetheart giveaways ever dreamed up by the White House and Congress, they agreed to pay retail rates for Medicare drugs, even when everyone knew they could negotiate lower, bulk prices. The cost to taxpayers? An estimated $600 billion a decade.

There are savings to be found everywhere in government. Now that federal spending is the country’s top issue, Washington should try doing what any rancher or family household does: save money, live by a budget, challenge expenses, find bargains and invest wisely. Montana has proved that it works.

Brian Schweitzer, a Democrat, is the governor of Montana. He wrote this commentary for The New York Times.

Shaping a New World Order

Chief among the problems facing the United States today is this: too many obligations piled high without the wherewithal to meet them. Among those obligations are the varied and sundry commitments implied by the phrase “American global leadership.” If ever there were an opportune moment for reassessing the assumptions embedded in that phrase, it’s now.

With too few Americans taking notice, history has entered a new era. The “unipolar moment” created by the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 has passed. To refer to the United States today as the world’s “sole superpower” makes about as much sense as General Motors bragging that it’s the world’s No.1 car company: Nostalgia ill-befits an enterprise beset with competitors breathing down its neck. Similarly, to call Barack Obama the “most powerful man in the world” is akin to curtsying before Elizabeth II as “Queen of Great Britain, Ireland and British Dominions beyond the Seas”: Although a nice title, it confers little actual authority.

A new global order is rapidly emerging. In that order, the United States will no doubt remain a very important player. Yet alongside the United States will be several others: China pre-eminently among them, but with Russia, India, Turkey, Japan, South Korea and Brazil also demanding to be reckoned with.

Nothing Washington can do will prevent this geopolitical transformation. Politicians may insist that the United States still stands apart — always and forever a “triple-A nation” — but their declarations will have as much effect as King Canute ordering the waves to stop. Indeed, to indulge further in the fiction of American omnipotence will accelerate the process, with relative decline becoming absolute decline. For Americans, husbanding power rather than squandering it is the order of the day.

That said, there is much that the United States can and ought to do to ensure this emerging multipolar world ends up being more or less stable, and more or less decent, and therefore more or less congenial to the well-being of the American people. Multipolarity implies complications. A little more than a century ago, mismanagement by the last multipolar order produced a world war, followed by the Depression and then another world war worse than the first. Avoiding a repetition of those serial catastrophes defines the overarching strategic imperative of our age.

In that regard, spending hundreds of billions vainly attempting to pacify Afghanistan is unlikely to help much. Far more useful might be the following:

- Negotiating “boundaries” — constraints, for example, on the use of force — that will limit great power prerogatives (including our own) in the 21st century.
- Establishing norms governing the competition for increasingly scarce natural resources.
- Reducing armaments and curbing the international arms trade, thereby restricting the availability of the hardware that sustains wars once they begin.

• Focusing increased diplomatic attention on trouble spots that threaten to put great powers on a collision course, among them Taiwan, Kashmir, Korea’s 38th parallel and, of course, the Palestinian territories.

Sadly, little evidence exists to suggest that anyone in Washington possesses the creative imagination to take on such tasks. Crisis response — managing ongoing wars and reacting to the twists and turns of the Arab Spring, for example — absorbs the energy and attention of the Obama administration. Meanwhile, shoveling money into the maw of the military-industrial complex seems the top Republican priority. As with fiscal issues, so too with statecraft: Washington has become an intellectual dead zone.

Here’s the kicker. Were Washington to succeed in midwifing this new order, one result would be to reduce the burdens that the United States has shouldered since 1941 — far past the point of diminishing returns. Although the positive effects might not be felt immediately, the benefits over time could be very large indeed. Lighter burdens could go far toward helping us put our own house in order, the one point that just about everyone, in Washington and across the country, now agrees is essential.

Business Will Have to Provide New Jobs

When the German economy turned south after the 2008 financial crisis, the pain was mitigated by a program known as Kurzarbeit.

The word means short work. Instead of laying off workers, German companies cut back their hours. The government then used money set aside during good times to pay the workers around 60 percent of their lost wages. The labor unions went along because they believed it was better to keep people employed even at reduced pay. This is the German social compact.

As we suffer through our own economic hard times, the German approach is something we can only envy. Here, companies quickly lay off workers, many of whom never find their way back into the full-time labor force. Corporations shy away from investing for the future, even though investment is what will turn the economy around. The government, for its part, invariably starts talking about “job creation,” but rarely does anything that makes a difference.

This downturn is no exception. What are the latest unemployment figures? Some 25 million people — more than 16 percent of the work force — are looking for full-time work. Companies are hoarding cash while reporting record profits.

As for the government, President Obama’s idea of job creation is extending unemployment insurance and painting grandiose pictures of far-off “green jobs.” He is bereft of ideas for creating jobs in the here and now. Meanwhile, the Republicans insist that more tax cuts would create jobs. By now, most Americans have lost hope that our current government will come up with a viable jobs program. It won’t.

I am coming more and more to think that with the government essentially paralyzed for the foreseeable future, the only way we’re going to get jobs is by turning to actual job creators: business itself. With all their cash, companies shouldn’t be waiting for Congress to give them tax incentives to hire people. They should be trying to jump-start the economy by making investments, and hiring workers, that will lead to renewed prosperity.

The only way that’s going to happen, however, is if our society implicitly makes the kind of compact that German society makes explicitly: We have to be willing to allow companies to sacrifice short-term profits for the long-term good of the country. As the leadership expert Michael Useem wrote recently on The Washington Post’s website, business needs to make “people a priority, not just earnings.”

What makes that hard for executives is that they’ve spent the last 30 years having it beaten into them that the only thing that matters is delivering “shareholder value.” Over time, this phrase has become code for focusing on short-term profits — and chief executives who have ignored this mantra have often found themselves kicked to the street by impatient investors like Carl Icahn.

But as Useem points out, it hasn’t always been this way — and doesn’t have to be in the future. “What might seem an idée fixe of the American way is really a moment’s artifice,” he writes, “a prescription that served a past era but less well the current one.”

There is, of course, another reason corporate executives might be reluctant to sacrifice short-term profits by putting people to work. What if their competitors didn’t go along? Then they would find themselves at a disadvantage. Useem would tackle that by having a credible group like the Business Roundtable leading the charge, rounding up companies that would agree to start hiring.

LETTERS OF THANKS

A Thank You From Wife of Trauma Victim

To Minidoka County and Cassia County firefighters, emergency rescue teams, emergency medical teams and Cassia Regional Medical Center emergency room staff:

Thank you for the life of my husband. He fell from the Burley High School’s roof Aug. 2, and thanks to you, he is still alive and will recover at least partially.

It was a challenge, but you succeeded in lowering this man from the roof of the high school and transporting him to the Cassia emergency room where the staff was efficient and concerned and quickly assessed his injuries before life-flighting him to the Trauma One Center in Murray, Utah. Without your quick thinking and ingenuity, I have no doubt I would be dealing not with a recovering husband but with a more serious spinal injury or a funeral.

Again, thank you. You went beyond the call of duty to secure this big man and bring him down safely, to see to his safe transport, to reassure his grieving wife and to usher him to the best care available in the Intermountain area.

Thanks to the Heyburn Heart Committee for cooking a hearty pancake breakfast.

Thanks to the Heyburn Amphitheater Committee: John Berglund, Heather Davis, Mike Andrew, Deb Hopkins, Jason Parton and Earl Andrew for volunteering their time to plan and carry out the event.

Thanks to all of the wonderful performers and vendors.

Thanks to Mike McCarthy for leading our banjo workshop and jam session. Thanks to all of our local newspapers for writing about our event.

This was a benefit concert and we were able to collect 349 canned food items as donations to South

Central Community Action. This was our best year yet. We had more music, more fun and more food and the weather was great.

Idaho's July Jobless Rate Holds Steady at 9.4 Percent

BOISE (AP) • The state's unemployment rate held steady at 9.4 percent for the third straight month as Idaho employers remained cautious in July.

The Idaho Department of Labor released the latest jobless numbers Friday, with 21 counties reporting a lower unemployment rate last month compared to June. The jobless rate worsened in Idaho's remaining 23 counties.

Idaho's unemployment rate has refused to budge since May.

The state says more than 27,000 unemployed workers collected more than $26.6 million in jobless benefits in July, which is down from June when more than 30,000 collected $28.8 million in benefits.

But more jobless workers exhausted all their benefits and were still without work in July, compared to the previous month.

Nearly 11,000 fell into this category in July, up from about 10,600 in June.

Idaho Lottery: Tribe Complies With Gaming Compact

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • The Idaho Lottery chief says the Coeur d'Alene Tribe is complying with its gaming compact with the state.

The comments from Lottery director Jeff Anderson are in response to a recent report by the Coeur d'Alene Press that says the northern Idaho tribe wouldn't disclose details of how it contributes the required 5 percent of its annual net gaming income to support education.

In an email to the newspaper, Anderson said tribal officials are "good stewards of their gaming activities and generous neighbors."

Lottery audits show 5 percent of the tribe's 2010 net gaming income was $1.5 million, and the tribe decides how that money is disbursed. Tribe spokesman Helo Hancock said the tribe takes pride in making education contributions but chooses not to announce them publicly.

"The determination of how and when the amounts are distributed each fiscal year is at the sole discretion of the Tribe per the compact," Anderson said in his email. "Details of those distributions can be obtained from the Tribe."

The newspaper reported Sunday that the tribe for the last two years has not made contributions to 15 school districts on or near the reservation, even though the tribe's gaming compact with the state requires it to support education programs. Administrators with each of the school districts that received money from the tribe in 2009 said they had received no additional money since that time.

The tribe has made its mandated contribution of 5 percent of annual net gaming income from its casinos to educational programs in subsequent years but has declined to say where the money went or hold a ceremony as in past years because of friction over how the money was distributed in 2009, Hancock has said.

"We take a significant amount of pride in making these contributions," Hancock said. "We've chosen not to announce them publicly for a reason."

The newspaper reported Friday it had confirmed the tribe donated $10,000 to the Plummer-Worley School District last December for new junior high basketball uniforms and that another $10,000 donation went to a parent-teacher organization within the Post Falls School District last February.

Under federal law, sovereign American Indian tribes can offer gaming that is legal in the state if they negotiate a compact with the state.

The Coeur d'Alene Tribe negotiated an agreement with the state in 1992 and a decade later, it was amended after voters approved an initiative called the Indian Gaming and Self-Reliance Act, which requires the tribe to contribute 5 percent of gaming revenues to educational programs and schools on or near the reservation.

"When the Coeur d'Alene Tribe makes a promise, we keep it and we always have," said tribe Chairman Chief Allan. "Any suggestion that we have not kept our promise to donate 5 percent of our gaming revenues to education is simply untrue and quite frankly, offensive."

The tribe held a ceremony in July 2009 announcing it had donated $1.8 million to local education agencies and with that money, increasing the total the tribe said it had donated for education to $12 million. Besides school districts, the tribe has donated to other educational programs, including North Idaho College. The tribe said it donated used office furniture from its casino in Worley to the college in 2008, a donation the tribe valued at $250,000.

Final Blasting in Ashton Dam Repair Project Set for Next Week

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • Engineers and work crews will begin blasting away a final layer of earth and rock before releasing water from a reservoir into a bypass tunnel, clearing the way for the final round of repairs to Ashton Dam.

PacifiCorp has been planning since 2004 to repair the 95-year-old hydroelectric dam that has been plagued by sinkholes.

Mark Stenberg, who oversees the dam, told the Post Register the reservoir level will drop 17 feet within two weeks of the blasting.

Conservationists and anglers are concerned the project will release a large amount of sediment that will clog places in the Henry's Fork bedrock where young trout hide from predators and where the trout's food sources hatch.

PacifiCorp spokesman Dave Eskelsen believes the company's plan makes the likelihood of that happening as small as possible.

Company officials believe sinkholes are developing because fine particles designed to restrain water flow were placed directly behind the dam's large-particle barrier.

Slowly, water from the reservoir has pushed the fine particles through the much more porous large-particle barrier. The displacement of fine particles creates cavities in the fill, which lead to sinkholes in the dam's crest.

PacifiCorp plans to replace the existing fill with a more gradual and uniform layer behind the large-particle barrier. Plans call for replacing thousands of yards of "silty sands" now in place with several distinct layers of coarse gravel, fine gravel, sand and soil.

Burley Basking in New Soccer Coach's Knowledge

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • When the Burley High girls soccer team lined up to practice corner kicks recently, new head coach Ray Sansom shouted instructions to arch the ball like a banana. The girls started laughing – not out of disrespect for their coach, but because of the way “buh-naw-naw” sounds with Sansom’s distinct British accent. “Our team loves when he talks. It brightens our day because his voice sounds cool,” said senior McKenzie Drenker. “Sometimes he mixes up a word and we’re like, ‘What?’ We understand him most of the time, other times we’re just laughing at him.” Chatting with Sansom is enjoyable not only to hear his accent, but also to bask in his knowledge and love for the game. In his native England, soccer is king, and for Sansom comes as natural as breathing. “He gives us a lot of support mentally and physically,” said senior Angelica Rios. “He knows a lot about the game so he knows exactly how to help us on our weaknesses.” Sansom has been involved with coaching and officiating soccer in Mini-Cassia since coming to Idaho about 30 years ago. “I’ve had to learn to like football, I’ve learned to watch basketball, but soccer has always been the one I want to do something with,” Sansom said. His daughter Emily was a three-year starter at goalkeeper at Burley before she graduated last spring and moved on to play college soccer at Western Texas

Riverhawks Building for Long-term Success

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Dave Slotten might be in the market for some of those “Warning: Construction Zone” signs. The Twin Falls High School graduate and former Bruin defensive coordinator at last has his opportunity to put his stamp on a program. Intriguingly, the chance arose on the red half of Blue Lakes Boulevard, but the focus lies solely on getting kids in the proper shape, frame of mind and preparation for a trip to Columbia on Aug. 26. One hundred and four kids checked out gear for Canyon Ridge’s third football season. Emphasis on discipline and fundamentals, as well as typical attrition, might drop those numbers, but there’s a sense of the long-term about the Riverhawks as they start to build their program. “We’ve got the kids down in the middle schools using the same terminology, same way of doing things,” Slotten said. “It’s going to be a process, but we’re going to do it right.” Expect the Riverhawks to play to their potential strengths, which revolve around running the football and keeping things clean on defense. In a Great Basin Conference that on paper appears down from last year, continued improvement could see Canyon Ridge land its first playoff berth.

Tradition Helps Keep Wolverines Focused

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Tucked in the mountains of Hailey, Wood River practices in the most pristine backdrop in the Great Basin Conference and in the first week of August, the Wolverines kicked off the 2011 season with a tradition third-year head coach Kevin Stilling installed his first season. Every practice, one Wood River player is elected by Stilling to carry to the field a painted black 2x4. On the first day of practice, it was offensive lineman Kevin Cooley who led the team on its march from the gym to the practice fields with the 2x4 in his arms. Cooley laid down the black slab of wood, or “the line” as the team calls it, at the edge of the practice fields. Every player walked across “the line” onto the field and only then was the team ready for practice. “It’s a symbolic thing for us,” Stilling said. “They have to cross the line and flip the switch to practice mode. I don’t want them thinking about school or other outside distractions when they step onto the field. The kids’ heads should be on football.” The Wolverines have 57 players out this season in their entire program (varsity and junior varsity), up from previous years, but still low for a Class 4A program. Stilling, however, said this summer was the best in tenure as head coach

Driver Woll Hopes to Extend Points Lead

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

Seeking his first championship in the series, Project Filter Street Stocks driver Kendel Woll will have the doors wide open this evening to add to his already sizeable lead in the point standings. Woll currently carries in a 57-point advantage over two-time defending champion John Newell, and with two main events tonight Woll has a golden opportunity to take his yellow No. 8 car another step closer to the 2011 track title. Only four events remain this season for the Budweiser Super Stocks drivers. Although each of the top five drivers in the standings has made a trip to victory lane this year, Kris McKean continues to top the leaderboard. Daniel Shirley and Casey Pehrson have the closest battle underway in the division, separated by only six points going into tonight’s events. The action also continues at Idaho’s only NASCAR-sanctioned track for the Quale’s Pro Hornets, Quale’s Jr. Stingers and the TV-GoldandSilver Thunderdogs. The point battles in these divisions are becoming very intense as the opportunities to advance in standings dwindle with each passing Saturday night. Shari’s Restaurant and Bakery will host a pie eating contest for kids at intermission. Fans are also invited to participate in the Spectator Drags contest. Bring your street car or truck, driver’s license, proof of insurance and registration to get in on the action. Gates open at 4 p.m., green flag racing begins at 6.

Broncos, Moore Ready to be Party Crashers Again

BY TIM BOOTH
Associated Press

BOISE • Stepping inside the Boise State locker room during the summer months is a reminder that the Broncos are still just an infant program 15 years removed from playing at a lower level of college football, no matter the recognition or rankings they receive. It’s a sticky sauna on this 90-degree Idaho afternoon. Industrial fans wail on their highest settings while trying to provide some relief since no one had the foresight to make sure the air conditioning that cools other parts of the athletic complex made its way to the main section of the football locker room. “We play big-time football. We may not have the amenities and all that but we’ll get there,” wide receiver Tyler Shoemaker said.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kellen Moore (11) and Boise State will start the season ahead of most of the pack, but as the season progresses against a slightly-tougher schedule, can the Broncos stave off other national title hopefuls?

Gaining legitimacy has been an incremental process for Boise State that takes another step this season as the Broncos move from the weaker Western Athletic Conference into the Mountain West. It’s not the same Mountain West that Boise State expected to join, though, with Utah going to the Pac-12, BYU choosing independence and TCU headed for the Big East in 2012. Even with what’s considered a step up in competition, the position the Broncos hold is the same: favorites and potential Bowl Championship Series busters yet again with a national debate swirling about their worthiness. Much will be made of the Broncos season opener, for the third straight year a pseudo BCS elimination game. After beating Oregon at home to open the 2009 season and dispatching Virginia Tech in last year’s opener, the Broncos face Georgia in Atlanta on Sept. 3. Win, and the conversation will revert to the usual refrain: Is Boise State worthy of a BCS bowl and perhaps a title shot? Lose and it becomes a moot point. The Broncos are accustomed to this debate by now. It’s followed them essentially non-stop for the past two seasons when Boise State went a combined 26-1, the only hiccup a memorable 34-31 overtime loss to Nevada on a

Biffle Leader of NASCAR Pack With First Pole Since June 2008

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKLYN, Mich. • Greg Biffle is still annoyed with Boris Said after their run-in at Watkins Glen.

That hasn't stopped him from focusing on this weekend's Sprint Cup race in Michigan.

Biffle won his first pole in over three years Friday at Michigan International Speedway, posting a qualifying lap of 190.345 mph in his No. 16 Ford. It was an important step in the right direction after he finished 31st at Watkins Glen on Monday, then confronted Said in the pits afterward and gave him a couple of quick hits while Said was still in his car.

Said had touched off a wild crash at the end of the road race.

"Our deal is over with," Biffle said. "We had our differences on the race track, that one instance, I told him I wasn't happy with it on the race track and then I didn't go around him the rest of the day. We talked about that on the phone and it is over."

Said is racing in Montreal this weekend, so he wasn't anywhere near Biffle during Sprint Cup qualifying.

"We've settled our differences," Said explained. "I won't be going to Christmas dinner with him, that's for sure."

Biffle is 13th in the points standings but without a win this year. A victory would be a significant boost to his hopes of reaching the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

He hasn't finished higher than fourth this year.

"We have to have a win to get in the Chase, that is obvious," Biffle said. "Here, Bristol and Atlanta are good tracks for us. I think this is probably our best, and this may be our best opportunity — here or Atlanta. This is a huge deal for us and huge momentum for us going in-to Sunday."

Matt Kenseth was second in qualifying, and Ryan Newman was third. Denny Hamlin, who held off Kenseth to win in Michigan in June, was fourth.

Kenseth will start in the top 10 for the sixth time this year. He's fifth in the points standings.

"We had a lot of speed, and honestly I wish I wouldn't have watched Greg's lap and saw his lap time," Kenseth said. "If I hadn't tried so hard I might have had a shot at it. That is pretty fast."

Dale Earnhardt Jr. qualified eighth, and points leader Kyle Busch was 17th.

Busch finished third here in June.

"Wish we would have had a better lap, but we will work on it tomorrow in race trim and hope we can run like we did here in June and have a shot to win," Busch said.

Newman posted his ninth top-10 start of the season.

Couples Leads After Second Round of Players Championship

HARRISON, N.Y. • Fred Couples shot a 5-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead after the second round of the Senior Players Championship, the tour's final major of the season.

Couples is at 8 under for the tournament and trying for his fifth Champions Tour victory. Playing in his first event since undergoing non-traditional back treatment six weeks ago in Germany, Couples has put together two solid rounds at Westchester Country Club's tree-lined West Course. Peter Senior remains in second at 7 under after a second-round 69. Corey Pavin is third at 6 under, with a second-round 69 aided by his ability to consistently reach fairways.

for participation in off-season weight lifting and conditioning. The team also traveled to a camp in New Plymouth where it played Gooding, Marsing, Melba and Nyssa, finishing second in 7-on-7s and winning the 11-on-11 portion.

"We're pumped for this season," Cooley said. "A lot of the kids have bought into coach Stilling's program."

Wood River is coming off a 4-4 season and fourth-place finish in the Great Basin Conference. With a nonconference schedule that includes Buhl, Wendell and Gooding, improving upon that record a real possibility.

"We have a lot of good seniors and leadership, said running back Braxton Parish. "I feel like this is the best year Wood River has a shot in this conference."

Wood River begins its season Aug. 26 against Sugar-Salem.

College. Emily's success helped fuel Ray's passion to coach again, and he served as Burley's JV assistant last season.

The previous varsity head coach, Sara Edwards, moved from the area due to her husband's job. When Burley athletic director Gordon Kerbs offered Sansom the job, "I bit his arm off," Sansom said.

Edwards was in Burley for just two seasons, but she took the Bobcats from the Great Basin cellar to the conference's third-place team last year with a 7-13 record. Sansom hopes to keep building on that progress and hopefully challenge top contenders Wood River and Twin Falls.

"We've improved a lot," said senior Megan Graham. "Mentally we're a lot stronger this year and I think we can make a more offensive drive..." (Sansom) has had a good response from us, but the coaches can only do so much and the rest has to come from the players. We have a lot of stepping up to do as a team."

A four-year varsity player, Graham should be one to step up from her attacking midfielder and forward positions. Junior Aubrie Vale is another talented player to watch, along with a senior transfer from Weiser, Tabatha Lind. Burley will also see production from seniors Alex Sanchez, Brenda Vazquez.

The Bobcats graduated 13 seniors from last year's roster, but Sansom doesn't like the term "rebuilding."

"Everybody is always rebuilding," Sansom said. "Every year teams lose some players due to graduation. The biggest thing is putting players in the right spot."

Sansom said he won't completely reinvent Burley's style of play.

"It's going to be played similar to what Edwards did last year. She was a good coach. I'm going on the basis of what I've seen and what I've collected over the years and what I'd like to see. It's an easy game to play!"

Tigers Hold on to First Place

DETROIT • Max Scherzer pitched seven strong innings and the first-place Detroit Tigers hit three homers in a 4-1 victory over the second-place Cleveland Indians on Friday night.

The Indians could have taken over the AL Central lead with a sweep of the three-game series, but now trail Detroit by 2½ games.

Rays 3, Mariners 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Evan Longoria and Ben Zobrist each had run-scoring singles with two outs during the eighth inning as Tampa Bay beat Felix Hernandez.

Hernandez (11-11) took a one-hitter in the eighth before the Rays' put together the late rally. An out after pinch-hitter Sam Fuld lined an one-out, opposite-field single to left, Johnny Damon had an infield single before Longoria and Zobrist had consecutive RBI hits to put Tampa Bay ahead 3-2.

Red Sox 7, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Jarrod Saltalamacchia pounded out a three-run homer, left-hander Andrew Miller gave Red Sox manager Terry Francona precisely what he was looking for and Boston rolled over the Royals.

Miller (5-1) allowed one run on three hits and a pair of walks over 5 1-3 innings, rarely finding himself in any trouble against the Royals' feeble offense. It was his first start since July 31 after a pair of appearances out of the bullpen, and his first victory since July 20 at Baltimore.

Yankees 8, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS • Phil Hughes allowed just two hits in 7 2-3 innings and Russell Martin hit two home runs to lead New York.

Hughes (4-4) gave up one run, walked three and struck out two in his longest outing of the season. Martin hit a solo homer in the third and a two-run shot in the sixth, his fourth career multihomer game.

Rangers 7, White Sox 4

CHICAGO • JJosh Hamilton hit a tiebreaking homer in the sixth inning, Mitch Moreland connected for a three-run shot in the fourth and a two-run drive in the sixth, and Texas beat the Chicago White Sox.

Moreland tied a career-high with five RBIs for the Rangers, who rallied for their 10th win in 12 games despite another shaky performance from starter Matt Harrison.

Dolphins Gives Panthers Rookie Quarterback Newton a Rude Welcome

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Cam Newton was shut out in his first exhibition-game start, and the Carolina Panthers lost to the Miami Dolphins 20-10.

Newton played the entire first half, when the Panthers managed only three first downs, had the ball for less than eight minutes and fell behind 17-0. Newton went 7 for 14 for 66 yards, and he ran four times for 18 yards.

Reggie Bush, another former Heisman Trophy winner, played for the first time since joining the Dolphins and totaled 81 yards from scrimmage in three series. He ran eight times for 48 yards, including a 17-yard burst up the middle, and caught two passes for 33 yards.

Packers 28, Cardinals 20

GREEN BAY, Wis. • Aaron Rodgers topped off a sharp performance with a 20-yard touchdown pass to Greg Jennings for the defending Super Bowl champions.

Rodgers played into the second quarter, completing 9 of 12 passes for 97 yards and the touchdown. Matt Flynn took over for Rodgers and led the Packers to another touchdown before halftime, a 2-yard run by rookie Alex Green.

Cardinals quarterback Kevin Kolb was 6 for 11 for 80 yards for the Cardinals, who were called for nine penalties in the first half, including several sloppy mistakes on offense.

Ravens 31, Chiefs 13

BALTIMORE • Backup quarterback Tyrod Taylor directed two fourth-quarter touchdown drives for Baltimore, the first ending with Jalen Parmele's go-ahead 10-yard touchdown run with 7:16 remaining.

completed eight of 13 passes for 95 yards, but produced 10 points in his three drives — a tying 4-yard touchdown pass to Terrance Copper late in the second quarter and a 12-play march culminating in a tiebreaking 30-yard field goal by Ryan Succop with 6:58 left in the third quarter.

Jaguars 15, Falcons 13

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. • David Garrard did little to solidify his starting spot and rookie Blaine Gabbert was equally unimpressive for the Jaguars.

Garrard completed 7 of 12 passes for 99 yards, with an interception in three series. Gabbert, the 10th pick in the April draft, completed 11 of 23 passes for 96 yards in seven series.

Harry Douglas turned a short crossing route into a 76-yard touchdown in the second quarter. Matt Ryan finished 7 of 15 for 116 yards.

Redskins 16, Colts 3

INDIANAPOLIS • One week after Rex Grossman's impressive performance, John Beck answered by leading the Redskins to four straight scores in the first half.

Beck's answer: 14 of 17 for 140 yards, no touchdowns and no interceptions against the defending AFC South champs. With Beck in the game, the Redskins outgained the Colts 277-41 in the first half, ran more than twice as many plays (41-14) and had two 50-plus yard runs.

National League Braves 4, D'Backs 2

ATLANTA • Derek Lowe combined with four relievers on a six-hitter and Atlanta hit three homers in a 4-2 victory over Arizona on Friday night in a matchup of NL playoff contenders.

Michael Bourn led off the bottom of the first with his first homer since coming to the Braves in a trade last month. Brian McCann added a two-run shot in the third, and Chipper Jones extended the lead in the sixth with his second homer in two nights.

Astros 6, Giants 0

HOUSTON • Wandy Rodriguez pitched eight innings and had a two-run single to lead Houston.

The Astros were leading 2-0 in the sixth when Carlos Corporan hit an RBI single with two outs and Rodriguez followed with a long single down the right field line on the first pitch from Ryan Vogelsong (10-3).

Cubs 5, Cardinals 4, 10 innings

CHICAGO • Tyler Colvin's RBI single in the bottom of the 10th off Octavio Dotel lifted Chicago to the victory.

Geovany Soto led off the inning with a single off Dotel (0-2), advanced to second on Marlon Byrd's sacrifice bunt, and scored on Colvin's hit to center field just hours after the Cubs fired general manager Jim Hendry.

cold November night in Reno that likely spoiled a Rose Bowl trip.

"It's keeping that perspective all the time. Not getting too high, not getting too low. You're constantly wanting to stay positive. I think that's a big thing that we always are positive and just enjoy the experience," Boise State's Heisman finalist quarterback Kellen Moore said. "Guys did a great job where there are these expectations, the outside noise, not to worry about that stuff, that stuff doesn't affect us, it's not benefiting us in any way. It's not affecting how we deal with the work we have to do."

Moore again is at the helm, going into his senior season with a chance to re-write the most important record in football: wins. He'll have a shot for at least 12 more and probably 13. He needs only eight to pass Colt McCoy's record of 45 as the most successful quarterback in college history.

If Moore is successful, he'll prove naysayers wrong in the process, those who believe his success was tied to a pair of NFL-caliber receivers in Titus Young and Austin Pettis, both now in the pros. But he'll need steady veterans like Shoemaker and Chris Potter to raise their production and young prospects Gerald Boledwijn, Aaron Burks and Moore's brother, Kirby, to quickly develop.

"For 10 years we operated not like we operated last year. That was a total anomaly. We had two NFL guys and how often does that happen?" Boise State coach Chris Petersen said.

Romance, Fair-style

Here are six ways to impress your date with a night at the fair.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

Forget staying in and watching a movie tonight.

The Gooding County Fair and Cassia County Fair wrap up today, but there is still time to get in a great date night. And, of course, the Twin Falls County Fair runs from Aug. 31-Sept. 5.

What is there to do? We picked the best ways to show your main squeeze a good time.

But don't neglect the simple things, said Cory Parish, manager of the Cassia County Fair. Take them on a romantic Ferris wheel ride, or "if they're brave enough to hold each others' hands, just strolling around the fairgrounds is a lot of fun," he said.

Get a dose of cowboy culture. Both the Gooding and Cassia fairs have rodeos tonight, and Twin Falls will have rodeo events scheduled throughout its fair week. If you go to the Gooding fair, check out the 12-by-16-foot screen for instant replays.

The Gooding County Fair has a Cowboy Hall of Fame exhibit, complete with photos and old cowboys who tell stories, said Sarah Zatica, a fair volunteer.

Dance. After tonight's rodeo, the Tony Marques Band will perform at the Gooding County Fair. Admission is free with a rodeo ticket. If you're 21 or older, grab a drink at the beer garden.

Impress your guy or gal by winning them a stuffed animal at the carnival booths. Or, if you're competitive, challenge them to multi-person games, like the water cannon races. The odds might not be in your favor, but if you can toss the ring on the bottle or shoot a ball through a hoop, you're sure to wow your paramour.

Check out motocross events. Play With Gravity, a motorcycle stunt team, will perform daily at the Twin Falls County Fair, and on Aug. 31, MD Extreme Motocross returns to the fair to show off their extreme tricks at Shouse Arena.

"That was really popular for four or five years," said fair manager John Pitz.

Treat them to fair food. You can stick with traditional fair fare, like the elephant ears, giant turkey legs and corn dogs.

"The Tater Pigs is pretty unique to our fair," Pitz said, referring to sausages wrapped in potatoes.

Want a nicer meal? Hit up the Montana Steak House booth at the Gooding County Fair, then swing by First Christian Church's cheese-cake booth.

"That's gonna be your high-end date night," Zatica said.

Get good blackmail material. Both the Cassia and Twin Falls county fairs have hypnotists who bring audience members on stage for the shows, scheduled throughout the day. If you're lucky, your date might end up convinced they're stuck to their chairs, or dancing to "It's Raining Men." (And if you're unlucky, it'll be you wearing the feather boa on stage.)

This Year's Back to School Trend? Higher Prices

NEW YORK (AP) • Stores are trying everything they can think of to disguise the fact that you're going to pay more for clothes this fall.

Some are using less fabric and calling it the new look. Others are adding cheap stitching and trumpeting it as a redesign. And the buttons on that blouse? Chances are you're not going to think it's worth paying several dollars more for the shirt just to have them.

Retailers are raising prices on merchandise an average of 10 percent this fall in an effort to offset their rising costs for materials and labor. But merchants are worried that cash-strapped customers who are weighed down by economic woes will balk at price hikes.

So, retailers are trying to raise prices without tipping off unsuspecting customers. "Let the consumer trick-ery begin," said Brian Sozzi, Wall Street Strategies retail analyst

Retailers have long tried to mask price hikes — for instance, jacking them up more than needed so that they can offer a "sale" on the higher price. But the new strategies come as merchants' production and labor costs are expected to rise 10 percent to 20 percent in the second half of the year after having remained low during most of the past two decades.

Stores already have passed along their rising costs to customers by raising prices on select items. But now that production costs are going up even higher, merchants are increasing prices on a broader range of merchandise. Because of their concern that shoppers will retreat, though, retailers are treading the line between

With the opening of a new laser tag arena in Twin Falls, youth and their parents have another option for family fun.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

What does a mermaid, spaceship, Rubik's Cube and the Perrine Bridge have in common?

They're all part of Laser Mania, a new family fun center that opens soon in Twin Falls.

The business is just one of a handful of places in the valley that, with a variety of games and other activities, cater to young people and families.

"There's not much for (youth) to do here in Twin Falls except go to the show and roller skate," said co-owner Rodney Waite. "And the shows are getting expensive."

With the opening of Laser Mania, Waite and the other owners — his wife, Edith, and their son and daughter-in-law Jarret and Jenna Waite — hope to offer more options for area families.

Here are some of the valley's current options of arcades, bounce houses, go-karts, miniature golf and other games:

Laser Mania

Jarrett Waite owns a similar family center in St. George, Utah, which he bought from his in-laws about three years ago. It's done very well in southern Utah — Jarret was nominated Operator of the Year by the International Laser Tag Association — and, with his parents in Twin Falls, he wanted to bring the same attraction to southern Idaho.

The city was supportive when the owners approached

(ABOVE) Macie Speirs, 3, plays miniature golf with her family Tuesday at Laser Mania, a new family fun center soon to open in Twin Falls. The center is one of a handful of businesses in the valley that cater to young people and their families with arcades and other games.

about licensing and zoning.

"They said 'This is something Twin Falls needs and we want you here,'" Jarrett said. Afterward, members of the planning department challenged city council members to a game of laser tag once the center opens.

The laser room is out of this world with its theme of comets and spaceships. And unlike some centers, parents can watch their kids play thanks to windows that look into the room from a nearby hallway.

Besides laser tag, the new center, located in the Lynwood Shopping Center next to Dollar Tree, has an arcade, party room, and miniature golf course that includes five-themed rooms with colorful three-dimensional wall paintings that include pictures of the Perrine Bridge and other area attractions, ocean themes, and a large Rubik's Cube. "We have the largest Rubik's Cube in the valley," Rodney said.

Tilt

If you like arcade games, you'll love Tilt.

Located inside the Magic Valley Mall near Shopko, Tilt attracts those who like to test their skills against computer-generated foes. Some are geared to children, others to teens.

"There's a lot of games here," said 12-year-old Cody Barnes.

"I like Wheel of Fortune best," said his 9-year-old sister, Ally.

The kids, along with their sister Lindsey, 11, come often to the arcade with their grandmother, Sharlene Tranmer.

"I think it's a good place for kids," Tranmer said. "It's entertaining and they feel like they get something for their efforts."

She was referring to the thousand or so tickets her grandchildren had earned from the games last week. They turn in the tickets for prizes.

While the arcade attracts a lot of youth, manager Jeff Egbert said adults also come to play. Recently, an 80-year-old couple came in to compete against each other on some of the video games, he said.

Information: 733-6878 or tilt.com.

Mardi Katz

Stroll down the mall a few yards and you'll come to Mardi Katz, an atmospheric play area that offers a variety of games for kids and their parents.

CHURCH NEWS

Lighthouse Fellowship Hosts Special Events

Lighthouse Christian Fellowship, 960 Eastland Drive, Twin Falls, is hosting special events this weekend.

The Compassion, Clarity and Confidence Ministry of Idaho will present two free seminars today with Joel Kramer, president of SourceFlix, film producer and author, providing evidence for an uncorrupted Bible through antiquity and archeology.

First, an "Indiana Joel" breakfast begins at 8:30 a.m., which is by donation only. The seminar begins at 9:30 a.m. Kramer's newest documentary, "The Sacrifice," a 30-minute film, will be shown at 11 a.m., followed by a question and answer period. The film reveals the perfect atonement of man's sins by Christ on the Cross for the requirement set out by God in Leviticus 17:11.

"The Valley of Decision" salad bar and Shawarma lunch will begin at 12:30 p.m., which is by donation only.

Chip Thompson, author of "The Mormon Scrapbook," missionary and president of Tri-Grace Ministries of Ephraim, Utah, will present the second seminar. He will focus on effective witnessing through sharing the truth in love with our LDS family, friends and co-workers. He developed the Jesus Survey and teaches the seminar participants how to share "The Impossible Gospel."

The evening SourceFlix banquet and auction begins at 6 p.m. Cost is $25 per person, which includes dinner and a personal copy of "The Sacrifice." Kramer will speak, followed by a premier showing of "The Sacrifice," along with silent and live auctions. Registration is available at the door.

Kramer will be the special speaker at both 9 and 11 a.m. services Sunday at the church.

"The Sacrifice" will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Lighthouse auditorium. Kramer will be available for questions after the film.

All of Kramer's documentaries will be available after each service and event.

Information: Lighthouse Christian Fellowship at 737-4667, or Compassion, Clarity and Confidence at 961-1620.

Church Meets at City Park

Church on a Mission will hold a "Celebration Sunday" at 10:30 a.m. Sunday in the northwest corner of the Twin Falls City Park (Sixth and Shoshone).

Willie Kinsey will perform a special song. All are welcome.

Ascension Church Previews Fall Education Program

Ascension Episcopal Church will preview the upcoming fall 2011 Christian Education program at 9 a.m. Sunday in the Memorial Room. Information about both the Sunday morning Youth Christian Education classes and the Wednesday evening LOGOS program conducted in conjunction with the Presbyterian Church will be presented. A video of the LOGOS program will be shown.

Holy Communion will take place at 8 a.m., with Pastor Deb Seles celebrating.

Kids Summer Sunday begins at 10 a.m. for children through fifth grade.

Services of Holy Baptism and Holy Eucharist will be held at 10 a.m., with the baptism of Zoe Lynn O'Connor.

Ascension Episcopal Church, 371 Eastland Drive N., Twin Falls, is handicap accessible. Information: www.ascension.episcopal-idaho.org or 733-1248.

Burley Church Holds Kick-off Event

The Mountain View Christian Center, 317 W. 27th St. in Burley, will hold a "Welcome Back to Family Night" kick-off from 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The event includes dinner, games and fun. Cost is $5 per person; ages 3 and under eat free.

Information: Staci Hobbs, 670-3211.

Methodists Hold Ice Cream Social

The Rupert United Methodist Church will hold its annual Ice Cream Social at 6 p.m. Sunday on the front lawn at the church, 605 H St.

A variety of homemade ice cream, cakes and drinks will be available. Entertainment will be by Jim Stockberger, Idaho Youth Ranch manager, who will share information about the Idaho Youth Ranch and perform at the piano.

The community is invited. Bring your friends and neighbors! Information: 436-3354.

Minidoka DUP Hosts Seminar

The Minidoka Company of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers will host a DUP Camp Officer Training Seminar at 10 a.m. Aug. 29 at the Rupert LDS Stake Center, 324 E. 18th St.

All camp officers are invited. Camps in the Minidoka Company include Syringa, Sagebrush Beauties, Snake River, Star Bright and Indian Paint Brush.

The theme for the 2011 to 2012 year is "Preserve the Past — Strengthen the Future." Camp meetings will begin in September and go through May 2012.

Information: DeAnn Goodwin, 731-7154.

Birthing a New Work for the Lord

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE

Times-News correspondent

Grace Community Church in Rupert believes worship should be a time when everyone has an opportunity to share in the promises of God's blessings.

A heart to bring the gospel to those who may not have heard its message or feel disconnected in a formal church setting is behind efforts to extend the congregation's non-denominational outreach to the Twin Falls area.

Grace Community Church Twin Falls will begin holding services at 10 a.m. Sunday in the Red Lion Inn Willow Room. In an effort to reach across all generations, worship will be a mix of the traditional and contemporary music as well as biblical teaching and preaching.

"Jesus shows the disciples in his Matthew 5 Sermon on the Mount how the church should be," said Associate Pastor Randy Gardner. "The burden of drugs, alcohol and other things have left a lot of people feeling lost."

Gardner, who will serve as pastor for the Twin location knows the crushing weight of drug abuse. As a young man pursuing the lifestyle in a rock band, he fell under the influence of a speed addiction. But the downward spiral stopped when he and wife Annette attended an Easter church service. Since then, his musical talents have been directed by a spirit of praise for the Lord.

"Things actually began to change with my grandmother, who was always praying for us, then we both answered that alter call in 1975," Gardner said. "I've been a minister now for the last 20 years and associate pastor at Grace Community in Rupert for a year and a half."

Gardner and Senior Pastor Travis Turner plan on mixing things up a little by trading pulpits once each month.

"This is really one church with two locations where we want the body of believers to feel like family," Turner said. "We're birthing a new work in a family that believes, belongs to, and serves God."

Family fun

Camden Stadelmeir, 6, and her cousin Tai Walker, 8, were at the facility this week playing on the nine-hole miniature-golf course.

That's Tai's favorite game.

The business also has 13 game stations set up with Wii and Xbox games — some, like Shrek, geared for young kids, while others appeal to a more mature audience. There's a small bowling alley for children and pool tables for teens and older folks.

Mini-golf is probably the most popular, said employee Anthony Vest. Some of the holes are easy, some are more difficult.

"It's fun," said Julene Walker, who was there with her grand kids, Camden and Tai. "We come out more in winter, but summer is still fun. It gives something for the kids to do."

Information: 293-8796.

Hop 2 It

Kids like to jump whether it's on beds, trampolines or in a bounce house.

Hop 2 It, 2042 Fourth Ave., Twin Falls, helps young kids get the bounce out by providing a number of different bounce houses in an indoor setting.

Leslie Hughes brings her two granddaughters, ages 6 and 8, to the Twin Falls business several times a month. Hughes visits with other patrons in the air-conditioned arena, while she watches the kids jump in the eight inflatable houses.

The business also accommodates groups and birthday parties.

"It's an economical way to spend an afternoon," Hughes said, noting that a month's pass cost her $32.

Hop 2 It is geared toward a younger crowd, said shift manager Bri Straub, appealing best to those ages 2 to 12. But older kids have been known to come and play, too.

Information: 733-0409 or hop2it-party.com.

NazzKart

You can tell when someone gets done riding a go-kart because of the smiles on their faces.

There's a lot of smiles at NazzKart, 302 Third St. S., Twin Falls, which offers a 700-foot go-kart track with cars that can go nearly 40 mph.

"Speed isn't regulated here," said manager Homer Jaynes. "You can go as fast or slow as you want."

The nice thing about NazzKart is that it offers more to do than just drive: Climb the indoor rock-climbing wall, play ping-pong, pool or miniature golf. It even has a bounce house for the young.

The facility, which attracts a lot of teens and young adults, also has a concessions stand. This is not for young people only, though, as many adults and party groups visit. The business also has a license to sell beer and wine.

"It might not be your first choice," Jaynes said, "but it offers universal attractions for the family."

Party Hardy

There's more to do than just bounce at Party Hardy in Heyburn.

Located in the old Heyburn Elementary School at 1430 17th St., the business offers a variety of bounce houses, but also entertainment rooms geared for specific age groups. Some of the things the business prides itself on are its bug room, doll house, puppet shows, and interactive games.

The bug room, which teaches kids about insects, is geared to those ages 2 to 4 but teens often are found wandering inside the room, said owner Dawn Lage.

The business rents bounce houses and hosts birthday parties. "The only thing parents have to do is send out the invitations, show up and pay the bill," Lage said. "We do all the rest."

Prices

style, quality and price.

Some merchants are making inexpensive tweaks — additional stitching, fake button holes, fancy tags — to justify price increases. Those embellishments can add pennies to $1 to the cost of a garment, but retailers can charge $10 more for them, said Marshal Cohen, chief industry analyst with market research firm The NPD Group.

"We're not seeing deflation or inflation; we're seeing conflation," he said. "Stores are making consumers believe their getting more for their money."

After the price of the fabric for its girl's corduroy pants almost doubled, catalog retailer Lands' End, based in Dodgeville, Wis., raised the price of the pants by $7 to $34.50. The company, a unit of Sears Holdings Corp., also added buttons and stitching on the pockets to dress them up.

Others are taking away things, but marketing it to customers as the latest trend.

Teen retailer Abercrombie & Fitch is advertising "Redesigned 2012" jean collection in its stores and on its website, touting that the jeans are "softer, with the perfect amount of stretch." They're also mostly priced between $78 and $88, about $10 more than last year, according to Jennifer Black, who heads up research firm Jennifer Black & Associates.

Sozzi, the Wall Street Strategies retail analyst, examined the jeans and believes they are "thinner" and of "cheaper quality." That extra stretch, he says, simply could mean the retailer is saving costs by using less denim.

OBITUARIES

Rodney Robbins

Jan. 4, 1937-Aug. 18, 2011

RUPERT • Rodney Robbins, 74, of Rupert passed away Thursday, Aug. 18, 2011, at home.

Rodney was born Jan. 4, 1937, in Rupert, Idaho, to Hyrum H. and Laura (Barthlome) Robbins. He lived in Dubois, Idaho, as a young boy and had the fondest memories of being a kid there. Most of his adult life was spent in Rupert. He married Tonya Kay Noble on Nov. 21, 1957, and their marriage was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on Nov. 21, 1974.

Rod lived and worked as a cattle foreman in Muldoon for Flattop Sheep and Cattle Company for several years. The last several years he worked at Schows Trucking for Steve Schow. He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Rod enjoyed braiding bridal reins and head stalls. He loved ranching and working with cattle. Rod always said, "If it couldn't be done from the back of a horse then it wasn't worth doing."

Rod is survived by his wife, Tonya K. Robbins; his children, Lynda Robbins, Kyle (Patty) Robbins, Joel

V. (Dana) Robbins and Larissa (Danny) Martineau; his grandchildren, Jacob R. Port, Jarod R. Port, Chance T. Robbins, Braden Graham, Kassidy Martineau; and three step-grandchildren, Branden Adams, Taylor Adams and Kenny Petersen; his brothers, Milton Robbins and Leo Robbins; and his sister, Verlee Frost.

Rod was preceded in death by his parents, Hyrum and Laura Robbins; his brothers, Gerald, Lovell, Gene and Max; and his sisters, Gwen Stevenson, Lula Short and Rae Bosworth Lewis.

Rod's family would like to give many, many thanks to the angels of Minidoka Home Health and Hospice. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Minidoka Home Health and Hospice in Rod's memory.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Aug. 22, with a family gathering one hour prior to the service at the Acequia LDS 2nd Ward. Viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 21, at the Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel.

Fact Check: Recession is Culprit in High U.S. Debt

BY TOM RAUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • It's the loud and clear consensus of Republicans in Congress and on the presidential campaign trail: Runaway government spending is the problem, not taxes.

But the math isn't so simple. The number at the heart of the battle cry of the Republicans and their tea party allies — that federal spending has risen to an alarming 25 percent of the economy — is skewed by recession dynamics.

In recessions, federal spending always goes up and tax revenues go down. And the economy contracts in recessions, shrinking the gross domestic product, which is the total output of goods and services and the broadest measure of the economy's health.

Republicans are calling for sweeping spending cuts and want to hold the line on taxes, even as the U.S. struggles through one of its slowest recoveries since the Great Depression. The jobless rate has been stuck for months at more than 9 percent. With the economy slowing again, the odds of a new recession seem to be increasing.

While spending's share of the GDP might be at a post-World War II high, tax revenues have fallen to 14.4 percent of the index, the lowest since 1950.

This disparity between what comes in and what goes out plays into the Republican argument about runaway spending.

But it also reflects the mathematical reality that during recessions, tax revenues go down sharply because people and companies make less money and so pay less in taxes. Federal spending goes up, even before stimulus programs, with an increasing demand for government help from food stamps and unemployment compensation and other safety-net programs.

At the same time, the negative economic growth associated with recessions lowers the GDP number on the bottom of the equation, further boosting the ratio of spending to GDP.

Since 1970, federal spending has averaged just over 21 percent of GDP while tax revenues have averaged over 19 percent.

The last time since World War II that federal spending exceeded 23 percent of GDP was in 1982 and 1983, when it rose to 23.1 percent and 23.5 percent, respectively, during what was then called the worst recession since the Great Depression. A Republican, Ronald Reagan, was president, and he was hardly anyone's idea of a tax-and-spend liberal.

Federal spending is even higher now as a percentage of GDP, but not by much — just between 1 and 2 percentage points. That reflects the fact that the most recent recession was far deeper than the 1981-82 downturn, which lasted 16 months.

Phoenix Gets Third Dramatic Dusty 'Haboob' in Six Weeks

BY JACQUES BILLEAUD
and TERRY TANG

Associated Press

PHOENIX • A thick cloud of dust has swallowed Phoenix at sundown three times this summer, covering the city with grit and baffling even longtime residents who can't remember seeing so many dramatic "haboobs" during a monsoon season.

A 1,000-foot-high wall of dust traveled at least 50 miles into metro Phoenix and neighboring Pinal County on Thursday evening before dissipating.

It turned the skies brown, reduced visibility, created dangerous driving conditions and caused some airline flights to be delayed. The storm, also known by the Arabic word haboob, also coated anything left outside in a thin layer of fine dirt and left some people who walked outside for a minute or two with grit between their teeth.

Danny Shepherd, a deejay who was driving to a gig at a coffee house during the storm, has lived in metropolitan Phoenix since 1989 and can't recall so many big dust storms in one year. "They're typical but I also think there's been a lot more this year — big ones and small ones and the haboob, the grand-daddy of them all," Shepherd said.

National Weather Service meteorologist Ken Waters said the area is experiencing a typical number of dust storms this year, but what sets this season apart from others is the size and power of three of the storms.

"Each year, you are going to get some variety of the dust storms," Waters said. "We don't see a single causative factor for why they seem to be stronger this year."

Critters Moving Away from Global Warming Faster

BY SETH BORENSTEIN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Animals across the world are fleeing global warming by heading north much faster than they were less than a decade ago, a new study says.

About 2,000 species examined are moving away from the equator at an average rate of more than 15 feet per day, about a mile per year, according to new research published Thursday in the journal Science which analyzed previous studies. Species are also moving up mountains to escape the heat, but more slowly, averaging about 4 feet a year.

The species — mostly from the Northern Hemisphere and including plants — moved in fits and starts, but over several decades it averages to about 8 inches an hour away from the equator.

"The speed is an important issue," said study main author Chris Thomas of the University of York. "It is faster than we thought."

Included in the analysis was a 2003 study that found species moving north at a rate of just more than a third of a mile per year and up at a rate of 2 feet a year. Camille Parmesan of the University of Texas, who conducted that study, said the new research makes sense because her data ended around the late 1990s and the 2000s were far hotter.

Federal weather data show the last decade was the hottest on record, and 2010 tied with 2005 for the hottest year on record. Gases from the burning of fossil fuel, especially carbon dioxide, are trapping heat in the atmosphere, warming the Earth and changing the climate in several ways, according to the overwhelming majority of scientists and the world's top scientific organizations.

As the temperatures soared in the 2000s, the species studied moved faster to cooler places, Parmesan said. She pointed specifically to the city copper butterfly in Europe and the purple emperor butterfly in Sweden. The comma butterfly in Great Britain has moved more than 135 miles in 21 years, Thomas said.

It's "independent confirmation that the climate is changing," Parmesan said.

One of the faster moving species is the British spider silometopus, Thomas said. In 25 years, the small spider has moved its home range more than 200 miles north, averaging 8 miles a year, he said.

Stanford University biologist Terry Root, who wasn't part of this study but praised it as clever and conservative, points to another species, the American pika, a rabbitlike creature that has been studied in Yellowstone National Park for more than a century. The pika didn't go higher than 7,800 feet in 1900, but in 2004 they were seen at 9,500 feet, she said.

Moohunt: Runaway Cow Captures Hearts in Germany

BY KIRSTEN
GRIESHABER

Associated Press

BERLIN • A runaway cow named Yvonne is on the loose in Germany and the manhunt — or moohunt — for the Bavarian bovine has captivated the country.

The freedom-loving cow ran away from a little farm in Bavaria in May and has managed to hide successfully in the forests of southern Germany ever since — despite her sturdy 1,500-pound (700-kilogram) figure.

Locals have reported a few sightings of the brown dairy cow with the white head, but every time search teams have tried to capture her, Yvonne had already hoofed it from the area. A helicopter equipped with a thermal camera used in search-and-rescue missions returned Thursday empty-handed.

Searchers have tried to lure Yvonne into the open with food, with the bellows of her son Friesi and her sister Waltraud, even with a prospective mate named Ernst. Scores of volunteers are combing upper Bavaria's woods for her.

The six-year-old animal would have never made national headlines if it hadn't been for a near-collision with a police car days after she broke away. The rural district office in Muehldorf reacted by labeling the big-eyed bovine a public danger and ordering her shot on sight.

That prompted animal-rights activists to rally to her defense. A Facebook page calling for Yvonne's rescue had more than 23,000 "likes" by Friday, and Germany's biggest-selling newspaper, Bild, has offered a (euro) 10,000 ($14,369) award on its front page for anyone who helps find Yvonne.

In the wake of all the attention, the order to shoot Yvonne has been suspended.

A Bavarian animal sanctuary has bought Yvonne from her former owners — sight unseen, of course — and is taking the lead in trying to rescue her. "We're hot on her tail," it reported Friday.

Meanwhile, a song by local band Gnadenkapelle has become an instant radio hit.

"Why don't you leave Yvonne alone, she's only a runaway cow... You wild cow, don't let them take your freedom," they sing.

Before construction on a permanent location is completed, a modular office will open to the public on Monday. The new branch, at 476 Cheney Drive W., will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Fridays. The drive-through banking window will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays. The branch will be closed Saturdays. Branch employees include: loan officer/operations supervisor Audrey DiPietro, retail operations coordinator Kristi Mower, customer service representative Kiley Johnson and teller Tiffany Loosli. Starting Monday, the branch may be reached at 933-2071 or by fax at 933-2073. First Federal operates 11 locations in the Magic Valley, now including five in Twin Falls.

NEW YORK • A growing belief that the U.S. economy is headed toward recession gave the stock market its fourth straight week of losses.

The anxiety in the market was obvious Friday as the major indexes went from modest gains early in the day to another sharp loss. The Dow Jones industrial average had its 10th move of more than 100 points this month.

“We just don’t know whether we’re going to have a recession,” said John Burke, head of Burke Financial Strategies.

There was little news to help investors determine their next moves. JPMorgan Chase & Co. joined other financial firms and cut its forecast for economic growth during the fourth quarter. It’s now predicting growth of 1 percent, down from an earlier forecast of 2.5 percent. That added to the recession fears.

Investors reacted to the news from late Thursday that Hewlett-Packard Co. was planning to exit most of its consumer businesses, including PCs. HP fell 20 percent to a six-year low as investors showed their misgivings about its plan to transform itself into a company that caters to corporations.

The market rose in early trading, but some investors did not want to take the chance of holding stocks if bad news came out of Europe over the weekend. So they began selling during the afternoon. European in-

Burger King Retires Mascot ‘The King’

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) • The king is dead.

Burger King’s spooky “The King” mascot is retiring so the struggling burger chain can refocus its marketing to reach new customers. The mascot has been around for years, but recently has become a more prevalent and somewhat creepy presence in ads — showing up in people’s beds and peeping in their windows.

The fast food chain, which has suffered declining sales, will roll out a new advertising campaign this weekend that will focus on its burgers sans “The King.” The campaign is the first since Burger King switched advertising agencies in July.

“We won’t be seeing The King for a while,” a Burger King spokesman said.

Gold Hits a New High • Investors flocked to gold Friday, sending it to the latest of a series of records, as fears about recession in the world’s major economies infected financial markets. The metal soared as high as $1,881.40 an ounce. It’s been on a tear this summer, rising more than 15 percent in August alone. In the same three weeks, the Standard & Poor’s 500-stock index has fallen about 12 percent. Gold logged its biggest weekly gain since February 2009, according to FactSet data. The last time gold was worth less than $1,000 an ounce was October 2009.

Stock Markets Fall as Traders Worry About New Recession

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traders work on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange Friday.

vestors were also cautious — banking stocks fell near two-and-a-half-year lows, dragged down by rumors about banks’ potential losses on bonds issued by heavily-indebted governments.

“These things usually break out over the weekend and then you have a mad dash Monday to react to them,” said Mike McGervey, the head of McGervey Wealth Management.

The drop late in the day recalled the 2008 financial crisis. Then, many investors stepped up their selling in the afternoon out of fears about news that might break overnight. Or on weekends — Lehman Brothers failed on Sunday, Sept. 15. The government took over mortgage companies Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac the previous weekend.

Although stocks fell, investors did not continue pushing the price of Treasuries, as they have the last three weeks. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note rose to 2.07 percent from late Thursday’s 2.06 percent.

Regulator Considers Intermountain Gas Rate Reduction

TIMES-NEWS

Whether you just want to say “Great,” or if you have a more substantive comment about Intermountain Gas Co.’s proposal to reduce its rates, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission wants to hear from you.

The state’s utility regulatory commission will accept comments through Sept. 21 on an Intermountain Gas proposal that could save residential customers an average of $2.17 per month on their bills.

Intermountain wants to decrease the variable portion of natural gas rates, the annual Purchases Gas Cost Adjustment, by an average 5.3 percent starting on Oct. 1, according to a PUC release.

Company officials say supplies of gas nationwide continue to remain strong,

After Insulin Pump Hacking, Lawmakers Seek Security Review

Idaho computer security expert demonstrates medical device's vulnerability by hacking into pump, giving it unauthorized commands.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) •

Two lawmakers are requesting a review of the government's security standards for wireless medical devices after a diabetic discovered how to remotely reprogram his and other people's insulin pumps.

Reps. Anna Eshoo of California and Edward Markey of Massachusetts, both Democrats, asked the Government Accountability Office, the investigative arm of Congress, to evaluate the Federal Communications Commission's efforts to identify the risks of implants and other medical devices that use wireless communications technologies.

They cited new research by Jay Radcliffe, a 33-year-old computer security expert from Idaho, who demonstrated at a conference this month that he could hack into an insulin pump he wears on his body and get it to respond to an unauthorized remote control.

He didn't identify the specific vulnerabilities that allowed him to perform the attack, but has privately alerted the device maker — which he did not name — about the issues. Others are likely vulnerable as well.

The techniques raise the possibility of someone roaming a hospital's halls performing sinister attacks. Diabetics could get too much or too little insulin, a hormone they need for proper metabolism.

Similar attacks have also been shown against pacemakers and defibrillators.

Radcliffe told The AP that he experienced "sheer terror" upon finding that "there's no security around the devices which are a very active part of keeping me alive."

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has said that any medical device with wireless communication components can fall victim to eavesdropping. It warns device makers that they are responsible for securing their equipment.

Eshoo and Markey wrote in a letter dated Monday that they would like the GAO to investigate the extent to which the FCC, which establishes technical requirements for radio communications, is ensuring the safety of wireless medical devices and coordinating with the FDA.

Texting, Grand Theft Auto Style: Car Alarms, GPS Devices Pose Risk

BY JORDAN ROBERTSON
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • Texting and driving don't go well together — though not in the way you might think.

Computer hackers can force some cars to unlock their doors and start their engines without a key by sending specially crafted messages to a car's anti-theft system. They can also snoop at where you've been by tapping the car's GPS system.

That is possible because car alarms, GPS systems and other devices are increasingly connected to cellular telephone networks and thus can receive commands through text messaging. That capability allows owners to change settings on devices remotely, but it also gives hackers a way in.

Researchers from ISEC Partners recently demonstrated such an attack on a Subaru Outback equipped with a vulnerable alarm system, which wasn't identified. With a laptop perched on the hood, they sent the Subaru's alarm system commands to unlock the doors and start the engine.

Their findings show that text messaging is no longer limited to short notes telling friends you're running late or asking if they're free for dinner.

Texts are a powerful means of attack because the devices that receive them generally cannot refuse texts and the commands encoded in them. Users can't block texts; only operators of the phone networks can.

These devices are assigned phone numbers just like fax machines. So if you can find the secret phone

Texting Threat to Vehicle Security

THE THREAT: Computer hackers can force some cars to unlock their doors and start their engines without a key. They can also snoop at where you've been by tapping the car's GPS system.

HOW IT'S DONE: Car alarms, GPS systems and other devices are increasingly connected to cellular telephone networks and thus can receive commands through text messaging. That capability allows owners to change settings on devices remotely, but it also gives hackers a way in.

number attached to a particular device, you can throw it off by sending your own commands through text messaging.

Although these numbers are only supposed to be known by the devices' operators, they aren't impossible to find. Certain network-administration programs allow technicians to probe networks to see what kinds of devices are on them. Based on the format of the responses, the type and even model of the device can be deduced. Hackers can use that information to craft attacks against devices they know are vulnerable. (In this case, the researchers bypassed these steps and simply took the alarm system out of the car to identify the secret phone number.)

Actually stealing a car

wouldn't be so easy.

You'd have to ensure that the phone number you found is attached to the car you're standing in front of, for instance. There are hacking tools to do that — they listen for cellular traffic around a particular vehicle — but in many cases it's easier to take a car that doesn't have an alarm.

The research from Don Bailey and Mat Solnik is unsettling because it shows that such attacks are possible on a variety of other devices that use wireless communications chips. Those include ATMs, medical devices and even traffic lights. Hackers have already sent specially crafted texts with commands to instantly disconnect iPhones from the cellular network.

Bailey, whose specialty is cellphone network security, also found that similar techniques can be used to get a certain type of GPS system to cough up its location data. Such information can be used by stalkers or home burglars, for instance.

The type of GPS system he studied is known as assisted GPS, which means that it uses cellular signals in addition to the usual satellite signals. That makes the system vulnerable.

The research isn't just about taking off with someone else's car or finding out where that person has been.

It raises the possibility of other, more sinister dangers, such as those potentially affecting braking and acceleration, said Scott Borg, director of the U.S. Cyber Consequences Unit, a group that studies hacking threats. That becomes possible as networked electronics are more tightly coupled with physical machinery.

ATTENTION HOME BUYERS AND SELLERS

With over 300 Realtors in the Magic Valley to choose from, who is going to look out for your best interests when buying or selling a home?

John P. Irwin, Realtor

In todays real estate market, its important to work with an established, knowledgeable and trusted real estate agent. An agent who understands the local market, can explain the many options available to you, and who has the genuine concern for you and your success.

John Irwin of Canyonside Irwin Realty is a highly respected agent in the community and among his peers. He has over 23 years of successfully helping families achieve their dreams of owning a home. And John takes great pride of his involvement with the community and civic services.

You can feel at ease in knowing that John will help explain and guide you through the complete home buying or selling process. No high pressure. He helps you gather all the necessary information you need. You make the informed decisions. Call John to set up an appointment, talk to him, and see for yourself why he is one of the most respected and helpful Realtors in the Magic Valley.

Know who is looking out for your best interest...

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"There is no mistake; there has been no mistake; and there shall be no mistake."

— Duke of Wellington

In the 2007 Invitational Lederer Memorial Trophy, held in London and sponsored by Bernard Teltscher and the Young Chelsea Bridge Club, Norman Selway, of the Young Chelsea Champions team, took the "Best-Played Hand" award.

A club or low diamond lead would have defeated Selway's heart game, but West, naturally enough, chose the trump four, to the five, 10 and queen. Now there was no possibility of playing a crossruff to take seven tricks from the trump suit, so Selway started on the right track in an attempt to cut the defenders' communications when he advanced a diamond from hand. He chose the jack, and when West covered with the queen, correctly allowed it to hold. The trump return was won in dummy; then came the diamond ace and a diamond ruff. A club to the ace allowed North's last diamond to be trumped, and a club to the king permitted the outstanding trump to be drawn. At that point declarer had eight of the first nine tricks.

Next came a spade to the 10, and West's jack was the second trick for the defense. Selway's final move was his refusal to ruff West's spade ace, discarding a club loser. West was now end-played into giving declarer access to his orphaned spade king in hand, and dummy's last trump was Selway's 10th trick.

Of all the declarers to reach four hearts, Selway was the only one to make it.

ANSWER: It would be nice if you could double, fold up your cards, and end the auction. Alas, a double here would show cards -- more takeout than penalties. On that basis, maybe your best bet is to give up on the penalty and simply bid one no-trump, which gets your side into a sensible contract.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE SIXTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF POWER

Case No. CV 2011-208
NOTICE OF PETITION FOR JUDICIAL EXAMINATION AND HEARING
ABERDEEN-AMERICAN FALLS GROUND WATER DISTRICT, BINGHAM GROUND WATER DISTRICT, MAGIC VALLEY GROUND WATER DISTRICT and NORTH SNAKE GROUND WATER DISTRICT Petitioners.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Petitioners, ABERDEEN-AMERICAN FALLS GROUND WATER DISTRICT, BINGHAM GROUND WATER DISTRICT, MAGIC VALLEY GROUND WATER DISTRICT, and NORTH SNAKE GROUND WATER DISTRICT, (collectively referred to as "Petitioners" or "Ground Water Districts") have filed in the above-entitled Court a Petition for Judicial Examination ("Petition") pursuant to Idaho Code §42-5235. The Petition seeks a judicial examination by the District Court confirming the power of the Ground Water Districts acting through their respective Boards of Directors to incur indebtedness of up to thirty-five million dollars ($35,000,000) for the purpose of purchasing certain real property, water rights and fish production facilities situated in Gooding and Jerome Counties, Idaho commonly known as Blue Lakes Trout, Rim View Trout and Clear Lake pursuant to a Purchase and Sale Agreement with Blue Lakes Trout Company, LLC, an Idaho limited liability company, Rim View, LLC, an Idaho limited liability company, Clear Lake Trout Co., Inc., an Idaho Corporation, Hardy Properties, L.P. An Idaho limited partnership, and Rainbow Trout Farms, Inc., an Idaho corporation, to levy assessments against the members of the Districts sufficient to repay the principal and interest on the indebtedness which will become liens against the land of the members of the Ground Water Districts to secure payment of the proposed indebtedness.

The Petition seeks approval of securing financing by means of revenue bonds issued by the Board payable over a period not to exceed thirty (30) years at an interest rate that will not be known until the issuance and sale of the bonds or financing from commercial banks and/or other sources. The Prayer for the Petition asks for the following relief:

- A. That the District Court examine this Petition and make a judicial determination confirming the power of the Ground Water Districts acting through their respective Boards of Directors to incur the indebtedness of up to thirty-five million dollars ($35,000,000) to the Idaho Water Resource Board, or from commercial or other lenders in the form of revenue bonds, loans or other instruments of indebtedness as necessary to close and complete the Trout Farms Purchase, to levy assessments against their members over a term not to exceed thirty (30) years sufficient to repay the principal and interest on the indebtedness which will become first priority liens against the land of their member groundwater users, second only to liens for the payment of real property taxes pursuant to I.C. §42-5240, and to secure repayment of the proposed indebtedness.
- B. That the District Court make a judicial determination that the Ground Water Districts have authority to enter into such agreements, loans and to execute such documents as may be reasonable and necessary to carry out and implement the forgoing transactions.
- C. That the District Court issue an order approving the Notice of Petition and Hearing and direct the clerk of the court to complete service upon the members of the Ground Water Districts by U.S. Mail, postage prepaid and by publication as required by law by filing of this Petition and by mailing the Notice of Petition and Hearing.
- D. For such other and further relief as the District Court deems just and equitable. The Exhibits to the Petition include, a summary of the purchased assets with appraised values, summary of purchased water rights, Idaho Water Resource Board Inducement Resolution evidencing an intent to proceed with issuance water resource development bonds, proposed form bond, projected annual payments for each Ground Water District and respective ownership percentage and estimated annual costs per Ground Water District. Copies of the Petition and attached exhibits may be obtained from the Clerk of the Court or by contacting the Districts by phone or at their offices as follows:

Emily Haynes, Secretary Magic Valley GWD PO Box 430 Paul, Idaho 83347 Phone: (208) 532-4175	Joyce Moreno, Secretary North Snake GWD 152 E. Main Street Jerome, Idaho 83338 Phone: (208) 324-8995

Advertising Salesperson & Recruitment Salesperson

The Times-News is seeking two professional advertising salespeople; one outside sales for retail advertising and one inside sales for recruitment advertising. The principal duty of these salespeople will be to sell. The secondary duty will be to sell. You'll sell 'win-win' print, online and mobile advertising packages offered by the Times-News, www.magicvalley.com and a variety of specialty and niche publications. But what you'll really be selling is solutions to local business owners who may also need your assistance in discovering just what solutions they need.

The Successful Candidate will demonstrate:

- success in relentlessly prospecting to get new business;
- a natural inquisitiveness about what constitutes customer success and an ability to ask open-ended, thought-provoking questions;
- a pattern of success in marketplaces that are extremely competitive;
- the ability to consistently listen;
- an ongoing history of success in a fast-paced business;
- an assertive approach to achieving revenue and customer satisfaction goals;
- the ability to communicate personal, quantifiable components of customer service excellence.

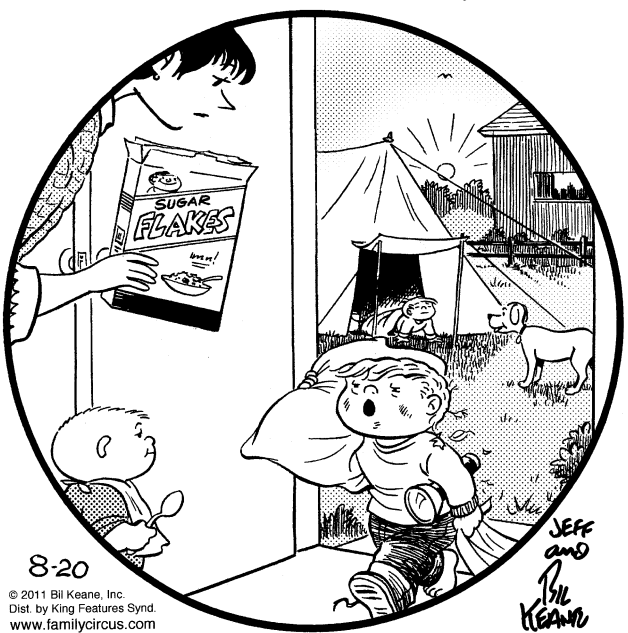

Past sales experience may be helpful but possessing innate curiosity and a competitive approach is far more important. The Times-News offers an excellent benefit package including medical, dental, vision, life, paid vacation and sick days, flexible spending account(s) and a 401(k) program.

Please apply online at www.magicvalley.com/workhere before Saturday, July 30, 2011.

Today is Saturday, Aug. 20, the 232nd day of 2011. There are 133 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:
On Aug. 20, 1911, The New York Times sent a message around the world by regular commercial cable to see how long it would take; the dispatch, which said simply, "Times, New York: This message sent around world. Times," was filed at 7 p.m. and returned to its point of origin 16½ minutes later.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1833, Benjamin Harrison, 23rd president of the United States, was born in North Bend, Ohio.

In 1866, President Andrew Johnson formally declared the Civil War over, months after fighting had stopped.

In 1882, Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" had its premiere in Moscow.

In 1910, a series of forest fires swept through parts of Idaho, Montana and Washington, killing at least 85 people and burning some 3 million acres.

In 1920, pioneering American radio station 8MK in Detroit (later WWJ) began daily broadcasting.

In 1940, during World War II, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill paid tribute to the Royal Air Force before the House of Commons, saying, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

In 1955, hundreds of people were killed in anti-French rioting in Morocco and Algeria.

In 1968, the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact nations began invading Czechoslovakia to crush the "Prague Spring" liberalization drive.

In 1977, the U.S. launched Voyager 2, an unmanned spacecraft carrying a 12-inch copper phonograph record containing greetings in dozens of languages, samples of music and sounds of nature.

In 1981, Michael Devine, a member of the Irish National Liberation Army, died after a 60-day hunger strike at the Maze Prison in Northern Ireland; he was the tenth and last hunger-striker to die that year.

Ten years ago: Nikolay Solty's, a 27-year-old Ukrainian immigrant in Sacramento, Calif., fled after killing his wife and five other relatives. (Solty's was later captured, but ended up committing suicide in his jail cell.) Sir Fred Hoyle, the astronomer who coined the term "Big Bang" but never accepted that theory for the origin of the universe, died in Bournemouth, England, at age 86. Actress Kim Stanley died in Santa Fe, N.M., at age 76.

Five years ago: John Mark Karr, the suspect in the death of 6-year-old JonBenet Ramsey, sipped champagne and dined on fried king prawns in business class of Thai Airways as he was flown to the U.S. (Although he'd implicated himself in JonBenet's slaying, Karr was later cleared.) Former Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, who'd taken the iconic Iwo Jima flag-raising picture during World War II, died in Novato, Calif., at age 94. Tiger Woods won the PGA Championship, closing with a 4-under 68 for a 5-shot victory over Shaun Micheel and his 12th career major.

One year ago: President Barack Obama invited Israel and the Palestinians to meet face-to-face in Washington for talks aimed at achieving a historic agreement to establish an independent Palestinian state and secure peace for Israel.

DEAR ABBY: I love my grandmother, but she constantly puts my grandpa down, even in front of the family. I know some of the harsh words she uses could be resentment built up over the years from past hurts. Still, if she talks so rudely to him when we're around, I wonder what she says when they're alone.

Grandma loves her family very much, especially the two of us grandkids. It just hurts that she's so mean to Grandpa. Immediately after she insults him, I'll ask her why she did it, but she acts like she has done nothing wrong.

I know it must hurt my grandfather to be treated that way so often by the woman he's been married to for more than 50 years. Should I address her about it in private?

— WORRIED GRANDDAUGHTER

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR WORRIED: Your grandparents' marriage has lasted half a century, so it's safe to assume that they have a fairly strong bond. It's possible that what you interpret as insulting is her way of communicating with him — both in public and in private — and that he tuned her out decades ago. You have already said she appears to think she has done nothing wrong, so unless your grandfather has in some way indicated that it is hurtful to him, my advice is to leave it alone. It works for them in some way.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and my sister "Amber" is 13. For the past few months, she has been throwing tantrums whenever things don't go her way or she feels something wrong happens, like an offensive comment someone makes. So my parents and I just leave her alone.

Amber cries, stomps and hits, and because I share a room with her I am very stressed out. I haven't been able to sleep until she wears herself out. Lately, she has been saying she hates life and I am scared she might do something stupid. What should I do?

— OLDER SIS IN N. CALIFORNIA

DEAR OLDER SIS: The behavior you have described is not normal for someone Amber's age. And if it's new behavior, it's a reason your parents should not ignore it. If your parents are unable to get Amber to talk to them, they may need the help of a physician or adolescent psychologist to get to the root of what is triggering these episodes. Please don't wait. Clip this item, give it to your parents and tell them you wrote it. I, too, am concerned for your sister.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are open with each other and can reach a satisfactory compromise on a lot of things. However, one we can't seem to reach an agreement on is the temperature of our house. When evening rolls around, my husband turns on the air conditioning and the fans, leaving me to run to the closet for multiple sweat-shirts. When we sleep, I end up using four blankets while he uses just a sheet.

When I ask him to turn up the temperature, he responds with, "It's easier for you to put more clothes on if you're cold." It results in an argument every night. Please help, Abby.

— FROZEN IN OREGON

DEAR FROZEN: Stop arguing and buy a heating pad and a long extension cord. It will solve your problem and you'll both be comfortable. And for your bed, consider an electric mattress pad. If you share the same bed with your husband, get one with dual controls.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Compact Disc Player,

IF AUGUST 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ambitions know no bounds in the year ahead. Because you are willing to apply yourself to the business at hand, you can build a strong foundation for your career. At the same time, you are feeling younger and more in touch with your spiritual side. Cash in on an exciting opportunity or just enjoy the horn of plenty that you have filled up with material success during October. That is a good month to ask for favors, get professional advice and make crucial decisions. Your passion to succeed could lead you to an interest in healthier living, perhaps by eating more balanced meals or getting physically fit, especially between now and the beginning of January.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Channel your desires into activities that please a significant other. Don't settle for the pedestrian when you can easily set your sights on the exceptional. Don't be disappointed if a dream doesn't come true.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't refuse to swim at all just because the water seems deep. It is okay to dangle your feet and test the water. The things that worry you today can be a springboard for accomplishments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Doubts undermine confidence. Center your attention on reality instead of fantasy. Shift your inner focus to seeing what is right, rather than only seeing what is wrong. Fight off a tendency to gloom.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Eat corn on the cob, not candy corn. Candy corn might satisfy a sweet tooth, but it won't fool you into thinking it is the real thing. It isn't Halloween so you need not participate in tricky business dealings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The truth is absolute. It will be the same today as it was yesterday and as it will be tomorrow. Therefore, putting a spin on the facts in an effort to affect the outcome of a dispute will not hold up to scrutiny.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pretending to be brave is just as good as the real thing. People may respect you for refusing to give up when the going gets rough. Focus on what brings lasting peace rather than instant gratification.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be a creature of habit. You prefer to hide away in a safety zone when you feel threatened by doubt. You might deal with those who are unwilling to consider alternatives or to cooperate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hidden meanings may be real or just imaginary. Don't read too much into a lack of enthusiasm from the boss. Something may be going on in the home or behind the scenes that escapes your notice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some say that children should be seen and not heard. But anyone who has children knows that when it gets too quiet, you should worry about what they are up to. Remain alert for trouble spots.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you have it, enjoy it. If blessed by riches, you shouldn't feel guilty. Your money shouldn't be used as a sacrificial lamb on the altar of accountability. Do not sabotage your own happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't draw an imaginary line in the sand because you feel it necessary to defend deeply entrenched beliefs. Air your views or bring things out in the open. You will find that opposition disappears.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Smoke signals get in your eyes. The message you perceive might be the direct opposite of what was intended. You will get further by offering concessions or delaying a final decision than through obstinacy.

Shaping a New World Order

Chief among the problems facing the United States today is this: too many obligations piled high without the wherewithal to meet them. Among those obligations are the varied and sundry commitments implied by the phrase “American global leadership.” If ever there were an opportune moment for reassessing the assumptions embedded in that phrase, it’s now. With too few Americans taking notice, history has entered a new era. The “unipolar moment” created by the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 has passed. To refer to the United States today as the world’s “sole superpower” makes about as much sense as General Motors bragging that it’s the world’s No. 1 car company: Nostalgia ill-befits an enterprise beset with competitors breathing down its

Andrew J. Bacevich
Los Angeles Times

neck. Similarly, to call Barack Obama the “most powerful man in the world” is akin to curtsying before Elizabeth II as “Queen of Great Britain, Ireland and British Dominions beyond the Seas”: Although a nice title, it confers little by way of actual authority. A new global order is rapidly emerging. In that order, the United States will no doubt remain a very important player. Yet alongside the United States will be several others: China pre-eminently among them, but with Russia, India, Turkey, Japan, South Korea and Brazil also demanding to be reckoned with. Nothing Washington can do will prevent this geopolitical transformation. Politicians may insist that the United States still stands apart — always and forever a “triple-A nation” — but their declarations will have as much effect as King Canute ordering the waves to stop. Indeed, to indulge further in the fiction of American omnipotence — persisting in our penchant for fighting distant wars of dubious purpose, for example — will accelerate the process, with relative decline becoming absolute decline. For Americans, husbanding power rather than squandering it is the order of the day. That said, there is much that the United States can and ought to do to ensure that this emerging multipolar world ends up being more or less stable, and more or less decent, and therefore more or less congenial to the well-being of the American people. Multipolarity implies complications. A little more than a century ago, mismanagement by the last multipolar order produced a world war, followed by the Depression and then another world war worse than the first. Avoiding a repetition of those serial catastrophes defines the overarching strategic imperative of our age. In that regard, spending hundreds of billions vainly attempting to pacify Afghanistan is unlikely to help much. Far more useful (if hardly less challenging) might be the following:

- Negotiating “boundaries” — constraints, for example, on the use of force — that will limit great power prerogatives (including our own) in the 21st century.
- Establishing norms governing the competition for increasingly scarce natural resources.

- Reducing armaments and curbing the international arms trade, thereby restricting the availability of the hardware that sustains wars once they begin.
- Focusing increased diplomatic attention on trouble spots that threaten to put great powers on a collision course, among them Taiwan, Kashmir, Korea’s 38th parallel and, of course, the Palestinian territories.

Sadly, little evidence exists to suggest that anyone in Washington possesses the creative imagination to take on such tasks. Crisis response — managing ongoing wars and reacting to the twists and turns of the Arab Spring, for example — absorbs the energy and attention of the Obama administration. Meanwhile, shoveling money into the maw of the military-industrial complex seems the top Republican priority. As with fiscal issues, so too with statecraft: Washington has become an intellectual dead zone. Yet here’s the kicker. Were Washington to succeed in midwifing this new order, one result would be to reduce the burdens that the United States has shouldered since 1941 — far past the point of diminishing returns. Although the positive effects might not be felt immediately, the benefits over time could be very large indeed. Lighter burdens (fewer wars and reduced Pentagon spending) could go far toward helping us put our own house in order, the one point that just about everyone, in Washington and across the country, now agrees is essential.

Andrew Bacevich is a professor of history and international relations at Boston University. He wrote this for commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

LETTERS OF THANKS

A Thank You From Wife of Trauma Victim
To Minidoka County and Cassia County firefighters, emergency rescue teams, emergency medical teams and Cassia Regional Medical Center emergency room staff:
Thank you for the life of my husband. He fell from the Burley High School’s roof Aug. 2, and thanks to you, he is still alive and will recover at least partially. It was a challenge, but you succeeded in lowering this man from the roof of the high school and transporting him to the Cassia emergency room where the staff was efficient and concerned and quickly assessed his injuries before life-flighting him to the Trauma One Center in Murray, Utah. Without your quick thinking and ingenuity, I have no doubt I would be dealing not with a recovering husband but with a more serious spinal injury or a funeral. Again, thank you. You went beyond the call of duty to secure this big man and bring him down safely, to see to his safe transport, to reassure his grieving wife and to usher him to the best care available in the Intermountain area.

Bluegrass Festival Was a Big Success
We want to give a big thank-you to everyone that made the Third Annual Snake River Bluegrass Festival such a fun time. Thanks to the city of Heyburn for sponsoring the event and allowing us to use the Riverside Park and its wonderful amphitheater and facilities. Thanks to the Heyburn Heart Committee for cooking a hearty pancake breakfast. Thanks to the Heyburn Amphitheater Committee: John Berglund, Heather Davis, Mike Andrew, Deb Hopkins, Jason Parton and Earl Andrew for volunteering their time to plan and carry out the event. Thanks to all of the wonderful performers and vendors. Thanks to Mike McCarthy for leading our banjo workshop and jam session. Thanks to all of our local newspapers for writing about our event. This was a benefit concert and we were able to collect 349 canned food items as donations to South Central Community Action. This was our best year yet. We had more music, more fun and more food and the weather was great.

QUOTE

“We have always celebrated music as a healer. While music cannot change the events and losses at the Indiana State Fair, it can hopefully serve as a ritual and a balm to provide comfort and facilitate healing in this time of great sorrow.”

— Grammy-winning country duo Sugarland, who mourned the deaths of five people at their outdoor show in Indianapolis
