Cities May Join Forces to Lower Health Costs

Almost 40 Idaho cities have agreed to look into becoming self-insured, joining together to increase their buying power for health insurance.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

A group of public employees is looking to counter their rising health insurance costs by becoming self-insured by the end of the year.

Almost 40 cities in Idaho have agreed to look into the idea, including Hailey, Jerome, Burley, Shoshone and Paul.

By becoming self-insured, the cities would agree to become their own insurers. Their employee health benefits would become self-funded, with the cities managing the funds and any claims. This, officials hope, would be cheaper than paying for commercial insurance plans.

The city of Burley has been self-insured for 12 years. That's helped it manage to keep costs down and stay competitive the entire time, boasted City Administrator Mark Mitton.

One advantage he cited is the ability for each city to track claims information. Insurance companies aren't required to share claim data with employers with less than 100 employees.

Understanding what health issues are driving costs helps managers determine what areas of employee health to address, Mitton said.

Law Creates Coroner Vacancy in Gooding Co.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Since his first election in 1998, Gary Loder has served Gooding County as the coroner.

But, because of a state law and an injection of competition into the marketplace, Loder recently had to step down from the $8,000-a-year, part-time, on-call job.

That's because Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, which also has a Twin Falls location, opened up in Wendell this week.

The law says that county coroners can only work at funeral homes if their business is the only provider in the county.

Before Parke's opened, Gooding County's only funeral home was Demaray Funeral Service, which has chapels in Gooding, Wendell and Shoshone.

"I'm not saying I like the law, but I'm sure it's there for a reason, so we've got to abide by it," said Loder, who has worked since 1997 at Demaray, where he's an assistant who does maintenance work.

Rumble in the Jail

Jail and prison violence among inmates is not uncommon, but inmate-on-officer attacks usually result in felony charges. Recent Twin Falls County Jail inmates accused of assaulting deputies:

Clark Cleveland

Why he's in jail: Cleveland is awaiting a 2012 murder trial.
Charges: Felony aggravated battery on certain personnel; Felony propelling bodily fluids or waste at certain persons Allegation: Cleveland attacked and spat upon a jail deputy trying to serve a meal on Aug. 3.

Thomas Trevino Jr.

Why he's in jail: Trevino is awaiting an October murder trial.
Charges: Felony battery on certain personnel (two counts)
Allegation: Trevino struggled against deputies as they tried to move him to another cell.

Kody Gambrel

Why he's in jail: Gambrel was serving a 180-day sentence for misdemeanor DUI.
Charges: Felony battery on certain personnel (two counts)
Allegation: Gambrel fought with Twin Falls County Jail deputies on Jan. 29.

Residents of the county jail who choose to mix it up with deputies are just adding to their woes, as assaulting law enforcement personnel comes with stiff repercussions.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Clark Cleveland isn't the only guy in the history of the Twin Falls County Jail to allegedly take a swing at his jailors.

The 26-year-old Nevada man is charged with felony assault on certain personnel, a type of crime which carries a potentially stiffer penalty if convicted. In Idaho criminal code, assault or battery on certain personnel is reserved for people accused of attacking police officers, correctional officers, judges, prosecutors, public defenders and social workers, to name a few.

According to Capt. Doug Hughes, administrator of the Twin Falls County Jail, inmate-on-inmate violence is more common than inmate-on-officer violence. He reports four instances of an inmate attacking a deputy in 2011 and 26 instances of inmate-on-inmate violence.

"For inmate-on-officer, we always charge," Hughes said.

But why do people already in hot water with the law want to further scald themselves? Pam Sonnen, a retired administrator with the Idaho Department of Correction, said an inmate could lash out because of

I'll Never Forget ... Oh, Never Mind

There's a story about a turn-of-the-century politician who got re-elected mayor of Boston time after time. His secret was that he never forgot a name.

Wasn't as hard as it sounds. Most Boston voters at the time were Irish, so he only had three names to remember.

He'd walk up to a stranger, pump the fellow's hand extravagantly, slap him on the back and proclaim, "And how's the world today for Michael ..."

If the man responded with a blank stare, the pol didn't miss a beat.

"... your father, My Dear Friend Patrick..."

On the rare occasions when the guy was neither Michael nor Patrick, hizzonir proffered the clincher:

"... who's the spittin' image of you, Donal?"

I don't share that gift. Asking me to put a name with a face is like asking your dog — or your husband, for that matter — not to drool on the couch.

("Oh, HI! ... How are you? And your lovely wife? Oh. I'm so SORRY, Father Brown ...")

Worst part is, I'm not even good at faking it.

("Well, my HECK. I haven't seen you since — how long HAS it been?")
("I'm your sister-in-law, you idiot.")
("That's RIGHT. And how's your lovely sister?")

These flights of pre-mature senility, Miss Manners says, can be overcome by grasping the vaguely familiar stranger firmly by the hand, making eye contact, and intoning in the most sincere way possible, "I have a confession to make ... I don't have the first idea who you are."

I nearly tried that at a book-signing that Suzi Huxhold and I did at Thousand Springs Preserve near Hagerman years ago. A woman walked up, bought a book and said, "Sign this, will you Steve? You know to whom."

I had no idea. For all I knew, it could have been Miss Manners herself. So I firmly grasped her hand, made eye contact, and intoned in the most sincere way possible, "I have a confession to make ... This is Suzanne Huxhold."

Under the table, Suzi kicked my shin harder than I've ever been kicked before. Then she smiled, extended her hand to the stranger, and purred, "I feel I should know you."

Luckily, just at that moment an acquaintance of the woman who actually remembered her name stepped up to chat with her, so I hurriedly inscribed the book to "Occupant."

At this rate, by the time I'm 70, I'll be introducing myself to strangers by that name.

("Pleased to know you. And may I present my wife, To Whom It May Concern?")

There's a school of thought that says everyone in heaven wears name tags. If that's true, it's a sensible precaution. Imagine what could happen without them:

("How do you do? Been here long? Just arrived myself. Name's Norm, and just between you and me, I don't really belong here. Just before my wife caught me with my mistress and shot us both, I embezzled $300,000 and leveraged that into $600,000 in Vegas. Luckily, I gave half of it to charity. The senile old archangel at the Pearly Gates took one look at my tax return and didn't read the fine print! HA HA HA HA. Ha. Ha. H ... Say, don't believe I caught your name.")
("Peter's my name and sainthood's my game. Feeling lucky, Norm?")

'Course, they might wear name tags in hell, too.

("Say, I notice that everybody here is named Bob.")
("All except the furnace man. Welcome aboard, Norm.")

County to know I really appreciated their support over the 11-plus years," Loder said. "Without them, I would never have been in there."

It's not the first time that this situation has come up in Idaho. In 2009, then-Minidoka County Coroner Joel Heward resigned after a second home opened up in his county.

The situation has also arisen in Bonner County, said John Buck, vice president of the Idaho State Association of County Coroners. Buck said the law is intended to keep coroners from using their positions to gain an unfair competitive advantage over other funeral homes.

"Idaho has that built into the system," he said. "We don't really object to that."

Only about 25 percent of coroners in the state's 44 counties also work for funeral homes, all in small rural areas, Buck said.

As for the new funeral home, Parke's is a full-service facility that is available 24 hours a day. Its chapel can seat up to 130, and the community reception facility can seat up to 120 people, said Catherine Parke, co-owner of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home with her husband, Mike Parke.

Heyburn's New Superintendent Up for Challenge

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

HEYBURN • After a little more than a week on the job, Heyburn's new city superintendent is settling in and looking forward to dealing with the challenges facing a growing city.

Greg Richins, of Albion, was hired to replace the city's former superintendent, Scott Spevak.

Richins took his post Aug. 15. City officials did not respond to requests by the Times-News for his starting salary.

A Declo High School graduate, Richins spent the past 22 years working for the city of Logan, Utah. He performed various jobs from street equipment operator to working in the city's engineering department as an inspector for its water, sewer and streets.

Richins said Heyburn is poised for economic growth and development, which will likely bring rewards and a few growing pains in the next few years.

"It's a golden opportunity for the companies that locate here and for the people who want to live here. But infrastructure challenges will come with that development," Richins said. "The city will be going from a small town to a mini-metropolitan area and we'll have to be progressive as far as how we'll deal with that."

The Punishment

The severity of an alleged assault determines whether a misdemeanor or felony is filed. The maximum sentence is 25 years for a felony in which severe harm was intended, and a prosecutor may file for a weapons enhancement — which puts an additional 15 years on a sentence — if a deadly weapon is used in the attack.

a $2 steak in order to survive the prison system, which is full of violent people who prey on the weak. Sonnen said fighting with the law is a way to build respect with gangs. Sometimes, inmates will become violent as a means of seeking isolation if they fear for their own safety.

Then there are those who lash out with nothing to lose, she said.

In Twin Falls, aside from sending the report to County Prosecutor Grant Loeb and requesting a criminal complaint be filed, there are more immediate disciplinary measures for fighting with jail deputies. It should come as no surprise that officers are allowed to use force to subdue a violent inmate, and the jail also has isolation chambers to safely segregate a violent inmate from other inmates and jail personnel.

"We don't allow these things to happen without some kind of repercussion," Hughes said.

insurance is all about the information," he said. "If you're seeing a certain type of claim over and over, then you can go out and find the preventive measures needed to keep that claim down."

Mitton said Burley is looking into joining the group of cities, called the Idaho Independent Inter-governmental Authority (IIIA), because the buying power of the larger group will continue to drive costs down.

After being hit with a 22 percent increase to its health insurance costs, the city of Shoshone is seriously considering the self-insurance group as well.

"We cannot afford our current insurance," said Mary Kay Bennett, Shoshone's city clerk. "We cannot afford to put our wives or husbands on our plans."

Shoshone has 13 full-time employees. By joining

At a Glance Self-Insurance

What is it?

A city that becomes self-insured acts as its own insurer for its employee health benefits. The benefits are funded through the city, and the city manages and pays out any claims made by its workers.

Why do it?

Supporters cite several advantages. Self-insurance althe group, the city could expect to face just a 5 percent increase each year instead of double-digit increases.

However, the biggest struggle for it and other cities will be having enough money to cover high-cost claims, said Lori Bergsma, president of Balanced Rock Insurance, located in Twin Falls.

"Depending on how many people join, these cities may not have as big of a pool to get a lower discounts cities to oversee what types of claims are being made and thus base their deductibles, rates and preventative health care on those claims. If cities band together to buy insurance, they're more likely to get a more affordable plan.

What are the risks?

Most self-insurers tend to have a small employee pool, thus limiting the cash they have available to cover claims — especially expensive ones. High-risk claims are unpredictable, and one year of expensive claims could severely set back a self-insured city and drive costs back up.

Who's interested?

Close to 40 Idaho cities have agreed to look into switching to self-insurance. These include Shoshone, Jerome, Burley, Hailey, Paul, Ketchum and Rupert. If all goes to plan, the cities could be self-insured by Jan. 1.

Jerome Holds Hearing on Wastewater Debt

The lone speaker at a Monday public hearing objected to the city seeking a judge's permission to take on long-term debt. Now, the matter goes to a council vote.

TIMES-NEWS

The city of Jerome is working its way toward getting a judge to allow it to take on long-term debt for wastewater system upgrades.

The city on Monday held a public hearing to get input on the proposal, a step needed before a judge can rule on it. Just one person testified at the hearing, speaking against the idea, said City Administrator Ben Marchant.

The next step will be for the Jerome City Council to vote to send the proposal before a judge. The council's vote is scheduled for its next regular meeting, set for Sept. 6.

Jerome's efforts come after the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency notified the city that it will face daily fines of up to $37,500 without improvements.

Those upgrades are estimated to cost about $3.25 million. The city's also in negotiations with three industrial users — Idaho Milk Products, Jerome Cheese and Darigold — that make up more than half of what's discharged into the system, to help shoulder their share of the upgrades.

Judicial confirmation allows cities to bypass the voter approval that's usually needed to take on long-term debt. To qualify, a city must show that the expense is "ordinary and necessary," which the courts have interpreted to mean that there is some urgency involved.

Hailey to Ketchum Road Resurfacing Begins Today

TIMES-NEWS

The first part of a highway resurfacing project between Hailey and Ketchum should begin today, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Crews will pave Idaho Highway 75 between East Fork Road and Hospital Drive over the next two weeks, before continuing the majority of the paving in September. It's intended to preserve the road surface until a full-width reconstruction planned for 2013.

Today, they'll apply a "scrub coat" overlay — a roughly one-inch asphalt overlay — through the same area. That work is expected to finish on Friday. Next week, workers will place a "micro" seal coat over the same stretch.

The project will largely reduce traffic to one lane in each direction. Two lanes will remain open through the highway's three-lane section. Northbound traffic will be detoured from between Broadway Run to the Big Wood River bridge.

The work will begin after 9 a.m. each day, after the morning commute. Traffic will not be detoured after dark. Drivers are asked to obey reduced speed limits and lane restrictions, watch for flaggers and be prepared for daily route changes.

Work will be suspended Sept. 2-4 for Labor Day, then pick up again as soon as Sept. 8.

Former Lawmaker, Boise Leader Jay Webb Dies

BOISE (AP) • Jay Webb, a former state lawmaker, Boise city councilman and co-founder of one of Idaho's biggest law firms, has died at age 76.

The Idaho Statesman reports that Webb died Sunday.

He was elected to the first of two terms in the Idaho Legislature in 1966 quickly earned respect from colleagues in both parties for being reasonable and fair.

Former Gov. Cecil Andrus said Webb's death is traumatic, but an opportunity to recognize the contributions he made to the state as a community leader and lawyer.

Webb was born in Idaho Falls and earned his undergraduate and law degrees at the University of Idaho. He was first elected to the Boise City Council in 1985.

In 1977, Webb and three colleagues founded Givens Pursley Law office in Boise.

Move Under Way to Let Voters Decide Fate of Boise Auditorium District

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • In the midst of negotiations over how much money the Greater Boise Auditorium District will give the Boise Convention and Visitors Bureau, a bureau board member and a bureau supporter have launched a campaign to get rid of the auditorium district.

Steve Schmader and Mike "Sully" Sullivan have begun circulating a petition to dissolve the district.

"We are doing this for the good of the community," Schmader said. He hopes the threat of dissolution will make the auditorium district board "do their job and grow up."

"We just looked at everything and said we are tired of it. Something has to stop it," he said. "Maybe it is better to bring it to a halt and then reinvent the wheel."

Schmader and Sullivan need to gather 3,000 signatures from district residents in order to get the proposal on the ballot, which needs to simple majority to pass.

It is too late to make the November ballot, so the soonest voters could take up the issue is November 2012.

If voters dissolve the district, the auditorium district would stop collecting a hotel room tax and its assets, including the Downtown Boise convention center, would be turned over to the county.

"It is unfortunate that this would be the path they want to take," said Hy Kloc, chairman of the auditorium district. "We just have to tell our story as to why we are important to the community and let the voters decide."

Schmader said he is willing to give the auditorium district a year to give visitors bureau sufficient funding and forge a positive working relationship with the bureau and the community. "If they haven't proven themselves to be model prisoners ... I guarantee you we can get the signatures. We are fully willing to turn them in and bring this thing to an end," he said.

On Aug. 11, the GBAD board voted 4-1 to offer the visitors bureau a one-year, $288,128 marketing services contract. The contract includes a $208,728 commission on events and business the visitors bureau brought to the Boise Centre in 2010 and $79,400 in-kind office space and equipment the district would provide the bureau.

As of Friday, the auditorium district had not received a response from the bureau as to whether it would accept the contract.

The visitor's bureau had requested an "annual fee not to exceed $650,000." BCVB and GBAD lawyers are meeting this week to negotiate a contract amount.

Both Schmader and Sullivan were unsuccessful in their bid to get elected to the auditorium district board earlier this year. Schmader had stepped down from his position on the visitors bureau board to run for the seat. He has since resumed his position on the board.

Schmader said he is circulating the dissolution petition as a citizen, not as a bureau board member.

Scrutinized Idaho Lands Agency Brings in New Boss

When he arrives from Montana for his first day Sept. 26, Thomas Schultz will oversee an agency that's been increasingly in the spotlight.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A Montana natural resources official was selected Tuesday to take over the Idaho Department of Lands, which is grappling with increased interest in natural gas drilling, how to dispose of property and pressure to boost investment returns.

Thomas Schultz, 42, a Montana Department of Natural Resources administrator, was selected by the Land Board to run the Idaho agency that oversees lake cottage sites, timber and grazing ground and downtown Boise commercial property.

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who heads the five-member land board, said Schultz' experience as administrator of Montana's trust land management division that oversees state-owned mineral leases was part of the reason why he got unanimous support from the board.

The Department of Lands is navigating new interest in natural gas exploration. A small company, Bridge Resources, successfully drilled for gas in Payette County west of Boise, prompting Idaho to scramble to develop new rules governing such operations.

"You think back the last time we drilled a gas well — successfully, I guess I should say — in Idaho, was in the 1950s," Otter said. "Now we hit one gas well that is 4.2 million cubic feet a day and has a lot of other things that have to be considered. How you manage that whole process, I think, it is a new dimension that we have to consider."

Schultz, who will earn $112,800 a year in his new job, has been Trust Land Division administrator in Montana since 2001, where he's overseen that state's roughly 6.1 million acres of mineral rights and 5.2 million acres of trust lands. This land was given to many states by the federal government at the time they entered the Union to benefit important institutions like schools, prisons and state mental hospitals.

Idaho still owns about 2.5 million acres left from its original 3.7 million acre grant in 1890.

Earlier this month, the Land Board voted to distribute a total of $47.5 million generated by the properties. Public schools got about $31.2 million, the biggest share.

When he arrives in Idaho for his first day Sept. 26, Schultz will oversee an agency that's been increasingly in the spotlight.

For instance, the Land

Board's move last August to buy Affordable Self Storage in Boise for $2.7 million was part of the agency's effort to expand investments to benefit schools, but conservative critics say it has unfairly gone into competition with the private sector.

Lawmakers including state Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, have said they plan to back legislation next year that could require endowment lands for the first time to pay taxes, a move conservative legislators say is necessary to level the playing field with private businesses.

In recent years, Schultz' predecessor, George Bacon, tried unsuccessfully to put an amendment to Idaho's Constitution on the ballot to give agency officials more flexibility to sell large parcels of state- or university-owned land without holding a public auction.

And the agency is also moving ahead with plans to eventually auction or trade hundreds of lakefront cottage sites along the shores of the Payette and Priest lakes whose management in recent years has provoked debate over whether Idaho is demanding enough for annual leases from those who have occupied the cabins on endowment land for decades.

Schultz told The Associated Press that a decade spent heading the division that oversees trust land in Montana makes him familiar with these kinds of debates.

"Whether you're looking at grazing issues, cabin sites, oil and gas, coal, forestry — the issues in Montana and Idaho are similar. Key to me, is to listen first, especially being an outsider."

Thomas Schultz, a Montana Department of Natural Resources administrator selected by the Land Board to run the Idaho Department of Lands

Case in point: The Montana university system recently threatened to sue over a bill passed by the 2011 Montana Legislature that slashed proposed rate increases for cottage site leaseholders at such prized locations as Flathead Lake. In Idaho, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden has sued the land board over similar concerns that it's not charging high enough rates for the cottage sites.

"Whether you're looking at grazing issues, cabin sites, oil and gas, coal, forestry — the issues in Montana and Idaho are similar," Schultz said from his home from Helena. "Key to me, is to listen first, especially being an outsider."

Idaho Places Last in U.S. for Breast Cancer Screening Rates

COEUR D'ALENE PRESS

More than a third of Idaho women over 40 did not receive important breast cancer screening in the past two years, reports the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. That places Idaho last out of 50 states and the District of Columbia in cancer screening mammogram rates.

The Cancer Data Registry of Idaho estimates there are over 122,000 Idaho women over the age of 40 who have not had a mammogram in the previous two years. "Mammography screening is an important tool in making early diagnosis of breast cancer and saving lives," says Patti Moran, who heads up the cancer program at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "Idaho has consistently ranked at or near the bottom for breast cancer screening. We want Idaho women to take note, and if they are 40 or older and haven't had a mammogram this year, to make an appointment today to get screened. It could save their life."

The earlier a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, the better her chances of survival. For women diagnosed at an early stage, when the cancer is confined to her breast tissue, about 95% will survive five years or longer. But for women diagnosed at a later stage, when the cancer has begun to spread, one of every four women will die within five years.

The American Cancer Society recommends yearly mammograms for women beginning at age 40. In the past two years, only 63.8% of Idaho women aged 40 or older reported getting screened for breast cancer. The alarming news is that Idaho's screening rates have been at or near the bottom over the past decade, leaving Idaho far behind states with the highest screening rates.

Coroner Says Couple May Have Survived Three Days After Crash

IDAHO STATESMAN

IDAHO CITY • Boise County Coroner Pam Garlock says autopsies show that a Meridian couple who were injured when they went off a remote county road three weeks ago may have survived up to three days.

The bodies of Charles and Barbara Rigg were discovered by campers on four-wheelers late Friday.

Barbara Rigg, who investigators believe was driving their Dodge Dakota, died from blunt force trauma to the chest, the coroner said. Charles Rigg died from heart-related problems due to stress from the accident.

The exact time of death could not be determined, but the pathologist estimated the couple died sometime between July 30 and Aug. 2. They were reported missing July 30, when they did not appear at a family picnic.

Family members told authorities that the couple enjoyed spending time in the Banner Ridge area between Idaho City and Lowman. Search and rescue crews, planes and helicopters combed the area. They were found off an old Forest Service road in a steep area dense with brush; they were in the Owl Creek Summit area, about 20 miles north of Idaho City and 12 miles off of Idaho 21.

Investigators believe a rear tire on the truck went off the edge of the one-lane dirt road and caused the vehicle to go over an embankment, rolling at least once. The vehicle came to rest on its tires.

Barbara Rigg was found near the driver's side door of their truck, according to Boise County Sheriff Ben Roeber. Charles Rigg was about 100 feet away from the vehicle.

State Panel Drafts Bill To Create Health-Insurance Exchange

BY AUDREY DUTTON
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • A state work group has drafted a bill that would authorize a state-run health-insurance exchange under the federal health-care reform law.

The exchange would be a government-created marketplace for people and businesses to buy health insurance. A state exchange is one requirement of the controversial 2009 law, which Idaho's Republican leaders oppose and which still faces challenges in courts around the country.

The work group is charged with writing possible legislation for the Idaho Legislature's 2012 session, which begins in January. Despite the state's opposition to the law, there's widespread support for the concept of an insurance exchange, and a legislative panel this week agreed with Gov. Butch Otter that Idaho should apply for a $40 million federal grant to help the state design and build it.

A June 1 draft bill obtained by the Idaho Statesman says:

- The exchange for individuals and small businesses to sign up for health insurance would be established by Jan. 1, 2014. That's the deadline the state must meet or risk having the federal government step in and set up its own exchange in Idaho.
- In addition to health insurance, the exchange would offer stand-alone dental benefit plans.
- The exchange would offer a website and toll-free telephone hotline for customers.
- Insurance companies would still be allowed to offer the same or similar plans outside of the exchange. But they wouldn't have to.
- Nine unpaid board members would supervise and control the exchange.

Seven would be appointed by the governor. They would represent health insurers, disability agents, hospitals, physicians and businesses. The remaining two board members would come from the Idaho Senate and House. The board also would have two voting ex-officio members, from the Department of Insurance and Department of Health and Welfare.

- The board could hire and fire employees and handle procurements.
- The exchange would be free from taxation.
- Exchange employees and board members wouldn't be eligible for state retirement benefits.
- The exchange could be sued, as could its employees, agents, board and board members.

All of these provisions would be null and void if the Supreme Court decides the health care reform law is unconstitutional and strikes it down.

St. Anthony Prepares to Host SummerFest

REXBURG STANDARD JOURNAL

ST. ANTHONY • Chocolate bacon? Huckleberry ice cream? Those are just two of the tasty delights expected to be available Thursday at SummerFest in St. Anthony.

The annual St. Anthony Chamber of Commerce event celebrate the end of the summer with a fair-like party with food booths, interesting crafts and homemade items and this year six "bouncy" houses for little kids and climbing walls and water slides for bigger kids.

The setup involves closing Bridge Street from the spotlight on Main to Second North. Picnic tables are lined up in the middle of the street. A stage is put up.

Those who have reserved booths set the up and the crowd shows up.

It's a chance for everyone to sample the latest in fair food, such as the chocolate bacon one woman plans to sell at her booth.

Traditional favorites also will be available in several booths, such as the one that serves huckleberry ice cream. Other booths that always attract a crowd include those that sell corn on the cob in various ways, oriental food, Mexican food, pulled pork and Dutch oven dinner with scones.

Iced drinks, homemade chocolates and other treats will round out the food offerings.

For those in the market for jewelry, at least three booths will be selling it. And handcrafted quilts and other handiwork also will be available.

One thing that might be missing is produce, the product that got the SummerFest started in the first place.

Moscow Police Say Former Idaho Professor Shot Student, Killed Self

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • A University of Idaho graduate student who was gunned down outside her off-campus residence and a former professor at the Moscow school suspected in her murder may have previously had a relationship, police said Tuesday.

Ernesto A. Bustamante, 31, checked into a Moscow hotel less than an hour after the shooting, police Lt. Dave Lehmitz said. His body was found early Tuesday with a gunshot wound to the head after he apparently took his own life, Lehmitz said.

A warrant had been issued for Bustamante's arrest after officers found Katy Benoit, 22, dead at her Moscow home late Monday. The woman, who is from Boise, was shot multiple times with a .45-caliber handgun outside her home while her roommate was inside, Lehmitz said.

"It appears that the victim and suspect were known to each other and may have had previously a relationship," Lehmitz said.

Bustamante was an assistant professor in the university's Department of Psychology and Communication, earning a base salary of $51,000 a year, when he resigned his position with the school on Friday. He had been with the school since August 2007.

Benoit earned her undergraduate degree in 2010 and started her first year as a graduate student in the psychology department this fall, according to the university.

Classes started on the northern Idaho campus on Monday. A ceremony to mark the start of the academic year was postponed Tuesday.

While police could not confirm the nature of the relationship between the two, UI Dean of Students Bruce Pittman noted there was a university policy that bars faculty members from entering into romantic relationships with students.

Pittman declined to comment on why Bustamante resigned last week.

Authorities named Bustamante as a suspect shortly after the shooting and served a search warrant at the University Inn Best Western, where police found Bustamante's car. The body was found inside his hotel room.

"We are both shocked and saddened by these events.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes to the victim's family and friends," the university said in a statement.

Bustamante has no prior criminal record in Idaho.

Man Arrested After Leaving Son Home to Go to Hospital

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Michael T. Breshears is being held in the Ada County Jail on a charge of felony injury to child after Meridian police say he left his 2-year-old son home alone early Tuesday morning so he could go to the emergency room to get medical treatment for his shoulder.

Police declared the 2-year-old boy to be in imminent danger and the child was placed in the custody of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare early Tuesday morning.

Meridian police were sent to an apartment in the 500 block of East Washington Avenue, in the Pine Avenue/Main Street neighborhood, at 2:45 a.m. Tuesday after getting a report from the hospital that the boy may be home alone.

Police found the front door of the ground level apartment unlocked and a 2-year-old boy sleeping on the floor inside. No one else was home, according to reports.

Police talked to Breshears a short time later and determined the boy had been home alone for about an hour before officers found him.

Police officials say Breshears told officers he tried to find a neighbor to watch the boy but wasn't able to find anyone, so he left the child, who was sleeping, at the apartment, according to reports. Police reports do not indicate how Breshears hurt his shoulder or why he needed to go to the emergency room after midnight.

Breshears was to make his initial court appearance later Tuesday afternoon.

Boundary County Backs Man Who Shot Grizzly

COEUR D'ALENE PRESS

COEUR D'ALENE • The Boundary County commission on Monday said it finds no fault in the actions of a 33-year-old Bonners Ferry man who is facing felony criminal charges for killing a grizzly bear.

Arraignment for Jeremy M. Hill is scheduled for 10 a.m. today in U.S. District Court in Coeur d'Alene.

Hill declined requests for comment from The Press.

U.S. Attorney Wendy J. Olson, in Boise, announced the charges earlier this month. Charging documents allege Hill shot and killed the bear on his property on May 8.

In a news release Monday, the Boundary County commissioners said they have been working with state and federal agencies for years to see the grizzly bear population recover.

But, "In this case, they're standing beside the defendant...," adding that a letter has been drafted to be sent to Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, and Idaho's congressional delegation, asking that the charges be dismissed.

“The rights of all Libyans must be respected. True justice will not come from reprisals and violence.”

— President Barack Obama calling on Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi to surrender and end the bloodshed

OUR VIEW

Knowing When to Drop Idealism in the Health Care Debate

We're with Butch on this one.

On Monday, the governor's swing from party placard idealism to pragmatism was a breath of fresh air, and one we hope doesn't become an isolated event.

At stake is $40 million in federal grant money Idaho could get if it sets up its own health care exchanges. If Idaho misses the Sept. 30 deadline to apply for the grant, the federal government could still force the state to set up an exchange to comply with 2010's Affordable Care Act.

What is a Health Insurance Exchange?

Health exchanges are an attempt to create competition in the insurance marketplace. In theory, this allows individuals and small business to band together to get better pricing on options, giving them leverage akin to larger corporations.

Otter said that the time for taking a stand against the new federal health law has passed. "If we don't apply for the grant," Otter said, then "the federal government will come in and establish and impose upon us an insurance exchange."

We understand that many of Idaho's lawmakers continue to oppose the new health care laws. Idaho joined with several other states in challenging the law, and federally mandated health care goes against the will of many Idahoans.

But these same Idahoans are also proponents of a freer market. And, love or hate the new law, these state-level health exchanges would allow small business owners to band together to get some relief from the high costs of providing insurance to employees. Even if people disagree with the core of health insurance reform, increasing competition always benefits the consumer.

Until such point as the courts strike it down — and a Supreme Court decision seems an inevitability — it is a law whose provisions are going to be enacted over the next few years. Until a federal ruling comes into play, it makes sense to use the money to bolster our embattled Medicaid program.

Of course, our lawmakers know that there's no such thing as a free lunch, and are prudent to want to identify any catches before they leap at the check. Sen. John Goedde, R-Coeur d'Alene, notes that we're as yet unaware of what strings might be attached. We appreciate his prudence, while at the same time realizing that this money could help the residents of the state.

Increasing competition in the marketplace benefits both small business owners, and, in the end, recipients of health care.

At the least, accepting the cash for our already-burdened state health system seems like a no-brainer. Sen. Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston, agrees.

"We're going to be extremely short-sighted if we let this opportunity pass."

Does Obama Want This Job, or Not?

LuAnn Lavine, a real estate agent from Geneseo, a rural town just up the road from Alpha, Ill., the last stop on the president's Midwestern bus tour, told The New York Times' Jeff Zeleny: "Everyone was so hopeful with him, but Washington grabbed him and here we are. I just want him to stay strong and don't take the guff. We want a president who is a leader, and I want him to be a little bit stronger."

Hers was a gentler message than the sign stuck on a post outside Alpha: "One Term President."

But her three words summed it up: Washington grabbed him. Why did this man whose contempt for Congress is clear, who ran on the idea that he could transform a broken Washington, surrender to its conventional timetable and bureaucratic language?

The "supercommittee" that's supposed to save us just sounds like more government bloat — supersizing something just as unhealthy as McDonald's.

Is Obama so isolated he can't see that Americans are curled up in a ball, beaten down by a financial crisis, an identity crisis, a political crisis and a leadership crisis?

He got the job by blaming Washington. But once you're in the White House, you are Washington. It's like the plumber who came to fix the sink waiting for the sink to fix itself.

I covered the first President Bush when he took a slide from Iraq war hero to one-term president. A turning point came in the fall of 1991, when Americans were getting jittery about the economy. Conservatives urged Bush to adopt an aggressive agenda and a muscular stance toward Congress. But relying on the disastrous advice of his budget adviser Richard Darman, Bush waited for more than a month until the State of the Union address and repackaged the same tepid agenda.

President Obama bashed

Garry Trudeau

"If Clinton wanted to be president 25 hours a day and W. wanted to be president four hours a day, Obama wants to be president for about 14 hours a day. And that's fine, as long as you don't look like you're phoning it in when the country is dialing 911"

Congress on his bus tour. But after delegating to Congress time and again with disastrous results, he continues to play the satellite to Congress.

He shouldn't be driven by the Washington schedule. He should be setting it.

At long last, he promised a clear economic plan. Unfortunately, he had the fierce urgency of next month, when Congress gets back to town.

Americans are rattled and want action. They don't know or care what Congress's schedule is. They just see the president not doing anything.

Cruising white Midwestern hamlets in his black bus, Obama tried to justify not calling lawmakers back to D.C. by saying they'd just continue to bicker. But what does he think they'll do in September? The truth is, he doesn't want them back in the capital any more than they want to be back. It would have screwed up his vacation and upset Michelle, who already feels trapped in the Washington bubble.

If Clinton wanted to be president 25 hours a day and W. wanted to be president four hours a day, Obama wants to be president for about 14 hours a day.

And that's fine, as long as you don't look like you're phoning it in when the country is dialing 911.

White House officials must be worried about the 10-day Martha's Vineyard idyll because, in a rare move, they put out a picture of the president with furrowed brow and Nike shirt getting a briefing from John Brennan, his top counterterrorism adviser.

There were no pictures allowed of him at the Vineyard Golf Club, only shots of the president shopping for books with his daughters. He was seen in the Bunch of Grapes bookstore on Friday holding Brave New World. Maybe he was brushing up on dystopias and alphas.

He might also want to pick up a volume of Robert Frost for some insight on why Democrats waste time trying to reconcile with ruthless foes. The president still believes he can use his enchanting powers to convert the other side, even though Republicans regard every Obama legislative achievement as the beginning of a campaign to recall it. Heck, they're still trying to repeal the New Deal.

Obama was truly stung by his budget experience with John Boehner. And now, Sen. Tom Coburn, whom Obama called "not only a dear friend, but also a brother in Christ" at February's National Prayer Breakfast, tells a town hall in Oklahoma that Obama's views are "goofy and wrong," and that the president wants to "create dependency" because "as an African-American male," he had received "tremendous benefit" from government programs.

There is no way to sell the idea that being a black man in America gives you tremendous benefit.

How does Obama feel after his brother in Christ painted him as something akin to a welfare queen and an affirmative-action president?

Let us take today's lesson from Frost, who deliciously wrote in The Lesson for Today:

*I'm liberal. You, you aristocrat, Won't know exactly what I mean by that.
I mean so altruistically moral
I never take my own side in a quarrel.*

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Trauma Victims Can Learn to Help Themselves

I would like to amend Loyd Bakewell's subject to "help others escape (abuse) by persuading and educating the uninformed" (Times-News, Aug. 16).

The greater the public denial and silence about problems, the greater those problems can grow. Ever more people are falling by the wayside in the worst ways. This downtrend can be stopped and even be reversed, because people can learn to avoid trouble and recover with disciplined self-help. Mostly because my parents abused and abandoned me and I did not have one single mentor, I had to endure ground zero of World War II, diphtheria, whooping cough, school failure, extreme culture shock and years of near starvation, homelessness, rotting ear infections, judicial injustice, intense floggings, social isolation, hard-labor slavery and much more. By the time I was only 20 years old.

Intensely traumatic experiences have taught me important lessons and given me amazing blessings. The final chapter of "Invisible heroes: Trauma survivors and how they heal" by psychotherapist Belleruth Naparstek describes some of the blessings that some trauma survivors receive: joy, generosity, heightened creativity, survivor power and spiritual connection.

When I was a child I never talked much, and people told me that I was dumb. I believed them. Similarly, society has led us to think of ourselves as victims that have to be coached, counseled and pampered in many areas of life. This unnecessarily helped to create a nation of victims that are too dependent on others. To keep from getting depressed during my traumatic years and beyond, I read incessantly. If my learning experiences prove anything, it is that people can be physically, emotionally and spiritually much stronger than they might realize. But self-help requires honesty, patience, determination, curiosity, knowledge and self-discipline, not constant gratification, self-pity or false pride. Yippee, learn more about this at www.hero-books.com.

Innocent Man Disappointed in Justice System

It's time for the criminal justice system to go back to innocent until proven guilty.

In my case I was guilty until proven innocent. I spent 7 months of my life in jail on a lie and have not received as much as an apology. I know this system has to be better than this. I just wanted everyone to know how disappointed I was that this could happen to an innocent man without any repercussions to the accuser.

Mallard Fillmore by Bruce Tinsley

Why Everybody's Angry About Everything

London burns. The Arab Spring triggers popular rebellions against autocrats across the Arab world. The Israeli Summer brings 250,000 Israelis into the streets, protesting the lack of affordable housing and the way their country is now dominated by an oligopoly of crony capitalists. From Athens to Barcelona, European town squares are being taken over by young people railing against unemployment and the injustice of yawning income gaps, while the angry Tea Party emerges from nowhere and sets American politics on its head.

There are multiple and different reasons for these explosions, but to the extent they might have a common denominator I think it can be found in one of the slogans of Israel's middle-class uprising: "We are fighting for an accessible future." Across the world, a lot of middle- and lower-middle-class people now feel that the "future" is out of their grasp, and they are letting their leaders know it.

Thomas Friedman

Why now? It starts with the fact that globalization and the information technology revolution have gone to a whole new level. Thanks to cloud computing, robotics, 3G wireless connectivity, Skype, Facebook, Google, LinkedIn, Twitter, the iPad, and cheap Internet-enabled smartphones, the world has gone from connected to hyper-connected.

This is the single most important trend in the world today. And it is a critical reason why, to get into the middle class now, you have to study harder, work smarter and adapt quicker than ever before. All this technology and globalization are eliminating more and more "routine" work — the sort of work that once sustained a lot of middle-class lifestyles.

The merger of globalization and IT is driving huge productivity gains, especially in recessionary times, where employers are finding it easier, cheaper and more necessary than ever to replace labor with machines, computers, robots and talented foreign workers. It used to be that only cheap foreign manual labor was easily available; now cheap foreign genius is easily available. This explains why corporations are getting richer and middle-skilled workers poorer. Good jobs do exist, but they require more education or technical skills. Unemployment today still remains relatively low for people with college degrees. But to get one of those degrees and to leverage it for a good job requires everyone to raise their game. It's hard.

Think of what The New York Times reported last

February: At little Grinnell College in rural Iowa, with 1,600 students, "nearly one of every 10 applicants being considered for the class of 2015 is from China." The article noted that dozens of other American colleges and universities are seeing a similar surge as well. And the article added this fact: Half the "applicants from China this year have perfect scores of 800 on the math portion of the SAT."

Not only does it take more skill to get a good job, but for those who are unable to raise their games, governments no longer can afford generous welfare support or cheap credit to be used to buy a home for nothing down — which created a lot of manual labor in construction and retail. Alas, for the 50 years after World War II, to be a president, mayor, governor or university president meant, more often than not, giving things away to people. Today, it means taking things away from people.

All of this is happening at a time when this same globalization/I.T. revolution enables the globalization of anger, with all of these demonstrations now inspiring each other. Some Israeli protestors carried a sign: "Walk Like an Egyptian." While these social protests are not caused by new technologies per se, they are fueled by them.

This globalization/IT revolution is also "super-empowering" individuals, enabling them to challenge hierarchies and traditional authority figures — from business to science to government. It is also enabling the creation of powerful minorities and making governing harder and minority rule easier than ever. See dictionary for: "Tea Party!"

Surely one of the iconic images of this time is the picture of Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak being hauled into court, held in a cage with his two sons and tried for attempting to crush his people's peaceful demonstrations. Every leader and CEO should reflect on that photo. "The power pyramid is being turned upside down," said Yaron Ezrahi, an Israeli political theorist.

So let's review: We are increasingly taking easy credit, routine work and government jobs and entitlements away from the middle class thus widening income gaps and fueling resentments even more.

Put it all together and you have today's front-page news.

Rebels Storm Seat of Gadhafi's Power

But the Libyan dictator and his powerful sons are still unaccounted for, and gunbattles flare across the city.

By BEN HUBBARD and KARIN LAUB
Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya • Hundreds of Libyan rebels stormed Moammar Gadhafi's compound Tuesday, charging wildly through the symbolic heart of the crumbling regime as they killed loyalist troops, looted armories and knocked the head off a statue of the besieged dictator. But they found no sign of the man himself.

The storming of Bab al-Aziziya, long the nexus of Gadhafi's power, marked the effective collapse of his 42-year-old regime. But with Gadhafi and his Office workers gather on a sidewalk in downtown Washington, D.C., after a 5.9 magnitude tremor shook the nation's capitol Tuesday. The earthquake centered northwest of Richmond, Va., was felt as far north as Rhode Island and New York City.

MINERAL, Va. • The most powerful earthquake to strike the East Coast in 67 years shook buildings and rattled nerves from South Carolina to Maine on Tuesday. Frightened office workers spilled into the streets in New York, and parts of the White House, Capitol and Pentagon were evacuated.

There were no immediate reports of deaths, but fire officials in Washington said there were at least some injuries.

The National Cathedral said its central tower and three of its four corner spires were damaged, but the White House said advisers had told President Barack Obama there were no reports of major damage to the nation's infrastructure, including airports and nuclear facilities.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the quake registered magnitude 5.8

GOP Using Redistricting to Shore Up House Majority

Republicans are capitalizing on across-the-board control in 26 states — governorship plus legislature — in the census-based drawing of a new political map that will be a decisive factor in 2012 and beyond.

BY DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The odds of getting re-elected have gotten better for Rep. Renee Ellmers and other Republican freshmen in the House — thanks to GOP calculations in redrawing congressional maps.

The 47-year-old nurse who ousted seven-term Democrat Bob Etheridge by fewer than 1,500 votes last November will be running next year in a newly drawn North Carolina district that's less swing and more Republican. The outlook is brighter too for Texas Rep. Blake Farenthold, a conservative talk radio host who edged 14-term Democrat Solomon Ortiz by just 797 votes. Farenthold will find more Republicans in a Corpus Christi-based district that now stretches north.

Republicans romped last November, gaining 63 House seats to secure the majority, winning 11 governorships, including Ohio and Pennsylvania, and seizing control of the most state legislative seats they've held since 1928. The GOP is capitalizing on its across-the-board control in 26 states — governorship plus legislature — in the census-based drawing of a new political map that will be a decisive factor in the 2012 elections and beyond.

"Republican freshmen are finding the ground harden beneath them as their current swing districts become less competitive for Democrats," said Rep. Pete Sessions, R-Texas, chairman of the National Republican Campaign Committee. "Even seemingly small changes in district political leanings can mean big returns at the ballot box."

NY Court Dismisses Sex Case Against Strauss-Kahn

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Dominique Strauss-Kahn became a free man Tuesday when a judge ended the sexual assault case against him at the request of prosecutors, who said the hotel maid who accused the former International Monetary Fund chief couldn't be trusted.

Though evidence showed Strauss-Kahn had a sexual encounter with Nafissatou Diallo in his hotel suite more than three months ago, prosecutors said the accuser was not credible because of lies she has told, including an earlier false rape claim.

SHARPTON OFFICIALLY TAPPED AS MSNBC HOST

After several weeks in a tryout role, the Rev. Al Sharpton has officially been named host of a weeknight hour on MSNBC. The program, called “PoliticsNation,” premieres next Monday, the network said Tuesday. In his new role, the well-known civil rights activist and minister will lead a lively and informed discussion of the day’s top headlines, MSNBC said.

MOM ACCUSED OF DROPPING BABY FROM PARKING GARAGE

A woman accused of dropping her baby from a hospital parking garage was arrested as she returned to the scene of the crime hours later, Orange police said Tuesday. Sonia Hermosillo, 31, of La Habra, has been booked at the Orange County Jail on one count of attempted murder. Her 7-month-old son remained in extremely critical condition and his survival was not assured, authorities said.

TESTS ON WINEHOUSE BODY SHOW NO DRUGS

Amy Winehouse had no illegal drugs in her system when she died, and it is still unclear what killed the singer, her family said Tuesday. The family said in a statement that toxicology tests showed “alcohol was present” in the singer’s body but it hasn’t yet been determined if it contributed to her death. The 27-year-old soul diva was found dead in her London home on July 23.

Winds, Lightning Strikes Push Fires Across Montana

WEST RIVERSIDE, Mont. (AP) • Firefighters on Tuesday were unable to contain a blaze that had burned 2,000 acres east of Missoula, but officials said they believe the threat to nearby homes had been reduced.

Crews were putting out hot spots and patrolling the area near the 40 threatened West Riverside homes about seven miles east of Missoula near the confluence of the Blackfoot and Clark Fork rivers.

No evacuations have been ordered and no structures have been damaged. Incident commander Ken Parks said in a statement the imminent threat to the homes has been greatly diminished.

The wildfire had rapidly spread from its first reported size of 150 acres to 1,500 acres within hours Monday night.

More than 120 people were fighting the fire. Two 20-person crews were building fire lines along its western flank, while crews, dozers, engines and helicopters are fighting the fire on the more active eastern flank, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation said in a statement.

Rachel Peterson, 7, told the Missoulian newspaper that she was playing outside her home when she was startled by a sound. “We were playing Barbies on the porch, and I heard a ‘poof’ like a firework,” she said. “Then I saw smoke, and so I said, ‘Uh-oh, I should tell Dad.’”

The wind pushed the fire north and east away from the homes, DNRC fire information officer Paula Short said. By early Tuesday, the fire crept back down the mountain to within 30 feet of the neighborhood, witnesses and fire officials said.

Bret Hitschew, who was visiting friend Willy Lovell’s home, told the Missoulian that the flames drew near the home around 4 a.m.

“We got lucky,” Hitschew said. “It didn’t come into the treetops. The wind didn’t pick up.”

Redistricting

Nearly half of the states have finished redrawing House lines based on population changes, although lawsuits and Justice Department reviews loom. The immediate post-election claims that the GOP could add 15 to 30 seats in the U.S. House through redistricting have proven unfounded, in large part because Republicans captured so many seats last November. Instead, the GOP has used the redistricting process to shore up its most vulnerable lawmakers, people like Ellmers and Farenthold.

“Redistricting starts with Republicans at a peak,” said Tim Storey, an elections analyst with the nonpartisan National Conference of State Legislatures. “They hold a solid majority of seats in the House. It’s hard to gain much more.”

In the last election, Republicans took control of the governorships and legislatures in Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana. That grip on power is reflected in the latest congressional lines. The GOP improved the political landscape for freshman Rep. Todd Young in southern Indiana, for example. And two of Michigan’s newest members, Dan Benishek in the north and Tim Walberg in the south, got a boost, as did Rep. Thaddeus McCotter, who’s also running for president. Wisconsin’s Paul Ryan and Sean Duffy also are looking at districts with more Republicans.

Republican optimism aside, Democrats are making the most of their opportunities. They’ve drawn favorable district lines in Illinois. And they’re hoping several political realities will help the party pick up the 25 net seats needed to recapture the House. Next year is a presidential election year, with the promise of higher turnout and an electorate with a greater number of Democratic-leaning younger voters and Hispanics. President Barack Obama will head the party ticket against a still to-be-determined Republican, who could either win over independents or send them running toward the Democrats.

Candidate recruitment and financial resources also will be factors in 2012.

In Illinois, Democrats ensured that the new political map makes life extremely tough for half of the state’s 11 House Republicans. The Democrats focused on competitive districts close to Democratic strongholds, carving up huge swaths of GOP territory and creating some difficult matchups for GOP incumbents.

Strauss-Kahn

State Supreme Court Justice Michael Obus said he would dismiss the case, but there was one more legal twist to get through: He first wanted an appeals court to hear a request from Diallo’s attorneys to keep the case alive by appointing a special prosecutor. The criminal case ended about two hours later, when the higher court agreed with Obus that there was no legal basis for removing the district attorney from the case.

The case drew global attention and left both the accuser and the accused — a one-time contender for the French presidency — with tattered reputations.

Strauss-Kahn arrived at court in a six-car motorcade and was greeted by protesters wielding signs carrying such messages as “DSK treats women like property” and “Put the rapist on trial — not the victim.” The shouting could be heard inside the courtroom.

He appeared resolute inside. He smiled and shook hands with his biographer as his wife, journalist Anne Sinclair, sat nearby.

The couple left court without speaking to reporters, but Strauss-Kahn later issued a statement describing the case as “a nightmare for me and my family.”

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former International Monetary Fund chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn, left, and his lawyer Benjamin Brafman listen to proceedings in Manhattan state Supreme Court in New York, Tuesday.

“I want to thank all the friends in France and in the United States who have believed in my innocence, and to the thousands of people who sent us their support personally and in writing. I am most deeply grateful to my wife and family who have gone through this ordeal with me,” he said.

“We will have nothing further to say about this matter and we look forward to returning to our home and resuming something of a more normal life.”

Later, Strauss-Kahn appeared outside the posh Tribeca townhouse where he was held under house arrest until July — when prosecutors first publicly admitted they had doubts about the maid’s credibility. He summed up the statement in French and was mobbed by reporters.

Diallo, from the West African nation of Guinea, claimed that the 62-year-old diplomat chased her down, grabbed her crotch and forced her to perform oral sex when she arrived to clean his luxury suite May 14.

and was centered 40 miles northwest of Richmond, Va.

Two nuclear reactors at the North Anna Power Station, in the same county as the epicenter, were automatically taken off line by safety systems, said Roger Hannah, a spokesman for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The earthquake came less than three weeks before the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks, and in both Washington and New York it immediately triggered fears of something more sinister than a natural disaster.

At the Pentagon, a low rumbling built until the building itself was shaking, and people ran into the corridors of the complex. The shaking continued there, to shouts of “Evacuate! Evacuate!”

The Park Service closed all monuments and memorials on the National Mall, and ceiling tiles fell at Reagan National Airport outside Washington. All flights there were put on hold.

In lower Manhattan, the 26-story federal courthouse, blocks from ground zero of the Sept. 11 attacks, began swaying, and hundreds of people streamed out of the building.

The New York police commissioner, Raymond Kelly, was in a meeting with top deputies planning security for the upcoming anniversary when the shaking started. Workers in the Empire State Building spilled in to the streets, some having descended dozens of flights of stairs.

“I thought we’d been hit by an airplane,” said one worker, Marty Wiesner.

Another, Adrian Ollivierre, an accountant, was in his office on the 60th floor when the quake struck: “I thought I was having maybe a heart attack, and I saw everybody running. I think what it is, is the paranoia that happens from 9/11, and that’s why I’m still out here — because, I’m sorry, I’m not playing with my life.”

On Wall Street, the floor of the New York Stock Exchange did not shake, officials said, but the Dow Jones industrial average sank 60 points soon after the quake struck. The Dow began rising again a half-hour later and finished the day up 322 points.

In Washington, the National Cathedral said cracks had appeared in the flying buttresses around the apse at one end.

powerful sons still unaccounted for — and gunbattles flaring across the nervous city — the fighters cannot declare victory.

The rebel force entered the compound after fighting for five hours with Gadhafi loyalists outside, using mortars, heavy machine guns and anti-aircraft guns. They beat and killed some of those who defended the compound and hauled away crates of weapons and trucks with guns mounted on the back in a frenzy of looting.

“We’re looking for Gadhafi now. We have to find him now,” said Sohaib Nefati, a rebel sitting against a wall with a Kalashnikov rifle.

Abdel-Aziz Shafiya, a 19-year-old rebel dressed in camouflage with an rocket-propelled grenade slung over one shoulder and a Kalashnikov over another, said the rebels believe Gadhafi is inside the compound but hiding underground.

“Wasn’t he the one who called us rats? Now he is the rat underground,” he said.

Shafiya said he felt “an explosion of joy” to be standing inside Gadhafi’s stronghold in the capital after a lightning-quick rebel advance. He had left the rebel-held western city of Misrata just two days earlier.

“I lost friends and relatives and now I can walk into Gadhafi’s house,” Shafiya said. “Many of my friends have died and now all of that meant something.”

Associated Press reporters inside the compound said parts of it appeared to still be under control of government forces who were firing toward the rebels, making for an atmosphere of joyful celebration mixed with tension. The air was thick with smoke from the battles and the sound of crackling gunfire was constant. Rebels chanted “Allahu Akbar” or “God is Great” and on loudspeakers they cried: “Hamdullah, hamdullah” or “Thank God.”

As the fighters stormed in, they captured a guard at the gates and threw him to the ground, slamming rifle butts into his back. A hostile crowd gathered around, punching and kicking him until one rebel stepped in, stood over him and kept the crowd at bay. Inside the walls, a few bodies of Gadhafi fighters — one with a gaping head wound from a gunshot — were sprawled on the ground.

Several young men wrenched the head from a statue of Gadhafi and kicked it around. One lifted it above his head while his jubilant comrades danced and yelled around him. Fighters with long beards hugged each other and flashed the “V” for victory sign. Others carried injured rebels to ambulances.

A fighter climbed atop the iconic statue of a huge golden fist clenching a model of an American warplane and shot his machine gun in the air in celebration. The statue stands outside a building that was once Gadhafi’s home, preserved with the pockmarks of an American bombing in 1986 as a symbol of his defiance.

Irene Loses Power But Remains Big Threat to U.S.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) • People stocked up on food, boarded windows and gassed up their cars Tuesday as Hurricane Irene threatened to become the most powerful storm to hit the East Coast in more than a decade.

Water, bread and batteries disappeared from store shelves. Lines formed at the pump. From Florida to Maine, residents were told to brace for flash flooding and power outages.

Hundreds of miles south, Irene swirled through the Caribbean, giving a glimpse of what was to come. Homes were inundated with water, residents took refuge in schools and churches, and more than a million people were without electricity. One woman was killed in Puerto Rico.

Forecasters warned it could get worse: The storm was likely to strengthen into a Category 4 monster by the time it makes a landfall in the U.S. this weekend, most likely hitting North Carolina. Irene could crawl up the coast Sunday toward the Northeast region, where residents aren't accustomed to such storms.

Officials dusted off evacuation plans and readied for the first hurricane to threaten the U.S. in three years. It's been more than a decade since the East Coast has been hit by a major hurricane.

Though Irene was downgraded to a Category 1 storm on Tuesday with maximum sustained winds of 90 mph, forecasters believed it would strengthen over warm waters.

Woman Convicted of Child Abuse in Hot Sauce Case

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) • A woman who squirted hot sauce into the mouth of her adopted Russian son for lying about getting in trouble in school was convicted Tuesday of misdemeanor child abuse in what prosecutors said was a ploy to get on the "Dr. Phil" TV show.

Jessica Beagley, 36, made a videotape of how she punished the boy and submitted it to the show. The tape shows Beagley yelling at the crying boy, then tipping his chin up and pouring hot sauce in his mouth. Beagley then had the screaming boy stand in a cold shower for sword-fighting with pencils in school.

Wild World: Millions of Unseen Species Fill Earth

BY SETH BORENSTEIN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Our world is a much wilder place than it looks.

A new study estimates that Earth has almost 8.8 million species, but we've only discovered about a quarter of them. And some of yet-to-be-seen ones could be in our own backyards, scientists say.

So far, only 1.9 million species have been found. Recent discoveries have been small and weird: a psychedelic frogfish, a lizard the size of a dime and even a blind hairy mini-lobster at the bottom of the ocean.

"We are really fairly ignorant of the complexity and colorfulness of this amazing planet," said the study's co-author, Boris Worm, a biology professor at Canada's Dalhousie University. "We need to expose more people to those wonders. It really makes you feel differently about this place we inhabit."

While some scientists and others may question why we need to know the number of species, others say it's important.

There are potential benefits from these undiscovered species, which need to be found before they disappear from the planet, said famed Harvard biologist Edward O. Wilson, who was not part of this study. Some of modern medicine comes from unusual plants and animals.

"We won't know the benefits to humanity (from these species), which potentially are enormous," the Pulitzer Prize-winning Wilson said. "If we're going to advance medical science, we need to know what's in the environment."

Biologists have long known that there's more to Earth than it seems, estimating the number of species to be somewhere between 3 million and 100 million. Figuring out how much is difficult.

Worm and Camilo Mora of the University of Hawaii used complex mathematical models and the pace of discoveries of not only species, but of higher classifications such as family to come up with their estimate.

Their study, published Tuesday in the online journal PLoS Biology, a publication of the Public Library of Science, estimated the number of species at nearly 8.8 million.

Of those species, 6.5 million would be on land and 2.2 million in the ocean, which is a priority for the scientists doing the work since they are part of the Census of Marine Life, an international group of scientists trying to record all the life in the ocean.

The research estimates that animals rule with 7.8 million species, followed by fungi with 611,000 and plants with just shy of 300,000 species.

While some new species like the strange mini-lobster are in exotic places such as undersea vents, "many of these species that remain to be discovered can be found literally in our own backyards," Mora said.

Outside scientists, such as Wilson and preeminent conservation biologist Stuart

Pimm of Duke University, praised the study, although some said even the 8.8 million number may be too low.

The study said it could be off by about 1.3 million species, with the number somewhere between 7.5 million and 10.1 million. But evolutionary biologist Blair Hedges of Penn State University said he thinks the study is not good enough to be even that exact and could be wrong by millions.

Hedges knows firsthand about small species. He found the world's smallest lizard, a half-inch long Caribbean gecko, while crawling on his hands and knees among dead leaves in the Dominican Republic in 2001. And three years ago in Barbados, he found the world's shortest snake, the 4-inch Caribbean threadsnake that lays "a single, very long egg."

The study's authors point to other species as evidence of the growing rate of discovery: the 6-inch, blind, hairy lobster-type species found in 2005 by a submarine looking at hydrothermal vents near where the Pacific meets Antarctica and a brilliant-colored frogfish found by divers in Indonesia in 2008.

Of the 1.9 million species found thus far, only about 1.2 million have been listed in the fledgling online Encyclopedia of Life, a massive international effort to chronicle every species that involves biologists, including Wilson.

If the 8.8 million estimate is correct, "those are brutal numbers," said Encyclopedia of Life executive director Erick Mata. "We could spend the next 400 or 500 years trying to document the species that actually inhabit our planet."

Burley Operation Receives Ag Grant

TIMES-NEWS

The U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service has provided grants to six agricultural projects through its Conservation Innovation Grant program, the agency announced in a press release.

Recipients include Ida Gold Farms in Burley, which received $29,325 to demonstrate a biofuel production project in southern Idaho. According to NRCS, the project is intended to show that oilseed crops can provide a feed crop and biofuel crop without taking the land out of food production. Other recipients included Hamanishi Farms in Fruitland and the University of Idaho. The grants fund projects that can solve natural resource issues, according to Idaho NRCS State Conservationist Jeff Burwell.

Dow Notches Best Gain in 2 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks posted their biggest jump in nearly two weeks on Tuesday. The Dow jumped 322 points, its best day since Aug. 11, when it gained 423. The Dow dipped about 60 points shortly after an earthquake hit the East Coast at 1:51 p.m., but recovered within 20 minutes and soared even higher in the afternoon. The Dow closed with a gain of 3 percent at 11,176.76. The S&P 500 index rose 38.53 points, or 3.4 percent, to 1,162.35. The Nasdaq composite, which tracks mainly technology companies, rose 100.68 points, or 4.3 percent, to 2,446.06.

Administration Announces Plan to Ax Hundreds of Regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Obama administration disclosed plans Tuesday to cut or roll back hundreds of federal regulations, including some that will streamline tax forms at the Internal Revenue Service, let railroad companies pass on installing expensive new technology, and speed up the visa process for low-risk visitors to the U.S.

The administration said the regulations will save businesses up to $10 billion over the next five years and spur job growth in the private sector.

The move, announced while President Barack Obama was on vacation in Martha's Vineyard, was the latest White House gesture to reach out to a business community that has often felt alienated from the administration.

The move was criticized by some as too little, too late.

“The administration's findings and determinations, on their own, are a worthy effort at making technical changes to the regulatory process, but the results of this look-back will not have a material impact on the real regulatory burdens facing businesses today,” said Bill Kovacs, senior

Administration officials said the plans unveiled Tuesday include 500 regulatory reforms, including more than 100 from the Department of Transportation and more than 70 from the Department of Health and Human Services. Once the reforms are fully implemented, the administration estimates businesses will save about $10 billion over five years.

Cass Sunstein, head of the White House Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, said the savings for businesses will give the private sector an opportunity to create new jobs. But Sunstein said he had no estimates on how much help the regulatory reforms would provide.

Many of the regulatory reforms are designed to help small businesses, the administration said. Those include accelerating payments to as many as 60,000 small businesses that have contracts with the Department of Defense, and requiring the Small Business Administration to adopt a single electronic application in order to reduce paperwork burdens.

House Majority Leader

Eric Cantor, R-Va., said the administration's announcement was “underwhelming.” And the Chamber of Commerce said real regulatory reform should include permit streamlining and reforms that would make it easier for businesses to get environmental clearance to start projects.

Obama called for federal agencies to scrutinize their existing regulations after his party suffered sweeping losses in the 2010 elections. The president acknowledged at the time that his relationship with the business community had soured, and he vowed to scrap “dumb” rules that were hindering private sector growth.

Sunstein said the reforms would not impact regulations needed to protect consumers and the environment, including rules used by the Federal Aviation Administration to ensure safe air travel and by the Department of Agriculture and Food and Drug Administration to protect food safety.

FOOD

A Reason to Put Tomato In Your Beer

Loudoun County, Va., resident Michelle Foster sent this story along with the recipe: “In 1966, my husband was an underage freshman at the University of South Dakota in Vermillion. It’s a stretch to say the pub was famous for its red beer, a local specialty, but it turned a blind eye to draft -age boys who found it an excellent way to both start an evening and recover from the one before. It’s equally likely that the beer they used was rotgut and the tomato juice tinned, but it was damned tasty at the time.”

PORTUGUESE PALATE

It’s a long way from Idaho to the Azores, but Portuguese families make themselves at home with good food and an upcoming cultural celebration.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

As Bernadette Gomes and Grace Silva mixed a marinade, Bernadette’s daughters hovered around the counter, waiting to help.

“Hold out your hand,” Bernadette said to her 8-year-old daughter, Gabby. The girl obliged, and Bernadette used the tiny palm to measure a small amount of red pepper flakes.

When all the ingredients were in, Gabby, her sister Cassie and their friend Abbey Pato plunged their freshly washed hands into the bowl to mix the marinade. Don’t taste too much, Bernadette warned — there is too much wine in there for little girls.

Seven women and girls, all of Portuguese heritage, had gathered in Grace’s home Monday evening to make a Portuguese spread of tri-tip, sausage and pork.

But you don’t need to know how to pronounce bifanas or linguica to enjoy the meaty dishes. A tight-knit group of Portuguese Magic Valley residents is

Blenders: Smooth Operators

BY JURA KONCIUS
The Washington Post

The blender, which has been mixing America’s drinks for almost 100 years, is doing its best to fit into today’s fast-paced world. Blenders have joined the trend of quick, healthful foods by whipping up smoothies, whether made with the traditional fruits or with ingredients such as spinach.

The “Will It Blend?” series of 106 videos from blender maker Blendtec, featuring the company’s geekish founder Tom Dickson blending glow sticks, marbles and scores of other unexpected things, went viral on YouTube, with more than half a billion views. And no, you can’t blend an iPad at home.

Between iced coffee drinks, dog food, protein power shakes, baby food and margaritas, the blender has become even more versatile in the kitchen.

What’s New

- Heating elements. Some blenders have heaters to warm up soup you’ve created in your blender.
- BPA free. Many plastic blender jars are now made without bisphenol A, a chemical that has raised health concerns.
- Preprogrammed settings. Special programs for popular things such as smoothies, soups and crushed ice take the worry out of figuring out what button to push.

Low, Medium, High

Bradley Kleparek, a buyer at Williams-Sonoma, recommends these three blenders from the store’s assortment:

- KitchenAid Five-Speed KSB560WH
- 56-ounce capacity.
 - Touch-pad controls are easy to clean.
 - Polycarbonate pitcher is - marked with graduated measurements.

- $91.95.
- Breville Ikon BBL 600
- Preprogrammed settings for smoothies and crushed ice. Lid has removable insert for adding ingredients.
 - Digital display features a timer to track blending times.
 - $199.95

Operating Tips

- Liquids first. Put your liquids in first and solid foods next for best results.
- No hand stirring. Never stick a spoon in your blender while it is on.
- Wash by hand. Dishwashers can be hard on blender parts. Julie Owens, Blendtec’s marketing manager, suggests that after each use, you put a cup of water and a drop of dish soap in your blender and pulse for few seconds, then rinse well.

Shop Smart

- Decide how much you want to spend. Advanced features and horsepower will add to the price. Will you just be blending drinks or also making nut butters and desserts?
- Determine how big your blending jobs are going to be. Are you single or are you going to be making drinks for a crowd? Jar sizes range from about 48 to 64 ounces.
- Choose between a glass or plastic jar. Glass doesn’t stain or scratch, says Cuisinart spokeswoman Mary Rodgers, but it weighs more.

ONLINE: Homebrews Fuel Brew-learning Days

Times-News Night Editor Nate Poppino blogs on all things beer at “Idaho On Tap.” Here’s what’s on his mind this week:

“The Magic Valley Home Brewers already have their next get-together planned, and anyone with an interest in brewing should take the time to swing by.

“Gary Beeson will host a brew day on Sept. 10, just a couple weeks away, at 308 Robbins Ave. in Twin Falls. It sounds like brewing space is tight, but Beeson says folks who want to watch and learn about brewing are welcome to swing by. ...

“If you’re already a brewer, don’t forget to bring any of your own beers you’d like to share — a brew day runs best on homebrew, I’ve always thought. And next month’s Homebrew Smackdown will be discussed, so bring any ideas you have for that.”

Deb Garner adds plain store-bought yogurt to heated goat milk while making yogurt in her Twin Falls home.

Deb Garner eats yogurt every day. For years, she subsisted on a variety of national and store-brand yogurts: tasty and not-so-tasty dairy treats claiming better digestive health, creamy concoctions with fruit on the bottom, fruit-flavored ones, Greek styles, dessert styles, coffee flavors.

Then Garner moved to the country with her husband, Steve, about a year ago. They share a two-story rural Twin Falls home with her daughter’s family, and a rambling acreage with various farm animals. After her Nubian goats started to give milk, Garner determined to make her own yogurt.

We Really Must Do Lunch! Safely ...

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

When it comes to lunch box safety, you can't be too cool for school.

"One of the most important guidelines for keeping it safe is just keeping it cold," says Christine Bruhn, director of the Center for Consumer Research at the University of California, Davis.

Safe lunches begin with safe shopping and home storage. In other words, perishable foods intended for lunches — such as raw or cooked meat and poultry — should be kept cold or frozen at the store and at home. And don't leave food out at room temperature for more than two hours, one hour if the temperature is over 90.

When it comes to packing lunch, it's a good idea to do it the night before. This not only gives you a bit more time during the morning rush, it also allows perishable food plenty of time to chill.

Aviva Goldfarb, author of the "The Six O'Clock Scramble" cookbook, packs lunches while making or cleaning up from dinner. She recommends doing the non-perishable items such as crackers and cookies during the weekend to make things that much easier.

If sliced lunch meats are on the menu, it's a good idea to check the sell-by date before purchasing, and then use up the meat within about three to five days of purchase, says Bruhn. (And, of course, you'll be keeping the meat tightly wrapped and in the fridge in the meantime.)

But how can you be sure your lovingly prepared lunch will stay cool?

One way to go is with an insulated lunch box, a frozen gel pack and thermoses. You might also want to talk to your child about the importance of keeping the lunch somewhere shaded and cool during the day — not in the sun or next to a radiator.

If bringing gel packs to and from school isn't practical, you can slip a frozen juice box — make sure it's labeled as 100 percent juice, of course — into a lunch box or sack lunch. By the time lunch rolls around, the juice should be thawed enough to drink, but the food should still be cool.

To keep hot foods hot, a thermos is required. You'll get the most out of your thermos if you fill it with boiling water and let it stand for a few minutes before emptying it and putting in the hot soup, chili, etc.

Less demanding foods include whole fruits and vegetables, hard cheese, and the old standby of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. (Though you will need to check with school officials to make sure there isn't a ban on peanut butter due to nut allergy concerns.)

String cheese is a good traveler that's popular with children and also is a source of calcium.

Fresh fruits such as apples or oranges are a good choice. For more tender fruit like peaches, you may be better off sending fruit that's been canned with no added sugar. Grapes are good, too, as are carrots and celery. Grapes travel best when packed in a rigid container.

Another sturdy snack is nuts, though again you need to check to make sure your child's school doesn't have a no-nuts rule.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

One way to keep your child's lunch cool is with an insulated lunch box or bag and a frozen gel pack.

To make the process as smooth as possible, Goldfarb, whose website focuses on time-saving ways to feed your family, suggests brainstorming with your children before the school year starts to see what kind of things they'd like for lunch.

Some suggestions:

- Tuna or chicken or egg salad with whole-grain crackers
- Whole-grain bagel or rice cakes with natural peanut butter or cream cheese
- Popcorn alone or mixed with raisins and nuts

• Low-fat yogurt with fresh fruit and granola or other cereal (keep them separate and let your child combine them at lunch)

• Baby carrots, celery, sliced cucumbers, red bell peppers and pita chips with hummus, peanut butter or other dip

And in a tip that has more to do with sanity than safety, don't be afraid to enlist help.

"Packing lunches doesn't have to always be Mom's job," says Goldfarb. "It goes faster if the kids or other parent or caregivers help."

Capers Add Delicious Pungency to Tapenade Wrap

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

When you need to jam a lot of flavor into a simple dish, reach for an umami bomb.

That is, foods that are jammed with the fifth taste — savory (to go along with bitter, sweet, salty and sour). In a small package, these foods deliver seriously big and satisfying flavor. Things like Parmesan cheese, anchovies and steak. As far as leaving me satisfied, savory beats out sweet every time.

It's one of the reasons I'm such a fan of tapenade, a simple puree of olives, anchovies, garlic, capers, olive oil and thyme. It's salty, savory and pungently delicious. It can be spread on baked fish, used as a dip or spread for crusty bread, or do duty as a sandwich condiment.

And don't let the anchovies spook you. You'll never know they are there, but the flavor isn't the same without them.

Using the meat from a rotisserie chicken lends a great hefty, meaty texture to this wrap. But for convenience, deli-sliced turkey breast is a fine substitute.

Roasted Chicken Wraps with Tapenade

Start to finish: 20 minutes.
Servings: 4.

- 1 1/2 cups pitted Kalamata olives
- 2 anchovies
- 3 cloves garlic
- 2 teaspoons capers
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Zest and juice of 1/2 lemon
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh thyme
- Pinch red pepper flakes
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 4 large flour tortillas
- Bibb or Boston lettuce leaves
- Meat from a 1 1/2-pound rotisserie chicken
- 12-ounce jar roasted red peppers, drained, patted dry and chopped
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

In a food processor, combine the olives, anchovies, garlic, capers, olive oil, lemon zest and juice, thyme and red pepper flakes. Pulse until very finely chopped. Season with salt and pepper, then pulse again.

Spoon 1 to 2 tablespoons of the tapenade over each tortilla. Top with several leaves of lettuce, then a quarter each of the chicken, red peppers and Parmesan cheese. Wrap the sides of the tortilla up around the fillings. The wraps can be eaten as is or heated in a 350-degree hosting a 29th Annual Portuguese Folclore Festival on Sept. 3, featuring Portuguese dancers and food vendors.

While this is an annual event, it usually takes place in California. This is its first time in Twin Falls, Grace said, and next year, it's returning to San Jose. Festival organizers expect four or five dance and cultural groups from California to perform.

Food lovers, get your fill of Portuguese food while you can. In southern Idaho, the visiting event might be the easiest place to find the continental cuisine.

Grace's family moved from Portugal to the U.S. when she was 4 years old. She and her husband relocated from northern California to Twin Falls in 2007. "We actually fell in love with the area," said Grace, who estimated 200 to 300 Portuguese families live in southern Idaho.

Grace makes Portuguese food about four times a week — marinated pork sandwiches called bifanas, tri-tip and small sausages called linguica. Since pork is widely available here, Grace makes bifanas frequently. That's not the case in Portugal.

"We only butcher pork in the Azores in the winter-time," Grace said. The reason for that, Bernadette said, is her father's generation had no electricity. They butchered in winter, stored the meat in cold cellars and salted it for preservation.

As Bernadette, Grace and the girls made bifanas, Angie Coderniz stood at the stove, frying slices of linguica in vegetable oil. The slightly spicy sausage is sold at some stores throughout Twin Falls, but Grace said it's not quite the same as what's available in Portugal. They custom order their linguica from a producer in Buhl.

Linguica is versatile, Grace said. Eat the fried slices with eggs, bread or cheese, or nibble on it plain. Maegan Pato said her family makes it every Christmas morning.

It's a fitting tradition. "One thing you always find at a Portuguese celebration is food," Bernadette said.

Bifanas

The secret to great bifanas, or Portuguese pork sandwiches, is slicing the pork as thinly as possible and marinating it for 24 hours. If you're in a pinch, two hours will do. The measurements are approximations, said Grace Silva of Twin Falls, so taste as you go and use your judgement. Or you can go to the Sept. 3 festival and purchase the sandwiches from food vendors. Recipe courtesy Silva.

2 pork tenderloins
12 garlic cloves, diced
2 1/2 cups white wine
1/4 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon crushed red pepper, separated
2 tablespoons salt
Vegetable oil for frying
1/3 cup milk
Rolls

Slice pork tenderloins into thin medallions and set aside. Combine garlic, white wine, vinegar, two tablespoons of crushed red pepper and salt, then taste and tweak. When you're satisfied, add the pork and let marinate for at least two hours and up to 24 hours. When it's done marinating, heat oil in pan over medium heat. Fry pork medallions until brown and slightly crisp on edges. Combine leftover oil and meat drippings with milk and one teaspoon crushed red pepper. Spoon sauce over the pork, then serve on rolls.

Grace Silva prepares popular Portuguese sandwiches of marinated pork, called bifanas, on Monday evening.

Take a Leaf From the Celery Stalk for Flavor

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: I got a bunch of celery at a farmer's market with lots of lovely, fragrant greenery, much more than you get on a bunch at the store. Any ideas about how to use it?

Answer: Unless you've seen celery grown "in the wild," it's amazing to see how leafy it is before it gets trimmed up to make a neat store presentation.

You can use celery leaves just as you would any herb. Many people who have cilantro aversion use celery leaves as a green substitute. It can be a little bitter, but that can be a good thing, adding a bracing, bright note to dishes.

I've chopped celery leaves and added them to soups, and I often sauteed them with onions and chopped celery to give more celery flavor to Thanksgiving dressing.

You also can chop off the leafy top of the bunch and the bottom where all the stalks are attached to add to vegetable stock.

The leaves can be dried and used the same way you'd use any dried herb. Because the water content is so high, celery stalks get mushy if you freeze them, but you can spread the leaves on a metal pan and freeze them. Save them in an airtight bag and use them to add a little celery flavor to soups and stews.

Making Simple Syrup

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Simple syrup really is appropriately named: Combine equal parts (or thereabouts) sugar and water in a pan, heat and stir till the sugar dissolves, voila. Except this task still involves a pan (that will need to be cleaned) and a burner (that will take time to heat the pan).

Hey, some of us are really lazy, OK? And we wondered, isn't there a faster, more expedient way?

There is, if you own a microwave. Put the sugar and water in a microwave-safe Pyrex measuring cup (preferably the 2-cup model sold with its own lid). Heat uncovered 1 minute on high; stir. Repeat until the sugar has dissolved.

After the syrup has cooled, cover and store in the fridge, where it will keep for a couple of weeks. The measuring cup not only makes it easy to pour, but also makes it easy to measure the syrup out for future uses.

A Reason to Put Tomatoes in Your Beer

THE WASHINGTON POST

Loudoun County, Va., resident Michelle Foster sent this story along with the recipe: "In 1966, my husband was an underage freshman at the University of South Dakota in Vermillion, staying on track with his (then) mind-numbing major in accounting. If he changed to French, he would be swooped up immediately by the draft; the draft board was on the lookout for prevaricators and delayers seeking to postpone the draft's mighty maw by changing fields and thus moving back the goal posts of graduation.

"He frequented a local pub and thought about debits and credits perhaps less than (about) Vietnam and Uncle Sam. It's a stretch to say the pub was famous for its red beer, a local specialty, but it turned a blind eye to draft-age boys who found it an excellent way to both start an evening and recover from the one before. It's equally likely that the beer they used was rotgut and the tomato juice tinned, but it was damned tasty at the time.

"John did go to Vietnam, where his French and Vietnamese language skills earned him a top security clearance. And he's now a CPA, go figure. But this is (in much finer form) a lovely drink on a summer afternoon."

Vermillion Red Beer

4 servings.

1 pound heirloom or other ripe garden tomatoes
1 teaspoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
Hot pepper sauce or green jalapeno sauce (optional)
48 ounces chilled pilsner beer of choice
Lime wedges, for garnish

Boil water in a pot large enough to hold the tomatoes over high heat. Use a sharp knife to score an "X" on the bottoms of the tomatoes. Carefully add them to the water and let sit for 15 to 25 seconds for ripe tomatoes or a bit longer for less-ripe ones. Use a slotted spoon or Chinese skimmer to transfer to a plate or work surface; when cool enough to handle, peel off and discard the tomato skins. Cut the tomatoes into quarters. Place a strainer over a medium bowl; scoop out the tomato seeds and soft flesh, letting it fall into the strainer; press with a spatula or wooden spoon so that the tomato juices run into the bowl. There should be a good amount of firm tomato flesh left; transfer to a blender along with the strained juices and process until no chunks remain. Add the lemon juice, the salt and hot pepper sauce (if using) to taste; blend just to combine. The yield should be about 8 ounces.

Transfer to an airtight container; refrigerate long enough so that the juice is the same temperature as the beer it will be poured into.

Divide the juice equally among 4 pilsner glasses (2 ounces per glass). Pour in the beer. Garnish with the lime wedges; serve immediately.

Yogurt

in your own backyard? No matter — yogurt making is just as accessible to urban cooks.

Over the past three decades our appetite for yogurt has exploded; the industry has witnessed rapid 10 percent annual growth, and more products have hit grocers' shelves. With yogurt's popularity on the rise, some people — like Garner — have decided to simply make it at home.

"We like the idea of getting closer to our food sources and having the grandchildren understand where it comes from," Garner said. "So far, I've made just a couple of batches and it's still a bit sour and not as thick as the store-bought yogurt they are used to, but we're getting closer."

Homemade yogurt has been a staple food for Alan Porter of Rupert nearly his entire life, and knowing how to make it himself has saved a bundle.

"I've been making yogurt since I was 15; that's when I first learned how to make it as a 4-H project," Porter said. "When you consider that the regular little containers cost about 50 cents and Greek-style yogurt runs upwards of a dollar and a half and you can make a gallon of either for a little over $3.50, it is worth learning how to make it at home."

Although you can use any variety of milk, Porter prefers non-fat, store-bought milk for his batches.

The key to making yogurt is adding at least two live cultures — Streptococcus thermophilus and Lactobacillus bulgaricus — into heated milk. The easiest source of those is store-bought yogurts that contain live cultures — read the label to be sure — in either plain flavors of regular or Greek style. Greek-style yogurt has up to six live cultures.

The alternative source is yogurt start, a freeze-dried product containing the essential live cultures.

"Those are the good bacteria, or live cultures," said University of Idaho Extension educator Rhea Lanting in Twin Falls. "These microorganisms live naturally in the digestive tract and can help with diarrhea, constipation and have been shown to have other healthy benefits. Of course, the best thing about making anything yourself is knowing what is in it. You can control things like sugar and fat content."

After those live cultures are added to heated milk, an incubation period of eight to 12 hours is needed, with the milk keeping a set temperature of about 110 degrees in order for the yogurt to firm.

"The milk is thickened by an increase in the acidity from lactic acid produced by the bacteria," Porter said.

Electronic yogurt makers, which keep the temperature set at the optimal 110-degree mark, are available at places like Twin Falls kitchen store Rudy's — A Cooks Paradise. But Porter simply uses the heat given off by his oven light.

"You don't have to buy a yogurt maker, although the individual cups are convenient," Porter said. "All you have to do is turn on your oven light and then check the temperature periodically over the 12-hour period to make sure it stays at that constant 110-degree mark"

Blair Koch may be reached at blairkoch@gmail.com or 316-2607.

Alan Porter's Homemade Yogurt

Make yogurt at home with this easy-to-try recipe from a Rupert cook.

1 gallon fat-free milk
1 cup powdered milk
1 (6-ounce) container of plain Greek yogurt

Turn on oven light, letting it heat the oven to 110 degrees (see note). Heat milk in pan on stovetop to 165 degrees, then place heated milk in ice bath to cool to about 120 degrees. Remove the skin that formed on top of the milk. Stir in powdered milk. When milk is at 110 degrees, stir in Greek yogurt. Pour mixture into large sanitized glass bowl and place into heated oven. Let sit eight to 12 hours, until it reaches desired firmness.

After yogurt is set, refrigerate 12 hours and enjoy. Substitute yogurt for sour cream, serve with fruit for breakfast or a snack, or try yogurt cheese: Line a large strainer or colander with cheesecloth and place over a bowl, then pour in the yogurt. Move the bowl and colander to the refrigerator. The liquid, or whey, will drain overnight, giving you a richer and creamier product perfect for eating or cooking with.

Note: The USDA Food Safety Inspection Service suggests testing your oven's temperature with an oven thermometer. These inexpensive tools can be found at major retailers and kitchen supply stores. In addition to seeing whether your oven light will provide the correct incubation environment for yogurt, the USDA suggests testing your oven periodically for food safety.

Bread, Cheese Are Savory Setting for Tomatoes

THE WASHINGTON POST

The taste of this dish is at once deeply savory and sweet. Serve with any slow-braised or grilled meat. From Shari Saslaw of Cary, N.C.

Cardamom-Stewed Tomatoes with Bread Bits and Cheese

Makes 3 1/2 to 4 cups (6 to 8 servings).

- 3 cups peeled, diced ripe red tomatoes, and their juices
- 1/3 cup freshly squeezed orange juice
- 3 tablespoons salted butter
- 2 tablespoons light brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon regular or low-sodium soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom, preferably black cardamom
- 1 medium jalapeno pepper, stemmed, seeded and minced or cut into very thin strips
- 3 slices crusty baguette (about 2 ounces), chopped or torn into small pieces
- 4 ounces ricotta salata (salty, dense ricotta), crumbled or cut into shavings
- 8 basil leaves, stacked, rolled and cut crosswise into thin strips (chiffonade; optional)

Combine the tomatoes and their juices, the orange juice, 2 tablespoons of the butter, the brown sugar, soy sauce, cardamom and jalapeno in a medium saucepan over medium-low heat. Cook for about 25 minutes, stirring occasionally. Keep in mind that the tomatoes will be mixed with the bread and cheese, so don't worry if the mixture tastes undersalted. Meanwhile, melt the remaining tablespoon of butter in a medium skillet over medium-high heat, being careful not to let it brown. Add the bread pieces and cook/toast for 5 to 7 minutes, stirring often, so they are coated evenly and become lightly browned. Remove from the heat. Divide the tomato mixture among individual plates; top with the toasted bread pieces and cheese and, if desired, the basil. Serve warm. Per serving (based on 8, using low-sodium soy sauce): 130 calories, 4 g protein, 12 g carbohydrates, 8 g fat, 5 g saturated fat, 25 mg cholesterol, 400 mg sodium, 1 g dietary fiber, 6 g sugar.

Eating Lighter: Pork Skewers

MARVIN JOSEPH • WASHINGTON POST

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

I'm a huge fan of skewers. They appeal to all ages. There are lots of ways to flavor them, and it's easy to monitor the portion size. Here, a lean, center-cut pork loin is treated to a glaze made with ginger, sesame oil and a fresh plum. The preparation is summery and light. The skewered pork cooks quickly on the grill with little prep time. A side benefit of making your own marinade and glaze: sodium control. The pork needs to marinate for at least 2 hours or up to overnight. If you use wooden or bamboo skewers, soak them in water for at least 30 minutes before grilling.

Ginger-Plum-Glazed Pork Skewers

Makes about 16 skewers: 4 servings.

- For the pork and marinade:
- 1 pound boneless pork loin, sliced on the diagonal into 6-inch-long, 1-inch thick pieces (may substitute boneless, skinless chicken breast halves cut into pieces)
 - 2 tablespoons sherry wine vinegar
 - 1 tablespoon olive oil

- 2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
 - 2 teaspoons low-sodium soy sauce
 - 1-inch piece peeled ginger root, grated (1 teaspoon)
 - 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- For the glaze:
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
 - 1 teaspoon toasted sesame oil
 - 1-inch piece peeled ginger root, grated (1 teaspoon)
 - 1 thin-skinned plum, such as Santa Rosa, pitted and cut into 1/4-inch dice (1/2 cup)
 - 3 tablespoons sugar
 - 1/2 teaspoon low-sodium soy sauce
- For serving:
- 2 scallions, white and light-green parts, cut crosswise into thin slices
 - Toasted sesame seeds, for garnish (optional)

For the pork and marinade: Trim and discard all visible fat from the pork. Cut the loin in half horizontally, as you would a sandwich roll. Place the halves cut side down, then cut them lengthwise into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Whisk together the vinegar, olive oil, sesame oil, soy sauce, ginger and sugar in a small bowl; transfer to a resealable plastic food storage bag or a shallow dish. Add the pork slices and turn to coat thoroughly in the marinade. Cover or seal; refrigerate for at least 2 hours or as long as overnight. When ready to cook, thread each pork slice (or 2 small ones) onto a skewer. Prepare the grill for direct heat: If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat the grill rack with oil and place it on the grill. Meanwhile, make the glaze: Heat the olive oil and sesame oil in a small saucepan over medium heat. Add the ginger; cook for 30 seconds. Add the diced plum, sugar and soy sauce. Once the sugar has dissolved and the mixture begins to boil, reduce the heat to medium-low to maintain a slight bubble at the edges. Cook for 6 to 8 minutes, until the fruit is soft. Use an immersion (stick) blender to puree until smooth, or transfer to a blender with the center knob of the lid removed and a towel placed over the opening (to allow steam to escape); puree until smooth. Transfer to a small bowl. Arrange the skewers of marinated pork on the hot grill. Close the grill lid; cook for 2 to 4 minutes, until the pork pieces start to look cooked on top and the undersides have grill marks. Use tongs to turn the skewers over. Use half the marinade to brush the just-cooked sides of the pork. Close the lid and cook for 2 or 3 minutes, until the pork is cooked through. Turn the skewers over and brush the remaining glaze on the second sides. Close the lid and cook for 1 minute. To serve, transfer the skewers to a platter or serving plate. Garnish with the sliced scallions and sesame seeds, if desired. Serve warm. Per serving: 280 calories, 23 g protein, 5 g carbohydrates, 18 g fat, 5 g saturated fat, 65 mg cholesterol, 60 mg sodium, 0 g dietary fiber, 4 g sugar.

Grilled Chicken Salad Adds Beans to Your Table

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

I have a simple way to get more beans onto our dinner table. I put them in every-thing: soups, salads, pasta dishes and stews. What's great is how well they take to various pairings.

Here, they're part of a grilled chicken salad; a bal-samic vinegar ties the main ingredients together. Parsley adds a fresh note, and celery provides the crunch. If you've had one too many chicken salads, try this dish with grilled shrimp.

Making the dressing in a blender yields a smooth con-sistency, but if you'd prefer to just whisk the ingredients to-gether, that's okay as well.

The chicken needs to mar-inate in the refrigerator for at least 2 hours and up to 8 hours.

Balsamic Chicken and White Bean Salad

8 servings

- 2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar, or more to taste
- 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
- 2 teaspoons dried herbs, such as fines herbes, parsley, chives and tarragon
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 pound boneless, skinless, thin-sliced chicken breast cutlets
- 1 small to medium red onion (4 ounces), cut into two 2-ounce, 1/3-inch-thick slices
- 2 large ribs celery, trimmed and cut crosswise into

MARVIN JOSEPH • WASHINGTON POST. TABLEWARE FROM CRATE AND BARREL

- thin slices (1 1/2 cups)
- 1 1/2 cups cooked, no-salt-added cannellini beans (one 15-ounce can, drained and rinsed)
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh parsley

Blend or whisk together the balsamic and red wine vinegars, mustard, dried herbs, sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Slowly blend or whisk in the oil. Taste, and adjust the sea-soning as needed, adding vinegar if you want more of a bite. Transfer to an air-tight container.

Combine the chicken and 3 tablespoons of the dress-ing in a resealable plastic food storage bag. Seal, and massage through the bag to evenly coat the chicken. Refrigerate for at least 2 and up to 8 hours. Refriger-ate the remaining dressing until ready to use.

Prepare the grill for direct heat: If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood bri-quettes; when the bri-quettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medi-um-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 sec-onds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill.

Transfer the chicken to the prepared grill along with the onion slices; cover the grill. Cook for 3 to 4 minutes on one side, until the top of the chicken starts to look cooked and the chicken and onions have grill marks on the bot-tom. Turn over the chicken and the onions and cook, covered, for 2 to 3 minutes, until the chicken is cooked through and the onions have grill marks on both sides. Transfer the chicken and onions to a platter to rest for 10 to 15 minutes.

Once the chicken has cooled, cut it into pieces similar in size to the can-nellini beans, about 1 inch long and 1/3-inch thick. Cut the onion into 1/3-inch pieces.

Combine the chicken, onion, celery, cannellini beans, parsley and the re-maining dressing in a large bowl; toss well to mix.

Taste, and adjust the sea-soning as needed.

Serve right away, or refrig-erate until ready to eat.

Bring to room temperature before serving.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Elmer Smith; her sons, Donald LaTour, Michael Smith and Lawrence L. Smith; her sister, Marcella Wold; and her brother, Vernon Leland; as well as her granddaughter, Ronica Lynn LaTour LaRock; as well as several stepchildren.

A memorial Mass will be said for Bernadette at the St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church in Twin Falls. Services and arrangements are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Betty Jean Holden Bonnett

Dec. 16, 1927-Aug. 20, 2011

Betty Jean Holden Bonnett passed away peacefully Saturday, Aug. 20, 2011, following living with hydrocephalus for more than 10 years.

Betty was born in Greeley, Colo., on Dec. 16, 1927, the younger of two daughters of Edwin and Gladys Holden. The family moved to Idaho Falls, Idaho, in 1940, where Betty attended school and graduated from Idaho Falls High School. She then attended the University of Idaho in Moscow, Idaho, studying foreign relations and Spanish. It was at the U of I that Betty met John R. Bonnett. They were married in June of 1948 and, after a brief time in Moscow, moved to Idaho Falls.

In addition to raising a family, Betty was active in church work, teaching Sunday school, singing in the choir, ringing hand bells and being an ordained deacon in the First Presbyterian Church of Twin Falls. She was active in Girl Scouting and Jobs Daughters, both as a youth and an adult. Betty was very involved in the PEO Sisterhood, serving as president in three local chapters (AA, Idaho Falls; B, Blackfoot; and AI, Twin Falls), and she was a past president of the Idaho State Chapter of PEO, having served on the state's executive board for seven years.

Always active, Betty filled her spare time with reading, knitting, needlepoint, playing bridge and entertaining friends. Summers were spent with children and grandchildren at the family cabin near West Yellowstone, Mont.

This was a great place to watch children learn to swim, water ski and build projects while she relaxed in her lounge chair by the side of the lake.

Betty is survived by her husband, John; and three of their four children, John H. and Tina of Twin Falls, Robert K. III and Jann of Shelton, Wash., and Brenda J. and Jim Atchison of Pittsburg, Calif. She is also survived by eight grandchildren, John T., Shanna, Robert K. IV, Michael, Sarah, Katy, Annie and Jennifer; and numerous great-grandchildren. Betty was preceded in passing by their daughter, Nancy Lynn Bonnett.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests Betty's friends consider a memorial gift to The Idaho Cottey College Award Fund. Checks should be made to the PEO Foundation and mailed to Marta Arthurs, P.O. Box 681, Osburn, ID 83849. On the memo line of your check, please note "In memory of Betty Bonnett."

A celebration of life conducted by the Rev. Phil Price will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Aug. 26, at the First Presbyterian Church of Twin Falls, 209 Fifth Ave. N. Services are under the direction of Serenity Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

David Leonard O'Donahue

March 13, 1938-Aug. 21, 2011

BURLEY • David Leonard O'Donahue, 73, passed away quietly at home Sunday, Aug. 21, 2011.

He was the son of James and Helen O'Donahue, born March 13, 1938, in Medford, Ore. He was raised in Klamath Falls, Ore. Following high school graduation, he spent two years in the Navy. After he was released from the Navy, he attended Southern Oregon University. David held many jobs and, in 1975, found himself working on a ranch in Otis, Colo. There he met Trish Barrett, who he married in February of 1976. They felt called to ministry, and he attended Rhema Bible Training Center, where he graduated in 1981. Following graduation in 1981, they pastored in Klamath Falls, Ore. They and their family moved to Burley, Idaho, in July of 1984. He was bi-vocational, in that he pastored Peace Fellowship and also worked for Simplot Soilbuilders, Circle A Construction, and M.H. King's.

One of David's No. 1 passions, besides his loving family, was that everyone he knew have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. "For God so loved the world that He gave His begotten Son that whosoever believed in Him shall have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

He is survived by his wife of 35 years, Patricia (Trish) of Burley; daughter, Shannon Stuart, Robbie Stuart, Danny Stuart, Richard Stuart, Jacob Phillips of central California, and Daniele (Barry) Masson of Lawton, Okla.; son, Sean (Heather) O'Donahue, Cody Stewart, Miranda Stewart, Tyllor Austin, Kaitlynn Villines of Paul, and Meggian O'Donahue of Nampa; and daughter, Kelli (Chris) Page and Celie Page of Littleton, Colo. He was preceded in death by James and Helen O'Donahue; son in-law, David Stewart; and Ryan Page, grandson.

A funeral service will be held in David's honor at 10 a.m. Friday, Aug. 26, at the Mountain View Christian Center, 317 W. 27th St. in Burley. Burial will be at the Paul Cemetery. A viewing will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. the night prior to the funeral (Thursday evening) at the Morrison-Payne Funeral Home, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, and again one hour prior to the start of the funeral Friday at the church.

Roasting Improves Easy-Prep Pasta

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

The prep for this dish is about as easy as it gets. The flavor comes from vegetables at the peak of the season, roasted to bring out their best. Freshly ground pepper and basil provide the accent notes; all in all, a wonderful late-summer dish.

This is also one of those “just-happens-to-be-vegetarian” dishes that will please meat eaters and vegetarians alike.

Pasta With Roasted Cherry Tomatoes and Sweet Pepper

4 servings.

1 pound cherry tomatoes, stemmed and cut in half

One 8-ounce sweet bell pepper (yellow, red or orange), stemmed, seeded and cut into 1-inch pieces

1 large sweet onion, such as Maui or Vidalia, cut into 1-inch chunks (10 to 11 ounces)

2 tablespoons olive oil

Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

8 ounces dried farfalle (bow-tie pasta)

3 tablespoons thinly sliced basil leaves

Freshly grated Parmesan

MARVIN JOSEPH •
WASHINGTON POST

giano-Reggiano cheese, for serving (optional)

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees.

Toss together the tomatoes, bell pepper, onion, oil, and salt and pepper to taste in a large roasting pan, spreading them in an even layer. Roast for 25 to 35 minutes, until the vegetables are soft and the pepper pieces are just starting to brown.

While the vegetables are roasting, cook the pasta according to the package directions. Drain.

Combine the roasted vegetables with the pasta and basil; toss to incorporate. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Serve warm or at room temperature. Pass the cheese at the table, if desired.

Light Lunch: Salmon-stuffed Tomatoes

THE WASHINGTON POST

Fill empty plum tomato halves with a mixture of salmon, corn, green bell pepper, shallot, mayonnaise, turmeric and parsley, and you get little tugboats; hence the name of the recipe from Laurel, Md., resident Melba Brown.

She says they make nice appetizers and can be served as light lunch or picnic fare.

Tomato Tugs

Makes 6 appetizer servings or 4 light-meal servings.

6 ounces canned wild Alaskan pink salmon, drained
1/2 cup fresh corn kernels, barely cooked, then cooled
2 tablespoons finely diced green bell pepper
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallot

1 heaping tablespoon regular or low-fat mayonnaise
1/4 teaspoon ground turmeric
1/4 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
1 teaspoon dried parsley
3 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice (from 1 lemon)
6 plum tomatoes, cut in half lengthwise

Combine the salmon, corn, green bell pepper, shallot, mayonnaise, turmeric, black pepper, dried parsley and lemon juice in a mixing bowl, stirring until well blended.

Scoop out the seeds and gel from each tomato half and discard them; make sure to leave the walls of the tomato intact.

Clover Christian School Turns 97 Years Old

This little Christian School located south of Buhl and Filer is still teaching children how to live a long peaceful life in a Christian atmosphere. They are not only taught the Word of God from the Bible but are taught to respect each other and their elders. They are also taught a responsibility and an understanding of the results of their actions. They also learn how to take care of the world they live in and the responsibility they will have as adults. The parents that send their children to Clover Christian School have dedicated some of their means to raising their children to be outstanding citizens, as one parent said, “We love our children and we want the best education possible that will teach them the truth about life.” The children also salute the flag and sing God Bless America for the school is proud of our American heritage. There are not many schools that teach Christian values so if you have children from kindergarten to the fifth grade you are welcome to apply to Clover Christian School. Yes, it takes dedication of the parents to raise children in this society today. We must make choices and some of these choices will stay with our children for eternity. Clover Christian School is dedicated to helping parents raise their children in a loving way.

Boise St. to face beef, bloodlines against Georgia

It's tough to tell what's more impressive about Georgia defensive tackle Kwame Geathers (99) – his family tree or his size. Geathers, at 6-6, 350 pounds, is a tree-trunk sized presence for the Bulldogs. And no doubt he's gotten plenty of advice from two brothers that are currently NFL defensive ends, as well as his uncle Jumpy, a long-time NFL defensive lineman himself.

Despite Diagnosis, Summitt Will Coach

Legendary Tennessee coach is told she has early onset dementia.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. • Tennessee's Pat Summitt plans to coach "as long as the good Lord is willing" despite recently being diagnosed with early onset dementia.

In a statement from Summitt released by the university on Tuesday, the Hall of Fame coach said she visited with doctors at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., after the end of the 2010-11 basketball season ended and was diagnosed with early onset dementia – Alzheimer's type – over the summer.

"I plan to continue to be your coach," Summitt said. "Obviously, I realize I may have some limitations with this condition since there will be some good days and some bad days."

Tennessee athletics director Joan Cronan told the AP that Summitt first thought her symptoms were side effects from medicine she was taking to treat rheumatoid arthritis. She said Summitt appears to be feeling better after beginning to get treatment for the dementia condition and speaking publically about it.

"She's ready to fight this and move on," Cronan said. "She had to come to grips with how she wanted to face it."

Connecticut coach Geno Auriemma said in a statement he was shocked and saddened to hear the news of Summitt's diagnosis.

"You don't necessarily associate dementia with people our age so this announcement really put things in perspective," Auriemma said. "Pat has great support from her family, friends and staff and I know they will help her immensely. There is no doubt in my mind that Pat will take on this challenge as she has all others during her Hall of Fame career – head on. I wish her all the best."

DISTRICT IV SOCCER PREVIEW

DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

Nerves are likely no longer going to get the best of Twin Falls' Claire Goss, a scary proposition for area teams, since she has already scored 49 goals in her prep career.

Nothing But Net

After a successful summer with her club team, Twin Falls' Claire Goss could be area's top girls soccer player.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Penalties and breakaways shouldn't give Claire Goss too much trouble from now on. Not after this kind of summer, at least.

Goss, a junior for the Twin Falls girls soccer team, won two national tournaments with her club team, FC Nova out of Meridian. She's scored 49 goals in her prep career, but as late as last season admitted she often lets nerves get the best of her when sent clean through on goal or setting up for a penalty kick.

But that could be a thing of the past.

What you need to know about the area's boys and girls soccer teams.

CSI women's volleyball head coach Heidi Cartisser, back, gives instruction to freshman Marie Fujii.

After Five, Still Alive

Many feared the worst when the NJCAA came calling (again) on CSI's volleyball program. A half-decade into Heidi Cartisser's tenure as head coach, who can tell the difference?

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Five years ago today, College of Southern Idaho volleyball was at a crossroads.

Lost in a messy divorce between the Golden Eagles and one of the most successful coaches in JUCO volleyball history was the introduction of Heidi Cartisser as the woman charged to pick up the pieces.

An early phone call from CSI President Jerry Beck with an offer to take over the program kickstarted a whirlwind day that saw Cartisser take her dream job and replace the man she once played for, Ben Stroud. That happened days after CSI was notified the volleyball program was under NJCAA investigation for the second time in three years, prompting fears of the death penalty.

At Hagerman, No Looking Back at Losses

dbashore@magicvalley.com.

HAGERMAN • Losing the Snake River Conference's offensive player of the year and a first-team receiver, among others, isn't ever something to be looked forward to. Especially not when quarterback Zac Reid and receiver Ryan Luttmer helped lead Hagerman to a third-place finish in the state last season. But a crop of talented but inexperienced players are expected to step into the voids.

"Those kinds of kids are tough to replace, but we're grateful for the seniors that we do have this season, and we've got some talent," said Hagerman coach Ron Echols.

Four other conference teams return their quarterbacks: Grace, Raft River, Oakley and Shoshone. But Kade Kress, who stood out last season as a freshman, moves from the receiver position to under center and will provide Hagerman with another weapon in a crowded backfield.

Kress, fellow sophomore Austin Funkhouser and senior Jon Owsley will carry the bulk of the rushing load, while Kress will be charged with keeping defenses honest by throwing to receiving corps led by senior Xavier Strick.

"Last season we were all about attacking the edges," Echols said. "This year we're going to have to be a little bit more balanced."

The offensive and defensive lines have a similar mix of young talent and seasoned experience.

With only a handful of upperclassmen on the roster, Hagerman hopes it's not a year away from a state title. Early-season adjusting and quick acclimation to the varsity game will go a long way toward a repeat run at the conference title and state hardware.

Leaders Abound For Pilots

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

On the surface, the 2011 Glenns Ferry football team is eerily reminiscent of the 2009 squad: heavy on seniors that the year prior took some lumps and had a losing record but made it to the playoffs.

No pressure, guys, but the 2009 team added some hardware to the school's trophy case.

Starting mostly juniors with little varsity experience, the Pilots went 2-7 last season and qualified out of a Kansas City playoff to face eventual state champion West Side. Now those players, many of whom return, are poised to use their experience and build a stronger platform for a charge at the state playoffs.

"If you look at that (2009) team, we were 3-7 at the year before and we ended up 8-3 and taking third in state. What it came down to was we had a lot of juniors on the 3-7 team that were starting varsity for the first time, learning the system and getting experience, and when they came back as seniors they were much improved," said Glenns Ferry coach Rob Spriggs. "Last year we started almost all juniors and they had their first year of varsity experience, and hopefully they'll be able to bring maturity this year and be a little stronger and familiar with the system."

Three of the key cogs in this year's team figure to be players central to just about everything that went on at Glenns Ferry last season: Michael Willis, John Acord, and Adrian Martinez. Martinez is under center, while Willis and Chris Popoca are the team's receivers. Acord and Pepper Janousek will feature in the backfield, trying in tandem to replace Terry Jacobsen, who stood out for the Pilots in each of the last two seasons.

Spriggs pegged Declo as the early favorite in the Canyon Conference, citing the team's recent successes at varsity and junior varsity levels, but added that any of the other four teams could put forth a challenge.

Glenns Ferry's challenge begins Friday against a formidable Nampa Christian team.

"They're always a very good team, very well-coached. The have a quarterback and one skill guy returning that were pretty distinguished athletes," Spriggs said. "You never know how good or bad you are until you play someone else. They'll be a definitely a good test for us."

Bliss junior Estephanie Altamirano (14) sends the ball forward while Declo's Christina Cuevas trails the play Tuesday at Declo High School.

Opener is Pure Bliss

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

DECLO • It didn't take long for the Bliss girls soccer team to overcome its first-game jitters.

In the first minute of the Bears' season opener against Declo on Tuesday, Kendall Martell had her shot ricochet off the Declo goalkeeper. Demsie Butler gathered the rebound and punched it into the net.

From there, the Bears cruised to a 6-1 win over the Hornets.

"We were all a little nervous," said Butler. "We knew we better go in there with our heads up and work really hard at it."

In a game that featured several freshmen playing for both sides, a pair of senior forwards stole the show — left wing Butler and right wing Martell.

Butler scored two goals and had two assists, and Martell added three assists.

"I'm happy for my teammates. We all did a really good job, and we all had fun, which is really important," said Butler. "As a team we do a good job passing and communicating."

Freshmen Chloe Schoessler, Melissa Garza and Kylee Carpenter, along with junior Maria Cortez, scored goals for Bliss.

"We have a pretty good group of girls. A lot of freshmen," said Bliss coach Diana Butler. "We need to work on our passing. We played a little kickball. That will just come with time. With so many freshmen, they're not used to playing together."

Declo is young, too. The Hornets have four seniors, eight freshmen and are training new goalkeepers.

"I'm hoping by the end of the season we should be doing fairly well when they get more experience in games," said Declo coach Alyssa Terry. "Then they have the next four years to be awesome."

Despite trailing 4-0 at halftime Declo continued to fight. The Hornets' goal by Jana Brown came one minute into the second half.

But the Bears defense was otherwise solid and senior goalkeeper Cassi Garza had five saves.

"As long as we stay healthy, we might be a contender come tournament time," Diana Butler said. "But a lot can happen between now and then. There are some pretty good teams in this district."

Buhl 4, Community School 3

Kali Archibald scored midway through the second half to break a deadlock and give Buhl a victory.

The teams split four goals in the first half, Katie Feldman staking the Cutthroats (0-2-0) to a 2-0 lead before Skyler Barger tied it up for Buhl (1-0-0). Hailey Rhein-schild gave the visitors the lead again before Tyana Weaver equalized and Archibald gave the Indians their only lead of the match.

Boys soccer Wendell 1, Gooding 1

Eder Macias scored from just outside the penalty area to help Wendell draw with rival Gooding.

After Luis Patino gave the Senators (0-0-1) the lead 15 minutes in, Macias ripped in a shot from 20 yards into the top-left corner to ensure both teams went home with a point in the rematch of last season's Class 3A tournament semifinal, which Wendell won on penalty kicks on its way to the state title.

Alexis Camargo had seven saves for the Trojans (0-1-1).

Buhl 1, Community School 1

Gustavo Magana scored an impressive individual goal with five minutes to play, helping Buhl rescue a draw with the visiting Cutthroats.

Magana received a long pass about 30 yards from goal, then juiced and jinked his way into the area before guiding the ball into the net from six yards out.

Cameron Jenner scored in the 50th minute for the Cutthroats.

Cartisser

"Crazy is probably the best way to describe that day," she said last week, recalling the moment. "At first it was really confusing, and I didn't understand what was going on. But when (Beck) offered the job it was a no-brainer. We left Chicago to come back to Twin Falls, and this was where we wanted to be."

The move was controversial, to say the least. Stroud, claiming he wasn't afforded due process, wanted his job back. Some fans and players were displeased with the change. Cartisser found herself thrust into the unenviable position of being the rock at CSI, even as the ground upon which the program stood was cracking.

Cartisser had seen rebuilding jobs before — prior to CSI she was the head coach at Chicago State, and in her first season won more matches than the team had in the previous seven combined — but nothing like what awaited her in Twin Falls.

The team faced a year of probation, but the death penalty averted. It might as well have come, in some respects. With no hope of defending their national championship, some players sat out the 2006 season to preserve eligibility. Outsiders lamented what they believed was the demise of the most successful volleyball program in NJCAA Division I history.

But in 2007, Cartisser led the team back to nationals in its first season off probation. In 2009, a little more than three years after she gladly walked into the hornets' nest, the Golden Eagles captured their record ninth national championship, breaking a tie with Miami Dade College (Fla.). This season they'll try again to become the first to double figures. Twice in the last three years CSI has failed to reach the national tournament — but that's more a product of the rest of the nation catching up, as opposed to Golden Eagle shortcomings, even if the latter is how it's viewed in Twin Falls.

"There have been amazing ups, and some interesting times on the other side," Cartisser said. "But putting it all in perspective, I wouldn't change anything. I never doubted that I was up to the challenge. Making nationals is the expectation, and there's no other place in the country where you can step into that right away. I don't want it any other way."

Five years after returning to a place she always wanted to be, there's little doubt that the right person is in charge. A national championship and a run free of NCJAA suspicion won't hurt the cause, either.

"We believe in what Heidi and her coaching staff stress to our student athletes both on and off the court," said CSI athletic director Joel Bate, who moved into the position shortly after Cartisser was hired. "There was never a question about whether she was the right person for the job. We knew that with what she was preaching to her players, the on-court results would take care of themselves."

Asked about her "next five years" plan on-court, Cartisser chuckled. Five national championships is the goal at a program like CSI, and if not that then at the very least five national tournament appearances.

Off the court, her goals are more abstract and less demanding: "To make our fan base even bigger than it is right now, to call as much attention to the sport of volleyball as possible, and to get as many people playing the game as we can."

Goss

In the first of two national tournaments over the summer, Goss scored the eventual match-winner in the championship match as FC Nova beat Albion Hurricanes FC of Houston 2-0 in extra time.

"You fight so hard, knowing you have to score, and when the final whistle goes and you have overtime, your heart kind of sinks. But in overtime our right winger got free, and I just started running. I knew that was it, and she crossed me the ball," Goss said. "All I could think was, 'If I screw this up I'm dead,' and it went in. Then I got tackled by everyone and realized I just scored the winning goal."

In the second tournament's championship game, she played defense and successfully marked out the opposing team's top forward. It was an effort that landed her on the Pacific Northwest Team of the Month for August, published by topdrawersoccer.com.

That experience could pay huge dividends over the next two seasons with Twin Falls.

"That just gives her that much more experience and confidence," said Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman. "All of my varsity girls have played club ball this summer and that's a great experience for them."

Just a junior, Goss acts like a senior. Part of that is the amount of soccer she's played over the past handful of seasons. Part of that is because there aren't any seniors on this year's team.

She says she's just grown into the role, however. "As a sophomore you're really not allowed to say all that much, but this year I just feel like I'm more of a leader," she said. "I've been able to help out planning strategies and things like that."

That's something that will have to take place on the field as well. Especially as she'll draw a large chunk of attention from the higher-caliber teams Twin Falls faces this season.

"We hope she'll be able to use that and get some of the other kids involved," said Kauffman.

DISTRICT IV TEAM PREVIEWS

Boys

Class 4A Great Basin Conference

Wood River lost 11 seniors, many of them key, from last season's first-ever GBC championship squad. Simplification and building will be the key this season. ... Canyon Ridge has one of the conference's more proficient scorers in Suren Thapa and arguably the league's best keeper in sophomore Josh Clark. ... Twin Falls lost a number of key players from the 2010 squad but hopes to make up for that with high-discipline and young talent coming up from the junior varsity ranks. ... Burley surprised many by reaching the state tournament a year ago, but the Bobcats lost a number of vital players and will have to rebuild again to make it back to state. ... Jerome was dethroned by Wood River and lost its two most influential players, and the rest of the conference might be catching up. ... Minico looks to continue its improvement, with Enoch Coats among those leading the way.

Class 3A High Desert Conference

Wendell lost several key cogs in the first state champion in program history, but it has Eder Macias back to lead the line and a few other players with experience. ... Gooding will try to reach the state semifinals for the third straight season, this time aiming to reclaim the championship it lost a year ago. ... Community School will benefit from added numbers, and the presence of Tom Crosby and Will Brokaw among seven seniors should help with experience. ... Buhl hopes to crack the top two and get over the hump to state. Daniel Peralta will be instrumental in attack, with Pablo Serrano helping to keep things tight in the back. ... Bliss took its lumps but returns more than a dozen players with experience. ... Filer is in the same boat as Bliss, in terms of taking lumps last season and looking for improvement.

Girls

Class 4A Great Basin Conference

Twin Falls lost some key players, but returns scoring threats Claire Goss and Morgan McInnes, among others. ... Wood River graduated all-time leading scorer Tanner Dredge and lost influential senior Kaitana Martinez to a knee injury, but senior midfielder Sloan Storey looks to lead the Wolverines back to state. ... Burley has a new coach in Ray Sansom and talented players in Aubrie Vale and Megan Graham, but it still looks to be a work in progress. ... Minico scored a big win last weekend and will hope to have more from Araciel Santana as it looks to continue improving. ... Canyon Ridge started coming on last season and hopes to improve further in 2011. ... Jerome struggled last season and hopes to turn things around.

Class 3A High Desert Conference

Community School returns most of its players from last season's conference championship team, including its top four scorers led by Ellie Swanson. ... Buhl has 18 players returning, including Skyler Barger to lead the attack in the Indians' quest to return to state. ... Filer lost its starting keeper and top scorer to graduation, and with no returning starters at the forward position the onus falls on Anna Williams, Jennifer Lantz, and Brooke Wissenbach to help control possession in the midfield. ... Bliss returns top player Demsie Butler and has Kendall Martel to complement, but the Bears hope youth won't hamper their efforts to make state for the first time. ... Declo only has four seniors and will rely on them to carry a young squad through the first part of the season. ... Wendell and Gooding took a beating in the conference last season and hope the hard knocks toughened players for the 2011 campaign.

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY

"Setbacks and stressors are bridges to be crossed to our goals... not barricades to keep us from them."

MIDDLEKAUFF

State Potato Group Pays $2.4B for Bowl Name Rights

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • The Idaho Potato Commission has agreed to pay $2.49 million over the next six years for naming rights to the post-season college football bowl game held each year in Boise.

The commission signed a deal earlier this month to sponsor the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl starting with the 2011 game and swapping out the longtime Humanitarian Bowl name.

Under terms of the deal, the commission will pay bowl officials a $375,000 fee in the first two years. The annual fee increases to $420,000 in 2013 and 2014 before topping out at $450,000 in the final two years, according to a copy of the contract obtained by The Associated Press.

The contract also requires the IPC to pay a one-time, $80,000 re-branding fee and includes an opt-out clause starting with the 2013 game.

In return, the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl will be mentioned in nine ESPN television and radio spots, and the new bowl logo will be painted on Bronco Stadium's blue turf and splashed on signage across the stadium. Financial details of the contract were first reported by The Capital Press.

The commission — a state government agency that levies growers for to support its global spud marketing strategy — claims it stands to win from its investment in aligning its name and product with one of college football's 35 postseason games.

Frank Muir, IPC president and CEO, projected that the commission stands to reap an estimated $720,000 annually in advertising and publicity value. The start of the college football season is still weeks away, but Muir said the commission has already earned valuable publicity since announcing the deal Aug. 3.

"The bottom line, is that we believe we have negotiated a very favorable contract when compared to other similar bowls with similar national media coverage," Muir said Tuesday.

Bowl organizers launched the game 15 years ago, and during much of its history the Humanitarian Bowl name has served as a nod the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame on campus. In recent years, the sponsors have included Roady's Truck Stops and trucker software maker Udrove.

Now the game's ties with tubers seems appropriate considering Idaho has held the crown as the nation's top potato producing state since 1957.

The contract also gives the IPC the first opportunity to reach a sponsorship deal for the 2017 game before Humanitarian Bowl executives can negotiate naming rights with another party.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The most decisive actions of our life ... are most often unconsidered actions."

— Andre Gide

A partnership I've always had a lot of affection for is Bart Bramley and Sidney Lazard. Sidney has cut back on his bridge these days, but I believe he is presently one of the longest-lived U.S. Bridge Internationals, having played for USA in the 1959 Bermuda Bowl. Only Bill Rosen from the 1954 team can beat that record. (Incidentally, Pietro Forquet, from the 1951 Italian team, represented Italy in the Seniors a couple of years ago.)

When Bramley and Lazard played together in a recent Cavendish Pairs, Bart drew an interesting inference to bring home today's delicate four-diamond contract.

On the spade-king lead and continuation, Bramley put up dummy's jack to force the queen and to confirm the location of the spade honors. He ruffed this trick, then drew two rounds of trump and led a club to his king. Now came a third diamond to dummy and a second club.

East took the ace and played a third club. Bramley won and paused to count up the hand. Since East clearly had both rounded aces to justify his cue-bid and had also shown up with the spade queen, he was less likely to have the heart jack than his partner. Had he held that card, he might have opened the bidding since East-West were playing weak no-trumps. Backing his judgment, Bramley advanced the heart 10, and whether West covered or not, declarer had his 10th trick.

ANSWER: Your partner's redouble is for rescue, and your diamond spots are not good enough to override him. Your choice is to run to two hearts or to three clubs. Since your partner won't expect you to hold real length in hearts, you can bid two hearts -- for the time being. After all, a 4-3 heart fit might be your cheapest escape.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 24, the 236th day of 2011. There are 129 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 24, 1814, during the War of 1812, British forces invaded Washington, D.C., setting fire to the Capitol and the White House, as well as other buildings.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In A.D. 79, long-dormant Mount Vesuvius erupted, burying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum in volcanic ash; an estimated 20,000 people died.

In 1572, the St. Bartholomew's Day massacre of French Protestants at the hands of Catholics began in Paris.

In 1821, the Treaty of Cordoba was signed, granting independence to Mexico from Spanish rule.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart embarked on a 19-hour flight from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., making her the first woman to fly solo, non-stop, from coast to coast.

In 1949, the North Atlantic Treaty came into force.

In 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Communist Control Act, outlawing the Communist Party in the United States.

In 1968, France became the world's fifth thermonuclear power as it exploded a hydrogen bomb in the South Pacific.

In 1970, an explosives-laden van left by anti-war extremists blew up outside the University of Wisconsin's Sterling Hall in Madison, killing 33-year-old researcher Robert Fassnacht.

In 1981, Mark David Chapman was sentenced in New York to 20 years to life in prison for murdering John Lennon.

In 1992, Hurricane Andrew smashed into Florida, causing $30 billion in damage; 43 U.S. deaths were blamed on the storm.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush blamed the slumping economy for the shrinking budget surplus, rather than his tax cut, and said it was up to Congress to restrain spending. Tom Green, a Mormon fundamentalist with five wives and 30 children, was sentenced by a court in Provo, Utah, to five years in prison for his conviction on four counts of bigamy and one count of failure to pay child support. Actress Jane Greer died in Los Angeles at age 76.

Five years ago: The International Astronomical Union declared that Pluto was no longer a planet, demoting it to the status of a "dwarf planet."

One year ago: A Chinese passenger jet broke apart and burst into flames as it hit the runway, killing 42 people and injuring 54 others. A suicide bomber and gunmen attacked a hotel near Somalia's presidential palace; at least 32 people were killed, along with two militants. In Florida, political newcomer Rick Scott beat Bill McCollum for the GOP gubernatorial nomination. (Scott went on to win election in November, narrowly defeating Alex Sink.)

IF AUGUST 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may want love in your life or to make a big impression on a new boss, but you tend to be attracted to the wrong people this fall. Wait until November and early December to put your resume on the line or your heart on your sleeve. Although issues that revolve around trust and commitment can cause some dismay lucky stars will guide you in the right direction. The people who have your best interests at heart come closer and those who would undermine your progress seem to fade into the background. If you need to make major changes such as a new job or a move, January is the best time to break away from the past successfully.

Horoscope

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Set the wheels in motion. Now is the time for new things, such as a new project, partnership or romance. A new romance could turn out to be nothing more than a brief fling, but you'll be glad for the experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you've got it, flaunt it. A spring in your step and stars in your eyes make you the center of your universe today. Put your unique perspective to good use in social situations, as this could take you places.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take time to assess your situation. Review your long-term goals and objectives; decide what you really want or if a new plan is in order. Ideas that deviate from the beaten path are likely to find success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow your own agenda. Conventional wisdom is too general for your situation and you'll only progress by thinking for yourself and taking charge. You'll do better on your own than in a group.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Enjoy the spotlight. Conditions might make you a hot commodity. Actions may speak louder than words, but whom you know makes a difference, too. Spend money only when absolutely necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Out with the old, and in with the new. Re-evaluate certain aspects of your life that could need sweeping changes. Remember that you're not the same person you were 10 years ago; read-just accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be the life of the party. Regale your friends and colleagues with witty anecdotes and jokes to lighten the mood in the workplace. Smiles can be contagious, so take an opportunity to start your own epidemic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't shy away from challenges. Someone may threaten you with a vicious bark. Prove you can bark as well, and if needed, bite too. On the romantic front, sometimes it's best to remain just friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Test your limits. A new technology or fad is all the rage. Maybe it's time you tried living on the edge a bit. Traditions may bore you and you'll be infinitely more satisfied when pushing the envelope.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Times are changing. As you grow older, what has worked in the past may no longer be viable; a whole new approach could be in order. Expand your experience by visiting new places and meeting new people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There's no harm in a little charm. You won't find a situation that you can't overcome with a little witty banter and a bright smile. Put your best foot forward to make progress in business or the social scene.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There are no limits on an open mind. Seek to broaden your horizons by meeting exciting new people and experiencing strange new things. Those who are already set in their ways will only impede you.

DEAR ABBY

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago an advice columnist (your mother?) posed the question to her readers, "If you had it to do over again, would you still have children?" I'm wondering when the information was collected, and what the results of that inquiry were, and if you asked the same question today, what the majority of your readers would answer.

— READY2BDONE IN PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR READY2BDONE: The columnist was Ann Landers (my mother's twin sister) and while I remember the poll, I don't recall the date. I do remember that the responses arrived on postcards because it predated the establishment of the Internet.

The results were considered shocking at the time because the majority of responders said they would NOT have children if they had it to do over again. I'm printing your question because it will be interesting to see if feelings have changed over the intervening years.

DEAR ABBY

My daughter, "Morgan," is an intelligent, hardworking over-achiever. She graduated from an Ivy League college with two degrees and academic honors. Days after graduation she was hired by a Fortune 500 company and has been promoted three times in the past four years.

Our daughter is a beautiful 28-year-old woman with a vivacious personality. Our problem is the boyfriends she chooses. She's drawn to uneducated, jobless or part-time-employed men who talk a good game but never do anything.

Morgan's latest boyfriend moved in with her and she is supporting him. Her mom, sister and I have tried talking to her many times about this and her future. She seems oblivious to common sense and becomes defensive and agitated.

We want the best for our daughter. We realize she's old enough and smart enough to make her own decisions, but we're finding it difficult to support her choices. We don't want to alienate her. What should we do?

— PATERNAL VOICE OF REASON

DEAR "PAT": Back off. All of you. These men may not be what you want for Morgan, but they obviously are filling some need she has. In time her common sense may assert itself, but even if it doesn't, your daughter's choice of a mate is hers, not yours, to make. These may be passing fancies, but sometimes opposites attract very successfully.

DEAR ABBY: My widowed 82-year-old mother will return home soon after a stay in an extended care facility. She'll need unskilled 24/7 care for a month or so.

I'm the only family member who doesn't work, so my siblings expect me to take care of her. Mom suggested hiring someone to stay with her and everyone thought it was a good idea. However, when I said I'd do it and Mom could pay me, everyone was outraged!

My siblings think that because I'm her daughter, I should do it for nothing. I say the deal would be between Mom and me and it's none of their concern. What do you think?

— MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR M.Y.O.B.: I'm glad you asked. If you need the money, make the deal. If you don't need the money, then give your mother the help she needs out of love, respect and gratitude for the care she gave you when you needed it.

Scrutinized Idaho Lands Agency Brings in New Boss

When he arrives from Montana for his first day Sept. 26, Thomas Schultz will oversee an agency that's been increasingly in the spotlight.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A Montana natural resources official was selected Tuesday to take over the Idaho Department of Lands, which is grappling with increased interest in natural gas drilling, how to dispose of property and pressure to boost investment returns.

Thomas Schultz, 42, a Montana Department of Natural Resources administrator, was selected by the Land Board to run the Idaho agency that oversees lake cottage sites, timber and grazing ground and downtown Boise commercial property.

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who heads the five-member land board, said Schultz' experience as administrator of Montana's trust land management division that oversees state-owned mineral leases was part of the reason why he got unanimous support from the board.

The Department of Lands is navigating new interest in natural gas exploration. A small company, Bridge Resources, successfully drilled for gas in Payette County west of Boise, prompting Idaho to scramble to develop new rules governing such operations.

"You think back the last time we drilled a gas well — successfully, I guess I should say — in Idaho, was in the 1950s," Otter said. "Now we hit one gas well that is 4.2 million cubic feet a day and has a lot of other things that have to be considered. How you manage that whole process, I think, it is a new dimension that we have to consider."

Schultz, who will earn $112,800 a year in his new job, has been Trust Land Division administrator in Montana since 2001, where he's overseen that state's roughly 6.1 million acres of mineral rights and 5.2 million acres of trust lands. This land was given to many states by the federal government at the time they entered the Union to benefit important institutions like schools, prisons and state mental hospitals.

Idaho still owns about 2.5 million acres left from its original 3.7 million acre grant in 1890.

Earlier this month, the Land Board voted to distribute a total of $47.5 million generated by the properties. Public schools got about $31.2 million, the biggest share.

When he arrives in Idaho for his first day Sept. 26, Schultz will oversee an agency that's been increasingly in the spotlight.

For instance, the Land

Board's move last August to buy Affordable Self Storage in Boise for $2.7 million was part of the agency's effort to expand investments to benefit schools, but conservative critics say it has unfairly gone into competition with the private sector.

Lawmakers including state Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, have said they plan to back legislation next year that could require endowment lands for the first time to pay taxes, a move conservative legislators say is necessary to level the playing field with private businesses.

In recent years, Schultz' predecessor, George Bacon, tried unsuccessfully to put an amendment to Idaho's Constitution on the ballot to give agency officials more flexibility to sell large parcels of state- or university-owned land without holding a public auction.

And the agency is also moving ahead with plans to eventually auction or trade hundreds of lakefront cottage sites along the shores of the Payette and Priest lakes whose management in recent years has provoked debate over whether Idaho is demanding enough for annual leases from those who have occupied the cabins on endowment land for decades.

Schultz told The Associated Press that a decade spent heading the division that oversees trust land in Montana makes him familiar with these kinds of debates.

"Whether you're looking at grazing issues, cabin sites, oil and gas, coal, forestry — the issues in Montana and Idaho are similar. Key to me, is to listen first, especially being an outsider."

Thomas Schultz, a Montana Department of Natural Resources administrator selected by the Land Board to run the Idaho Department of Lands

Case in point: The Montana university system recently threatened to sue over a bill passed by the 2011 Montana Legislature that slashed proposed rate increases for cottage site leaseholders at such prized locations as Flathead Lake. In Idaho, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden has sued the land board over similar concerns that it's not charging high enough rates for the cottage sites.

"Whether you're looking at grazing issues, cabin sites, oil and gas, coal, forestry — the issues in Montana and Idaho are similar," Schultz said from his home from Helena. "Key to me, is to listen first, especially being an outsider."

Idaho Places Last in U.S. in Breast Cancer Screening

COEUR D'ALENE PRESS

More than a third of Idaho women over 40 did not receive important breast cancer screening in the past two years, reports the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. That places Idaho last out of 50 states and the District of Columbia in cancer screening mammogram rates.

The Cancer Data Registry of Idaho estimates there are over 122,000 Idaho women over the age of 40 who have not had a mammogram in the previous two years. "Mammography screening is an important tool in making early diagnosis of breast cancer and saving lives," says Patti Moran, who heads up the cancer program at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "Idaho has consistently ranked at or near the bottom for breast cancer screening. We want Idaho women to take note, and if they are 40 or older and haven't had a mammogram this year, to make an appointment today to get screened. It could save their life."

The earlier a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, the better her chances of survival. For women diagnosed at an early stage, when the cancer is confined to her breast tissue, about 95% will survive five years or longer. But for women diagnosed at a later stage, when the cancer has begun to spread, one of every four women will die within five years.

The American Cancer Society recommends yearly mammograms for women beginning at age 40. In the past two years, only 63.8% of Idaho women aged 40 or older reported getting screened for breast cancer.

State Panel Drafts Bill To Create Health-Insurance Exchange

BY AUDREY DUTTON
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • A state work group has drafted a bill that would authorize a state-run health-insurance exchange under the federal health-care reform law.

The exchange would be a government-created marketplace for people and businesses to buy health insurance. A state exchange is one requirement of the controversial 2009 law, which Idaho's Republican leaders oppose and which still faces challenges in courts around the country.

The work group is charged with writing possible legislation for the Idaho Legislature's 2012 session, which begins in January. Despite the state's opposition to the law, there's widespread support for the concept of an insurance exchange, and a legislative panel this week agreed with Gov. Butch Otter that Idaho should apply for a $40 million federal grant to help the state design and build it.

A June 1 draft bill obtained by the Idaho Statesman says:

- The exchange for individuals and small businesses to sign up for health insurance would be established by Jan. 1, 2014. That's the deadline the state must meet or risk having the federal government step in and set up its own exchange in Idaho.
- In addition to health insurance, the exchange would offer stand-alone dental benefit plans.
- The exchange would offer a website and toll-free telephone hotline for customers.
- Insurance companies would still be allowed to offer the same or similar plans outside of the exchange. But they wouldn't have to.
- Nine unpaid board members would supervise and control the exchange. Seven would be appointed by the governor. They would represent health insurers, disability agents, hospitals, physicians and businesses. The remaining two board members would come from the Idaho Senate and House. The board also would have two voting ex-officio members, from the Department of Insurance and Department of Health and Welfare.

- The board could hire and fire employees and handle procurements.
- The exchange would be free from taxation.

- Exchange employees and board members wouldn't be eligible for state retirement benefits.
- The exchange could be sued, as could its employees, agents, board and board members.

All of these provisions would be null and void if the Supreme Court decides the health care reform law is unconstitutional and strikes it down.
