CHILDREN GO WITHOUT

The Idaho Foodbank says nearly a quarter of all Idaho children don't have access to the nutrition they need to be healthy.

In a time when childhood obesity numbers are consistently rising, it's hard to imagine child hunger as a problem.

Yet, according to a recent study, the problem not only exists in Idaho but it is expanding. The report shows that more than 95,000 Idaho children are "food insecure," or lack the food they need to maintain healthy lives. A previous study conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture during 2006-2008 concluded that 66,000 Idaho children were food insecure.

The new study, funded by the Idaho Foodbank and Feeding America, compared county child food insecurity rates from 2009 to the overall state mark of 23.4 percent. In south-central Idaho, Blaine and Twin Falls counties fell below the state rate, while remaining area counties, led by Camas County's 28.5 percent, came in above it.

Having county data is helpful in spotting pockets of need throughout the state, said Kathy Gardner, director of the Idaho Hunger Relief Task Force.

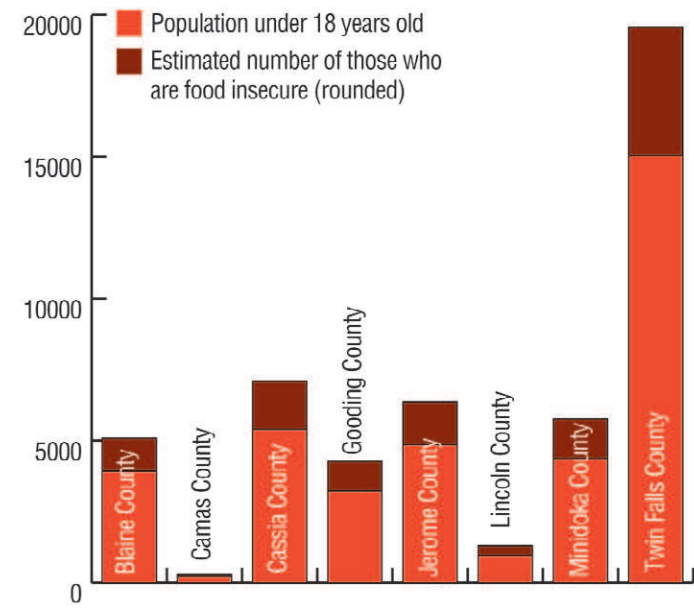

"This data is important. It tells us where we need to increase access to free food programs for children," she said.

Many schools hold free lunch programs throughout the summer, but Gardner said a major issue is getting the food to kids.

"In Idaho, many kids live in Early Report: No Engine Troubles in Burley Plane Crash

Air safety officials say a preliminary look at the engine of a plane that crashed Aug. 14, killing a California family in Burley, hasn't revealed any mechanical issues.

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • A preliminary investigation has revealed no problems with the engine systems of a plane that crashed Aug. 14, killing a California family near the Burley airport.

Randal Jay Whittle, 42, his wife Vicki, 46, and their children MacLean, 16, and Brittany, 13, succumbed to their injuries after their 1979 Cessna 210 single-engine airplane crashed shortly after taking off from the Burley J.R. "Jack" Simplot Airport.

National Transportation Safety Board Air Safety Investigator Kurt Anderson of Seattle said Wednesday the NTSB is still "very much in the process of investigating the crash," and all findings at this point are preliminary.

Anderson said the plane's engine was torn down and examined in Boise, and no mechanical issues were found.

"There was nothing to indicate any problems with the engine systems or components," he said.

Anderson said a family member of the Whittles was a witness to the crash, and was able to provide good

T.F. County Commissioners Say Hospital Move Likely

Commissioners say chances good of moving non-law enforcement departments to Addison Avenue hospital space; final decision to be made after Oct. 1.

BY NICK COLTRAIN
ncoltrain@magicvalley.com

Since Twin Falls' hospital buildings on Addison Avenue went vacant this summer, Dana Jackson has made patience a defining characteristic as a business owner.

Jackson, owner and manager at Annie's Lavender Cafe, said business has slowed considerably after St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center moved its operation to its new Pole Line Road location. Around the same time, her business also lost its regular customers that worked at then-neighboring medical supply business Norco.

But now that Twin Falls County is more heavily pondering a move into the Medical Office Building that sits across the street from Jackson's cafe, she's confident that trend will reverse.

"Obviously (business) is going to be better," Jackson said, sitting in her shop's shaded back patio and talking with a customer. "We are waiting patiently and eagerly for them to do something with that building."

The Twin Falls County commissioners met with other elected department heads Wednesday morning to do a rough divvying of space if all non-law enforcement county operations were to move to the vacant building. The commissioners joked that they were miffed when department heads fought for space in the hospital building, even though it was already 10 times the space they have now.

"They all seem to be on board with (the old hospital as a new location), which makes it easier," County Commission Chairman George Urie said afterward.

The commissioners put different odds on how likely the move into the building is to happen: Terry Kramer said 70 percent and Leon Mills said 50 or 55 percent. Urie started with 50 percent but quickly talked himself up to about 60 or 70 percent. They won't have a solid plan in place until

A writer who chronicled the Magic Valley's triumphs, foibles and transformations for almost three decades will retire Aug. 31.

Times-News Opinion Editor Steve Crump, 59, started at the newspaper as sports editor in 1983, later serving as city editor, features editor and features writer. He has penned most of the newspaper's editorials and edited its Opinion pages since 2007. His "Don't Ask Me" column has appeared in the Times-News since 1990, and its "You Don't Say" counterpart since 2008.

rural areas and maybe can't get to the lunches," she said. "We need to change that."

While Idaho has food banks set up across the state to help those in need, schools run the majority of children's food programs.

In Twin Falls, close to 2,000 children are fed daily during a free summer lunch program, said Susan Henderson, food services supervisor for the Twin Falls School District. Lunches are distributed in parks throughout the summer, but the handouts will stop once the school year begins and free or reduced-price meals are served in the schools.

"At least these kids know where to get one good meal a day," Henderson said.

The recession has also increased the number of hungry children in Idaho, said Carolyn Sullivan, Jerome School District food service supervisor.

"I've seen an upward trend of more children coming to school hungry and are just not getting fed at home," Sullivan said. "As times are changing, these programs are critical so no child is left hungry."

What's food insecurity? According to the Idaho Foodbank, it's a lack of access to enough food for all household members to live an active, healthy life, or limited or uncertain availability of nutritionally adequate foods.
Who's affected? Nearly a quarter of Idaho children — and not just the impoverished. According to the Idaho Foodbank study, 35,205 Idaho children who lack adequate access to nutritious foods don't qualify for meal assistance because their families earn too much.

Why's it a problem? More Idahoans are turning to federal or local assistance to meet their daily food needs. As more people who don't qualify for income-based programs seek support, food banks face mounting pressure to help. In the last fiscal year, the Idaho Foodbank distributed 10.6 million pounds of food, a 19 percent increase from 2010.

"We decided the time is right to actually move in together," Crump said. He intends to do some freelance writing in retirement and hopes for adjunct work at a Treasure Valley college.

Crump's face is a familiar one to Magic Valley folks. They've searched for a life-size cutout of Crump at the Twin Falls County Fair for a chance to win prizes. They've listened to his commencement addresses at 14 south-central Idaho high schools. They've seen him frequently at service club podiums and on panels questioning political candidates.

Q&A with Crump

We put retiring Times-News journalist Steve Crump on the unaccustomed side of an interview. Here are his responses.

What's the office anecdote that you've most enjoyed telling your friends?

Crump: Years ago when I was sports editor, sportswriter Larry Hovey and I were working in the office on a busy Friday night. The phone was ringing off the hook with coaches calling in the scores of football games, and an angry parent chose that moment to call and complain that we'd left her child's name out of a box score printed in the previous day's paper. Larry listened for a long time, finally put the phone down on his desk, finished the story he'd been working on and then wrote a couple more. An hour or so passed before he picked up the phone again; sure enough, the caller was still talking. When she finally finished, Larry was succinct: "Well, ma'am, there's a lot of sadness in the world."

How about a tale from the field?

Crump: I covered a high school baseball doubleheader in Rupert on the coldest March day I can remember. The wind was blowing perhaps 30 mph, and after the games finally ended I tracked down the Minico High coach to get a quote or two for my story. But my jaw was frozen, and when I opened my mouth nothing came out. The Minico coach, a fella name of Cory Bridges, recognized that and laughed. "Just put it in the paper that everybody in the Minico dugout was speechless after the two losses," he said.

Who are the readers you'll remember forever?

above the flames. At least one reader sent a clipping to Jay Leno, and it ended up as comedy fodder for "The Tonight Show."

Crump co-authored a 1997 book — a collection of columns by him and another Times-News columnist — dubbed "Animal Husbandry and Other Social Graces." That volume prompted readers' own storytelling.

"People would come up and say, 'I remember when you wrote that column, and this happened as a consequence,'" Crump said this week.

A man at the county fair told Crump that recalling his humorous column about holding up a dog to clean

• Rose Neumeier of Twin Falls. Rose was a 40-year-old recent widow with two kids when I met her and subsequently wrote about it. She was suffering from an aggressive form of bone cancer that forced surgeons to remove the tissue and mucous membranes which separated her mouth from the nerves in her head. She was in constant, searing pain, but she persevered with the help of faith, lived as normal a life as she could and, I'm happy to say, survived.
 • Nadza Flipovic of Twin Falls. When I met her she was a 27-year-old Muslim Bosnian former TV reporter who was resettled here through the CSI Refugee Center during the Bosnian civil war. She was unwelcome in Bosnia because she had married a Bosnian Serb Christian. At the time, most of their relatives on both sides were hunkering down — and dying — in one of the most brutal conflicts in recent memory. Nadza told me something about being a survivor that I'll never forget: "You survive if you have a sense of humor. If you cannot laugh, it is very hard. But things are too easy here," she added with a smile. "I think I am losing my sense of humor." Tragically, she died at age 39.

What would be the best reason for historians to use your name in books of Idaho history?

Crump: Well, I'm the first member of my family — and it's a very large family, half Mormon, half non-Mormon — to consume both beer and green Jell-O salad at the same family reunion.

What are the smaller victories from your three-decade Times-News career?

Crump: I wrote a col-eggs off the ceiling helped the man through a difficult moment in his mom's long illness. In the past couple of years, Crump has received emails from soldiers in Iraq telling him they'd shared his columns as "a little bit of home away from home," Crump said.

During his time in the Times-News' features department, Crump's hunt for story ideas took him to small-town coffee shops to talk to the locals. He admired pictures of their grandkids and cried with them when they lost a loved one.

"That was the best part of my Magic Valley experience, hands down," Crump said. "And I got to drink an awful lot of bad coffee."

umn in 1991 about the planned closure of the last remaining 7-Eleven in Twin Falls that, I'm told, caused the owners to change their minds. 7-Eleven survived in Twin Falls until 2009, meaning a whole generation of kids who wouldn't otherwise have had the opportunity were exposed to blue-goop Slurpies.

I coined the term "Rockchuck Acres" to describe our green and pleasant land. Sadly, it has yet to be adopted by any local subdivision developers.

How does the Twin Falls of today look different to you than when you rolled into town 28 years ago?

Crump: Downtown was a much more viable neighborhood back then: Sears still had a candy counter, you could buy grommets — if you were so disposed — at JCPenney, and it was worth getting downtown at 6:30 in the morning just to watch Earl Faulkner sweeping the sidewalk in front of his high-end women's clothing store.

On the other hand, back then there was no Canyon Rim Trail, Rock Creek Park was still a smelly mess, the Herrett Center was a just little-noticed, sparsely visited museum, and the CSI Fine Arts Center was an unremarkable college auditorium surrounded by a few classrooms.

Some things change, but some things shouldn't: Downtown pharmacist Dave Nelson, for example, still rides his bike to work every morning, and the CSI men's basketball team is still national champs.

And all those aunts, uncles and assorted relatives who made "Don't Ask Me" column fodder all those years — can you swear they're all real?

Crump: Every last one. Ask Aunt Blossom.

advantages to the old hospital space include better parking access and more space for the county offices to expand into. Mills joked that while the current operations would pretty much fill the clinic building, it'd take the county 100 years to be bursting at the seams of the medical office space.

It would also help the western entrance into Twin Falls, Mills said. Urie estimated that 90 to 100 employees would move into whatever new space they choose. Plus, the county offices will bring more traffic from people who need to do business there.

"That whole area is becoming blighted," Mills said. "If we come there, it will improve things."

TIMES-NEWS

A 19-year-old and an 18-year-old each face three felony burglary charges, as Twin Falls police say they broke into multiple vehicles early this week.

Andrew Mandis, 19, and Mason Tanner, 18, both of Twin Falls, were arrested Tuesday night near the 2500 block of Whispering Pine Drive after a resident spotted a suspicious vehicle in the neighborhood. Upon checking out the vehicle, the report says, police found the two men and a third juvenile male hiding inside, along with latex gloves and valuables. Officers recovered three iPods, a GPS device and a purse, all of which were identified and claimed by their owners.

The report notes that four vehicles were broken into during the alleged crime spree.

Mandis and Tanner were arraigned on the felony charges in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Wednesday. Bond was set at $10,000 each, and they are slated for a Sept. 2 preliminary hearing.

Hailey Man Pleads Guilty to Federal Child Porn Charge

TIMES-NEWS

A Hailey man pleaded guilty to possession of sexually explicit images of minors in U.S. District Court in Boise on Wednesday.

Donald Wilson, 51, is accused by federal prosecutors of using his credit card to buy child pornography via a membership to a website. The Department of Homeland Security seized computers and other storage devices containing more than 600 digital images at his home.

The maximum penalty is 10 years in federal prison, a $250,000 fine and a lifetime of supervised release. Sentencing is slated for Nov. 7.

information about at what point the plane lifted off the runway and when its landing gear retracted. A motorist also witnessed the crash when the plane hit U.S. Highway 30 about 30 feet in front of him.

The maintenance logs for the plane are being scrutinized and investigators will follow up on a couple of issues in them, Anderson said.

He said he is still gathering information, re-interviewing witnesses, and waiting for the autopsy and toxicology reports to come back.

Autopsy results are usually received within a couple of weeks, while toxicology results usually take a couple of months, he said.

Anderson will also make some performance calculations using the weight of the aircraft, the position of the passengers, and the day's temperature and wind speed to determine if the plane was performing as it should.

According to the preliminary report filed with the NTSB, the plane hit the ground about one-eighth of a mile from the departure end of runway 020. That's after it climbed to 75 to 100 feet above the ground.

Witnesses said the plane banked left and began a descent to the ground, where it hit the highway just beyond airport property. It then bounced 75 feet to the southeast, hit a set of railroad tracks and traveled another 55 feet before coming to rest, according to the report.

"After coming to rest, an intense fire that was initiated upon contact with the railroad tracks engulfed the entire airframe," the report states.

The report notes that at the time of takeoff the airplane had a tailwind of about six knots and the ambient temperature was 91 degrees.

The Cessna 210 shouldn't have had problems taking off from a runway the length of Burley's, Anderson said. The runway length has been recently discussed at city meetings as officials start site selection for a new airport.

Anderson said he will release a factual report on the incident in four to six months. Within a few weeks of that release, the NTSB will make a determination of the probable cause of the crash.

Kimberly Council Approves New Budget, Utility Fees

BY KIMBERLY WILLIAMS-BRACKETT
For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • The Kimberly City Council adopted a city budget, new utility fees and several other proposals at its Tuesday meeting.

The city will have a $4.36 million budget for the 2012 fiscal year, including $2.8 million for its general fund.

But the change that's likely received the most council attention is to water rates, which were revamped following a $6.6 million project that improved city water infrastructure and installed water meters.

Effective Oct. 1, city residents will pay $2 for every 1,000 gallons marked on their monthly bills. They'll also pay $16.84 per month for a bond related to the new project, and $6.58 per month for a bond dating back to 1994.

The council also set water and sewer hookup charges. Hookup inspection is $2,000. Charges start with $2,800 for a one-inch connection and range to $10,500 for a six-inch connection.

And, members approved a fee for maintenance and repair of pressurized irrigation systems using a formula of one-half of a resident's lot square footage multiplied by roughly $0.0017.

The council also greenlit a new Utility Advisory Board to advise it on utility fees and finances. Its five members will be appointed by Mayor Dave Overacre and confirmed by the council. Each will serve a three-year term. Councilman Brandon Hoobler suggested the board meet at least quarterly.

In other business:

- The council accepted a proposal from Westway Group Inc., an agricultural products company, to purchase a half-acre of city property on Tyler Street East. Westway's plans for the land, which is off of U.S. Highway 30, would include expanding parking and a future building. An initial counter-offer would include stipulated property improvements and rights-of-way.
- Council members approved a cooperative agreement with the Idaho Transportation Department and the Twin Falls Highway District to install a traffic signal at Red Cap Corner, the intersection of Idaho Highway 50 (Kimberly Road) and U.S. Highway 30 (3500 East). Overacre said the effort has been two years in the works and will create a safer intersection. Construction is slated to start in September 2012.

- Residents may have to pay $60 per hour worked if their weeds, grass, and rubbish aren't cut and removed and the city has to do it. Planning and Zoning Director Jenny Nickerson said most problems involve vacant lots and foreclosures. It was one of the cheaper solutions, she said.
- The council approved a request by resident Andy Roach to name a park on Ballard Way in memory of Alisa Storrer Walker, who passed away in June.

The following monthly water and sewer charges will be effective Oct. 1:

Study: Land Trade Could Cost County Jobs, Tax Cash

LEWISTON • A $12,000 study paid for by a north Idaho county that's fighting a proposed federal land swap concluded the transaction could lead to lost economic activity and jobs.

The study by University of Idaho economist Steven Peterson focused on a land trade proposal between the U.S. Forest Service and Western Pacific Timber Co. Under the plan, the government would exchange 18,000 acres in three national forests spanning several northern Idaho counties for nearly 40,000 private acres in Idaho County.

Peterson's study didn't address whether increased economic activity on the 18,000 acres in the Clearwater, Nez Perce and Idaho Panhandle national forests would balance out losses in Idaho County.

Idaho County opposes the trade on grounds that converting private land into federal holdings that already dominate the county will undermine its tax base and reduce timber harvests that remain the linchpin of the economy. Peterson concluded the trade could cost the county 128 jobs and $8.2 million in lost economic activity.

"From an Idaho County perspective, it would be unwise to basically take any land that is in private production and put it in national forest land," Peterson told the Lewiston Tribune in a story Wednesday. "So I would not be in favor of a trade that would reduce the privately held land in Idaho County."

Western Pacific's owner, Tim Blixseth, engineered land swaps in the 1990s in Montana that led to the creation of his opulent Yellowstone Club. Blixseth lost the property in a divorce, the club went into bankruptcy months later and is now under new ownership.

Peterson's study doesn't include broader regional impacts but says the swap proposal doesn't adequately address the impacts on an area where the economy is based almost solely on natural resources and could be crippled if the exchange goes through. Converting private land to public land essentially means it won't produce any more logs for mills, since timber sales have dropped precipitously on federal land, he said.

Meanwhile, some observers say Western Pacific's private land is logged over, but Peterson says it could still produce 12 million board feet of lumber a year — raw material to help Idaho County sawmills survive.

The county doesn't want to lose roughly $100,000 a year in property tax revenue, in addition to the potential impact on jobs in communities such as Grangeville and Cottonwood. Officials insist an exchange should take place entirely within Idaho County to limit its impacts, said

"When there are big tak-ings by the federal government there is an economic impact," Idaho County Commissioner James Rockwell. "We have just quantified that impact and it's big and massive."

The Forest Service wants Western Pacific's land because of its importance as habitat to steelhead and bull trout, Canada lynx and critical elk winter range. It also has historical value. Explorers Lewis and Clark trekked through it in the early 1800s. Western Pacific's property is arranged in a checkerboard pattern amid federal land, a patchwork dating back to the 19th century that helped speed development of railroads but has complicated modern management.

The current exchange proposal has been scaled back from a plan that once called for Western Pacific to get up to 28,000 acres of land within Benewah, Clearwater, Latah, Shoshone, Bonner, Kootenai and Idaho counties.

Prison Officials Raze Tribal Sweat Lodge at ISCI

BOISE • Idaho prison officials say they have leveled a tribal sweat lodge and reconfigured a patch of ground that has served the religious needs of Native American inmates for more than 25 years at a prison south of Boise.

Idaho Department of Correction Spokesman Jeff Ray says the work done Wednesday at the South Idaho Correctional Institution was intended to address health and security concerns.

The prison's Native American inmates are frustrated by the department's actions. But Ray says officials intend to rebuild the sweat lodge and maintain the parcel for tribal worship.

Professor-Student Romance Ends in Murder-Suicide

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • A college professor who alternately referred to himself as a “psychopathic killer” and “the beast” committed suicide after killing a graduate student he had recently dated, police said in newly revealed court documents.

Meanwhile, Katy Benoit’s family said Wednesday that the psychology student had become increasingly alarmed about Ernesto A. Bustamante’s behavior and had taken steps to get away from the man police say eventually killed her.

Bustamante’s body was found early Tuesday in a Moscow hotel room after the 31-year-old former University of Idaho professor apparently shot himself in the head with a revolver, police said. Benoit, 22, had been killed on the front porch of her Moscow home a day earlier.

Her two roommates told police they had been baking cookies late Monday when Benoit stepped outside for a cigarette and about two minutes later, they heard gunfire. Benoit had been shot multiple times with a .45-caliber handgun.

A neighbor, Lorne Hetsler, told police he heard the shots and saw a man, whom authorities later identified as Bustamante, leaving the home in a dark trench coat and hat.

A police affidavit filed Tuesday offers details of the relationship between Bustamante and Benoit, including violent encounters that were described by their friends and roommates.

Benoit

Meghan Walker-Smith and Emma Gregory, Benoit’s roommates, told police that the romance ended in March. Gregory told authorities that Benoit after the breakup had said Bustamante pointed a handgun at her on multiple occasions and at one point had put a gun in her mouth, according to the statement.

Benoit’s roommates told police they had been concerned for her well-being because Bustamante had weapons and multiple personalities.

Rowdy J. Hope, who told police he was a close friend of Bustamante, “confirmed that Bustamante had multiple handguns and multiple personality disorders to include one Bustamante calls a ‘psychopathic killer’ and another Bustamante calls ‘the beast,’” Moscow Police Sgt. Bruce Fager said in the affidavit.

Benoit’s family said Wednesday she had previously shared details with them about her issues with Bustamante and had been deeply worried about his behavior.

“After receiving threats and intimidation from Bustamante, we believed Katy had obtained a restraining order, changed addresses and filed a complaint with the University of Idaho,” the family said in a statement.

The Associated Press was unable to confirm that a restraining had been issued against Bustamante in Latah County, where the university is based.

“Our family had grave concerns when we learned that the University of Idaho had received dozens of complaints from other students about Bustamante, and that, from what we understood, Katy was the only one willing to sign her name to a complaint,” the family said.

“We hope that the University of Idaho will be forthcoming in disclosing everything that went on this past summer in response to Bustamante’s behavior toward Katy and others, including the university’s involvement.”

The university has said Bustamante resigned effective Friday, but declined to comment on any specifics related to his employment, including saying whether Benoit had been one of his students, citing public records laws, school policy and the ongoing investigation.

“At this time, the university cannot provide any further information about either the existence of a relationship or actions the university may have taken with respect to these two individuals,” school officials said in a statement Wednesday.

Benoit’s roommates said she filed a complaint with the university in June over Bustamante’s behavior and he was either fired or forced to resign as a result, according to the police affidavit. Fager said it is unclear how the university handled the complaint because it was treated as a personnel matter and was confidential.

Authorities considered Bustamante as a suspect shortly after Benoit was found dead and served a search warrant at the University Inn Best Western in Moscow, where police found a car Bustamante had rented earlier that day. Prosecutors said Bustamante killed Benoit “with premeditation and with malice,” according to court documents filed Tuesday.

Before working in Idaho, Bustamante earned his bachelor’s, masters and doctorate degrees in psychology at Old Dominion University in Virginia. He married a fellow Old Dominion graduate, Xiommy Leon, in October 2002 in Venezuela, according to a school newsletter.

The union didn’t last and Leon has since remarried. A phone number listed for her in Chesapeake, Va., was disconnected.

Bustamante took a job at the University of Idaho in August 2007 and he was an assistant professor in the Department of Psychology and Communication.

Benoit had earned her undergraduate degree from the university in 2010 and just started her graduate studies in the psychology department.

Slain Student ‘Had Found Her Place’

BY PATRICK ORR

Kathryn Benoit was excited about the future — just starting grad school at the University of Idaho in the psychology department — when Moscow police say she was killed Monday by a former assistant professor.

Benoit, a 22-year-old Boise resident when she wasn’t at school in Moscow, was mourned by family and friends Tuesday who knew her as Katy.

“Katy was a beautiful, intelligent and musically talented woman and we are so saddened by her tragic death,” parents Janet and Gary Benoit said in a statement Tuesday afternoon.

“Katy was a friend to many people and a loving daughter, sister, granddaughter, niece and cousin. Thank you to our many friends and the communities of Moscow and Boise for your love, support and prayers.”

Benoit earned her undergraduate degree in psychology at U of I last year. She was a alumna of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Police say assistant psychology professor Ernesto A. Bustamante, 31, shot Benoit several times outside her Moscow home Monday night. They also say Bustamante shot himself in the head as officers were in the process of serving a search warrant on his hotel room Tuesday morning.

Benoit played cello as a member of the Boise High School Orchestra that toured Europe. She also was an excellent piano player and all-around musician, said Wendy Hartman, who taught Benoit music from eighth grade to her senior year in high school.

“She was just so extremely bright, it’s hard to find the words to describe her ... she cared about other people,” Hartman said. “It was a joy to know her. ... She and the rest of her family are just special people.”

“We are all reeling from the loss. ... She was a profoundly gifted girl,” said Sarah Halbach, a friend of the Benoit family whose kids grew up together. “She was so excited about the future. She was about to teach intro to psychology. ... It seemed like she had found her place.”

What Don't You Understand? Get a Mammogram

That's pathetic. More than a one-third of Idaho women over 40 didn't receive a breast cancer screening in the past two years, making Idaho last out of 50 states and the District of Columbia in mammogram rates.

The Cancer Data Registry of Idaho estimates that there are more than 122,000 Idaho women over the age of 40 — that's equivalent to the population of Twin Falls, Jerome and Cassia counties combined — who haven't had a mammogram in the past 24 months. "Mammography screening is an important tool in making early diagnosis of breast cancer and saving lives," says Patti Moran, who heads up the cancer program at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "Idaho has consistently ranked at or near the bottom for breast cancer screening. We want Idaho women to take note, and if they are 40 or older and haven't had a mammogram this year, to make an appointment today to get screened. It could save their life."

Idaho's low mammogram rate is inexcusable. If you doubt that, look at Twin Falls County's experience.

The county's incidence of breast cancer used to be appalling. But now its breast cancer screening rate is the third-highest in the state, thanks to the efforts of St. Luke Magic Valley, some local physicians and a lot of volunteers.

They ran public awareness campaigns. They pressed physicians to make mammograms a priority. And they followed up on women who had mammograms before.

As a consequence, in 2011 had a mammogram rate of 70.9 percent of the adult female population. Only Valley County (75.5 percent) and Teton County (75 percent) had were better.

Fact is, the earlier a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, the better her chances of survival. For women diagnosed at an early stage, about 95 percent will live five years or longer. But for women diagnosed at a later stage, when the cancer has begun to spread, one of every four women will die within five years.

The American Cancer Society recommends yearly mammograms for women beginning at age 40.

Since 2008, cancer has been the leading cause of death among women in Idaho. Breast cancer is the second-leading cancer death among women, behind lung cancer. In 2009 alone, there were over 1,100 new cases of breast cancer diagnosed among women in Idaho and 185 deaths from breast cancer. It is estimated that one in eight women will develop breast cancer during their lives.

In Idaho, this issue comes down to cases. If you're a woman, the less likely you are to get a regular mammogram the more likely you are to die young.

In the past two years, only 63.8 percent of Idaho women aged 40 or older reported being screened for breast cancer, leaving Idaho far behind states with the highest screening rates. The national average is 76 percent percent.

So in effect, Idaho relegates thousands of women between the ages of 40 and 70 to an early death because the state is not nearly proactive enough about getting them screened.

Statistics also show low-income women are less likely to be screened. Of the Idaho women who have not been screened during the last two years, almost 70 percent live in households with incomes of less than $50,000.

Poor women are dying in disproportionate numbers. That's unacceptable.

Cut Medicare, Help Patients

Medicare is going to be cut. That is inevitable. There is no way to solve the nation's long-term debt problem without reducing the growth rate of federal health care spending. The only question is whether the cuts will be smart ones.

Smart cuts eliminate spending on medical tests, treatments and procedures that don't work — or that cost significantly more than other treatments while delivering no better health outcomes. And they can be made without shortchanging patients. There are plenty of examples; here are three.

Late last year, the Food and Drug Administration determined that the drug Avastin, which has serious side effects, is not effective for treating breast cancer. Astonishingly, Medicare declared it will still pay for Avastin — at a cost of about $88,000 per year for each patient.

Consider colonoscopies. The United States Preventive Services Task Force recommends not doing colonoscopies for most people over 75 because there is no evidence that they save lives in this population. Moreover, the risk of perforating the intestines rises with age. Yet Medicare pays for the procedure regardless of the patient's age.

Every year more than 1 million cardiac stents are placed in patients to open blocked arteries. Stents are essential immediately after a heart attack, but a 2007 randomized trial conducted at 50 medical centers in the United States and Canada showed that for patients with stable heart disease, stents do not reduce the number of heart attacks or save lives when compared with drug therapy. And they are substantially more expensive.

Because stents are more effective at reducing pain in some patients, the best practice is to start patients on drug therapy and insert a stent only for those who do not respond to treatment. Yet many patients who receive stents paid for by Medicare are either experiencing no pain or have not tried medication first.

The list of procedures Medicare pays for that are proven to have no benefit goes on and on. Cutting payment for these is not rationing. It saves money, but it also protects patients from the pain, stress and risks associated with unnecessary care.

Unfortunately, Washington is preoccupied with ill-conceived cuts. Three kinds of cuts got serious consideration in the recent debt limit negotiations, and are likely to resurface as the special Congressional committee tries to achieve $1.5 trillion in additional deficit reduction:

- Meat-cleaver cuts hack spending indiscriminately. Across-the-board cuts in payments to Medicare providers (which will kick in if the special committee doesn't come to an agreement) fall into this category. Cuts that fail to distinguish between high-value and low-value medical care would do more harm than good.

- Cost-shifting cuts don't actually reduce health care spending; they just shift costs from the government to the private sector. Increasing Medicare's eligibility age from 65 to 67, as Sens. Tom Coburn and Joseph Lieberman have proposed and as the Obama administration reportedly floated during the debt ceiling negotiations, is a classic example. While raising the eligibility age would reduce government spending on Medicare, it would shift the costs to individuals and businesses. It would also increase the number of uninsured 65- and 66-year-olds, leading to worse health outcomes and making it harder for older Americans to find work.

- Penny-wise, pound-foolish cuts reduce current spending by a little but raise future costs by a lot. Raising co-payments for office visits and medications is a good example. Research shows that when older adults are charged higher co-payments, they reduce their primary care visits and use of prescription drugs. But the research also shows that forgoing this outpatient care leads to an increase in expensive hospitalizations.

To control Medicare spending and reduce the deficit, we need to stop paying for wasteful procedures, accelerate adoption of the Affordable Care Act reforms and empower doctors, nurses and hospitals to provide higher-quality and more efficient care. The path to smart cuts is clear.

Ezekiel Emanuel, a physician, is an oncologist at the University of Pennsylvania. Jeffrey Liebman is a professor of public policy at Harvard. They wrote this commentary for The New York Times.

"The list of procedures Medicare pays for that are proven to have no benefit goes on and on. Cutting payment for these is not rationing. It saves money, but it also protects patients from the pain, stress and risks associated with unnecessary care."

Free-ranging Market Would Save Wolves and Ranchers

Get your rifles ready: Wolf season opens at the end of August, and for as little as $11.50 you've got a better chance than ever of bagging this toothy predator.

In July, Montana doubled its kill quota to 220, and Idaho, well, it has declined to set a quota. Wyoming plans to treat wolves as predators in most of the state, allowing them to be killed on sight. If all goes according to plan, the Rocky Mountain wolf population will be knocked down 60 percent from its peak of 1,733 in 2009.

This is obviously a perfectly sound strategy for preserving an iconic American species, which taxpayers have spent hundreds of millions of dollars breeding and feeding. No, not wolves, but public-lands ranchers, whose livestock graze on federal property and who are increasingly concerned about attacks by free-ranging wolf packs.

During this 15-year saga over wolves in the West, which pits conservationists against cowboys, it was easy to miss that the most outspoken cattlemen were not simply asking to guard their private property from deadly intruders. They were defending their right to pay rock-bottom prices to let their cattle graze unchaperoned on 162 million acres of federal land. Conservationists, trying to protect the wolf, were forced to claim these open spaces, vilifying ranchers and hunters and tying up federal regulators in a two-year lawsuit that was ultimately circumvented by Congress.

Brendan Borrell
Bloomington News

Living with predators is never easy, but federal grazing policies seem designed to foster conflict rather than cooperation. The future of both wolves and ranchers depends, in part, on reforming our archaic and noncompetitive system through a shift to transferrable federal grazing permits sold on a regulated market.

Increased fees could offset government land management costs, improve environmental monitoring and enforcement, and compensate ranchers when wolves and other predators kill livestock. Environmental groups should be allowed to purchase and retire federal grazing permits in choice wolf habitat. The hunts should also continue, but with limits.

Wolves once roamed throughout the United States, but their presence was never welcome among men and women trying to make a living off the land. In the late 19th century, settlers and government workers devastated Western wolf populations using poison-laced animal carcasses inside and outside their stronghold in Yellowstone National Park.

Animals that survived still faced shrinking forest habitat and a decline in their prey species, such as bison and caribou. In 1973, the northern Rocky Mountain wolf became one of the first animals listed under the new Endangered Species Act, but the move only provided the bare minimum of protection and little hope for recovery.

That's due to the complicated history of public grazing, which also dates back to the late 19th century, when the federal government encouraged western expansion into fertile valleys suited to agriculture. Unclaimed tracts in the uplands became a tragedy of the commons as shepherds and cattlemen competed for space, their livestock trampling healthy stream beds and turning grassy meadows into dust-bowls. Range rights were enforced through coercion and violence.

The Taylor Grazing Act of 1934 reduced overgrazing by granting ranchers renewable leases to specific allotments, which allowed them to build fences and encouraged them to take care of the public land.

Reducing wildlife conflicts through a market approach is not a new idea. In a few cases, environmental groups have paid ranchers to voluntarily retire federal permits, and the conservation group Defenders of Wildlife began a program — now run by the federal government — to compensate ranchers for confirmed livestock kills. For state land trusts, open permit auctions are obligatory because the law requires them to reap the highest profits to support schools.

Congress should make this happen on a wider scale, empowering land managers to fully appraise permits using the latest environmental and livestock science and by allowing ranchers to sell them at market rates. The Endangered Species Act may be our best tool for keeping wolves from going extinct, but a fair market for grazing could help find the right balance when wolves roam free.

The GOP's Tax Increase

America's presumably anti-tax party wants to raise your taxes. Come January, the Republicans plan to raise the taxes of anyone who earns $50,000 a year by $1,000, and anyone who makes $100,000 by $2,000.

Their tax hike doesn't apply to income from investments. It doesn't apply to any wage income in excess of $106,800 a year. It's the payroll tax that they want to raise — to 6.2 percent from 4.2 percent of your paycheck, a level established for one year in December's budget deal at Democrats' insistence. Unlike the capital gains tax, or the low tax rates for the rich included in the Bush tax cuts, or the carried interest tax for hedge fund operators (which is just 15 percent), the payroll tax chiefly hits the middle class and the working poor.

And when taxes come chiefly from the middle class and the poor, all those anti-tax right-wingers have no problem raising them. In an editorial this weekend, the Wall Street Journal termed the payroll tax reduction "an inferior tax cut," arguing that tax cuts should be "broad-based, immediate and permanent." Broad-based? The payroll tax cut, which the Journal dismisses so contemptuously, benefits every employed American, while the tax cuts the paper champions — on capital gains and millionaires' income — accrue to a far smaller group. Immediate? Unlike taxes paid annually or quarterly, the payroll tax is drawn from each paycheck from the moment the law takes effect. Permanent? The payroll tax is the tax that funds Social Security, so reducing it really can't be a permanent policy. But the impermanence of the Bush tax cuts, which had been set to expire this year but were extended, presented no obstacle to the Journal's fervent support for the them.

This tax-Joe-Six-Pack mania doesn't end with the Wall Street Journal. While President Obama has made clear he supports extending the lower 4.2 percent payroll tax rate for another year, to keep the economy from contracting further, congressional Republicans have made their opposition equally clear. "I don't think that's a good idea," said Dave Camp, R-Mich., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. Camp complained it would push the deficit higher. House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., the man who'd have us scrap Medicare, concurred. "It would simply exacerbate our debt problems," he said on Fox News Sunday this month.

This concern for the debt didn't keep Republicans from enacting two waves of tax cuts under George W. Bush. It hasn't kept them from opposing our current president's proposal to restore the Clinton-era tax rates on the wealthy. But when we're talking about taxes on the majority of Americans, those who work for a living and don't make six-figure incomes, the Republican brain lobe devoted to debt reduction through tax increases goes abuzz with synaptic frenzy.

Harold Meyerson
The Washington Post

The most telling Republican reaction to the president's proposal to extend the lower rate has been one man's equivocation. The man is Grover Norquist, author of the anti-tax-increase pledge that the vast majority of House Republicans have signed. On Tuesday, pressed by a number of journalists to state his position on raising the payroll tax, Norquist sought to quietly steal away. "One would have to see the final legislation," said his spokesman, John Kartch, to determine "what is the net effect on total taxes."

But unless Congress votes to extend it, the lower rate will expire on Jan. 1 regardless of its effect on total taxes. Norquist flat-out opposed letting the Bush tax cuts expire — though he did tell The Post's editorial board that it didn't technically violate the pledge, a position that he has since tried to obfuscate. Now that the payroll tax is slated to expire, though, Norquist is lost in contemplation (or something). Congressional Republicans inclined to increase the payroll tax — and I'm not aware of any who have come forth to oppose that idea — can do so, apparently, without fear of being labeled tax-increasers just because they've increased taxes.

Republicans like to complain that Democrats practice "class warfare" and "the politics of division," as House GOP leader Eric Cantor argued on The Washington Post op-ed page Monday. What the Republicans' position on the payroll tax makes high-definitionally clear is their own class warfare on working- and middle-class Americans. Their double standard couldn't be more obvious: Tax cuts for the wealthy are sacrosanct; tax cuts for everyone else don't really matter. Norquist, Cantor, Ryan, Camp, the Journal editorialists and the whole Republican crew give hypocrisy a bad name.

Drinking the Dandelion Wine of Author Ray Bradbury

When my father took his leave of the family, he left behind a box of his books, and in doing so he gave me the gift of Ray Bradbury.

The summer that I began reading Bradbury, even the ordinary world became magical. I inhaled the books: Something Wicked this Way Comes, Dandelion Wine, The Illustrated Man, The Martian Chronicles and, of course, his master work, Fahrenheit 451.

His stories embraced a different reality, and they insulated me from the despair of a family that was breaking apart. It was the realization that stories could save readers that made me begin thinking about being a writer myself. I was able to see through my own heart-break into the future, and I decided to write myself there.

My first story was about a lone survivor in a world that had been devastated. It was only later I realized I was writing about myself, about a girl who felt alone, who clung to fiction and to Bradbury's books as if they were a life raft.

Bradbury tells the story of how, as a boy in 1932, he went to a country fair where a carnival entertainer named Mr. Electrico touched him on the nose with an electrified sword,

Alice Hoffman
Los Angeles Times

made his hair stand on end and shouted "Live forever!"

He has certainly achieved eternal life through his books, which are destined to live on. But it's beginning to seem as if he took the "live forever" command literally as well. On Monday Ray Bradbury turned 91, and his birthday is the perfect day to reflect on all he has given us.

The writer who says he was "raised in libraries" wrote a work of genius warning of a future in which books are so dangerous that they are burned. Where did he write it? In a library, of course, at UCLA, working on a rented typewriter.

His ambition was to be both a magician and a writer, and he managed to become both. He was the creative consultant on the United States Pavilion at the 1964 World's Fair, which I remember visiting in Queens, N.Y., as a 12-year-old so ready for the future that I could barely stand still in the present. He worked on the SpaceShip Earth display at Epcot Center, Disney World and contributed to the conception of the Orbitron space ride at Euro-Disney France. His script I Sing the Body Electric was the 100th episode of the greatest television series in history, The Twilight Zone. He wrote the screenplay for Melville's Moby Dick, directed by John Huston, and his own books were turned into brilliant movies, including Fahrenheit 451, directed by Francois Truffaut and starring Julie Christie and Oskar Werner, and The Illustrated Man starring Oscar winners Claire Bloom and Rod Steiger.

His honors, far too many to catalog, have included the National Book Foundation's 2000 Medal for Distinguished Contribution to American Letters and the National Medal of Arts in 2004. His work has appeared in the Best American Short Stories annual collection four times, and he has won the O. Henry Award, the World Fantasy Award for Lifetime Achievement, the Grand Master Award from the Science Fiction Writers of America award and the PEN Center USA West Lifetime Achievement Award.

Born in 1920, he seemed always to know intrinsically that the future was not so far from the past, and that the past was a road map to the future. This has made him seem always ahead of his time. His 30 books and more than 600

Christopher Isherwood once wrote that Bradbury had "a powerful and mysterious imagination that would undoubtedly earn the respect of Edgar Allan Poe." Bradbury was brave enough to create his own genre. He understood that love was just as strong as any supernatural power, and that the timeless themes of good and evil resonate across generations.

The perfect summers and mystery-soaked autumns he has created are more memorable than the ones we experience in "real life," and his gypsy witches and 12-year-old boys, tattooed men and fierce believers in truth will always be a part of American literature.

To you, Ray Bradbury, happy birthday, and many more.

Sheriff's Office Releases Details of Sen. John McGee's DUI Case

BY DAN POPKEY
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Idaho Senate Majority Caucus Chairman John McGee, R-Caldwell, continues to decline interview requests, but sheriff's reports released Wednesday provide details about the night of his arrest in June.

Among the unanswered questions addressed in the reports are the timeline, what happened to McGee's shoes and some circumstances of his 6 1/2-mile walk from Hillcrest Country Club to a Meridian neighborhood near Cloverdale and Victory roads.

McGee, 38, pleaded guilty to DUI July 1, in exchange for prosecutors dropping a grand theft charge for his taking and driving a Ford SUV early on the morning of June 19.

He told deputies on the morning of his arrest that he had "three or four" drinks, the last one more than four hours before he registered a blood-alcohol content almost twice the legal limit, according to the reports.

McGee's brother, Mark, told an Ada County sheriff's deputy that he was supposed to give Sen. McGee a ride home, but was unable to find him. The brothers played together in the Hillcrest Invitational golf tournament at Hillcrest Country Club, where they won their flight on Saturday, June 18.

Mark McGee said he phoned his brother at about 10:15 p.m. Sen. McGee told his brother he was walking to a house near Cloverdale Road and was "about a block away," according to the reports. McGee's parents live in the neighborhood, but the reports redact identifying information.

Mark McGee told the deputy that after the phone conversation he went searching for his brother but could not find him.

"I don't have any comment for you," Mark McGee told the Statesman Wednesday.

Sen. McGee did not respond to email and voice-mail messages. His parents did not reply to a phone call.

Sheriff's deputies around 3 a.m. found McGee barefoot in the back of the SUV, which he damaged by jack-knifing it into a swing set and a utility trailer on South Knapp Place. He paid about $12,000 in restitution as part of his guilty plea.

The deputy who interviewed Mark McGee searched for Sen. McGee's missing footwear and cell phone, retracing his presumed route. The officer found neither.

McGee's brown flip-flops were later found one block east of South Knapp Place, on San Ramon Drive, about two blocks west of his parents' home on South Goshen Way. McGee's attorney's office was to collect the items on June 22, according to reports.

McGee's lawyer, Scott McKay, said during McGee's sentencing July 1 that a drunken McGee fell and suffered a concussion, which contributed to his erratic behavior. McGee and McKay have declined to respond to requests for medical records. McKay also did not reply to phone and email messages Wednesday.

The sheriff's reports say McGee had a "small laceration" on his left knee, but describe no other injuries. McGee told deputies he suffered the cut while golfing. Sheriff Gary Raney has said that no one was treated for a concussion while McGee was jailed June 19 and 20.

N. Idaho Man Pleads Not Guilty to Killing Grizzly

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A North Idaho man charged with killing a male grizzly bear that supporters say wandered into his yard where his children were playing has pleaded not guilty in federal court.

Jeremy M. Hill, 33, of Porthill was arraigned Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Coeur d'Alene on a misdemeanor charge of unlawfully taking a federally protected species.

The hearing for Hill drew dozens of supporters who claim he was doing nothing more than protecting his family when the bear, accompanied by two other bears, ambled on to his rural, 20-acre property near the Canadian border on May 8.

The crowd was so big that the magistrate judge moved the hearing to a bigger courtroom.

Federal prosecutors say Hill shot the bear with a bolt-action rifle, but they have shared few other details of their investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorney Nancy Cook declined to comment to reporters after the hearing.

A jury trial has been set for Oct. 4. If convicted, Hill could face penalties of up to one year in prison and fines up to $50,000. He has been appointed a federal public defender and is free on bond.

The Endangered Species Act classifies the grizzly bear as a threatened species in the lower 48 states, and it is protected by federal law.

Hill and his wife have six children, and their home is between two federal grizzly bear recovery zones — the Selkirk zone to the west and Cabinet-Yaak zone to the east. Biologists estimate that 100 grizzlies inhabit the zones that include parts of Idaho, British Columbia and Montana.

The bears are a controversial topic in Boundary County, as habitat protection by federal agencies has impacted the timber harvest and logging industry.

Supporters say several of Hill's children were playing in the yard when the bear approached, and he notified Idaho wildlife officials after shooting it.

"It seems unjust to me that someone would be charged when they were protecting their family," state Sen. Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint, said after the hearing. "I'm at a loss to understand why the U.S. government is pursuing this in the manner they are."

Supporters have written letters to state and congressional leaders, and last week the community raised $19,500 for a defense fund for the family at a 4-H animal sale in Bonners Ferry.

Ronald Smith, chairman of the Boundary County Commission, said the county supports grizzly recovery plans but also is struggling to understand the charges against Hill.

"Jeremy Hill ... has been falsely accused of a crime that did not happen," Smith said in a statement. "This is not some flagrant or malicious act."

The case was investigated by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agents, who submitted their report to federal attorneys, agency spokeswoman Joan Jewett said.

"We do an investigation and turn over our information and evidence to the U.S. attorney's office and the U.S. attorney makes the decision on whether to prosecute or not," Jewett said.

With CIA’s Help, NY Police Move Covertly in Muslim Areas

Undercover officers stake out bookstores, bars, cafes and nightclubs. Some, known as “mosque crawlers,” even monitor sermons.

By MATT APUZZO and ADAM GOLDMAN
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, the New York Police Department has become one of the nation’s most aggressive domestic intelligence agencies, targeting ethnic communities in ways that would run afoul of civil liberties rules if practiced by the federal government, an Associated Press investigation has found.

The operations have benefited from unprecedented help from the CIA, a partnership that has blurred the line between foreign and domestic spying.

The department has dispatched undercover officers, known as “rakers,” in-to minority neighborhoods as part of a human mapping program, according to officials directly involved in the program. They’ve monitored daily life in bookstores, bars, cafes and nightclubs. Police have also used informants, known as “mosque crawlers,” to monitor sermons, even when there’s no evidence of wrongdoing.

Neither the city council, which finances the department, nor the federal government, which has given NYPD more than $1.6 billion since 9/11, is told exactly what’s going on.

Many of these operations were built with help from the CIA, which is prohibited from spying on Americans but was instrumental in transforming the NYPD’s intelligence unit.

A veteran CIA officer, while still on the agency’s payroll, was the architect of the NYPD’s intelligence programs. The CIA trained a police detective at the

To Stay or Go?

As Hurricane Irene nears East Coast, officials debate whether to tell tourists to leave during one of the final weeks of the summer season.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HATTERAS, N.C. • Hurricane Irene could hit anywhere from North Carolina to New York this weekend, leaving officials in the path of uncertainty to make a delicate decision. Should they tell tourists to leave during one of the last weeks of the multibillion-dollar summer season?

Most were in a wait-and-see mode, holding out to get every dime before the storm’s path crystalizes. North Carolina’s governor told reporters not to scare people away.

“You will never endanger your tourists, but you also don’t want to over inflate the sense of urgency about the storm. And so let’s just hang on,” North Carolina Gov. Beverly Perdue said Wednesday. At the same time she warned to “prepare for the worst.”

In the Bahamas, tourists cut their vacations short and caught the last flights out before the airport was closed. Those who remained behind with locals prepared for a rough night of violent winds and a dangerous storm surge that threatened to punish the low-lying chain of islands. Irene has already hit Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, causing landslides and flooding homes. One woman was killed.

Russian Supply Ship for Space Station Crashes

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. • A Russian space station supply ship crashed with a thunderous boom into Siberia minutes after launch Wednesday, rattling NASA and others in this new era without any shuttles to bail out the orbiting outpost. The rocket failed barely a month after NASA’s final space shuttle flight. While the International Space Station has more than enough supplies, the accident threatens to delay the launch of the next crew, just one month away. That’s because the upper stage of the unmanned Soyuz rocket that failed is similar to the ones used to launch astronauts to the station. In addition, three of the six space station residents who are due to return to Earth in two weeks might end up staying longer. NASA wants a full staff to keep research going.

U.S. Budget Deficit Slips to $1.28T, But Red Ink Continues

BY STEPHEN OHLEMACHER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • After months of unrelieved gloom and discord, Congress and President Barack Obama are starting to make a dent in the federal budget deficit. It’s projected to shrink slightly to $1.28 trillion this year, and bigger savings from this month’s debt ceiling deal are forecast over the next decade.

No one’s celebrating. There will be plenty of red ink for years to come.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office projected Wednesday that annual budget deficits will be reduced by a total of $3.3 trillion over the next decade, largely because of the deficit reduction package passed by Congress earlier this month. The office also forecast persistently high unemployment, a troubling political prospect for President Barack Obama in the crucial months of his campaign to win a second term.

Even with the anticipated big savings, annual budget deficits are expected to total nearly $3.5 trillion over the next decade — and much more if Bush-era tax cuts scheduled to expire at the end of next year are extended. In all, nearly $8.5 trillion would be added to the national debt over the next 10 years if the tax cuts and certain spending programs are kept in place, the budget office report said.

Libyan Dictator’s Stronghold Falls
Libyans holding a huge flag celebrate the successful storming of Moammar Gadhafi’s main compound in Tripoli, Libya, on Wednesday.

Libyan Rebels Hunt Gadhafi, Try to Secure Tripoli

A defiant Gadhafi vows from hiding to fight on “until victory or martyrdom,” in an audio message.

By BEN HUBBARD and KARIN LAUB
Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya • Libyans hunting Moammar Gadhafi offered a $2 million bounty on the fallen dictator’s head and amnesty for anyone who kills or captures him as rebels battled Wednesday to clear the last pockets of resistance from the capital Tripoli.

While some die-hard loyalists kept up the fight to defend Gadhafi, his support was crumbling by the hour. His deputy intelligence chief defected, and even his foreign minister said his 42-year rule was over.

A defiant Gadhafi vowed from hiding to fight on “until victory or martyrdom,” in an audio message early Wednesday.

He may have little choice. Asked by the British broadcaster Channel 4 if a negotiated settlement or safe passage for Gadhafi from Libya was still possible, Foreign Minister Abdul Ati al-Obeidi said: “It looks like things have passed this kind of solution.”

Rebel leaders were beginning to set up a new government in the capital. Their interim administration, the National Transitional Council, has been based in the eastern city of Benghazi, which fell under rebel control shortly after the outbreak of widespread protests in February.

“Members of the council are now moving one by one from Benghazi to Tripoli,” said Mansour Seyfal-Nasr, the Libyan opposition’s new ambassador to France.

Rebel officials are eager to prove they can bring a stable political future to Libya, and that their movement is more than an often-fractionious collection of tribes, ethnicities and semiautonomous militias. Mahmoud Jibril, the head of the opposition government, outlined plans for a new constitution and elections and said officials were talking to the U.N. about sending up to 200 monitors to help ensure security in Tripoli.

But the capital was far from pacified. A day after rebels captured Gadhafi’s vast Bab al-Aziziya compound, the symbolic center of his regime, loyalists were firing into the compound from an adjacent neighborhood where intense clashes broke out. Pro-regime snipers cut off the road to the airport. Four Italian journalists were kidnapped on the highway to Tripoli around the city of Zawiya, 30 miles west of the capital.

Panel: Former Enterprise Captain Can Stay in Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) • The former commander of a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier who produced raunchy videos aboard the USS Enterprise can remain in the Navy despite a finding that he committed misconduct, a Navy panel ruled Wednesday.

Capt. Owen P. Honors let out a sigh of relief after the board of inquiry read its decision, then embraced his wife after months of uncertainty about his career largely came to a close. The board was deciding whether to recommend to Navy Secretary Ray Mabus that Honors should be kicked out of the Navy after nearly three decades of service because of the videos. Among other things, the videos included simulated same-sex shower scenes, anti-gay slurs and references to prostitution in foreign ports.

Honors also faced the possibility of losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in retirement benefits if he had been forced out under a different pay grade.

“O.P. is pleased,” Honors’ attorney, Charles Gittins, told reporters following the hearing. “Retention is a big deal. He has the advantage now of leaving now on his terms.”

KY. JURY RULES AGAINST PENIS AMPUTATION PATIENT

A Shelbyville, Ky., truck driver who was wheeled into surgery for a simple circumcision but awoke without part of his penis lost his multimillion-dollar lawsuit Wednesday against the urologist who lopped off a cancer-riddled section of the organ. Federal Charges Filed in Arizona Wildfire

BY MARK CARLSON
Associated Press

PHOENIX • Federal charges have been filed against two cousins accused of accidentally causing the largest forest fire in Arizona's history by leaving a campfire unattended.

The U.S. attorney's office on Wednesday announced the charges against Caleb Joshua Malboeuf, 26, of Benson and David Wayne Malboeuf, 24, of Tucson.

The U.S. Forest Service said its investigators determined the men were camping in the Apache Sitgreaves National Forest when the fire began there May 29.

The agency said the two were out hiking when their campfire spread outside its fire ring in high winds.

"Upon noticing smoke from the direction of their campsite, the cousins attempted to get back to their campsite where they had left their gear," the Forest Service said in a statement. "As they got closer, the smoke and flames became too intense, and they were forced to retreat."

The men each face five counts, including leaving a fire unattended and failing to maintain control of a fire that damaged a National Forest System.

A conviction for each of the offenses charged in the complaint carries a maximum penalty of six months in prison, a $5,000 fine or both.

Winds whipped the Wallow Fire as it burned more than 538,000 acres in eastern Arizona and parts of western New Mexico, destroying 32 homes, four commercial structures and 36 outbuildings.

It cost more than $79 million to fight before firefighters and monsoon rains eventually put out the flames.

Heat Slows Crews Battling Calif. Rail Fire

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LINCOLN, Calif. • Firefighters began making a bold attempt Wednesday to drain a burning propane rail tanker but the process to head off a catastrophic explosion in a Northern California town was slowed by the fire's intense heat.

The rail blaze kept thousands of people away from their homes for a second day. Crews had hoped to start draining the propane from the tanker into a newly dug retaining hole at around 5 p.m., but the process was slowed by the fire, Lincoln Fire Chief Dave Whitt said.

"They can only work half an hour at a time," he said.

Whitt said the city decided to try draining the tanker after consulting with members of a national response team from Houston, who were flown in overnight to offer advice to authorities in Lincoln, a Sacramento suburb.

The maneuver could get the blaze under control in 24 to 48 hours, instead of the 21 days the fire could take to burn out on its own, fire officials said.

Officials were trying to head off the potential failure of the 29,000-gallon tank. A buildup of heat could lead to an explosion that Whitt compared to a "small thermal nuclear bomb" that produces a fireball several hundred yards wide.

An explosion also could throw metal shards up to a mile away.

Hurricane

On the Outer Banks of North Carolina, some tourists heeded evacuation orders for a tiny barrier island as Irene strengthened to a Category 3 storm, with winds of 120 mph.

"We jam-packed as much fun as we could into the remainder of Tuesday," said Jessica Stanton Tice of Charleston, W.Va. She left Ocracoke Island on an early-morning ferry with her husband and toddler.

"We're still going to give North Carolina our vacation business, but we're going to Asheville" in the mountains, she said.

Officials said Irene could cause flooding, power outages or worse as far north as Maine, even if the eye of the storm stays offshore. Hurricane-force winds were expected 50 miles from the center of the storm.

Predicting the path of such a huge storm can be tricky, but the National Hurricane Center uses computer models to come up with a "cone of uncertainty," a three-day forecast that has become remarkably accurate in recent years. Forecasters are still about a day away from the cone reaching the East Coast.

A system currently over the Great Lakes will play a large role in determining if Irene is pushed farther to the east in the next three or four days.

Farm, the agency's spy school in Virginia, then returned him to New York, where he put his new espionage skills to work inside the United States. And just last month, the CIA sent a senior officer to work as a clandestine operative inside police headquarters.

The NYPD denied that it trolls ethnic neighborhoods and said it only follows leads. Police operations have disrupted terrorist plots and put several would-be killers in prison.

"The New York Police Department is doing everything it can to make sure there's not another 9/11 here and that more innocent New Yorkers are not killed by terrorists," NYPD spokesman Paul Browne said. "And we have nothing to apologize for in that regard." AP's investigation is based on documents and interviews with more than 40 current and former New York Police Department and federal officials. Many were directly involved in planning and carrying out these secret operations for the department. Though most said the tactics were appropriate and made the city safer, many insisted on anonymity, because they were not authorized to speak with reporters about security matters.

In response to the story, the Council on American-Islamic Relations, a leading Muslim civil rights organization, called on the Justice Department to investigate. The Justice Department had no immediate comment.

"This is potentially illegal what they're doing," said Gadeir Abbas, a staff attorney with the organization.

After the terrorist attacks, New York hired retired CIA official David Cohen to transform its intelligence division.

Among Cohen's earliest moves at the NYPD was asking for help from his old CIA colleagues. He needed someone who had access to the latest intelligence so the NYPD wouldn't have to rely on the FBI to dole out information.

CIA Director George Tenet dispatched Larry Sanchez, a respected CIA veteran, to New York while Sanchez was still on the CIA payroll, three former intelligence officials said. Sanchez directed and mentored officers, schooling them in the art of gathering information, officials said.

There had never been an arrangement like it, and some senior CIA officials soon began questioning whether Tenet was allowing Sanchez to operate on both sides of the wall that's supposed to keep the CIA out of the domestic intelligence business.

"It should not be a surprise to anyone that, after 9/11, the Central Intelligence Agency stepped up its cooperation with law enforcement on counterterrorism issues or that some of that increased cooperation was in New York, the site of ground zero," CIA spokeswoman Jennifer Youngblood said.

Cohen also persuaded a federal judge to loosen rules and allow police to open investigations before there's any indication a crime has been committed.

With that newfound authority, Cohen created a secret squad that would soon infiltrate Muslim neighborhoods, according to several current and former officials directly involved in the program.

The NYPD assigned undercover officers to monitor neighborhoods, looking for potential trouble. Using census data, police matched undercover officers to ethnic communities and instructed them to blend in, the officials said. They hung out in hookah bars and cafes, quietly observing the community around them.

The NYPD assigned undisclosed until now, became known inside the department as the Demographic Unit, former police officials said.

"It's not a question of profiling. It's a question of going where the problem could arise," said Mordecai Dzikansky, a retired NYPD intelligence officer who said he was aware of the Demographic Unit. "And thank God we have the capability. We have the language capability and the ethnic officers. That's our hidden weapon."

Deficit

The national debt now stands at more than $14.6 trillion.

The numbers help illustrate the urgency facing a new joint committee in Congress that is charged with finding $1.2 trillion to $1.5 trillion in budget savings over the next decade. Some lawmakers are calling for an even bigger package, a tall order given the bitter debate that produced this month's debt deal.

"CBO's report is yet more evidence that Congress faces a twin challenge of a sluggish near-term economy and a still very serious long-term debt threat," said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "Congress cannot afford to ignore either challenge."

Most of the improvement in this year's deficit picture comes from higher than anticipated tax collections from 2010 returns filed in the spring. Over the longer term, the belt-tightening required in the new deficit reduction law will mean even bigger savings, the report says.

Deficits could end up larger if CBO's economic forecast, which is more optimistic than private projections, proves to be too rosy. The agency doesn't foresee another recession but modest economic growth over the next few years. And it expects the unemployment rate to fall only slightly, to 8.5 percent in the last three months of 2012, and staying above 8 percent through the following year.

"A great deal of the pain of this economic downturn still lies ahead of us," said CBO Director Douglas W. Elmendorf.

Democratic leaders say the report shows the need for programs and policies aimed at creating jobs. Republicans say the report is an indictment of Obama's economic policies.

"A slight decrease in the projected deficit is nothing to celebrate, particularly when it is accompanied by the grim news that CBO expects the national unemployment rate to continue to exceed 8 percent well past next year," said House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio. "The president's policies were supposed to keep that from happening."

There is good news for the more than 50 million people who get Social Security benefits. After two years without a cost-of-living adjustment, the agency now projects a 2.8 percent COLA for 2012. That's up from the 1.1 percent increase the agency previously projected. The actual increase for 2012 will be announced in October. It is based on a measure of inflation.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Stage Afternoon Rally

NEW YORK (AP) • The stock market spent most of the day looking like a driver given bad directions. The Dow headed lower at the start of trading, turned up 115 points by 10 a.m., then pulled another U-turn and was down 48 points shortly after midday.

Near the end of the day, the Dow retraced its route and rose steadily in the last 90 minutes of trading to end up 143.95 points, or 1.3 percent, at 11,320.71. The Dow had surged 322 points the day before, the biggest gain since Aug. 11.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 15.25 points, or 1.3 percent, to 1,177.60. The Nasdaq rose 21.63, or 0.9 percent, to 2,467.69.

Burger King Introduces Oatmeal to Breakfast Menu

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) • Oatmeal is the new burger.

Burger King, the world's second-largest hamburger chain, added oatmeal to its breakfast menu this week, joining a slew of other chains that have brought the hot cereal out of the cupboard and into restaurants and drive-thrus.

Burger King says it is trying to offer customers a healthier breakfast option beyond its sausage croissant sandwiches and french toast dipping sticks. It's also an attempt by the struggling chain to catch up to competitors and boost sagging sales by appealing to customers beyond its base of burgers-and-fries fans.

"We are definitely looking to broaden our target and our audience," said Leo Leon, vice president of global innovation for Burger King Corp.

Apple Inc. Chairman and CEO Steve Jobs waves to his audience on March 2 at an Apple event at the Yerba Buena Center for the Arts Theater in San Francisco. Apple Inc. on Wednesday said Jobs is resigning as CEO, effective immediately.

Apple Says Steve Jobs Resigning as CEO

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Steve Jobs, the mind behind the iPhone, iPad and other devices that turned Apple Inc. into one of the world's most powerful companies, resigned as the company's CEO on Wednesday, saying he can no longer handle the job.

The move appears to be the result of an unspecified medical condition for which he took an indefinite leave from his post in January. Apple's chief operating officer, Tim Cook, has been named CEO.

In a letter addressed to Apple's board and the "Apple community," Jobs said he

"... if there ever came a day when I could no longer meet my duties and expectations as Apple's CEO, I would be the first to let you know. Unfortunately, that day has come."

— Steve Jobs

"always said if there ever came a day when I could no longer meet my duties and expectations as Apple's CEO, I would be the first to let you know. Unfortunately, that day has come."

Jobs' health has long been a concern for Apple investors who see him as an industry oracle who seems to know what consumers want long before they do. After his announcement, Apple stock quickly fell 5.4 percent in after-hours trading.

The company said Jobs gave the board his resignation Wednesday and suggested Cook be named the company's new leader. Apple said Jobs was elected board chairman and Cook is becoming a member of its board.

Jobs' hits seemed to grow bigger as the years went on: After the colorful iMac computer and the now-ubiquitous iPod, the iPhone redefined the category of smart phones and the iPad all but created the market for tablet computers.

His own aura seemed part of the attraction. On stage at trade shows and company events in his uniform of jeans, sneakers and black mock-turtlenecks, he'd entrance audiences with new devices, new colors, new software features, building up to a grand finale he'd predictably preface by saying, "One more thing."

10 Products that Defined Steve Jobs' Career

NEW YORK (AP) • Steve Jobs had no formal schooling in engineering, yet he's listed as the inventor or co-inventor on more than 200 U.S. patents. These are some of the significant products that were created under his direction:

- 1. Apple I (1976) • Apple's first product was a computer for hobbyists and engineers, made in small numbers. Steve Wozniak designed it, while Jobs orchestrated the funding and handled the marketing.
- 2. Apple II (1977) • One of the first successful personal computers, the Apple II was designed as a mass-market product rather than something for engineers or enthusiasts. It was still largely Wozniak's design. Several upgrades for the model followed, and the product line continued until 1993.
- 3. Lisa (1983) • Jobs' visit to Xerox Corp.'s research center in Palo Alto inspired him to start work on the first commercial computer with a graphical user interface, with icons, windows and a cursor controlled by a mouse. It was the foundation for today's computer interfaces, but the Lisa was too expensive to be a commercial success.
- 4. Macintosh (1984) • Like the Lisa, the Macintosh had a graphical user interface. It was also cheaper and faster and had the backing of a large advertising campaign behind it. People soon realized how useful the graphical interface was for design. That led "desktop publishing," accomplished with a Mac coupled to a laser printer, to soon become a sales driver.

- 5. NeXT computer (1989) • After being forced out of Apple, Jobs started a company that built a powerful workstation computer. The company was never able to sell large numbers, but the computer was influential: The world's first Web browser was created on one. Its software also lives on as the basis for today's Macintosh and iPhone operating system.
- 6. iMac (1998) • When Jobs returned to Apple in 1996, the company was floundering, with an ever-shrinking share of the PC market. The radical iMac was the first step in reversing the slide. It was strikingly designed as a bubble of blue plastic that enclosed both the monitor and the computer. Easy to set up, it captured the imagination just as people across the world were having their eyes opened to the benefits of the Internet and considering getting their first home computer.
- 7. iPod (2001) • It wasn't the first digital music player with a hard drive, but it was the first successful one. Apple's expansion into portable electronics has had vast ramifications. The iPod's success prepared the way for the iTunes music store and the iPhone.
- 8. iTunes store (2003) • Before the iTunes store, buying digital music was a hassle, making piracy the more popular option. The store simplified the process and brought together tracks from all the major labels. The store became the largest music retailer in the U.S. in 2008.

- 9. iPhone (2007) • The iPhone did for the phone experience what the Macintosh did for personal computing — it made the power of a smartphone easy to harness. Apple is now the world's most profitable maker of phones, and the influence of the iPhone is evident in all smartphones.

- 10. iPad (2010) • Dozens of companies, including Apple, had created tablet computers before the iPad, but none caught on. The iPad finally cracked the code, creating a whole new category of computer practically by itself.

Fly-Fishing Industry Threatened by Congress

Surrounded by members of the $658 million fly-fishing industry he represents, Jim Klug considered the anti-environment campaign in Congress and had this advice for his fellow businessmen and sportsmen:

“They better wake up to what the House is trying to do before it’s too late. Our industry depends on a clean environment, and if you take that away, you don’t just take away a hobby and pastime, you take away entire industries.”

An Offroad Tragedy

Even after a Jerome motocross race team suffers a tragic accident at the unveiling of its dune buggy project, its leader says giving up isn’t an option.

BY ANDREW WEEKS

JEROME • It wasn’t what James Allinen expected. After almost a year of planning and work, the unveiling of his race team’s custom dune buggy was supposed to be a joyous event. Instead it turned into tragedy. While on a ride showing off the completed Yamaha-blue buggy at an unveiling Aug. 10 at sponsor KLIM Co. in Rigby, Allinen, 33, and his passenger — the offroad company’s marketing and promotions manager, Nathan L. Blaylock, 33, of Idaho Falls — were hit from behind by a Chevrolet Suburban driven by 32-year-old Briana Tustian of Rigby, according to the Bonneville County Sheriff’s Office. Allinen is now recovering from a broken neck and injured spine, while the Blaylock family is suffering a much greater pain: Nathan succumbed to his

Fantastic Trout

Cutthroat trout fishing’s great on the Selway River because it’s one tough place to get to.

BY PETE ZIMOWSKY
McClatchy Newspapers

ON THE SELWAY RIVER, Idaho • A splash breaks the surface of a deep, jade-colored pool in the Selway River. “Fish on!” That phrase echoed constantly on a 47-mile, late-July float trip through the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness, the third largest wilderness in the Lower 48. It’s pristine land on the Idaho/Montana border and a land of westslope cutthroat trout, black bears, eagles, ospreys, deer and other big game animals. You could see the wild westslope cutt dart from beneath an underwater cliff of gray-black granite spiced with blackish-green moss and orange lichen. The fish headed straight for, and nailed, a gold Thomas Buoyant lure cast by whitewater rafter Mary Nielsen. Meanwhile, her husband, Alan Hamilton (of Aire rafts), who was also rowing a cataraft, was reeling in a fish from the opposite side of the pool. Cutthroat trout fishing on the Selway River is world class, but less well known than other rivers because it’s remote and tends to be floated more often by whitewater rafters than anglers, but some do both. “The fishing was excellent,” said Nielsen, who was a member of a party that launched July 28 during the river’s summer permit season. “It was a lot of fun to catch so many fish.” She released the 12-incher and immediately started casting again. “So many fish” is the story for this river, where floaters caught and released up to 30 cutts in a day. Considering you also have to row around boulders and through rapids, that’s pretty phenomenal. The good fishing isn’t that hard to believe when you really think about this river, which is smack dab in the middle of 1.3 million acres of wilderness and protected by limited rafting permits and strict fishing regulations. There also are some of the gnarliest rapids in the West, as well as rough

“I like the fact that they only allow one group to launch per day (on the Selway). It makes you feel more isolated and at peace in the wilderness,” Hamilton said.

trails spiced with rattlesnakes. It’s no easy trick to get to the Selway’s cutthroats. It entails getting a float permit for the period from May 15 to July 31, a time for the best flows. Rafters from as far away as Australia, Malaysia and the Virgin Islands apply for permits. Upwards of 1,200 people can float the Selway in the permit season, depending on group size, water flows and the weather. By comparison, almost 16,000 people can float the Middle Fork during its permit season. “I like the fact that they only allow

Scenic Secrets

The Earl M. Hardy Box Canyon Nature Preserve is one of the hidden gems in the Magic Valley, and now you can discover it, too.

BY EVA STUTZMAN

On the north side of the Snake River Canyon, between Buhl, Hagerman and Gooding, there is a local haunt, a small canyon that has been kept secret to many. A spring that feeds into the river runs through the small canyon that has been a local hideout for teenagers for a long time. Earl M. Hardy Box Canyon Spring Nature Preserve is known for its short yet challenging walking trail and scenic overlooks. Before it became a state park local kids used to inner tube the fast-flowing creek. Now others are discovering the Magic Valley’s best-kept secret. “It’s surprising,” said Twin Falls resident Blaze Requa. “The trail looked really unpromising, but it’s awesome.” The five-mile loop leads across some open farmland to the canyon rim, about three-fourths of a mile from the parking lot, where you can look down the 200-foot canyon wall and see the 50-degree water bubbling up from the aquifer. “It’s hard to beat the view looking down at the spring,” said Eric Whittekiend, a ranger

How to Find Box Canyon

- What: Non-motorized trail into Box Canyon, you can hike, bike and ride horses but remember to respect the trail
- Where: Exit 155 at Wendell, go 3.2 miles to 1500 East, then south 4.5 miles to the parking lot on the right.
- When: The park is beautiful all times of the year. Eric Whittekiend and his family go in the winter to see the eagles and hawks while Justine Hernandez likes to go during the summer when it’s hot enough to get in the water.
- Cost: There is a day use fee of $5 or an unlimited pass for $40
- More information: Thousand Springs Parks Department at 837-4505
- Watch out: There have been rattlesnake sightings in the park

New Arched Entry to Mount Rainier National Park

BY JEFFERY P. MAYOR
The News Tribune

MOUNT RAINIER, Wash.

• Crews on Monday began the final phase of restoring the entrance arch at the Mount Rainier National Park boundary on state Route 410, using a crane to place two 70-foot log stringers in place. Traffic was halted for about 30 minutes as each log lowered, plus for shorter spans during the day. Built in 1936 by the Civilian Conservation Corps, the rustic style arch had deteriorated because of the elements and nearly 80 years of use. The arch, designed as an entrance portal and an equestrian overpass, now also serves hikers and riders using the Pacific Crest Trail. The structure spans the Mather Memorial Parkway at 5,432 feet in elevation on the eastern edge of the park. The project, which began last year, will repair or replace the deteriorated parts of the structure, including the stringers that support the bridge deck and repair of the stone masonry abutments. “It was certainly in poor condition,” Acting Superintendent Randy King said. “Some of the masonry was falling down. The logs were showing decay. It was to the point that it was unsafe.” The cedar stringers, measuring 36 inches in diameter, came from Canada. While the park tries to salvage logs for future use in the park, King said they had nothing in their inventory that large and long. The $99,000 project cost came from a National Park Service project fund, not out of the park’s operating budget. King said the importance of the project goes beyond the safety issues. “Historic preservation is one of our responsibilities, to maintain that look and feel and function of park structures,” he said. The arch work is similar to that done recently to preserve the Paradise Inn and Guide House, King said. “We need to retain the historic structures and their functionality so they can be used by people for the next 50 years,” King said. “It’s an important structure in its own right, but it serves a function to carry foot and horse traffic on the Pacific Crest Trail,” he said. “It’s also an icon on the Mather Memorial Parkway. “It is one of the most impressive gateway structures in any national park.”

at Thousand Springs State Park. “You really can’t find that many other places.” The trail then goes farther along the rim until it cuts into the side of the canyon, another quarter mile from the lookout. The trail is not maintained, as a sign warns at the point where it drops into the canyon. It has some steep and rocky parts but it isn’t very long before you are right beside the spring. This time of year the trail is pretty overgrown and you have to walk single file to avoid the stinging nettle that grows along the spring. “You used to be able to walk two by two,” said Justine Hernandez, who tries to get down to box canyon at least three times a summer. “Right now you have to walk single file and you still get whacked by the brush.” Another third of a mile down the trail you might be surprised to see some decking and stairs that were put in a few years ago to look out over the waterfall that cascades through the canyon. If you continue down the trail about another quarter-mile, you will see what looks like a lake but is actually where the water is diverted from its natural flow. The diversion creates a pool that, for those who are brave enough to jump in, can make for a refreshing dip on a hot summer day. “It’s so cold,” exclaimed Scott Bixler as he came up to catch his breath after jumping in for the first time. Most folks learn about Box Canyon by word of mouth. There isn’t much out there advertising the spot that many locals would like to keep secret. The only way you know there is even a trailhead is the Idaho State Park pay box and informational sign that are stationed beside the small parking lot. You can’t see the canyon from the parking lot and most people get lost when trying to find it. “The first time we tried to find it we ended up in Malad Gorge,” said Chance Requa of Twin Falls. However difficult it may be to find this paradise in the middle of the desert, it is always worth the search. “The end reward far outweighs it,” said Cindy Requa. There is a road that leads out of the canyon back up to the top and the parking lot, but for a shorter hike just double back and head out the way you came in.

FLY-FISHING INDUSTRY THREATENED

BY BOB MARSHALL
The Times-Picayune

NEW ORLEANS • Sitting in Hall B of the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center last week surrounded by members of the $658 million fly-fishing industry he represents, Jim Klug considered the anti-environment campaign in Congress and had this advice for his fellow businessmen and sportsmen: “They better wake up to what the House is trying to do before it’s too late,” said Klug, chairman of the American Fly Fishing Trade Association. “Our industry depends on a clean environment, and if you take that away, you don’t just take away a hobby and pastime, you take away entire industries. “No one who cares about fishing or these industries can sit on the sidelines any more. Frankly, a lot of us have just been stunned.” They are stunned by the comprehensive nature of the House attack and by the politicians leading it. They were surprised by the billions cut from conservation programs because it made no accounting sense; the investment is a win for taxpayers because the industries the programs support return billions more to the treasury. More frightening was the long-term agenda for the environment spelled out by the GOP majority in the dozens of policy riders attached to some bills. These included ordering federal agencies not to enforce regulations protecting streamside wetlands, waterfowl-nesting habitat, carbon pollution, pesticide application, roadside runoff and mountaintop mining, among others. These will have no effect on the deficit, but are merely million-dollar giveaways to favored industries. Then there were the loud attacks against global-warming science and environmental regulatory action by the GOP’s leading presidential candidates, attacks filled with outright falsehoods. This came the same week a peer-reviewed study published by the National Academy of Sciences warned the current rate of warming could result in the loss of more than half of all trout habitat in Western states during the next 70 years. Polls show most sportsmen identify themselves as conservatives and Republicans. So this anti-environmental march by their party has left many of them stunned and angry, including Klug. “I’ve always been a Montana Republican, and I never thought I would see the Republican Party doing this kind of stuff,” he said. The policy challenge, he said, is educating congressmen on the financial impact of cutting conservation programs and hindering green regulations on hundreds of businesses across the nation. In addition to famous tackle manufacturers, the AFFTA estimates there are 650 specialty fly shops in the United States, plus thousands of guides and outfitters that will feel the impacts of a declining environment. And if their business drops, so will thousands of other businesses that ride their economic coattails, including hotels, restaurants and travel. The political challenge, Klug said, is getting those businesses as well as the nation’s 60 million anglers involved. “During elections, it’s almost a prerequisite where I live for a candidate to have his or her picture taken fishing in a stream, holding up a trout, acting like they love fishing and hunting,” he said. “But we’ve seen now once they get into office, they vote against our interests in a big way. “Well, we have to let them know we’re watching — we’re watching every day — and there will be consequences if they vote against our interests. They have to know a clean environment is not just the right thing to do,

Anglers Report Good Catches in Several Waters

Magic Reservoir: Boat anglers are reporting moderate success. Water is still up and bank fishing is doing well. Night crawlers and pink marshmallows are very popular right now. Boat anglers are reporting better success when they are fishing deeper water. Salmon Falls Reservoir: Anglers report catching walleye, trout, bass, crappie and perch. Most boat anglers are fishing between Greys Landing and the Gravel Pit, and reporting quite a few walleye and good size perch. Jigging with worms is popular right now, as well as wedding rings and crank baits. The water is still high and most boaters are putting in at the dam. The Gravel Pits have plenty of water and offer a variety of fishing. Because of the high water, bank fishing is concentrated around the docks and areas like Whiskey Slough, China Pit, and Antelope Bar. Roseworth Reservoir: Anglers report pretty good trout fishing. Little Camas: Fishermen are reportedly doing fair. Water levels are still relatively high allowing for boat access. Algae is starting to come on strong, but anglers are still harvesting rainbow trout. Big Wood River: The river is fishing well since water levels dropped. The dry fly action has been pretty good. Little Wood Reservoir: Anglers are doing fairly well catching 14- to 15-inch rainbow trout with the occasional cutthroat trout. Most anglers seem to be concentrating on the upper end of the reservoir near the inlet. Boat access is good. Filer Ponds: The ponds have essentially shut down due to warm water temperatures. Stocking will resume when water quality improves — likely in September. Oakley Reservoir: Anglers report catches of rainbow trout. Boat anglers were doing the best. Shoreline fishing was decent but spotty. No walleye fishing reports available. Silver Creek: Fishing is reportedly slow to moderate. Delayed vegetation growth (cold spring) was making fishing difficult; however, the vegetation has finally come in raising water levels and concentrating fish in channels and deep water. Some anglers are reportedly having success fishing after dark for large browns. Snake River: Sturgeon fishing is slow likely due to warm water temperatures. The river flows have decreased but the warm water seems to be slowing catch rates down. Bruneau Dunes: Anglers report having fun with bass and bluegill. Vegetation is getting heavier, but float tubers are still having success.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: I handled my own bankruptcy case and it is closed. I'm trying to refinance my house, but the bank says there is a lien against my house in favor of one of the creditors I listed in my bankruptcy. What can I do?

Answer: Your creditor sued you and received a court judgment that was then recorded in your county, creating a lien on your home. Although the underlying debt was discharged in your bankruptcy, the lien remains and must be paid or otherwise cleared before your home can be refinanced or sold. In Idaho, you are entitled to a homestead exemption that protects the equity in your home from your creditors. If the judgment lien impairs your exemption, it could have been removed while your bankruptcy case was still open. In order to remove the lien now, your case will need to be reopened, then you will have to file the appropriate motion and documents. This can be a time consuming and expensive process. An experienced bankruptcy attorney can handle this matter easily. It's unfortunate, but what you saved by not using an attorney for your bankruptcy is probably less than you will spend reopening your case and removing the lien now. Bankruptcy is complex. Every debtor can benefit from being represented by an experienced bankruptcy attorney.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Doctors have told James Allinen that it could more than three months before he can go back to work, he says. He is at home recovering from a broken neck and injuries to his spine. He says his wife, Janie, is a huge help to him during his recovery, as he cannot even put on his own socks.

injuries, leaving behind a widow and four young children.

The crash is still under investigation by the Bonnevill County Prosecutor's Office.

"We all wish that day never happened," Allinen said, fighting back tears while lying in a hospital bed in his Jerome home.

Now, all that Allinen and his team can do is move forward. What that means for the team is still undetermined, but Allinen strongly believes the team's six youth shouldn't give up on their dream — the completion and auction of their buggy.

If they gave up on the project now, he said, it wouldn't be right to the team and other people who've put time, money and sweat into it. The buggy wasn't the end of their goals, but in many ways it was the beginning: Money raised from the auction was to go toward starting a non-profit youth center.

"Especially for Nathan, who lost his life, it wouldn't be right to quit," Allinen said. "That wouldn't be a good example to the youth. ... They can show compassion and still not give up on themselves."

Allinen's wife, Janie, who's been there for the team every step of the way, is still struggling with her husband's decision. Before, the buggy was an emblem of hope; now its dented frame and a few blotches of blood serve as a reminder to the tragedy.

"I have mixed feelings," she said, with tears coming easily as she sat at their dining room table. "I can't get the picture of the accident out of my mind. I haven't been able to go back" to the dune buggy.

The machine now sits at Allinen's parents' home in Kimberly.

LBZ member Rachell Allinen, 15, said she also is unsure whether she wants to pursue the buggy project. Maybe time will change her mind, she said, but for now she can't look at it.

Riding dirt bikes is another matter. "Of course I will," she said.

Allinen doesn't know if he'll ever ride again. Doctors have told him he probably won't recover more than 85 percent, he said. He can still walk, but because of his neck and back injuries he probably won't ever be able to wear a helmet.

"But," he said, "I've got to be a role model to the kids.

In memory

The LBZ Racing Team has devoted its website to Nathan Lee Blaylock; it includes a link where people can make donations to his family: LBZRacing.com.

... A lot of times doctors tell people they'll never be able to walk or ride again, and they find a way to do it."

For now, he's concentrating on his recovery and his family's financial future — he's expected to be out of work for at least the next three months. And he's thinking an awful lot about the Blaylocks.

"The kids have all had multiple encounters with Nathan," Allinen said. "He was just a wonderful man. 'You kids are doing wonderful,' he'd say. 'Keep it up.'"

Big Summer for Salmon Off Washington Coast

BY MARK YUASA

The Seattle Times

SEATTLE • This summer's coastal salmon fishery will go down as one for the memory books with kings up to 50 pounds.

"On Sunday we had two kings that weighed 46-plus pounds (cleaned and gutted), and I lost count of the number between 35 and 45 pounds, but I know there was a pile of them caught," said Mark Cedergreen, the president of the Westport

Charterboat Association.

Among those relishing a crowning moment off Westport was Kevin Lanier, vice president of the Sno-King Chapter of Puget Sound Anglers in Edmonds and his father Danny Stovall of Fairburn, Ga. Lanier fished about 18 miles off the mouth of Grays Harbor in 330 feet of water when they hooked multiple big kings Sunday.

"According to the tape it weighed 53 pounds (44-inch length by 31.5-inch girth)," Lanier said. "We put it on the scale at Westport and it weighed 47 pounds, 10 ounces, and we got another that weighed 38 pounds."

While the big kings are out there in decent numbers, the fishery was so hot off Westport that fisheries officials have reverted to a five-day-a-week fishery (closed Fridays and Saturdays).

Polar Bear Hunter Runs Afoul of US Authorities

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. •

A big-game hunter who legally killed a 7-foot polar bear more than a decade ago in Canada ran afoul of U.S. authorities after using a 24-foot boat to ferry the trophy to Michigan.

Rodger DeVries, 73, of Ottawa County's Georgetown Township, faces sentencing Sept. 8 on a misdemeanor of knowingly and unlawfully using a U.S. port or harbor to import polar bear parts without obtaining a permit, The Grand Rapids Press reported (<http://bit.ly/ps7IGV>).

Court records show he pleaded guilty Monday in U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids. The charge carries a maximum sentence of one year in jail and $100,000 in fines.

"The polar bear is an ecological and cultural treasure of the American and Canadian Arctic," Ignacia S. Moreno, assistant Attorney General for the Justice Department's Environment and Natural Resources Division, said in a statement Wednesday. "We will not tolerate the illegal importation of polar bear trophies."

Defense lawyer Terry

Tobias described DeVries as an "avid hunter" who has acknowledged his mistake in not getting proper U.S. permission. He obtained permits from the Canadian government, including an export permit, and complied with Indian and province laws.

DeVries paid an outfitter $12,500 for the hunt, and the bear was killed in November 2000 in Canada's Nunavut Territory and mounted by a taxidermist in Calgary, Alberta. It was kept in storage until 2007, when authorities said DeVries moved the bear and its skull to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

In July 2007, DeVries, his son and two grandchildren drove in his truck, hauling a boat, and picked up the bear and skull, and the boat was used to cross the border from St. Joseph Island in Ontario to Raber Bay, north of St. Ignace, Mich., the newspaper reported.

Latest Jupiter Probe Will Reveal More of the Giant Planet's Secrets

CHRIS ANDERSON

Beginning with Pioneer 10's flyby in 1973, eight robotic explorers have visited Jupiter. Its only orbiter, Galileo, studied the giant planet from 1995 to 2003 and dropped a probe into its atmosphere. The $1.1 billion Juno mission, whose five-year journey to Jupiter began earlier this month, stands poised to probe still deeper into the planet's mysteries.

When Juno arrives at Jupiter in 2016, it will fire its engines to slow down, allowing the planet's immense gravity to pull it into an 11-day orbit. But Juno's orbit, unlike Galileo's, will pass over Jupiter's poles, providing previously-unseen vistas. Juno will also orbit much closer to Jupiter than Galileo, offering the opportunity to peer deeply into the planet's swirling clouds. Juno mission planners hope to determine the size of Jupiter's core, the amount and distribution of water and other molecules in the atmosphere, and the detailed structure of its magnetic field.

Juno is also the first spacecraft to operate beyond the asteroid belt powered by the sun. Previous missions have used the heat of decaying plutonium ("radioisotope thermoelectric generators") to create electricity, but advances in solar photovoltaic technology allow Juno's three giant panels to produce nearly 500 watts of power, despite the sun's rays being 25 times feeble than Jupiter's distance, five times farther from the sun than earth.

Juno's intimate look at

Chris Anderson
Skywatch

Jupiter will come at a price, however. By orbiting so deep in Jupiter's magnetosphere, where charged subatomic particles ricochet between the planet's magnetic poles at breakneck speeds, Juno's electronics and solar panels will take a brutal beating.

No wonder engineers have slated Juno's primary mission to last only 33 or bits (about a year). Juno will greatly expand our knowledge of Jupiter and, like all its predecessors, will likely raise even more questions for future explorations to answer.

one group to launch per day (on the Selway). It makes you feel more isolated and at peace in the wilderness,” Hamilton said.

Getting a permit for the Selway doesn’t solve your cutthroat-seeking challenges. Running the river requires expert skills and demanding paddling or rowing.

You must also be prepared to deal with emergencies in the middle of nowhere.

Backpacking the trail through the river corridor also is demanding. The river is guarded by high mountains and deep canyons and flows through groves of old-growth timber and thick brush.

And just getting to the trailheads takes effort.

The trail along the river goes about 50 miles starting at the upper trailhead at the Paradise launch site west of Darby, Mont. The lower trailhead is at Race Creek above Selway Falls about 20 miles from U.S. 12 and the tourist burg of Lowell.

Getting to Paradise requires about 60 miles of bumpy pavement and tire-eating gravel.

The trail along the river is beautiful, don’t get me wrong. It goes through old-growth cedar, fir and spruce forests and along open grassy slopes with ponderosa pines.

But the hike isn’t a piece of cake. It just doesn’t follow the river and drop in elevation. It zig-zags up drainages away from the river and over ridges. You’ll feel the elevation gains and losses carrying a backpack.

There are numerous high-water stream crossings along the trail in the early season. Few hike the trail, which makes it a real wilderness experience.

Idaho’s cutthroats were almost fished out of the state’s rivers and streams 40 years ago when anglers could catch and keep 15 cutthroat in some rivers. But luckily, Idaho’s famed cutthroat trout rivers, such as the Middle Fork of the Salmon and the Lochsa and Selway rivers, have made comebacks.

Keeping cutthroats in the stream and not in the creel is important to continue quality fishing.

“The Selway trip is a perfect combination of fun, technical rapids with some good drops along with fantastic fishing,” said Nielsen.

Channel Cats on Prowl Even During Heat

BY BRENT FRAZEE
McClatchy Newspapers

OSKALOOSA, Kan. • The dog days of summer?

Bob Noah would rather call this time of year the cat days — as in catfish.

When the sweltering days of July and August arrive, Noah knows that the fish of don’t peck around,” said Noah, 51, who lives in Kansas City, Kan. “When they see that bait drift past, they’ll just inhale it.

“They don’t mess around.”

This fish certainly didn’t. As Noah held his fishing rod high, the big fish dug for deeper water, stripping out line as it made a run.

“You have to cover a lot of water. That’s why I like to drift. But if you have a good south wind that keeps you moving, you can catch some big channel cats, even on the hottest days.”

summer will be on the roam.

That’s why you’ll often find him on Perry Lake in the heat of the day, drifting big flats in hopes of catching a heavyweight channel catfish that some only dream of landing.

“This is one of the best times of the year to catch a big cat,” Noah said as he sat in his boat in the hot sun recently. “When the water temperature gets above 80, they’ll get up on these big flats and chase shad.

“You have to cover a lot of water. That’s why I like to drift. But if you have a good south wind that keeps you moving, you can catch some big channel cats, even on the hottest days.”

This mid-August Thursday certainly qualified. At noon, the temperature was climbing toward the low 90s. Yet, as Noah drifted his shad across a flat near the Delaware River channel, he watched his rod suddenly bend toward the water.

When he set the hook, he felt the weight of a big channel cat.

“These big ones usually

Noah played tug of war with the cat for several minutes, then worked the fish to the surface, where he guided it into a landing net.

Lifting his catch, he smiled and said, “That fish will go over 12 (pounds) for sure. That’s one of the ones we’re after.”

Noah unhooked the fish, then eased it back into the murky water.

The livewell of his boat was already brimming with good “eating-sized” channel catfish, as Noah calls them. The big fish go back.

And there were others that went back Thursday. Noah and I caught two other channel cats and one blue cat that he estimated at larger than 10 pounds.

Add another 20 channel cats, most of them in the 2- to 3-pound range, and you have the makings of a great day of summer fishing.

We released many of those fish, but Noah kept several for the frying pan.

For the past month, that’s been standard procedure for him. He travels to Perry Lake, an 11,630-acre reservoir located about 50 miles northwest of Kansas City, several times a week at this time of the year.

He starts by using a throw net to catch shad, then he covers the baitfish he catches with ice to keep them fresh.

He uses a baitcasting rod and reel with a three-way swivel, attaching a 1-ounce weight to one drop line and a big hook with a shad to the other.

Then he puts out a wind sock to help the boat drift at the proper speed, and he tries to stay in 20 feet of water, the depth at which he has had the most success.

It looks like he is fishing in the middle of the lake, but it is a productive zone for Noah. Not far from the river channel, it is a feeding flat for big channel catfish.

“One day this summer, we came out and caught only six hard, especially when it’s hot like this. Most people don’t want to be out here in the heat and sun.

“But when the fish are biting like they are, I don’t mind it one bit.”

North Dakota Expected to be Awash in Ducks This Fall

BY DENNIS ANDERSON
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

SOMEWHERE OVER NORTH DAKOTA • The Cessna 206 banked toward the rising sun last week, revealing beneath one wing a rich, broad countryside as green as it was watery. This was North Dakota in August 2011, one of the wettest years on record, in which basins large and small that have pockmarked the landscape for 10,000 years are water-filled.

And in many cases, duck-filled.

“I’ve been out here 30 years and I’ve never seen a spring and summer like this,” said U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist Lloyd Jones, a Wisconsin native and manager of Audubon National Wildlife Refuge in west-central North Dakota. “Water is everywhere.”

A former director of the North Dakota Game and Fish Department, onetime leader of Delta Waterfowl and a longtime Fish and Wildlife Service employee whose passion is ducks, Jones is a straight shooter whose voice carries a lot of weight continent-wide when the subject is waterfowl.

These days, that voice carries an urgent, almost singular message, one echoed by Ducks Unlimited and its forward-looking program, Grasslands for Tomorrow.

“We need to save native prairies and other grasslands in North Dakota and South Dakota,” Jones says. “And time is running out.”

Sitting in the right seat of the Cessna, alongside Fish and Wildlife Service pilot James Ward of Huron, S.D., Jones enjoyed a view of North Dakota otherwise reserved for the prairie’s golden eagles, red-tailed hawks, meadowlarks, northern harriers, grasshopper sparrows, ferruginous hawks, bobolinks — and, of course, mallards, widgeon, blue-winged teal, gadwall, pintails and other fowl.

To a duck lover, the picture from above was as pretty as the Mona Lisa — but no less complex and difficult to interpret. Yes, there will be ducks this year, as hens from Wahpeton in North Dakota’s southeast corner to Williston in the northwest have nested and in some instances re-nested and re-nested again in attempts to bring off broods.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, left, in November 1967, and Miami Heat basketball star LeBron James on Aug. 12. This year's Beloit College Mindset List is a reminder that the initials LBJ that once stood for President Johnson now make teenagers think of NBA star James. The list, released Tuesday, was begun as a way to remind professors that cultural references familiar to them might draw blank stares from college freshmen born mostly in 1993.

List Reminds Professors That Web is Older Than Incoming Freshmen

Beloit College Mindset List has evolved into a national phenomenon, a cultural touchstone that entertains even as it makes people wonder where the years have gone.

MILWAUKEE • Mention Amazon to the incoming class of college freshmen and they are more likely to think of shopping than the South American river. PC doesn't stand for political correctness and breaking up is a lot easier thanks to Facebook and text messaging.

These are among the 75 references on this year's Beloit College Mindset List, a compilation intended to remind teachers that college freshmen born mostly in 1993 see the world in a much different way: They fancied pogs and Tickle Me Elmo toys as children, watched televisions that never had dials and their lives have always been like a box of chocolates.

Once upon a time, relatives of the current generation swore never to trust anyone over the age of 30. This group could argue: Never trust anyone older than the Net.

The college's compilation, released Tuesday, is assembled each year by two officials at the private school in southeastern Wisconsin. It also has evolved into a national phenomenon, a cultural touchstone that entertains even as it makes people wonder where the years have gone.

Remember when the initials LBJ referred to President Lyndon B. Johnson? Today, according to the list, they make teenagers think of NBA star LeBron James. And speaking of NBA legends, these kids didn't want to be like Mike — they fawned over Shaq and Kobe.

In their lifetimes, Major League Baseball has always had three divisions plus wild-card playoff teams, and every state has always observed Martin Luther King Day. The "yadda, yadda, yadda" generation that's been quoting Seinfeld since they were old enough to talk also has always seen women serve as U.S. Supreme Court justices and command U.S. Navy ships.

Then there's OJ Simpson. These students were still in diapers when the former NFL star began searching for the killers of Nicole Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"Hmm, I know there was some scandal about him," said Alex Keesey, 18, an incoming freshman from Beloit. "I think it was robbery or murder, maybe both."

Comments like that can be a little jarring to older folks who imagine that everyone knows about the Simpson murder trial and subsequent acquittal. But if the generation gap has you down, get used to it. The list's authors note that technology has only accelerated the pace of change and further compressed the generational divide.

Older Americans who read previous Mindset Lists felt that life was moving too quickly, list author Ron Nief said, and now even younger people share that sentiment.

"I talk to people in their early 30s and they're telling me they can't keep up with all the advances," Nief said.

Nief's co-author, English professor Tom McBride, predicts the trend will only accelerate.

"If you look at the jump from email to texting, or from email to Facebook, it's been faster than the jump from typing to computers," McBride said. "These generational gaps are getting smaller."

Still not feeling old? Consider this: Andre the Giant, River Phoenix and Frank Zappa all died before these students were born. They don't know what a Commodore 64 was, and they don't understand why Boston barflies would ever shout, "Norm!"

Oh, and Ferris Bueller could be their father.

But the list isn't intended to serve as a cultural tombstone, its authors say, contending that the compilation also serves a practical purpose.

McBride and Nief say the main lesson professors should take from this year's list is that their incoming students have never lived in a world without the Internet. From the moment these kids were able to reach a tabletop, their fingertips probably were brushing against computers plugged into the World Wide Web.

And while that was largely true for the last few classes as well, the authors say teachers need to be extra-vigilant about where this year's students are going for information.

The Internet is great for finding facts, McBride says, but there's a big difference between facts and the knowledge that comes from understanding context behind the facts. He advises professors to teach how to supplement Internet searches with library research in scholarly journals, and to remind freshmen to dig beyond the first page or two of Google search results.

Sara Ballesteros, an 18-year-old freshman from South Beloit, said she's confident she knows how to do legitimate Internet research, by relying more on websites that end in ".edu" or ".gov" than in ".com" or ".org."

She also opined that adults worry too much about kids' Internet habits. She referred to item No. 7 on the Mindset List: "As they've grown up on websites and cellphones, adult experts have constantly fretted about their alleged deficits of empathy and concentration."

"For older people who think we use the Internet way too much for bad things, it really depends on the person, on their beliefs and ideals," she said. "Technology can be used in good ways. But adults don't always understand that."

Mindset List Top 30 References

Every year, Beloit College in Beloit, Wis., releases its Mindset List to give a snapshot of the world view of the incoming freshmen class.

Most students entering college for the first time this fall — members of the Class of 2015 — were born in 1993. For these students, Andre the Giant, River Phoenix, Frank Zappa, Arthur Ashe and the Commodore 64 have always been dead.

Their classmates could include Taylor Momsen, Angus Jones, Howard Stern's daughter Ashley, and the Dilley Sextuplets.

1. There has always been an Internet ramp onto the information highway.

2. Ferris Bueller and Sloane Peterson could be their parents.

3. States and Velcro parents have always been requiring that they wear their bike helmets.

4. The only significant labor disputes in their lifetimes have been in major league sports.

5. There have always been at least two women on the Supreme Court, and women have always commanded U.S. Navy ships.

6. They "swipe" cards, not merchandise.

7. As they've grown up on websites and cellphones, adult experts have constantly fretted about their alleged deficits of empathy and concentration.

8. Their school's "blackboards" have always been getting smarter.

9. "Don't touch that dial!" ... what dial?

10. American tax forms have always been available in Spanish.

11. More Americans have always traveled to Latin America than to Europe.

12. Amazon has never been just a river in South America.

13. Refer to LBJ, and they might assume you're talking about LeBron James.

14. All their lives, Whitney Houston has always been declaring, "I Will Always Love You."

15. O.J. Simpson has always been looking for the killers of Nicole Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

16. Women have never been too old to have children.

17. Japan has always been importing rice.

18. Jim Carrey has always been bigger than a pet detective.

19. We have never asked, and they have never had to tell.

20. Life has always been like a box of chocolates.

21. They've always gone to school with Mohammed and Jesus.

22. John Wayne Bobbitt has always slept with one eye open.

23. There has never been an official Communist Party in Russia.

24. "Yadda, yadda, yadda" has always come in handy to make long stories short.

25. Video games have always had ratings.

26. Chicken soup has always been soul food.

27. The Rocky Horror Picture Show has always been available on TV.

28. Jimmy Carter has always been a smiling elderly man who shows up on TV to promote fair elections and disaster relief.

29. Arnold Palmer has always been a drink.

30. Dial-up is soooooo old last century!

OBITUARIES

S. LaVerne Loudenslager

July 23, 1927-Aug. 22, 2011

HAGERMAN • S. LaVerne Loudenslager, 84, passed away Monday, Aug. 22, 2011, at her home.

She was born July 23, 1927, in Shelley, Idaho, to Joseph and Elda Haycock and was the fifth child of six girls and four boys. She loved crocheting, working in her garden and flowerbeds, fishing, reading, teasing and laughing. She especially loved spending time with her grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. LaVerne will be missed by all who knew her.

Surviving are her children, Dan (Debra) Ascuenta, Ron Ascuenta, Bruce (Kathy) Ascuenta, Jerilynn (Brent) Christiansen, Norman Powell and Jeff (Normandy) Powell; numerous grandchildren; great-grandchildren; and great-great-grandchildren. Also surviving are three siblings, Marceil Duckett, Bob Haycock and Barbara Calandra. LaVerne was preceded in death by her mother and father; son, Stephen; and six siblings, LaMar Haycock, Deral Haycock, Bea Fleming, Joy Collier, Ginny Angell and Merlin Haycock.

The family extends sincere appreciation to the caring staff of Helping Hands.

Mom chose to be cremated. A memorial graveside service will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 27, at the Hagerman Cemetery in Hagerman.

Arrangements are under the care of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Lee R. Regan

April 18, 1914-Aug. 22, 2011

Lee Regan, 97, of Twin Falls, passed away Monday, Aug. 22, 2011, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

He was born April 18, 1914, in Walnut, Kan., to Maude May Regan Grove and Silas Lee Regan. He was a World War II veteran who served in the European Theater. Lee married Viola E. Baldwin on Feb. 3, 1946. Together they enjoyed camping and fishing trips with their family and friends. He was retired from Amalgamated Sugar factory and was a big fan of CSI basketball.

He is survived by his son, James (Brenda) Kiley of Escondido, Calif.; daughter, Linda (Jay) Simmons of Twin Falls; son-in-law, Bill Hurd; grandchildren, Jeffrey (Melissa) Ford, Jennifer Ford, Curtis Ford, Kenny Hurd, Troy (Bridget) Hurd, Tammy (Willy) Carter, Kim (Bill) Rotner and Derek (Patty) Kiley; and 11 great-grandchildren. He is preceded in death by his wife; parents; sister, Lucille Crews; daughter, Francis Hurd; and son, Robert Lee Regan.

Special times held close to him included spending time with four of his great-grandchildren, Madison, Conner, Carson and Gary Ford. One of his biggest passions was watching his grandsons, Jeff and Curt's, softball games. He will be missed by his softball buddies who knew him as Grandpa.

A visitation and a brief prayer service for family and friends will be held from noon until 1 p.m. Friday, Aug. 26, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." A graveside service will follow at 1:30 p.m. at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Songwriter Nick Ashford Dies; Had Throat Cancer

BY NEKESA MUMBI MOODY
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Nick Ashford, one-half of the legendary Motown songwriting duo Ashford & Simpson that penned elegant, soulful classics for the likes of Diana Ross and Marvin Gaye and funk hits for Chaka Khan and others, died Monday at age 70, his former publicist said.

Ashford, who along with wife Valerie Simpson wrote some of Motown's biggest hits, died in a New York City hospital, said publicist Liz Rosenberg, who was Ashford's longtime friend. He had been suffering from throat cancer and had undergone radiation treatment, she told The Associated Press.

Though they had some of their greatest success at Motown with classics like "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" and "Reach Out And Touch Somebody's Hand" by Ross and "You're All I Need To Get By" by Gaye and Tammi Terrell, Ashford & Simpson also created anthems for others, like "I'm Every Woman" by Khan (and later remade by Whitney Houston). Ashford & Simpson also had success writing for themselves: Perhaps the best-known song they sang was the 1980s hit "Solid As A Rock."

"His music is unmatched in terms of great songwriting," Verdine White of Earth, Wind and Fire said after learning of his friend's death.

"They had magic and that's what creates those wonderful hits, that magic," White added. "Without those songs, those artists wouldn't have been able to go to the next level."

Others in the music industry also mourned the loss. On Twitter, Alicia Keys wrote, "I'm so sad that he's gone. ... So many of the greatests are going to a greater place ... what a legacy of infectious music ... man!"

Ashford

Ashford and Simpson's relationship stretched more than four decades. They met in 1964 in a New York City church. Ashford, a South Carolina native, had come to the city to pursue a dance career. Simpson was a music student, and after connecting with her, they decided to start to write songs together.

"They were always comfortable with each other and they made all of us comfortable," White said.

Their first major success occurred when they came up with "Let's Go Get Stoned" for Ray Charles. The bluesy, gospel-tinged song became a huge hit for Charles, and soon, they came to the attention of Motown Records and began penning hits for their artists.

They started out writing soulful, romantic works for the duo of Gaye and Terrell that would become instant classics, like "Your Precious Love," and "Ain't Nothin' Like The Real Thing." In fact, "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" was originally their hit, until Ross later rerecorded it with a new arrangement that had sweeping pop grandeur and made it her signature song.

Ross may have been their greatest muse: With her, they had some of their biggest songs and helped give her career-defining hits that would distinguish her solo career apart from The Supremes. Among the songs Ross made hits were "Reach Out and Touch," "The Boss," "My House," and "Missing You," a tribute to the late Gaye and others.

Jerry Leiber, Songwriter of 'Yakety Yak,' Dead at 78

BY JACOB ADELMAN
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES •

Jerry Leiber, who with longtime partner Mike Stoller wrote "Hound Dog," "Jailhouse Rock," "Yakety Yak" and other hit songs that came to define early rock 'n' roll, died Monday. He was 78.

He was surrounded by family when he died unexpectedly of cardiopulmonary failure at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said his longtime publicist, Bobbi Marcus.

With Leiber as lyricist and Stoller as composer, the team channeled their blues and jazz backgrounds into pop songs performed by such artists as Elvis Presley, Dion and the Belmonts, the Coasters, the Drifters and Ben E. King in a way that would help create a joyous new musical style.

From their breakout hit, blues great Big Mama Thornton's 1953 rendition of "Hound Dog," until their songwriting took a more serious turn in 1969 with Peggy Lee's recording of "Is That All There Is?" the pair remained one of the most successful teams in pop music history.

"He was my friend, my buddy, my writing partner for 61 years," Stoller said. "We met when we were 17 years old. He had a way with words. There was nobody better. I am going to miss him."

The two chronicled their lifelong partnership, which Leiber called "the longest running argument in show business," in their 2009 memoir, "Hound Dog: The Leiber & Stoller Autobiography." The pair's writing prowess and influence over the recording industry as pioneering independent producers earned them induction into the non-performer category of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1987.

"The music world lost today one of its greatest poet laureates," said Terry Stewart, president of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum. "Jerry not only wrote the words that everyone was singing, he led the way in how we verbalized our feelings about the social changes we were living with in post-World War II life. Appropriately, his vehicles of choice were the emerging populist musical genres of rhythm and blues and then rock and roll."

Recording Academy President Neil Portnow said Leiber and Stoller helped shape the music of the 1950s and '60s.

"Together, they were an extraordinary team that generated a rich and diverse musical catalog that leaves an indelible imprint on our cultural history," he said.

Leiber, who like Stoller was white, said his musical inspiration came from the close identification he had with black American culture during his boyhood and teen years in Baltimore and Los Angeles.

Thus he was the perfect lyricist for bluesy, jazz-inflected compositions like "Kansas City," "Black Denim Trousers and Motorcycle Boots," "Charlie Brown," "Drip Drop," "Stand By Me" and "On Broadway."

The lyrics could be poignant, as in "On Broadway," or full of humor, as in the antics of high school goofball Charlie Brown, who "calls the English teacher Daddy-O" and laments: "Why's everybody always pickin' on me?"

The result was a serious departure from the classically inflected music that had been produced by a previous generation of pop songwriters that included George Gershwin and Irving Berlin.

"Irving Berlin was the greatest songwriter of all time," Leiber told the Los Angeles Times "West" magazine in 2006. "I was in awe of him. But his music wasn't my music. My music was the blues."

"The music world lost today one of its greatest poet laureates."

Longtime L.A. Beat Poet Scott Wannberg Dead at 58

BY JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Scott Wannberg's poems were wildly colorful, sometimes off the wall, frequently in your face and just as often very funny.

In other words, they were like the author.

Wannberg, whose garrulous personality and bearish build cast a huge shadow over the Los Angeles poetry scene for decades, died Friday at his home in Florence, Ore., his longtime friend and fellow poet, S.A. Griffin, told The Associated Press. He was 58.

The cause of death was not immediately known, but Wannberg had been in declining health and had moved to Oregon two years ago to be closer to family.

Prolific to the end of his life, Wannberg gave hundreds of readings, published 10 volumes of poetry and was often included in anthologies, among them "The Outlaw Bible of American Poetry."

His stream-of-consciousness, beat-influenced style, noted for its colorful, often humorous language, touched on seemingly every subject that came to the author's mind: from the death of a beloved cat to the war in Iraq, politics to movies, the wealthy of Los Angeles' West Side to the destitute of its Skid Row.

"His poetry was Scott," Griffin said Wednesday. "He was a unique, one-of-a-kind human being who, as they say, they broke the mold when they made such a character as him."

As two of the founding members of the experimental poetry group the Carma Bums, Wannberg and Griffin made nearly a dozen tours of North America over 20 years, giving readings in cities from the Southwest to Canada. Their last trip was in 2009.

For most of those journeys, the group piled into a vintage 1959 Cadillac they named Farther, a nod to author Ken Kesey's Merry Prankster bus, Further.

As the years and the tours rolled by, Wannberg picked up an eclectic variety of admirers, including not only fellow poets but prominent novelists and actors. The author T.C. Boyle, in a 2008 essay in the Los Angeles Times, called him "one of the true literary zealots of our time."

Boyle, recalling their first meeting in a Los Angeles bookstore in 1985, said that within minutes of that introduction, "Scott was piling my arms high with books I absolutely just had to read. He had a sixth sense, knowing exactly what I wanted and needed."

Is East Coast Ready for Truly Powerful Quake?

Tuesday’s quake raises questions about whether the region, with its older architecture and inexperience with seismic activity, is ready for the big one.

BY BEN NUCKOLS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • There were cracks in the Washington Monument and broken capstones at the National Cathedral. In the District of Columbia suburbs, some people stayed in shelters because of structural concerns at their apartment buildings.

A day after the East Coast’s strongest earthquake in 67 years, inspectors assessed the damage and found that most problems were minor. But the shaking raised questions about whether this part of the country, with its older architecture and inexperience with seismic activity, is prepared for a truly powerful quake.

The 5.8 magnitude quake felt from Georgia north to Canada prompted swift inspections of many structures Wednesday, including bridges and nuclear plants. An accurate damage estimate could take weeks, if not longer. And many people will not be covered by insurance.

In a small Virginia city near the epicenter, the entire downtown business district was closed. School was canceled for two weeks to give engineers time to check out cracks in several buildings.

At the 555-foot Washington Monument, inspectors found several cracks in the pyramidion — the section at the top of the obelisk where it begins narrowing to a point. A 4-foot crack was discovered Tuesday during an inspection by helicopter. It cannot be seen from the ground. Late Wednesday, the National Park Service announced that structural engineers had found several additional cracks inside the top of the monument.

Carol Johnson, a park service spokeswoman, could not say how many cracks were found but said three or four of them were “significant.” Two structural engineering firms that specialize in assessing earthquake damage were being brought in to conduct a more thorough inspection on Thursday.

The monument, by far the tallest structure in the nation’s capital, was to remain closed indefinitely, and Johnson said the additional cracks mean repairs are likely to take longer. It has never been damaged by a natural disaster, including earthquakes in Virginia in 1897 and New York in 1944.

Tourists arrived at the monument Wednesday morning only to find out they couldn’t get near it. A temporary fence was erected in a wide circle about 120 feet from the flags that surround its base. Walkways were blocked by metal barriers manned by security guards.

“Is it really closed?” a man asked the clerk at the site’s bookstore.

“It’s really closed,” said the clerk, Erin Nolan. Advance tickets were available for purchase, but she cautioned against buying them because it’s not clear when the monument will open.

“This is pretty much all I’m going to be doing today,” Nolan said.

Tuesday’s quake was centered about 40 miles northwest of Richmond, 90 miles south of Washington and 3.7 miles underground. In the nearby town of Mineral, Va., Michael Leman knew his Main Street Plumbing & Electrical Supply business would need — at best — serious and expensive repairs.

At worst, it could be condemned. The facade had become detached from the rest of the building, and daylight was visible through a 4- to 6-inch gap that opened between the front wall and ceiling.

“We’re definitely going to open back up,” Leman said. “I’ve got people’s jobs to look out for.”

Leman said he is insured, but some property owners might not be so lucky.

The Insurance Information Institute said earthquakes are not covered under standard U.S. homeowners or business insurance policies, although supplemental coverage is usually available.

The institute says coverage for other damage that may result from quakes, such as fire and water damage from burst gas or water pipes, is provided by standard homeowners and business insurance policies in most states. Cars and other vehicles with comprehensive insurance would also be protected.

The U.S. Geological Survey classified the quake as Alert Level Orange, the second-most serious category on its four-level scale. Earthquakes in that range lead to estimated losses between $100 million and $1 billion.

In Culpeper, Va., about 35 miles from the epicenter, walls had buckled at the old sanctuary at St. Stephen’s Episcopal Church, which was constructed in 1821 and drew worshippers including Confederate Gens. Robert E. Lee and J.E.B. Stuart. Heavy stone ornaments atop a pillar at the gate were shaken to the ground. A chimney from the old Culpeper Baptist Church built in 1894 also tumbled down.

At the Washington National Cathedral, spokesman Richard Weinberg said the building’s overall structure remains sound and damage was limited to “decorative elements.”

Massive stones atop three of the four spires on the building’s central tower broke off, crashing onto the roof. At least one of the spires is teetering badly, and cracks have appeared in some flying buttresses.

Golfer Hits Double Eagle at Twin Falls Course

It's the rarest feat in golf, and Gabriel Juarez can claim it – a double eagle. Juarez recorded his albatross on Monday at Twin Falls Golf Course on the par-5 18th hole. He used a 3-wood on his memorable shot, which was witnessed by Jose Morales. Even better for Juarez is the fact that he's never made an eagle, much less a hole-in-one.

Bruins Seek to Reload Faster Than Rebuild

dbashore@magicvalley.com

Part of being one of the biggest schools around means you have more players trying out for football. Of course, it also means you have more players to replace year-to-year. Never is that downside more apparent than this season for Twin Falls High School.

In total, Twin Falls lost 35 seniors from last season's play-off team, and 21 of those had at least part-time starting experience. Not counting special teams, only three returners – Zayne Slotten, Robert Sanchez and Chase Crandall – have regular starting experience.

That's not to say that these Bruins are completely new to varsity football. Zach Davis and Trell Dowd got vital minutes last season in the backfield, something which should bode well for them in the long run. Speedy wideout Casey Merritt came on midway through the season and gave the team a vertical threat. Thomas Corr, understudy to

Buhl's Biggest Opponent Thus Far: Injury Bug

dbashore@magicvalley.com

BUHL • Battling low numbers and replacing key players that graduated is just part of the yearly cycle at Buhl.

With less than 50 kids to fill the entire program, the Indians are putting a premium on staying healthy. But right now, that's not exactly going according to plan.

"We haven't even started games and we've already got people injured, so it's tough," said Buhl coach Stacy Wilson.

The experience the Indians do return comes primarily on the line, but they also return quarterback Camden Gillins and running back Micah Schneidermann. But Gillins missed significant time last year due to injury.

Gillins and others were on the school's state championship track and field team last year. But while that gives them experience on the big stage, there's a huge difference

DISTRICT IV CROSS COUNTRY PREVIEW

DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

Jerome cross country runners Mikesell Clegg, left, and Jasmine Nesbitt should form one of the most formidable 1-2 punches at the top of any lineup in Class 4A.

A Clegg Up On the Competition

Jerome runner uses varied conditioning drills to become one of the area's top cross country runners.

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

JEROME • At 6,500 feet, nestled below the Sawtooth Mountains, Redfish Lake provided the ultimate training grounds for Jerome's Mikesell Clegg.

The senior cross country runner logged 380 miles on the trails this summer, running at minimum 4 miles a day. Some days she would double dip, running once in the morning and catch another training run before hitting the sack. She also hopped on the bike and logged miles swimming in the lake in preparation for the Spudman

Triathlon in Burley.

Clegg adopted the cross training to her summer preparation from former teammate Mackenzie Chojnacky, who is running for Division I Toledo this fall.

Coming off a junior season where she finished a disappointing 24th at the state meet, Chojnacky added cross training of riding on the bike and swimming to her already rigorous running schedule during the summer. She turned those extra workouts into a Class 4A state title, beating two-time champ Emily Nist of Bishop Kelly.

"I think Mikesell is really trying to pattern what she thought brought Mackenzie the success she had last season," said Jerome cross country coach Randy Tolman. "Her work ethic is just incredible."

Clegg finished fourth and fifth at state the last two seasons and along with Nist, is a preseason favorite to win the state title at Eagle Island Park in Boise.

"This summer was really good training at Redfish," said Clegg, whose parents manage the Redfish Lake Lodge. "The altitude is a really good thing and I feel stronger with the cross training. It was an awesome summer."

Figuring to be right on Clegg's heels this season is junior Jasmine Nesbitt, who finished eighth at state last fall. The pair forms an untouchable 1-2 punch at the front of the pack and Nesbitt brings pure speed to the team with a background in middle school of running sprints and turning that into a fourth place showing in the 800 meters at the state track meet this spring.

"Jasmine is just a really talented, natural runner," said Tolman, in his first season as head coach after assisting at the middle school level for 20 years. "I've seen her all the way up and if I could get her to work as hard as Mikesell, she would be really special."

Clegg and Nesbitt were key components of the Tigers' girls track championship this spring and nothing would be more exciting this season than to add another first place trophy to the school's collection.

"This spring was so much fun," Nesbitt said. "That would be the best feeling."

Colts Agree to Terms With QB Kerry Collins

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS • The Indianapolis Colts are bringing one veteran quarterback out of retirement.

No, not that one.

The Colts agreed to terms Wednesday with Kerry Collins, making him the likely starter in case Peyton Manning isn't healed completely from offseason neck surgery by the time the season begins Sept. 11 at Houston.

Not every player liked the move.

"We don't even know him, we ain't vanilla, man, we ain't no simple offense," receiver Reggie Wayne said. "So for him to can come in here and be the starter, I don't see it. I think that's a step back."

Colts coach Jim Caldwell wasn't available to talk with reporters about Collins, but he struck a calm tone in a statement released by the team.

"He is a veteran quarterback who has started many games and he brings dimension and depth to the quarterback position, which will be helpful," Caldwell said. "He is familiar with our division and will make a great addition to our roster."

Yet the move is another indication that Manning's streak of 227 consecutive starts, including playoff games, is in serious jeopardy.

Manning had surgery May 23 to repair a nerve in his neck, and the recovery has gone slower than expected partially, Manning said, because he couldn't work out with team trainers during the 4 1/2-month lockout.

On Saturday morning, Colts owner Jim Irsay wrote on Twitter that the Colts had to be prepared to play without Manning in the opener against the division-rival Texans. Later that day, Manning acknowledged he did not expect to play in the final two preseason games and that he would need the next two weeks just to get healthy.

Caldwell hasn't said when he expects Manning to return to the field after signing a five-year, $90 million contract to stay in Indy last month.

"I think he laid out pretty well where he is, and that he is working extremely hard to try and get back as quickly as he possibly can," Caldwell said Monday. "He's going to work hard at trying to get back and get ready, and he's doing everything he can to do so."

Kellen Moore's Finale Arrives at Boise State

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • When Kellen Moore arrived on campus in the summer of 2007, Boise State was in the midst of being engulfed by one giant national bear hug of underdog love.

It was just a few months after the Broncos' stunning, trick-play infused upset of Oklahoma in the Fiesta Bowl and everything Boise – not just the blue rug – was cool. The Broncos were the darlings of overachievers, representing the little guy surmounting the elite.

Moore personified that characterization perfectly. He was the talented, overlooked high school star that 118 FBS schools passed on when offering scholarships, with only Boise State, and Idaho at the very end, deciding Moore was worth the free ride.

It'll probably go down as the smartest scholarship offer of Chris Petersen's coaching career and the one that has helped lead Boise State's transition from loveable little guys into legitimate bearers of national championship credentials.

Now Moore begins his final season with a slew of NCAA records in his sights, the loftiest being the chance to walk out of college with the most wins of any quarterback in FBS history. And even though he's relatively silent in the Broncos locker room, Moore will also leave with the added acclaim of being largely responsible for the Broncos' rise to legitimacy.

"He's not a real vocal guy but when he does say something you hone in, you want to listen because you never hear him say much," Boise State defensive tackle Billy Wynn said. "When Kellen says something it's almost like a life lesson in a sense."

Consider Boise State well versed in Moore's teachings by now.

Moore and the Broncos start the year ranked No. 5 in the AP Top 25, the second-highest preseason ranking in school history. A win over No. 19 Georgia in the opener in Atlanta clears the path for potentially another fall of debates about Boise State's BCS worth.

Cracking the BCS title game would only add another layer to Moore's legacy.

Wood River Retains GBC Swagger

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Olivia Thornton couldn't have asked for a better debut.

A freshman playing in her first varsity soccer game, Thornton scored four goals to help Wood River upend Minico 9-0 in both teams' Great Basin Conference opener on Wednesday.

"I just went out there and gave it my all and it worked out," Thornton said. "We really communicated well and had a lot of great crosses and finishes. We worked better as a team and we were first to the ball a lot."

Thornton is one of eight freshmen on the Wolverines' roster this season.

"All these games have been proving that we can be confident in our freshmen. We're still just as good of a team," said Wood River senior Sloan Storey, who had two goals. "It's working out great. We thought they would be nervous around the ball, but all of them are aggressive and they all know what they need to do and they're out there to win it."

The last time Wood River didn't win a girls district soccer championship, Thornton and her fellow freshmen were in first grade.

"It's a lot to live up to," Thornton said. "As a team with so many younger girls, we really idolize all the upperclassmen because they've gotten that far and we don't want to screw it up for them."

Haley Montgomery scored two goals, both assisted by Lucy Brannon. The first came in the sixth minute when Brannon stole a lazy Minico drop pass and made the cross. Thornton found the net twice in each half. The speedy striker was assisted by Montgomery in the 22nd minute, and then fought for a ball in the box between two Minico defenders for her second tally six minutes later.

Storey added a goal from just beyond the 18 yard box to make it 4-0 at halftime. The Wolverines opened the second half with another Brannon-to-Montgomery goal. Also in the second half, Storey tallied her second goal, Sammy Sutton scored and Timber Kelly picked up an assist.

Meanwhile, Wood River dominated the midfield and got a tremendous defensive effort that surrendered zero shots on goal. It's an effort the Wolverines will need to duplicate all season if they hope to win an eighth league title.

"Obviously it's pressure on us to keep our title as district champs. We're really looking forward to playing Twin (Falls) because that determines a lot of how we're doing so far," Storey said.

Boys soccer Canyon Ridge 3, Pocatello 1

Efrain Venegas and Lane Barker scored goals in the first 12 minutes as the Riverhawks improved to 3-0 with another quick start.

Jose Santos scored in the 80th minute to finish the scoring, just a minute after the Indians got on the scoreboard off a corner kick. Josh Clark had four saves for Canyon Ridge.

Highland 4, Twin Falls 0

Highland scored four late goals to take a win as Twin Falls wilted in the oppressive heat.

The game was scoreless until midway through the second half, when Highland earned a penalty kick and got to take it against the Bruins' junior varsity keeper, as the starter earned a yellow card on the play. High school soccer rules mandate a player be subbed off for at least one game sequence in the event of a yellow card.

That opened the floodgates as the Rams scored three more to pile on the misery.

"The kids were just weren't ready for the heat. We've been practicing in the morning and I think that hurt us," said Twin Falls coach Ben Harman. "We weren't deep at all, had five guys that don't have the 10 practices and couldn't play, only had three subs, and we couldn't sub a lot."

Twin Falls (0-1-0) hosts the Community School on Saturday.

Minico 2, Wood River 1

Minico pulled off an impressive Great Basin Conference win in Hailey Wednesday, beating Wood River.

Enochk Coats opened the scoring for the Spartans in the 17th minute and Alberto Ramirez netted in the 32nd, off a pass from Eddy Lopez.

Minico moves to 2-1 on the season and 1-0 in GBC play.

Girls soccer Pocatello 8, Canyon Ridge 1

The Canyon Ridge Riverhawks were beat by Pocatello 8-1 Wednesday.

Rosalba Ramirez scored Canyon Ridge's lone goal in the 54th minute off an assist from Ellie Packham.

Canyon Ridge (1-2) hosts Bliss on Friday.

Highland 6, Twin Falls 3

Twin Falls fell 6-3 to Highland in its opening game of the season Wednesday in Pocatello.

Claire Goss netted in the eighth minute and Maddie Watkins scored on a header off an assist from Morgan McInnes in the 30th minute, to give the Bruins a 2-1 lead at halftime. Highland, however, took advantage of numerous Twin Falls errors in the backfield to rip off five second-half goals.

Jordyn Clark scored in the 58th minute for the Bruins (0-1), who play at the Community School Saturday.

Class 2A/1A

After finishing second at state last season, RICHFIELD's Sasha Kent has moved to Oklahoma, so the state title could be up for grabs for Gooding sophomore Rachel Youren or DIETRICH's Ellie Dalton, who finished seventh and 11th, respectively at state last season. ... Ashley Bullers (18th at state) and Kylie Becker (38th) also return for GOODING, which appears to be the early favorite to repeat as District IV Class 1A/2A champions and challenge for a state title after finishing third last season. ... Maranda Stopol (36th) and Morgan Atkinson (37th) return for the COMMUNITY SCHOOL which finished second at the district meet last season.

Djokovic, Other Stars Face Questions at U.S. Open

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Novak Djokovic sat in his sideline chair and winced while his right shoulder was massaged and manipulated by a trainer.

Moments later, Djokovic resumed hitting slower-than-usual serves, slapping weak forehands into the net and falling further behind against Andy Murray in his last tune-up match before the U.S. Open.

On the CBS broadcast, Mary Carillo asked announcing partner and former No. 1 Jim Courier whether seeing Djokovic struggle so much changed his view that the Serb should be seen as the favorite to win the year's last Grand Slam tournament, which starts Monday.

"Not even remotely,"

Courier replied. "Not a scratch on the surface."

Yes, given how great Djokovic's 2011 has been so far, plenty of people still figure he's the man to beat at the U.S. Open. Even with that tired and bothersome shoulder that eventually led him to quit during the final of the Cincinnati Masters last weekend.

That went into the books as only Djokovic's second loss in 59 matches during a marvelous season that featured a 41-match winning streak and nine titles, including Wimbledon and the Australian Open.

Considering all the ailments and assorted other issues that have hampered so many top tennis players lately, it probably would be appropriate if Djokovic is somewhat less than 100 percent fit.

Run down a list of the sport's stars a day before today's draw in New York, and most have been bothered by something:

- Rafael Nadal, the defending champion, has blisters on his left foot and tender fingers that he burned by touching a hot ceramic plate at a restaurant.

- Roger Federer also exited relatively early at two key hard-court tuneup tournaments. Now he may end his streak of winning at least one major championship eight years in a row.

- Serena Williams cited swelling in her right big toe while pulling out of the Cincinnati hard-court tournament.

- The top-seeded woman, Caroline Wozniacki, is apparently healthy, but she is dealing with inconsistent play.

in track and football.

"There isn't anyone trying to tear your head off on the track," Wilson quipped. "They'll have to adjust to the varsity level in a hurry."

Buhl's scheduling advantage from last season comes back to bite it this season. The Indians will travel in both of their conference games, after getting both at home in 2010.

The Oct. 14 game at Kimberly is the one most Buhl fans have circled on the calendar. Last season the Bulldogs stole one in Buhl when Dally Charters kicked a field goal at the gun.

"They've got experience coming back, but I don't think they're necessarily any better than we are," Wilson said.

three-year starter T.J. Ellis last season, is the heir apparent at quarterback.

Twin Falls starts right out of the chute with a stiff test, playing against Raymond, Alberta, in the Rocky Mountain Rumble early on Sept. 3 in Pocatello.

The Comets handled Class 4A finalist Blackfoot in last season's Rumble, and are perennially one of the top-rated teams in Alberta. They will provide a tough challenge as Twin Falls continues to adjust offensive and defensive schemes to put this year's crop of players in the best positions to succeed.

"It's going to be a tough game but I think that could be good for us," said Sanchez. "If we beat them it gives a lot of confidence, but even if we don't we'll learn where all our flaws are and have things to work on for the rest of the season."

NCAA hits Pearl With 3-year Penalty

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. • The NCAA said it wanted to send a clear message by slapping Bruce Pearl with a three-year show-cause penalty: Coaches are responsible for their programs.

The sanctions announced Wednesday make it harder for the former Tennessee men's basketball coach to get another college job anytime soon. Pearl is prohibited from recruiting during the next three years, and a school would have to convince the NCAA to change its mind if it wanted to hire him during that time.

"As these allegations are

becoming more and more regular, it's very clear that a head coach is being held responsible for his program," said Britton Banowsky, Conference USA commissioner and vice-chair of the NCAA's Committee on Infractions.

The NCAA said Wednesday it had punished Pearl for lying to investigators about improperly hosting recruits at his home and urging others to do the same. Former Pearl assistants Tony Jones, Jason Shay and Steve Forbes face the same sanctions, except they were only given one-year show-cause penalties for their own roles in misleading the NCAA.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. • Ben Askelson hit a high 0-1 curveball onto the hill beyond the left-field fence to send the boys from Billings, Mont., into the U.S. final of the Little League World Series with a 1-0, seven-inning victory over Huntington Beach, Calif., on Wednesday night.

Montana gets to rest up until the U.S. championship game Saturday, while California must face Clinton County, Pa., on Thursday night.

Both teams had chances to prevent the game from going into extra innings. California couldn't break through after loading the bases with two outs in the top of the sixth.

The early game was close, too, with Mexico beating Venezuela 2-1 to advance to the international final. Bruno Ruiz's ninth-inning homer was the difference.

Montana and California were locked in a pitchers' duel until Askelson's

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Billings, Mont. • Ben Askelson (15) is greeted by teammates after hitting a home run in the seventh inning of a baseball game against Huntington Beach, Calif., at the Little League World Series in South Williamsport, Pa., Wednesday.

California starter Nick Pratto struck out nine over four innings, while Montana counterpart Cole McKenzie struck out four over 5 2-3 innings, aided by timely defense. He wiggled out a couple jams, including a bases-loaded threat in the second that ended with a runner thrown out at home following a passed ball.

California loaded the bases with two outs in the sixth on two walks and a hit batter, but the Montana fans breathed a collective sigh of relief after Hagen Danner lined the first pitch from reliever Sean Jones right to Askelson in left for the inning-ending out.

In the opener, Ruiz's homer to center off a 2-0 pitch in the ninth broke up another pitchers' duel.

A smiling Ruiz cringed while getting bombarded by teammates with pats on his green helmet after crossing the plate.

"When I looked up at home plate and I saw all my teammates there, I knew what to expect," the 13-year-old slugger said through interpreter Sergio Guzman. "Yes it hurt ... But it's tradition. Everyone hits a home run on my team and they get hit on the helmet."

Venezuela will play Japan today, while Mexico can rest up for Saturday after reliever Jorge Jacobo closed out the victory by inducing a groundout.

Moore

By the end of the year, Moore could hold NCAA career marks for completion percentage, pass efficiency, percentage of passes intercepted, touchdown passes, and he could become just the second NCAA quarterback with four seasons of at least 3,000 yards in total offense. But the big one remains the NCAA record for wins by a quarterback, with Moore already holding a 38-2 career mark through three seasons. While many of those victories have come against lesser competition compared to what Colt McCoy faced in racking up 45 wins during his career at Texas, Moore could conceivably end his career with 49 or 50 wins, establishing a mark that'll be hard to surpass.

"Everything he does he does it his own way," said Washington receiver Cody Bruns, who was on the receiving end of hundreds of passes from Moore in high school. "It might not look the best at times but he always gets it done."

Moore's not the first QB from a lower-profile school to gain national notoriety. Timmy Chang and Colt Brennan did the same thing at Hawaii in the last decade, flinging passes all over the western U.S. and setting a load of NCAA passing records. But they never raised the Warriors' profile beyond an occasional marquee win and bowl trip.

Moore's done it as Boise State has morphed into a national power.

"When you're playing at the level that he's played at, he doesn't have a glaring weakness like 'you have to fix this, he has to get better at this,' " Petersen said. "The numbers don't lie. There is nothing for him to get markedly better at. So it's a bunch of little things, it's the things that he already does well."

What also makes Moore unique is the likelihood that whatever he accomplishes in college could be the ceiling of his football career. It's rare for a Heisman finalist to be looking at his post-football life with such clarity and immediacy, but Moore has already finished his degree and is working on a Master's degree in kinesiology with the idea of getting on the sidelines in some form, at some level in the future.

"There was a different Master's I was targeting and then ended up dropping it so I found this one. It's still got stuff that is applicable to coaching and stuff that is interesting," Moore said. "I want to go to class and look forward to it and have fun and enjoy it."

Moore's NFL prospects will be based on teams being willing to look past his physical stature. The same worries that led college coaches to pass on offering Moore a scholarship are the same questions that linger about Moore in the NFL: his size, his arm strength and playing in an offensive system geared toward Moore's skills.

Terrell Owens Focuses on Acting While Knee Heals

ATLANTA • While Terrell Owens waits for an NFL team to contact him, the 15-year veteran wide receiver has focused his attention toward an acting career.

Owens, who tore his anterior cruciate ligament and had surgery in early April, filmed an episode of the USA sitcom "Necessary Roughness" on Wednesday at the Georgia Dome. He said his knee is a couple months away from being completely healed and though no team has contacted him, he still expects to play this season.

"I'm still not 100 percent to be able to go to a team and contribute," Owens told The Associated Press. "When I get to the point to where I'm comfortable and able to run around, I'll feel like those calls should be coming."

Owens, 37, said he is not worried about skeptics who wonder if can still be a major NFL contributor. He said he is capable of making plays on the field, pointing out the 983 yards and nine touchdowns he had with the Cincinnati Bengals last season.

Cardinals

Arizona has shored up their depleted quarterback ranks by signing Brodie Croyle, in the process parting ways with former BYU quarterback Max Hall.

Hall, who partially dislocated his left shoulder in practice on Monday, was waived-injured, a move that could lead to an injury settlement with the second-year quarterback. Coach Ken Whisenhunt said that would allow Hall to be re-signed at some point in the season if the team needs him.

Chiefs

Kansas City linebacker Brandon Siler tore an Achilles tendon during practice this week and is the latest to join a growing list of NFL players to sustain the season-ending injury.

Siler's agent, David Canter, confirmed the injury in a text message to The Associated Press on Wednesday. He did not know which Achilles was hurt, but said Siler already had surgery to repair it.

Siler was competing for the middle linebacker spot alongside Derrick Johnson after signing with the Chiefs as a free agent.

Jets

Plax's back issue appears to be no big deal.

Plaxico Burress tweaked

his lower back in practice Tuesday, but the New York Jets wide receiver wasn't concerned a day later and wouldn't even characterize it as an injury.

Titans

Tennessee general manager

Mike Reinfeldt said Wednesday's meeting with Chris Johnson was beneficial even though no deal was reached to end the running back's holdout.

The GM expects to talk with the running back's agent again in the "next day or so."

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On December 14, 2011, at the hour of 1:00 o'clock PM of said day, at First American Title, 260 Third Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, JUST LAW, INC., as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:
Lot 2, Block 2, Stoneybrook Subdivision No. 1, P.U.D., Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the official Plat thereof recorded in Book 15 of Plats, Page 14, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 1542 Lawndale Drive, Twin Falls, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Kirk B. Johnson, an unmarried man, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc. as nominee for D.L. Evans Bank, its successors and/or assigns as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded June 3, 2008, as Instrument No. 2008-012659, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to Suntrust Mortgage, Inc., recorded May 16, 2011, as Instrument No. 2011-009253, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $1,436.09 for the months of March 2011 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $193,848.90 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 6.125% from February 1, 2011, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

Dated this 10th day of August, 2011.

Plaintiff(s) vs
MARTIN VARGAS aka MARTIN VARGAS-HURTADO, KARRI ELLEN VARGAS, Defendant(s).

TO THE DEFENDANT(S):
YOU ARE NOTIFIED that a claim has been filed against you. The plaintiff(s) who filed the claim, the court with which the claim is filed, and the case number assigned to your case are listed above.

IF YOU DISAGREE WITH THE CLAIM, AND IF YOU WANT TO CONTEST THE CLAIM, you must file an answer with the court within 20 days from the date you received this summons. IF YOU AGREE WITH THE CLAIM, AND DO NOT WISH TO CONTEST IT, NO ACTION NEED BE TAKEN BY YOU.

IF YOU DO NOT FILE YOUR ANSWER with the court within 20 days, the court may enter judgment against you, for the money or personal property that the plaintiff asks for in the claim, plus the plaintiff's costs for filing the claim and serving you with notice of the claim.

IF YOU FILE AN ANSWER, you will be mailed a notice with the date and time for a hearing, when the judge will hear your case. IF YOU DO NOT WANT A HEARING DO NOT FILE THE ANSWER.

You should receive an ANSWER form along with this summons. You must use that form if you decide to file an answer. You can mail your answer to: Court Services, PO Box 126, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303-0126. The answer must be received by the court within the 20-day deadline.

A child under the age of eighteen.
THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS GREETINGS TO:
JOHN DOE

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:
A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named child comes within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Case Plan Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho, on September 15, 2011 at 9:30 AM.

You are notified that service of the attached Petition upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of this child, confers personal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of court.

You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the child.

You are further notified that the child and parent(s), guardian, or custodian have the right to be represented by an attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the Court to represent the child or the parent(s), guardian, or custodian at county expense. If you request to have an attorney appointed at county expense, you must appear before the date of the hearing given above, at which time the Court shall consider appointment of an attorney for the child and inquire whether the parent(s), guardian, or custodian require the separate appointment of an attorney.

You are further notified that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that if a child is placed in the custody of the IDHW and was also placed in care out of the home for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months from the date of Adjudication, the IDHW shall initiate a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding by the Court that the filing of a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights would not be in the best interest of the child and their family, or that the child is placed permanently with a relative.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGE OF WATER RIGHT TRANSFER NO. 77382

ALBERT JAY COTTLE and JULENE COTTLE, 1750 S 1900 E, MALTA, ID 83342 have filed Application No. 77382 for changes to the following water rights within CASSIA County(s): Right No (s). 43-412, 43-88; to see a full description of these rights and the proposed transfer, please see www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp. The purpose of the transfer is to change a portion of the above rights as follows:

Transfer proposes adding a new point of diversion and changing the location of an existing point of diversion on Cassia Creek for two rights that currently allow for the diversion of up to 2.06 cfs for irrigation of 162.3 acres on an existing farm located approximately 2.5 mi. south and 1.9 - 2.9 mi. west of Malta. In total, three points of diversion (one existing unchanged location, one existing changed location, and one new location) all located approximately 2.1 mi. - 2.4 south and 2.0 - 3.7 mi. west of Malta.

TRANSFER NO. 77406

IDAHO WATER CO LLC, 1135 VALLEY RD S, EDEN, ID 83325 has filed Application No. 77406 for changes to the following water rights within TWIN FALLS County(s): Right No(s). 47-13694, 47-7106, 47-7287, 47-14285; to see a full description of these rights and the proposed transfer, please see www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp. The purpose of the transfer is to change a portion of the above rights as follows:

Application proposes transferring a 9.1 acre (0.12 cfs & 17.0 afa) portion of a groundwater irrigation right appurtenant to a farm located approximately 14.5 miles south and 1.0 mile west of Rogerson to stock water and commercial uses associated with an existing dairy operation located approximately 2.5 miles south and 2.0 miles west of the center of Buhl. The application also proposes to modify the described locations of the points of diversion on the existing water right (0.26 cfs & 16.0 afa) at the dairy to reflect the actual location of the wells at the dairy site. Two existing wells at the dairy site will be used to divert up to a total of 0.38 cfs and 34.2 afa of water.

For additional information concerning the property location, contact Southern Region office at (208)736-3033. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code Sec. 42-222.

Any protest against the proposed change must be filed with the Department of Water Resources, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St, Suite 200, Twin Falls ID 83301 together with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before 9/6/2011. THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“And now the matchless deed’s achieved, Determined, dared, and done.”
— Christopher Smart

Today’s deal is from a match between England and Japan in the 2004 World Championships. When the English East opened a strong no-trump, the Japanese South settled for a conservative two-spade overcall because he did not have a penalty double in his arsenal. He duly collected nine tricks.

In the other room Justin Hackett (South) drove to four spades -- as might we all. West led a trump and declarer played the 10 from dummy, hoping that it would be an entry. When East covered, Justin ran off all but one of his trumps. East discarded two hearts and two clubs, while West discarded four hearts. This led Justin to conclude that West held the guarded club queen, so he gave up all thoughts of exiting with a red suit in the hope that an opponent would eventually lead a club, allowing him to finesse.

Instead, he boldly laid the club jack on the table! And West played low, assuming his partner would win with the king. In truth, West’s play may not stand up to analysis, but well done to Justin Hackett for making such a brave move. Brilliances in bridge are often based on psychology, not on complicated lines of play. I’m sure that most of us would not have thought of Justin’s stratagem, but even if we had, we would have rejected it in favor of the legitimate line of cashing the club ace and king, hoping tp drop a doubleton queen.

ANSWER: Your partner has shown at least 5-5 in the black suits and a good hand, but you have absolutely no interest in higher things. While passing would keep you a level lower, it must be right to play in clubs so that you can ruff spades in your hand if necessary. Simply revert to three clubs now.

TWIN FALLS Deluxe duplex

DEAR ABBY: A young bride-to-be who signed her letter "Touchy Decision in Ohio" (June 18) prefers her stepdad walk her down the aisle at her wedding, but is worried about what her biological father (whom she sees once or twice a year) and other relatives might think.

In my many decades on this earth, especially during the last 10 or 15 years, I have seen all sorts of changes in wedding etiquette, including the customs governing who walks down the aisle. In addition to fathers escorting daughters, I've seen brothers escort sisters and children walk their mother to the altar. In "Ohio's" case, the logical solution, and the more appropriate one, to me, would be to have both gentlemen escort her down the aisle, one on either side. What could be lovelier?

The bride-to-be should consider that the hurt feelings that often crop up on sensitive occasions such as this, if not attended to beforehand, can tarnish the memory of the event in the minds of loved ones forever.

— BARB H. IN SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BARB: Thank you for your response. Opinions regarding "Ohio's" letter are numerous and varied. A majority of those I heard from agree with your suggestion that both dads share the task. However, others viewed it differently. My newspaper readers' comment:

DEAR ABBY: If the biological father wanted to be a part of his daughter's life he should have made more of an effort to be there for her. The stepdad no doubt put up with all the growing pains associated with raising a teenager as well as other parenting challenges. These are the prerequisites for walking a daughter down the aisle. Although most males can father a child, not all of them can truly be a FATHER.

— STEPDAD TO A WONDERFUL DAUGHTER

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe how ignorant, uncaring and selfish a bride would be to dump her dad on her wedding day. Everyone WILL notice and everyone WILL care.

Ladies, unless your father is a total loser who was absent, a drunk, a jailbird, an addict or a deadbeat, walking you down the aisle is HIS privilege — no one else's. It also shouldn't be based on how much money he was able or willing to fork over for the wedding. This is the day a real man and father has looked forward to since the day you were born. And to any man who is asked to escort a bride down the aisle: Before agreeing, ask what her situation is with her father. You may be taking a spot you don't deserve.

— MARY IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY: My daughter wanted her stepfather AND her biological father to be part of her wedding. So her stepdad (my husband) walked her down the aisle to where I was sitting in the first row. I stood up, gave her my handkerchief and kissed her cheek. Then her father stepped out from the row behind me, and her stepdad handed her over to her father, who walked her the rest of the way to the altar and gave her away. Everyone was happy with this amicable solution.

— JOYCE IN ALABAMA

DEAR ABBY: I was in the same situation at my wedding. My solution was to have my stepfather walk me down the aisle and my father do the father/daughter dance. That way both men were acknowledged and each one given his special time.

— KATHY IN NEW ENGLAND

IF AUGUST 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A string tied around the fickle finger of fate could help you remember that upsets and changes are only temporary. In the year ahead, others may occasionally doubt your commitment or consider you untrustworthy, but by remaining true blue even under the most stressful conditions you prevail. Acting on impulse can cause you heartache in the next four to six weeks. Make major changes that involve a relationship, career or job in very late October or the month of November when Lady Luck is on your side. That is the very best time to make irrevocable decisions or to accept opportunities that fall in your lap. There is another excellent period for making major changes and decisions that falls in late January and early February.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Bide your time. You are champing at the bit to move forward, but conditions are such that the best course of action is to be patient and wait. Insurmountable obstacles will be easier to conquer tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your eyes on the prize. Stay focused on your current goals no matter what distractions try to steal your attention. It's better to do one task well than trying to juggle several activities at once and accomplishing nothing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Most battles are won or lost in the preparation. Be sure you have gathered all the information and keep your bases covered before taking any action. Romantic endeavors may suffer from a lack of communication.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good things come to those who wait. Don't be pressed into making a big decision before you have sifted through all the data. A little research may yield a revelation that will simplify your choices.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When in doubt, think it out. When standing at the crossroads and uncertain of which direction to move, simple logic helps you decide which path is best. A bargain isn't really a bargain if it's something you don't need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There's no easy way out. You are faced with a puzzling problem that will require some deep thought and a good deal of research to solve. When you encounter conflict, you would do well to walk away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't hold grudges. If people are big enough to bury the hatchet and apologize, you should meet them half way and accept it. Negotiations might easily stall and would be better left for another day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It can't always be wine and roses. Events may not be going as planned today, but you'll get through it as long as you don't panic. Settle into a supporting role, as you are not yet ready for center stage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your nose clean. Concentrate on going through the motions and don't try to make any waves just yet. It is a poor time for entering agreements or striking deals; steer clear of controversies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you hesitate, you may find a better deal. When searching for the best bargain, don't jump at the first thing that catches your eye. Better values can be found through some thorough detective work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): When the group ceases to be productive, it may be time to go solo. Don't get bogged down over petty grievances involving a job you could easily handle on your own. When tensions arise, just step away.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't jump to conclusions. You should not be suspicious if someone doesn't see eye to eye with your plans. Talk it out and see if you can pool resources and create a stronger front. Adapt to changes as they arise.
