Color Guard member Ginny Liggett, 16, practices with her team before the halftime show between Burley and Century High School Friday night at Burley High School.

Football Season Has Arrived.

The crack of helmets. The slap of pads. Bright lights. Athletic tape, mixed with sweat. Freshly cut green grass — or the sterility of newfangled Field Turf. Yellow penalty flags and the referee's whistle. All the sounds, sights and smells of high school football are back. Across the Magic Valley and Mini-Cassia, 15 teams over 10 games kicked off their seasons.

Some have aims on a state title. Others might be content just to make the playoffs. Over the next two months, contenders will rise and pretenders will be exposed. Emotions will run high on a weekly basis, be they among crosstown rivals or league leaders entering a big game. But this week, we welcome back football season with open arms.

Big Dairy Gets Bigger

Robert Bird, an electrician with Freedom Electric, works on the dock leveler system in the new cold storage building at Glanbia Foods' Twin Falls facility.

In a strained economy, local dairy processors are seizing the moment to expand their operations, all in the name of efficiency, new markets and changed tastes.

BY JOSHUA PALMER

Despite the worst collapse in milk prices in decades, dairy continues to be king in Idaho — and with it a multibillion-dollar dairy processing industry. But continuing that reign requires millions of dollars in investments by dairy processors to stay abreast of new consumer trends and to reach larger markets. Nowhere is that more visible than in the Magic Valley — a dairy stronghold in a state that teeters between the third- and fourth-largest producer of milk products in the nation. Glanbia Foods in Twin Falls, which is part of a larger operation that produces about 19 million pounds of cheese per week in three facilities around the valley, is on schedule to complete a $7 million expansion of storage space in late September. The expansion comes on the heels of a nearly $9 million refurbishing project at the same plant. And Glanbia isn't alone. The Jerome Cheese Co., a division of Davisco

Foods, completed construction on a new production line earlier this year that allows the company to make mozzarella cheese. The new production line created about 20 new full-time jobs, with plans for an additional 150 jobs as demand grows. To get more product to more consumers, the regional shipping and warehousing industry is ramping up its own operations — a major umbilical cord between processors and consumers. In the world of cheese, where 30 days can mean the difference between medium and sharp cheddar, refrigerated shipping is critical to keeping processors connected to markets. WEL Companies, a Wisconsin-based warehousing and transportation business that works with the region's dairy industry, completed construction and renovation of a 120,000 square-foot facility in Gooding. The company will augment massive shipping operations already provided by WOW Logistics in Jerome, which added more than 127,000 square feet to its own operations in 2010. What's driving growth in dairy processing? Mainly, it's the constant push for efficiency. As

Raising the Rate, One by One

Anti-cancer crusaders like Esther Culbertson in Twin Falls are fighting to improve Idaho's low rate of mammogram recipients.

Learn More
To learn more about breast cancer screening assistance through the South Central Public Health District, call Esther Culbertson at 737-5970. It's startlingly simple to find Idaho women who've gone without breast cancer screening. The state ranks lowest in the nation for its percentage of women who have received a mammogram in the last two years, as only 64 percent of women over the age of 40 have had a screening. Nationally, more than 75 percent had been screened during that time.

That nation-trailing amount of Idaho women who receive screenings has prompted the creation of local health programs that help cover the screening costs. And for women who have no idea these options exist, Esther Culbertson is there to help. Culbertson's official title is customer representative at the South Central Public Health District, but she really has more responsibilities of a bounty hunter. It's her job to scour food banks, homeless shelters and county fairs to find women who need screenings but cannot afford them. "At Western Days, I met a woman who had no money and was living in her car," she said. "She was a lady who had had a lot of money in the past, but she had lost her job. I managed to get her information and find a program where she could get a

Whipping up trouble before ever reaching land, Hurricane Irene zeroed in Friday for a catastrophic run up the Eastern Seaboard. More than 2 million people were told to move to safer places, and New York City ordered the nation's biggest subway system shut down for the first time because of a natural disaster. As the storm's outermost bands of wind and rain began to lash the Outer Banks of North Carolina, authorities in points farther north begged people to get out of harm's way. GOODING SCHOOL DISTRICT SEEKS $2M BOND CHANGE

bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Gooding School District is asking voters for permission to do a $2 million change.

It won't cost any more in taxes than what district residents are already paying for an existing plant facility levy. Voter approval is needed because the proposal would convert $2 million of the levy into a bond.

The vote will take place this Tuesday. Two-thirds voter supermajority approval is needed for the proposal to pass.

The resulting bond, if passed, would finance costs of improvements throughout the district, which include a heating and air conditioning system at Gooding High School and other upgrades like roofing repairs and plumbing, according to the school district.

Superintendent Heather Williams said the state's Division of Building Safety flagged the high school heating and ventilation system for possible carbon monoxide danger. While monitoring hasn't picked up problems yet, the attention underscores the need to replace the aging system, Williams said.

Currently, the district's plant facilities levy generates $250,000 a year. If the bond conversion passes, that same amount can be used as payments to cover the bond.

Williams said the bond would allow the district a chance to take advantage of a bond program that would provide interest-free financing. Through the program, federal funds cover the costs of interest.

But to take advantage of the programs, school districts need to have bonds approved by the end of 2011.

the price of cow feed rises, dairymen are seeking higher prices for milk. In turn, processors are struggling to provide the lowest prices in a food market that is under duress from recession.

"In the case of our current expansion, we are adding more square footage to our cooler," said Jeff Williams, president and CEO of Glanbia Foods. "As we added to the plant, we neglected to add to the cooling side of it. When we were producing more than we could handle, we were double-handling it by shipping it to WOW. Now we can ship it from our own cold storage."

But the investments are also being made out of a need to reach new markets as consumer tastes change.

"We've positioned ourselves to add the mozzarella production in Jerome after realizing the overwhelming demand from these customers," said Troy Ammann, Davisco director of cheese operations. "Not only will we better serve our customers in the western U.S., but the Idaho location will provide better access to our international customers that we ship to from western ports."

Glanbia is working toward low-sodium cheese to reach a growing market of health-conscious consumers.

And international customers — a billion-dollar market in China alone — are sitting squarely in dairy processors' sights as the U.S. goods become more affordable for foreign markets.

Williams said Glanbia is working on efforts to ship cheese barrels, which are hulking 500-pound containers produced and packaged in the company's Gooding facility, to markets in Asia and other foreign countries. If processors can find a way to ship large quantities of a time-sensitive product to overseas markets, a massive dairy expansion would be on the horizon in the Magic Valley, say processors.

"In some cases the market is already there," Williams said. "Export customers backed away from U.S. cheese two weeks ago, but now they are back. What buyers are looking for is for prices to settle low for a few days before they lock in three-month or six-month contracts. At that point, what we do is export the heck out of our cheese."

What does this mean for the Magic Valley? Jobs and investment cash.

About $20 million has been spent by the four largest dairy processors in the valley in the last year, creating nearly 100 new jobs.

The only road block appears to be an industry that is largely absent in Idaho — hundred pounds of milk just to break even on feed costs — a price that was only achieved six months ago after a nearly three-year-long meltdown in milk prices. Milk futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange — a benchmark for projected milk prices across the U.S. — are expected to dip below $18 in December and last through 2013.

"It's ethanol," Naerebout said. "When 40 percent of your feed crop is being turned into ethanol, it's going to send those feed prices up. If anything, that's what will hold us back."

mammogram for free."

While Culbertson works primarily for the SCPHD, she partners with other medical programs in the area.

SCPHD offers free breast and cervical cancer screenings for qualified low-income women over the age of 50. They screen 650 women annually.

The 900 Women Project, a campaign led by St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, provides free screenings for women over 40. The 900 Women Project has screened more than 1,000 women since its inception in 2006. While the majority of women come from the Twin Falls area, the program has screened women from Minidoka to Lincoln counties.

Reasons as to why some Idaho women repeatedly refuse to get a breast cancer screening are as puzzling as they are numerous. Morris suggested that fear often hinders women from getting a mammogram. Culbertson predicted that some women can't afford the costs.

Nevertheless, the local programs are slowly bearing fruit, said Susan Morris, director of the 900 Women Project. In 2004, more than 55 percent of south-central Idaho women had had a mammogram. In 2010, the rate had increased by almost 10 percent.

The goal is eventually to raise the rate to 70 percent, Morris said.

Screenings are important because they are the best way to detect breast cancer as early as possible.

"I find the women, I go to their homes if they have one, and I try to find a way to help them," Culbertson said. "It's important because these women may have a history of having breast cancer in their family, but no financial opportunity to have a screening."

BLAINE COUNTY SPREADS 'LEADER IN ME' PROGRAM TO MORE SCHOOLS

BY KAREN BOSSICK

For the Times-News

HAILEY • Veronica Patlan is learning a different language to teach the students in her dual-immersion class at Bellevue Elementary School this year.

It doesn't matter if she delivers it in English or Spanish. What is important is that she teaches them to discard phrases like "I have to" and "they made me" for proactive language like "I'm going to" and "I decided to."

Patlan is one of about 150 teachers at Bellevue, Carey, Woodside and Hemingway elementary schools who went back to school this week to learn how to teach Stephen R. Covey's "Seven Habits of Highly Effective People" to their young charges.

The program, titled "The Leader in Me," is already in 530 schools worldwide and is expanding to all the elementary schools in the Blaine County School District after successful pilot programs last year at Carey and Hailey schools.

"I think it's exciting," said Patlan. "I can't wait to see how the kids change because of this."

complaint on Friday.

According to an affidavit for the original charge against Buddenhagen, emergency personnel responded to an apartment complex at 512 Jefferson St. in Twin Falls at about 7:30 a.m. Aug. 6, where officers found Buddenhagen in an apartment with the child lying on the floor of one of the bedrooms.

Buddenhagen allegedly told police the boy had been taking a bath. He said he had left the bathroom and heard a loud sound, returning to find the boy on the floor. Buddenhagen said he moved the child to a bedroom and called 911.

Later, a doctor at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center told police he believed the child was shaken, based on bruises on the child and the results of a CT scan, and called the injuries "severe child abuse."

The child was later taken to a Boise hospital, where he died on Aug. 7.

Buddenhagen remains in custody at Twin Falls County Jail. His original bond of $1 million no longer stands, and he is held without bond.

Twin Falls police seek help identifying three people suspected of taking part in at least one burglary in town.

Early Friday morning, according to police, two males and a female attempted to break into a home they thought was empty. They kicked in the door to a garage and, in the process, woke up the home's 94-year-old resident.

The trio ran off as soon as the homeowner turned on a light, but videos of them were captured on the home's surveillance camera. Anyone who recognizes the suspects is encouraged to contact police at 735-4357.

Police have investigated several Twin Falls home burglaries in the past few months, including two for which the homeowners were present. In most cases, the homeowners have been gone for a few days and the suspects have entered through a window or by breaking down a door.

Crime Prevention Officer Luke Allen suggests several steps to take to make your home less appealing to a burglar in your absence. Leave a light and a radio on inside, put your porch light on a timer, let neighbors know you'll be gone and have someone check on your house. Also, put a hold on your mail and newspaper, or have someone pick them up.

Allen is available to perform a free survey of your home and provide suggestions on how to make it safer.

T.F. Woman Accused of Stabbing to Settle Money Dispute

TIMES-NEWS

An alleged dispute over $400 ended in one woman going to the hospital with knife wounds and another being charged with felony aggravated battery.

Twin Falls resident Trina Flora faces the felony charge and a weapons enhancement, as Twin Falls County prosecutors say she slashed and stabbed at Yvonne Vega on Tuesday night in a church parking lot near Rock Creek Mobile Manor on Twin Falls' Grandview Drive. Police say the two had agreed to meet at the parking lot to settle the dispute.

According to the affidavit, Vega was treated at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with a severe laceration on her lower right arm, along with smaller wounds on her left arm and lower back.

Twin Falls police arrested Flora on Wednesday at her Jefferson Street residence after Vega identified her from a photo lineup. Flora told police that Rogelio Pina accompanied Vega and brought a tire iron to the meeting, adding that she was attacked by Vega first.

Flora is in custody of Twin Falls County Jail on $100,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Sept. 2.

FRIENDS OF KATY BENOIT GATHER FOR A CANDLELIGHT VIGIL IN HER MEMORY AT FRIENDSHIP SQUARE IN MOSCOW ON THURSDAY.

Police Say They Found Guns, Meds With Murder-Suicide Professor

Police say Katy Benoit’s romantic relationship with University of Idaho professor had recently ended after he displayed violent tendencies, including threatening her life multiple times.

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • A former Idaho professor who killed himself after gunning down a graduate student he had recently dated was found dead in his hotel room with six guns and medications for bipolar disorder and severe anxiety, police said.

The confirmation of reports that Ernesto Bustamante, 31, suffered from mental disorders and owned a stockpile of weapons was among the new details that emerged with the release Friday of a pair of statements, one from police and the other from university officials, offering the results of investigations into the case.

Katy Benoit, 22, was shot 11 times with a .45 caliber handgun outside her northern Idaho home late Monday. Benoit’s romantic relationship with the University of Idaho professor had recently ended after he displayed violent tendencies, including threatening her life multiple times, police said.

Benoit met Bustamante last fall when she took a psychology course he was teaching, and by the end of the semester they were dating. The relationship ended in May, after he put a gun to her head and told her how he would use it to kill her. She told others he had threatened her with a gun twice before.

Bustamante had been known to alternately refer to himself as a “psychopathic killer” and “the beast,” according to police. After the couple split, Benoit alerted school officials that she was becoming increasingly concerned for her safety and filed a sexual harassment complaint with the university on June 12. Bustamante denied the allegations and filed his own complaint against her on July 8, claiming defamation of character.

School officials had contact with Benoit more than a dozen times to discuss the situation and urge her to take safety precautions. The final meeting came Monday, the same day police say Bustamante shot her nearly a dozen times on the back porch of her Moscow home.

Benoit’s roommates, Meghan Walker-Smith and Emma Gregory, were inside baking cookies and heard the shots. Gregory ran outside to find Benoit covered in blood. The roommates fled the home and called 911 from the car, telling a dispatcher that they could only think of one person who could have fired the shots — Bustamante.

They said he had recently been forced to resign from the university as a result of a Benoit’s complaints and said that was the only reason they could imagine that their friend had been killed.

The university has confirmed only that Bustamante resigned effective last Friday. Police said Bustamante was in the process of moving to New Jersey, where he had secured another job.

Less than an hour after killing Benoit, Bustamante checked into a hotel room and shot himself in the head with a revolver, police said. Authorities later found five other handguns, along with the revolver, in the room, as well as four different prescription medications used to treat severe anxiety, epilepsy, depression and bipolar disorder. Bustamante’s name was printed on all of the prescription bottles.

In the wake of the murder-suicide, Bustamante’s family extended condolences to Benoit’s relatives Thursday, saying that while they did not know her “our thoughts and prayers are with Katy’s family and friends.”

Benoit’s family issued a new statement Friday offering their own condolences. “We are deeply grateful for all of the thoughts and prayers that Katy and our family have received. We appreciate the condolences from the Bustamante family and offer our condolences to the Bustamante family, as well. This is a difficult time for everyone,” the family said.

University officials maintain that they followed all proper procedures, including notifying police and urging Benoit to alert authorities, as well.

Police received a call from Benoit on June 10 after the university referred her to address safety concerns.

Moscow Police Lt. Dave Lehmitz said he advised Benoit of basic safety principles and told her to call back if there were any threatening or suspicious incidents. Two days later, the university says Benoit emailed school officials to say she did not want Bustamante served with her complaint and wanted to discuss it further.

The university says Benoit was told on July 6 her complaint had been sent to Bustamante and he had been told to stay away from her. The school contacted police on July 14 concerning reports of inappropriate behavior by Bustamante toward Benoit, Lehmitz said.

Several attempts by law enforcement to later contact Benoit were unsuccessful and the university informed the Moscow Police Department that she did not want the agency involved, Lehmitz said.

The university hired Bustamante in 2007 and he was an assistant professor in the Department of Psychology and Communication. Benoit had earned her undergraduate degree from the university in 2010 and had just started her graduate studies in the psychology department.

The university is asking state courts to decide if it can release Bustamante’s employment records.

The school’s steps, detailed in the statement released Friday, appear to be consistent with university policy. Still, University of Idaho President Duane Nellis said he’s ordered an independent review of those policies and procedures to make sure they meet the highest safety and security standards.

“Our hearts and prayers go out to the family of Katy Benoit,” Nellis said. “We understand their desire to have a full accounting of the circumstances that led to Katy’s death. I intend to do everything I can to answer their questions. A tragedy has occurred and we all want answers.”

UI Met with, Counseled Moscow Student Before Shooting

University of Idaho President Duane Nellis said Friday that university officials worked closely with student Katy Benoit and the Moscow Police over the summer to investigate a complaint she made against assistant professor Ernesto Bustamante.

Here is the timeline the university provided. It does not include any information from the perspective of Bustamante’s personnel record:

June 10, 2011: University’s first contact with Benoit to discuss a complaint. Based on allegations, the university urged Benoit take safety precautions and that she contact Moscow Police Department (MPD). University provided Benoit with personal contact information for MPD and Alternatives to Violence of the Palouse (ATVP) for assistance beyond those the university could provide. University also contacted Moscow Police Department directly.

June 12: University received details of Benoit’s complaint in writing.

June 13: Benoit sent email indicating she had contacted MPD. University replied to Benoit, again urging her to also contact ATVP.

June 14: Benoit sent email to university saying she did not want Bustamante served with her complaint before discussing it further. She indicated she would come in the next day.

June 16: When Benoit did not come in on June 15, the university sent an email to her to encourage the follow-up meeting.

June 30: University received email from Benoit apologizing for being out of touch. Benoit wrote she had been out of town and would be gone again the next week.

July 6: University informed Benoit by email that her complaint had been sent to Bustamante along with a letter detailing the possible university policy violations. It had been held until this date at her request. The university reiterated the importance of seeking more help, including calling police if Benoit ever felt the need. She was also told that Bustamante had been directed by the university to have no contact with her. Benoit was told to inform the university immediately if Bustamante did attempt to contact her.

July 9: Benoit emailed university to say she was out of town until July 13.

July 14: University Threat Assessment Team, including MPD representative, met to assess the level of the safety risk for Benoit and others involved in the investigation. University investigators also met with Benoit to review Bustamante’s response and notify her that university investigators would interview Bustamante on July 19. This was considered a high-risk point so Benoit was advised to stay somewhere other than her apartment to avoid contact.

July 22: University called Benoit to ask where she would be until the start of school. She said she would be in Moscow. University encouraged her to continue to take safety precautions, including contacting MPD.

Aug. 22: University met with Benoit to tell her that Bustamante’s last day of employment was Aug. 19. She was urged to be vigilant and get help from the police and others if she had any safety concerns. University also encouraged Benoit to remain in contact with university representatives and to take advantage of university support services.

Rule Requiring Online High School Courses Advances

BOISE (AP) • A rule requiring high school students to take online courses has made its way to the Idaho State Board of Education, despite heavy opposition at public hearings across the state.

A subcommittee of the Idaho State Board of Education voted Thursday to recommend that the full board pass the rule, which would require the class of 2016 — and all students coming after — to take two online courses to graduate.

The 6-2 vote came despite overwhelming opposition from people who testified at seven hearings around the state. Only eight of the 76 people who testified at the hearings or submitted written comments supported the new rule.

The state Board of Education has a Sept. 1 deadline from the Idaho Department of Administration to vote on the proposed rule if it wants the measure to go before the Idaho Legislature during the 2012 session.

Senate Education Chairman John Goedde, R-Coeur d'Alene, who serves on the subcommittee, told The Spokesman-Review (<http://bit.ly/r34rqO>) the rule will get students started on the road to digital education, providing them with “job skills that they’re going to need when they enter the workforce, and with the skills to move forward in the post-secondary environment where more and more classes are being offered online.”

Goedde dismissed the negative testimony at the seven public hearings, saying he didn’t know the makeup of most of the people that testified at six of the seven hearings.

“I was there for the Coeur d’Alene testimony, and without exception, every person that testified was either an educator or a former educator,” Goedde said. “And I think that is just consistent with their insistence that education reform is a bad thing.”

Meridian school trustee and subcommittee member Anne Ritter was one of the two members who opposed the new rule.

“I have huge concerns,” she said. “I think it’s too far, too fast. I think flexibility would have been a much better approach.”

Under the rule, one of the two required online classes must be taught remotely, without a teacher present in the classroom. The panel did vote unanimously, however, to revise the rule to remove an outright ban on the teacher ever being present in the classroom with the students during course time.

The board is drafting online course requirements as part of new education changes that were signed into law this year with backing from public schools chief Tom Luna and the governor.

Comment Period Extended for Winter Lake Plan

BONNER COUNTY
DAILY BEE

SANDPOINT • The public comment period has been extended on a controversial proposal to strategically store and release water in Lake Pend Oreille during the winter to meet power needs.

The deadline to submit remarks on the Bonneville Power Administration’s proposed flexible winter power operations plan was next Monday, but is being pushed back to Sept. 13.

Michael Milstein, a spokesman for BPA, said the agency received several requests to extend the comment period, one of which came from the office of Idaho Gov. Butch Otter.

The governor’s request indicated that more time was needed to coordinate comments between various state agencies and to allow the public ample time to respond.

BPA is asking the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to operate Albeni Falls Dam with up to a 5-foot operating range during winter to provide more flexibility for power generation.

Under the proposed Flexible Winter Power Operations plan, the winter pool elevation of the lake would fluctuate between 2,051 feet and 2,056 feet from mid-December until mid-March.

In recent years, the lake’s level has generally been targeted at 2,051 feet or 2,055 feet with a 1-foot operating range.

The proposal has drawn sharp criticism from waterfront landowners and lake users in Bonner County who contend the fluctuating level will damage shoreline infrastructure, hasten erosion and impact water quality.

A 133-page Environmental Assessment on BPA’s proposed Flexible Winter Power Operations plan was released in July. Critics of the proposal strongly urged for a more detailed Environmental Impact Statement.

‘What Am I Going to Do?’ NYC Subways Ordered Shut

BY SAMANTHA GROSS and COLLEEN LONG
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The nation’s biggest subway system was ordered shut down as Hurricane Irene bore down Friday, potentially paralyzing movement for millions of carless people even as more than 300,000 were told to evacuate to safer places.

The unprecedented orders from Mayor Michael Bloomberg, which affect New Yorkers from the Bronx’s most distant reaches down through Manhattan and out to the beaches of Brooklyn and Queens, dealt the congested metropolis a formidable logistical challenge that raised more questions than it resolved:

Where are all of those people in New York’s flood-prone areas supposed to go? And, more pointedly, how are they going to get there — especially since many don’t own a car? Subways, buses and trains in one of the world’s largest public transportation systems were to stop running at noon today. Bridges and tunnels also could be closed as the storm approaches, clogging traffic in an already congested city.

Officials hoped most residents would stay with family and friends, and for the rest the city opened nearly 100 shelters with a capacity of 71,000 people.

People at Coney Island in Brooklyn, New York, experience sunny weather Friday as Hurricane Irene bears down on the eastern seaboard farther south.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many people scoffed at the danger and vowed to ride it out at home.

“How can I get out of Coney Island? What am I going to do? Run with this walker?” said 82-year-old Abe Feinstein, who has lived since the early 1960s on the eighth floor of a building that overlooks the famed Coney Island boardwalk.

He said he watched Hurricane Gloria in 1985 from an apartment down the street.

“I think I have nothing to worry about,” he said. “I’ve been through bad weather before. It’s just not going to be a problem for us.”

Irene was expected to make landfall in North Carolina today, then roll up the I-95 corridor reaching New York on Sunday.

A hurricane warning was issued for the city Friday afternoon, the first time that’s happened since Gloria.

If the storm stays on its current path, skyscraper windows could shatter, tree limbs would fall and debris would be tossed around. Streets in the southern tip of the city could be under a few feet of water, and police readied rescue boats but said they wouldn’t go out if conditions were poor.

Experts Worry More About Water Than Wind

WASHINGTON (AP) • Forget the wind and fury. Hurricane Irene’s most worrisome weapon is water.

There’s just way too much of it: storm surge pushing seawater ashore and heavy rainfall causing flooding. That’s not unusual with hurricanes, but with Irene there are a couple of added factors that are making meteorologists nervous.

This massive, slow-moving hurricane is forecast to soak an already drenched Northeast and may come ashore at a time when tides are unusually high, making storm surge even worse — 4 to 11 feet with waves on top, forecasters say.

“Water is the No. 1 killer,” retired National Hurricane Center Director Max Mayfield said Friday afternoon. “That’s going to cause the greatest loss of life.”

Many deaths can be avoided if people leave the coast and don’t drive into flooded areas, he said.

MIT meteorology professor Kerry Emanuel said the flooding from Irene could be worse than the 1938 New England hurricane that killed 564 people.

“I think everybody is confident, unfortunately, that this is going to be a bad event from freshwater flooding,” he said.

Forecasters predict Irene will dump 6 to 10 inches of rain in a swath from North Carolina to New England with some areas getting as much as 15 inches of rain. That’s partly because the storm is unusually large and is moving fairly slowly — around 15 mph — allowing it to dump more rain over large areas.

“And all of this rain will come in a short period of time, and that could lead to life-threatening flash floods,” National Hurricane Center meteorologist John Cangialosi said Friday.

Much of the area on Irene’s projected track from Baltimore to New England is already soaked from higher than normal rainfall in the past month. Philadelphia has already had about 13 inches this month, which Cangialosi called “extraordinary.”

Irene May Bring Outages, Scattered Shortages of Gas

BY JONATHAN FAHEY and CHRIS KAHN
Associated Press

NEW YORK • East Coast residents braced for power outages and rushed to top off their gas tanks as Hurricane Irene swept closer to the region Friday. Power plants, refineries and pipelines prepared to shut down and utility repair crews gathered equipment to fix downed power lines.

Utility officials and forecasters say millions of people are in danger of losing electric power, some for days. Gasoline supplies are ample, although there were reports of several stations running dry on Friday. Analysts do not expect prices for power and gas to rise.

Still, the threat of Irene’s strong winds and heavy rains are buffeting the energy industry hours before the actual storm is expected to reach land.

An unusually large number of people may be affected by Irene because it is forecast to stay just offshore—and thus retain much of its power—as it inches up the coast from North Carolina to New England. When a hurricane hits land, it quickly loses steam.

Irene could reach North Carolina’s Outer Banks on Saturday with winds around 100 mph, then head up the coast. Forecasters say Irene is not strengthening, as they had initially feared, but it remains dangerous.

The Eastern Seaboard lies in the storm’s projected path, with flooding and wind damage likely. North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island have declared emergencies. New York City issued evacuation orders to 270,000 people in low-lying areas.

On Friday, drivers in Irene’s path rushed to gas stations for a last-minute fill-up before the storm, analysts say.

Gasoline demand jumped 20 to 40 percent in Mid-Atlantic states, according to the Oil Price Information Service, which tracks gasoline supplies and prices around the country.

Several gas stations in New Jersey and in other spots along the eastern seaboard have run out of gasoline, according to OPIS.

Overnight, retail prices were mostly unchanged in many cities that are expected to be hit this weekend. Rules against price gouging at gas stations took effect throughout Middle Atlantic states. Authorities will be on the lookout for stations that try to take advantage of panicked drivers.

Hurricane Wind Damage Can be Severe

Just how much damage do winds from tropical storms and hurricanes cause?

At 20 mph, trees will sway and leaves may strip off.

At 30 mph, dead branches can fall. If you’re daring — or dumb — enough to walk outside, prepare to grab one of those swaying trees to keep upright. Lawn furniture will blow around unless it’s heavy or well-secured.

But stuff doesn’t really start to fly until the wind blows even harder.

At 40 mph, branches start to rip off trees, even “well-secured branches,” said James Elsner, a geography professor at Florida State University who studies hurricanes.

Heading toward 50 mph, shingles can tear off roofs, Elsner said, and eaves can lift and blow away, “especially on weaker structures like sunrooms.”

Trouble really starts at 60 mph, or Level 10 on the 200-year-old Beaufort wind scale, developed by a British admiral to estimate wind speeds before the invention of instruments to measure it. “You can get windows blown out,” Elsner said, and parts of roofs may fly off.

Above 75 mph, the situation is dire. “You can get some full-scale compromises of buildings,” Elsner said.

If buildings break apart, airborne debris becomes a problem. Shingles, glass and nail-riddled wall studs can all start flying around. And the wind will whip even faster through tight areas, such as the tunnel-like alleys between two houses built within spitting distance.

Wind damage is caused not only by air pushing on structures but also by the suction that is created when big bursts of air flow around a structure. This negative pressure on the backside of a building can pull apart walls and roofs.

And unlike a typical summer thunderstorm, tropical storm blasts are often sustained for several hours, Elsner said. “That can compromise a building that would otherwise be resistant to a brief gust.”

As for power lines, Pepco spokesman Bob Hainey said, “it’s really hard to tell” at what wind speeds power lines will start falling, but most outages are caused by tree limbs falling across the lines.

2 Million People Ordered to Leave as Irene Takes Aim at East Coast

BY MICHAEL BIESECKER and JENNIFER PELTZ

Associated Press

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. • Whipping up trouble before ever reaching land, Hurricane Irene zeroed in Friday for a catastrophic run up the Eastern Seaboard. More than 2 million people were told to move to safer places, and New York City ordered the nation's biggest subway system shut down for the first time because of a natural disaster.

As the storm's outermost bands of wind and rain began to lash the Outer Banks of North Carolina, authorities in points farther north begged people to get out of harm's way. The hurricane lost some strength but still packed 100 mph winds, and officials in the Northeast, not used to tropical weather, feared it could wreak devastation.

"Don't wait. Don't delay," said President Barack Obama, who decided to cut short his summer vacation by a day and return to Washington. "I cannot stress this highly enough: If you are in the projected path of this hurricane, you have to take precautions now."

Senior hurricane specialist Richard Pasch of the National Hurricane Center said there were signs that the hurricane may have weakened slightly, but strong winds continued to extend 100 miles from its center.

The moment Saturday when the eye of the hurricane crosses land "is not as important as just being in that big swath," Pasch said. "And unfortunately, it's a big target."

Hurricane warnings were issued from North Carolina to New York, and watches were posted farther north, on the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard off Massachusetts. Evacuation orders covered at least 2.3 million people, including 1 million in New Jersey, 315,000 in Maryland, 300,000 in North Carolina, 200,000 in Virginia and 100,000 in Delaware.

"This is probably the largest number of people that have been threatened by a single hurricane in the United States," said Jay Baker, a geography professor at Florida State University.

New York City ordered more than 300,000 people who live in flood-prone areas to leave, including Battery Park City at the southern tip of Manhattan, Coney Island and the beachfront Rockaways. But it was not clear how many would do it, how they would get out or where they would go. Most New Yorkers don't have a car.

On top of that, the city said it would shut down the subways and buses at noon Saturday, only a few hours after the first rain is expected to fall. The transit system carries about 5 million people on an average weekday, fewer on weekends. It has been shut down several times before, including during a transit workers' strike in 2005 and after the Sept. 11 attacks a decade ago, but never for weather.

Late Friday, aviation officials said they would close the five main New York City-area airports to arriving domestic and international flights beginning at noon on Saturday. Many departures also were canceled.

The airports are John F. Kennedy International, Newark Liberty International, LaGuardia, Stewart International and Teterboro.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said there was little authorities could do to force people to leave.

"We do not have the manpower to go door-to-door and drag people out of their homes," he said. "Nobody's going to get fined. Nobody's going to go to jail. But if you don't follow this, people may die."

Shelters were opening Friday afternoon, and the city was placed under its first hurricane warning since 1985.

Transit systems in New Jersey and Philadelphia also announced plans to shut down, and Washington declared a state of emergency. Boisterous New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie demanded people "get the hell off the beach" in Asbury Park and said: "You're done. Do not waste any more time working on your tan."

Irene Causes Obama to End Holiday Early

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) • Taking his own advice not to linger at the beach, President Barack Obama cut short his family's vacation on Martha's Vineyard and headed back to Washington late Friday to await the landfall of a Hurricane Irene, which he warned could be a "historic" storm. Joined by his wife, Michelle, and daughters Malia and Sasha, Obama boarded his Marine One helicopter at the island's airport and took off for Cape Cod, where Air Force One waited to take them back to Washington.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest said the president felt it prudent to be back in Washington when Irene strikes the Eastern Seaboard. Obama informed his staff shortly after urging millions of Americans in the path of the storm to heed instructions from state and local officials, especially if directed to evacuate.

"Don't wait, don't delay," Obama said.

A Look at Irene's Path, What's Ahead

BEHIND THE STORM:

IRENE HITS BAHAMAS • A large and powerful Hurricane Irene roared across the Bahamas on Wednesday, pummeling the country's smaller, less-populated islands while posing less of a threat to the capital, a major tourist destination with 200,000 residents.

CARIBBEAN DAMAGE • A settlement known as Lovely Bay was destroyed while at least 40 homes were badly damaged on the island of Mayaguana.

NHC WARNING • The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami, Florida, warned Thursday that an "extremely dangerous storm surge will raise water levels by as much as 7 to 11 feet above normal tide levels over the Bahamas."

FLORIDA INJURIES • Eight people were injured in rough waters caused by Hurricane Irene in South Florida.

AHEAD OF THE STORM:

EVACUATIONS • North Carolina's Carteret County orders evacuations for visitors, island residents, and Outer Banks as Irene nears. Ocean City, Md. orders thousands to evacuate. New York City mayor orders unprecedented mandatory evacuations for residents in low-lying coastal areas as well as at some hospitals and nursing homes.

TRANSPORTATION • New York City orders buses, planes and its entire subway system to be shut down as Hurricane Irene marches up the East Coast. Hundreds of thousands of airline passengers will be grounded this weekend as Irene makes its way up the coast, past some of the nation's busiest airports.

HURRICANE WARNINGS • Hurricane warnings issued for North Carolina, Virginia, Washington, D.C., Maryland, Delaware, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Journals, Computers Seized in Missing Utah Mom Case

BY BRIAN SKOLOFF

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • The father-in-law of a Utah mother missing for nearly two years said Friday authorities seized computers and journals during an extensive hours-long search of his Washington state home.

"They went through every room in the house, the garage, even the crawl space," Steve Powell told The Associated Press. "They just left piles of things everywhere. They took a lot of stuff."

The renewed effort over the past week in the search for Susan Cox Powell came as the case spiraled into an emotional saga pitting one side of her family against the other. The Powell family has throughout the investigation claimed they believe Susan Powell ran off with another man. Her family, however, has just been praying she's still alive, and has pleaded with her husband, Josh, to cooperate with authorities, who say he's been evasive.

Josh Powell is the only person of interest in his wife's disappearance, but he has not been charged or detained and denies killing his wife or knowing anything about where she is.

claimed in a nationally televised interview Thursday that he had a flirtatious relationship with his daughter-in-law, that they were in love — something her parents adamantly denied, saying Steve Powell initiated unwanted sexual advances toward her.

On Thursday, authorities from Utah converged on the Powell's home in Puyallup, Wash., searching for journals from everyone, including Susan Powell, Steve Powell and Josh Powell, Steve Powell said.

He said they seized every computer in the home.

"They took the whole computers. They didn't just take hard drives," Steve Powell said. "They had a warrant, I guess, to pick up the journals and any electronic media that may have had the journals on them."

Powell said authorities also seized thumb drives, CDs and paper journals from the home.

Police have declined to comment on what they were seeking or what they found.

"We came here looking for specific things, and some of those things we've been able to find," West Valley City, Utah, police Lt. Bill Merritt said Thursday night. He called the evidence collected "very, very important" to the investigation.

The Powell family has been portraying Susan as promiscuous and emotionally unstable and had been offering as proof several diary pages from the missing woman's teenage years. Her family says the entries were written by a young girl and have no bearing on the 28-year-old's disappearance. A Washington state court on Friday granted a temporary restraining order sought by her family, prohibiting the Powells from disseminating the journal entries.

It's the latest in a flurry of action in the case that had appeared to stall until recently. On Tuesday, a court commissioner in Washington state ordered Susan Powell's father, Chuck Cox, and Josh Powell to keep 500 feet apart. That move came just days after authorities wrapped up a search for evidence in a network of abandoned mines outside Ely, Nev. They found nothing new.

Josh Powell said Friday he would not allow Susan Powell's parents to "stop the truth from getting out" by keeping him from disseminating her journal entries.

"Susan is not ashamed of anything in her journals," he told the AP.

Cox family attorney Anne Bremner said the Powells are making a terrible situation even worse.

"What they're doing is adding such horrible angst to her parents that we have to stop this," Bremner said Friday. "It's gone from just bizarre to just unbearable for the family."

Josh Powell continues to say he believes his wife is alive, and is frustrated that "people aren't searching for Susan."

"I'm still thinking she left," Steve Powell added. "Hopefully they'll be able to find her at some point ... We don't believe she's dead."

Police say Josh Powell has refused to answer questions about a supposed midnight camping trip he said he took with the couple's sons — then ages 4 and 2 — in the mountains west of Salt Lake City the night before Susan Powell was reported missing. She was last seen by her husband Dec. 6, 2009, in her West Valley City home outside Salt Lake City. She was reported missing the next day when she didn't show up for work.

Chuck Cox, has never said he believes his son-in-law is responsible for Susan's disappearance, but wants him to be more forthcoming with police. He said Susan Powell never had feelings for Steve Powell and "wanted as far away from him as possible."

He said his family remains hopeful, but they are preparing "for the worst."

Motown Legend Esther Gordy Edwards Dies at 91

BY JEFF KAROUB

Associated Press

DETROIT • Esther Gordy Edwards, who helped build Motown Records alongside her brother Berry Gordy Jr. and led efforts to turn its original Detroit headquarters into a museum, has died. She was 91.

Edwards died Wednesday surrounded by family and friends in Detroit, the Motown Historical Museum said in a statement.

Edwards was a Motown executive for nearly three decades, holding numerous leadership positions within the music company whose artists included Stevie Wonder, Smokey Robinson and the Miracles, The Supremes, Marvin Gaye, The Temptations and The Four Tops. Motown Records, which Berry Gordy started with a family loan in 1959, churned out scores of global hits from the building it dubbed "Hitsville, U.S.A." in Detroit. The company moved to Los Angeles in 1972.

Edwards served as senior vice president, corporate secretary and director of Motown International Operations, where she was charged with exposing the famed "Motown sound" to international audiences.

Wonder has praised Edwards for being like a mother to him when he joined the label as a child. She is credited with helping Wonder enroll in the Michigan School for the Blind, as well as managing and guiding the careers of Robinson, Gaye, Diana Ross and others.

"She believed in me — when I was 14 years old and many other people didn't or could only see what they could at the time, she championed me being in Motown," Wonder said in a statement. "I shared with her many of my songs first before anyone else."

When Motown and most of her family moved to California, Edwards stayed behind. She amassed what would become Motown memorabilia and set to work on preserving the old headquarters, including the label's famed Studio A. The large stately former house on West Grand Boulevard opened as a museum in 1985.

"I always thought I was the visionary in the family but I missed the biggest thing of all when Esther turned the so-called trash left behind after I sold the company in 1988 into a phenomenal world-class monument at the spot where Hitsville started — the Motown museum," Berry Gordy said in a statement Thursday.

"She nurtured it and held it together, all through the years, to protect the Motown legacy for generations to come — which is only one of the reasons people all over the world will remember and celebrate Esther Gordy Edwards," he said.

Gordy also said Edwards gave him "the hardest time" when he sought to get the family loan to start what would become Motown Records. She became, he said, "one of my biggest assets at Motown."

According to an official biography released by the museum, Edwards was born in 1920 in Oconee, Ga., and moved to Detroit as a toddler. She was the eldest daughter in a family of eight children.

She first married Robert Bullock, with whom she had a son, Robert Berry Bullock. She later married state Rep. George Edwards and became a step-mother to his son, Harry.

One of her sisters, Anna Gordy Gaye, was Marvin Gaye's first wife.

In a statement, Robinson said Edwards was "one of the most important people to come into my life both personally and professionally." He said it's because of Edwards' "wisdom and foresight" that the museum exists, allowing "people now and for generations to come to have a firsthand look at our legacy."

"Thank you, Esther, and I know you are in the hands of God," he said.

A public viewing is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday at the James H. Cole Northwest Chapel in Detroit.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Bethel AME Church in Detroit.

Joey Vento, Colorful Purveyor of Cheesesteaks, Dies at 71

BY EMILY LANGER

The Washington Post

SHAMONG, N.J. • Joey Vento, the tattooed, trash-talking, motorcycle-revving founder of Geno's Steaks, the legendary cheesesteak joint in South Philadelphia, died Aug. 23 at his home in Shamong, N.J. He had a heart attack, the Associated Press reported. He was 71.

Vento figured in one of the great food rivalries of modern America: the fight, which sometimes looks more like a brawl, over who makes the best cheesesteak in Philly.

Like bagels in New York and pizza in Chicago, the cheesesteak inspires Philadelphians to use words such as "exquisite" to describe the Italian roll weighed down by meat and topped with cheese. Women in mink coats line up behind boys in Eagles caps to place their orders in ritualistic fashion — "wit" or "witout" onions.

All the while, the proprietors watch the scene with pride approaching hubris.

It would be imprecise to call Vento "the king" of cheesesteaks. Pat Olivieri claimed the crown when he founded a rival business across the intersection, called Pat's. Neither was he the prince; that title belonged to Steve Iliescu, of Steve's Prince of Steaks. Yet no one ever questioned Vento's standing in South Philly, an old Italian neighborhood built on the artery-clogging, yet all-American, tradition of street food.

Few people who set foot in Vento's neighborhood failed to see, or smell, his unmistakable establishment, which he founded in 1966. It was a "palace of neon," said former Philadelphia Inquirer food columnist Rick Nichols. "It looked like a Mummies outfit set on fire at night," he said, referring to the outlandish parade held New Year's Day in Philadelphia.

In case anyone failed to notice the neon lights, Vento griddled up a national controversy in 2006. Aggrieved by the influx of immigrants in the neighborhood, he hung a sign in his shop: "This is America. When ordering speak English."

That move brought national media attention to Geno's. Vento appeared on television, sporting his heavy bling, and defended his right to free speech. The store would not refuse to serve a non-English speaker, he said, but certain standards would be enforced.

Critics said Vento had crossed a line from serving up the swagger many customers enjoyed to inflaming real sensitivities in the community. Mexican restaurant workers and other immigrants had flooded to Philadelphia, Nichols said, especially from New York, where business suffered after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

CHEERS AND JEERS

County Move to Old Hospital Not a Panacea, But it Helps

CHEERS: To the Twin Falls County commissioners, for pursuing a plan to move some county government services into offices in the old St. Luke’s Magic Valley hospital building.

County occupancy won’t solve the whole problem of the vacant, 300,000-square-foot complex; much of it, frankly, just isn’t suitable for any other purpose. But moving some county employees into the old campus will be a shot in the arm for the economy of West Addison Avenue, which has suffered since St. Luke’s moved to its new location on Pole Line Road in May.

JEERS: To Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter, for a double standard in handling drinking and driving in his administration.

According to the Idaho Statesman’s Dan Popkey, when South Boise Women’s Correctional Center Warden Terressa Baldridge was arrested for DUI earlier this month, she was immediately put on administrative leave and subsequently reassigned — even though she’s pleaded not guilty.

But when Tony Faraca, deputy director and chief financial officer at the Idaho State Liquor Division, pleaded guilty to DUI in May he remained in his $85,114 post.

Faraca served three days in jail, paid a $783 fine and had his driver’s license suspended. He completed his community service last month.

Baldridge pleaded not guilty on Aug. 10 and has a jury trial set for Oct. 27. But the presumption of innocence apparently didn’t help, because Idaho Department of Correction Director Brent Reinke replaced her as warden last week and made her project manager of the Education, Treatment and Reentry Bureau.

The Liquor Division’s legal duties include curtailing the intemperate use of alcohol.

For that reason if nothing else, it seems to us that Faraca should be held to at least the same standard as Baldridge.

JEERS: To state Rep. Marv Hagedorn, R-Meridian, for remarkably bad taste in the wake of the shooting death of a graduate student on the University of Idaho campus this week.

Hagedorn, who co-sponsored legislation in the last session to allow concealed weapons to be carried on campus, urged University of Idaho President Duane Nellis to teach gun safety on campus and chided the school for “running away” from the Second Amendment.

Fact was, Katy Benoit was killed by her former boyfriend, an assistant professor at the U of I, in a premeditated shooting. No gun safety course would have prevented it.

Politicians are by nature opportunists, but Hagedorn went too far this time. He owes Nellis and the Benoit family an apology.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Filer Senior Appreciates Project Helpers

I would like to thank everyone who donated, participated and gave their valuable time to help make my senior project — Run/Walk for Future Docs on Aug. 6 — a huge success. I was able to raise $2,000 for the scholarship for a future medical student at the College of Southern Idaho because of the support from many generous businesses, runners and individuals.

A special thank you to Jaime Tighe for her expertise on fun runs and also to CSI for use of the fitness trail. A huge thank you to my family, friends and volunteers who helped make the day a fun morning for all.

I would also like to give one final thanks to the doctors in our community. They help make the race of life a long-lasting marathon, not a short-lived 5K. Thank you.

A Thank You for Cassia Fair Officials

I would like to thank everybody that helped to make the 2011 Cassia County Fair a success:

To the Fair Board Members that asked me to run Open Class; to the County Extension Office that helped me with any questions; to the Superintendents that helped with the entries and judging day and decorated their booths; to the Judges that took time out to come to our fair; to all of the assistants that helped my Superintendents get set up and helped with cleaning; to the public that donated their time to help Guard the buildings; and not least, the public that came and took the time to enjoy looking at the displays and entries that were turned in.

I appreciate the suggestions and comments that I was given on making the Fair better.

If anybody would like to donate time for the 2012 Cassia County Fair in Open Class, please call me at 208-677-2504.

Five Myths About Earthquakes

Earthquakes rattle our psyches as well as our structures. Californians can crack jokes about jumpy East Coast types, but the truth is, our blood pressure also rises precipitously when the Earth suddenly springs to life.

Events such as this past week’s magnitude-5.8 earthquake centered in Virginia offer a good wake-up call: They offer a chance to consider our response and preparedness plans, and to reconsider what we really know and don’t know about earthquakes.

1. Animals sense impending earthquakes.

A golden oldie. The notion that animals sense impending earthquakes predates the birth of Christ, with documented references to unusual animal behavior as early as the 4th century B.C.

This notion could contain a kernel of truth: Being generally squat, four-legged, close to the ground and inclined to sit still, an animal might feel an initial weak shaking that goes unnoticed by humans until stronger waves arrive.

2. The frequency of large-scale earthquakes has spiked.

Susan Hough
The Washington Post

With so many earthquakes in the news recently it seems that the frequency of big temblors is on the rise. Here again, there is an element of truth: Since the magnitude-9.3 Sumatra-Andamans earthquake struck just after Christmas in 2004 and unleashed a tsunami in the Indian Ocean, the Earth has experienced more great quakes, with magnitudes near or above 9.0, than the historical average.

Yet the frequency of tremors across the world always fluctuates considerably from year to year. And the energy released by big earthquakes since the end of 2004 was less than the energy released by the two biggest recorded earthquakes: the 1960 temblor in Chile and the 1964 Good Friday quake in Alaska.

3. Small earthquakes are helpful because they release pressure and prevent larger ones.

The earthquake magnitude scale, introduced by Charles Richter in 1935, is logarithmic, which means that progressively bigger temblors are a lot bigger than smaller quakes. For each unit increase in magnitude (i.e., going from 5.5 to 6.5), the energy released rises by a factor of about 30 — meaning that a two-unit increase translates into a quake that is nearly 1,000 times as severe.

In any given area, the numbers of tremors of different magnitudes almost always follow a simple mathematical progression, with about 10 magnitude-6.0 quakes and about 100 magnitude-5.0 quakes for every single magnitude-7.0 quake. Thus, if there is significant strain energy to be released, it must be released in large earthquakes.

4. “Don’t worry, it was just an aftershock.”

Recent studies show that any earthquake — even an aftershock — has the same small statistical chance of triggering a larger tremor. So a single quake can potentially be an aftershock and a foreshock, further clouding the differences among them.

5. Earthquakes are a West Coast problem.

The West Coast is more seismically active than the mid-continent and east; the San Andreas fault runs nearly the full length of California. To the north, the ocean seafloor sinks beneath the Pacific Northwest, giving rise to the Cascades volcanic range, and occasional huge earthquakes.

But less active does not mean inactive. By the end of the 19th century, two of the most notable temblors in the United States were the 1886 quake in Charleston, S.C., and a sequence of large events centered near the boot-heel along the New Madrid Fault of Missouri in 1811-1812.

Because of the relatively homogenous nature of the Earth’s crust in central and eastern North America, earthquake waves can travel more efficiently there than through the more fractured, hotter crust in the West. So when a quake hits the central or eastern United States, it is likely to inflict greater damage than a California tremor of the same magnitude.

Susan Hough is a seismologist with the U.S. Geological Survey. She wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Saving Salmon Means Saving Jobs

Recently, the Obama administration's plan to restore endangered Columbia and Snake River salmon was declared illegal by U.S. District Judge James Redden in Portland, Ore. The Columbia/Snake was once the most productive salmon watershed on earth; now 13 of its 19 salmon stocks are threatened or endangered by extinction, with total numbers at 1 percent of historic levels.

How the administration responds to the verdict is vital for every West Coast state, but the national stakes are also high — for taxpayers and jobs, for our natural heritage and for the Endangered Species Act. The stakes are rooted in this fact: the largest killer of Columbia and Snake River salmon is the government itself, which owns and operates dams that kill more of the endangered iconic fish than all other human factors combined.

Pat Ford

Judge Redden has now found three consecutive plans illegal, from three administrations over 11 years, because each put protecting status quo operations of federal dams above science and the law. This is no activist judge; he has been patient to a fault through a decade of government law breaking, and has now given the Obama administration an additional two years to develop a legal plan.

But the administration should be shamed by his judgment: “The history of the Federal Defendants’ lack of, or at best, marginal compliance with the procedural and substantive requirements of the (Endangered Species Act) ... has been laid out in prior Opinions and Orders in this case

The largest killer of Columbia and Snake River salmon is the government itself, which owns and operates dams that kill more of the endangered iconic fish than all other human factors combined.

With the Endangered Species Act under persistent assault by many in Congress, it is dispiriting when federal agencies — in this case dam agencies — make violating that law a decade-long policy, and doubly dispiriting when the Obama administration goes along. The public damage ripples far beyond this specific case.

Ditto for jobs. The West Coast’s salmon economy — fishing, food, recreation and tourism jobs — has borne the costs, while the hope its people felt when President Obama took office has been disappointed. Since 2006, salmon businesses have used the Endangered Species Act to protect and create jobs, winning interim salmon measures from Judge Redden that have boosted fish numbers. But the Obama administration, like its predecessor, has opposed these job-creating actions.

The same goes for taxpayers. Over the past decade, Americans have spent about $10 billion implementing flawed salmon plans. This is the largest endangered species program in America; it should be lawful and science-based, so that the public investment is repaid with actual salmon recovery.

Now, thanks to Judge Redden, this past can become a prologue to needed change. President Obama’s team has a second chance to restore salmon and create jobs. First, they can quickly start work under the court’s order with those who won the case — the state of Oregon, the Nez Perce Tribe, and fishing and conservation groups — to build a better plan. The court ordered the new plan to closely examine changes at the federal dams, including removal of four dams on the lower Snake River. Second, they can begin parallel stakeholder talks among fishermen, farmers and energy users on a broader agreement in which job creation is a core goal. Leaders like Oregon Democratic Gov. John Kitzhaber and Idaho Republican Sen. Mike Crapo support a collaborative approach and stand ready to help.

Collaboration is hard work and takes time, but it has succeeded on other tough issues and the court has provided two years. It can accomplish the goal if work starts now. And if the administration brings to the table three basics missing from federal policy to date: real willingness to consider changes at federal dams; a team committed to working with farmers, fishermen and energy users toward solutions; and practical, hands-on politics that turn a Columbia/Snake salmon “problem” into an opportunity for job creation in salmon recovery, clean energy and water use.

Pat Ford is executive director of the Save Our Wild Salmon Coalition, a 20-year collaboration of fishing, business and conservation groups to restore wild salmon for use by people and ecosystems. He wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune News Service.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Disc Golf Club Sponsors Appreciated

A big thank you to Mike Stradley, the Southern Idaho Chuckers and the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department for co-sponsoring the first Junior Disc Golf Club. Mike and the Chuckers did a great job of teaching, encouraging and supporting the kids as they learned the fundamentals of disc golf.

Our family has been involved in several different sports through Parks and Rec, where it is mainly the parents that teach and pass on the skills to the young people. We greatly appreciated the involvement of so many members of the local disc golf club who came and helped out in July. The kids had a great time, made new friends and enjoyed learning this fun sport. We are very fortunate to have so many courses in the Magic Valley to get outside and have fun! We hope to see this on the calendar again next summer!

Kimberly Runners Thank Supporters

The Kimberly Cross Country Team would like to thank Arctic Circle, Cazeau’s Tropical Sno, Fiesta Ole, Hoagie Street Deli, Kimberly Kut and Kurl, and Maxie’s Pizza for sponsoring the “Run 2 the Sun.”

We would like to thank Ridley’s Market and Rock Creek Growers for providing gift certificates. Others that deserve recognition are Suzanne and Jeff Gerard, Denise and Marvin Mumm, Dr. David and Brenda Allen, and Tiffany Unger. Dr. Allen was kind enough to bring his outdoor movie theater, and we enjoyed watching several of our favorite Pixar movies between laps.

We would also like to thank Modern Woodmen for its generosity in matching funs up to $500. We also appreciate the assistance of Mrs. Noh, the Kimberly School Board and the Kimberly maintenance crew.

Thanks to the generosity of family and friends, the 60 participants made more than $1,200 to go toward the purchase of new meet uniforms.

Buffett’s $7 Million Sacrifice Only a Start

Whenever the leadership class feels nervous, you can count on some of them to offer the less-moneyed masses a bone to demonstrate they care. Warren Buffett says his idea of “shared sacrifice” is higher taxes on the super-rich. Only for him, this wouldn’t cost much.

In a New York Times op-ed last week, the Berkshire Hathaway Inc. chief executive officer said his federal-tax bill for 2010 was about $6.9 million, just 17 percent of his taxable income. The other 20 people in his office paid an average rate of 36 percent, he said. If only he had been taxed another $7 million or so, that would bring him closer to being even-steven with the rest of us, Buffett seemed to suggest. It’s a nice gesture, perhaps, although for a guy whose stake in Berkshire is valued at $37 billion, this wouldn’t be much to give up.

Want to see what true shared sacrifice looks like? Read the epilogue of Michael Perino’s book, The Hellhound of Wall Street, about the Senate Banking Committee’s 1933 hearings on the great Wall Street crash, led by Ferdinand Pecora, the committee’s chief counsel.

Perino, a St. John’s University law professor, recounted a March 1933 newspaper column by the famed journalist Walter Lippmann, who wrote that the relentless congressional unmasking of bankers’ misdeeds was clearly in the public interest even though the revelations exacerbated the banking crisis. Thousands of banks failed during the hearings, and millions of Americans lost their money. This was before the days of government-backed deposit insurance.

“It is, of course, true that the exposure accelerated the banking crisis by adding to the popular distrust of banks,” Lippmann wrote. “But the exposure has proved to be a good thing, not merely in the general sense that wrongs should always be exposed whatever the consequences, but in the specific sense that the way has been opened to a more thorough-going reconstruction.”

“The crisis has not only made it possible for the administration to reform the banking system drastically, but it has produced, or at least brought into the open, a recognition of evils and a desire for a reform within the banking community itself.”

Man Charged With Involuntary Manslaughter in Boating Death

BY KATY MOELLER
Idaho Statesman

An Emmett man who took a group of friends fishing late one night in June has been charged in connection with the death of a 2-year-old child who was aboard, according to the Washington County Prosecutor's Office.

Andrew Pevler was indicted by a grand jury Aug. 18 on one count of felony involuntary manslaughter in the death of Emma Hooper. A warrant was issued for his arrest that day, and bond was initially set at $100,000, according to court records.

Pevler was arraigned Monday, and bond was reduced to $25,000. He bonded out of jail on Tuesday.

Emma and her father, Ryker Hooper, 20, were swept into the Snake River during a fishing trip the night of June 3. Ryker Hooper also died.

Idaho state law requires that children 14 and under riding in any water vessel less than 19-foot long wear approved personal flotation devices. The law also requires that personal flotation devices be available on board for each adult.

The captain is responsible for making sure the rules are followed.

The Hoopers and their friends were riding in a 14-foot aluminum motor boat with no life jackets aboard for the three men, Sgt. Sam Edwards told the Idaho Statesman in June.

Emma Hooper was wearing a flotation vest of some sort, but it was not a Coast Guard-approved vest.

"It was tagged 'not to be used as a flotation device,'" Edwards said.

The men admitted to drinking "one or two beers" before going out on the water, and investigators recovered a small cooler with some unopened cans of beer. The results of blood toxicology tests have not come back.

It is not illegal to drink alcohol and operate a boat, but it is illegal to operate a boat with a blood alcohol level above .08.

The names of the two men with the Hoopers, both in their early 20s, were not initially released. One of the men — now known to be Pevler — had borrowed the boat from a friend; but as the operator, he'd be considered the captain and responsible for the safety equipment, Edwards said.

The group was fishing after 10 p.m. near Steck Park Recreation Area, about 20 miles northwest of Weiser. Washington County Sheriff Marvin Williams said many people in the area fish for catfish.

It's common for anglers to be out on the Snake River late at night and into the wee hours of the morning. But it's not common for local anglers to be as unprepared as this group, Edwards said.

Investigators said Pevler had someone on the boat drop anchor in a swift section of the river. After the anchor caught, the current was so strong it pulled the bow of the boat into the water.

CHURCH NEWS

Churches Hold Joint Outdoor Worship

The First Presbyterian Church, Episcopal Church of the Ascension and Our Savior Lutheran Church of Twin Falls will hold an outdoor worship service at 11 a.m. Sunday at Centennial Park.

A picnic will follow worship. The churches will provide chicken and drinks. Please bring your own table service and chairs. Bring a dish to share — last names beginning with A through G, a side dish; H through O, a salad; and P through Z, a dessert.

Everyone is invited. Information: Episcopal Ascension, 733-1248; First Presbyterian, 733-7023; or Our Savior Lutheran Church, 733-3774.

Unitarian Universalists Welcome New Pastor

The Rev. Suzanne M. Marsh will lead her first service at the Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship at 10 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W. All are welcome.

The Magic Valley and Pocatello fellowships have pooled their resources to hire Marsh to serve both congregations.

Marsh comes to Idaho from Harrisburg, Pa., where she served a Unitarian Universalist church for two years. She also served as the Community Ministry Intern at the Unitarian Universalist Legislative Ministry of California and had a 23-year career as a certified public accountant. She graduated from the Pacific School of Religion with a master's degree in divinity in 2007. She can be reached at revsuzannem@yahoo.com.

Unitarian Universalism is a non-creedal faith. Read more about it at uua.org. Information: mvuuu.org.

Speaker Discusses Jail Ministry

John Doherty will be the worship speaker at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Church on a Mission. He will discuss his ministry to those incarcerated at the Twin Falls County Jail.

Church on a Mission meets at Heritage Assisted Living, 622 Filer Ave. W. in Twin Falls. Information: 733-8332.

Grace Alliance Church Offers Special Meetings

While many are the promises of God, it seems laying hold of those promises is a difficult and complex mystery. Yet God says he changes not and is no respecter of persons. What he has done for one, he'll do for all. Yet the church has made it complicated or written it off as for yesterday. God promises a church that is powerful to bring hope to this troubled world. God wants to use you and you will be surprised when you find out who you are in him. There are answers to all our questions.

Grace Alliance Church, 214 Main in Filer, will hold special meetings at 7 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday to answer these questions. Information: 326-2424.

Valley Christian Holds Outdoor Revival

Valley Christian Church will hold an outdoor revival service at 11 a.m. Sunday on the northeast lawn at 1708 Heyburn Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Seating will be provided but also feel free to bring a blanket or your own lawn chair. All are welcome. Information: 733-3222.

Methodist Church Honors College-bound Members

The First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E. in Twin Falls, will hold a reception at 11:15 a.m. Sunday to honor Molly Breland, nursery attendant, and Emily Dixon, church organist, who are leaving to attend college.

Information: 733-5873 or www.tffumc.com.

Baptists Offer Community Barbecue

The Paul Baptist Church, 25 N. Fourth E., will hold a free community barbecue at 1 p.m. Sunday to welcome its new pastor, Warren Rachele, and his wife, Jong Ok.

The event promises fun for the kids and some surprises, too.

Worship starts at 10:45 a.m.

Heyburn Church Serves Monthly Supper

The Heyburn Seventh-day Adventist Church will serve its monthly free supper at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The menu includes fresh corn-on-the-cob, salad and melon. There is no cost or obligation.

Everyone is invited. Information: Jerry at 670-8402 or Barbara at 650-0592.

Christian Apologist Speaks in Twin Falls

"The Errors of the Emergent Church" and "Universalism: Is Everyone Already Saved?" will be presented by Christian apologist Eric Barger during meetings at 7 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday at the Cain's Outlet Warehouse building, 229 Second Ave. W. (half block from Donnelly Sports) in Twin Falls.

Admission is free; the public is welcome. Information: www.ericbarger.com or call 734-5754.

First Assembly of God Welcomes New Pastor

First Assembly of God in Twin Falls on Sunday will welcome the Rev. Paul B. West as Lead Pastor.

West graduated from Northwest University in 2000 and received his Certificate of Ordination in 2006 from the Oregon District of the Assemblies of God. During the morning service at 10:35 a.m., he will begin a series of messages on "It's all about Love," and the evening service at 6 p.m. will feature a series of sermons on "Turning Conflict into Cooperation."

West and his wife, Holly, will begin the Home Builders marriage and family ministry at 7 p.m. on Sept. 7 with a series of teachings on "Divorce Proofing your Marriage". The public is invited to attend at 189 Locust St. N.

Gooding Church Hosts Dave Ramsey Course

The Desert Hills Community Church, 129 Sixth Ave. W. in Gooding, will offer Dave Ramsey's "Financial Peace University" beginning Sept. 14. Class starts at 6 p.m.

Financial Peace University is a total money makeover program. It takes knowledge from God and turns it into real action in people's lives through a step-by-step process taught by best-selling author and financial counselor Dave Ramsey. The 13-week life-changing program empowers and teaches people how to make the right money decisions to achieve their financial goals and God's plan for their lives. The course includes practical lessons on eliminating debt, building wealth, giving like never before and much more.

The course is for everyone, whether individual or married. Child care will be available.

Cost is $99. Registration deadline is Sept. 4. To register or for more information: 934-4543.

MISSIONARIES

Elder Bryce Clark Allan

Allan

has been called to serve a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Iowa Des Moines Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 15th Ward Chapel, 680 Hankins Road N.

Allan graduated from Twin Falls High School in 2010 and attended the College of Southern Idaho for a year. He was active in the music program in high school and a member of the Concert Choir and Madrigals at CSI. He has received his Eagle Scout and Duty to God awards. His parents are Scott and Catherine Allan of Twin Falls.

Elder Joshua Dean Johnson

has been called to serve a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Paraguay Asuncion North Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the Springdale 1st Ward Chapel, 475 E. 200 S. of Burley, and will enter the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, on Sept. 7.

Johnson is the son of Dean and Kay Johnson of Burley and a 2010 graduate of Declo High School.

YOUNG WOMANHOOD RECOGNITION AWARDS

Six girls in the Twin Falls LDS 12th Ward have received their Young Womanhood Recognition awards through the Young Women's program of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To earn the award, girls ages 12 to 18 set goals in eight value areas — faith, divine nature, individual worth, knowledge, choice and accountability, good works, integrity and value — and strive to achieve them through church and community service projects.

Awards were presented to:

Hailey Wilcox, 14, is the daughter of David and Sharla Wilcox. Some of her projects were learning to make pies, sewing 400 white hair scrunchies for the LDS Temple and Indexing for FamilySearch.org. She is a freshman at Canyon Ridge High School.

Audrey Jensen, 16, is the daughter of Blake and Andrea Jensen. Some of her projects were making a collection of faith-building stories from ancestors,

Kelsi King, 15, is the daughter of Dan and Tammy King. Some of her projects were being a part of the Youth Cultural Celebration, playing high school basketball and reading the Book of Mormon. She is a sophomore at Canyon Ridge High School.

Chelsea O'Neal, 16, is the daughter of Trevor and Jennifer O'Neal. Some of her projects were helping with a food drive, making a cookbook and being a youth leader at girl's camp. She is a senior at Canyon Ridge High School.

Alyssa Jolley, 15, is the daughter of Ed and Christine Jolley. Some of her projects were making a collection of faith-building stories from family members, helping with Relay For Life and sending packages to servicemen overseas. She is a sophomore at Xavier Charter School.

McKay Beard, 16, is the daughter of Jason and Lynn Beard. Some of her projects were writing an original song, working on personal fitness and learning how to manage food and cook food. She is a junior at Canyon Ridge High School.

RELIGION LETTER

Mormons Don't Believe Bible is Only Source for God's Word

This letter is in response to the commentary, "Five Myths About Mormonism."

I often wonder why it is important to Mormons to be considered Christians when they so obviously aren't. The writer in her Point 2 says Mormons pray to Jesus and follow his teachings. The problem is that Christians believe that the Bible is the only source of the word of God and the Bible teaches us that we are forbidden from adding to or subtracting from its words. The Bible tells us that we are saved purely by faith in Jesus as our Savior.

As followers of the Book of Mormon, Mormons do not view the Bible as the only source of God's word. The Book of Mormon has teachings that contradict the Bible. In addition to faith, Mormons also believe it takes good works to earn one's way to heaven. Therefore, it is self-evident that Christianity and Mormonism are two separate religions. There is no resolving the differences between them.

St. Luke's

You can enjoy nuts in a variety of ways, roasted by themselves, in nut butter or in your favorite recipes. Remember that nut butters are most beneficial as a natural butter, freshly ground, or without added fats or sugars.

Studies show that people who eat nuts in moderation do not weigh more than those who do not eat nuts. Why? Nuts make you feel satisfied, they have a nice crunch, they are a fat/fiber food which helps your stomach stay "full" and they contain nearly zero water content.

Over the years, nuts have gotten a bad rap, but eaten in moderation, provide a wonderful source of protein, unsaturated fats, antioxidants and they taste good!

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

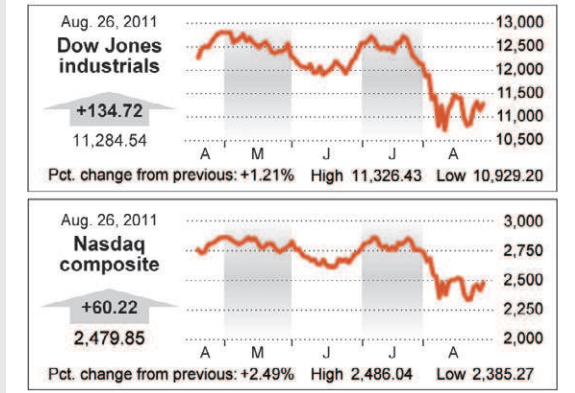

How the Stock Indexes Fared Friday

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks closed the week with a gain after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said the U.S. is headed for long-term economic growth. Bernanke did not announce any new economic stimulus measures during his speech, as some investors had hoped. He left open the possibility of more action if another recession seems likely.

The Dow rose 134.72 points, or 1.2 percent, to 11,284.54.

The S&P 500 index rose 17.53, or 1.5 percent, to 1,176.80.

The Nasdaq rose 60.22, or 2.5 percent, to 2,479.85.

Jobs Leaves Deputies to Extend Legacy

Departing Apple chief executive officer Steve Jobs leaves the company he co-founded in the hands of deputies who will have to prove they can keep building best.

Apple's next set of challenges includes expansion in China, the release of new versions of the iPhone and iPad tablet, and the introduction of an online service that lets customers store music and information across a broad range of Apple devices.

Chief Operating Officer Tim Cook, who succeeds Jobs as CEO, will lead executives responsible for designing the next generation of Apple electronics.

Generators, Batteries Big Sellers Ahead of Irene

BY MAE ANDERSON
AP Retail Writer

NEW YORK • It's the not-so-quiet before the storm.

Hurricane Irene hasn't hit the East Coast yet, but people up and down the Eastern Seaboard already are crowding hardware stores, grocers and big-box retailers like Home Depot and WalMart to pick up $599 generators, bottled water and flashlights in preparation for the hurricane, which is expected to make landfall by Saturday.

At Ace Hardware in Elizabeth City, N.C., near where the hurricane is expected to land, business on Thursday was triple what it is normally on that day. With the lines at Home Depot in Kitty Hawk, N.C., you would think the store was having a big sale. And an Ace Hardware in Nags Head, N.C., sold out of portable generators on Thursday.

"It's always like this just before a storm," said John

Robbins, an employee at the Nags Head store. "With everyone saying this is going to be a bad one, no one is leaving anything to chance."

Some retailers are getting a boost in business, but extreme weather like earthquakes and hurricanes are damaging to the retail sector as a whole. And this one is coming in the thick of the critical back-to-school shopping weekend, a time when some merchants make up to 25 percent of their annual revenue. In fact, weather research firm Planalytics estimates that Irene will stop 80 million shoppers from hitting the malls this weekend. At the same time, demand for hurricane-related supplies is giving some retailers a boost that's expected to continue as people deal with the cleanup in its aftermath.

"It's unlike anything we've seen in the modern era," said Scott Bernhardt, Planalytics COO.

Financial Peace University Sessions Coming to Magic Valley

Bernanke Warns That Political Warfare Over Economic Policy Jeopardizes Recovery

BY DON LEE
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON • Federal Reserve Chairman Ben S. Bernanke, while insisting that the long-term U.S. economic prospects remain good, took aim at Washington policymakers for causing upheaval in financial markets and failing to do their part in bolstering the flagging recovery.

Bernanke did not rule out new action by the central bank to stimulate growth, but he emphasized that the Fed could only do so much by manipulating interest rates and other monetary policy. And, in a much-anticipated speech Friday, he virtually goaded the White House and Congress to do more to create jobs and strengthen the economy using fiscal policy — which would encompass federal spending, tax cuts and other such measures.

While it is important to reduce the nation's deficits over time, he said — in usually blunt language for a central bank leader — it would be a mistake to "disregard the fragility of the current economic recovery" and create "fiscal headwinds," a reference to short-term spending cuts at a time of immediate economic needs.

Bernanke's speech was taken by some analysts as a sign that the Fed was prepared to provide new monetary stimulus, possibly as early as its next policymaking meeting in late September.

"He basically punted until then," said Cornelius Hurley, a Boston University professor and a former assistant general counsel at the Fed.

Rep. Brad Sherman, D-Calif., said Bernanke would probably have to take some action because no major fiscal stimulus was likely to come out of the deeply divided Congress and a "political system that is mostly broken."

Hot Springs

Thousand Springs Resort

18734 U.S. Highway 30, Hagerman

Thousand Springs is another great pick for families. The covered pool lets visitors swim through any kind of weather, while adults can relax in private hot tubs and jacuzzis. A masseuse is available by appointment, employee Tisa Babington said, and the resort is adding a tanning bed soon. It also has cabins for overnights.

Cost: Pool admission is $3 for ages 1-5; $6 for ages 6-17; $7 for ages 18-64; and $3 for 65 and older. Private hot tubs are $8 per person per hour, and private jacuzzis are $9 per person per hour, and those prices include access to the main pool.

Hours: 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, and noon to 8 p.m. Sundays. After Labor Day, hours will change to 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, and noon to 8 p.m. Sundays.

Season: Year-round.

Information: 837-4987.

Miracle Hot Springs

19073 U.S. Highway 30, Buhl

This is another good choice for private pools.

Miracle Hot Springs features 15 private hot tubs, plus four VIP pools for larger groups. The big outdoor pool stays open when it's cold, so you can enjoy the hot water even as snow is falling. Call ahead and schedule an appointment with the masseuse, or consider spending the night in one of the canvas-covered domes.

Watch for a remodeling in the next few months, said employee Jim House. "We're adding another full-size pool and a couple more private pools," he said, as well as showers and more bathrooms.

This swimming spot took second place in the Readers' Choice voting.

Cost: Pool admission is $1 for children younger than 4; $4 for ages 4-13; $9 for adults; and $7 for seniors. Private pools are an additional $2 per group for one hour, and $4 for each half-hour after that. VIP pools are $6 per group for one hour, and $6 for each additional half-hour. Private pools are available only to customers 19 and older.

Hours: 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Season: Year-round.

Information: 543-6002.

"Purchasing and wearing fine jewelry is a status symbol," Maldonado said. "Costume jewelry is fun and about expressing who you are and how you feel."

Gooding 22-year-old Lauren McCabe relishes mixing classic costume jewelry from the '40s and '50s with contemporary pieces. From her grandmother's jewelry box to yard sales, McCabe said it's easy to find jewelry that fits her personality.

"During the Great Depression, they couldn't afford gemstones, and costume jewelry was kind of a godsend," McCabe said. "Regardless, you still want to look good, and that holds true today."

It's difficult to slap a label on what's in style, Maldonado said, although earthy tones and textures are in demand.

"Bird feathers are huge right now, and that style is rubbing off on other accessories," she said.

When the pieces are so cheap — many sell for $10 or less — stocking up on strands of beads and chunky bracelets is easy.

Even custom costume jewelry is popular.

Poll: GOP Voters Feel Better About Prez Choices

BY KASIE HUNT and JENNIFER AGIESTA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Republicans party elders are still grousing about the GOP choices for president — but the voters who will choose the nominee are growing more satisfied with the possibilities with Texas Gov. Rick Perry now in the race.

Party leaders have been looking for a new contender who is strong enough to take on President Barack Obama. As recently as this week, New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan and former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush — again — insisted they weren't running for president despite urging from supporters.

But an Associated Press-GfK poll released Friday found that Republicans and Republican-leaning independents are coming around to the choices already on the table: About two-thirds are pleased with the party's presidential field, compared with just half in June. And they're paying more attention, with 52 percent expressing a "great deal" of interest in the GOP nomination fight — compared with 39 percent earlier this summer — after a period that saw Perry enter the race and Michele Bachmann win a test vote in Iowa, the lead-off caucus state, threatening Mitt Romney's standing at the top of the pack.

The poll shows Perry, who has never run a national campaign and is just now introducing himself to most people, benefiting from wall-to-wall news coverage over the past few weeks as he became a candidate and jostled the until-then sleepy contest. Just 12 percent of Republicans and GOP-leaning independents have a negative impression of the Texas governor. And 63 percent of Republicans view him in a positive light, compared with 33 percent in June.

Beyond that, Republicans didn't change their impressions much about Romney. Nearly 2 in 3 still view the former Massachusetts governor positively, while just under a quarter see him negatively as he runs a cautious, methodical campaign that's facing its first true test in Perry.

CUBAN MAN PROUD OF 4 EXTRA DIGITS

BARACOA, Cuba • They call him "Twenty-Four." Yoandri Hernandez Garrido's nickname comes from the six perfectly formed fingers on each of his hands and the six impeccable toes on each foot. Hernandez is proud of his extra digits and calls them a blessing, saying they set him apart and enable him to make a living by scrambling up palm trees to cut coconuts and posing for photographs in this eastern Cuban city popular with tourists. One traveler paid $10 for a picture with him, Hernandez said, a bonanza in a country with an average salary of $20 a month. "It's thanks to my 24 digits that I'm able to make a living, because I have no fixed job," Hernandez said. Known as polydactyly, Hernandez's condition is relatively common, but it's rare for the extra digits to be so perfect.

Casino Fire Shocks Mexico

An angry President Felipe Calderon declares three days of mourning and labels attack that killed 52 in Monterrey the worst against civilians in the nation's recent history.

BY KATHERINE CORCORAN
Associated Press

MONTERREY, Mexico • Mexicans have endured plenty of horrific crimes during their country's bloody five-year war against drug gangs: bodies hanging from overpasses, beheadings, mass slayings of migrants and gunfights on crowded streets. The torching of the casino that killed at least 52 people on Thursday, however, was a shocking new low for many. In a nationally televised speech, an angry President Felipe Calderon declared three days of mourning on Friday and labeled the attack on the Casino Royale in Monterrey the worst against civilians in the nation's recent history. "We are not confronting common criminals," he said. "We are facing true terror - ists who have gone beyond all limits." The attack was different than others in recent years in that the victims weren't cartel foot soldiers or migrants resisting forced recruitment by gangs. They were part of the middle class, working or gambling in an affluent part of a city that was once considered one of Mexico's safest. "The media impact that this has is greater, because we're talking about an attack on a civilian population of a certain income," said Jorge Chabat, an expert in safety and drug trafficking at the Please see CASINO ATTACK, N2

Apparent extrajudicial killings cast dark shadow over Libya's newfound freedom and call into question whether the rebels will break with Gadhafi's blood-soaked style of governance or merely mimic it.

BY SIMON DENYER

TRIPOLI, Libya • Evidence emerged Friday that Col. Moammar Gadhafi's retreating forces executed scores or even hundreds of political prisoners this week, even as victorious rebel fighters appear to have carried out their own abuses. Survivors of an attack by pro-

Gadhafi troops said they had watched as fellow prisoners were mowed down by machine-gun fire, minutes after being told they were free. But Gadhafi loyalists were also targets of apparent extrajudicial killings. Those deaths have cast a dark shadow over Libya's newfound freedom and call into question whether the rebels will break with Gadhafi's blood-soaked style of governance or merely mimic it. "In Tripoli, we are seeing the same pattern in recent days that we saw earlier in the east," said Diana Eltahawy, Libya researcher for Amnesty International. Perry Bills Feds for Housing Illegals

BY APRIL CASTRO
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas • Texas Gov. Rick Perry has asked the U.S. Department of Homeland Security for nearly $350 million to cover the costs incurred detaining illegal immigrants in state prisons and county jails.

In a letter to Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, Perry criticized the federal government hasn't been doing enough to secure the border with Mexico, thereby allowing illegal immigrants to enter the U.S. and use taxpayer-funded resources, including prisons and jails.

Perry

The letter was dated Aug. 10, three days before Perry formally announced he is running for president. Reached after-hours Friday by phone, DHS spokesman Matthew Chandler said he wasn't in position to comment and said he could not confirm that the DHS had even received the letter. Perry has been criticized by some fellow conservatives as being too lenient on illegal immigration issues. Unlike fellow GOP presidential hopeful Rep. Michele Bachmann, Perry does not think the U.S. should build a wall spanning the entire Mexican border. Perry also has supported discounted tuition rates for the children of illegal immigrants at Texas universities, and he has said Arizona's tough-on-immigration law wouldn't be right for Texas. In his two-page letter to Napolitano, Perry described the formula he used to determine the costs, including $94.4 million to cover the costs incurred by county jails. "During tough economic times, when communities are making difficult decisions about their own budgets, Texas counties are being asked to cover more than $94.4 million in direct costs related to housing illegal immigrants while the state has been left to cover Please see PERRY, N2

Car Bombing Kills 18 at U.N. Offices in Nigeria

ABUJA, Nigeria (AP) • A car loaded with explosives crashed into the main United Nations' building in Nigeria's capital and exploded Friday, killing at least 18 people in one of the deadliest assaults on the international body in a decade. A radical Muslim sect blamed for a series of attacks in the country claimed responsibility for the bombing, a major escalation of its sectarian fight against Nigeria's weak central government.

The brazen assault in a neighborhood surrounded by heavily fortified diplomatic posts represented the first suicide attack to target foreigners in oil-rich Nigeria, where people already live in fear of the radical Boko Haram sect. The group, which has reported links to al-Qaida, wants to implement a strict version of Shariah law in the nation and is vehemently opposed to Western education and culture.

Until now, police officers and local officials have primarily borne the brunt of Boko Haram's rage. "It is an attack on the global community," said Viola Onwuliri, a junior Nigerian foreign minister, as she looked at the bomb site. A sedan loaded with explosives crashed through two gates at the exit of the United Nations compound Friday morning as guards tried in vain to stop it, witnesses told The AP. The suicide bomber inside drove the car through the glass front of the main reception area of the building and detonated the explosives, inflicting the most damage possible, a spokesman for the Nigerian National Emergency Management Agency said.

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla. • Republican presidential candidate Michele Bachmann said Friday she wouldn't rule out changes to the federal minimum wage as a way to lower the cost of doing business and lure corporations back to the United States.

The Minnesota congresswoman told supporters at a packed sandwich shop that the corporate income tax needs to be reduced because companies are moving to other countries to save money. She was later asked by a reporter whether changes to the minimum wage should also be considered to balance the cost of labor here and overseas.

"I'm not married to anything. I'm not saying that's where I'm going to go," she said.

She did say she wants to look at all aspects of doing business, from regulations to tax codes, and will consider anything that will help create jobs. The federal minimum wage is $7.25 an hour.

"I want to bring advisers in from labor and from manufacturers and from the service industry and financial services. I want to know what they know, because that's what we've been missing from President Obama. He has virtually no one in his Cabinet with private sector experience," Bachmann said. "I want to bring people who know how to create jobs into my administration."

The stop at Angie's Subs was the first in a three-day tour of Florida, a state that's hoping to play a major role in the primary. With 29 electoral votes, it also is the largest prize among the states that neither party can take for granted in the 2012 general election.

Judge Blocks Facebook Limits for Teachers

ST. LOUIS (MCT) • A new law restricting Internet communications between Missouri teachers and students on sites such as Facebook was derailed by a judge Friday, just two days before taking effect.

Calling it a "staggering" prohibition of free speech, Cole County Circuit Judge Jon Beitem issued a preliminary injunction putting a provision of the law on hold until at least February.

Hours later, Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon vowed he would seek an overhaul of the part of the law that has prompted concern and confusion among teachers for the past several weeks, despite passing unanimously earlier this year.

more than $254.8 million in such costs."

He included a memo from Comptroller Susan Combs in which she supports his calculations but warns that the estimates are conservative.

"The longstanding failure of the federal government to secure our border with Mexico continues to burden local communities and resources in Texas," Perry wrote. "Because there are not enough troops on the ground, illegal immigrants are able to penetrate the Texas border every day and use taxpayer-funded resources."

As governor, Perry was one of the first to talk about immigration by breaking out the issue of border security, a move that has won him support from conservative Hispanics. But he angered Hispanic leaders in June by endorsing legislation that would have prohibited cities from adopting "sanctuary" rules for handling suspected immigrants.

Republicans

Bachmann, the Minnesota congresswoman who won the Iowa straw poll, got roughly the same marks as Romney now that she's boosted her national profile. Both her positive and negative ratings rose in the two months since she entered the contest and became better known.

Broadly, the results suggest that Republicans are coming around to the idea that there may be a winner in the bunch after being less than enthusiastic for months.

Sarah Palin, the GOP's 2008 vice presidential nominee, says she'll announce in late September whether she will run.

Stay-at-home mom Jennifer Bevington of Toledo, Ohio, is among those Republicans who like what they see, saying: "Out of the top three — Michele Bachmann, Perry and Romney — of who's running, they should be able to come up with a good candidate."

Mary Parish of Troy, Tenn., had doubted for months that any of the candidates in the field were strong enough to run the country or topple

Obama. Now, the retired convenience store manager says: "I like Rick Perry. I think he's a Christian, a good Christian person. I like what he stands for, and I think he's strong enough to beat Obama."

Still, while Republicans like them are warming up to the field, the overall population still has significant doubts and is largely unimpressed, which could bode well for Obama come the general election.

Just 41 percent of all those surveyed expressed satisfaction with the official and unofficial GOP candidates, about the same as in June. Among certain or possible presidential contenders, only Rudy Giuliani, the former New York mayor toying with a candidacy, gets significantly higher favorable marks than unfavorable ones.

And no Republican candidate — declared or otherwise — is viewed favorably by a majority of people.

This GOP field has been remarkably slow to form as Republicans look to challenge a politically vulnerable Democratic incumbent saddled with high unemployment, rampant foreclosures and soaring debt.

Casino Attack

Center for Research and Teaching in Economics. "Because who was there was from the middle class, the upper middle class of an important city in Mexico."

As the country took in the grisly details of the attack, some said a new, macabre milestone had been reached in a conflict that's claimed nearly 40,000 people since Calderon launched his drug offensive in December 2006. Calderon urged his people to unite against the cartels.

"Today, Mexico is upset and saddened and we have to transform this sadness and this grief into courage and valor to face ... these criminals," said Calderon, who did not say whether his government would alter its offensive against the cartels.

Calderon announced he is sending more federal forces to the city of 1 million people.

Hours later, he appeared in front of the burned-out casino and held a silent, minute-long vigil.

A surveillance tape showed eight or nine men arriving in four cars at the casino and setting fire to the building within minutes. The gunmen had ordered people to leave before setting the fire, but many fled further inside.

Officials said they likely died quickly, the majority from smoke inhalation.

In the streets around the casino on Friday, people said the latest violence deepened their sense of vulnerability. In recent years, the city has been ensnared in a turf battle between the Gulf cartel and its offshoot, the Zetas, and is on track for record levels of killings this year.

The casino was attacked twice before. In May, gunmen strafed it from the outside. Last month, gunmen killed 20 people at a bar.

"What happened last night was the limit," said a man nursing a Coke at a hamburger stand across from the city's morgue, where families streamed in all night to identify bodies. Like many people, he refused to give his name out of fear.

"We don't know how to protect ourselves or whom we're talking to," he said. "We don't have security right now."

The attack has resonated in Mexico because many of the victims were from the middle class, so far mostly untouched by violence, Chabat said.

Other attacks have claimed more victims — a mass grave uncovered last year had the bodies of 72 migrants — but the beatings, dismemberings and other everyday horrors have mostly touched people in lower economic classes, Chabat said.

Thirty-five of the casino victims were women and 10 men, authorities said, an indication at the popularity of the games among women who came to play bingo or slots in the afternoons. The gender of the other seven couldn't be determined.

Civil protection and the state Attorney General's Office are investigating whether the casino had adequate safety measures and emergency exits. There were conflicting accounts from survivors that exit doors to the parking area were locked.

over the country.

In the wreckage of a Tripoli fire station and field hospital on Friday, five fighters loyal to Gadhafi lay in agony and blood, apparently left to die by their vanquishers. They had been without food, water or medical attention for two days.

Rebel fighters patrolling the compound knew the men were there, but scarcely seemed to care. "We would take them to the hospital, but there are no hospitals," said Salah Mansour, a law school graduate and shopkeeper dressed in a Liverpool soccer shirt. "There are no cars to take them," he added, as a taxi cruised by.

A few minutes' drive from the fire station, at least 15 bodies, most of them Gadhafi's black African supporters, lay rotting in the sun at a traffic junction outside his Bab al-Aziziyah complex. Several of the dead wore green pieces of cloth wrapped around their wrists to signal loyalty to the Gadhafi regime.

The men may have died during Tuesday's battle for Bab al-Aziziyah, and several were wearing military fatigues. But not all of them looked like ordinary battlefield deaths. Two dead men lay face down on the grass, their hands bound behind their backs with plastic cuffs.

This is the one you've been looking for!
With over 2400 square foot, 5 bedrooms, 3 baths, a great family room with a wood fireplace and bar for entertaining, you will fall in love with this house. Located on in a great neighborhood west of CSI makes it centrally available to all shopping with in 10 mins. This house will not last long!

Today is Saturday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 2011.
There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 27, 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up; the resulting tidal waves in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1776, the Battle of Long Island began during the Revolutionary War as British troops attacked American forces, who ended up being forced to retreat two days later.

In 1859, Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States, at Titusville, Pa.

In 1908, Lyndon Baines Johnson, the 36th president of the United States, was born near Stonewall, Texas.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact was signed in Paris, outlawing war and providing for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

In 1939, the first turbo-jet-powered aircraft, the Heinkel He 178, went on its first full-fledged test flight over Germany.

In 1949, a violent white mob prevented an outdoor concert headlined by Paul Robeson from taking place near Peekskill, N.Y. (The concert was held eight days later.)

In 1957, the USS Swordfish, the second Skate Class nuclear submarine, was launched from the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Maine.

In 1962, the United States launched the Mariner 2 space probe, which flew past Venus in Dec. 1962.

In 1979, British war hero Lord Louis Mountbatten and three other people, including his 14-year-old grandson Nicholas, were killed off the coast of Ireland in a boat explosion claimed by the Irish Republican Army.

In 1989, the first U.S. commercial satellite rocket was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. — a Delta booster carrying a British communications satellite, the Marcopolo 1.

Ten years ago: Israeli helicopters fired a pair of rockets through office windows and killed senior PLO leader Mustafa Zibri. Peru's Congress voted to lift the constitutional immunity of former President Alberto Fujimori, so that prosecutors could charge him with crimes against humanity. (Fujimori, who had fled to Japan, was extradited to Peru from Chile in 2007 and was later tried and convicted; he is serving a 25-year prison sentence.)

Five years ago: A Comair CRJ-100 crashed after trying to take off from the wrong runway in Lexington, Ky., killing 49 people and leaving the co-pilot the sole survivor. Two Fox News journalists, Steve Centanni and cameraman Olaf Wiig, were freed by militants nearly two weeks after being kidnapped in Gaza City. The action series "24" won Emmys for best drama series and best actor for Kiefer Sutherland; "The Office" was honored as best comedy.

IF AUGUST 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You could be looking for love in all the right places. Between now and mid November, you might crave to have a special someone who lights up your life. Alternatively, you might be looking for a home away from home in the way of a new job or career. Opportunities to get just what you need most and to have your prayers answered could appear in the middle of November. Your judgment is better than usual about people, plans and about the future. The first half of February could mark a favorable turning point when you make a wise decision that seems on the surface to be a mere whim, and it will prove rewarding even though it could cause some minor disruptions.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The tougher the challenge, the greater the satisfaction. Tackle any project that requires precision and an eye for detail. Social affairs may prove disappointing or require too much tact and diplomacy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): No pain, no gain. You may have been feeling guilty or awkward lately, but you can improve your confidence immensely by working to improve your body through diet or exercise. Be tough on yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't count on Lady Luck helping you win the lottery if you haven't purchased a ticket. Your safest bet is not to bet at all, as the chips are unlikely to fall in your favor. Companions may be intense about finances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cupid might take aim at your heart. Romance moves to the forefront as a special someone gets wrapped around your little finger. Existing relationships can prosper but new romances may be fleeting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A rolling stone gathers no moss. Physical activity is the key to keeping body and soul together. Find a release for pent-up energy by taking a bike ride, shooting some hoops or taking care of nagging household tasks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refuse an offer that you can't refuse. You've managed to survive this long without a particular item and can continue without it in the future. Focus your energies on getting much-needed exercise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't set the bar too high. If your expectations are too high, others may lag behind. Keep everyone appeased by finding a happy medium. Romantic encounters may seem more about lust than love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Expect the unexpected. A skeleton from your closet may pop up to throw a monkeywrench into your plans today. Don't try to rekindle old flames or you may relive the mistakes of the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even baseball's top hitters don't always knock one out of the park. Don't let a setback discourage you from moving forward. If things didn't go your way this time, just step up to the plate and try again.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cleanliness is next to godliness. Make your household divine by getting things neat and tidy. You've put chores off for too long; take time to set things straight. Social outings could be top priority.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Those who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. Even if you are absolutely right, criticizing others for their shortcomings only invites the same treatment on yourself. Relax; live and let live.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay out of the spotlight. You'd do well to avoid the tensions rising among your inner circle and go off on your own for the week-end. Save all important decision-making and changes until next week.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*“What mischief cleaves to unsubdued regret,
How fancy sickens by vague hopes beset.”*
— William Wordsworth

As a recent Cavendish Pairs demonstrated, light opening bids sometimes backfire; and if ever there was a reason not to open light, this deal demonstrates it. When one South passed initially, a transfer bid got North to four spades, and he wrapped up his game on a club lead. From the North seat there is no lead that can put the game in jeopardy.

By contrast, both Geir Helgemo and Fred Stewart opened the South hand, the one fueled by youthful exuberance, the other by a strong club system. After a game-forcing trump raise, both played four spades on a diamond lead to East's jack. It looks natural for the defenders to play clubs now, but as you can see, that would deprive them of their second diamond trick. In fact both Easts at their respective tables (Alain Levy and Roy Welland) found the devastating trump shift. Declarer took his ace, but had lost his hand entry. He tried the club king, but both defenders in the West seat (Paul Chemla and Bjorn Fallenius) continued the good work on defense.

They ducked the first club, won the second, and played a second diamond. Both declarers inferred that the diamond finesse would lose. They rose with dummy's ace and played heart ace, heart king, and ruffed a heart high, hoping to be able to get back to hand to cash the club winner and pitch dummy's diamond queen. No such luck! West could overruff and lead a diamond to East's king for down one.

ANSWER: Your partner's second double simply shows extra values and is for takeout. With decent hearts but not much else, you should simply bid two hearts for the time being. With the same hand, but the heart king instead of the queen, you might be worth a jump to three hearts.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

CSI Volleyball Gets Fast Tourney Start

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

For the first set-plus of the 2011 NJCAA volleyball season, the College of Southern Idaho looked nothing like a Top 5 team.

But as the saying goes, form is temporary, class is permanent.

Fifth-ranked CSI roared back in the next three sets to brush aside No. 24 Snow College 20-25, 25-18, 25-20, 25-18 in the team's season opener at the Buffalo Wild Wings/Hilex Poly Invitational in Twin Falls on Friday afternoon.

CSI made it 2-0 on the day when it topped Northwest College (Wyo.) later in the evening, winning 25-22, 23-25, 25-22, 25-18.

The Golden Eagles dropped the first set of their opener when they registered as many attack errors as kills (six), compared to 15 kills and six attack errors for Snow. In the next two sets, CSI combined for 28 kills and three attack errors to take command of the match, with Badgers mustering 25-18.

"It took us a little bit to get that energy, and once we did we were able to take control," said CSI sophomore middle Beth Carey, who had a solid all-around game with eight kills, four blocks (two solo) and three service aces.

Freshman outside hitter Emily Ottinger matched Carey with eight kills, while fellow frosh Keani Passi dazzled with 16 kills and four errors.

Burley Comes Up Short in Opener

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A game like this for Burley last season would have turned into a rout.

Staring at a two-touchdown deficit midway through the third quarter, Burley, however rallied Friday night and nearly pulled off an opening-night win over Century to erase last season's 0-8 campaign from its memory.

But alas, the Bobcats lost 21-20 and will head into their game Sept. 9 with rival Minico with a losing streak that carries over from last year.

"It would have been over (last year)," said Burley head coach Jeff Green. "That's what I'm so proud of these kids for. They're learning how to fight. They're learning they're good. They're learning that they can and I'm proud of them for that."

Zander Cook scored from 6 yards with 4:28 remaining to bring the Bobcats within one. Green quickly sent out his offense, opting to go for two instead of kicking the extra point and tying the game at 21. Running back Chris Dayley, however was stopped short of the goal line on the run up the gut.

"We're not here to tie anybody. We're here to win. Burley football, we expect our kids to come here and win,"

Green said. "When we get down there with three yards to go, I believe with our double wing set, we've got to get three yards and the kids have got to learn that."

Century took the ensuing kickoff from its own 20-yard line and pounded away with running back Tyler Hill, who ripped off runs of 14 and 9 yards on his first two carries of the drive to help the Diamondbacks (1-0) bleed down the clock and seal the win.

Hill rushed for 121 yards and two touchdowns in the game, scoring on 1-yard plunge in the second quarter and a 5-yard run on the opening drive of the second half to put the Diamondbacks up 21-6.

Burley, however, marched right back on its first possession of the second half, with a 10-play 68 yard drive capped by a Chris Dayley touchdown run from 7 yards.

"That's where you get that senior leadership," said cornerback Antonio Ramirez. "We talked in the locker room at halftime and said we weren't going to give up."

Ramirez made what potentially could have been the biggest play of the night for the Bobcats. With Century threatening to score to close the third quarter, Ramirez intercepted Century quarterback Logan Burwell at the Burley 20, returning it 80 yards for the score. The touchdown was called

Riverhawks Can't Take Flight in Defeat

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

NAMPA • This wasn't in the debut script.

For the better part of the first half, the Riverhawks played equal to their hosts from Columbia High School. Then the third quarter happened, and everything unraveled for the visitors as the Wildcats cruised to a season-opening 35-0 win that spoiled Dave Slotten's first game as the Riverhawks' head coach

The two teams nearly evenly split the yardage in the first half, with Columbia (1-0) outgaining Canyon Ridge 124-108 on the way to a 14-0 lead at the break. But the Wildcats turned it on in the third quarter, piling up 176 yards and three more scores, while the Riverhawks gained just 7 yards.

"We went into halftime thinking we'd get a second wind, and it never came," said Canyon Ridge tailback Braydon Metcalf, who carried the ball 16 times for 95 yards. "You give them momentum and they're going to capitalize, especially when they're at home because it's basically double momentum."

Hansen is Castleford's Man On The Spot

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

MALTA • Cody Hansen's 75 receiving yards and two touchdowns were impressive, but his biggest moment Friday night against Raft River might go overlooked.

With his team down 8-6 with 1:09 remaining before halftime, the Castleford senior pounced on a Raft River fumble. Ten efficiently managed plays later, the Wolves were in the end zone with three ticks left before the break.

It was the momentum shift Castleford needed to spark a 46-22 season-opening victory.

"We were saying how we didn't want to go into half down," said Hansen, who also hauled in the 18-yard pass for the go-ahead score. "We decided we really wanted to punch it in. Going up at half was pretty big. It was a big momentum changer."

Castleford quarterback Mitch Howard completed 11 of 17 passes for 168 yards, and also gained 94 yards on the ground.

"You just go with the flow, whatever they give us we'll take it," Howard said. "We were able to have good success on the ground game and through the air."

That ground game was led by Ty Zimmers, who rushed for 158 yards and four touchdowns. Some of his longer runs were behind beastly pulling guard Samoa Etelu.

"I think we played great, but we need to keep a little more intensity up," Zimmers said. "We picked it up the second half a lot. We figured out their defense, what their weakness was, up the middle."

Magic Valley Speedway Drivers Down to Final Shots at Championship

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

The clock continues to tick tonight at Magic Valley Speedway for the Mr. Gas Late Models, Budweiser Super Stocks, Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks and Project Filter Street Stocks drivers to gain ground in the point standings. Drivers will have one of their final shots at the championship before the doors close on the Whelen All-American Racing Series season Sept. 17.

Feature division driver and points leader Jeff Pohlman already has his sights set on attending the NASCAR Whelen All-American Racing Series banquet this fall as the Mr. Gas Late Models series champion. T.J. Woodhall and Bobby Latham III, second and third in the ranks, continue to battle behind Pohlman, while Kris McKean is steadily sneaking up on the two of them. McKean won both main event races two weeks ago and hopes to keep the hot steak going as the season cools down.

Also featured tonight are the TV Gold and Silver Thunderdogs, Pepsi Winged Sprints and Quale's Electronics Hornets and Jr. Stingers. The Jr. Stingers continue to fight it out in one of the closest points battles of the season with K.C. Gillogly hanging on to a slim one-point lead over Branden Randabugh. Just two events remain in the 2011 season before a champion is crowned in the series.

The Watkins Distributing Budweiser Boat Race of Destruction and a fireworks show adds to an already action-packed night at Idaho's only NASCAR-sanctioned track.

Gates open at 4 p.m., green flag racing begins at 6.

Strong Second Half Powers Carey Past Oakley

Jordan Dilworth threw for three touchdowns and ran for another as Carey broke open a tight game in the third quarter to win decisively.

Stephan Ortiz tied the score at 7-7 on a 70-yard touchdown run, and added a pair of 2-point conversion runs. But five different Carey players scored touchdowns, showing off the balance that the Panthers hope results in a second consecutive state title.

Whatever coach Mark Sant said it halftime, it had an effect on his players.

After allowing Dietrich to take the lead Andru Howard's 10-yard reception from Brody Astle as time in the first half expired, the stage was set for some fireworks. Instead, Shoshone saved its explosiveness for the third quarter, scoring twice and picking up a safety to lead 30-20 going into the fourth quarter.

"I don't know if (what I said at halftime) was too inspiring or uplifting," Sant said, "but we came out better in the second half and executed better. Dietrich played well, but we made a lot of mistakes early."

Early on, Raft River appeared poised to play spoiler against the favored Wolves. But three turnovers in the first half snuffed out the Trojans' opportunities.

"When you get in a dogfight with a big guy, you better knock him out early," said Raft River coach Randy Spaeth. "I figured we'd have to jump on them early, and we had chances to. I knew down the stretch if it got tight they were going to wear us out with their size."

Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore said he wasn't surprised by his team's seemingly slow start.

"We hadn't seen film and didn't know anything about them," Vulgamore said. "They shut our counter down in the first half, and that's one of our bread and butter plays. We adjusted. We stayed close in the first half, made the adjustments at half and came out and executed what we needed to."

After halftime, Castleford's momentum continued to roll as it took the kickoff and drove authoritatively 70 yards to go up 22-8. The Wolves went on to score on their next three possessions to put the game safely out of reach, despite 129 yards rushing and two TDs from Raft River's Emmet Boden.

"I compare Game 1 this year to Game 1 last year and I feel like we're way ahead of where we were last year," said Spaeth. "Castleford is a good team. Once they got rolling, they put us in trouble."

back, however, on a clipping penalty and the Burley offense stalled on its possession.

"That was a game changer, you know? You go out there and it gets all the boys rallied up," said Ramirez. "When you get a game changer like that, then get it called back on a penalty, it just kills you. I thought we still had a little bit of momentum going, but we couldn't get anything going from there."

Burley's double wing offense was efficient, churning up more than 200 yards rushing, including a 61-yard run from Juan Labra in the first quarter, but the Bobcats turned the ball over three times in the first half, including an interception inside the Century 10-yard line in the closing seconds of the second quarter.

"We're taking baby steps. A year ago, we wouldn't have been close to this," Green said. "I thought our offense moved the ball well at times and our defense for the most part, did a good job tonight too. This was a game we should have won in my opinion."

At one point the Hawaiian had eight kills to one error, doing it from the left and from the back row, mixing in a crush of the occasional overpass.

"I was really nervous and didn't know what to expect. After practices and our scrimmage I didn't really know where I stood. I really surprised myself today," said Passi, about whom the CSI coaching staff and others associated with the program have raved.

Niurka Toribio, one of the top returning players in the Scenic West Athletic Conference, had 16 kills and 12 digs to pace the Badgers.

In the win over Northwest College, Pass had 12 kills and Beth Carey had five aces.

CSI wraps up its first tournament today with matches against Casper College (Wyo.) and Carroll College (Mont.).

Rodeo Coming To Filer

The Magic Valley Stampede at the 2011 Twin Falls County Fair opens with the Tough Enough To Wear Pink performance on Thursday and runs through Sept. 3 in the Shouse Arena daily at 7:30 p.m.

Friday night will include a slack for the timed events following the evening performance.

Sankey Rodeo Company will be partnering with New West Rodeo and Jeff Robinson Bucking Bulls to produce this year's stampede. Robinson was named 2010 Professional Bull Riders Stock Contractor of the Year and is known for having one of the deepest bull pens in the history of the PBR.

According to Gene Schiffler, rodeo committee chairman, this year's Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association rodeo has its largest number of entries at 350 cowboys and cowgirls with many of the top 15 cowboys in the PRCA competing. The prize money has been raised to $6,000 per event, including equal amounts to the headers and heelers in team roping.

A special feature of this year's stampede includes honoring the history of generations of three Idaho ranch families. The Lickley Ranch of Jerome will be honored on Thursday, the Bedke Ranch of Oakley on Friday, and the Callen Point Ranch in Rogerson on Saturday.

Mets' Capuano Shuts Down Braves With Two-hitter

NEW YORK • Chris Capuano pitched the game of his life, tossing a two-hitter and striking out a career-high 13 as the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 6-0 Friday night in their final matchup before taking a break because of Hurricane Irene.

New flood gates were put in place outside Citi Field as a precaution, but Major League Baseball took no chances. The Braves-Mets games on Saturday and Sunday were postponed, to be made up as a doubleheader on Sept. 8.

Marlins 6, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA • John Buck hit a grand slam and Greg Dobbs had four hits, including two doubles, to lift the struggling Marlins to a win over the Phillies.

Clay Hensley (2-5) allowed three runs on three hits in 5 2-3 innings to help Florida win for just the fourth time in 21 games and snap a five-game losing streak in Philadelphia.

Reds 4, Nationals 3

CINCINNATI • Miguel Cairo singled home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning, sending the Reds to a victory over the Nationals in a game delayed because some of the lights went out. Cairo's single to the gap in left-center was the third straight hit off Colin Balester (1-2).

Cardinals 5, Pirates 4

ST. LOUIS • Lance Berkman hit a go-ahead two-run home run in the eighth inning and the Cardinals overcame a pair of deficits to beat the Pirates.

All of the Cardinals' runs came via the long ball, with Yadier Molina hitting a three-run homer in the second off James McDonald.

Orioles 12, Yankees 5

BALTIMORE • On an emotional night at Camden Yards, Mark Reynolds and J.J. Hardy homered in a six-run second inning against A.J. Burnett, and Baltimore beat New York for its fifth straight victory.

It was Baltimore's first home game since former Orioles pitcher Mike Flanagan took his own life Wednesday. Moments before the first pitch, there was a moment of silence in honor of the 1979 Cy Young winner, who died at age 59 of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Rays 6, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO • James Shields pitched his major league-leading 10th complete game, Evan Longoria hit a pair of solo home runs, and the Rays beat the Blue Jays.

Desmond Jennings added a two-run shot and John Jaso also went deep for the Rays, who had scored just six runs over their previous four games.

Indians 2, Royals 1

CLEVELAND • Jim Thome went hitless but was warmly welcomed in his Cleveland homecoming after nearly a decade away and the Indians stopped their slide in the AL Central with a win over the Royals.

Thome went 0 for 4 and struck out twice in his first game back with Cleveland since 2002, when he disappointed Cleveland fans by leaving as a free agent.

Athletics 15, Red Sox 5

BOSTON • Scott Sizemore and Josh Willingham each hit two-run homers during a six-run fourth inning that carried the Athletics to a win over the Red Sox, denying Tim Lincecum's bid for his 200th win.

Dustin Pedroia and David Ortiz hit consecutive homers for Boston, which opened a nine-game homestand after going 6-2 on a recent trip through Texas and Kansas City.

Newman Holds Onto Pole at Bristol Motor Speedway

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) • Stewart-Haas Racing had an interesting Friday at Bristol Motor Speedway, where teammates Ryan Newman and Tony Stewart were on opposite ends of the speed chart.

Newman won the pole for tonight's Sprint Cup Series race but Stewart, who is clinging to a spot in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, posted the slowest speed in the qualifying session.

"It wasn't a good day for (Stewart), obviously you saw that in qualifying," Newman said. "I think it's just one of those deals where you spend a little time overnight regrouping."

"We don't ever want to see the cars that far apart, whether it's the set-up or the results because of a set-up change. But I'm happy that we've given the (Stewart) an opportunity to look at our notes. We always share information."

Stewart certainly needs all the help he can get right now.

Although he's 10th in the Sprint Cup standings, the two-time series champion is winless this season and could get knocked out of a spot in the Chase for the championship with a bad finish in

Kyle Busch makes a victory lap after winning the NASCAR Nationwide Series Food City 250 auto race on Friday at Bristol, Tenn.

Nationwide Series

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) • Kyle Busch has won the Nationwide race at Bristol Motor Speedway to become the series' all-time wins leader.

Busch had to hold off a strong challenge from Joe Gibbs Racing teammate any of the next three races.

Newman, meanwhile, is ranked seventh in points with a win this season.

"If we knew what the problem was, we would fix it," said Stewart, who will start 42nd in the 43-car field

Joey Logano to earn his 50th victory in NASCAR's second-tier division.

Busch and Logano drove door-to-door over the final two laps, and Logano briefly surged ahead before Busch beat him by a nose to the checkered flag.

The win broke a tie with Mark Martin to take over the all-time victory mark.

It was fitting for Busch to break the mark at Bristol, where he's practically unbeatable of late. Friday night's win was his 12th at Bristol spanning all three NASCAR national series.

He has won 102 races in NASCAR's top three divisions.

Saturday night. "It could turn around in a week; it may not turn around the rest of the year."

Newman, meanwhile, turned a lap at 122.811 mph to win his second pole of the season and 48th of his career.

He ranks 10th on the all-time pole-winners list.

His lap marked a frantic final few minutes of qualifying. Jeff Gordon bumped Jamie McMurray for the pole, then Newman bumped Gordon.

LSU QB, Teammate Booked in Bar Fight and Released

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) • LSU quarterback Jordan Jefferson and teammate Joshua Johns were released on $5,000 bond each Friday in connection with a bar fight that injured four people.

The two players turned themselves in after police obtained arrest warrants on felony charges of second-degree battery, stemming from their alleged roles in a fight outside Shady's bar in Baton Rouge on Aug. 19. The players also have been suspended indefinitely by the school.

"Today is a sad day for the city of Baton Rouge. Today is a sad day for Louisiana State University, the LSU alumni and the countless fans that follow the Tiger football program," Baton Rouge police chief Dewayne White said. "It is also a sad day for the Baton Rouge police department."

White said the evidence in the case would be forwarded to the East Baton Rouge Parish district attorney for review.

He described the evidence as "numerous interviews of witnesses, including victims and players implicated in the incident ... as well as video evidence of certain individuals, all of whom were present at the scene."

Attorney Shannon Fay, an associate of the players' lead defense attorney, Nathan Fisher, said their effort to disprove the accusations against the players would continue.

"This is an ongoing case, and we will continue to diligently defend our clients, who we believe are innocent," Fay said.

While that effort continues, Jefferson, a starter, and Johns, a reserve linebacker, will miss fourth-ranked LSU's season opener on Sept. 3 against Oregon at Cowboys Stadium in Arlington, Texas. They could miss many more games than that.

"We will continue to cooperate with the authorities in an effort to find out exactly what took place during the incident," LSU coach Les Miles said. "As sad as this incident is, it's important that we learn from this and that we take away a valuable lesson. This has weighed on all of us. It's time for us to come together as a team and focus on what we are here to do."

The team's success now will ride on how the players are able to regroup from a series of setbacks this off-season, one of which occurred Thursday when LSU suspended starting wide receiver Russell Shepard for violating school and NCAA codes that pertain to discussing NCAA inquiries with teammates who are also scheduled to be interviewed on the same matter.

A police report says a 19-year-old woman named Victoria Long said she witnessed several LSU players beating one of the alleged victims and saw Jefferson kick that man in the face.

NEW YORK (AP) • Back before Mardy Fish transformed himself into the player he is today, he compiled a record of 5-8 in his first eight visits to the U.S. Open, never making it past the second round from 2000 to 2007.

Before changing his eating and workout habits, Fish didn't make it easy to put together a deep run at Grand Slam tournaments. Not only that, but he didn't necessarily believe he was capable of doing it.

Nowadays? Here's how Fish talks about his chances at the hard-court U.S. Open, which is scheduled to start Monday: "I'll certainly feel like I can beat anyone especially on that surface, at that tournament."

He has given himself reason to think that way, which is why he also has spent a season changing his goals, aiming higher than ever before, while enjoying the best stretch of his professional career at the old-only-by-tennis-standards age of 29.

"I hope to keep playing the way I'm playing," Fish said.

He is seeded No. 8 at the U.S. Open, the first time he'll be the top American at the country's Grand Slam tennis tournament.

"His eagerness factor is very high," former U.S. Davis Cup captain Patrick McEnroe said. "And he's seeing the results consistently. He's saying, 'Hey, if I keep working hard, and I keep doing what I've been doing, then who knows what could happen?'"

Fish spent a decade in the shadow of his pal Andy Roddick, which seemed to be just fine with the laid-back Fish.

Roddick was the last U.S. man to win a major championship, at the 2003 U.S. Open, and used to be ranked No. 1, but recently dropped out of the top 20 for the first time in nearly 10 years.

‘What Am I Going to Do?’ NYC Subways Ordered Shut

BY SAMANTHA GROSS and COLLEEN LONG
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The nation’s biggest subway system was ordered shut down as Hurricane Irene bore down Friday, potentially paralyzing movement for millions of carless people even as more than 300,000 were told to evacuate to safer places.

The unprecedented orders from Mayor Michael Bloomberg, which affect New Yorkers from the Bronx’s most distant reaches down through Manhattan and out to the beaches of Brooklyn and Queens, dealt the congested metropolis a formidable logistical challenge that raised more questions than it resolved:

Where are all of those people in New York’s flood-prone areas supposed to go? And, more pointedly, how are they going to get there — especially since many don’t own a car?

Subways, buses and trains in one of the world’s largest public transportation systems were to stop running at noon Saturday. Bridges and tunnels also could be closed as the storm approaches, clogging traffic in an already congested city.

Officials hoped most residents would stay with family and friends, and for the rest the city opened nearly 100 shelters with a capacity of 71,000 people.

Many people scoffed at the danger and vowed to ride it out at home.

“How can I get out of Coney Island? What am I going to do? Run with this walker?” said 82-year-old Abe Feinstein, who has lived since the early 1960s on the eighth floor of a building that overlooks the famed Coney Island boardwalk.

He said he watched Hurricane Gloria in 1985 from an apartment down the street.

“I think I have nothing to worry about,” he said. “I’ve been through bad weather before. It’s just not going to be a problem for us.”

Irene was expected to make landfall in North Carolina today, then roll up the I-95 corridor reaching New York on Sunday.

Saving Salmon Means Saving Jobs

Recently, the Obama administration's plan to restore endangered Columbia and Snake River salmon was declared illegal by U.S. District Judge James Redden in Portland, Ore. The Columbia/Snake was once the most productive salmon watershed on earth; now 13 of its 19 salmon stocks are threatened or endangered by extinction, with total numbers at 1 percent of historic levels.

How the administration responds to the verdict is vital for every West Coast state, but the national stakes are also high — for taxpayers and jobs, for our natural heritage and for the Endangered Species Act. The stakes are rooted in this fact: the largest killer of Columbia and Snake River salmon is the government itself, which owns and operates dams that kill more of the endangered iconic fish than all other human factors combined.

Judge Redden has now found three consecutive plans illegal, from three administrations over 11 years, because each put protecting status quo operations of federal dams above science and the law. This is no activist judge; he has been patient to a fault through a decade of government law breaking, and has now given the Obama administration an additional two years to develop a legal plan.

But the administration should be shamed by his judgment: “The history of the Federal Defendants’ lack of, or at best, marginal compliance with the procedural and substantive requirements of the (Endangered Species Act) ... has been laid out in prior Opinions and Orders in this case

With the Endangered Species Act under persistent assault by many in Congress, it is dispiriting when federal agencies – in this case dam agencies – make violating that law a decade-long policy, and doubly dispiriting when the Obama administration goes along. The public damage ripples far beyond this specific case.

Ditto for jobs. The West Coast's salmon economy — fishing, food, recreation and tourism jobs — has borne the costs, while the hope its people felt when President Obama took office has been disappointed. Since 2006, salmon businesses have used the Endangered Species Act to protect and create jobs, winning interim salmon measures from Judge Redden that have boosted fish numbers. But the Obama administration, like its predecessor, has opposed these job-creating actions.

The same goes for taxpayers. Over the past decade, Americans have spent about $10 billion implementing flawed salmon plans. This is the largest endangered species program in America; it should be lawful and science-based, so that the public investment is repaid with actual salmon recovery.

Now, thanks to Judge Redden, this past can become a prologue to needed change. President Obama's team has a second chance to restore salmon and create jobs. First, they can quickly start work under the court's order with those who won the case — the state of Oregon, the Nez Perce Tribe, and fishing and conservation groups — to build a better plan. The court ordered the new plan to closely examine changes at the federal dams, including removal of four dams on the lower Snake River. Second, they can begin parallel stakeholder talks among fishermen, farmers and energy users on a broader agreement in which job creation is a core goal. Leaders like Oregon Democratic Gov. John Kitzhaber and Idaho Republican Sen. Mike Crapo support a collaborative approach and stand ready to help.

Collaboration is hard work and takes time, but it has succeeded on other tough issues and the court has provided two years. It can accomplish the goal if work starts now. And if the administration brings to the table three basics missing from federal policy to date: real willingness to consider changes at federal dams; a team committed to working with farmers, fishermen and energy users toward solutions; and practical, hands-on politics that turn a Columbia/Snake salmon "problem" into an opportunity for job creation in salmon recovery, clean energy and water use.

Pat Ford is executive director of the Save Our Wild Salmon Coalition, a 20-year collaboration of fishing, business and conservation groups to restore wild salmon for use by people and ecosystems. He wrote this commentary for McClatchy-Tribune News Service.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Disc Golf Club
Sponsors Appreciated

A big thank you to Mike Stradley, the Southern Idaho Chuckers and the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department for co-sponsoring the first Junior Disc Golf Club. Mike and the Chuckers did a great job of teaching, encouraging and supporting the kids as they learned the fundamentals of disc golf.

Our family has been involved in several different sports through Parks and Rec, where it is mainly the parents that teach and pass on the skills to the young people. We greatly appreciated the involvement of so many members of the local disc golf club who came and helped out in July. The kids had a great time, made new friends and enjoyed learning this fun sport. We are very fortunate to have so many courses in the Magic Valley to get outside and have fun! We hope to see this on the calendar again next summer!

Kimberly Runners Thank Supporters

The Kimberly Cross Country Team would like to thank Arctic Circle, Cazeau's Tropical Sno, Fiesta Ole, Hoagie Street Deli, Kimberly Kut and Kurl, and Maxie's Pizza for sponsoring the "Run 2 the Sun."

We would like to thank Ridley's Market and Rock Creek Growers for providing gift certificates. Others that deserve recognition are Suzanne and Jeff Gerard, Denise and Marvin Mumm, Dr. David and Brenda Allen, and Tiffany Unger. Dr. Allen was kind enough to bring his outdoor movie theater, and we enjoyed watching several of our favorite Pixar movies between laps.

We would also like to thank Modern Woodmen for its generosity in matching funds up to $500. We also appreciate the assistance of Mrs. Noh, the Kimberly School Board and the Kimberly maintenance crew.

Thanks to the generosity of family and friends, the 60 participants made more than $1,200 to go toward the purchase of new meet uniforms.
