Changes Slated for T.F., Other Schools

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

Students and parents in the Twin Falls School District should expect to see some changes as the new school year rolls out, from juniors being required to take the SAT to an increase in online classes.

District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he's projecting a student increase of up to 2 percent, pushing enrollment past the 8,000-student mark.

Here are some other notable changes coming to the Magic Valley's largest school district — along with others in the region — this year.

Senior projects for all

This year's juniors — the class of 2013 — will be the first class required by state law to complete senior projects.

Juniors will develop their senior project proposals this year. Proposals can be about an academic topic, something related to community service, or focus on personal development.

This year's seniors are off the hook — they aren't required to produce a project.

More online classes

Students will be offered a few more online classes this year. TFSD works with the Idaho Digital Learning Academy to offer online classes students can take throughout the day.

At district middle schools, more technology classes such as

Fair Helps Nearby Businesses

Filer diner and market both say business nearly triples when the Twin Falls County Fair sets up shop.

FILER • Tracy's diner owner and namesake Tracy Canfield signaled to her husband Monday afternoon that he had more orders to cook.

Without waiting for details, Brian Canfield quipped: "How many burgers?"

Brian, who helps his wife run the shop part-time, said the diner went through three to four times as much ground beef during the Twin Falls County Fair as it normally does, hitting upward of 60 pounds a day.

"We get some people coming in at 8 in the morning" for the burgers at the diner just a few blocks from the fairgrounds, he said.

It's a story familiar to other fair-area businesses — Logans Market, a few blocks from Tracy's diner and the fairgrounds on U.S. Highway 30 in Filer, usually sees business triple during the fair, manager Barbara Chandler said.

The flow of customers to the Filer diner was slower Monday — the fair's last day — than it had been earlier in the week, the Canfields said. But nonetheless, it was steady enough to keep Tracy Canfield busy topping off customers' drinks and checking in to make sure their food was up to par. Brian Canfield, taking advantage of a lull in orders, stepped away from the grill, grateful for the relief.

He said since the restaurant opened as Tracy's three weeks ago, business has been smooth — but not to the level it was during fair season.

He said some out-of-towners have stopped

Hansen Schools Move to Four-day Week

Following in Gooding School District's footsteps, the 390-student district will adopt a shorter week to deal with attendance and cost issues.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

When Hansen students return to school today, they'll be greeted by familiar friends and teachers, but an entirely new four-day school week.

District Superintendent Dennis Coulter said he hopes the new, shorter school weeks will increase student and teacher attendance while reducing substitute teacher costs at the cash-starved district.

"We want to pull in a few more kids and a few more dollars," he said.

The Hansen School Board decided in July to push forward with Monday-through-Thursday school weeks after holding several community meetings to gather input. Coulter and other Hansen teachers also called other Idaho districts for information on the shorter week.

"We decided we wanted to give it a

For the 390 students enrolled at the district's two schools, fewer school days won't mean less class time. School will start at 8:30 a.m. — about 25 minutes earlier than last year — and will get out at 3:57 p.m., about 30 minutes later.

School buildings won't be completely deserted on Fridays, either. The district plans to use one Friday per month for employee professional

BOISE • Evan Stauff smiles and giggles. He mimics his father in making silly noises. He loves to play with toys and watch cartoons.

The 19-month-old didn't do any of those things before undergoing surgery this past winter to remove half of his brain, a procedure that's called a "hemispherectomy." His family noticed a change in his behavior almost immediately — starting with his ability to focus on family members, rather than look through them.

"It's already a miracle," said Evan's grandmother, Karen Sands of Payette. "He's a person now; he wasn't before."

Evan was diagnosed with infantile spasms when he was almost 3 months old. The spasms were the result of a specific kind of epilepsy that develops in young children.

They came in clusters, and his episodes lasted five to 15 minutes. Evan's dad, 31-year-old David Stauff, believes he witnessed his baby go through thousands of spasms over a seven-month period before the surgery.

"His brain was always in a state of seizure," said Kathleen Stauff, Evan's mom. The baby was physically exhausted by the seizures and had a very erratic sleep pattern.

He was lethargic and catatonic — "trapped inside," Sands said.

Fishing Fundraiser Earned $900 for Mammograms

TIMES-NEWS

A “Casting for a Cure” fishing derby at Magic Reservoir in June raised $900 for the 900 Women Project, an effort to increase the number of women receiving annual breast cancer screenings.

The event, put on by KT Carpenter and friends, was just for women. Husbands and friends cooked lunch in support of it, according to a recent news release from St. Luke’s Magic Valley Health Foundation.

It was such a success that organizers are already planning next year’s derby, including ways for more people to support it. Anyone interested in helping with the 2012 derby can contact Joann Rutler at 308-2954.

Contributions to the 900 Women Project can be made at any time through the health foundation office at the new St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, or online at stlukesonline.org/magic\_valley/ways\_to\_give/.

Some senior-level high school English classes will also be offered online for the first time.

Juniors take the SAT for free

High school juniors around the state will be required to take the SAT for the first time this year. The state will foot the bill for the testing fees.

“The purpose is to get more students headed toward college,” Dobbs said, but there are still unanswered questions about how the requirement will work.

District budget goes online

Also new this year, school district budget information will be available online. The district is required to have information up by Jan. 1, 2012, but hopes to get it up sooner.

Evan Stauff was diagnosed with infantile spasms when he was 3 months-old. In November, he had surgery to remove the left side of his brain to stop the seizures. Now 19 months old, Evan is seizure free. He does most everything with the left side of his body and does not see out of his right eye, but he is sitting up on his own, smiling and playing with members of his family.

Surgery

Before the surgery, Evan wasn’t able to sit up — or even able to hold his head up — and he couldn’t grab and hold toys. Now he’s able to sit and play on the floor of his grandparents’ Eagle home.

He’s still behind developmentally but is progressing.

“He’s doing really well. We couldn’t be any happier,” said his father, who quit his job at a credit union to care for the youngest of his three boys.

The Stauffs, who grew up in Payette and met in a high school geometry class, now live on the Oregon coast. They were back in the Treasure Valley recently visiting their families, who traveled to Los Angeles in November when Evan had brain surgery at UCLA Medical Center.

The Stauffs have reached out to other parents in hopes of helping those whose children suffer from infantile spasms. They shared their story in an ABC News “Nightline” segment that aired in December and this summer attended the Hemi-spherectomy Foundation’s international conference at the Disneyland Resort in California.

“It’s all about turning this into a positive experience for others,” David Stauff said. “It was a very rough experience. It just blew me off my feet at first to just figure out what was going on, the frustration and uncertainty.”

After more than a half-dozen medications failed to calm the electrical storm in their son’s brain, the Stauffs hoped brain surgery would be the answer. Removing up to half the brain sounds drastic, and it is. But it’s different for young children because their brains are still growing.

The brains of children under age 2 have “plasticity,” or the ability of one half of the brain to take over functions normally governed by the other half, according to Dr. Gary W. Mathern, director of the Pediatric Epilepsy Surgery Program and Pediatric Neurosurgery Program at UCLA Medical Center.

He’s the surgeon who operated on Evan.

“Anything they did was going to give me a better result than where I was at,” said Kathleen Stauff, recalling seven months of “crisis mode.”

The risks of not doing the surgery on Evan were significant. Cognitive development problems are associated with the frequent spasms, and children who suffer the condition often have IQs below 50, Mathern said. Some of those kids don’t recognize their own parents.

Evan’s brothers — Patrick, 8, and Chandler, 12 — say their baby brother is now very playful with them. He gets excited when they get off the school bus, and he is engaging.

“He’ll grab one of his blocks and throw it,” Patrick said.

Mathern said Evan’s surgery would affect movement in his right hand, arm and leg, the right side of his vision in both eyes, language development and word/language-based memory. He is expected to be able to walk, though with a limp.

At his grandparents’ house this month, Evan was quite verbal. His baby talk included the word “Da-da,” bringing a smile to his dad’s face.

Evan spends time each week with a physical therapist, an occupational therapist and a speech pathologist.

Surgeons at UCLA Medical Center have done about 200 hemispherectomies since 1986 for children suffering infantile spasms.

Mathern recently saw Evan for his six-month follow-up visit.

“What you want to see is evidence of development since you did the surgery — new milestones,” Mathern said last week. “He’s clearly showing nice development progress.”

At the international conference in July, the Stauffs met children and adults who had had hemispherectomies. David Stauff said a 30-year-old man at the conference had gone to college and was working as a wildlife photographer.

“It gives us a lot of hope and inspiration,” he said.

Mathern said 10 to 15 percent of those who undergo the procedure experience seizures later on, but they usually occur much less frequently. Evan has been seizure-free since his surgery.

development, while another Friday each month will be used to provide extra instructional time for at-risk students.

Coulter said the majority of his high school teachers think the shorter school week is a good idea, though “some of the elementary teachers are somewhat hesitant since it’s a longer day for the younger students.”

To help teachers transition into the new schedule, Cameron Andersen, a former Hansen employee who now teaches high school at the Gooding School District, explained the pros and cons of the schedule. Gooding schools have been on a four-day schedule for three years, and Superintendent Heather Williams says the schedule has increased instructional time and helped boost test scores.

“Parents seem to like it,” she said. “Student achievement results have also gone up.”

Although there aren’t regular classes on Fridays during Gooding’s school year, its 1,275 students still have options on those days. From 8 a.m. to noon, school staff are available to work in small groups with struggling students. About 25 percent of students take advantage of those sessions, Williams said.

Student achievement and dwindling money from reduced enrollment played into Gooding’s decision to become the first Magic Valley district to adopt the shorter week. The district saw a 12 percent enrollment drop, and consequentially less state funding, when North Valley Academy Charter School opened in Gooding in 2008.

“It was more difficult to operate,” Williams said. “We were operating on a leaner budget.”

Since, enrollment has increased to a stable level, she said.

In Gooding, some of the major employers, including Gooding County, work four-day weeks. Many parents also have agricultural jobs, Williams said, and children can help their parents on Fridays.

Williams said a four-day school week might not work for every community, but “it’s worked well in Gooding because of the strong partnership with the community.”

Many Art Winners at Gooding Fair

TIMES NEWS

The Snake River Artisans Club has announced the art department winners from last month's Gooding County Fair.

Many people contributing much hard work helped ensure the art department was open this year, and the club also thanks those who contributed.

Winners included the following:

- Best of Division winner in the Youth Division was Justine Koyle. She also was the top winner in the 10th-12th Grade Class.
- Other Youth top winners were Logan Anderson in K-3rd Grade Class, Victoria Anderson in 4th-6th Grade Class, and Emma Lopes in 7th-9th Grade Class.

- Best of Division winner in the Amateur Division was Emily Rasmussen.
- Best of Fair in the Open

Class Division went to Jenn Etches. First runner-up was Veria Flores, and second runner-up was Lynn Wood Larson.

- The Fair's Theme Award — "Children's Dreams and Country Things" — went to Lynn Wood Larson.

- The Youth Popular Vote winners were Saran Flick, first place; Justine Koyle, second place; and Lisa McHan, third place.
- Adult Popular Vote winners were Lynn Wood Larson, first place; Jenny Etches and Emily Rasmussen, tied for second place; and Barbara Oneida, third place.

- Carolyn Robertson won the raffle painting by last year's Best of Fair winner, Marilyn LaCroix.

Joyce DeFord served as judge this year.

The club apologized in advance for any incorrectly recorded names.

Soldiers From 116th Start to Return to Idaho

BY NATE GREEN

Idaho Press-Tribune

BOISE • Shortly after the airplane touched down on Gowen Field Sunday, Staff Sgt. Tim Young of Caldwell stepped into a crisp blue Idaho day and walked across the tarmac toward his family.

The burly man in camouflage fatigues only had to go a few yards before his wife, Kimberly, and their two boys, 5-year-old Jack and 3-year-old Grady, rushed onto the blacktop to embrace him.

Tears and smiles gleamed through their group bear hug.

"Every day they say, 'Where's daddy?' It's been a long time," Kimberly Young said, holding back tears as the boys crawled over their dad. "It's nice to have my partner back, the person who loves you and will hold you and tell you it's going to be OK. Especially after him being in such a scary place."

Young was one of 30 Treasure Valley soldiers from the Idaho National Guard's 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team who returned home Sunday afternoon after a year-long deployment to Iraq. Other Idaho soldiers will be returning in the coming days and weeks as they are processed at Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Washington state.

The soldiers have a month of paid leave time, during which they'll reunite with their families and begin the process of reclaiming their former lives.

Tim Young said he planned to take his family water-skiing on Lake Lowell. He also looked forward to sharing a breakfast of huckleberry pancakes and bacon.

"It's going to be family — straight family," he said.

Sgt. First Class Ryan Chroninger of Nampa made it home just in time for his daughter's third birthday.

"The whole ride over was anticipation. It's such a relief to be home," Chroninger said, as he alternated between hugging his wife, Ruth, and hoisting his daughter, Xochitl, and his 3-year-old son, Helio, up in the air.

Tub 'N' Tile is non-toxic and biodegradable, with no harsh chemicals. Works great on tubs, showers and countertops. Foam 'N' Flush is an environmentally preferable toilet bowl cleaner that will dissolve hard water rings, as well as brighten and deodorize your toilet bowl. The organic acid formula is biodegradable and uses an organic composite that is fume free. Now you can relax. Green does Clean!

Man Sought in Idaho Death Caught After Holding Ore. Couple at Gunpoint

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • A man sought in the death of his former landlady in Caldwell was arrested Monday after he held an elderly man and his wife at gunpoint in their eastern Oregon cabin. Theodore J. Kestner, 51, was arrested in Malheur County after a nearly 24-hour manhunt in the Oregon desert. Kestner had a shotgun with him when he was arrested, but he was taken into custody without incident, Malheur County Sheriff Brian Wolfe told the Idaho Statesman. “I’m just really grateful that he didn’t display the shotgun or point it at anybody, because it would have been a whole different set of circumstances,” Wolfe said.

Police say Kestner held a couple at gunpoint in their own cabin near Lake Owyhee on Sunday. He talked with them for an hour or longer, then requested a hug from each of them before allowing them to leave, Wolfe said. The couple reported the incident to Oregon police Sunday afternoon. Kestner had left the cabin by the time police got there.

Kestner was sought in the death of his former landlady in Caldwell. Jennifer Kirkpatrick, 53, was found dead Thursday night at her Idaho Street home.

Police said she had rented a room to Kestner until they had a disagreement recently, and he moved out. Kestner has been on parole after imprisonment on a 2006 Ada County charge of lewd conduct with a child under 16. In addition to charges in Idaho, Kestner faces charges in Oregon of kidnapping, unlawful use of a weapon, felony in possession of a firearm, burglary and theft, Wolfe said.

Stolen Bike Story Tugs at Community’s Heart

Just a few hours after a simple story about a theft is published in the local newspaper, north Idaho boy is pedaling a new bike, wearing a huge grin.

BY BILL BULEY
Coeur d’Alene Press

COEUR D’ALENE • Kristian Parrett was a wanted boy Saturday morning. People googled his name. They phoned the police. They called and emailed the Press. They drove on west Rousseau Drive to knock on the front door of his home. All sought the 11-year-old for the same reason: They wanted to replace his stolen bike. And just a few hours after the simple story of a theft was published in Saturday’s Press, Kristian was pedaling a new bike, wearing a huge grin. He will not be walking to Woodland Middle School next week, after all. “The generosity from all the people was amazing,” said Kristian’s mom, Stacey Sprock. “His smile is so big, I can’t imagine him being any happier. Now, he’s excited for school to start.”

Not only did he receive a new Mongoose 26-inch mountain bike, he was given gift certificates and cash, which he’s not keeping for himself. Instead, Kristian plans buy bikes for kids at Children’s Village. “I really want to thank everyone who wanted to help me with a bike,” he said. “I like it so much.” He wasn’t so happy last Friday. Following a summer of chores to earn $100, he bought a cherished two-wheeler at the Walmart in Hayden. That same day, just a few hours later, it was stolen while he was at the Kroc Center picking up free school supplies. A disappointed Kristian said he would start over, work hard, save money, buy another bike. But hold on. His mom notified the Press, which ran a story and photo on page C1. One of the people who read that article was Steve Stoops, shift manager of the Hayden Walmart. It was “automatic,” he said, to want to help. His wife Julie also saw the story. She turned to her husband and said, “Are you taking care of that?” Absolutely. “I saw the work he put forth, saving up to buy the bike. It brought me back to when I was a kid,” Stoops said. “I would have been devastated if that happened to me.” One problem: He had no idea where Kristian lived, so he called the police to see if they could help. An officer soon arrived at the Parrett door with a message that Stoops and Walmart wanted him to see him at the store. There, a thrilled Kristian shook his head in disbelief and said thank you as he accepted the shiny black-and-red bike. “I’m surprised and really, really happy,” Kristian said. Stoops also gave him a heavy duty bike lock and also presented a bike to Kristian’s little sister. “It was just something I wanted to do,” he said. The Press received around 20 calls and emails from readers on Saturday, looking for Kristian. One man wanted to give Kristian his son’s old bike, which he said was like new. Another wanted to take him to a store and have him pick out a new bike. A bike shop owner called and offered to give him a free bike. When Kristian was at Walmart, a customer gave him a gift certificate. When he got home, someone had dropped off an envelope with cash. One reader who called the Press but wanted to remain anonymous was not surprised at the outpouring for a boy. “It was kind of as I suspected. In this town, you publish a story like that, you’ve got people who will come out of the woodwork,” he said. “I think it’s one of the charming things about this town.” Robert Krumsick of Hayden said he wanted to help because when he was a child, he had a bike stolen within a week of its purchase. He said how Kristian worked hard to earn the bike, and how he responded after it was stolen, made him want to buy the boy a new bike. “He sounded like one hell of a kid, he really does. To work that hard and get it stolen, unbelievable.” “As soon as I read the article, I looked at my wife and said, ‘I want to buy that kid a new bike!’ and she said, ‘Do it then!’” Stacey Sprock said she is proud of her community for being so loving and caring. “I never in my wildest dreams thought people would offer to give him a bike,” she said. Kristian, who will be a sixth-grader this year, plans to do more than just guard his bike better. He’ll be collecting money to buy bicycles for Children’s Village. “All these kids will be really eager to have these new bikes, and they’ll be really happy,” he said. “I like it when kids are happy.”

Porthill is Border Between People, Grizzly Bears

As bear recovery efforts continue, the animals will mix more often with humans, including at the town of Porthill on the Canadian border.

BY DAVID COLE
Hagadone News Network

PORTHILL • As recently as 100 years ago, grizzly bears ranged the flat and green Kootenai River valley floor each spring. “That seems like forever ago to us, but grizzly bear biology hasn’t changed in that time,” said Wayne Wakkinen, senior wildlife research biologist for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, in Bonners Ferry. Grizzly populations dropped over time, and the riparian vegetation that dominated the valley has been replaced by farmland. But the grizzly instinct to seek spring-range habitat at lower elevations hasn’t changed. Today, the animal, a subspecies of brown bear, is mounting a recovery, though slow. As that progresses, more bears will be showing up in the valley, including in and around Porthill. “As bears expand, there are going to be bears not that far from Sandpoint,” he said. “We are going to have more human-bear interactions.” In Porthill, at the U.S.-Canadian border and home to less than 100 people, visitors can see hop fields that extend for thousands of acres. The structures and overhead wires were put in place to support the vigorous growth of hop plants for past production by beer maker Anheuser-Busch. Today, other crops, including wheat, grow in the valley. While a border town, the agricultural community also is close to two of the lower 48 states’ half-dozen grizzly bear recovery zones, with one just four miles west across the Kootenai River. The rugged mountains to the west mark the boundary to the Selkirk Mountains recovery zone. Grizzly populations there are increasing. East of Porthill, on the Idaho side of the Montana-Idaho border, lies the boundary of the Cabinet-Yaak grizzly bear recovery zone. That ecosystem has approximately 50 grizzly bears, though that number is declining slowly, said Joan Jewett, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service’s Pacific region. Recovery The Selkirk recovery zone spans 2,200 square miles. The portion in British Columbia has an estimated 45 to 50 grizzly bears, while the U.S. portion has about 35 to 40, Wakkinen said. Of the roughly 80 grizzly bears, about 15 are breeding females, which have offspring every third year. The mothers aren’t reproductive until age 6 or 7. The cubs the mothers do have, with an average litter of 2.1, stay with them for two years. Incidents of human-caused mortality have been reduced, allowing the grizzly bear population to mount a comeback. Fewer bears are being shot by poachers, and black bear hunters are killing fewer by mistake. Highway kills are becoming rare. “We’ve got more bears living, and reproduction is ahead of mortality,” Wakkinen said. “We’ve got a slowly growing population here.” But a growing grizzly bear population is not like a growing white-tailed deer population. Female grizzly reproductive patterns govern the pace. Meanwhile, “Public attitudes about grizzly bears have changed for the better,”

Wakkinen said. The lack of grizzly attacks on people helps. Wakkinen couldn’t recall a grizzly bear mauling since the late 1970s or early 1980s when a surveyor fell victim to one of the animals about three or four miles north of Porthill. Just 20 or 30 years ago, it was unusual to have grizzly bear sightings in the Kootenai River valley, because the population was way down. Anymore, it’s not, Wakkinen said. Perhaps surprising to outsiders, people in Porthill say the animals are at most an uncommon sight. Some residents have never seen one, even though it’s known the animals venture into the valley in spring. “Having a grizzly bear in your yard here is a big deal,” said Porthill resident Yvonne Sheppard, while she worked at Porthill Mercantile, the oldest standing building in town. “That’s scary.”

Cabela’s Turkey Shoot to Benefit Post Falls Food Banks

COEUR D’ALENE PRESS

POST FALLS • Kelly Dionne was shooting targets at Cabela’s when the idea popped into his mind. A turkey shoot, he thought, could benefit local food banks in Kootenai County. It could bring people together for a good cause, and it could be a lot of fun, too. “We have a lot of hungry people in the community. And that’s kind of the whole impetus behind the Turkey Shoot,” Dionne said. He talked to Cabela’s staff and pitched his plans. “Pretty soon it just started taking off,” Dionne said. “And here we are today.” The Cabela’s Turkey Shoot is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 1, at the big outdoors store in Post Falls. Registration will begin at 8 a.m., and the shooting starts at 9. Five-person teams will aim and fire at the store’s indoor shooting gallery. Using laser-equipped rifles, participants will squeeze off 60 shots from three different stations. Twenty glowing targets will provide a sporting challenge. Shooters might aim for a roaring bear or a slithering snake; some shots will be as long as 40 feet. “I think it’s going to be fun competition,” said Michael Warnecke, an outfitter at Cabela’s. “They’re open sights, and you’re going to have to go at it.” The fastest, most accurate squad will claim the Turkey Trophy. Prizes will also be awarded to the best-dressed teams and the top turkey caller. Dionne, a principal organizer of the event, said he hopes for 120 teams and 600 marksmen (or women). The registration fee is $250 per team. Almost 100 percent of the proceeds will benefit the Post Falls Food Bank and Community Action Partnership in Coeur d’Alene. In 2010, those two facilities served more than 70,000 families, according to the Turkey Shoot website. “There’s a very big need for a little bit of help in the community,” Warnecke said, “and we need to do it when we can.” An outdoors trade show will coincide with the Turkey Shoot.

Idaho Ed Board to Vote Friday on Online Classes

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • The state Board of Education is expected to call a special meeting Friday to vote on a proposed rule to require high school students to take courses online.

A subcommittee of the board has already recommended trustees pass the rule, despite heavy opposition at public hearings across the state this summer. The rule would require students starting with the class of 2016 to take at least two credits online to graduate.

At a hearing in Nampa last month, Sue Darden was among a small group of teachers who testified about their concerns over the plan.

“What I’m opposed to is removing the teacher from the equation. What kind of instruction are they going to be getting? What kind of interaction are they going to have?” asked Darden, a 21-year teaching veteran who works in the Meridian School District.

The board previously had a Sept. 1 deadline from the state Department of Administration to vote on the proposed rule for the measure to go before the Idaho Legislature during the 2012 session, which starts in January. The deadline was extended to Sept. 9, said board spokesman Mark Browning.

Under the rule, one of the two required online classes must be taught remotely, without a teacher present in the classroom. The rule now headed to the full board was revised to remove an outright ban on the teacher ever being present in the classroom with the students during course time.

While some who testified on the proposed rule at the Nampa hearing said they would rather Idaho didn’t require students to take any online courses, Browning reminded them that was not an option.

The board is drafting online course requirements as part of new education changes that were signed into law this year with backing from public schools chief Tom Luna and Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter.

“Zero is not an option in the legislation,” Browning said.

Luna had wanted students to take up to eight online course credits as part of his education changes, but that provision was ditched during the 2011 session amid opposition from parents, teachers and some lawmakers. An effort to require students to take four online credits also failed.

The legislation that was approved instead directs the state Board of Education to draft standards governing the online course requirements.

“This was not the board’s legislation, but the legislation does direct the board to promulgate rules,” said Tracie Bent, a planning and policy officer for the board.

Luna, who sits on the board, had said after the 2011 session that four online credits would be the starting point. But the board directed a subcommittee to decide how trustees would proceed in April and that panel mostly discussed making one or two online credits a requirement to graduate high school.

Idaho is also introducing teacher merit pay and shifting money from salaries toward classroom technology, phasing in laptops for teachers and students, as part of Luna’s education changes, which also limit union bargaining rights.

The changes were targeted in a referendum campaign earlier this year and will go before Idaho voters in November 2012.

Pact Eludes Idaho Redistricters on Second to Last Day

BOISE • Idaho redistricters adjourned until 8 a.m. Tuesday, leaving just hours before that day’s 5 p.m. deadline to draw up Idaho’s new political boundaries.

The best hope for a compromise may be Republican commissioner Lorna Finman and Democratic panelist Julie Kane, who have been working together on a plan.

But there’s still no guarantee, especially with GOP commissioner Lou Esposito and Democrat George Moses still feuding.

During Monday’s session, Esposito called a Moses’ proposal for Ada County “greed at its worst.”

Meanwhile, Democratic co-chairman Allen Andersen presented a map showing Idaho’s Democratic-influenced areas in isolated white patches, surrounded by a vast red sea to reflect Idaho’s GOP dominance.

Andersen made this plea: Leave the white Democratic. GOP chairman Evan Frasure said Andersen was acknowledging the obvious: Idaho is a Republican state.

Protecting the Nation at Any Cost Has Resulted in Unnecessary Responses

MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

Editor’s note: The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday, Sept. 1:

It was a natural reaction after 9/11: Protect the nation at any cost. But a survey of homeland security projects by Los Angeles Times staff writer Kim Murphy reveals that the “any cost” rationale has resulted in unnecessary and ec-centric responses to the possibility of a terrorist act. Congress should block such projects in the future.

For example, Murphy told of a grant for anti-terrorism equipment to a county in Nebraska, which received thousands of dollars for cattle nose leads, halters and electric prods — in case terrorists waged biological warfare against cows. Glendale, Calif., got a $205,000 grant, which it used to purchase a 9-ton BearCat armored vehicle, one of more than 300 deployed across the country. (Officials feared that terrorists might target DreamWorks Animation or the Disney creative campus.) In one case in New York, the connection of a $3-million grant to counter-terrorism was a mystery even to the beneficiaries.

It is hard to evaluate the efficacy of security arrangements — think of the elaborate airport screening by the Transportation Security Administration — because no terrorist act has occurred. Supporters also can always argue that the absence of incidents proves that the system works. (We’re skeptical, though, about the deterrent value of cattle prods.) But the deterrent argument is more plausible in some places than in others. That’s why planners should concentrate on the “where” of security precautions rather than the “what.”

The truth is that not all potential terrorist targets are equal. It’s prudent to have elaborate preparations for New York, Washington and even Los Angeles (although a BearCat might not have much utility in a terrorist attack). But grants for homeland security projects in smaller cities or rural or suburban areas seem more like pork than precaution. And it’s no excuse for those communities to say that the BearCats and other high-end equipment can be used for routine police functions. If Congress wants to fund local law enforcement, it knows how to do so. But it shouldn’t characterize such largesse as a response to 9/11.

With the anniversary of those attacks approaching, homeland security is the ultimate sacred cow, which explains why the federal and state governments are spending $75 billion a year on security. But Murphy’s article makes a persuasive case that many of the grants to localities are unnecessary or poorly conceived. Congress and the Department of Homeland Security need to review current grant procedures and target federal funds where they are most needed.

A single terrorist incident can be devastating to large numbers of people, as 9/11 demonstrated. That doesn’t mean the nation needs to be blanketed with state-of-the art equipment, some of it only tangentially related to terrorism. In homeland security, as in other areas, choices must be made.

5 Myths About Sept. 11

Special to The Washington Post

We all remember where we were on Sept. 11, 2001, when al-Qaida launched its horrific attacks on the United States. In the decade since, no number of commissions, books, films and reports has been able to end the misconceptions about what 9/11 meant, America’s response to it and the nature of the ongoing threat. As the anniversary nears, let’s tackle some of the most persistent myths.

1. Sept. 11 was unimaginable.

In 2002, the White House described 9/11 as “a new type of attack that had not been foreseen.” An understandable response to being caught off guard, perhaps — but the fact is that the possibility of hijacked airliners crashing into buildings was neither unimaginable nor unimagined. The idea dates at least to 1972, when hijackers, during a protracted domestic incident, shot the co-pilot of a Southern Airways flight and threatened to crash the plane into the nuclear facility at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Brian Michael Jenkins
Rand Corporation

After the 1993 bombing at the World Trade Center, a “red team” of consultants (myself included) hired by the center to explore future threats to the site identified a plane crashing into one of the towers as a possible scenario. In 1994, hijackers of an Air France jet reportedly considered crashing the aircraft into the Eiffel Tower.

And a terrorist plot discovered in 1995 involving Ramzi Yousef, one of the 1993 World Trade Center bombers, and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the self-described architect of 9/11, contemplated crashing an explosives-laden plane into the headquarters of the CIA.

Nonetheless, the 9/11 attacks transformed our perceptions of plausibility. Terrorist scenarios deemed far-fetched on Sept. 10, 2001, became operative presumptions one day later; even a 1 percent chance of something happening was sufficient cause to treat the possibility seriously. This skepticism-free environment multiplied public fears and security spending. Meanwhile, terrorists carried out more predictable low-tech attacks on commuter trains and subways.

2. The attacks were a strategic success for al-Qaida.

An audacious and unprecedented strike, 9/11 certainly was a tactical success. But it also was a strategic miscalculation.

In Osama bin Laden’s eyes, the United States was a hollow power. Despite the nation’s apparent military strength, in his view, Americans had no stomach for losses, and a devastating terrorist attack on the U.S. homeland would drive the Americans out of the Middle East. In his 1996 fatwa declaring war on America, bin Laden pointed out that the United States withdrew its forces from Lebanon after the 1983 bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut. And in 1993, after 18 U.S. soldiers were killed on a single day in Mogadishu, in an attack for which al-Qaida claimed some credit, the United States hastily got out of Somalia.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rein in the EPA

The Environmental Protection Agency’s latest consideration to revise regulations limiting ozone, mercury, nitrogen oxides and sulfur dioxide; coal ash waste and water used in cooling the processes at coal-fired power plants would have a negative impact on both the economy and jobs and on the availability of electric power. It’s time the EPA was reined in.

The House of Representatives has already passed two bills that would do just that: H.R. 910 and H.R. 2018. Both of these bills would go a long way toward reining in the out-of-control and draconian-style regulations of the unaccountable EPA. The Senate now needs to take action on one or both of these bills.

However, there is another bill that would affect all federal agencies, the REINS Act, S. 299, Regulations from the Executive in Need of Scrutiny Act of 2011. This bill would require congressional approval of any interim or final regulation from the Executive Branch bureaucracy that costs more than $100 million per year or that excessively increases costs or prices or has “significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, innovation or U.S. competitiveness.” This popular measure already has 28 sponsors and hearings completed in the Senate. There is a companion bill in the House, H.R. 10, that has garnered 159 co-sponsors.

I urge you call U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, asking him to support this common-sense legislation that would rein in the damaging effects to our electricity supply, the economy and jobs by a host of unelected czars and their bloated bureaucratic agencies, including certainly the EPA.

Thank You

On behalf of the Twin Falls Public Library Board of Trustees and staff, we would like to thank those who helped us in so many ways during the Library’s carpeting project. The entire library was re-carpeted over the last three months. More than 63 volunteers working more than 200 hours helped us move at least 200,000 books and other items — and then helped us move them back again! We thank the many individuals who helped “just because they really like the library.”

We had two groups that put in an extra effort — the Helping Hands from Robert Stuart Junior High and Dan Plant working on his Eagle Scout Award.

We would like to thank the library patrons who had to put up with the inconvenience during these months. The library did remain open, but we thank you for your patience as different areas were closed — often for as long as three weeks. All services should be back to normal soon.

A special thanks to the library staff for all its hard work and dedication throughout the project. They have been able to continue to serve the library patrons, even with all the interruptions that have happened in what has become the “Year of the Building.” The library has received a new roof, an updated heating and air conditioning system, fresh interior paint, and some remodeling as part of the carpeting project.

Due to a grant project, we now have a broadband connection that makes for faster computer use. And a special thanks to the Library Foundation which provided the library with new computer station furniture. The city has done a fine job of taking care of the library and realizing what a landmark building it is for the community.

Again, thanks to all. The carpeting is gorgeous. Come visit your library at an open house on Oct. 1!

A Post-Industrial Bust

Special to The Washington Post

Of all the lies that the American people have been told the past four decades, the biggest one may be this: We'll all come out ahead in the shift from an industrial to a post-industrial society. Yes, we were counseled, there will be major dislocations, as there were during the transition from an agrarian to an industrial economy, but the America that will emerge from this transformation, like the America that emerged 100 years ago, will be one whose citizens are ultimately more prosperous and secure than their industrial-era forebears.

What a crock. On Labor Day 2011, the America that's replaced the vibrant industrial giant of the mid-20th century is a basket case. We've lost the jobs that created the broadly shared prosperity that made us the envy of the world. In their place, when we've created jobs at all, they've generated neither prosperity nor security.

The most prescient writer on post-industrial America offered a sobering perspective. In his 1972 book "The Coming of Post-Industrial Society," sociologist Daniel Bell predicted a future of service jobs, rising consumption, compensatory entitlements and wars over taxes.

Even as Bell's prophecies began to be borne out, though, the champions of the new economic order — from General Electric's Jack Welch to every New Democrat and any old Republican — assured us that America would flourish as a post-industrial innovator in the new global economy, crafting the cutting-edge technologies whose actual assembly we could relegate to less-skilled workforces on distant shores. Thirty years ago, when defenders of American manufacturing first suggested that the nation commit to a "domestic content" standard in the goods we bought, they were howled down by nearly every economist and editorial writer in the land. (A friend counted 98 newspapers that editorialized against it, and none that wrote in favor.)

Harold Meyerson

Today, the economy that arose on manufacturing's ashes has turned to ashes itself. The Wall Street-Wal-Mart economy of the past several decades off-shored millions of factory jobs, which it offset by creating low-paying jobs in the service and retail sectors; extending credit to consumers so they could keep consuming despite their stagnating incomes; and fueling, until it collapsed, a boom in construction.

We are only now beginning to understand the toll this economy has taken on America's workers — and on our working men in particular. A stunning study from Michael Greenstone and Adam Looney of the Hamilton Project, published in the Milken Institute Review, reveals that the median earnings of men ages 25 to 64 declined 28 percent between 1969 and 2009. Within this age group, the median earnings of men who completed high school but didn't go on to college fell 47 percent, while the median earnings of male college graduates also declined, if only 12 percent.

Part of this decline stems from the shrinking share of working-age men with full-time jobs, which fell from 83 to 66 percent between 1960 and 2009. The other part stems from the fall in inflation-adjusted median yearly earnings of working-age men who have full-time jobs, which have shrunk by about $5,000 since the mid-'70s. Combined, write Greenstone and Looney, these two declines explain why the earnings of American men "haven't been this low since Ike was president and Marshal Dillon was keeping the peace in Dodge City."

Debt Ceiling Compromise Included Changes in Federal Student Loans

Linda P. Campbell
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

College financial aid letters arrived showing loans as part of the "awards," I thought: Gee, it doesn't feel much like assistance to essentially tell new college students and their parents, "Here's how much you can go into debt. Good luck."

This year, the angst wasn't over whether to borrow but how much to bite off with that master promissory note.

Given that my two-college family all too easily slid into the category of owing more for higher-ed debt than for credit cards, I was more than a little interested in the wrinkle in the debt ceiling debate focusing on federal student loans.

That aspect didn't get much media attention in the grand standoff between recklessly intransigent Republicans and a disappointingly capitulating president. And most people wouldn't have imagined that taxpayer subsidies to college students would play a major role in the search for fiscal sanity.

But when you put all the relatively small amounts of assistance together, they add up to real money.

Once all the posturing cleared, the agreement didn't change much in the loan program for undergraduate students: It just ended a discount for making the first 12 payments on time.

But, starting next year, the government will no longer cover the interest that accrues for graduate and professional students while they're in school.

That's not a welcome message for those looking toward medical, law and business schools. But the two revisions are supposed to result in about $22 billion in savings over 10 years, according to the Congressional Budget Office. Of that, $17 billion will go to pay for Pell grants, which provide up to $5,500 each for the neediest undergrads. The other $5 billion will be a reduction in direct government spending.

It's one segment of Americans contributing to cutting the deficit.

On a New York Times blog about the changes, commenters bemoaned the shafting of lowly struggling students while wealthy Americans and corporate honchos keep their luxury tax write-offs and other federal handouts.

They have a point. The pain of reducing the federal deficit isn't being inflicted fairly, as it should be. And the cuts that still must be hashed out as a result of the debt ceiling agreement almost certainly will devolve into a tug-of-war among special interests.

On the other hand, there's a school of thought that the graduate school subsidies only encouraged students to borrow themselves into drowning debt they can't afford when they enter the job market in a struggling economy.

As of last year, outstanding student loans totaled almost $830 billion, an estimate attributed to Mark Kantrowitz, publisher of FinAid.org and FastWeb.com. But that included both loans through the U.S. Education Department and those through private sources.

Students with financial need can borrow a certain amount through the Education Department at a low rate (3.4 percent for 2011-12 for undergraduates, 6.8 percent for graduate students), and the government pays the interest while they're enrolled full-time. Repayment starts when a student graduates or leaves school.

Other federal loans are available at a slightly higher rate (currently 6.8 percent), but students are responsible for all the interest. Parents can apply for limited loans through the government, too (7.9 percent interest), but repayment starts while a student is still in school.

The Hidden Costs of Credit Cards

Larry Harris

University of Southern California

It seems like a no-brainer. Your credit card offers you a $1 reward for every $100 you spend. It's not a huge payback, but it's something: a rebate that might as well be free money.

Who wouldn't sign up for a card with rebates instead of one without them? And then, who wouldn't swipe the card for everything — groceries, gas and the movies?

The fact is, credit card rebates are hurting, not helping, many unsuspecting consumers.

These programs raise prices for everyone in ways that most people do not recognize. They also encourage people to use credit unwisely. And they punish those with the discipline to buy only with cash.

The primary winners in the rebate game are the credit card companies. They offer these programs because they profit from the interest rates they charge their cardholders and from the fees they charge merchants. The rebates encourage people to use credit instead of cash, and the credit card companies' profits increase.

Merchants — who generally must accept credit cards from their customers to be competitive — are caught in the middle. They pay high fees to the credit card companies when their customers pay with credit cards. But the merchants benefit because they are paid quickly for credit sales, they do not have to incur the costs involved in extending their own credit to customers, and they do not have to worry about bounced checks. Although they rightly complain about high merchant fees, they can ultimately pass them along to their customers in the form of higher prices.

Who gets hurt? The consumer. Especially the cash customer.

More generous rebate programs mean the credit card companies must charge merchants higher fees to pay the rebates, and higher fees mean higher prices for everyone. All customers pay the higher prices, but only the credit customers ultimately receive the rebates. So cash customers are the ones most hurt by rebate programs. They bear the brunt of these rebate programs.

Many cash customers do not use credit because they want to live responsibly within their means. For some, credit abstinence is their ultimate protection against credit abuse. Some are simply too poor to qualify for credit. It is shameful that despite their poverty or their discipline, cash customers pay higher prices so that others can use credit cards and get rebates.

Myths

Many of al-Qaida's commanders disagreed, predicting that an enraged United States would focus its fury on the terrorist group and its allies, but bin Laden pushed ahead. When the United States did just what the others had feared, bin Laden switched gears, asserting that he had intended all along to provoke the United States into waging a war that would galvanize all of Islam against it. That didn't happen, either.

3. Washington overreacted.

In the decade since Sept. 11, the U.S. homeland has been the target of far fewer terrorist attacks than in any decade going back to the 1960s — making it easy now to regard 9/11 as a lucky terrorist punch and the U.S. response as excessive.

At the time, however, no one knew how many more attacks were on the way. Immediate action was required to destroy the terrorist enterprise responsible for 9/11; no administration, Republican or Democratic, could have waited to see if the strikes were an anomaly. That meant improving intelligence, strengthening security at home and using military force abroad — the only way the United States could quickly break up al-Qaida's training camps and disrupt further plots.

America's invasion of Iraq was not, strictly speaking, an overreaction to 9/11. The Iraq war was a strategic decision by the Bush administration to remove a hostile government and a potential threat. The fact that the invasion was portrayed as part of the global war on terrorism — in an effort to gain domestic political support — does not make it so. In fact, the war was a huge diversion of U.S. resources from the terrorist fight and a boon to al-Qaida recruiting.

4. A nuclear terrorist attack is a near inevitability.

Shortly after the Sept. 11 attacks, a CIA source called Dragonfire reported that al-Qaida terrorists had smuggled a nuclear weapon into New York. The source turned out to be wrong, but in the shadow of 9/11, al-Qaida's nuclear capabilities became an obsession. Despite North Korea's demonstrated possession of nuclear weapons and Iran's suspected nuclear weapons program, in 2008, then-CIA Director Michael Hayden identified al-Qaida as the agency's "number one nuclear concern."

Yet, while everyone agrees that al-Qaida's leaders have nuclear aspirations, there is zero evidence that the organization has ever had any nuclear capabilities. Fear has made al-Qaida the world's top terrorist nuclear power, yet it possesses not a single nuke. This is a lesson in how terrorism works.

5. U.S. civil liberties were decimated after the attacks.

Civil libertarians understandably worried that 9/11 would lead to police-state style restrictions on individual freedoms in the United States. Instead, the Constitution has held as the government has steered a middle course.

Preventive detention of terrorism suspects, a procedure common in a number of democratic countries, was rejected. The government held Jose Padilla, a U.S. citizen and al-Qaida operative, as an "enemy combatant," but his case was ultimately referred to the courts. And domestic intelligence efforts were increased, but Congress rejected the idea of a separate domestic intelligence service — an American MI5.

Still, domestic authorities were pushed toward preventive action against terrorism instead of a traditional law enforcement approach. Federal authorities were granted more discretion in opening terrorism-related cases, and the FBI began thousands of investigations. Not surprisingly, only a small percentage have resulted in prosecutions.

POLICE STOP CAR AFTER 13-MILE PURSUIT IN SE IDAHO

IDAHO FALLS • Idaho State Police officers finally stopped a car they'd chased for 13 miles through south-eastern Idaho.

The Idaho State Journal reports an officer observed 51-year-old Tracy Nii driving erratically in the north-bound lanes of U.S. Interstate 15 near Blackfoot on Sunday afternoon.

The officer tried to get Nii to pull over, but Nii refused.

Officers used spikes to pop the tires of the vehicle near an exit just north of Shelley, but Nii was only stopped three miles later when ISP officers bumped his vehicle, causing it to spin around near Idaho Falls.

After apprehending Nii, Officers said they discovered he was suffering from an undisclosed medical issue.

So instead of initially being taken to jail, he was taken to the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center.

SE Idaho Muslims Look to Build a New Mosque

POCATELLO • Southeastern Idaho's Muslim population has swelled beyond numbers that can be accommodated in the current mosque, a small home near downtown Pocatello.

As a result, religious leaders from the region are trying to raise some $200,000 to erect a new facility that's capable of holding about 300 people.

Still, local leaders said it's been tough to raise the cash for a building and accompanying parking space.

The Idaho State Journal on Monday reported that post-Sept. 11 scrutiny on money raised abroad has hurt efforts to cultivate foreign sources of capital.

"It's become a pretty big hassle," said Ebraheem Gibbons, a Pocatello Muslim leader who spoke during Eid, a celebration marking the end of Ramadan. "It's gotten to the point that most Middle Eastern groups have stopped giving (to U.S. organizations) altogether."

Charitable giving is important to devout Muslims, as it is one of Islam's five requirements.

But after the 2001 terrorist attacks, Islamic charities came under intense scrutiny in the United States over fears that some had ties to terror groups. The Bush administration closed nine Muslim charities, raided six others and froze the assets of one.

Nationwide, some Islamic groups have gone through a certification program created in 2008 by the Better Business Bureau and Muslim Advocates, a legal organization based in San Francisco. The Muslim Charities Accreditation Program evaluates non-profits and trains leaders on compliance with the government's legal and financial rules.

Gibbons said more than 150 people currently use the existing mosque facilities.

"We have had to turn to two sermons on Friday so we could accommodate the people," Gibbons said. "Last year, we had people praying outside in the snow. That was the thing that forced us to go to two. We can't have people praying out in the snow."

At Sunday's celebration in Pocatello, hosted by the Muslim Student Association of Idaho State University and The Islamic Society of Southeastern Idaho, several local dignitaries made appearances, including ISU President Arthur Vailas, Chubbuck Mayor Steven England and Pocatello City

Councilman Steve Brown.

"There's one thing that we can come together with on common ground and that's our spiritual nature," said Brown, who called the event "a humbling experience."

FIRE EVACUATION ALERT LIFTED FOR IDAHO-MONTANA BORDER

BOISE • An evacuation alert was lifted for residents living near a fire straddling the Idaho-Montana border after crews decided there's no longer a high probability of having to ask people to leave.

The Saddle Complex has burned more than 42 square miles of lodgepole pine and sub-alpine fir in two national forests since on Aug. 14.

The 18-square-mile Salt fire on Idaho's Salmon-Challis National Forest is being fought by seven helicopters, 10 engines, six bulldozers and 15 water tenders.

There was an extreme fire danger warning in effect Monday afternoon due to hot, dry, windy weather.

LAWN CARE TIPS FOR THE FALL

Tips for Adding Bulbs to Your Flower Garden

Who can resist the beauty of a blooming red tulip, a delicate purple iris, or an orange oriental lily? There's just something so astounding about a small inert bulb producing such a magnificent flower in a relatively short amount of time. Fall planted bulbs, like <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/flower/tulips-care-and-tulip-planting-tips.htm> tulips [2], <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/flower/daffodil-planting-care-tips-how-to-plant-daffodils-in-your-garden.htm> daffodils [3], and crocus, will add an exciting dimension to your flower garden in early spring while spring-planted bulbs, like <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/flower/care-of-gladiolas-how-to-grow-gladiolas-in-your-garden.htm> gladioli [4] and <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/indoor/cyclamen-care.htm> cyclamen [5], will add brilliant color to your garden throughout the summer. There is one thing that you can always count on with bulbs: they will steal the show in your flower garden!

Bulbs can be a bit mysterious, so let's start with some background information on them. They can be broken down into three basic categories: spring-blooming, summer-blooming, and fall-blooming. Spring-blooming bulbs, like tulips, daffodils, crocus, allium, and <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/flower/planting-and-care-of-hyacinths.htm> hyacinth [6], must have a period of dormant, cold weather before they come to life in early to late spring. Be sure to plant your spring-blooming bulbs before the first hard frost and soon after your soil temperature cools down to 60F degrees. An inexpensive soil thermometer will tell you where your flower bed's temperature is currently. But be sure to take the temperature reading during the warmest part of the day. Summer-blooming bulbs, like gladioli, <http://www.gardeningknowhow.com/flower/canna-lily-care.htm> cannas [7], and iris, should be planted in late spring. Unlike spring-blooming bulbs, these bulbs can't withstand and don't appreciate cold winter temperatures. Every year my friend Arwen religiously digs up her gladioli bulbs and stores them in a shoebox in the closet until the next spring thaw. Be sure to check the requirements of your summer-blooming bulbs before you buy; for some gardeners, myself included, planting in spring and digging up in fall is too much of a commitment.

Fall-blooming bulbs, like fall crocus and colchicum, are planted typically in the late summer to early fall. They typically bloom that first autumn that you plant them – instant gratification! In the spring the foliage will pop out of the ground, die off in summer, and the flowers will appear all alone in the fall. These bulbs don't mind spending the winter in the ground, either.

Every bulb is gloriously different and therefore may have slightly different needs, so be sure to consult your gardening encyclopedia or nursery professional for directions on how to care for your bulbs. If you've chosen the summer-blooming bulbs and you must dig them up in the fall, be sure to wait until the foliage has turned brown and the first frost is near. These bulbs rely on a short dormant period after blooming to invigorate the bulb and prepare it for next season. After digging up and drying for 24 hours, store these bulbs in a cool location covered in damp peat moss. Don't miss out on the exciting adventures that bulbs can bring to your flower garden next season.

Obama Says GOP Must Back U.S. First, Create Jobs

President portrays Congress as obstacle to putting more than 1 million construction workers back to work.

BY DARLENE SUPERVILLE

DETROIT • President Barack Obama used a boisterous Labor Day rally to put congressional Republicans on the spot, challenging them to place the country's interests above all else and vote to create jobs and put the economy back on a path toward growth. "Show us what you've got," he said. In a partial preview of the jobs speech he's delivering to Congress Thursday night, Obama said roads and bridges nationwide need rebuilding and more than 1 million unemployed construction workers are itching to "get dirty" making the repairs. He portrayed Congress as an obstacle to getting that work done. "I'm going to propose ways to put America back to work that both parties can agree to, because I still believe both parties can work together to solve our problems," Obama said at an annual Labor Day rally sponsored by the Detroit-area AFL-CIO. "Given the urgency of this moment, given the hardship that many people are facing, folks have got to get together. But we're not going to wait for them."

Libyan Rebels Hold Off on Attacking Gadhafi Bastion

TARHOUNA, Libya (AP) • Thousands of rebel fighters closed in around one of Libya's last pro-Gadhafi strongholds Monday, but held back on a final assault in hopes of avoiding a bloody battle for the town of Bani Walid. The standoff came as rebel leaders in Tripoli said Libya's transition to democratic rule would begin with a "declaration of liberation" that was unlikely to come before Gadhafi's forces last strongholds were defeated and the fugitive former dictator had been captured. The declaration would mark the start of an eight-month deadline for Libya's transitional council to arrange the vote for a national assembly, and eventually to a constitution and general elections. "When the clock starts ticking on those eight months remains to be seen," rebel spokesman Jalal el-Gallal said, adding it wasn't yet clear how liberation would be defined.

Wildfire Destroys Nearly 500 Homes in Central Texas

At least 5,000 people are forced from their homes about 25 miles east of Austin, many of them fearing the worst while spending the night in emergency shelters.

BY WILL WEISSERT and MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press

BASTROP, Texas • A roaring wildfire raced unchecked Monday through rain-starved farm and ranchland in Central Texas, destroying nearly 500 homes during a rapid advance fanned in part by howling winds from the remnants of Tropical Storm Lee. At least 5,000 people were forced from their homes in Bastrop County about 25 miles east of Austin, many of them fearing the worst while spending the night in emergency shelters. Huge clouds of smoke soared into the sky and hung over downtown Bastrop, a town of about 6,000 people along the Colorado River.

The blaze consumed as much as 25,000 acres along a line that stretched for about 16 miles, Texas Forest Service officials said. It destroyed 476 homes and about 250 firefighters were working around the clock, using bulldozers and pumper trucks against the fire, Bastrop County Judge Ronnie McDonald said. Mike Fischer, the county emergency management director, said the fire is "nowhere near controlled," and that a separate, smaller blaze south of the city is growing larger. "I wasn't going to evacuate, but then the smoke got blacker and blacker and it was like: 'OK, time to go,'" said Gina Thurman, 47, an analyst for the Texas Workforce Commission. "Waiting is the most frustrating thing," she said, choking back tears as she sat by herself in the shade on a curb outside Ascension Catholic Church, one of several shelter sites. "You're sitting there and you don't know anything but your house is probably burning." Rick Blakely, 54, said when it finally would be time to return home, "I'm not expecting anything to be standing." He was among about 30 people who slept on cots at the church. "There was someone who asked how I was and it's a state of shock," he said. "I just don't know what I'm going to do." The new outbreak led Gov. Rick Perry to return home to Texas, cutting short a visit to South Carolina where he was campaigning for the Republican nomination for president. He also canceled a trip to California. "The wildfire situation in Texas is severe and all necessary state resources are being made available to protect lives and property," Perry said.

Tropical Storm Lee Turns Deadly in Miss.

Man swept away by floodwaters while trying to cross a swollen creek, the first death caused by Lee.

BY HOLBROOK MOHR
Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. • The slow-moving remnants of Tropical Storm Lee dumped a torrent of rain across the South on Monday and whipped up tornadoes as it pushed further inland. One death was reported, and at least one person was injured. In Mississippi, a man was swept away by floodwaters after trying to cross a swollen creek, authorities said Monday, the first death caused by flooding or winds from Lee. The system was sweeping across Alabama and pushing into Georgia, where suspected tornadoes sent trees falling into homes and injured at least one person. Lt. Jay Baker of the Cherokee County Sheriff's office northwest of Atlanta said he'd gotten scattered reports of homes damaged by falling trees, but couldn't say how many. One person was taken to a hospital with injuries that weren't life-threatening.

As of Monday afternoon, at least 16,000 people were without power in Louisiana and Mississippi, states that bore the brunt of the storm over the weekend. The man who died in Mississippi, 57-year-old John Howard Anderson Jr., had been in a car with two other people trying to cross a rain-swollen creek that naturally flows over the entrance to JP Coleman State Park. Anderson had been staying on a house boat at the park's marina. Tishomingo County

Coroner Mack Wilemon said he was told Anderson was outside of the car and had been thrown a rope to be rescued, but he couldn't hold on. Jonathan Weeks, a 48-year-old salesman from Plantersville who owns a vacation home near the park, said he helped pull two people to shore and tried to save Anderson. Weeks said a strong storm had come through the area and he and his wife went out looking around when they saw a van crossing the creek. He happened to have a rope in the tool box of his truck. "It all happened so fast. They were in there trying to get out and panicking. The power was out so everything was dark," Weeks recalled in a phone interview Monday. "We threw them a rope and tied it to a tree," Weeks said. "We got two of them to the bank and were trying to help the driver. We had him on the rope and were trying to pull him in, but I don't think he was able to hold on."

Hurricane Katia Grows to Category 3

MIAMI • Hurricane Katia has grown to a Category 3 storm as it moves across the Atlantic Ocean. On Monday afternoon, Katia's maximum sustained winds had increased to 116 mph. That makes Katia a major hurricane, and some additional strengthening is expected later in the day. Hurricane specialist Todd Kimberlain says it's looking less likely that Katia will hit land but that wind from the storm could still affect the U.S. East Coast as it moves north. — The Associated Press

Ruins of Roman Gladiator School Unveiled in Austria

A model of a Roman gladiator school (left) is seen at a news conference Monday in Carnuntum, Austria, to unveil the discovery of well-preserved ruins of a gladiator school. The Carnuntum ruins are part of a city of 50,000 people 28 miles east of Vienna that flourished about 1,700 years ago, a major military and trade outpost linking the far-flung Roman empire's Asian boundaries to its central and northern European lands. Mapped out by radar, the ruins of the gladiator school remain underground. Yet officials say the find rivals the famous Ludus Magnus — the largest of the gladiatorial training schools in Rome — in its structure. And they say the Austrian site is even more detailed than the well-known Roman ruin. — The Associated Press

Time For Flu Shots; Some May Get Tiny Needle

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • It’s flu vaccine time again — and some lucky shot-seekers will find that the needle has shrunk.

The first flu shot that works with a less-scary skin prick instead of an inch-long needle is hitting the market this fall. Sorry kids, this option so far is just for adults, and it’s so brand-new that it will take some searching to find a dose.

But there are plenty of the other varieties — standard shots, a special high-dose shot for seniors and the needle-free squirt-in-the-nose option — to go around. At least 166 million doses of flu vaccine are expected to be produced this year.

The big question is whether people will get it. Usually each year’s flu vaccine varies from the previous versions as different influenza strains emerge. This year, the vaccine’s a duplicate because the three flu strains that sickened people last winter still are circulating.

Scientific studies aren’t clear about how much a person’s immunity wanes over a year, although it varies by age and overall health. But federal health officials and the American Academy of Pediatrics weighed the evidence and say don’t skip this year’s vaccination — it’s the only way to be sure your immune system remains revved enough for the best protection.

“You’re not going to be able to count on that vaccine protecting you throughout a second season,” says Dr. Lisa Grohskopf of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

A yearly vaccination now is recommended for virtually everyone, except babies younger than 6 months and people with severe allergies to the eggs used to make it. Last year, 49 percent of children and 41 percent of adults were vaccinated.

Say you never catch the flu? You could be a carrier, unknowingly spreading the misery when you feel little more than a sniffle, says Dr. William Schaffner of Vanderbilt University, president of the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases.

“You should be vaccinated each and every year to ensure both you’re protected and you’re giving the maximum protection to people around you,” he said.

Pakistan Arrests Top Al-Qaida Suspect

MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

ISLAMABAD • Pakistani security forces working in cooperation with U.S. intelligence captured senior al-Qaida commander Younis al-Mauritani, the most important al-Qaida figure in several years to be arrested in Pakistan, officials said Monday.

Al-Mauritani, described by some to be the organization’s “foreign minister,” central to the group’s plots against the West, was detained in the western city of Quetta, along with two other al-Qaida operatives. In Washington, a U.S. official called al-Mauritani’s capture “another major blow to al-Qaida.”

Al-Qaida was already reeling from the death in May of its founder, Osama bin Laden, and the elimination, by a U.S. missile strike last month in Pakistan’s tribal area, of its new deputy leader, Atiyah Abd al-Rahman, according to U.S. officials.

Since the discovery of bin Laden in the northern Pakistani town of Abbottabad by U.S. special forces, there has been intense pressure on the Pakistani authorities to prove that they’re committed to the fight against al-Qaida.

The U.S.-Pakistani collaboration over the capture of al-Mauritani was in contrast to the bitter recriminations from both sides that followed the unilateral bin Laden raid, which threatened to sink the alliance and had, in effect, frozen intelligence cooperation. White House spokesman Josh Earnest hailed the arrest as “an example of the long-standing partnership between the U.S. and Pakistan in fighting terrorism.”

Al-Mauritani “was tasked personally by Osama bin Laden to focus on hitting targets of economical importance in United States of America, Europe and Australia,” said a statement from the Pakistani military. “He was planning to target United States economic interests, including gas and oil pipelines, power-generating dams, and strike ships and oil tankers through explosive-laden speed boats in international waters.”

Internet Archive Shows TV Coverage of Sept. 11

NEW YORK (AP) • For many in New York and Washington, Sept. 11, 2001, was a personal experience, an attack on their cities. Most everywhere else in the world, it was a television event.

TV’s commemoration as the 10th anniversary approaches on Sunday puts that day in many different contexts. There is one place, however, for people to see the Sept. 11 attacks and the week after as they unfolded, without any filters.

The Internet Archive, a California-based organization that collects audio, moving images and Web pages for historical purposes, has put together a television news archive of that day’s coverage.

More than 20 channels were recorded with more than 3,000 hours of television. Besides major U.S. networks like ABC, CBS, CNN and NBC, the Internet Archive has posted online TV recordings from Moscow, Paris, London, Baghdad, Tokyo, Ottawa and elsewhere.

The site is available at <http://www.archive.org/details/911/day>.

The material is valuable to researchers, but the Internet Archive wanted to make it easy to use so the general public can go back and see what that day was like, said Brewster Kahle, the organization’s director.

Obama

“We’re going to see if we’ve got some straight shooters in Congress. We’re going to see if congressional Republicans will put country before party,” he said.

Congress returns from its summer recess this week and the faltering economy and jobs shortage are expected to be a dominant theme.

Besides spending on public works, Obama said he wants pending trade deals passed to open new markets for U.S. goods. He also said he wants Republicans to prove they’ll fight as hard to cut taxes for the middle class as they do for profitable oil companies and the wealthiest Americans.

The president is expected to call for continuing a payroll tax cut for workers and jobless benefits for the unemployed. Some Republicans oppose extending the payroll tax cut, calling it an unproven job creator that will only add to the nation’s massive debt. The tax cut extension is set to expire Jan. 1.

Republicans also cite huge federal budget deficits in expressing opposition to vast new spending on jobs programs.

But Obama said lawmakers need to act — and act quickly. “The time for Washington games is over. The time for action is now,” he told a supportive union crowd that Detroit police said was in the thousands. The event at a General Motors Corp. parking lot in the shadow of the automaker’s headquarters building had the sound and feel of a campaign event, with the union audience breaking into chants of “Four More Years” throughout the president’s 25-minute speech.

HEALTH & WELLNESS

“For 40-Years, I was tortured with unbearable indigestion”

Confessions of an acid reflux victim

“And How I BEAT the indigestion Nightmare that Almost Killed Me!”

By Ralph Burns;
“Former” acid reflux sufferer

Here’s My Story: I’ve Suffered With Acid Reflux for Almost 40 Years Now. Unless you experience it; you can’t imagine how horrible it is. Every time I ate spicy foods I would get what I called “ROT GUT”. Like something was rotting in my stomach. But now I can eat anything... No matter how spicy. Even if I never could before.

Let me explain...

For the better part of my life; I purposely avoided a lot of foods. Especially ones with even a tiny bit of seasoning. Because if I didn’t, I’d experience a burning sensation through my esophagus— like somebody poured hot lead or battery acid down my throat. Add to that, those disgusting "mini-throw ups" and I was in "indigestion hell".

"I was beside myself. What was I gonna do? Keep taking the pills, or suffer with problems that could ultimately be my demise".

Doctors put me on all sorts of antacid remedies. But nothing worked. Or if they did, it would only be for a brief period. And then boom! My nightmare would return.

Sometimes, I felt like I was dying. The pain was unbearable and nothing could make it stop.

But then my wife, who occasionally suffered with the same problem; gave me one of her prescription acid blockers. It was a miracle. I felt like I could live again. Because before that, I was just miserable. I wanted to kill myself. But thankfully, it worked, and worked well.

I felt great, until about one year ago; when I read an FDA warning that scared the heck out of me. It went something like this...

FDA WARNING! Using proton pump inhibitors (PPIs) on a long term basis, increases your risk of hip, bone and spinal fractures.

That’s a particular concern to me, since many acid blockers are PPI’s. I’ve gone through two back surgeries and bilateral hip replacements. I had to ask myself, could PPI’s have been responsible for my medical woes? After all...

“The Recommended Treatment for Prilosec®, Prevacid® and Other PPI's is Only 14-DAYS, I Took Them for 14 YEARS!”

I was “between a rock and a hard place”. Stop using the PPIs and I’m a “dead man in the water”. It would be unbearable. I wouldn’t be able to eat anything. I’d have to go on a water diet.

But that FDA warning was scary. I knew I had to stop or else risk developing spinal stenosis. My mother had that. And I watched her die a horrible death. Her spine just fractured. It was the worst death. She didn’t deserve that. And neither do I.

63-year old Ralph Burns enjoying a spicy-hot portion of Lobster Fra Diavolo. Just 15-Minutes after taking AloeCure®

“Every time I ate something that didn't agree with me... I'd get what I called ‘Rot Gut’ — like my stomach was rotting out!”

I had to quit. So I stopped taking PPI's for a day or so. But my indigestion was worse than ever. I would rather take the chance of a spinal fracture than to live like that again. I tried everything. Even started using home remedies like Apple cider vinegar. But it just felt like I was pouring even more acid down my throat.

Then one day at dinner, a friend of mine said "why don't you try an aloe drink?" I said "aloe drink"? Jeez. That doesn't sound good at all!” The next day he brought me a case of something called AloeCure®. I was skeptical, but I was desperate! So instead of being an ingrate I decided to try it.

I was shocked! AloeCure®. Tasted pretty good too. It has a pleasant grape flavor that I actually enjoy drinking. I decided to experiment. I stopped taking the PPI's altogether and replaced it with a daily diet of AloeCure®. Then something remarkable happened... NOTHING! Not even the slightest hint of indigestion.

And here’s the best part. The next day we had Italian food — my worst enemy. But for the first time in 40 years I didn't get indigestion without relying on prescription or OTC pills and tablets. Finally, I just didn’t need them anymore!

I was so thrilled; I wrote the AloeCure® company to tell them how amazing their product is. They thanked me, and asked me to tell my story... The story that changed my life. I said “Sure, but only if you send me a hefty supply of AloeCure®. I just can’t live without it.”

But don't believe me. You have to try this stuff for yourself. I recommend AloeCure® to anyone who suffers with the same problem I did. It gives you immediate relief. You'll be grateful you did. I sure am. It's the best thing that's happened to me in a long, long time.

TRY IT 100% RISK-FREE!

The makers of AloeCure® have agreed to send you up to 6 FREE bottles PLUS 2 free bonus gifts with every order— they’re yours to keep no matter what.

That’s enough AloeCure® for 30 days of powerful digestive relief, absolutely FREE! But hurry! This is a special introductory offer, reserved for our readers only.

OBITUARIES

Florence Evelyn Anderson

March 4, 1921–Sept. 3, 2011

Florence Evelyn Anderson, beloved wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, and great-great-grandmother, passed away peacefully in her home, Sept. 3, 2011, surrounded by her family.

Florence was born in Pennock, Minn. on March 4, 1921, to Oscar and Hulda Butler. She and her husband, George, moved to Twin Falls in 1952, where she raised her four children.

As a devoted wife and mother, Florence dedicated her life to the care and nurturing of her family. She enjoyed traveling, and after retirement she and her husband spent many years exploring the country in their RV.

Florence was preceded in death by her daughter, Patricia Anderson Lee, and her son-in-law, Donn Lipman.

Florence is survived by her husband of 71 years, George E. Anderson; her children, Larry Anderson (Dixie), Catherine Lipman, Elizabeth Summers (Dennis); 10 grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

The family would like to thank Corrina, Heidi, and Melissa of Idaho Home Health & Hospice, and Dr. Sara Johnson for their loving care and kindness, and who made it possible for Florence to remain in her home.

A family memorial service will be held at a later date.

Cremation is under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home. Family and friends are encouraged to share their thoughts and memories at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

Duain R. Hess

March 12, 1936–Sept. 4, 2011

HEYBURN • Duain Rodean Hess, 75, of Heyburn, went to be with his loving Savior on Sunday, Sept. 4, 2011, while at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, from heart failure. His loving family was by his side, holding his hands.

Duain was born on March 12, 1936, in Rupert, Idaho, the seventh child of nine children born to Earl Eugene and Alice Ethel (Brassfield) Hess. Duain graduated from Rupert High School in 1955. Following graduation, he served in the United States Navy for four years, serving aboard the U.S.S. Sperry.

He worked hard as a meat cutter all of his life at various businesses in the Rupert-Burley area. He was a partner with his brother, Ray, in the Hess Brothers Custom Packing in Declo from 1978 until 1990. He was an avid bowler and so enjoyed all his bowling buddies. He bowled many high games, but the prized 300 game seemed always just out of his reach. However, the best times that he had in life was snowmobiling with his son, Darin, and good friends. He enjoyed attending the many Minico basketball and football games — especially when his granddaughter, Tylin (the first light of his life), was cheerleading. Denise loved going with him while he was doing mobile butchering and drinking coffee at the Wayside Cafe with all his friends. In the last five years, Savanna (the second light of his life), truly kept him “young at heart.” Duain never knew a stranger; he might not have remembered your name, but he never missed a chance to talk to you.

On Aug. 5 1962, he married Shirley Schroeder at the Trinity Lutheran Church in Rupert. He became a member of Trinity soon after this marriage. To this union were born two children — a son, Darin, and daughter, Denise, both living in Heyburn. Additionally, he is survived by his two granddaughters, Tylin and Savanna; three brothers, Don (Georgia) Hess, Raymond (Helen) Hess, and Gerald (Marilyn) Hess; one sister, Geraldine (Mike) Leonard; a sister-in-law, Mildred Hess; numerous nieces and nephews; and lots of good friends.

He was preceded in death by his parents; and siblings, Jacklyn Casad, Carol Andrew, Stanley Moore and Thurman Hess.

A service of remembrance will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 8, at the Trinity Lutheran Church, 909 8th St., in Rupert, with the Rev. Joel Pike officiating.

Friends and family may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 7, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Duain’s memory to the Trinity Lutheran Church in care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home.

Alice Margaret Hanshew Dean

July 13, 1920–Sept. 2, 2011

RUPERT • Alice Margaret Hanshew Dean, a 91-year-old Rupert resident, passed away Sept. 2, 2011, at her home.

She was born July 13, 1920, at Caldwell, Idaho, the daughter of George Dalis and L. Elizabeth Benning Hanshew. She graduated from Caldwell High School in 1936. Alice married Merrill Lyle Dean on Sept. 15, 1939, in Caldwell, Idaho; San Diego, Calif.; and Vale, Ore.; before moving to Rupert, Idaho in 1951 where she has since resided. She was a member of the Rupert First Christian Church.

She is survived by her son, Wendell and Jan Dean of Burley; her daughter, Marilyn and Dennis Glead of Rupert; one sister, Betty McKee of Nampa; four grandchildren, three step-grandchildren, two great-grandsons, one great-granddaughter, and one great-great-grandson.

She was preceded in death by her husband, her parents, a half-brother and a grandson.

Funeral services will be held at the First Christian Church Praise Chapel at 11 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 8, 2011, with Pastor Justin Williams officiating. A family visitation will be held one hour prior to the service at the church on Thursday.

Memorial gifts may be sent to Central American Missions (Cam International), 8625 La Prada Drive, Dallas, Texas 75228 for the ministries of Kirk McKeeth and John McKeeth, Alice’s nephews.

Italian Tenor Salvatore Licitra Dies in Sicily

BY FRANCES D’EMILIO AND RON BLUM

Associated Press

ROME • Salvatore Licitra, a tenor known in his Italian homeland as the “new Pavarotti” for his potent voice and considerable stamina, died Monday at age 43 after spending nine days in a coma following a motorscooter accident in Sicily.

Catania’s Garibaldi Hospital, announcing the death, said Licitra never regained consciousness after suffering severe head and chest injuries in the Aug. 27 accident. Doctors had said Licitra crashed his scooter into a wall near the town of Ragusa, apparently after suffering an interruption of blood to the brain while driving.

“So very sad to say goodbye to Salvatore Licitra. I will miss you,” soprano Deborah Voigt, a frequent onstage partner, wrote on her Facebook page.

In separate comments emailed to The Associated Press, Voigt wrote: “This is just heartbreaking. Salvatore was a great singer, but he was also just a really lovely guy. Always ready for a laugh, always light in spirit.”

The singer recalled that Licitra was her “first Dick Johnson,” referring to the tenor role in Puccini’s “La Fanciulla del West” at the San Francisco Opera in 2010. Voigt sang the role of Minnie in the opera, and she reminisced how Licitra had “held my hand every moment as I stumbled along slaughtering his language!”

NOTICE OF APPLICATION

Pursuant to Section 58-104(9) and 58-1301, et seq., Idaho Code (The Lake Protection Act) and rules of the State Board of Land Commissioners, notice is hereby given that Michael Larsen of Declo, made application to place rock rip rap over a clean gravel filter layer along approximately 60 linear feet of shoreline to prevent sediment in the reservoir and stabilize the bank. Clean angular rock rip rap material ranging in size from 12" to 24" is proposed to be placed 12-24 inches in depth. The existing steep bank will be pulled back to a slope that will allow placement of a gravel layer and rock rip rap. Bank material that is removed will be placed in the uplands. Rip rap construction will occur while reservoir is at low water levels. Bank shaping equipment will operate on the upland property reaching over the bank to work. Estimated permanent rock rip rap material below the ordinary high water mark for the project is approximately 20 cubic yards. Located on Milner Reservoir, Idaho adjacent to: NE¼NE¼ (Govt. Lot 1), Section 15, Township 10S, Range 24E; B.M., in Cassia County.

Written objections to or requests for hearing in this matter must be on file with the Idaho Department of Lands, 324 South 417 East, Ste. 2, Jerome, ID 83338 within thirty (30) days after the first appearance of this notice. Specific information regarding this application may be obtained from Meribeth Lomkin, Sr. Resource Manager, at the above address or by calling (208) 324-2561.

The beat is an eight-county area from which the right candidate will sniff out the best stories from both rural and urban settings. Tasks will range from rooting out the reasons behind utility increases that hit thousands of pocketbooks to profiling a thinning group of Pearl Harbor attack survivors who call the area home. The ideal candidate will be equal parts humanist, self-promoter and policy wonk, able to hold court with county prosecutors and rodeo queens alike. Desk jockeys should look elsewhere, as success here will be won with many handshakes and the ideas gleaned after—not through a slew of phone calls. The reporter's primary responsibility will be to find and develop six snappy enterprise stories per week and pitch in on other beats when needed, such as when our government reporter is covering the annual state legislative session in Boise. Twin Falls is home to 44,000 residents and serves as the cultural and economic hub of south-central Idaho. Year-round outdoor recreation abounds, both in the Snake River Canyon and in the surrounding mountains. You'll work with a vibrant, growing group of journalists committed to producing Idaho's best news product. Competitive candidates should have a bachelor's degree in journalism or a related field. Prior journalism experience is preferred. Please include a cover letter, resume and three work samples that show your versatility as a reporter and writer. The successful candidate must have a valid driver's license and a good driving record.

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 6, the 249th day of 2011. There are 116 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 6, 1901, President William McKinley was shot and mortally wounded by anarchist Leon Czolgosz at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y. (McKinley died eight days later; he was succeeded by Vice President Theodore Roosevelt. Czolgosz was executed in October 1901.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1711, Henry Muhlenberg, the patriarch of the Lutheran Church in America, was born in Einbeck, Hanover, Germany.
In 1861, Union forces led by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant occupied Paducah, Ky., during the Civil War.

In 1916, the first self-service grocery store, Piggly Wiggly, was opened in Memphis, Tenn., by Clarence Saunders.

In 1939, the Union of South Africa declared war on Germany.

In 1948, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands was inaugurated as queen, two days after the abdication of her mother, Queen Wilhelmina.

In 1949, Howard Unruh, a resident of Camden, N.J., shot and killed 13 of his neighbors. (Found to have paranoid schizophrenia, Unruh was confined for the rest of his life; he died in a Trenton nursing home in 2009 at age 88.)

In 1966, South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was stabbed to death by an apparently deranged page during a parliamentary session in Cape Town.

In 1970, Palestinian guerrillas seized control of three U.S.-bound jetliners. (Two were later blown up on the ground in Jordan, along with a London-bound plane hijacked on Sept. 9; the fourth plane was destroyed on the ground in Egypt. No hostages were harmed.)

In 1985, all 31 people aboard a Midwest Express Airlines DC-9 were killed when the Atlanta-bound jetliner crashed just after takeoff from Milwaukee's Mitchell Field.

In 1991, the Soviet Union recognized the independence of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. Russian lawmakers upheld a decision by residents of Leningrad to restore the city's pre-revolutionary name, St. Petersburg.

Ten years ago: In a dramatic shift, the Bush administration abandoned the Clinton-era effort to break up Microsoft. Mexican President Vicente Fox addressed a joint session of the U.S. Congress, urging greater trust between the neighboring countries as the basis for "a new partnership in North America." Barry Bonds became the fifth player in baseball history to hit 60 home runs in a season, connecting in the second inning of San Francisco's game against Arizona. The NFL referees' union rejected the league's latest contract offer (replacement officials worked the opening weekend of the regular season).

Five years ago: President George W. Bush acknowledged for the first time that the CIA was running secret prisons overseas and said tough interrogation had forced terrorist leaders to reveal plots to attack the United States and its allies. Japan's Princess Kiko gave birth to a boy (later named Hisahito), providing the centuries-old Chrysanthemum Throne with its first male heir in more than 40 years. Anibal Sanchez threw a no-hitter in his 13th career start as the Florida Marlins beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 2-0.

One year ago: President Barack Obama rolled out a long-term jobs program that would exceed $50 billion to rebuild roads, railways and runways, and coupled it with a blunt campaign-season assault accusing Republicans of causing Americans' hard economic times.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The superior man is distressed by his want of ability."

— Confucius

A frequently debated question in bridge is whether technical skills are more important than table presence. My view is that you can aspire to be a very good player by doing nothing more than mastering the percentages. But to excel at the top level, you need that indefinable ability to play against the percentages, and to encourage your opponents to play badly.

Today's deal is from the qualifying round of a world championship. North and South were playing a weak no-trump and four-card majors; hence, the opening bid. When West made a one-spade overcall, North could not make a penalty double, so passed for the time being, and South, Kitty Teltscher, reopened with a take-out double.

West chose a good moment to rebid two diamonds, and now North doubled to show a penalty double of spades and some diamond length. Teltscher judged well to remove this, rightly fearing that declarer might be able to make a lot of tricks on a crossruff. Thus North-South reached a normal game, but had been armed with considerable additional information.

West led a helpful diamond queen, but even so, it was hard to see any hope of a ninth trick. However, declarer spotted a chance. She won her diamond king and played the spade three. West sleepily played the two, so dummy's four won the second trick! After that, it was a simple matter to finesse in clubs and spades to arrive at nine tricks.

ANSWER: You should not be ashamed to introduce your spades now. It is a constructive bid, not an attempt to correct the partscore with a weak hand. Your partner knows from your initial pass that you do not have a powerhouse, but from your perspective, game in either black suit is a still a distinct possibility, so let your partner in on the secret too.

Yesterday's Jumbles: YOUNG KITTY SAILOR WEEKLY
Answer: His new book about the origin of Labor Day had a — WORKING TITLE

DEAR ABBY: My nephew, "Charles," a minister in his 50s, confided to me that he is unhappy in his marriage and is attracted to someone else. He asked me to keep this confidential, and I have.

Charles' wife and I are together a few hours per week on a regular basis. She is concerned because he seems depressed and spends most of his time at home sleeping. She knows Charles considers me a mother figure now that both his parents are deceased. She is suggesting that perhaps he has shared with me some of the reasons for his depression.

I feel horrible. If this comes out — and it will — Charles' wife will feel betrayed on many levels. I don't know what to do. Can you help?

— IN TOO DEEP
IN MICHIGAN

DEAR IN TOO DEEP: Your nephew's wife is on a fishing expedition. That's why she's "suggesting" he might have shared confidences with you. Do not betray them. Instead, tell her that if she's concerned about her husband's state of mind, the person she should be asking is HIM. It's the truth. They have a lot that needs talking about.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Before my husband's 30th birthday, I worked hard planning a surprise party for him. Family members came from other states, and I had housing available for all of them. I hid the food and other supplies at friends' homes. Things went well, and my husband was thrilled to see his family and friends.

My milestone birthday was last year, and my husband didn't do anything special. I didn't mind because I had told him I was "done aging." However, I accidentally discovered he's planning something this year.

While on vacation at my in-laws', I saw his mother had reserved the date of the party on her calendar. When I visited his sister, the invitation was open on the dining room table. I was able to see all the details of my "surprise." When I went to our mailbox, I found two invitations to my party that were undeliverable. I pretended I'd forgotten to pick up the mail and asked him to get it.

Should I tell my husband I know about the party or continue to play "dumb"? I have been told in so many ways that it's getting harder not to say anything, but I don't want to ruin this for him, either. I feel guilty for knowing. What should I do?

— NOT SO SURPRISED

DEAR NOT SO SURPRISED: Stop feeling guilty — you did nothing wrong. Keep your mouth shut and act surprised. Your husband is going to a lot of trouble to give you a special gift, and you should accept it in the spirit in which it is being given.

IF SEPTEMBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Abundant energy blended with organization travels hand in hand during the next six to eight weeks to help you achieve your ambitions. Your executive abilities may be squelched by an authority figure, even if you are right as rain. Be cautious about new relationships formed in October — and follow all the rules, as others are more inclined to penalize you for mistakes and errors. In March and April, life can take a turn for the better if you look for opportunities to improve some facet of your existence. People are more likely to grant your wishes and give you the benefit of the doubt. Cash in on those favors, but don't preen your

HOROSCOPE

feathers and forget to honor commitments.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Skate through the day, but avoid thin ice. Those you interact with will know how to jump start the engines of commerce to get things done. Follow good examples but don't start off in new directions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In the next few days, when it seems you are lost in a fog of conflicting signals, you will see someone holding a beacon to guide your way. You may attract loving kindness from a special someone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your ability to learn something new has no expiration date. You can gather knowledge and master a subject that has eluded you in the past by being thorough, methodical, plodding and precise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let someone peek into your soul. To others you may seem tough as nails, while beneath the surface lurks a softhearted personality. Do not be afraid to show your vulnerabilities to a special someone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stand tall without needing a back brace. A famous quotation that might inspire you to do a better job today is, "Those who will not govern themselves are condemned to find masters to govern over them."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid signing contracts or agreements for the next several days. You might find that serious negotiations seem to fizzle out over minutia. Grow closer and share ideas, but postpone finalizing terms.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romantic connections get a shot in the arm. Match someone's ardor with your own and achieve mutual bliss. An existing relationship will benefit from a passion for perfection that knows no bounds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go along with the crowd. You can accomplish much by acting in harmony with others. Love and romance are on an upswing, so be ready for a heady amorous adventure or just smooth sailing at the office.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't bring up topics, lest you create dissension. Those who agree with your principles are at work behind the scenes to promote your interests. You might not be aware of helpful activity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Talent and business savvy can be used to fatten the piggy bank. But acting on intuition or responding to a sense of the dramatic can undercut your advantage. Avoid signing financial contracts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep a broom handy. You must edit a great deal of what you hear and feel and leave much intuitive information on the cutting room floor. Your intuitions might not be on target for a few days.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Learn by rote to earn riches. You may need to memorize a command list. There is no shortage of innovative technologies in the world, but often a shortage of people who can use them wisely.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Manning to Manning

In the NFL’s weekly injury report, Colts quarter-back Peyton Manning was listed as doubtful, jeopardizing his consecutive-starts streak at 227, a streak that extends all the way back to his rookie season in 1998. Manning hasn’t taken a snap in the preseason as he recovers from offseason neck surgery, so it’s likely the Colts aren’t playing possum as they prepare for Sunday’s opener against the Texans. If Manning sits, the longest current streak will stay in the family, as little brother Eli has started 110 straight games. More Manning, S4

MLB’s Final Month Lacking In Intrigue

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The final month of the baseball season is upon us, and intrigue is unusually absent with the postseason looming.

The contenders have been identified, and the pretenders are looking forward to the offseason.

Four of the six division leaders have cushions of at least six games, and the wild-card races are all but over as well. The Phillies, Brewers and Diamondbacks are rolling to division titles in the National League, with the Atlanta Braves enjoying a comfortable lead over St. Louis and San Francisco for the NL wild card.

Things are a little tighter in the American League, which features the only two races worth watching. Justin Verlander and the Tigers are up 7½ games on the Cleveland Indians in the AL Central, but it does get interesting on both coasts.

The New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox are neck-and-neck in the East yet again. And even though the loser of the race will get into the playoffs, there is still that division title and valuable playoff positioning at stake.

Out West, the defending AL champion Texas Rangers have seemed like the class of the division for most of the season, but the Los Angeles Angels and their stellar rotation just keep hanging around. The Angels were 3½ games back with 22 games to play, plenty of time to make their move.

The champion Giants already have started cutting some of their veterans loose, so if the Rangers falter in the AL, that would mean that neither team from last year’s World Series would make the playoffs for just the third time since 1991, according to STATS, LLC.

The Cardinals and Tigers failed to make it in 2007 after facing off in the ‘06 World Series and the White

Cyclist’s Comeback: Hits and Misses

Armstrong’s return from retirement featured crashes, illness and podium finishes as she preps for ‘12 Games.

BOISE • It’s fitting that Olympic gold medalist Kristin Armstrong’s 11-month-old son fell and bonked his head last Friday, just minutes after she learned she had qualified for the U.S. cycling team at the world championship race in Denmark this month.

After all, it’s been a season of hard knocks for Armstrong, too.

Injuries from a crash in June in the Nature Valley Grand Prix in Minnesota, coupled with a mystery illness, led to a disappointing third place at the USA Cycling National Championship a week later. But Armstrong’s win at a big California time trial in May, coupled with victory in a Colorado stage race last month, convinced coaches she had earned a trip to Europe.

A podium finish in Copenhagen would guarantee her a spot on the U.S. team for the 2012 London Olympics.

Kristin Armstrong is all smiles after winning the inaugural Aspen (Colo.) Women’s Pro Race last month.

But first things first: How’s Lucas, her son?

“He’s fine,” Armstrong told The Associated Press, laughing. “He was pulling his alligator by its string. He just bonked his head on the chair.”

Such is the life of America’s most-decorated female professional cyclist, balancing life as a mom in Boise with a difficult challenge: Repeating her gold medal performance in 2008 at the Beijing Olympic Games on the streets of London next summer.

She retired briefly in 2009 after winning that year’s world championship time trial in Switzerland — her second rainbow jersey in four years — to have a child.

But Armstrong announced her comeback just over a year later, with her sights set on London.

She had a strong spring, winning the Tour of California time trial by 13 seconds ahead of her biggest rival, Amber Neben.

But by June, it looked like her plans had gone off the rails.

First, there was the painful crash at in Minnesota, an enormous, multi-rider pileup at the start of the final lap in which Armstrong was buried under a stack of bicycles.

It was so bad that organizers stopped

TAKING OFFENSE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boise State’s Matt Miller (2) turned out to be quite a find for the Bronco offense, scoring a touchdown and grabbing five passes for 57 yards.

Boise State proves there is life on the score unit after losing Titus Moore, Austin Pettis at wide receiver.

BY CHAD CRIPPE

McClatchy Newspapers

ATLANTA • Boise State senior quarterback Kellen Moore and offensive coordinator Brent Pease played a shell game with the Georgia defense on Saturday night at the Georgia Dome.

Sure, the Broncos don’t have the experience and talent of Austin Pettis and Titus Young at wide receiver.

Instead, they’ve got so many options in the pass game that defenses, like Georgia’s, will have a near-impossible time tracking them all.

Moore completed passes to nine different players, including five wide receivers, in the No. 5 Broncos’ 35-21 win over the No. 19 Bulldogs.

He was 7-for-7 on one touchdown drive with completions to five different players.

“It’s just fun, playing with a new group of wide receivers, to get those guys going,” Moore said.

Two of the players with catches were playing their first college game — redshirt freshman wideout Matt Miller (five catches, 57 yards, TD) and true freshman wideout Dallas Burroughs (one, 3 yards). Three more set career highs for receptions — senior tight end Kyle Efaw (six, 53, TD), junior wideout Mitch Burroughs (five, 43) and sophomore tight end Gabe Linehan (three, 36).

“We’re going to throw to who is open, by committee,” coach Chris Petersen said. “That’s how we’ve done it in the past. We’ve got the same type of crew. We lost (Pettis) and (Young), but that’s not our norm. We’ll get about six to eight guys, move them around

Clustering An Emerging Trend at BCS Schools

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • When Jay Finch arrived at Georgia Tech, he wasn’t just interested in being a lineman for the Yellow Jackets football team. He wanted to study architecture, too.

Then he talked with some student advisers, who gave him a dose of reality.

“They were like, ‘You can expect anywhere from 100 to 120 hours of studio time,’” Finch recalled. “I said, ‘Oh, like in a month.’ And they were like, ‘No, in a week.’ And I was like, ‘On top of football?’ ”

With that, Finch hopped aboard the M Train.

At Georgia Tech, where the famous fight song proclaims “I’m a heck of an engineer,” nearly 70 percent of the roster’s upperclassmen (43 of 62 players) has chosen to major in management, a business degree dubbed the “M Train” by those on campus who consider it an easier route to a diploma than the school’s renowned engineering program.

But the Yellow Jackets are hardly the only school where players tend to congregate in the same fields of study. There are four others universities where at least half the sophomores, juniors and seniors playing football are pursuing the same degree, The Associated Press found in a survey of the 68 schools in the conferences which receive automatic bids to the Bowl Championship Series, plus Notre Dame and Big East member-to-be TCU.

At Vanderbilt, it’s human and organizational development (35 of 59). At UCLA,

Williams Fights Wind, Ivanovic To Win

ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK • Serena Williams fought off the wind, along with brief flurries of effectiveness from her opponent, to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open on Monday with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Ana Ivanovic.
Williams closed out the match with four straight serves that Ivanovic couldn’t get back — clocked at between 99 and 111 mph in a blustery Arthur Ashe Stadium that had both players fighting with their tosses and topspin all day.
“I didn’t even go for winners at any point,” said Williams, who hit only 16. “I just tried to get it over because it was so windy. It was definitely tough.”

Seeded only 28th after missing big chunks of the last two years with injuries to her foot, Williams nonetheless improved to 16-0 this year on hardcourt. She has yet to drop a set at the U.S. Open and now finds herself in her first Grand Slam quarterfinal since last year at Wimbledon, when she won her 13th major title.
With each win at Flushing Meadows, she makes a stronger case that the “28” before her name at this tournament is only a number. When healthy, she might be the best in the world.
In men’s play, the highest-ranked American, eighth-seeded Mardy Fish, lost to 11th-seeded Jo-Wilfried Tsonga 6-4, 6-7 (5), 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Fish was trying to make it past the fourth round at Flushing Meadows for the second time. But his play dipped in the fourth set, and he was treated by a trainer for a right leg problem before the fifth.
“Old age, I guess,” said the 29-year-old American.
The top seed on the men’s side, Novak Djokovic, opened his fourth-round match with a thrilling 16-14 first-set tiebreaker win over No. 22 Alexandr Dolgoplov. Things got easier from there in a 7-6 (14), 6-4, 6-2 victory.

Sox and Astros both missed out in 2006 after playing in ‘05.
With so much of the drama missing from the push for the playoffs, much of the attention will turn to the MVP races, which are as wide open as ever.
Will Verlander become the first pitcher since 1992 to win in the AL? Will Matt Kemp be able to overcome the Dodgers’ lousy season to win it in the National League?
Here’s a quick look at what to watch for as the 2011 regular season winds to a close:
BEST RACES: All the action is in the American League this September.
• AL East: Ever since picking up hit No. 3,000, Derek Jeter has put all those questions about being washed up behind him and Curtis Granderson continues his pursuit of the MVP award as the Yankees hold a 1½-game lead over the Red Sox.

• AL West: The Rangers led the division by as many as seven games in the middle of August, but Jered Weaver, Dan Haren and Ervin Santana have pitched the Angels right back into the mix. They trailed the Rangers by 3½ games when Monday began.
MVP WATCH: September performances likely will be the decider in two very interesting races.
• American League: Verlander (21-5, 2.34 ERA, 224 Ks, four CGs) has been the most dominant pitcher in the league this season, carrying the Tigers to the top of the AL Central. With no position player running away with the award this season, there appears to be a groundswell of support for making the right-hander the first MVP pitcher since Oakland closer Dennis Eckersley in 1992. Blue Jays outfielder Jose Bautista (309, 40 HRs, 92 RBIs, 109 BBs, .637 slg, .446 OBP) is having a remarkable season, but may be hindered by Toronto’s lack of success.

• National League: Ryan Braun (.335, 26 HRs, 94 RBIs, 35 2Bs, 31 SBs) and Prince Fielder (.295, 31 HRs, 107 RBIs, 31 2Bs, 90 BBs) have powered the Brewers to the top of the NL Central. Kemp (.320, 32 HRs, 105 RBIs, 37 SBs) is having the best season in the NL, but the Dodgers haven’t been a factor in the West for more than two months.
SPOILER ALERT! Plenty of teams have been out of it for months. But a few have a chance to play a major role in the playoff picture:
• Tampa Bay Rays: Playing in the powerful AL East has been too much for them this year, but they still have the talent to go toe-to-toe with the elite down the stretch. The Rays face the Red Sox seven times in September and play the Yankees six times in the last nine days.
• Oakland Athletics: It’s been another disappointing year for the A’s, but with a talented young pitching staff, the A’s could be dangerous down the stretch.

history is a big draw (27 of 47). At Wake Forest, there’s been a grid-iron run on the communications department (34 of 60). At Baylor, upset winners over TCU on the opening weekend of this season, expect to find a lot of big guys in general studies (27 of 53).
This is not mere coincidence, of course. While it’s natural for a selected group of students — in this case, male athletes — to be interested in the same classroom subjects, it’s also apparent many are drawn to courses that are more accommodating to their Saturday pursuit.
“I wanted to dedicate myself more toward football,” conceded Finch, a sophomore center. “Yeah, I did take a little bit of the easier road. Management is still hard. You’ve still got to go to class.

“But,” he added, “at least I’m not up ‘til 3 in the morning drawing.”
The trend is so prevalent it has its own name — clustering — and extends far beyond Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, UCLA, Wake Forest and Baylor.
The AP survey, compiled from media guides, university websites and information provided by the schools, showed at least half the football players with declared majors at a dozen other universities are bunched in two fields of study. At 22 schools, 50 percent or more are pursuing a degree from a group of three majors.

The situation puts into focus one of the ever-present conflicts in big-time college sports: winning games, making money and keeping the boosters happy vs. providing athletes with a quality education and keeping up school standards.
Georgia Tech, for instance, receives more requests from the football team than any other for special admissions — enrollment for those who don’t meet the standards applied to the overall student body. But officials at the Atlanta school point out management is one of the most rigorous business programs in the country, requiring everyone to take two calculus courses and two lab sciences.

Offense

and give them all a piece of the pie.”
Along the way, the Broncos could create some new stars.
Like Miller, the highly touted recruit out of Helena, Mont., who tore an Achilles tendon in fall camp last year and didn’t participate in contact drills for nearly a year.

He settled in a void in Georgia’s zone in the first quarter, collected his first college catch and — as coaches explore their receivers every day in practice — quickly turned upfield. He split two defenders at the goal line for the score.
“It’s kind of like getting your first kiss, times a thousand,” Miller said.
The Broncos say Miller is like Moore — eerily calm, even in the middle of fulfilling a longtime dream. Even with 73,614 screaming fans in the stands, a national TV audience at home and two standout cornerbacks across the line of scrimmage.
“You think Kellen has no emotion,” Petersen said. “Matt takes it to a new low.”
Like Burroughs, the Meridian High grad who struggled to find a place in the passing game the past two seasons but showed his potential as a punt returner. He was the best receiver in fall camp, and on Saturday he proved that was no fluke.
“Just more confidence,” he said. “When you get more reps, you get in a groove and get a feel. You start to get more comfortable doing things.”
Pease, who coached the receivers the past five years, saw this coming. He highlighted Burroughs in an interview with the Idaho Statesman last week.
“I’ve just seen so much more consistency and a better job catching the ball with his hands,” Pease said. “... He just kind of stepped up to the occasion and understood when it’s time to make plays.”
Like Linehan, another can’t-miss recruit. He’ll benefit from the presence of Efaw, who opened his senior year with one of the best performances of his career. Combined, the two tight ends provided about a third of the Broncos’ production in the pass game.
Still, the group faces some questions as it prepares for a Sept. 16 game at Toledo. The Broncos were 4-of-12 on third down against Georgia, an uncharacteristic weakness.
Sophomore Geraldo Boldewijn, who was supposed to serve as the primary deep threat, was one of three players from Amsterdam left home while their eligibility is reviewed.
And Moore, who had an uncanny connection with Young on deep balls last year, never attempted a pass over 25 yards.
And he had help. The offensive line, with three sophomores on the field most of the game, provided time. The receivers found the holes in the zone and they repeatedly turned those short passes over the middle into first downs.
Moore was 28-of-34 for 261 yards and three touchdowns with one interception. He wasn’t sacked.
“(The offensive line) allowed us to find those holes in the defense,” Miller said, “and obviously with Kellen he can pick a defense apart pretty easily.”
“There’s always going to be that tension,” said Anderson Smith, the senior vice provost for academic affairs. “You’ve got to recruit who the best players are. But it’s a much more heterogeneous population than what we have applying to Georgia Tech as regular students.”
“We used to call ‘em Mickey Mouse courses. They exists at every university,” said Murray Sperber, who teaches at the University of California, Berkeley, is a professor emeritus at Indiana University and author of the book, “Beer & Circus: How Big-time College Sports Is Crippling Undergraduate Education.”
“As an educator, my concern is: Are they getting a meaningful education?”

TODAY'S NATIONAL MAP

Colts Facing Great Unknown: Playing Without Peyton

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS • The unthinkable suddenly seems possible in Indianapolis — opening the season without Peyton Manning.

The four-time league-MVP who has never missed a start in his NFL career is doubtful for Sunday's game at Houston because of lingering soreness in his back following offseason neck surgery. If Manning sits, it would be the first time the NFL's active iron man missed a meaningful game after 227 consecutive starts including the playoffs.

"I hate it for Peyton," said Pro Bowl center Jeff Saturday, one of Manning's closest friends. "You want him to be healthy, you want him to take care of it, too. It's sad when players face tough times, but I know he's strong enough to get through it."

The question is whether the Colts can survive without their franchise quarterback, whose streak stands second in NFL history to Brett Favre's among all QBs.

Team officials have not said how much longer it could take Manning to recover, leaving that decision to Manning and his doctors.

Over the years, life without Manning has been pretty dismal.

The only time he missed a regular-season snap because of injury, against Miami in 2001, backup Mark Rypien fumbled. The Dolphins recovered, then drove 59 yards for the winning score. Manning returned on the next series with a bloody mouth. He was later diagnosed with a hairline fracture in his jaw.

On the rare occasions when Manning has played sparingly, in the preseason and meaningless late-season games, the Colts have not fared much better.

The goal now is to change that trend.

"If anything, we want to go out there and step it up," Pro Bowl safety Antoine Bethea said. "Of course it will be different (without Manning), but it's one of those things that if it happens, everybody else has to step up. It's next man up."

That's been true at every position but one over the past 13 years in Indy. And now the Colts' longtime mantra will be put to its most challenging test.

Manning had surgery to repair a nerve May 23, but the recovery has taken longer than the expected six to eight weeks that would have put back on the field for the start of training camp. Instead, Manning started camp on the physically unable to perform list and wasn't activated till last Monday.

He did limited work at practice last week, which led to complaints about back pain. The team issued a statement Monday saying that team doctors re-evaluated Manning over the weekend and instructed him to stop practicing while he undergoes more tests.

No additional surgery has been scheduled.

Full discounted installation requires enrolling in our Cable ONE Easy Pay program. In compliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act, you may be required to authorize and agree that Cable ONE may obtain a consumer report about you from a consumer reporting agency in order to verify your eligibility to receive this and other offers. Customers are required to purchase or lease an approved eMTA capable of DOCSIS 3.0 in order to receive the full benefit of internet and phone services listed. Elite Package benefits caller ID and voice mail continue with the phone service but revert to regular monthly rate after promotional term. All other Elite Package benefits cease at end of agreement term. Cost savings based upon buying services individually. Other levels of service are available. Reception of all Standard Cable channels requires a television with a digital tuner or the lease of a digital receiver or Cable Card. Some HD programming requires leasing an HD receiver for $5/mo. Cable ONE manages bandwidth consumption of Internet services to provide the best experience for all customers. Peak speed 50 Mbps. Speeds may vary. Call for details. Elite Internet service includes a data plan providing bandwidth usage of up to 50 GB per month plus an incremental 50 GB per month. Usage greater than that will result in incremental access charges of $0.50 per GB. Please read our Acceptable Use Policy and http://help.cableone.net for details. All services are not available in all areas. New Customers are those individuals who have not had service with Cable ONE in the past 90 days. Restrictions apply.
