Trevino Pleads Guilty to '10 Gelever Murder

The Twin Falls man will serve 15 years in state prison after pleading guilty to second-degree murder one week prior to the scheduled start of his jury trial.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Thomas Trevino Jr. pleaded guilty Tuesday to the 2010 slaying of Jill Gelever in a Twin Falls hotel room. The 31-year-old Twin Falls man entered a guilty plea to second-degree murder Tuesday morning, only one week prior to the scheduled start of a potentially lengthy jury trial in Twin Falls.

Had his case gone to trial, Trevino faced potential life imprisonment for first-degree murder if a jury found him guilty of shooting Gelever, 24, in the back of the head at the Comfort Inn and Suites in north Twin Falls on July 5, 2010. Instead, he will serve 15 years in state prison for second-degree murder with a weapons enhancement. Police who found Gelever clinging to life in the hotel room last year immediately suspected Trevino, who fled the area after the shooting but was arrested two days later in Mesa County, Colo., nearly 400 miles from Twin Falls. Gelever died at a Boise hospital 10 days after the shooting. Originally charged with aggravated battery, Trevino was charged with first-degree murder after the Hagerman woman's death. Tuesday, Trevino signed a Rule 11 plea agreement in Twin Falls County 5th District Court, meaning Judge Randy Stoker is bound to impose the agreed-upon 15-year prison term.

GOODING • Instead of chicken nuggets and hamburgers, Gooding students eat locally grown fruits and vegetables and home-made soups. The Gooding School District's effort to offer healthier foods for school meals has led to national recognition for the small town and an invitation to the White House. Superintendent Heather Williams, Child Nutrition Director Anji Baumann and local farmers Cody Beadz and Fred Mavencamp will attend an Oct. 17 reception hosted by first lady Michelle Obama and her Let's Move campaign, which aims to reduce childhood obesity. "We are so excited that our little farming community is being recognized as national leaders for our efforts in helping our students make healthy choices," Williams said. The first lady's campaign works in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's HealthierUS School Challenge, which began in 2004 and has three components — nutrition, physical activity and nutrition education. "All three of those are working together to create a healthier environment for our children," Baumann said. Two years ago, Gooding Elementary School was the first in the nation to receive the USDA school challenge's Gold of Distinction Award, the highest possible honor. In order to qualify for the award, the district added whole grain food items to school menus and increased the amount of fresh fruits and vegetables offered.

Randy Hansen Named to New Redistricting Panel

The former state legislator and Twin Falls car dealer will be a GOP representative on the new commission tasked with redrawing Gem State political boundaries.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Magic Valley residents will have one of their own on the state's new redistricting commission. Randy Hansen, a Twin Falls car dealer and former GOP state representative, was appointed by Republican State Chairman Norm Semanko to serve on the six-member panel. The appointment means the commission will have someone with firsthand knowledge of the Magic Valley when it goes about its task of redrawing legislative boundaries to reflect population changes. The state's initial redistricting commission, which didn't feature a Magic Valley member, failed to reach an agreement on new legislative and congressional boundaries by its legally required 90-day deadline. There's no law requiring that commissioners come from specific parts of the state. Still, there's strong awareness that direct regional ties to commissioners can benefit when political boundaries are redrawn. "I think that when you have a commissioner from a particular area, they're more cognizant of the communities of interest and the issues in that particular area," said Gary Moncrief, a political science professor at Boise State University. Hansen was one of three people Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls,

WELCOME TO IDAHO: LAND OF BEANS?

While southern Idaho's bean production has consolidated in recent years, those humble but nutritious beans have gained fans. No longer a poor man's food, beans are popular at pricey restaurants and specialty retail stores, relished by a growing population of bean lovers. The culinary director at one of Twin Falls' top restaurants changed up his menu in recent months, using heirloom beans from a local producer. Reporter Andrew Weeks snagged one of those recipes and visited the dusty, noisy scene of a dry bean warehouse for today's story.

Seniors Flock to South-central Idaho

For seniors from both coasts, south-central Idaho is increasingly becoming an attractive place to retire.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

It may not be the beach, but more senior citizens are flocking to south-central Idaho to retire in peace and comfort. The region boasts the second-highest rate of growth of its senior population in Idaho over the last decade, according to the College of Southern Idaho Office on Aging in Twin Falls. And as more seniors settle into the area, housing services must step up to meet the demand for accessible housing. There are 39,000 individuals over the age of 60 living in the Magic and Wood River valleys, said Jim Fields, Office on Aging director. He said his office helps provide services for 23,000 seniors. "A growing elderly percentage in the Magic Valley shows that this is not just an aging place but that people are retiring here," he said. "It's a good area. Twin Falls County has a unique, community feel to it and that's getting rare these days." Fields explained that adequate housing is essential for a large elderly community since more individuals are living longer. Nationally, the U.S. Administration on Aging predicts that the segment of the population over the age of 65 will grow by 36 percent by 2020, and individuals over 85 years old will increase by 15 percent. "We are seeing more retirement communities pop up, especially over the past five years," said KayLynn Johnson, a sales associate for BridgeView Estates, an independent and assisted living facility in Twin Falls. "Baby boomers are headed this way and we are getting ready." BridgeView Estates is one of 37 residential care and assisted living facilities in south-central Idaho, according to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. The 59-bed facility caters to both assisted and independent residents and has been close to full capacity on a regular basis, Johnson said.

Ketchum Candidate Forum Planned

TIMES-NEWS

A forum for Ketchum City Council candidates to share their views of the city with the public will be held at 5:30 p.m. Oct. 5 at the Wood River YMCA, 101 Saddle Road in Ketchum.

The 13 council candidates running in the Nov. 8 election have been invited to the forum hosted by the Wood River Economic Partnership. Three or four predetermined questions will be asked of each candidate who attends.

The entire council is up for election this November, pending the passage of a ballot measure that would change Ketchum's form of city governance to a model using a city manager and a council, instead of the current mayor-council format. Those running are incumbents Mayor Randy Hall, Curtis Kemp, Baird Gourlay, Nina Jones and Larry Helzel, and challengers Jim Slanetz, Phyllis Shafran, Chip Bailey Jr., Bob Kesting, Bill White, Bill Marshall, Neil Morrow and Mickey Garcia.

Due to limited space, the forum is open only to WREP members and others who reserve space early. RSVP to dougbrownsv@gmail.com.

T.F. Council Sets Public Hearing for Fee Changes

TIMES-NEWS

The Twin Falls City Council on Monday unanimously approved the following items:

- A request to schedule a public hearing for Oct. 10 to get input about possible fee increases for daily green fees and season passes at the Twin Falls Golf Club. The changes are intended to simplify the rate structure and putting the same green fee rates in place for weekends and weekdays.

The fee changes, proposed for the 2012 season, would increase four of the rates at the club by 6.67 percent to 10 percent and two others by less than 5 percent. Two fees would decrease. The council will need to make a final decision after the hearing.

- A request from Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley to pay fees in lieu of a required park land dedication in a subdivision on the west side of Tyler Street south of Harrison Park. Under the city's code, a payment of $2,609 was required instead of .02 acres of land.

Last Wave of 116th Soldiers Return to Idaho

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • The last wave of citizen soldiers with the 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team returned to the Treasure Valley Tuesday.

Charter planes carrying 120 soldiers arrived at locations in Idaho, including Boise's Gowen Field.

The soldiers returning Tuesday had been attended professional military education courses at various Army installations around the nation. The soldiers landed at Joint Base Lewis-McChord near Tacoma, Wash., before departing for the various "schools." They returned to that base and completed paperwork to return to Idaho.

The soldiers will now begin a 30-day leave period.

According to Idaho Guard spokesman Col. Tim Marsano, about 10 Idahoans are returning from those schools. They should be back in Idaho in the next week. Another 40 Idahoans remain at JBLM in the U.S. Army's Warrior Transition Unit, where they will stay while their medical needs are attended. Most should be back in Idaho homes in the coming weeks.

About 2,700 citizen soldiers with the 116th were in Iraq for nine months as part of Operation New Dawn during a year-long deployment. About 1,500 members of the 116th are from Idaho. Six hundred are from Oregon, 600 from Montana.

The brigade served a variety of missions as it managed two bases and conducted convoy security.

Two soldiers lost their lives. Spc. Nicholas W. Newby, 20, of Coeur d'Alene, and Spc. Nathan R. Beyers, 24, of Littleton, Colo., who lived in the Coeur d'Alene area before being deployed, died July 7 in Baghdad in a roadside bomb attack.

Trevino will be sentenced at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in Twin Falls. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb said Tuesday that he felt confident in his case had the trial went on as scheduled.

"We had an enormous amount of evidence, ballistics ... to tell us he was the one to fire the fatal shot," Loeb said. "The question was what happened between the two of them (in the room July 5). We had some evidence and theories. The trial would have centered around those issues."

According to state law, a first-degree murder conviction requires the prosecution to establish that the defendant's actions that resulted in another's death were premeditated. A second-degree murder conviction doesn't require proof of premeditation.

Loeb will file to dismiss two felony charges of battery upon law enforcement officers, which Trevino picked up last year while in custody of the Twin Falls County Jail.

Gelever's mother, Hagerman resident Carol Bloxham, declined comment when reached by phone Tuesday. Calls to the office of Trevino's lawyer, Keith Roark, were not returned.

July 16, 2010: Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb amends a charge of aggravated battery against Trevino to first-degree murder.

Aug. 2, 2010: Trevino is returned to Twin Falls from Colorado.

Aug. 30, 2010: Trevino pleads not guilty to first-degree murder. Judge Randy Stoker sets an initial trial date of Jan. 31, 2011.

Oct. 10, 2010: Jail personnel use a Taser to subdue Trevino for allegedly fighting with deputies. He is charged with two felonies.

Oct. 28, 2010: Stoker continues Trevino's trial to March 22, 2011, after defense counsel Keith Roark asks for more preparation time.

Nov. 4, 2010: Stoker grants another continuance.

Trevino's trial is moved to June 1, 2011.

April: Trevino's trial is again pushed back, this time to Oct. 4.

Tuesday: Trevino pleads guilty to second-degree murder; his trial is vacated.

Thursday: Trevino will be sentenced to 15 years in prison at 2:30 p.m. in Twin Falls.

Two Community School Students are National Merit Semifinalists

TIMES-NEWS

Two seniors at the Community School in Sun Valley have been named semifinalists in the 2012 National Merit Scholarship Program.

Camille Bourret and Robert Henry Rickbeil are in the nationwide pool of semifinalists, which represents less than 1 percent of U.S. high school seniors.

The number of semifinalists in each state is proportional to the state's percentage of graduating seniors.

Students will have an opportunity to continue in the competition for about 8,300 National Merit Scholarships, worth more than $34 million, that will be offered next spring.

National Merit Scholarship winners will be announced next year.

OUR VIEW

Xavier Needs to Improve Policies to Match Vision

A school is more than high-minded educational ideals — It's also a business. Nobody has had more chances to learn that lesson than the Xavier Charter School Board.

While there's little question that the board has students' interests at heart, they have repeatedly fallen short on managing the business- and personnel-based functions of the school.

To say that the past year has been tumultuous for the school is an understatement. In the past 12 months, the school has dealt with board resignations, allegations of wrongdoing over the company that managed their books and a principal who was put on leave for months after she sued to keep her job.

You'd think that the new board would have learned from these management-based stumbling blocks. When new members were brought in, we were hopeful that the school's troubles were on the wane.

But, with the news that the Xavier board is recommending the removal of Principal Everett Bomgardner, we have growing concerns about the publicly-funded school's ability to manage its operation.

It's not entirely the current board's fault — the school's charter document and bylaws are woefully inadequate on rules or advice when hiring. If nothing else, Xavier needs to have a more rigorous vetting process in place, preferably one written by someone with a deep background in human resources.

The board also needs to take responsibility for its actions. Idaho law says the board can hire and fire their staff, but the board has elected to appoint a 3-member panel to see if Bomgardner should retain his job.

Instead of reflecting transparency, the move makes the board appear indecisive or unwilling to exercise the power outlined in their charter. The board made the decision to hire Bomgardner — they are fully capable of, and should accept responsibility for, deciding he's no longer the right fit for the school.

The first time the board selected a principal they ended up releasing, they should have acknowledged that they needed more expertise in the hiring process. Now that it's happened a second time, parents of Xavier students should demand greater accountability.

Before the school meets to select a third principal for 2011, it should take a close look at its bylaws, and have someone with intense experience in school administration offer guidance. As part of the hiring process, their search committee should include professional teachers, administrators, and HR professionals. It should also seek input from the non-charter school portion of the Twin Falls School District.

At a time when educational dollars are a rare and valuable thing, Xavier's repeated hiring missteps, administrative leave payouts and legal distractions are poor uses of public money that should be spent on educating.

Unfair Target

In yesterday's editorial regarding the erroneous payment of unemployment benefits in Idaho, comparisons were made to the rate of errors in Alaska, Oregon and Washington. While Idaho's percentage of errors was the lowest of the three states (9 percent), only former governor Sarah Palin of Alaska was cited as presiding over a state whose error rate was higher (11.8 percent). This was a shabby inclusion on our part. If a governor or governors had to be mentioned (they did not), we should have taken a shot at either current Democratic Oregon governor John Kitzhaber, former Democratic Oregon governor Ted Kulongoski (12.2 percent error rate) or Democratic Governor Christine Gregoire of Washington (14.1 percent error rate) because those state's error percentages were much higher. We apologize.

The Key to Solving Deficit Stalemate Starts With Medicare

"Supercommittee" members should skip the paralyzing arguments over taxes and focus on paring back Medicare spending.

It may be called a "supercommittee," but nobody expects any heroics. The deal reached over the summer to raise the debt ceiling created a bipartisan committee to identify ways to reduce budget deficits by $1.5 trillion over the next 10 years. Few people expect anything to come of it, assuming that it will deadlock over taxes.

But there may be a way for the committee members to avoid that fate: They should skip the paralyzing arguments over taxes and focus on paring back Medicare spending.

Sen. Pat Toomey, a Republican from Pennsylvania who is on the committee, says they can generate bipartisan reform that reduces both tax rates and deductions. But if that plan results in a net tax increase, it is unlikely to get enough Republican support to pass Congress.

Democrats, meanwhile, are unlikely to support cuts to entitlements unless taxes are raised. President Barack Obama recently said he would veto reductions to Medicare benefits unless matched by tax increases, with aides going on the record to say that the White House had entered "a new phase" in which there would be no "legislative compromise."

No wonder at least one member of the supercommittee is telling colleagues that he isn't holding out much hope for progress.

Some Democrats say a standoff will work to their political advantage. If the committee doesn't issue recommendations that get enacted, $1.2 trillion in automatic cuts to discretionary spending — half in defense, half in domestic programs — take effect starting in 2013.

Thus, many Democrats hope these alternatives create a conflict between the Republicans' pro-defense and anti-tax factions.

They may get their wish. Rep. Buck McKeon, the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, has said that, if necessary, Republicans should make concessions on taxes rather than defense. Grover Norquist, the president of Americans for Tax Reform, advocates trimming the Pentagon's budget instead. Some conservative defense analysts concede that significant savings could be made without compromising military strength — but they worry that the easiest way to find savings, politically, will be to reduce training and procurement rather than, say, reform military benefits.

The Democrats who savor this conflict may be underestimating how painful they would find the automatic cuts in domestic spending. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal research organization in Washington, estimates that domestic programs under the knife — from education to infrastructure spending — would lose 9 percent of their funding in the first year of cuts alone.

But neither defense spending nor domestic discretionary spending is primarily, or even significantly, responsible for our alarming debt projections. Entitlements are the major reason spending is predicted to rise sharply — and that's something the committee can and should address.

Sens. Tom Coburn, an Oklahoma Republican, and Joe Lieberman, an independent from Connecticut, have suggested some reforms to Medicare that would generate about $600 billion in savings within the next 10 years. They would gradually raise the eligibility age for Medicare to 67 by 2025 while increasing premiums and co-pays in a progressive manner, with higher-income seniors paying more for their coverage.

The plan isn't perfect, but it's a more sensible way to reduce the deficit than across-the-board cuts in defense and domestic discretionary programs. And it doesn't really cross any of the Democrats' ideological lines. It doesn't voucherize the program or otherwise transform it, as Rep. Paul Ryan's plan would.

The plan leaves the campaign chessboard largely untouched. If both parties agree to these reforms, neither will take a political hit for enacting it, while both will accomplish some of their policy objectives: sparing defense for the Republicans, and sparing domestic programs for the Democrats.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hearing Tension Springs From Many Sources

Regarding Laurie Welch's carefully phrased Sept. 10 story, "Burley Officials Approve Budget After Strained Hearing":

The fact that Mayor Terry Greenman believed that he was empowered to order Sheriff Randy Kidd to give me the heave-ho from a public hearing because I had questioned the adequacy of the city's legal budget to withstand a hit from a lawsuit I might bring against the city over Greenman having deliberately constructed and spread a bigot's lie about me (recorded on tape at city hall), shows the foolishness implicit in the idea of the city dissolving its law enforcement contract with the county and Greenman being in charge of law enforcement.

On Aug. 5, I wrote a letter to the city requesting public documents. Believing that Greenman would not release the documents prior to my leaving for upstate New York on Aug. 12, I asked that they be sent to me at a New York address. (I went to New York to attend my great-niece's wedding with family from the United Kingdom, to attend a meeting in Amherst and to spend 12 days looking after my ailing sister.)

I spoke in the public hearing because I had made five phone attempts and two visits to city hall to talk with him (all were failures). He was never available and refused to return my calls.

Corruption has Seeped Into White House

Interesting statistics come from Illinois and the Windy

City where the community organizer got political training.

Illinois Gov. Blagojevich recently was convicted on 17 of the 20 public corruption charges against him. He becomes the fourth Illinois governor to go to jail. He is now one of 79 Illinois public officials to be found guilty of a crime since 1972.

According to CNN, Illinois government has lived up to its reputation as a cesspool of corruption.

Family's Dog Returns After Mystery Trips to Calif., Nev.

BY DAVID JOHNSON

The Lewiston Tribune

TROY — The homecoming between Reba and the Heath brothers went as expected — lots of hugs, pats, licks and tail-wagging.

But only Reba, if dogs could talk and tell, knows how she apparently got stolen twice in less than two weeks.

The adventure apparently included escaping from at least two abductors, getting found near Sacramento, then found again just outside Reno and finally arriving home here Monday amid more questions than answers.

"She went missing on Tuesday, Sept. 13th," Kami Heath said of the family's 18-month-old border collie-Brittany cross. "We looked all over the neighborhood, called our vet, searched everywhere in Troy and could not find her."

Heath's sons, Aiden, 5, and Bryce, 2 1/2, have been growing up with Reba and the boys missed their dog.

"I assumed she was stolen," said Heath, 27. "She loves people."

Heath's husband, Travis, 27, agreed. "I'm sure someone had to take her out of the yard."

Reba disappeared from her secure outdoor kennel wearing only her collar and a rabies vaccination tag. Her identification tag had fallen off. A week later, the Heath's veterinarian said someone had called from Roseville, Calif., saying they had found a black and white dog wearing Reba's rabies tag.

"That just seemed way too crazy," Kami Heath said. "So I got the number of a woman ... and she said the dog had come into their yard on the 15th."

That was just two days after Reba had disappeared from Troy.

"I knew there was no way she could get to California by herself," Kami Heath said. "Somebody had to have taken her."

Unfortunately, the woman in Roseville said a short woman with black hair happened by her house and said the dog was hers. So she gave Reba to the woman.

"A random lady walked by her house and said that was her dog, thank you so much for taking care of it."

Kami Heath said she figured the story ended right there, with Reba gone for good. But last Friday she got a call from the Humane Society of Washoe County, just outside of Reno, Nev. A voice said they had a dog wearing a rabies tag from Idaho. And the description matched.

Apparently Reba had escaped again after being taken to Nevada.

"We didn't want to give her up," Kami Heath said of Reba. "She's been our pet since she was a puppy and our boys adore her."

So the Heaths left Saturday morning without their boys for a 1,400-mile round-trip to Reno, picked up Reba, drove back with the dog in the back seat and arrived home Monday morning exhausted but thrilled with the wonder of it all.

"I was surprised to hear she was in California, then Nevada," Travis Heath said. "Maybe in Moscow or Kendrick. I wish I knew how she got down there."

As for Aiden and Bryce, they came home from kindergarten and day care, respectively, and were greeted by Reba. A bit of camera shyness on the part of the boys seemed to mute the reunion at first, but within a few minutes the boys and their dog were back at it.

"Reba, Reba, Reba, go get it," Aiden and Bryce yelled as Reba retrieved several balls, flew around the yard and soaked up any attention that might be offered.

Even the neighbors were celebrating. "It must have been kind of scary for the dog," said 11-year-old Joshua Lay, who was walking home from school and stopped to offer Reba a pat.

While in Reno, the Heaths had Humane Society personnel equip Reba with an implanted identification tag that can be scanned in case she disappears again.

"It's pretty exciting to get her back," Kami Heath said as her boys and Reba continued to celebrate. "She's really good with the kids."

Congress Dodges One Crisis, Now For the Next

BY DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • One crisis averted, on to the next. The day after Congress managed to avoid a government shutdown — again — Republicans and Democrats stared ahead Tuesday at major fights over spending that underscore a deep divide that’s sure to define the fast-approaching national elections.

Monday night, lawmakers had postponed their dispute over whether billions for disaster aid must be paid for with cuts elsewhere in the budget, finessing a pact to keep the government operating.

But tea party-driven Republicans are still insisting on significant spending cuts this fall, with some arguing that a hard-fought congressional agreement this summer to fund the government at $1.043 trillion in 2012 was too generous. Democrats, many of whom complained of too many concessions and reductions in this year’s showdowns, are furiously trying to protect government programs.

The next skirmish will be over how and where to spend the new year’s budget, with a Nov. 18 deadline for that legislation. President Barack Obama’s $447 billion jobs proposal that would cut payroll taxes and increase spending on school construction and other infrastructure has already divided the parties. But the next really big deal is the special 12-member bipartisan supercommittee and whether it can come up with a plan to slash $1.5 trillion over 10 years by Nov. 23 — the day before Thanksgiving.

These fights will unfold against the backdrop of a feeble economy that Obama is desperate to jump-start as he pushes for a second term, and an exasperated electorate that looks at Washington and dislikes what it sees.

“The heat will be on, the heat from the American people,” said former Republican Sen. Alan Simpson, who believes Americans struggling economically will be asking, “Why stretch us out like this?”

Lawmakers also will be under pressure from political factions demanding that they stand firm for party beliefs.

“You have to support getting control of excessive spending and debt,” said Sal Russo, a longtime Republican operative and founder of the Tea Party Express, a well-funded wing of the populist movement. “Are you helping to solve the problem or making it worse?”

As Doctor’s Trial Starts, Jackson’s Voice Echoes Through L.A. Court

Defense contends that singer caused his own death by taking a dangerous anesthetic after physician left the room.

BY LINDA DEUTSCH and ANTHONY MCCARTNEY
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • First, prosecutors showed a photo of Michael Jackson’s pale and lifeless body lying on a gurney. Then, they played a recording of his voice, just weeks before his death.

Slow and slurred, his words echoed Tuesday through a Los Angeles courtroom at the start of the trial of the doctor accused of killing him. As a worldwide audience watched on TV and Jackson’s family looked on from inside the courtroom, a drugged Jackson said: “We have to be phenomenal. When people leave this show, when people leave my show, I want them to say, ‘I’ve never seen nothing like this in my life. Go. Go. I’ve never seen nothing like this. Go. It’s amazing. He’s the greatest entertainer in the world.’”

Prosecutors played the audio for the first time during opening statements as they portrayed Dr. Conrad Murray, 58, as an incompetent physician who used a dangerous anesthetic without adequate safeguards and whose neglect left the superstar abandoned as he lay dying.

Defense attorneys countered that Jackson caused his own death by taking a drug dose, including propofol, after Murray left the room.

Survey: Cost of Health Insurance Surged in ‘11

Study shows that premiums for both family and single coverage have more than doubled since 2001.

BY TOM MURPHY
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS • The cost of employer-sponsored health insurance surged this year, snapping a trend toward moderate growth, but experts say these increases may slow again in 2012.

Annual premiums for family coverage climbed 9 percent and surpassed $15,000 for the first time, according to a report released Tuesday by the Kaiser Family Foundation and the Health Research and Educational Trust. Premiums for single coverage rose 8 percent compared to 2010.

That compares to increases last year of 3 and 5 percent for family and single coverage, respectively. The study shows that premiums for both family and single coverage have more than doubled since 2001, while worker wages have risen 34 percent.

Kaiser CEO Drew Altman said a number of factors may have played a role in this year’s percentage jump. He noted that health care costs continue to rise, and insurer profits and the health care overhaul also have some impact.

The overhaul, which Congress passed last year, aims to eventually cover millions of uninsured people. Kaiser said initial provisions of the law

Obama Aide Sees ‘Titanic Struggle’ in 2012 Race

But president’s chief political strategist calls Republican candidates ‘old wine in old bottles.’

BY STEVE PEOPLES
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. • President Barack Obama’s chief political adviser on Tuesday conceded that a dark cloud looms over the American economy and Obama’s political future, describing the president’s road to a second term in the White House as “a titanic struggle.”

“We have the wind in our face because the American people have the wind in their faces,” David Axelrod told an audience of New Hampshire politicians and business leaders. “So this is going to be a titanic struggle. But I firmly believe we’re on the right side of the struggle.”

But even as he acknowledged the stark political reality, Axelrod said the president would ultimately win re-election, in part because of the flawed field of Republican candidates. He characterized their plans to repair the nation’s ailing economy as the same kind of deregulation and tax cuts that caused the downturn in the first place.

“This isn’t new wine and old bottles. This is old wine and old bottles,” Axelrod said. He also assailed Republican contenders, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney and Texas Gov. Rick Perry, in an interview with The Associated Press.

David Axelrod speaks in Chicago in June 2011.

Axelrod took issue with Romney’s assertion that he’s among the candidates with the least political experience in the Republican field. Romney held just one full term as governor but has run for higher office four times since 1994.

“I don’t know how you define a professional politician, but running for office off and on for two decades seems to qualify,” he said.

He also went after Perry. “He holds up Texas as a model,” Axelrod said. “You look at Texas and they have among the lowest wages in the country, the highest rate of uninsured people, some of the worst performance in their schools.”

“I think most Americans will look at that and say, ‘Why would we want to emulate that?’” Axelrod added.

Obama’s campaign has said that the 2012 election will be a “choice, not a referendum” on Obama, making clear they intend to draw sharp contrasts with whomever Republicans nominate next year.

Andy Rooney Exiting ‘60 Minutes’ on Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) • With 1,096 essays for “60 Minutes” under his belt, Andy Rooney will deliver his 1,097th on Sunday’s broadcast. And it will be his last as a regular contributor.

The 92-year-old Rooney will announce his departure at the end of the program, where he has been featured since 1978, CBS News announced on Tuesday. It will be preceded by a segment in which Rooney looks back on his career with “60 Minutes” correspondent Morley Safer.

“There’s nobody like Andy and there never will be,” said Jeff Fager, chairman of CBS News and “60 Minutes” executive producer.

He called Rooney’s contributions to the program “immeasurable,” and added, “It’s harder for him to do it every week, but he will always have the ability to speak his mind on ‘60 Minutes’ when the urge hits him.”

Rooney began speaking his mind on “60 Minutes” in July 1978.

ENGINEERS PREP INSPECTION OF WASHINGTON MONUMENT

Bad weather delayed the daredevil work of engineers who will rappel down the Washington Monument for a visual inspection, but tourists who ventured to the earthquake-damaged obelisk on Tuesday were treated to a rare sight. For several hours, engineer Dave Megerle was perched atop the 555-foot monument, setting up a rope system and other equipment that will allow the rappelling team to check the monument's exterior for cracks, chips and other damage. — The Associated Press

Melon Listeria Outbreak is Deadliest in Decade

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Health officials say as many as 16 people have died from possible listeria illnesses traced to Colorado cantaloupes, the deadliest food outbreak in more than a decade.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Tuesday that 72 illnesses, including 13 deaths, are linked to the tainted fruit. State and local officials say they are investigating three additional deaths that may be connected.

The death toll released by the CDC Tuesday — including newly confirmed deaths in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Texas — surpassed the number of deaths linked to an outbreak of salmonella in peanuts almost three years ago. Nine people died in that outbreak.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
The operator of a produce stand near Denver holds a California-grown cantaloupe at her business on Sept. 16. Federal and state officials have isolated a deadly outbreak of listeria to a cantaloupe farm near Holly, Colo., and have ordered a recall of 300,000 cases of melons.

The CDC said Tuesday that they have confirmed two deaths in Texas and one death each in in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Last week the CDC reported two deaths in Colorado, four deaths in New Mexico, one in Oklahoma and one in Maryland.

New Mexico officials said Tuesday they are investigating a fifth death, while health authorities in Kansas and Wyoming said they too are investigating additional deaths possibly linked to the tainted fruit.

Listeria is more deadly than well-known pathogens like salmonella and E. coli, though those outbreaks generally cause many more illnesses. Twenty-one people died in an outbreak of listeria poisoning in 1998 traced to contaminated hot dogs and possibly deli meats made by Bil Mar Foods, a subsidiary of Sara Lee Corp. Another large listeria outbreak in 1985 killed 52 people and was linked to Mexican-style soft cheese.

Jackson

Nothing the cardiologist could have done would have saved the King of Pop, defense attorney Ed Chernoff told jurors, because Jackson was desperate to regain his fame and needed rest to prepare for a series of crucial comeback concerts.

A number of Jackson's family members were in the courthouse, including his father Joseph, mother Katherine, sisters LaToya and Janet, and brothers Jermaine, Randy and Tito. LaToya Jackson carried a sunflower, her brother's favorite flower.

Murray, who arrived at court holding hands with his mother, is charged with involuntary manslaughter. If convicted, he faces up to four years in prison and the loss of his medical license.

Speaking for more than an hour, prosecutor David Walgren relied on photos and audio recordings to paint Murray as an inept and reckless caretaker.

Walgren showed a photo of a lifeless Jackson on a hospital gurney. He juxtaposed the image with those of Jackson performing. Walgren also played the recording of Jackson speaking to Murray while, the prosecutor said, the singer was under the influence of an unknown substance roughly six weeks before his death.

Jackson trusted Murray as his physician, and "that misplaced trust in Conrad Murray cost Michael Jackson his life," Walgren said.

The recurring theme was Jackson's never ending quest for sleep and propofol, the potion he called his "milk" and that he believed was the answer. Jurors were told that it was a powerful anesthetic, not a sleep aid, and the prosecutor said Murray severely misused it.

The prosecutor said while working for Jackson, the doctor was shipped more than four gallons of the anesthetic, which is normally given in hospital settings.

Chernoff, the defense attorney, claimed the singer swallowed several pills of the sedative lorazepam on the morning of his death and that was enough to put six people to sleep. After taking propofol, Jackson did not even have a chance to close his eyes, Chernoff said.

Chernoff, who had long hinted that the defense would blame Jackson for his own death, added a surprise. He claimed that Jackson died not because his doctor continued to give him the drug but because he stopped it, forcing Jackson to take extreme measures.

"What we will hear is that Dr. Murray provided propofol for two months to Michael Jackson for sleep," Chernoff said. "During those two months, Michael Jackson slept. He woke up and he lived his life.

"The evidence will not show you that Michael Jackson died because Dr. Murray gave him propofol. The evidence is going to show you Michael Jackson died when Dr. Murray stopped," the attorney said. He said Murray was trying to wean Jackson off of propofol and had been giving him other sleep aids known as benzodiazepines trying to lull him to sleep.

On June 25, 2009, the last day of Jackson's life, Chernoff said, he was in the third day of a weaning process and it didn't work.

Health Care

contributed between 1 and 2 percentage points to this year's premium hikes, which is about what many insurance analysts and benefits experts expected.

Companies and workers split premiums for employer-sponsored coverage, the most common form of health insurance in the United States, and employers generally pick up 70 percent of the bill or more.

Businesses likely reacted to these cost increases by giving a smaller raise or no wage increase to their workers, said Helen Darling, CEO of the National Business Group on Health, a nonprofit organization that represents large employers on health care issues.

"(Workers) basically are giving their pay raise to the health system," said Darling, who was not involved with the Kaiser study. "It's really bad news."

The annual study was conducted earlier this year and includes results from more than 2,000 companies nationwide. It also indicates that many more families than previously believed have benefited from a popular provision in the overhaul that allows young adults to stay on a parent's health plan until they turn 26.

Kaiser asked employers how many people were added to their insurance plans because of this provision and estimated that 2.3 million young adults enrolled. Last week the government had reported that the number of uninsured young adults had dropped by nearly 1 million since the law took effect, a finding independently corroborated by Gallup.

The difference isn't necessarily a contradiction.

The Kaiser survey may have counted young adults who were covered by a more expensive policy and switched to their parent's plan to save money.

Many workers are about to receive notices from their employers regarding health insurance coverage for next year. Altman said he cannot say whether this year's increase represents a bad omen for 2012 or if it is just a one-year blip.

Insurers have been saying for months that health care use is growing more slowly this year, something industry observers pin on a sluggish economy.

ISRAEL APPROVES 1,100 NEW HOMES IN EAST JERUSALEM

JERUSALEM • Israel advanced plans Tuesday to build 1,100 homes in a Jewish neighborhood in East Jerusalem, drawing condemnations from Palestinian officials as both sides consider a proposal by international mediators to resume negotiations. The Israeli step provoked international criticism, led by Washington, and comes at a sensitive diplomatic moment after the Palestinians' application last week for membership in the United Nations, a move Israel and the United States oppose.

The Money Men

Romney, Perry, Paul are way ahead in GOP race to raise presidential campaign funds.

BY PHILIP ELLIOTT and KASIE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Only three Republican presidential candidates are worth any money — campaign money, that is.

Mitt Romney, Rick Perry and Ron Paul have banked millions. But the other GOP candidates are struggling or broke, putting their candidacies in question four months before the first nominating contests.

Ahead of a critical fundraising deadline Friday, all of the GOP's contenders — regardless of their financial health — are furiously courting donors in Texas, Georgia, Washington and elsewhere in a last-minute bid to pick up cash before they file a three-month summary that will measure one aspect of their campaigns' financial strength.

"With the support of people like you, we will be able to get America back to work again," Romney wrote to his email list Tuesday while he personally pressed for donations in New York.

The candidates' own cash is just part of the picture because, this year, outside groups are allowed to raise and spend unlimited amounts of money to back specific candidates. And allies of Romney, Perry and Paul all have formed so-called SuperPACs to help their preferred candidates win the nomination.

That money aside, Romney is likely to post the strongest fundraising numbers, although his spokeswoman, Andrea Saul, said he'll raise "considerably less" than he did between April and June, his first fundraising quarter as a presidential candidate. In that period he reported gathering $18 million.

Perry donors claim he could hit $10 million, raised since he entered the race early last month. His advisers, however, dispute that. They're lowering expectations either so Perry's haul looks more impressive when it's announced, or it's an indication that the GOP front-runner hasn't seen a flood of money accompany the huge dose of enthusiasm he initially generated.

Paul's campaign asked supporters to celebrate the Texas congressman's Aug. 20 birthday with a donation — and they gave him $1.6 million on that day alone. It's a pattern for Paul, who can seemingly turn on the money spigot when he needs to; his loyal libertarian backers have delivered like that on five occasions, to the tune of a million or more at a time.

The rest of the field lags far, far behind. Jon Huntsman, the former Utah governor who is in the single digits in most state and national opinion polls, recently had to write himself a half-million dollar check to keep his campaign afloat. Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann spent so much money in Iowa in August to win a statewide test vote that her web videos look more amateurish now. Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich is still mired in debt. Herman Cain, the former pizza company executive, has loaned himself hundreds of thousands of dollars so he can keep running. And Rick Santorum's team acknowledges that the former Pennsylvania senator is barely scraping by.

Longtime Fugitive U.S. Hijacker Arrested in Portugal

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) • A convicted killer who escaped a New Jersey prison in 1970 and hijacked a U.S. airliner two years later while dressed as a priest has been captured in Portugal after more than 40 years as a fugitive, authorities said Tuesday.

George Wright was arrested Monday by Portuguese authorities in a town near Lisbon at the request of the U.S. government, the head of the FBI's New Jersey office said.

Wright was convicted of the 1962 murder of a gas station owner in Wall, N.J. Authorities say Wright and three associates had already committed multiple armed robberies on Nov. 23, 1962, when he and another man shot and killed Walter Patterson, a decorated World War II veteran and father of two, during a robbery of the Collingswood Esso gas station in Wall.

He received a 15- to 30-year sentence and had served eight years when he and three other men escaped from the Bayside State Prison in Leesburg, N.J., on Aug. 19, 1970.

The FBI says Wright became affiliated with an underground militant group, the Black Liberation Army, and in 1972 he and his associates hijacked a Delta Air Lines flight from Detroit to Miami — and on to Algeria.

The group lived as a “communal family” together in Detroit before the hijacking, according to AP reports at the time.

News reports said Wright, then 29, dressed as a priest and used the alias the Rev. L. Burgess to board Delta Air Lines Flight 841 on July 31, 1972, accompanied by three men, two women and three small children.

When the plane landed at the Miami airport, the hijackers demanded a $1 million ransom — the highest of its kind at the time — to free the 86 people on board. After an FBI agent delivered the money, the passengers were released, according to AP accounts.

The hijackers then forced the plane to Boston, where an international navigator was taken aboard, and the group flew on to Algeria, where the hijackers sought asylum.

As They Prepare to Leave, Marines Find Rewards in Afghanistan

Sure, young American troops in Afghan combat zones yearn for home, for the families, the comforts, and the luxury of no longer worrying about imminent death or injury, but it's not the whole truth.

BY CHRISTOPHER TORCHIA

Associated Press

FORWARD OPERATING BASE JACKSON, Afghanistan • An American in uniform stands near a landing zone at about 2 a.m., moonlight framing his features, and talks about dead and maimed men he knows. His flight out isn't until next month, and he is counting the days.

Then he says he will miss Afghanistan. “It's just life or death: the simplicity of it,” said Cpl. Robert Cole of the 1st Battalion, 5th Marine Regiment, which ends a seven-month deployment in the southern region of Sangin in October. “It's also kind of nice in some ways because you don't have to worry about anything else in the world.”

The dominant narrative about war in a foreign land says its practitioners yearn for home, for the families, the comforts, and the luxury of no longer worrying about imminent death or injury. It applies to young American troops in Afghan combat zones, but it's not the whole truth.

Combat can deliver a sense of urgency, meaning, order and belonging. There is the adrenaline-fueled elation of a firefight, and the horror of rescuing a comrade wounded by a bomb on patrol. It is magnified, instantaneous experience. An existence boiled down to the essentials mocks the mundane detritus, the quibbles and bill-paying and anonymity, of life back home.

Building on the costly inroads of a previous unit, the Marine battalion has seen a decline in Taliban attacks in Sangin, a southern Afghan area where the insurgency battled British forces to a stalemate for years. Now the troops have more time to build bridges and sluice gates, and sit cross-legged at meetings with Afghan elders in hopes of stripping the insurgency of popular support.

Early on, the going was hard. Cole said his platoon suffered close to 30 percent casualties, mostly from hidden bombs around its patrol base. He described how one Marine on patrol triggered a bomb that severed his legs. Another Marine rushed forward to apply tourniquets, knowing his friend would bleed to death if he methodically checked, as training dictated, for more booby traps in his path. The second Marine started dragging the first toward safety when he set off another bomb, severing his own legs, according to Cole. But he saved his comrade in the process.

“He didn't lose his legs for his country, he lost his legs for his brother,” Cole, of Klamath Falls, Ore., said bluntly. He gestured to another Marine in the dark at the landing zone at Forward Operating Base Jackson.

“The only shred of sanity that keeps us going out here is that I have to protect his ass and he has to protect my ass,” said Cole, who is confined to the base after suffering concussions in two explosions.

Cole, 22, is not bitter. He treasures the fierce loyalty, born of bloodshed. Politics, the debate about the wisdom of the decade-long U.S. involvement in Afghanistan, the plan to withdraw international combat forces by the end of 2014, seem irrelevant to young Marines.

When they talk about friends with amputated limbs under treatment in the United States, they often stick to the line, “he's doing really good right now,” even if they know that isn't true.

“Get some!” is a Marine slogan, reflecting the U.S. military branch's traditional taste for expeditionary action. On the night of Sept. 11, possibly to mark the 10th anniversary of the terror attacks in the United States, insurgents fired on guard posts at the Jackson camp. It was harassment, not a major attack. Marines returned fire in great volume, red tracer rounds plunging into the darkness.

“Watch your sectors!” warned a company captain as some Marines, adrenaline unleashed, broadened their sweep of fire from defensive berms. After a while, the shooting subsided. One Marine was asked: Is it over?

“I have no clue,” he laughed. “They can fire at us all night if they want, as long as nobody gets hurt.”

At Patrol Base Fulod, about a 15-minute ride in an armored vehicle from the Jackson camp, Cpl. Ernest Tubbs is something special among his peers. He has discovered three-dozen hidden bombs on this deployment. A smooth talker who radiates confidence, he remembered the first time he uncovered an IED, or improvised explosive device, “heart racing, so many emotions at one time.”

Tubbs, 22, of Parsonsburg, Maryland, leads patrols with a metal detector, potentially the most dangerous job in the war. In a small celebration, he smokes a cigarette whenever he finds an IED; he smoked two in a row after one very hazardous experience.

He is desperate to return to his wife and newborn son, and become a civilian, but he won't forget what it is like to be a kind of savior, to know men depend on him.

“The feeling of when things happen out here, it's a feeling that you'll never get rid of. But it's a feeling that will always belong to you,” he said. “There's no more adrenaline rush in the world than finding an IED. I'm going to miss that a bunch.”

For families in the United States, there are no such thrills, only the grind of not knowing. Tubbs' wife, Hannah, gave birth to a boy, Gabe, last month. Her husband's oldest brother cut the umbilical cord. In an email to The AP, she wrote:

“Even when I was still pregnant with him I would tell him that his daddy loves him and can't wait to meet him. I tell him who his daddy is and all about him. Being pregnant for most of the deployment didn't help the emotional part of it all. It was hard getting ready for the baby without him. It was even harder to hear about guys who had been hurt or even killed knowing they did the same job as my son's father.”

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Rise for Third Day

NEW YORK (AP) • The Dow rose 146.83 points, or 1.3 percent, to close at 11,190.69. It had been up as many as 325 points earlier. The Dow has added 419 points over the last two days, making up more than half of its 737-point plunge last week. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 12.43, or 1.1 percent, to 1,175.38. Materials stocks led the S&P higher. Specialty metals company Allegheny Technologies Inc. rose 7.4 percent, the most in the index. The Nasdaq composite rose 30.14, or 1.2 percent, to 2,546.83.

Amazon Expected to Launch Tablet Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) • Amazon is expected to unveil a tablet computer today, picking a fight with Apple Inc. and its iPad. The iPad has many challengers, but analysts say Amazon's could be different — it has a chance to be more than a wannabe.

“In essence, the Kindle is a Trojan horse for Amazon's retail and media brands,” said Morgan Keegan analyst Justin Patterson.

Seattle-based Amazon hasn't confirmed that it's launching a tablet, but it's holding an event in New York this morning, with its CEO Jeff Bezos speaking. Analysts believe Amazon's new tablet will come in two sizes: one with a screen that's 7 inches on the diagonal, a bit larger than the Kindle e-reader, and one that's 10 inches, slightly bigger than the iPad.

Saving on Holiday Flying and Lodging

BY SCOTT MAYEROWITZ
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Flying over the holidays is going to cost more this year. And the longer you wait to book, the pricier it's likely to get.

The average domestic airfare for the weeks of Thanksgiving and Christmas is $383, 4 percent higher than last year, according to Expedia.

As airlines fly fewer routes and planes to cut costs, there are fewer seats available. Flights are fuller than ever, and airlines can charge more.

Airlines have an additional reason to charge families more during the holiday season: there are fewer high-paying business travelers, and airlines need to make up for that loss of revenue.

But fliers can save money by manipulating travel websites, planning itineraries that are a little less convenient and taking advantage of airfare refund policies.

A simple but valuable strategy: If you find a good fare, jump on it. The price might drop later on, but not much.

Here are some tips to help you save.

BE FLEXIBLE

Adding a couple of days to your trip before or after peak travel days can lower fares significantly. So can flying on Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day or early on the morning of New Year's Day. These days tend to be less busy. A flight from Chicago to Seattle, leaving the Tuesday before Thanksgiving and returning Sunday, cost a whopping $420 on a recent search. A budget-conscious traveler could leave on the morning of Thanksgiving, return the following Monday and cut the airfare to $327. Most travel websites have search options that make it easy to find the cheapest days to travel.

LOOK FOR CONNECTING FLIGHTS

Flying nonstop is ideal, but that convenience isn't free. Booking an itinerary that includes one stop could save you $100 round-trip. Just make sure to leave plenty of time to connect so that even if your first flight is late, you don't miss the second leg. And be careful booking an itinerary that includes a stop in a cold-weather city. Last year, a Christmas weekend snowstorm on the East Coast caused more than 10,000 flight cancellations, stranding passengers for days.

FLY, THEN DRIVE

Some airlines have a virtual monopoly at certain airports, allowing them to charge more. One of America's most expensive airports is Cincinnati, which is dominated by Delta. To save money, many fliers instead choose airports in Dayton, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., or Indianapolis. Other airports are expensive to fly in and out of because they lack a low-cost carrier to keep prices in check or because business travelers are the primary customers.

CONSIDER THE 24-HOUR RULE

Most big airlines allow passengers to cancel and rebook tickets purchased through their websites within 24 hours without penalty. After you book, check the next morning and see whether the price fell. Alaska, Continental, Delta, Southwest, United, US Airways and Virgin America all allow this.

SAVE ON HOTEL ROOMS, CAR RENTALS

Hotel and car-rental reservations are typically refundable. Check frequently and rebook if prices have fallen. Alternatively, if you're willing to commit, many hotels offer discounts for non-refundable bookings. Hotels and car-rental companies frequently offer discounts to members of AAA and AARP and to government workers. They also have special rates for employees of certain companies. It never hurts to ask.

Beef Prices Up, but High Feed Costs Cut Profits

BY CINDY SNYDER

For the Times-News

High feed prices, increased exports and Southwest herd liquidations have combined to drive U.S. beef prices up, but more will be needed to push producers' receipts into the black.

Fears of a short corn crop pulled feed prices to near-record levels in July and August, narrowing feedlot margins to critical levels. At the same time, beef demand continued to push feeder cattle prices, with some central Idaho producers receiving $150 per hundredweight for 500-600-pound calves, up considerably from the $109 per hundredweight they received two years ago.

“There was simply no backing off on either one (feed or feeder prices),” said John Nalivka, owner of Sterling Marketing in Vale, Ore.,

and Idaho Cattle Association Marketing Committee chairman.

Though both feeder cattle and corn prices have softened lately, Nalivka calculated break-even costs for feedlots to be in the low $120s per hundredweight. “It's anyone's prediction if that's achievable,” he added.

The good news for producers is that export demand for beef has risen by 26 percent this year. At the same time, Texas and Oklahoma ranchers facing drought conditions were forced to sell animals early over worries about feed availability. While most industry analysts expected the latest head count in the nation's feedlots to be up again in August, placements actually came up about 250,000 head less than pre-report estimates.

“That surprised all of us,” Nalivka said. He had forecast feedlot placements to be up one more month before inventories started to reduce during the rest of 2011. “There is no doubt that supplies are going to be tightening up,” he added. Tighter supplies usually mean higher prices, which should allow fed cattle to reach the $123-$125 per hundredweight their owners need to break even.

While cattle producers watching the Southwest herd liquidations and realizing that the nation's herd isn't likely to expand for another few years may be lulled into thinking high beef prices are here to stay, Nalivka says that's not necessarily the case.

Export demand will play a key role in that equation, as will the U.S. dollar's value overseas.

Since late July, the Canadian dollar has declined by as much as 9 percent against the U.S. dollar. Canada has been a significant buyer of U.S. beef this year, but the currency shift has made U.S. beef products significantly more expensive there. Many expect to see U.S. beef exports to Canada fall during the last quarter of 2011.

At the same time, beef imports from Australia and New Zealand have risen thanks to the sharp depreciation in those nation's currencies against the U.S. dollar. The Australian dollar, for example, has fallen by about 10 percent against the U.S. dollar since late August.

While Nalivka doesn't expect to see huge increases in U.S. beef imports, the pace of exports could slow enough that national demand falls and prices weaken.

“Prices are so tenuous now, a lot depends on the dollar,” he said.

Saucy Opens for Dinner

Starting tomorrow, Twin Falls restaurant Saucy will be open for dinner. The seasonal dinner menu will rotate, and prices will vary. Expect to pay about $14 to $20 for an entree, co-owner Mike Dougherty said. Fall entrees include local, fresh springwater catfish filets, rustic pasta with roasted yellow pepper and saffron sauce, and chipotle pork tenderloin. “It’s going to be very delicious and eclectic,” Dougherty said. Dinner hours will be 5-9 p.m. Thursday-Saturday. Saucy has served lunch since late June, and its dining rooms are available for private events.

Artisan Food Movement Spreads to Butter

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

Remember when butter came in two varieties — salted and not? Food writer and blogger Leitha Matz can, which makes it all the more surprising when she contemplates the herd of butter choices now crowding grocery shelves. “There’s cultured butter, there are artisan butters. You can get butter that is more yellow in the spring and summer than it is in the autumn and winter because you can actually see the transition of what the animal is eating.” In fact, Matz, who taste-tested a raft of butters for her blog, Miss Ginsu.com, found herself “astounded at the sheer breadth and variety of butter that was available.” Spread the news: Butter is getting better in the United States. “There’s definitely been a kind of whirlwind with butter,” says Andrew Knowlton, restaurant and drinks editor at Bon Appetit magazine. Like bacon, butter has traveled an interesting path. A hand-crafted product 50 or so years ago, it descended into a mass-produced, taste-shackled commodity only to be resurrected in recent years as interest in good, hand-crafted food has grown. First the bread at restaurants improved, then chefs, who were listing the names of farm suppliers on their menus, got serious about butter. These days, there are wildly popular butters produced by outfits like Straus Family Creamery on the West Coast and the Vermont Butter & Cheese Creamery on the East. There are even “cult” butters, like the handmade product from a small dairy called Animal Farm in Orwell, Vt., which is a supplier to celebrated chef Thomas Keller’s Per Se and The French Laundry restaurants. And for those with a taste for the exotic, there’s the butter made in Brittany that is flecked with algae. “When you go to the grocery store now, it’s not just the local dairy and the big brand. You’ve got seven or eight to choose from, including imported butters. We kind of caught up to the Europeans,” says Knowlton. How does butter fit in with that other big food trend —

CAKE POPS

With at least three local bakers crafting these pops, Twin Falls has finally joined the cake-in-a-ball craze.

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

You’ve seen those trendy little cake pops on blogs, in a best-selling cookbook, in YouTube videos, in metropolitan markets and at Starbucks. Until this summer, you haven’t seen many of them in Twin Falls. But with at least three local bakers now offering pretty cake pops, this international sensation has finally arrived. The pops are sweet mouthfuls: balls made of finely crumbled cake and frosting creamed together, then chilled, dipped and decorated. They’re presented on the classic sticks that gave the pops their name, or served in little foil cups like truffles. Who could resist?

From the Market Booth
The dainty trio pictured above is by Melissa Sage, owner of Black Cat Cupcakes of Filer. “I try to make everything as pretty as it tastes,” said Sage, who offers her cake pop creations online and at outdoor markets, where she routinely sells out. Despite their diminutive size, Sage’s cake pops are boldly flavored. There’s nothing small about the namesake flavors in her Chocolate-Almond-Coconut cake pop, which is painstakingly garnished with all three ingredients, or her Chocolate-Mint version, topped with a tiny leaf made by painting chocolate onto a mint sprig. In the third Black Cat flavor I tested — Mexican Chocolate — chili powder and cinnamon provide a more subtle surprise. Tough choice, but it’s my favorite of the three.

You can order a minimum of 2 dozen anytime (971-227-2574 blackcatcupcakes.tf@gmail.com, or search “Black Cat Cupcakes” on Facebook). But to try just one or two of Sage’s cake pops, catch her Oct. 1 at the Twin Falls Farmers Market. She’ll sell at least two flavors that morning. These pops are 50 cents each, regardless of quantity. You’ll be back for a second one.

From the Bakery Case
At her bakery dubbed The Cup Cake, owner Jeannie Fields sells 3 dozen to 6 dozen cake pops a day — some special ordered for bunco parties or wedding showers, and some sold individually from a delectable and alluring array at the counter. With more than half a dozen cake pop flavors on display the day I visited, I pondered and agonized and finally settled on the Chocolate-Cherry-Peanut and the Pistachio, both pictured below. Both are gorgeous little made-from-scratch masterpieces. For the first of those two — a flavor particularly popular with customers — Fields adds cherries, peanuts and cherry flavoring to chocolate cake batter, then combines the crumbs with her cherry buttercream frosting. The resulting balls are dipped in dark chocolate, drizzled with a white chocolate confection and sprinkled with a bit of house-made, cherry-flavored sugar.

The Pistachio pop, new to Fields’ lineup, is a sophisticated indulgence. Nuts, flavoring and some pistachio pudding augment the yellow cake batter, and the crumbs are mixed with a pistachio buttercream. Dark chocolate and a sprinkling of nuts finish the presentation. I couldn’t stop at just a nibble. Pops at The Cup Cake (1563 Fillmore Ave. N. in Twin Falls, 490-0401) are larger than their Black Cat counterparts and are priced accordingly: $1.75 each, or $16 per dozen.

From the Coffee Shop
At Annie’s Lavender & Coffee Cafe, you’ll still find the cake pops on sticks. All the better for drive-through customers who juggle espressos at the wheel. Don’t expect made-from-scratch handiwork here. Annie’s owner Peggy Armstrong uses chocolate cake mix and readymade chocolate frosting inside these Mocha-Mocha cake pops, dipped in white chocolate and sprinkled with standard cupcake garnish. The result is a straightforward treat, perhaps best for a child’s birthday party or a hasty snack in the car. But nobody’s complaining. And when Armstrong — figuring cake pops were a passing fad — tried moving on to something else, customers clamored for the pops. “I can’t keep ‘em in stock,” Armstrong said. “So what does that say?” The price: $1 each, regardless of quantity. Here, cake pop availability isn’t predictable. Mocha-Mocha is one of three most popular flavors at Annie’s (591 Addison Ave. W. in Twin Falls, 736-2003). The other hot sellers: Red Velvet and Lavender-Lemon. For the latter — perhaps her most distinctive — Armstrong uses her Buhl farm’s own lavender extract.

South-central Idaho: Land of Beans

Once considered a poor man’s food, dry beans have become a popular mainstay in south-central Idaho.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

An engine roared as the truck lifted its bed, dumping millions of pinto beans into a large bin and stirring dust into the air. Jim Soran stood near the cloud of dust, waiting for the engines to quiet. When they did, he said: “The bean business has changed over the last 40 years. It’s not like it used to be.” Back then, when his father started Twin Falls-based Soranco Bean Producers, there were probably 50 or more bean warehouses in south-central Idaho. Today there are just a handful. “Not more than a dozen,” he said. By Vicky Ruffing’s count, there are just eight bean warehouses in Magic Valley. Ruffing is commodities marketing manager for Buhl-based Rangen and president of the Western Bean Dealers Association. But while production has consolidated, beans have gained fans. Beans once were considered a poor man’s food, Soran said, but not so much anymore. Today they are popular at pricey restaurants and specialty retail stores, relished by a growing population of bean lovers. And for good reason, he said. “Beans are packed with nutrition.”

- 1/4 tablespoon fresh ground black pepper
- Kosher salt to taste
- Tabasco to taste

1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
Soak all beans in hot tap water for four hours. Drain and rinse.
Melt butter and saute onion, carrot, celery and garlic until soft. Add chicken stock and beans. Bring to a boil, reduce to a simmer.
Add thyme and pepper. Simmer until beans are tender, adding water as needed.
Add Tabasco and vinegar. Stir well.
Remove from heat, stir in basil, salt to taste. Let cool.

Beans

Beans, the company's production manager, Dana Gowan, sat amidst dozens of packages of beans and lentils. Some of the 24-ounce packages were being readied for shipment to California.

"We import and export," Soran said, noting that most of his customers are in Western states — the same states that grow beans for the company: California, Colorado, Oregon and Washington. Nebraska and Michigan also are bean-growing states, he said.

Most of the company's lentils are grown in the Palouse region of northern Idaho.

The company produces more than 70 varieties of legume. The legume family is "anything that grows in pods on bushes," Soran said. "Peas, beans and lentils."

Some of the more popular beans in Idaho are the pinto and black bean, which are good with Mexican dishes. There are also the more fancy Anasazi and tongues of fire beans.

Kelley Bean Co. in Rupert focuses on producing Idaho's four most popular beans, said manager Roy Sneddon — pinto, great northern, pink and small northern. Kelley Bean receives its beans from Idaho farmers.

Sneddon estimated there are more than 500 growers in south-central Idaho. "That's a number to start with anyway," he said.

Ruffing said it'd be difficult for her to put a number on the growers because they fluctuate every year.

"Farmers rotate their crops," she said. "Some years they grow beans, other years they don't."

sell their beans wholesale, but some area bean producers show up at the Twin Falls Farmers Market, said organizer Carl Hatfield.

"I know we have at least a couple," he said.

When beans arrive in trucks at Soranco, they're put into large bins and then hauled inside the plant where they are machine-washed and sorted. The company has 25 employees, but machines do most of the initial cleaning and sorting.

The same process happens at Kelley, Sneddon said, noting his company has eight employees.

A Nutritional Food

If you're looking for protein in your diet, you don't have to look any further than beans.

"You can substitute beans for meat," Soran said, noting that some beans have distinct flavors, while others are fairly bland. "You can make a bean taste like whatever you want it to."

Some restaurants are picky about the types of beans they use in their recipes. Chefs look for color and texture when searching for the right bean.

Irving Karas, culinary director at Canyon Crest Dining & Event Center in Twin Falls, said he has changed up the restaurant's menu in recent months, trying to buy more local products including heirloom beans from Zursun.

"They have a great selection of quality beans," he said.

Karas uses heirloom beans for soups, ragout and

Great northern beans break down well and are good for creamy sauces, he said, while the cranberry bean holds its form well.

The garbanzo, also known as chickpea, is a large-variety legume with a nutty flavor — perhaps the most popular bean in the world.

You can use beans after they've been stored for 10 years or more, he said; they just might take a little longer to cook.

Sitting in the Zursun warehouse, surrounded by packages of legumes, Gowan said: "I eat a lot more beans than I used to. ... There are so many different varieties."

A Beginner's Souffle in 35 Minutes

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

With no bechamel sauce base to fuss with, this dish provides an easy introduction to cooks who shy away from souffles. It's an easy and light centerpiece to a meal that celebrates late-summer produce; serve with a colorful salad, roasted red bell peppers or sauteed vegetables.

Bucheron is a goat's-milk cheese with a creamy center and drier perimeter. Its texture combination is just right when mixed with the egg yolks in this recipe. If you can't find it, look for goat cheese that's slightly firm and crumbly.

Ideally, you'll need four 8-ounce ramekins or dishes with sides that are at least 2 1/4 inches tall. But this souffle mixture is fairly forgiving. It also will rise if divided among six 6-ounce ramekins or two small (7-by-2 1/4-inch) oval gratin dishes.

If you have a copper insert for your mixing bowl, the cream of tartar (added for egg-white stability) can be omitted.

Adapted from "Kitchen Simple: Essential Recipes for Everyday Cooking," by James Peterson (Ten Speed Press, 2011).

Goat Cheese Souffles

4 servings.

Unsalted butter, at room temperature, for the ramekins
Flour, for dusting the ramekins
8 ounces medium-ripe

goat cheese, preferably Bucheron
6 large eggs, preferably at room temperature
Pinch cream of tartar
Freshly ground black or white pepper

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Use the butter to liberally grease the insides of the ramekins, then dust liberally with flour and shake out any excess. Place the ramekins on a rimmed baking sheet, spaced well apart.

Trim the rind from the cheese, then place the cheese in a deep mixing bowl.

Separate the eggs into whites and yolks, placing the whites in the clean bowl of a stand mixer or hand-held mixer; make sure there are no bits of shell or yolk included.

Use a wooden spoon to work 3 of the yolks into the cheese; the mixture should be a bit pasty, like a small-curd cottage cheese. If not, add a fourth and, if needed, a fifth yolk, incorporating well. (Reserve any remaining yolks for another use.)

Beat the egg whites on low speed, then medium-high speed until frothy. Add the cream of tartar and beat just long enough to form stiff peaks.

Fold one-quarter of the beaten egg whites into the cheese mixture, then season with pepper to taste and fold in the remaining egg whites; it's OK if some streaks of white remain. Divide evenly among the ramekins.

degrees (this will bring extra heat to the undersides of the souffles, helping them to rise) and transfer the baking sheet to the oven. Bake for about 20 minutes, until the souffles are tall, golden brown on top and firm on the outside yet soft on the inside.

eating healthy?

Quite well, says Knowlton. "It goes within my definition of eating healthy, which is you eat less when there's flavorful food on the plate and you don't if you're using fake cheese or low-cal whatever," he says. "I think anything where people are thinking and talking about what they're putting in their mouths is part of a healthy diet."

Allison Hooper, co-founder of the Vermont Butter & Cheese Creamery, agrees.

"If you eat butter that has tons of flavor, you really don't need to eat a lot," she says.

Her creamery started making cultured butter about 13 years ago, patterning it on French butters. In a cultured butter, raw cream is pasteurized (a requirement in the U.S.), then selected strains of bacteria are added to create the required flavor profile. Butter made from pasteurized fresh cream is called sweet cream butter.

The butter is available salted or unsalted, or, a very popular product, seeded with sea salt crystals.

Mixing things into butter, or making what are known as compound butters, is another development that has become more common. In the October issue, Bon Appetit features a classic herb-lemon zest butter that can double as an instant sauce.

The nice thing about butter is you can indulge in a little luxury without incurring the kind of financial outlay that will cut through your budget like, well, you know.

"It's not truffles or foie gras or some crazy Himalayan salt," says Knowlton. "It's a cheap luxury."

She Cooked Up a Magazine for How Kids Eat

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Sally Sampson has 21 cookbooks to her credit yet still felt she wanted to do something with food “that mattered.” In 2009, with the aim of addressing childhood obesity in America and with input from the medical community, she shopped around an idea for an illustrated pamphlet about cooking that could be distributed at pediatricians’ offices during wellness checkups.

She got such a positive reception that instead, ChopChop launched as a primarily hospital-backed, non-profit quarterly magazine in March 2010. First printing: 150,000. Six issues later, its circulation has grown to 530,000, with a Web site at www.chopchopmag.org, greater sponsorship and an unusually interactive readership. It has earned the endorsement of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Its slogan as “the fun cooking magazine for families” seems apt. ChopChop’s pages contain food-related word games and math puzzles, tips on manners, suggestions for physical activity and a monthly profile of a Healthy Hero. They feature kids ages 5 to 12 who demonstrate the recipes, which come with information about how the nutrition satisfies MyPlate, the government’s refurbished dietary guide.

Sampson, 56, is head of a “pretty lean team” that she directs from her home in Watertown, Mass. Not surprisingly, a proposal for a ChopChop cookbook is in the works.

Sampson recently spoke with Bonnie S. Benwick. Edited excerpts follow:

Q. Tell me about the motivation for ChopChop.

A. My daughter was born with a chronic illness (pancreatitis), so I spent a lot of time in pediatricians’ offices and hospitals and on various advisory boards over the years. And researching. I kept feeling like I wanted to do something that mattered more than writing cookbooks.

I approached Lisa Simpson, who was then at Cincinnati Children’s Hospital, and Barry Zuckerman, chief of pediatrics at Boston Medical Center. We talked about basically prescribing cooking during doctor visits. They helped me flesh out the idea.

Now we’re in over 10,000 pediatricians’ offices, in schools and even on Indian reservations. It’s spreading, and that’s really exciting.

Q. What makes ChopChop different from other kid-focused cookbooks and such?

A. We’re really trying to teach but not have a kid feel like it’s homework. We don’t do funny faces or recipe titles. We don’t “hide” foods. All that just dumbs food down, and then you’ve defeated the purpose. And, you know, we have lots of 20-year-olds who read ChopChop. Our recipes are for any beginning cook.

Q. Do you get feedback from parents or children?

A. Both, plus doctors, government agencies, schools. I think the magazine gets better with each issue because we listen to the feedback. For example, a group of teachers in Philadelphia went through our recipe ingredients and told us their kids didn’t have access to particular foods. We’ve added frozen vegetables as a result.

For the section we added on physical activity, we had been shooting those photos in gardens and backyards. Residents in Chelsea (Mass.) said, “There’s nothing here that looks like that,” so now we also photograph kids on a basketball court or a sidewalk.

Q. The published recipes seem to contain very little or no salt.

A. That’s right. Walter Willett (from the Harvard School of Public Health) is on the advisory board, and he’s very concerned about sodium.

Q. How involved are the heavy hitters from your board of directors in each issue?

A. Walter and David Ludwig (at Children’s Hospital Boston) vet all the recipes. Walter requested a low-sugar beverage in each issue. But we have a deal: He can offer up changes, but the recipes still have to taste good.

Q. After six issues, have you discovered anything surprising about the way kids eat?

A. At the second or third photo shoot, to show a kid making a recipe, the 9- or 10-year-old younger brother of the girl who was cooking made a face when I told him we were doing a dish with tofu. I told him, “That’s okay! You don’t have to like it. You can give a thumbs down.” That got him excited, I think, that he could be dramatic.

I got a phone call and left the room. When I returned, he was asking her to make more. He was conflicted, because the tofu had been coated in sesame seeds and he said that was his favorite food. I found it fascinating.

Pairing favorite food with dreaded food really works. For a column I do called Ask Sally, my job is to come up with something a kid will like. When a kid said, “I hate eggs,” I used them as a binder with spinach to make a cross between a frittata and a pancake. She loved it. Sent me a photo of her eating it.

Another girl didn’t like eggplant. It took me three tries, but a ratatouille did the trick, with input from the girl. She made it with half the amount of eggplant I called for, so it wasn’t as “eggplant-y.” A great solution.

When kids cook, their palates widen, and they are interested in what they’ve made.

milligrams, depending on the brand — and around 16 grams of sugar, about the same amount as four teaspoons of sugar. So if you eat pickled beets, keep the quantity small.

PICKLED BEETS LOADED WITH SWEET

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: Are the pickled beets that come in a jar good for you, or are all the nutrients gone?

Answer: Any food has some nutrition, even starch-based packing peanuts. It’s a question of what kind and what fits in to your diet.

The nutrition analysis of commercial products, or even of homemade versions, differs widely depending on the recipe. In general, 1 cup of pickled beets has about 75 calories, 18 to 20 grams of carbohydrates and 2 grams of protein. It would also contain vitamin C, iron, magnesium, potassium, folate and manganese.

Unfortunately, all of that comes with a high amount of sodium — 350 to 500

Rocco DiSpirito Tackles Frozen Pizza Pockets

BY ROCCO DISPIRITO
For The Associated Press

Kids today are eating themselves into an early grave.

So many children are not just overweight, but obese. And everyone from parents, schools, food producers, even the government has had a role in this. That’s the bad news. The good news is that they also all can have a role in reversing it.

I’ll concede that life is tougher these days. In an era of single-parent and three-job families, many people are short on time and kitchen know-how. And too many people too often resort to microwaving processed junk and calling it dinner.

And in the process we’re getting our kids hooked on these foods.

I don’t have all the answers, but I do know that one of the first — and easiest — ways to combat childhood obesity is to teach ourselves and our children to cook wholesome, nutritious foods. Which doesn’t mean you or the kids need to sacrifice the foods you love.

Pizza is a great example. Kids love pizza. Heck, I love pizza! I could eat it hot, cold, morning, noon and night. If there was pizza-flavored toothpaste, I’d eat it. But pizza is one of those foods with more sodium, fat and calories than anyone needs.

A large slice of pizza has 600 or more calories with 26 grams of fat. My version? Just 226 calories and 8 grams of fat for two pizza pockets.

OK, technically my recipe isn’t a classic pizza. This is a “pizza pocket” made from nutritious whole-wheat bread and stuffed with traditional pizza toppings. Those fillings are easily adapted to your tastes; I’ve used lean Italian turkey sausage, shredded fresh zucchini, fresh mozzarella cheese, a natural marinara sauce and fresh basil — all low-calorie ingredients.

Plus, this recipe is something your kids can help with. And when kids help make something, they are much more likely to think it tastes good.

Just be sure to resist the temptation to use processed low-fat mozzarella cheese, the sort of shredded cheese so often used on regular pizzas. I used it for years until I experimented with fresh mozzarella. It has a sweet, rich, milky quality, and a low melting point, which allows it to meld with flavors like basil. The fresh variety, unlike the shredded processed form, adds pizzazz to the pockets. And best of all, I have found it as low as 60 calories per ounce, compared with 80 to 100 calories for regular mozzarella.

I know what you’re thinking — why not just buy frozen processed pizza pockets and toss them in the microwave? Fine, if you like preservatives along with your fat and sodium. Plus, it’s important for parents to set a good example by eating and serving healthy, nutritious foods as often as possible.

Part of this is teaching kids that convenience foods should be an occasional treat, not a dinner staple. Children also need to understand that meals are made from ingredients, not pulled from boxes. Those are two critical lessons that are easy to forget in the weekday rush to get dinner on the table.

That’s why I love recipes like this one. It’s fast. It’s easy. And it replicates a convenience food your kids will love, but that you can feel good about.

Tips:

- Hide any vegetable your child doesn’t like in these pockets. I bet the kids will devour it once it’s covered in sauce and melted cheese.

- Choose bread slices that are square, such as Ezekiel sprouted grain bread. Square slices are easier to fold in half than rectangular slices.

Pizza Pockets

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4 (2 pockets per serving).

- 1 link raw Italian turkey sausage, casing removed (about 4 ounces)
- 1 small zucchini, coarsely shredded
- 2 ounces fresh mozzarella cheese, coarsely shredded
- 1/2 cup no-salt, no-sugar, fat-free marinara sauce
- 12 leaves fresh basil, torn into bite-size pieces
- 8 slices whole-wheat bread, flattened with a rolling pin
- Extra-virgin olive oil cooking spray

Heat the oven to broil. In a small saute pan over medium heat, cook the sausage until cooked through, using a wooden spoon or spatula to break it into crumbles as it cooks. Drain off any fat.

In a medium bowl, mix the zucchini, mozzarella, marinara, basil and the cooked sausage. Place the flattened bread on a work surface. Spoon the zucchini mixture evenly in the middle of each piece of bread. Fold one corner of each slice to the opposite corner and seal the edges by pressing with a fork. Trim off the excess crust.

Place the pockets on a baking sheet. Lightly spray both sides of each pocket with olive oil cooking spray. Place on a rack 4 to 5 inches under the broiler and broil until browned and crisp, 2 to 3 minutes. Flip each pocket and then brown the other side under the broiler, 1 to 2 minutes more. Per serving: 226 calories; 8 g fat (31 percent of total calories, 3 g saturated); 29 mg cholesterol; 25 g carbohydrate; 15 g protein; 4 g fiber; 501 mg sodium.

TUCK APPLE PIE FILLING INTO THE FREEZER

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: What’s the best way to freeze apples?

Answer: Apples for pies can be frozen by boiling them in water for 2 minutes, then cooling them in ice water and packing them into freezer bags.

You also can make apple filling to freeze: Combine about 6 pounds of peeled, cored and sliced apples with 2 cups sugar, 1/4 cup flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons of cinnamon and 1/4 teaspoon of nutmeg. Let stand about 30 minutes, until the mixture is juicy. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and cook over medium heat until thickened. Cool and package it in freezer containers and freeze.

Sliced apples should be frozen in a heavy syrup of equal parts sugar and water. Add 1 teaspoon fruit protector per cup of syrup. Ladle 1/2 cup into each freezer container and add apple slices. Add more syrup if needed, leaving 1/2 inch at the top of the container. Cover, label and freeze. The easiest way to freeze apples, though, is to make applesauce. Just peel and core the apples and cook them with a little water and sugar to taste. Cook, covered, until the apples are falling apart. Mash and taste, adding more sugar if needed. Then package the sauce in freezer bags and freeze.

For the best tasting butter, buy the best quality cream you can find.

DIY BUTTER — EASY, INSANELY GOOD AND SO WORTH IT

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Why go to the trouble of making butter at home? After all, that's why they package it all up neat in little sticks for us at the grocery store ... So we don't have to.

And yet, it is so worth doing. Not every day, perhaps. But certainly for special days. Because homemade butter, simply put, is utterly and completely amazing. Plus, it's neither difficult nor expensive. The process even can double as entertainment for the kids.

Butter is a pretty basic food, and so is the making of it. Cream is agitated until the liquid buttermilk separates from the solid fats. The fats are the butter. That's it.

And there are plenty of ways to agitate cream. The most basic is to fill a jar about half full with cream. Tightly screw a lid onto the jar (canning jars are ideal), then shake vigorously. First it will slosh, then it will seem to turn solid (at which point it's essentially whipped cream), then it will form a lump of butter in liquid.

While simple, this method is tiring. You'll be shaking that jar for a solid 5 or more minutes. It's a good project for the kids.

But to make butter to serve, it's better to use either an electric mixer or food processor. It's faster and far less tiring.

For the best tasting butter, buy the best quality cream you can find. Keep in mind that the amount of cream you use will make roughly half as much butter. So a quart of cream will make about 1 pound of butter. After you've made the butter, pour off the buttermilk and add it to your pancakes, muffins or other baked goods. It also makes a great base for salad dressings.

Homemade Butter

Start to finish: 20 minutes. Makes about 1 pound butter.

- 1 quart heavy cream, left at room temperature for 30 minutes
- Salt, optional

To use the food processor, pour the cream into the bowl fitted with either the plastic or metal blade. Process on high.

To use an electric mixer, pour the cream into the bowl and beat with the wire whip attachment. Use a deep bowl with a splatter guard if available.

Regardless of the method used, the cream will go through the same stages. At first the cream will thicken and be whipped into soft peaks, then firm peaks. Then the cream will begin to get grainy. Finally a liquid will be released so that you have lumps of fat in a milky colored liquid. The entire process should take 5 to 20 minutes, depending on the method used.

Rest a fine mesh strainer over a bowl and strain out the buttermilk. Reserve for another recipe. Place the butter in a bowl and knead with your hand to squeeze out any more buttermilk. It may seem odd to knead butter, but it will hold together and kneads easily. You can use the butter immediately or refrigerate it for later. If storing for later, you'll want to "wash" the butter. This helps remove even more buttermilk from the butter so it doesn't sour. Add 1/2 cup of ice water to the butter in the bowl. Continue kneading the butter in the ice water. Pour off the milky liquid. Repeat the ice water wash and kneading process until the liquid remains clear. If you'd like to keep unsalted butter (such as for baking), wrap the butter in parchment paper and then plastic wrap and refrigerate for 2 weeks or freeze for 6 months. Otherwise add salt, to taste, then wrap in parchment and plastic wrap. It also can be stored in an airtight container. This is also a good point to add other flavorings, if desired, such as honey and cinnamon for toast and pancakes, or herbs and garlic for bread or meat.

Baked tofu is less likely to fall apart than fresh in this quick stir-fry. If you want the dish to be spicier, use some or all of the seeds of the chili pepper rather than discarding them.

Adapted from "A Year in a Vegetarian Kitchen," by Jack Bishop (Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2004).

Spicy Basil Tofu Fried Rice

1 serving.

- 1 teaspoon low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1 teaspoon light brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons peanut oil
- 1 small Thai chili pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
- 2 medium cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 cup Baked Marinated Tofu (see separate recipe here; may substitute 1 cup extra-firm tofu cubes, drained and pressed)
- 1/2 small red bell pepper, stemmed, seeded and cut into 1/2-inch dice
- 1 cup cooked brown or white rice
- 4 large basil leaves, rolled and cut crosswise into thin slices (chiffonade), plus more for garnish

Combine the soy sauce, water and brown sugar in a small bowl, stirring to dissolve the sugar.

Heat the oil in a large non-stick skillet or wok over high heat, swirling to coat. Add the chili pepper and garlic; stir-fry until fragrant, about 20 seconds. Add the tofu and stir-fry until heated through and lightly colored, about 2 minutes.

Add the bell pepper, cooked rice and the soy sauce mixture; stir-fry until the pepper has started to soften and the liquid has evaporated, about 1 or 2 minutes. Add the basil and stir-fry just until it wilts, about 20 seconds. Garnish with basil and eat immediately.

fries or other dishes in which you want a low-fat vegan protein. Freeze the tofu for at least 24 hours, and up to 1 week, before defrosting. The tofu can sit in its marinade, covered and refrigerated, for up to 1 day. After baking, the cooled tofu can be refrigerated in an airtight container for up to 1 week. Based in part on a recipe in "Sundays at Moosewood Restaurant," by the Moosewood Collective (Simon and Schuster/Fireside, 1990).

- 14 ounces (1 block) extra-firm tofu
- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame oil
- 1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon rice wine, sake or dry sherry
- 1 tablespoon rice vinegar or apple cider vinegar
- 1 medium clove garlic, pressed or finely chopped
- 1-inch piece peeled ginger root, grated
- 4 tablespoons water

- 1/2 teaspoon hot chili paste

If you're freezing the tofu, leave it in its unopened package and freeze for at least 24 hours and up to 1 week. Transfer to the refrigerator and allow to defrost for 1 day. Once it has defrosted, remove it from the package and drain, then wrap it in paper towels, hold it over the sink and press with your hands to remove much of the liquid.

If you're not freezing the tofu, drain it, wrap it in paper towels, set it on a microwave-safe plate and microwave on HIGH for 30 seconds. Remove the paper towels, rewrap the tofu with fresh ones, and microwave on HIGH for another 30 seconds. Repeat one or two more times, until the tofu is noticeably firmer. (Alternatively, you can press tofu: Wrap the drained block in paper towels, place on a plate, place a second plate on top and put a large unopened can of tomatoes or beans on top; let the tofu exude extra liquid for about 30 minutes. Unwrap, and pat the tofu dry.)

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Cut the tofu into 1-inch cubes.

Stir together the sesame oil; soy sauce; the rice wine, sake or sherry; vinegar; garlic; ginger; water and chili paste in a 9-by-13-inch baking dish. Add the tofu cubes and gently toss to combine.

Bake for about 45 minutes, turning the tofu onto a different side three or four times during the baking, until the tofu is browned and most of the marinade is absorbed or evaporated.

Serve immediately, use in a recipe, or cool and refrigerate in an airtight container for up to 1 week.

30-Minute Dinner Showcases Crab

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Anyone who's already suffering from a slight case of real-tomato withdrawal can take comfort in this dish, which is made with cherry tomatoes.

With crabmeat now available in 8-ounce containers at the grocery store, it's easy to procure a mixture of lump and claw meat, as called for here.

Serve with garlic bread. As with many pasta dishes, this one tastes great as cold leftovers the next day. Adapted from "The Essential Diabetes Cookbook," by Antony Worrall Thompson with Louise Blair (Kyle, 2010).

Crab and Tomato Linguine

4 servings.

Kosher salt
12 ounces dried linguine
1 to 2 small mild/sweet red chili peppers (may substitute 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes)

1 small onion
3 medium cloves garlic
20 cherry tomatoes
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 bay leaf
1 cup homemade or store-bought plain tomato sauce
1 pound crabmeat, preferably a mix of lump and claw

Freshly ground black pepper

Bring a large pot of water to a boil over high heat. Add a generous pinch of salt, then the pasta. Cook according to the package directions. Drain, reserving 1/2 cup of the pasta cooking water.

and bay leaf; cook for about 6 minutes, stirring, until the onion has softened. Stir in the tomato sauce and cook for 5 minutes, stirring and/or reducing the heat as needed.

Stir in the cherry tomato halves to coat evenly; cook for 5 minutes. Discard the bay leaf.

Pick over the crabmeat, removing any bits of shell or cartilage, then fold the crabmeat into the skillet sauce.

Add the drained linguine along with about 1/4 cup of its reserved cooking water. Use tongs to coat and incorporate ingredients; add more of the cooking water to reach the desired saucy consistency. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Divide among individual plates; serve immediately.

IHSAA Tosses
Its Weight
Around

Wrestling divisions are revised, with addition of a non-mandatory 98-pound class. The move was done to get in line with new national standards.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Considering the sport under debate, a heated and intense struggle was appropriate. But as in wrestling, there could only be one winner.

In its board meeting Tuesday in Twin Falls, the Idaho High School Activities Association passed a contentious change, shifting up wrestling weight classes on a one-year trial basis for the 2011-12 season.

This lines Idaho up with the new wrestling guidelines passed by the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS), and added a non-mandatory 98-pound weight class.

Jerome High School athletic director and IHSAA board representative Ty Jones estimated the opinion split at "probably 60/40 in favor" of the new weight classes, while another attendee suggested the proposal was rushed through by NFHS before state officials could consult wrestling coaches on the matter.

NFHS passed the changes in April, following a multi-year study.

The changes effectively eliminate a weight class in the competitive middle weights while adding one in the upper weights. The 182-pound class bridges the gap from 170 to 195, whereas before it was a straight jump from 171 to 189.

"That's a big jump (from 171 to 189). You get a lot of kids right there in middle. They put a 182 in there, that's going to help a lot of kids," said Minico coach Justin Gardner. "Last year we had a kid who weighed 185 and another kid that weighed 193 and they both wrestled 189. This year, that would just happen to work out for us.

"It's going to be interesting to see that heavyweight division. I think the two 4A state finalists weighed 223 or 224 and they wrestled heavyweights because they didn't want to get down to 215. It will be interesting to see what they do."

Creating a 15th weight class appears to be some sort of

Tony Knap, Ex-BSU
Coach, Dead at 96

From wire reports

BOISE • The man who helped bring Boise State's football team into a new era more than 40 years ago passed away Saturday.

Tony Knap, who coached Boise State from 1968-75, died at a retirement home in Pullman, Wash. He was 96.

Known for his white locks and his pass-heavy offenses, he went 71-19-1 as the Broncos' head coach, succeeding old friend Lyle Smith and taking the helm as Boise State transitioned from a two-year junior college into a four-year school as a Division II independent in his first season.

"All the guys that played for him, from what I could tell, they really liked the way they were treated by him," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said. "I also think they thought he was really ahead of his time."

Knap's teams reached the postseason four times, winning Big Sky Conference crowns in 1973, 1974 and 1975, reaching the Division II semifinals in 1973. Under his guidance, quarterback Jim McMillan had 5,508 yards from 1971-74, a career mark still sixth in Boise State history. His 33 touchdowns in 1974 were 27 more than the next-best mark by a quarterback in the Big Sky. Receiver Don Hutt had 30 touchdown catches between 1970 and 1973, a mark that stood until Austin Pettis broke it last season.

"Coach Knap brought an amazing offense that let us thrive when we became Boise State College," former Bronco defensive tackle Rocky Lima said. "He was a father figure to me and other Hawaiian players."

Red Sox Beat Baltimore, Set Up
Last-Day Dramatics for Wild Card

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE • The Boston Red Sox maintained a share of the AL wild-card lead Tuesday night, using four home runs to beat the Baltimore Orioles 8-7 and set up a dramatic conclusion to the regular season.

The skidding Red Sox were 6-19 in September before rebounding to edge the last-place Orioles. The win, combined with Tampa Bay's 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees, kept Boston and the Rays tied with one game left.

After blowing a nine-game lead in the span of 23 days, the Red Sox will send Jon Lester (15-9) to the mound against Baltimore on Wednesday night in an effort to get into the postseason for the fourth time in five years. Lester, Boston's winningest pitcher, will be throwing on three days' rest.

Boston will be looking to put together its first winning streak since sweeping a doubleheader from Oakland on Aug. 27. If the Rays and Red Sox remain tied after Wednesday, Tampa Bay will host a one-game playoff Thursday.

Rookie Ryan Lavarnway became the unlikelyst of heroes for Boston, hitting his first two major league homers after being thrust into the lineup because of injuries to catchers Jarrod Saltalamacchia (sore collarbone) and Jason Varitek (knee).

Lavarnway, a Yale philosophy major who never played a big league game before August, hit a three-run drive in the fourth inning and added a solo shot for an 8-4 lead in the eighth.

Jacoby Ellsbury and Marco Scutaro also connected for Boston, which scored all its runs on home runs.

Alfredo Aceves (10-2) pitched 3 2-3 innings of three-hit relief for the Red Sox, who survived homers from Baltimore's Matt Wieters and Adam Jones.

NBA Gives No Insight on Situation

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Smiling widely but even resorting to a memorable NBA cliché to avoid specifics, David Stern provided little insight into the direction of the league's labor situation.

That, he hinted, could come Wednesday.

Negotiators for the NBA and its players met for only about two hours Tuesday and plan to resume the talks early Wednesday. Stern said that meeting will determine how soon it's worth sitting down again.

And if it's not later this week, more cancellations are likely next week.

It's been expected there would be no talks Thursday because members of both bargaining teams will be observing the Jewish holiday, but they could resume before the weekend if progress is being made.

"They and we have both agreed that so long as there is reason to keep discussing, we will keep discussing, undeterred by the calendar or weekends or things like that," Stern said. "We will know more after tomorrow's session."

Both sides said neither concern nor optimism should be read into the brevity of the meeting. They simply needed time to think about what had been discussed.

"We've talked extensively in ideas and concepts, these are things that if we can get into the range of, get into the zone of, then maybe we can put a deal together," players' association president Derek Fisher of the Lakers said.

Unlike last week, Stern grinned often while speaking to reporters, but he said that was "only because when I didn't smile the last time I was described as something between dour and surly, so this is my smiling face. And we're looking forward to reconvening tomorrow."

He repeatedly said the sides discussed "concepts," but wouldn't get into any of them. And when asked if more exhibition games would be scrapped without a breakthrough this week, he borrowed a line from Rasheed Wallace in answering.

"Both teams played hard," he said. "And the calendar is not our friend."

Training camps were postponed and all 43 preseason games scheduled for Oct. 9-15 were canceled Friday. With compromise for moving the lightest class up when many wrestlers in the 103-pound class were nowhere near the weight limit.

Even so, adding an additional class was the subject of much discussion. Some championed the cause of smaller athletes being able to achieve excellence in wrestling as opposed to other sports, while others noted that most teams were struggling to fill a full roster without adding a new slot.

“I’m not even close to thrilled about this,” said Buhl athletic director Stacy Wilson, who manages both the Buhl Invitational and the Red Halverson Invitational in Rupert. “At our tournament we had one full team out of 27. At Red Halverson we had two full teams. Even some 5A teams had six, seven open weights.”

Said Gardner: “Wrestling is the only sport where you can have your small kids compete against other small kids. Now they get a chance. ... It’s (a case of) play it by ear. There is a lot of controversy over these new weights. There are pros and cons to it, and I can see both sides of it. But I think our lower-weight kids, it’s going to benefit them.”

The last time NFHS made wholesale changes to the weight classes was in 1988. Since then, the 215-pound class became mandatory and the 275 class was pushed to 285.

Times-News writer Ryan Howe contributed to this report.

Other Noteworthy Developments Out of Tuesday’s IHSAA Board Meeting:

- The IHSAA is working with a former Office for Civil Rights worker to hold Title IX workshops around the state next month. The District IV workshop will be held from 2:30- 5:30 p.m. Oct. 17 at Canyon Ridge High School. In July 78 school districts (100 high schools total) were accused of violating Title IX legislation. Thus far only one school district, Meridian (five high schools) has been notified of further proceedings, according to the Idaho State Department of Education.

- The board announced an early plan for life without Bronco Stadium for its state track and field meets. Boise State will begin Bronco Stadium expansion in the spring to, among other renovations, remove the track and add approximately 20,000 seats to the stadium. Preliminary plans call for staging each classification’s state track meet at a different venue in the Boise area for 2012, hopefully moving to Boise State’s new track and field facility at Dona Larsen Park beginning in 2013.

- The board discussed the merits of a dead period before the beginning of the fall sports practice schedule (soccer, zero-week football), during which sports-related activities, including team camps, weightlifting, summer team programs, coach contact, and other activities would be off-limits. The board voted to evaluate other states’ policies before proceeding with its own.

- The 1971-72 Gooding High School boys basketball team was selected as the 2012 boys basketball state tournament’s “Legends of the Game” honoree.

- Oakley High School has lodged a petition to move up in classification from 1A Division I to 2A beginning in 2012-13. This would be a full athletic program move, not just football as was pitched (and shot down) last school year. Ten schools in total petitioned to be reclassified outside of where their enrollment numbers would place them.

- Online ticket sales for IHSAA-sanctioned state competitions are now available, beginning with the state soccer tournaments running from Oct. 18-20.

the lockout nearly three months complete, players and owners are trying to agree on a labor deal in time to avoid any further damage to the NBA calendar. The regular season begins Nov. 1.

The format was again with small groups, and that will remain the case Wednesday. However, Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver said the owners’ labor relations committee would be prepared to return to the table this week if necessary.

“They stand ready to come to New York, or wherever else, if there’s a reason to continue on Friday,” he said. “So the groups may expand.”

Stern and Silver were joined by Spurs owner Peter Holt, who leads the labor relations committee, and NBA senior vice president and deputy general counsel Dan Rube.

Fisher and union executive director Billy Hunter had attorneys Jeffrey Kessler and Ron Klempner with them, and economist Kevin Murphy will return Wednesday.

Neither side would say if there were any new proposals, with Fisher also using the word concepts.

“We’re not holding anybody accountable to ideas being thrown out in the room,” he said. “It’s really just a process that we’re trying to go through to see if we can get a deal done.”

Stern and Fisher said there was discussion of both major obstacles to a deal, the salary cap system and the split of revenues. Players were guaranteed 57 percent under the previous collective bargaining agreement, but have said the owners’ proposals would have them in the 40s.

three runs and five hits in 31-3 innings. The left-hander struck out six but needed 84 pitches to get 10 outs.

Bedard retired the first two batters without difficulty, then walked Nick Markakis and yielded an RBI double to Vladimir Guerrero to fall behind 1-0.

Boston took the lead in the third against rookie Zach Britton (11-11) when Scutaro hit a two-out double and Ellsbury followed with his 32nd homer. Ellsbury has hit in 35 straight games against the Orioles, a streak that began on April 17, 2009.

Rays Hold Up Their End of the Bargain

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Matt Joyce and Ben Zobrist homered Tuesday night, helping the surging Tampa Bay Rays continue their improbable chase for the AL wild card with a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees on Tuesday night.

The Rays, seeking their third playoff berth in four seasons, began the night tied with Boston after making up nine games in the standings since Sept. 4. The two teams remained tied after Boston edged Baltimore 8-7.

Joyce’s three-run homer off former teammate Rafael Soriano (2-3) was the All-Star’s first in more than three weeks and wiped out a 3-2 deficit in the seventh. Zobrist hit a two-run drive off Bartolo Colon in the second, and the Rays kept the score close by turning the third triple play in franchise history after falling behind in the sixth.

WHITE SOX 2, BLUE JAYS 1 CHICAGO • Mark Buehrle pitched seven shutout innings in possibly his final start for the White Sox and Tyler Flowers homered to lead Chicago to a victory over the Blue Jays.

The White Sox played their first game since Ozzie Guillen was released from his contract after Monday night’s victory over the Blue Jays. Pitching coach Don Cooper served as interim manager.

Buehrle (13-9) allowed six hits, struck out six and walked none. He left to an ovation before throwing a pitch in the top of the eighth.

Buehrle will be a free agent after the season. General manager Ken Williams said before Tuesday night’s game he didn’t know yet whether Buehrle fit into the team’s future plans. Buehrle, a 38th-round draft pick in 1998, is 161-119 in his career.

Henderson Alvarez (1-3) took the loss.

TWINNS 7, ROYALS 4 MINNEAPOLIS • Rene Tosoni hit a grand slam and Chris Parmelee also went deep to lift the Twins to a victory over the Royals.

Anthony Swarzak (4-7) gave up two runs on 10 hits with six strikeouts in 6 1-3 innings for the Twins (62-99), who are hoping to avoid becoming just the second team in franchise history to lose 100 games in a season.

Sean O’Sullivan (2-6) gave up six runs on nine hits with one strikeout in five innings for the Royals. Johnny Giavotella had two doubles and a triple and Salvador Perez added two hits and an RBI for Kansas City.

PHILLIES 7, BRAVES 1 ATLANTA • Derek Lowe had another miserable outing, surrendering five runs in four-plus innings, and Philadelphia romped past Atlanta, leaving the Braves on the brink going to the final day of the regular season.

The Braves lost their fourth in a row and eighth in 11 games, sending them to the final day of the regular season assured of no more than a one-game lead over the St. Louis Cardinals, who were at Houston.

MARLINS 3, NATIONALS 2 MIAMI • Bryan Petersen homered with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning and Javier Vazquez pitched a five-hitter as the Marlins beat the Nationals.

Petersen hit the first pitch from reliever Doug Slaten (0-2).

BREWERS 6, PIRATES 4

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Atlanta Braves pitcher Derek Lowe walks off the field after giving up two runs to the Philadelphia Phillies during the third inning. The Braves lost 7-1, putting their playoff hopes in jeopardy.

MILWAUKEE • Prince Fielder homered three times in a game for the first time in his career, including a two-run shot in the seventh inning that lifted the Brewers to a victory over the Pirates.

REDS 5, METS 4, 13 INNINGS

NEW YORK • Jose Reyes hit two solo home runs, putting pop into his bid for the NL batting title, but the Reds beat the Mets on Drew Stubbs’ squeeze bunt in the 13th inning.

Reyes began the next-to-last game of the season with a minuscule .00006 lead over Milwaukee’s Ryan Braun. Reyes went 3 for 6 and raised his average to .336, finishing the evening one point ahead of Braun, who went 1 for 2 in a 6-4 win over Pittsburgh.

Darkness Cuts Short Wendell Victory

TIMES-NEWS

Jorge Valera scored in the 50th minute in a game that was cut short due to darkness and Wendell escaped with a 1-0 victory against Buhl.

Shortly after Valera’s goal, the game was held up for 25 minutes after Wendell goalie Alexis Camarto collided with a Buhl player in front of the net, and Camarto got the worst of it and was taken away by ambulance. The teams resumed play for about eight minutes after the delay, but darkness quickly came, which made further play impossible, since Buhl’s field isn’t equipped with lights. Coaches on both sides then agreed not to suspend the game, and that more than enough time had been played to make the game official.

Camarto’s condition wasn’t immediately known at press time.

Ismael Martinez relieved Camarto and held strong in the net to complete the shutout. Camarto and Martinez combined for 15 saves.

“It was a tough situation for Ismael to come into, to come in with the lead and hold it, but he did,” Goss said.

Boys soccer

FILER 5, DECLO 1

Zach Clark opened the scoring for the Wildcats followed by two goals by Ceaton Hammond with the second goal off an assist by Clark giving Filer the 3-0 lead at the break in the High Desert Soccer Conference road game. Santiago Alvarado and Matt Hass added goals in the second half. Chase Shank had an assist on the score by Hass.

“We were working more on our passing,” said Filer coach Gregg Clark. “We came together as a team with players playing different positions.”

The only Hornet goal was by sophomore Alex Leech who scored his first career goal.

“It was a real good effort by Filer,” said Declo coach Tim Henrickson. “I really enjoyed watching our guys stringing some passes together. You could see the effort was very strong.”

Filer (5-3-3, 3-2-3) play at Bliss and Declo (0-5-0, 0-4-0) go to Wendell on Thursday.

GOODING 5, BLISS 2

The Senators got two goals apiece from Jesse Cardenas and Rico Mendez, while teammate Angel Garcia rounded out the scoring. Gooding improved to 6-1-3.

Girls Soccer

WENDELL 2, BUHL 1

Hannah Lancaster and Maria Vielmas each scored a goal for Wendell beating the previously unbeaten Buhl Indians in a High Desert Soccer Conference game.

“It was an intense game from start to finish,” said Wendell coach Jaime Cordero. “They played so hard and it showed. It was the best game they have played.”

Brittany Barger scored the lone Buhl goal in the first half.

“The girls did the best they could with the roster we played,” said Buhl coach Araceli Huicochea. “The girls remain very optimistic and feel we are still the number one team to beat. Wendell brought a really good game.”

Wendell (3-7-2, 3-6-2) hosts Declo on Thursday.

Buhl (8-1-1, 9-1-3) travels to Declo on Tuesday and are at Bliss on Thursday.

FILER 5, DECLO 0

Jenna Jarolimek led the Wildcats with two goals and had scoring support from Noelia Garza, Alyssa Lekkerkerk, and Kellee Stokesberry with each scoring a single goal in the High Desert Soccer Conference match.

“We actually got some offense going which has been absent,” said Filer coach Shane Hild. “We had some players back from injuries which helped. The girls put some nice passes together.”

Declo was missing some key players.

“We tried to pull something together but just couldn’t get anything going,” said Declo coach Alyssa Terry.

Filer (5-7-1, 5-4-0) is on the road at Bliss on Thursday.

Declo (2-8-2, 2-7-1) plays at Wendell on Thursday.

BLISS 7, GOODING 0

Bliss improved to 7-3-1 overall and 7-2-1 in the High Desert Soccer Conference with the road win.

The Bears had two players recording hat tricks. Demsie Butler had three goals and an assist and Kendall Martell matched Butler in the scoring column. Estephanie Altamirano also scored and recorded an assist on one of Martell’s goals.

“The girls played hard and passed well on both sides of the field,” said Bliss coach Diana Butler.

Bliss (7-3-1, 7-2-1) hosts Filer on Thursday.

Volleyball

GOODING 3, WENDELL 0

The Senators swept the host Trojans, 25-14, 25-15, 25-12 in a Canyon Conference matchup.

Kiersten Hilt racked up a double-double for Wendell with 15 kills and 15 digs and also was tough at the net with five blocks. Megan Sousa controlled the Trojan offense with 28 assists and also had five blocks and Savannah Fleming was second on the team with 10 digs.

“We’re starting our second round of conference games,” said Wendell coach Amber Smith. “And we made a better showing tonight than the last time.”

Wendell is at Buhl tonight.

VALLEY 3, GLENNIS FERRY 2

Valley won the opening set and fell behind by two sets then rallied to win the fourth and fifth sets to claim the Canyon Conference match, 25-15, 15-25, 22-25, 25-20, 15-13.

Cheyanna Nelson and Lizbeth Henry each had five kills for the Vikings. Jaclynn Garr passed our 16 assists and recorded 21 service points. Gabby Beck was tough at the net with five blocks.

For the Pilots, Jacqueline Brennan chalked up a game-high 11 kills, Deija Martin had six blocks and 16 digs and Michaela Turner collected 15 assists.

Glenns Ferry is at Wendell and Valley (5-8, 2-3) travels to Kimberly on Thursday.

TWIN FALLS 3, BURLEY 0

The Bruins had 28 kills and 11 blocks as a team and made quick work of the Bobcats, 25-11, 25-15, 25-6.

HAGERMAN 3, CASTLEFORD 0

Hayley White had 32 assists, and Katie Hines and Megan Bean had nine kills apiece as the Pirates had little difficulty with the Wolves after surviving the first game, 28-26, 25-11, 25-13. Aly Sauer added four blocks for Hagerman.

CANYON RIDGE 3, WOOD RIVER 0

CANYON RIDGE 2, FILER 0 Staci Baird had 17 kills and eight blocks, and along with Emma Stevens (17 blocks) formed an impenetrable front line in a pair of victories.

“It’s nice to be able to stay out on the court and get some more touches,” Baird said in noting the ease with which the Riverhawks put away their opponents. “But a win is a win no matter what.”

Lauren Shotwell had 38 digs in the two matches, while Kylee Denny added 44 assists for Canyon Ridge (4-1 Great Basin Conference)

MINICO 3, JEROME 2

Chelsie Hepworth had 20 kills and 13 blocks, and Hannah Bailey had six blocks and 11 kills as the Spartans came out on top after blowing a 2-0 lead in games, 26-24, 25-15, 25-27, 17-25, 15-13.

Haylee Burnham led Jerome with 12 kills, while Melissa Leavitt and Savannah Lott had eight kills apiece.

Late-Winner Haas Earns Final President's Cup Roster Spot

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Turns out that the sudden-death playoff Bill Haas won at East Lake was worth more than $11.44 million. It earned him a spot in the Presidents Cup.

U.S. captain Fred Couples used his two picks Tuesday on Tiger Woods and Haas, who won the Tour Championship for his first win of the year.

Couples took Haas, the son of vice captain Jay Haas, over Keegan Bradley, whose two wins this year include the PGA Championship.

International captain Greg Norman took Robert Allenby and Aaron Baddeley, both of whom grew up in Melbourne.

He said Allenby was an "automatic pick" because of his long-time success at Royal Melbourne, while Baddeley made it an easier choice when he tied for third at the Tour Championship.

"Bill Haas knew he had to win last week, and he did it," Couples said. "I could not leave him off the team after that. When a guy knows that second place ... and he'll tell you, second place isn't good enough. And he understood that."

He said if Haas had lost the play-off at East Lake and Bradley had finished fourth or fifth — he wound up tied for 11th — then Bradley would have been the pick.

Couples said if Steve Stricker cannot play because of an injury, then Bradley would be chosen to replace him. Stricker had an MRI on Tuesday because of weakness in his left arm, although results were not immediately disclosed.

Woods was announced as a pick five weeks ago. Couples thought it was important to let the rest of the Americans know there would be only one open spot after qualifying ended.

Woods, who missed most of the summer with left leg injuries, did not return until August and played only two tournaments, missing the cut in the PGA Championship.

He is playing next week at the Frys.com Open, and will play in the Australian Open the week before the matches.

The Presidents Cup is Nov. 17-20 at Royal Melbourne.

"Things are going great," Woods said. "We're practicing very hard up at The Medalist, and I'm playing as much as I possibly can, something that I hadn't done all summer because I hadn't been cleared to do it.

"I'm really looking forward to getting my game rounded for The Presidents Cup."

Couples also considered Brandt Snedeker, who finished 11th in the U.S. standings.

"Congrats to bill haas/(at)tiger-woods. They deserve the picks. Although I'm very disappointed, I've very happy to have been considered. GO USA," Bradley said on Twitter.

This amount, like the bid deposits, must be delivered in the form of a cashier's or certified check. If the Secretary is the high bidder, he need not pay the bid amount in cash. The successful bidder will pay all conveyancing fees, all real estate and other taxes that are due on or after the delivery of the remainder of the payment and all other costs associated with the transfer of title. At the conclusion of the sale, the deposits of the unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them. The Secretary may grant an extension of time with which to deliver the remainder of the payment. All extensions will be fore 9-day increments for a fee of $600.00 paid in advance. The extension fee shall be in the form of certified or cashier's check made payable to the commissioner. If the high bidder closed the sale prior to the expiration period, the unused portion of the extension fee shall be applied toward the amount due. If the high bidder is unable to close the sale within the required period, or within any extensions of time granted by the Secretary, the high bidder may be required to forfeit the cash deposit or, at the election of the Foreclosure Commissioner after consultation with the HUD Field Office representative, will be liable to HUD for any costs incurred as a result of such failure. The Commissioner may, at the direction of HUD Field Office Representative, offer the property to the second highest bidder to an amount equal to the highest price offered by that bidder. There is no right of redemption, or right of possession based upon a right of redemption, in the mortgagor or others subsequent to a foreclosure completed pursuant to the Act. Therefore, the Foreclosure Commissioner will issue a Deed to the purchaser(s) upon receipt of the entire purchase price in accordance with the terms of the sale as proved herein HUD does not guarantee that the property will be vacant. The amount that must be paid by the Mortgagor, to stop the sale prior to the scheduled sale date is $81,384.14 as of 10/04/2011, PLUS all other amounts that are due under the mortgage agreement. Plus advertising costs and postage expenses incurred in giving notice, mileage by the most reasonable road distance for posting notices and for the Foreclosure Commissioner's attendance at the sale, reasonable and customary costs incurred for title and lien record searches, the necessary out-of-pocket costs incurred by the Foreclosure Commissioner for recording documents. Plus a commission for the Foreclosure commissioner and all other costs incurred in the connection with the foreclosure prior to reinstatement. THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"To fall into a habit is to begin to cease to be."

— Miguel de Unamuno

Today's deal, reported by Tim Bourke of Australia, features Bill Jacobs, declarer in four hearts. If you were South, knowing that West held at least 10 cards in spades and diamonds, wouldn't you be inclined to play East for the club queen? So would I, but at the table Jacobs found a better approach.

Against four hearts West led the spade king, which Jacobs ducked. He won the spade continuation and ruffed dummy's last spade to hand, eliminating the suit. Now he led a heart toward the king, won by the ace.

West was endplayed (since a spade would let declarer pitch a club from dummy and ruff clubs in the North hand). West elected to get off play with a diamond. South won his jack, cashed the diamond king, then played three rounds of hearts to East.

At this point, declarer was able to claim the rest. Since West had shown five spades and five diamonds, it was a sure thing that East had nothing left but clubs in the three-card ending and was thus endplayed, forced to open up the clubs for declarer.

It is always entertaining to endplay both of your opponents, even though superior guesswork would also have sufficed. More to the point, it should also annoy them both — no bad thing to accomplish on a single deal!

ANSWER: Rightly or wrongly, I would not sell out here. I would bid four clubs, knowing that our side must have at least an eight-card fit somewhere and hoping that game might make in either clubs or hearts, remote as that might seem after North's second-round pass.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I had a debate about who should pay for dates. She thinks the man should pay, especially if sex is involved because “you don’t want to give it away for free.”

I disagree. I say the man should pay for the first, and maybe the second date. After that, they can agree to alternate.

I have been seeing a wonderful guy for about six months. I’m pretty sure I make more money than he does, but even if I didn’t, I don’t feel the need to be supported. I don’t agree the guy should always have to pay. Times have changed since my mother dated. What’s the general consensus on the subject these days?

— INDEPENDENT WOMAN IN MARYLAND

DEAR INDEPENDENT: The consensus is that you’re right. Times HAVE changed since your mother dated, and furthermore, paying for a date does not give the payer any guarantee of sexual favors. While in some regions, cultures and age groups there may be the expectation that the man pays, in today’s world many women expect to pay their fair share after the first couple of dates.

In other words, it’s COMMON to split a check or

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

share the cost of an evening’s dinner and entertainment. The idea that a woman should put out for the price of a burger is, thankfully, passe. And that’s for the best, don’t you agree?

DEAR ABBY: I have known “Arthur” for more than 20 years. Since Day One, he has wanted more than friendship, but I made it clear that I never wanted more than a platonic relationship. I care about him, but have never had romantic feelings for him.

We spend a lot of time together between relationships with other people. (I was married for eight years out of our 20-year friendship.) Arthur comes over — we hang out, sometimes share a meal or watch a movie, etc. Then we go to sleep in my bed. He SLEEPS in my bed, where there’s no hanky-panky. I’m content with things as they are. He makes me laugh and I feel good about myself.

However, lately I sense he’s becoming too attached. I worry that I might be leading him on even though I’ve made it clear that I don’t want anything romantic or sexual. After 20 years, there are no gray areas left to analyze my intentions.

My friends think what I’m doing is wrong, that I might be keeping Arthur from moving forward in his life. Keep in mind that I encourage him to go out with friends and to date. AM I doing anything wrong that may be hurting him in an indirect way?

— PLATONICALLY CONNECTED IN TEXAS

DEAR PLATONICALLY CONNECTED: You are happy the way things are. Arthur appears to have accepted the relationship on your terms. While he may secretly hope that one morning you will roll over, open your eyes and realize that he’s Prince Charming, you have been honest with him from the beginning. I see no reason to end a relationship that is rewarding to both of you because your friends are meddling. Your friends should mind their own business.

TO MY JEWISH READERS: As the sun sets tonight, Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, begins. As we start this time of solemn introspection, let me wish you all, “L’shana tova tikatevu!” — may you be inscribed in the Book of Life for a good year.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

POST FALLS • Lauren Johnson said her world was “flipped upside down” — literally and figuratively — when she was struck by a vehicle while riding horseback. But what upsets the Post Falls woman about the Aug. 16 incident on Garwood Road more than injuries that have sidelined her busy everyday life, including her 21st birthday, is what it did to Blondie, her buckskin quarterhorse. “I really don’t care that I broke a (collarbone) and had to have a titanium plate put in me,” Johnson said. “But I have a feeling that I won’t be able to ride Blondie like I used to again. I’ve never had such a loyal animal.” Despite that frustration, the Lake City High graduate said she’s starting to realize she has a lot to be thankful for. “I’m glad she’s alive and that I’m alive,” Johnson said. “I won’t push riding her. If she does nothing but grow fat and eat healthy in my front yard, that’s the way it will be.” No arrests have been made after the incident north of Hayden. The Kootenai County Sheriff’s Office is seeking information on a black or dark gray truck possibly with racks on top. Becca Lobato, a friend who was riding alongside Johnson, estimates the truck was traveling at least 60 mph in the 40 mph zone. The two were riding on the side of the paved road east of U.S. 95 near Rimrock Road. “That truck should have a dent in its front (passenger) side,” Johnson said. “I vaguely remember saying, ‘That truck is hauling balls’ because I could hear it coming.” The next thing Johnson remembers was being in the hospital. “I was more irritated than anything because I didn’t want to be there and I shouldn’t have been there,” she said. “(The driver) had so much room and no cars were coming. They had to have seen us. I just wish (the driver) would have stopped.” Johnson spent 12 days in the hospital with a fractured skull, cracked vertebrae and broken collarbone. She later had to have surgery on her collarbone. Blondie doesn’t have any broken bones that Johnson is aware of, but remains limp-ing and may not be able to handle an adult on her back again. Gena Loper, who owns a Stateline ranch that Johnson works at, has assisted Johnson with Blondie’s veterinarian bills. Co-workers and customers at the Coffee Cottage in Post Falls, Johnson’s other workplace, raised $3,500 to assist Johnson with medical bills. About $400 of the amount came from a 4-H pig raffle donated by Tim’s Special Cut

Meats. “It will help her get back on her feet,” said Angela Alexander, Johnson’s boss at the coffee shop. “We have an amazing supportive community that steps up to help their own.” Johnson said she has insurance that will pay for some of the costs as well. “What everyone has done has been amazing,” Johnson said. “I had no clue what kind of friends I had, but I do now.”

IDAHO BRIEFS

Same-sex Couple Households up

BOISE • The U.S. Census Bureau estimates the number of same-sex couple households in Idaho has increased 73 percent in the past decade. The agency reported Tuesday that 3,245 gay households were counted in the state last year, up from 1,873 during the 2000 census. The Idaho Statesman reports the state posted the sixth-largest percentage increase in same-sex households, but Idaho is also among states that reported the fewest number of gay couples during the 2010 count. Only six states — Alaska, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont and Wyoming — had fewer same-sex households. Nationwide, the number of same-sex households increased about 50 percent, from about 595,000 to more than 900,000.

Idaho Ranks Low for College Enrollment

BOISE • A new report ranks Idaho in the bottom 10 states for the percentage of high school graduates who go to college. The U.S. Department of Education released the report Monday. It includes state-by-state rankings based on 2009 data in several areas, such as how students perform in math and reading while in public school and how many earn degrees in college. Idaho was also ranked near the bottom for its college graduation rate and the percentage of fourth graders — both White and Hispanic — proficient in math. The state was ranked among the top 10 nationwide for the high school graduation rate of black students, who in 2009 made up about 1 percent of Idaho’s total 275,000 K-12 student population.

Fire Destroys RV Dealership in Shelley

SHELLEY • The owner of a recreational vehicle dealership in Shelley says fire destroyed his showroom, shop and parts of his parking lot that housed dozens of new RVs. Mike Ball says he received a call about the fire at OK Trailer Sales at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday. When he arrived 30 minutes later, the fire had gutted the main building, including sales offices and showroom space. Ball says the building and several RVs and trailers that were in the shop for service are likely a total loss. The fire is believed to have started in the shop area. No one was injured.

Salesman Sentenced for Battery Charge

IDAHO FALLS • A door-to-door salesman has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for battery with intent to rape in connection with an assault on an Idaho Falls woman. The man, who was iden-

Judge Dane Watkins Jr. said 18-year-old Akeem Thomas must serve at least three years before he will be eligible for parole. Bonneville County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Daniel Clark told the Post Register that he was happy with the sentence.

Prosecutors said Thomas, of Oakland, Calif., was going door-to-door selling cleaning products when the assault occurred. The victim in the case said Thomas entered her home to demonstrate his cleaning products, and after the demonstration took off his pants and raped her. Police said after Thomas left the home, the woman called a friend who called police.

Deputies Investigate Crash in Canal

BOISE • Authorities say a 73-year-old driver in southwestern Idaho was evaluated at a hospital after his Jeep sped through a parking lot and crashed into a canal. The Ada County Sheriff’s Office says deputies were called at about 10:30 a.m. on Monday to the waterway in Eagle. The agency says the man had been parked in a nearby bank drive-thru when, for unknown reasons, his vehicle accelerated rapidly through the parking lot, drove over two curbs and crashed into the canal. An employee at a nearby McDonald’s helped the man escape the vehicle.

The man, who was identified only as an Eagle resident by authorities, was transported to a local hospital. The sheriff’s office is investigating what caused his vehicle to leave the parking lot and end up in the canal.

Hearing Delayed for Idaho Teen

LEWISTON • A court date has been postponed for a northern Idaho teen accused of sexually assaulting a 43-year-old woman at knife-point.

Court records show 16-year-old Joshua C. Grossman, of Lewiston, is being charged as an adult with felony rape in Idaho’s 2nd District Court.

Police say the teen used two knives to threaten and attack a female acquaintance at her home. The woman was treated at a Lewiston hospital less than an hour after she reported the assault took place in her bedroom at her Lewiston home.

Grossman was interviewed a short time later by detectives and taken into custody.

The Lewiston Tribune reports Magistrate Judge Gregory Kalbfleisch has continued a preliminary hearing in the case until Oct. 5 to allow time for Grossman to undergo a psychological evaluation.

Ask The Plant Lady

Question: Help! I bought some discounted plants at a local box store and they are losing a lot of leaves and branches. I’ve fertilized them but they keep dying. What am I doing wrong?

Answer: Dear Plant Rescue: Sometimes even the best efforts can’t revive a sick, low quality plant. Always start with a healthy, high quality plant that fits your requirements for care. Some plants are difficult and need special requirements. Know what you are buying and buy quality to begin with and you’ll have much better “green” success
