Where Senators Sleep on Your Dime

Taxpayers give Idaho's Legislators money for lodging when in Boise for the season. Some take the money, but sleep on a cot in their office — or at their parents' house.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Republican Sen. John McGee lives 26 miles from the Idaho Capitol but takes an extra per diem payment from taxpayers for a second residence that adds up to some $6,000 annually — even though he lives with his parents in their Boise home during the session.

Another Republican, Sen. Curt McKenzie of Nampa, took extra per diem cash during the 2011 Legislature while sleeping on his small law firm's couch.

By taking the money, they're not just boosting their annual pay. They'll likely see higher pension payments when they retire.

Some lawmakers say it's appropriate to take the extra cash only if they're actually paying for a second residence. Members of the panel that helps set lawmakers' compensation say such arrangements may violate the spirit of the payments: to make sure lawmakers from distant cities who need a home away from home don't suffer financial hardship.

"That's not probably kosher," said Don Burtenshaw, a former GOP senator from Terretton who sits on the Citizen's Committee for Legislative Compensation. "But you can't make a rule for everybody that will fit every situation. If he's on the fringe of it, most people will recognize what's kosher and what isn't."

Idaho's part-time legislators without a second residence receive $49 per day, on top of a $16,116 salary. They can also get mileage reimbursements.

The Silent Lunch trend • No talking in a grade school cafeteria? Believe it — in an effort to get kids to eat their meals, some schools have curbed jaw flapping in favor of carrot chewing.

Shhh... We're Eating

Sawtooth Elementary School first- and second-grade students eat lunch Friday at the Twin Falls school. Principal Randy Rutledge uses a 'silent lunch' policy to replicate a classroom environment in the cafeteria so students focus on eating before they go to recess.

As students carried their lunch trays Friday, the Sawtooth Elementary School cafeteria was eerily quiet.

The loudest noise was the sound of people stacking trays as students sat in total silence. Every time a student tried to talk to a classmate, they were hushed by adults in the room.

Sawtooth Elementary has a "silent lunch" policy, which the Twin Falls school implemented last year. The point is to make sure students actually eat their food instead of throwing it in a trash can.

"I was astounded by how much food was wasted," Principal Randy Rutledge said, and that usually meant students were getting hungry later in the day.

The silent lunch policy is based on a simple concept — if students can't talk, they'll eat. Rutledge said that unlike adults, children have trouble talking and eating at the same time.

Although there's a lot of activity in the cafeteria every day, "it's very, very quiet," he said about lunchtime.

Rutledge monitors the lunch period and makes sure students follow the rules. If a student is caught talking, he or she is moved to another table and sits alone.

"The kids watch you," he said, and that sends a message that the rules will be enforced.

Lincoln Elementary School in Twin Falls has a similar lunchtime policy, called a "noise level lunch." Principal Beth Olmstead said the school banned talking in the hallways last year,

Idaho Court Upholds Big Part of Luna's Education Reforms

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • An Idaho state court on Friday upheld the portion of public schools chief Tom Luna's education reforms that weaken teacher negotiating power, ruling against a legal challenge from the Idaho Education Association.

The measure that passed during the 2011 Legislature phases out some teacher job protections, limits collective bargaining to just salaries and benefits and dumps seniority as a factor in layoffs. It also requires union negotiations to be held in public.

The teachers union had been fighting these changes, arguing they are an unconstitutional attack on educators' rights. It now says it will appeal.

Fourth District Judge Timothy Hansen ruled that the law known as Senate Bill 1108 passes constitutional muster, including its provisions that limit labor agreements between school districts and teachers to just a single year.

Luna contended during the 2011 Legislature that such restrictions were necessary to shift more control to school boards to make hiring and employment decisions, while the union argues it illegally undercuts protections for its members.

In his 18-page decision, Hansen wrote that such intervention by the state may well impair contracts, but

SB1108 About the Law

The portion of the "Students Come First" education reform that was challenged referred to the ability of teachers to negotiate work contracts. The court upheld the law, meaning that, among other things, seniority can't be a factor in layoffs, and some job protections are reduced.

The other parts of the bill unchallenged include introducing merit pay for teachers and shifting money from salaries to classroom technology like laptop computers and online education.

St. Luke's and St. Benedicts Merger Moves Forward

TIMES-NEWS

The St. Luke's Health System board of directors has approved the merger between its Twin Falls hospital and St. Benedicts Family Medical Center in Jerome.

Under the new agreement, St. Ben's will become a subsidiary corporation of St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. The North Side hospital will also change its name to St. Luke's Jerome.

St. Luke's announced the decision three days after the board met to approve the merger.

"The focus of St. Luke's Health System is on improving the health of the communities we serve," said David Pate, president and CEO of St. Luke's Health System, in a news release. "With the addition of St. Luke's Jerome to the St. Luke's family, we can work to provide better care, improve health, and lower cost to the entire region in a more coordinated manner."

Safe to Send Son Back to Football after Head Hit?

My son got hit in the head while playing football a week ago. He was dazed and confused after he was injured, but he seems to be fine now. Did he get a concussion and is it safe for him to go back to playing football?

— Trish, Hazelton

Answered by Dr. David Jensen, St. Luke's Clinic Physical Medicine and Rehab:

You don't have to lose consciousness to have a concussion. Symptoms of a concussion can be very vague and present with many different symptoms. Indicators of concussion include headache, nausea, appearing dazed and confused, fogginess, and irritability. Your son may have one or many of these symptoms. Concussion symptoms can be subtle and very minimal.

If there is any question at to whether you think your son has a concussion, don't let him play sports again until you have had him checked by a healthcare professional. If your son has been hit during practice or a game and has any of the concussion symptoms listed above, it is especially important that you insist that he be sit out for the remainder of the practice or game. Following the injury, get your son evaluated by a professional physician to determine the scope of the injury.

Two very important reasons concussions need to be properly evaluated and treated is the risk of developing "post-concussive syndrome," where concussive symptoms don't go away, sometime never. Another less common, but very serious injury, is called the "Second Impact Syndrome." This occurs when someone continues to play while still suffering from a concussion and gets hit again. Often the second hit is only minor, but this triggers uncontrolled swelling of the brain to occur. This can have devastating consequences, many times fatal.

Before you child begins a sport, it would be wise to have them take a baseline brain function test. This test measures how your child's brain is functioning before they begin playing sports. You will have a record of your child's normal brain function as a baseline. Several of these types of tests are available, the most widely used one is the IMPACT test, which can be taken through many of the local schools or through St. Luke's Clinic. If your child gets hurt, the test is repeated and it will show any subtle differences in the test and whether or not they have a concussion.

In general, there is a protocol for returning to sports play after a concussion. Your child should be completely symptom-free at rest and your cognitive test has returned to baseline (if the initial baseline test was done). Your child then goes through steps of returning to regular physical activity. If your child remains symptom-free after returning to play, which usually takes about a week, they are free to return to their sport.

Idaho Bank Gets More Money to Boost Business

With help from a $30M federal program, D.L. Evans Bancorp hopes to increase small-business lending by $54 million in the next two years.

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Burley-based D.L. Evans Bancorp has nearly $9 million more to help southern Idaho small businesses expand and create more jobs.

The bank, which operates branches from Nampa to Idaho Falls, received $29.9 million Tuesday through the U.S. Treasury's Small Business Lending Fund. D.L. Evans Bank CEO John Evans Jr. said Friday that his company used nearly $21 million to pay off its federal Troubled Asset Relief Program debt, while the remaining $9 million will be used for new small business and agricultural lending.

The money is part of the multi-billion-dollar Small Business Jobs Act President Barack Obama passed into law last year, and D.L. Evans was the only Idaho-based bank selected as a recipient of the funds.

D.L. Evans Chief Financial Officer Brenda Sanford said the federal money represents part of the company's plans to increase lending by $54 million by December 2013. Thirty million dollars will be earmarked for commercial lending and $24 million for agriculture, which represents a 15 percent increase in each division over the company's current outstanding loans.

"The only thing that's going to get us out of the recession is banks lending money," Sanford said.

Under the program, the bank will target women, minorities and veterans as loan recipients. But the loans will be available to all who meet the lending requirements, Sanford said.

"When you have a recession people don't like to borrow money," Evans said. "It will be our challenge to find the borrowers."

Burley Economic Development Director Doug Manning called the available money good news for the local economy.

"We are really going to have a business expansion and retention focus in the next year," Manning said. "And this money will really tie into that and be another tool to help businesses grow from within."

In the U.S., small businesses employ about half of all workers and account for about 60 percent of gross job creation. But small business owners faced myriad challenges during the past few years, including difficulty accessing capital, according to a Treasury news release. Obama's spending plan hopes to ease those challenges.

"Billions of dollars in SBLF funds are now being put to use in communities all across the nation, spurring small business growth and job creation," Deputy Secretary of the Treasury Neal S. Wolin said in a written statement. "These investments, which will help propel lending by main street banks, are good for our economy and good for American's small businesses."

These new loans will be available throughout the company's five market areas, including Mini-Cassia and Magic and Wood River valleys, Sanford said.

Evans said the company has hired five new loan officers to deal with an increase in applications and is interviewing several others. Both new and existing businesses will be able to apply for the loans, with interest rates determined during the application process.

"Hopefully people will start borrowing money, expanding and putting people back to work," Evans said. "That's what this is all about."

that it "is both reasonable and necessary to the legitimate purposes furthered by SB 1108," he said. "As noted above, one of those purposes is returning decision-making power to local school boards."

Luna cheered Hansen's ruling, as did Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, with both elected leaders contending this is another step in helping improve Idaho's educational system.

"The Legislature did the right thing, and now so has Judge Hansen," Otter said in a statement. "That's welcome news. But we recognize this issue and the fate of Students Come First will remain in the courts — including the court of public opinion. Superintendent Luna and I are confident that Idaho citizens understand what's at stake."

Otter is alluding to union-backed measures set for a vote in November 2012 in which foes of Luna's sweeping education reforms will ask Idaho voters to overturn them after gathering enough signatures earlier this year to put them on the ballot.

Following Hansen's ruling Friday, Idaho Education Association lawyer Paul Stark said the group plans to appeal the decision to the Idaho Supreme Court.

"The Idaho Education Association appreciates Judge Hansen's expedited decision that allows the parties to have the issues presented to the Supreme Court as soon as possible," Stark wrote in a statement.

Stark added his organization is also looking forward to making its case to voters ahead of the November 2012 election.

and has since extended the ban to its cafeteria.

There's a little more flexibility, though, when it comes to cafeteria noise levels.

Every day, school administrators decide which noise level on a scale of 0-3 will be allowed during lunch. A zero means silence, one is a whisper, two is a conversation at a normal volume and three is an "outside voice."

The noise level is selected based on how much energy students have on a given day. It can also be changed in the middle of lunchtime, if need be.

"Sometimes you can just feel the buzz in the school and can tell that 'man, everyone is wound up today,'" Olmstead said.

Like Rutledge, Olmstead said she's found that children eat more of their food once the distraction of talking is taken away.

At both schools, students can talk again and let out their energy once they finish their lunch and head out to recess.

Per Diem

Those who win approval for a second residence from House Speaker Lawrence Denney and Senate President Pro Tem Brent Hill get $122 per day. They also receive a reimbursement for once-weekly travel costs to and from Boise, a provision allowing lawmakers from the far north or east of Idaho to fly or drive home to constituents and family.

McGee, who as majority caucus chair is the fourth-most-powerful Idaho senator, represents Caldwell, about 26 miles from the Capitol. Rather than drive home, he sometimes sleeps at his parents' home in Boise. He's requested the $122 per diem.

McGee, who pleaded guilty to drunken driving after his June arrest for wrecking a stranger's car, declined to say whether he pays rent to his mom and dad.

He's been banking the higher per diem since 2005, the year he joined the Idaho Legislature, according to the Idaho State Controller's Office, though it's unclear if he's listed his parents' house as his second residence every year.

"I qualify for per diem just like every other legislator," McGee told The Associated Press in a text message. "These matters are handled by (Brent Hill's) office. I suggest you talk to him."

In previous years, McKenzie, who lives 20 miles away in Nampa, said he's rented a private apartment. But he slept on the couch at his Boise law office this year while claiming the $122 per diem.

He said taking the additional money is justified because he otherwise could have rented a smaller law office without space for a couch.

"We could have gotten a much cheaper rent somewhere else," McKenzie said.

Hill approves second-residence requests but doesn't check to see where senators are living. He said he didn't know McGee was sleeping at his parent's home.

For legislators who live beyond 50 miles from Boise, federal law shields their per diem payments from taxes.

But for legislators who live within 50 miles of the Capitol, their per diem payments — whether $49 or $122 — count as taxable income.

Consequently, part-time lawmakers like McGee and McKenzie are bolstering their state retirement pension payments by taking the $122 per diem, because their pension payments will be based on their taxable incomes.

In the 88-day 2011 session, for instance, McGee boosted his income to $26,852, from $20,428 if he only got a $49 per diem.

Hill, an accountant, pointed out that there's no requirement that people who receive per diem payments actually spend them. A truck driver could save money by sleeping in the cab without being required to return per diem he gets from his company.

"The lawmakers are in accordance with the law," Hill said. "Then, it becomes more of a matter of opinion of how far above the law they should go because they're being held to a different standard."

Some other Canyon County lawmakers take the $122 rather than return home, but they pay for a second residence.

Idaho DEQ Revises its Explanation on Cleanup Agreements

IDAHO FALLS POST REGISTER

Pushed by a Twin Falls anti-nuclear watchdog, the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality has changed its explanations of two agreements outlining the federal government's responsibilities for cleaning up the Idaho National Laboratory site.

A sentence in the state's synopsis of a 2008 agreement between the state and the federal government formerly stated that the U.S. Department of Energy must "remove most of the" radioactive waste buried at a disposal area on the INL site. That section now refers to "a specified amount" of the waste that must be removed.

The original wording was incorrect because the roughly 7,500 cubic meters of waste that must be removed represents only a small percentage of the disposal area's buried waste.

Similarly, the state removed the word "all" from a sentence that described the amount of radioactive waste DOE must remove from Idaho.

The errors, which Twin Falls-based anti-nuclear activist Peter Rickards called "intentional," simply were poor choices of words and not a deliberate attempt to mislead the public, said Susan Burke, the state's INL oversight coordinator.

"It was a complete error on our part, and I'm happy (Rickards) pointed it out," Burke said. "There's no intent to put any misinformation out."

Rickards isn't satisfied. He demanded that the Department of Environmental Quality also recall a newsletter the agency published explaining the cleanup process and progress to date. The newsletter describes a series of court hearings in which the state and federal government butted heads over the meaning of "all."

According to the newsletter, "Idaho prevailed" in those hearings and signed the 2008 agreement, a document that detailed which portion of the INL site's buried waste the DOE must remove from Idaho.

Rickards said the newsletter's claim that Idaho won its dispute with the federal government is inaccurate because the terms of the 2008 agreement don't require the removal of 100 percent, or all, of the buried waste in question.

"There's no way you can't just call that a lie," Rickards said. "It's not just misleading. It's a lie."

Burke said the Department of Environmental Quality has no intention of recalling the newsletter. Even though the 2008 agreement didn't require a 100 percent removal of buried waste, she said, Idaho nonetheless won its dispute with the federal government.

Federal Judge Overturns Craters Management Plan

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Grazing allotments within the Craters of Moon National Monument and Preserve may be under even tighter restriction after a recent court decision.

A federal judge has overturned two resource management plans used by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. This could potentially force the BLM to redo the planning process within the Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve in Idaho and the Pinedale Field Office in Wyoming.

The Hailey-based Western Watersheds Project filed the lawsuit against the BLM with the intention of overturning 16 such plans in six states. The group argues that the plans do not properly take into account the negative impacts of grazing and oil and gas development on sage grouse habitat.

"This decision is important because it shows that when our government breaks the law, they will be held accountable," said Jon Marvel, the group's executive director. "The BLM is guilty of breaking laws across the West and that's very important to bring forward into the public eye."

It is still unclear how the BLM will respond to the judge's decision. As of Friday, BLM officials were still looking over the court decision.

"Right now we're talking to our solicitors at low and high levels to see what this is saying," said Holly Hampton, the BLM's monument manager. "We are nowhere close to deciding if we are going to appeal this decision."

It would take the BLM two to five years to redo the management plans. Once the process is underway, Western Watersheds would ask the judge to allow temporary mandates that will increase protections for sage grouse, Marvel said.

This week's decision will have a particular impact on ranchers who allow their livestock to graze in the area.

Currently the BLM has allotted 280,000 acres within the Idaho monument for grazing. In the region, however, ranchers have long worried their grazing rights are on the decline.

In 2009, sheep and cattle ranchers in the area shared concerns about shrinking access to monument lands during debate over a proposed travel management plan.

Longtime public grazing critic Marvel likely sees that trend in a different light. He said he sees the judge's decision as a sign that the remaining management plans targeted in his suit will also be overturned.

"I think that the other 14 RMPs in this case are highly at risk," he said.

FIGHT CANCER AT TODAY'S FUN RUN

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

A cancer diagnosis is no respecter of persons.

Approximately 1 in 4 cases in women involve breast cancer, which the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention ranks as the second-leading cause of death behind lung cancer.

A small group of prevention advocates, in cooperation with St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, don't like those odds and are doing what they can to help. In observance of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, a 5-K Care to Cure Fun Run and Walk is scheduled for this morning at the College of Southern Idaho fitness trail. Registration, including a $25 entrance fee, begins at 8 a.m. in the Expo Building parking lot and the race kicks off at 9 a.m.

The race fee will help cover the cost of mammogram screening for women who don't have insurance or other means to pay for the preventive measure.

"We don't have sponsorships, so whatever we make will depend on the number of participants who come out," event coordinator Vicki Leach said. "They'll receive a T-shirt and we'll also have water bottles and other door prizes."

Last year's Care to Cure, a Filer High School graduation project organized by Leach's granddaughter, Mackenzie Jasper, raised $3,000 in support.

"At the time, I was playing volleyball and wanted to do something that incorporated sports with something related to medicine, so I went through a folder from the hospital foundation and chose this," Jasper said. "I decided to take business courses rather than medical, but I think it's great that my project has continued."

Filer Man Accused of Threatening Other Driver with BB Gun

TIMES-NEWS

Alexander

Twin Falls police arrested a Filer man Thursday for allegedly threatening another man with a

BB gun and striking the man as the result of a traffic accident.

Mark Alexander, 48, who is charged with felony aggravated assault, as the alleged victim, Jason Bemis, claims Alexander hit him in the face.

Bemis told police that he and Alexander were traveling westbound on Pole Line Road at approximately 8 p.m. on Thursday, and the vehicles collided when Alexander's lane came to an end near St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. Bemis said the two turned off near Park View Drive and Cheney Drive to assess the damage and Alexander approached him with the BB gun. Alexander allegedly hit Bemis and fled to the parking lot of the hospital. Bemis called police, who located Alexander leaving the parking lot.

Officers observed swelling and a bleeding cut on Bemis' face around his nose and right eye, as well as damage to the vehicles. Alexander declined to answer the officers' questions and was taken into custody.

Alexander was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Friday, and he was released on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is slated for Oct. 7.

BURLEY MAN BUSTED FOR ALLEGEDLY SELLING METH AND GUNS FROM HANSEN

TIMES-NEWS

A 55-year-old Burley man faces two felony charges after being allegedly found with about 20 grams of methamphetamine and multiple handguns and rifles.

Carlos G. Paladini is held on $50,000 bond for criminal complaints of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver and unlawful possession of a firearm by a felon. According to Twin Falls police, officers made use of an informant to set up a buy with Paladini on Thursday night in Twin Falls. Officers claim they found counterfeit $20 bills and five handguns, one of which was reported as stolen from Nam-pa.

Paladini told police he accepted guns as payment for meth, then consented to have a Hansen residence, referred to as "the nest," searched. There, police found the methamphetamine, another handgun, two rifles, and bullets in various pistol and rifle calibers.

The amount of methamphetamine found would amount to 12 sales and cost about $1,200 to $1,500 total.

In 2001, Paladini was found guilty of two felonies: grand theft in Cassia County and possession of a controlled substance in Minidoka County. A year prior, he was convicted of possession of a controlled substance, also in Minidoka County. He also has dozens of vehicle citations and misdemeanors.

He was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on his newest charges on Friday morning. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 7.

HAGERMAN WOMAN DIES IN SINGLE-CAR ROLLOVER

TIMES-NEWS

A 28-year-old Hagerman woman died at the scene of a one-vehicle rollover accident on Thursday night, approximately four miles south of Kimberly.

Mary Rebekah Melendrez was travelling southbound on 3500 East Road in a Lincoln Navigator, according to a release from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. The initial investigation points to Me-lendrez's vehicle leaving the roadway, causing her to overcorrect. She was the only person in the vehicle.

The crash scene was discovered at 8:45 p.m. by a deputy travelling northbound on the same road. Melendrez had crashed near 3350 North Road and was ejected from the vehicle.

The sheriff's office continues to investigate the crash, and it is believed alcohol and speed are factors.

Legislative Summit Focuses on Jobs in N. Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE PRESS

COEUR D'ALENE • State legislators, and representatives from both North Idaho businesses and chambers of commerce gathered Thursday to talk about the job picture and local business climate.

"I'm glad to see the emphasis is on creating jobs," said state Rep. Frank Henderson, following the North Idaho Legislative Policy Summit at the Best Western Coeur d'Alene Inn. "That will be a legislative priority."

He said he strongly backs assisting companies already in Idaho.

"If we start thinking a bit more short term about how we can help (existing companies), but maintain our long-term ambitions we'll be OK," Henderson said. "That would be a step forward this year."

Another priority for him, again, will be finding a way to reduce the corporate income tax, to make Idaho more competitive with neighboring states.

Michelle Richter, of LA Aluminum, a Hayden manufacturer, told summit attendees that the company has seen rapid growth in sales and employees.

"We've got the opportunities, we need the people," Richter said. She said the company, a permanent mold aluminum foundry and machine shop, desperately needs trained machinists.

She said the company has been "onshoring" jobs.

"It's all coming back" to the U.S., she said. "Nobody can manufacture like we do."

Mike Towne, of Frontier Communications, said his company also has demand for workers, who are highly motivated and talented.

"We're looking for the best athlete," he said. "We want people who will live and work in rural communities."

Aside from the jobs topic, chamber representatives are seeking a return of local option taxing authority, but legislators in attendance said a return isn't likely.

"A lot of the community seemed to like it," said state Rep. Bob Nonini. Kootenai County used local option taxing authority to build a jail, as did Nez Perce County, which includes Lewiston. The taxing authority expired a few years ago.

Nonini said chamber representatives like the idea as a way to enable some infrastructure growth to help local economies. The authority would be at the county or city level for a number of projects, instead of for just building jails.

"That's where I think it would have a hard sell in the Legislature," Nonini said. "I'm not sure I'm a supporter of it."

Henderson said, "Practically, it's going to be very difficult to get passed."

State Sen. Jim Hammond said, "I think it is a nonstarter."

Timber Payments End With No Fix in Sight

BY JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

GRANTS PASS, Ore. • A federal law that has sent billions of dollars to schools and counties in timber country is expiring, and there is no clear picture of what lies ahead.

The Secure Rural Schools Act formally expired Friday and the final payments are expected to go out to schools and counties in 41 states this December and January.

The idea of giving a safety net to counties that historically depended on a share of national forest timber revenues dates to the spotted owl battles of the 1990s, when counties in Oregon, Washington and Northern California saw their share plummet from logging cutbacks to protect fish and wildlife.

Secure Rural Schools expanded the program to 41 states in 2000 and was renewed in 2008, but the amount has steadily ramped down, while rural counties

At a Glance Idaho Payments

A number of Idaho counties benefit from the Secure Rural Schools Act. According to the U.S. Forest Service, these are the payments local counties are projected to receive this fiscal year:

Blaine • $160,401
Camas • $253,489
Cassia • $433,534
Elmore • $1.25 million
Twin Falls • $106,161

have been unable to boost tax revenues or move their economies in a new direction to make up the difference. Oregon has been the top recipient, getting $2.6 billion.

Fiscal year 2010 alone saw $390 million going to counties nationwide. Oregon was the biggest recipient, with $108 million going to 33 of its 36 counties. California got $48 million, Washington $31 million, and Idaho $31 million.

Sheriff's and district attorney's offices are particularly hard hit, because public safety is the biggest chunk of discretionary spending in many county budgets.

Lane County, which got $36 million, has seen the number of sheriff's deputies drop precipitously over the past 30 years as timber money declined and tax limitation measures and voter refusal to approve tax increases combined to squeeze the budget, District Attorney Alex Gardner said.

"It doesn't seem like it is asking a lot for a community that is in decent shape when compared with so many that are in trouble," he said. "But there appears to be a fair amount of distrust for government."

Klamath County Sheriff Tim Evinger, who has been struggling to keep jail beds open and deputies on the road, said voters have gotten used to being rescued at the last minute by Congress and are loathe to tax themselves. "It appears (the federal funding) is going to end and the car alarm is really going off," he said. "Somebody actually broke into the vehicle this time."

Curry County in Oregon is projecting a $3 million budget shortfall in fiscal year 2013, and sent a letter to the governor Sept. 7 warning it could go broke.

"If the voters do not approve a tax increase and Curry County cannot find another solution to its economic situation, we will have no choice but to seek a declaration of a public safety emergency and eliminate most state mandated services," County Commissioner George Rhodes wrote.

Four different proposals are floating in Congress, ranging from renewing the payments at a lower level, to allowing more logging on national forests to fill the revenue gap, but there is no clear front-runner.

Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has said renewing Secure Rural Schools is his top priority, but getting House approval remains doubtful due to rules requiring any new spending to be offset by cuts elsewhere.

House Republicans proposed a measure, still short on specifics, that offers some bridge funding while national forests ramp up logging under relaxed environmental protections. But approval appears difficult in the Democrat-controlled Senate, and lumber markets are weak since the housing crash.

Rep. Peter DeFazio has proposed a solution targeted at Western Oregon that would split 2 million acres of former Oregon & California Railroad lands into two trusts, one managed for fish and wildlife habitat, and the other leased to a timber company, with revenues going to counties.

The Association of O&C Counties has proposed putting the lands under control of a board of trustees that would manage them under the Oregon Forest Practices Act, which allows much more logging than federal rules.

Alleged Victim Takes Stand in Coeur d'Alene Hate Crime Case

BY DAVID COLE
Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE • The alleged victim in a Coeur d'Alene hate crime case showed up and testified at a preliminary hearing Thursday.

Thirty-nine-year-old Demetrius K. Lee, who is black, was the only witness to take the stand, doing so a dozen feet from the man he accused of hurling racial slurs and threatening to beat him up a month earlier.

The hearing was scheduled for last week, but Lee ignored a subpoena and didn't show up, telling prosecutors he had received threats.

Lee told the court he was headed to Sanders Beach on Aug. 27, walking at 19th Street and East Mullan Avenue when Joel T. Diekhoff, 29, who is white, yelled out to Lee across the street.

Lee said Diekhoff asked if he was lost, using a racial slur in the process.

Lee said he yelled back at Diekhoff, who was standing with a baby girl.

"I told him I could walk wherever I wanted to," Lee said.

Then Diekhoff went into his residence and came back outside with two other men, Lee said. Lee took off for a couple minutes, went to a nearby friend's house, and returned with a baseball bat.

"I came back, ran my mouth, (and) exchanged words with him," Lee told the judge. "I was pissed off."

Lee told the court he saw a swastika tattoo on Diekhoff, who had his shirt off.

"I know what it symbolizes for people like him," Lee testified.

No blows were exchanged in the incident and Lee called police.

Magistrate Scott Wayman said he heard enough from Lee to believe probable cause exists and moved Diekhoff's case up to 1st District Court in Kootenai County on a charge of felony malicious harassment.

Diekhoff was released from jail last week, after being in custody since the incident.

Before the judge's decision, defense lawyer Gary Amendola, of Coeur d'Alene, questioned Lee about comments Lee made the day after the incident on his Facebook profile.

Lee wrote: "I had a verbal altercation with a hillbilly who's uncle is probably his dad, because he felt the need to disrespect me while I was taking my early morning jog .. I almost beat his ass but he was holding his daughter as he was running his mouth(coward)..[sic]"

Lee also wrote that his friend drove by the scene after police had been called and saw an emotional Diekhoff.

"Mr big bad nazi who was just runnin his mouth, now on the curb crying?," Lee wrote.

While Diekhoff was jailed, Lee wrote, "I hope his punk ass drop the soap in front of the wrong person!!"

Lee told Amendola and the judge he made the comments in response to material he saw online supporting Diekhoff's alleged actions.

Lee said he remains very angry about the incident.

Amendola responded, "Well, if it happened, you should be."

After the hearing, Amendola said he wasn't surprised by the judge's decision.

"There was only one side of the story told today," he said. "The other side will be for another day."

Amendola said the case comes down to a "he said, he said" and his client denies all the allegations.

Smokers Not Needed

Bonner County is considering refusing to hire smokers as county employees.

BY KEITH KINNAIRD
Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • Bonner County might quit hiring employees who use tobacco.

County Commissioner Mike Nielsen is trying to gain the support of his colleagues on the board for implementing a hiring policy that will preclude tobacco users from being taken on as employees.

“We’re not going to hire any more burning buildings,” Nielsen said of the proposed policy.

The prohibition against hiring smokers and smokeless tobacco users was originally meant to be part of the county’s employee wellness program, but Nielsen said he still lacks the support of either Commissioner Cornel Rasmussen or board Chairman Lewis Rich.

If and when the policy is implemented, fulland part-time hires must agree to refrain from using tobacco products on and off the job. Those who violate the policy would be subject to disciplinary action, including termination of their employment.

“You’re not going to lose your job if you’re a current employee, but you’re not going to get hired if you’re an applicant,” said Nielsen.

Current employees who use tobacco, however, would be barred from receiving a discounted health insurance premium through the wellness program.

There are a variety of ways to test for tobacco use, such as through urine or saliva.

“I’m hoping it doesn’t come down to that,” said Nielsen.

The proposed policy has divided elected officials and employees in the county. Some argue it’s a unnecessary reach into peoples’ private life, while others contend it will drive down health care costs and increase productivity.

Scott Bauer, the county commission’s legal counsel, said the policy would not be discriminatory because tobacco users are not a protected class in Idaho.

Former Investigators Sue State Insurance Agency

BOISE (AP) • Former state employees have filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court claiming they were forced out of the Idaho Department of Insurance for pursuing a fraud investigation into a southeastern Idaho company and turning their inquiry over to federal authorities.

The Idaho Statesman reports that former insurance department investigators W. Robert Lemke, Jan Heinz, Carol Garrett and Felicia Kruck filed the federal complaint Wednesday against the state agency and its director, William Deal.

The former employees claim an investigation into the company, which started in December, revealed illegal activities that included a rebating scheme used to induce people to purchase policies, according to court documents.

The ex-workers claim some of the policyholders who benefited from the insurance company’s illegal activities have strong personal connections to people with direct and indirect authority over the Department of Insurance’s investigation unit, which resulted in their ouster.

In a rebating scheme, typically an insurance agency will offer a prospective policyholder a monetary rebate as an inducement to purchase a policy.

State law prohibits insurance agents from directly or indirectly offering as an inducement to purchase insurance “anything of value whatsoever” over $200 that is not plainly specified in the insurance contract, the lawsuit claims.

The complaint claims the insurance company that came under investigation last year, called Company X in court documents, would offer rebates with the purchase of a life insurance policy. The lawsuit claims Company X would inform purchasers that after two years, they could sell their policy to a third-party investor for an amount that is greater than the premiums they had paid on the policy, therefore reaping a profit.

That policyholder would typically purchase another policy from Company X with the same rebate offer and the intent to again sell the policy after two years, thus continuing the cycle and creating high sales volume and continued commissions for Company X, according to the lawsuit.

“Lemke and some of the other investigators feared that, given the strong personal connections of those benefiting from Company X’s rebate scheme, the investigation would not be prosecuted,” according to the lawsuit.

Lemke, to ensure the investigation continued, decided to contact the IRS and FBI and request that they join the investigation, the court documents say.

Last October, the FBI obtained a search warrant for the company’s offices in Rexburg and Idaho Falls. The former employees claim that amid the fallout from the search, each of them was wrongfully terminated or forced out of the agency.

Priest Lake Couple’s Case Reaches Supreme Court

BY NICK IVIE
Bonner County Daily Bee

PRIEST LAKE • On the eve of the U.S. Supreme Court’s new term opening up, Priest Lake residents Mike and Chantell Sackett stood at their Kalispell Bay Road property — optimistic after receiving the news their case against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency made its way onto the Supreme Court docket.

That, the couple said, would finally allow them their due process in defending the rights of their property.

“I was excited to tell my wife,” Mike Sackett said about getting the call the Supreme Court would hear their case. “On the other side, I wasn’t excited to tell her because we know it’s going to be a lot more to deal with. But if you know you’re right you stand up for what you believe in.”

That property that started as a dream, but quickly turned to a nightmare after representatives from the EPA and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers showed up in 2007 and subsequently presented the Sacketts with an order of compliance, stating the property had been deemed a wetland.

That determination would force the couple to either restore the site, face penalty fines of as much as $32,500 a day, or formally apply for a federal wetlands permit. That process could potentially take years and cost $200,000 or more — an amount far exceeding the $23,000 the couple paid for the property.

The Sacketts contend, however, that their property, which is 500 feet west of the lakeshore and separated by a house and roadway, features no standing water or any hydrologic connection to any body of water.

Upon purchasing the 0.63 acre plot in an established neighborhood with a platted subdivision and water and sewer hookups, the Sacketts started the building process by spreading fill material over the lot.

Soon after, the EPA ceased its progress and for the past four years the land has sat idle as its owners have been entrenched in a fight with the agency.

“We were 90 percent done with getting ready to start putting footings in when the EPA showed up and told us to quit working,” Mike Sackett said. “We just wanted them to prove to us that we were doing something wrong.”

The couple sued the EPA in U.S. District Court, but a federal judge dismissed the action in 2008 and entered a judgment in favor of the EPA.

The couple sought redress through the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals last year, but a three-judge panel ruled judicial review was not available. The Sacketts then petitioned the high court to take their case and rule that they have the right to challenge EPA’s wetland determination.

Despite the unfavorable rulings that both the district court in Idaho and the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit of Appeals agreed with, the justices decided to give the North Idaho couple their day in court.

“We just want to get on with our life. Live at Priest Lake, and be happy,” the couple said about their desired outcome.

That petition has garnered national attention on its journey to the Supreme Court. It’s also gotten some help through friend-of-the-court briefs that were presented by the Center for Constitutional Jurisprudence, the National Federation of Independent Business, the American Farm Bureau, the National Association of Home Builders, and the American Civil Rights Union.

In that time, the Sacketts have also received strong showings of support by U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador and even Alaska Gov. Sean Parnell — but not that of Idaho Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter.

Students, Teachers Lament Large Class Sizes in N. Idaho

POST REGISTER

IDAHO FALLS • Classroom success depends on the teacher, not the number of students in the room. But if you’re one of 34 students, it can be difficult to find the teacher with all those other heads in the way.

Just ask Tessa Egan of Skyline High School about her English class.

“At first there weren’t even enough desks,” she said. “We just sat on the floor or each other.”

Egan is a student in an increasingly common situation in both Idaho Falls school districts. This school year, classroom crowding is a reality in classes across subject and grade levels.

Some classes are worse than others.

At Hillcrest High School, 1,350 students are enrolled in a building built for 1,200. It takes Principal Doug McLaren less than five minutes with a computer to find a statistics class with 38 students in it. Some of his teachers, like choir teacher Megan Busath, have 300 students to keep track of daily.

“We do hope that teachers have a personal relationship with the students,” McLaren said. “And I would say the teachers do a really great job of it here. Right now we can manage it, but it’s going to get harder.”

Classrooms don’t need to be as large as those at Hillcrest to present a challenge, Lyndell Bradshaw said.

With more than 30 students in her sixth-grade class at Falls Valley Elementary School, Bradshaw said she’s feeling stretched thin.

When a new student was placed in Bradshaw’s class Tuesday, she said she almost couldn’t find a place to put her where the student could see the board and Bradshaw could see her.

Nampa Won't Comment On Charge Of Retaliation Against Whistleblowers

BY KRISTIN RODINE
Idaho Statesman

NAMPA • The city of Nampa issued a brief statement Friday afternoon about the allegations in a lawsuit against the city by three police officers who say they were harassed after they reported police misconduct and waste of public funds.

The lawsuit says the officers were working in Internal Affairs when they brought forward various concerns about police conduct. The complaint claims the police department ignored the issues they raised and then retaliated against the officers.

City leaders would not discuss the specific allegations because of the pending lawsuit, but issued the following statement:

“The City of Nampa takes all employee and citizen complaints very seriously. Investigations into allegations of employee misconduct or waste of taxpayer funds are conducted when such complaints are made. Those investigations include not only internal investigations, but also include investigations by outside agencies. The City does not intend to try its case in the press, and on advice of counsel, respectfully refrains from any further comment at this time.”

Nampa Lt. Joe Huff, Sgt. Curtis Shankel, investigator Leonard Claunts and Claunts, wife, Ginger, filed the lawsuit in federal court Thursday afternoon. By 3 p.m. Friday the city had not yet been served with a copy, a spokeswoman said.

The lawsuit seeks damages and asks the court to order the police department and city “to immediately cease any and all retaliatory conduct, to return plaintiffs to the positions and status they held prior to the start of the retaliation, to rewrite the negative reviews they received” and to end the internal affairs investigation against them.

CATALDO • First, the crate was opened.

Next, one of four secured boxes inside was removed, the lid lifted off.

Finally, Greta Hansen slipped on a pair of surgical gloves.

Time for the dolls.

Felix Aripa, elder with the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, watched closely as the conservator for the National Museum of National History carefully picked up the cloth doll and placed it gently on a table.

Within a few minutes, another box was opened, another doll was displayed.

And finally, a doll depicting a baby on a traditional Native American baby carrier joined the others.

Aripa smiled. Seeing the family of dolls, he said, was “just like coming home.”

“This is a good day,” the 88-year-old said Thursday.

The 110-year-old dolls were made by the Coeur d'Alene Tribe. They will be part of the Sacred Encounters exhibit that opens Oct. 15 at the Old Mission State Park visitor center.

The 2-foot-tall dolls detailed with beads portrayed a woman, man and baby, each in Native American clothing. This was their return to their homeland, since shortly after they were made in 1901, they were sold to an American officer who in turn gave them to the Smithsonian Institute. They’ve been there since.

“We’re thrilled to have them back,” said Ray Brinkman, Coeur d'Alene Tribe linguist.

About 15 people on Thursday toured the exhibit, “Sacred Encounters: Father De Smet and the Indians of the Rocky Mountain West,” which is still in progress.

It will feature about 60 artifacts: some liturgical materials, others Native American objects, some more than 200 years old. There’s a 1797 chalice and Jesuit rings from the 1750s, each protected in glass cases. Some items are on loan from museums across the country, transported with great care.

All will tell stories of the relationship between the Tribe and the Jesuit priests led by Father Pierre-Jean De Smet, who traveled to the tribal homeland in 1842.

The exhibit “will give all visitors an even deeper understanding of the park’s unique place in history and the amazing yet complex story that took place here which was repeated in places wherever tribal people and missionaries met,” according to a project summary.

The 5,000-square-foot, climate controlled exhibit, with beefed up security measures, will include nine scenes, highlighted by video and music, as guests walk from one theme to the next. There will also be videotaped interviews with tribal elders, photographs and murals.

“We have De Smet’s cross right here,” said Project manager Lisa Watt of the exhibit.

The centerpiece is a “dream-like recreation of the Sacred Heart Mission on Christmas Eve, 1842.”

Putting the exhibit together has been a detailed, slow process, Watt said, but the result is a brilliant, beautiful display, historically accurate, that should draw thousands of visitors.

The $3.3-million, 9,000-square-foot visitor center was built to be home to Sacred Encounters.

“It illuminates the history of the Cataldo Mission and that it’s connected to the Coeur d’Alene Tribe,” Watt said.

The dolls took center stage Thursday.

Tribal Elder Bertha Garrick-Swan, 86, said she had a picture of herself in a baby board on her mother’s back. She said her dolls were destroyed in a fire when she was young.

“Could I look at that?” she said as she stood slowly while Hansen held up the doll.

Jaysee Goudy, granddaughter of Garrick-Swan, said the dolls brought back many memories for her grandmother.

“It just makes me excited to see her excited,” the 19-year-old said.

Survey: Speed Limits Around St. Anthony Might Be Low

BY JOYCE EDLEFSEN
Rexburg Standard Journal

ST. ANTHONY • The City Council here plans to discuss speed limits at its meeting Oct. 13.

And the result could be lowered limits on roads entering the city.

Police Chief Jim Smith told the St. Anthony council last week that the state Division of Highways conducted a speed limit survey recently on three of the city’s entrance roads: the South Yellowstone Highway, North Yellowstone Highway and the Teton Highway.

In each case the speed limit is 30 mph.

The concern raised by the traffic research is that the limits are too low, which presents a greater risk of speeding and accidents.

While it may be counter-intuitive, slower speed limits aren’t necessarily safer for motorists.

If limits are too low, motorists have a tendency to ignore them, making the limits ineffective.

Smith says it looks like the limits are 5 to 10 mph

JOYCE EDLEFSEN • STANDARD JOURNAL

A state traffic survey of three roads leading into St. Anthony shows the city’s speed limits, such as this 30 mph limit posted on the Teton Highway at the city limits, may be too low.

too low.

On the South Yellowstone Highway, where the limit changes from 50 mph to 30 mph at the canal bridge near Targhee Trailer Court, Smith said he though 40 mph would be a safe speed as far into town as the Teton Highway intersection at the Bottle Stop, for example.

“We need to make them (speed limits) realistic and enforceable,” Mayor Neils Thueson said.

TIP LEADS TO QUICK ARREST OF BURGLARY SUSPECT

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • A 41-year-old Caldwell man was arrested in connection with a vehicle burglary in the 700 block of South Vista Avenue Thursday.

Joseph D. Maestas was booked into the Ada County Jail on charges of felony burglary and felony grand theft.

At 5 p.m. Thursday, police say they received a tip from a witness who said he heard a window shatter and saw a man reach inside a car, grab something and flee in another vehicle.

With information from the witness, police were able to locate a suspect, later identified as Maestas, just moments later near Hervey and Targee streets.

Police say they recovered a stolen purse, credit cards, a handgun and other items. Maestas was arrested and transported to the jail.

OPINION

“He needs you to work like you’ve never worked before. Every day. And that’s what I plan on doing.”
— First lady Michelle Obama, telling audience after audience, trying to recapture the energy of Democratic supporters that has waned since his 2008 campaign.

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to Representative Raul Labrador for his remarks to the Boise City Club on Tuesday.

Labrador, an Eagle Republican, went beyond partisan finger-pointing while talking about the current debt issue.

“Democrats would love to blame all of our current problems on the so-called Bush tax cuts, and Republicans would love to believe that all of our problems magically appeared one day when President Obama took office,” Labrador said, according to the Spokesman-Review. “The truth is obviously ... somewhere in the middle.” Both parties’ policies have contributed to the mess, he said — a refreshing turn from divisive one-sided blaming that has dominated political discussion lately.

JEERS to Delta Dental for abruptly cutting reimbursements to Idaho dentists.

Starting in November, Magic Valley dentists will receive 6 percent less from the dental company. Dentists in other parts of the state will lose as much as 13 percent.

Delta Dental didn’t respond to the Times-News’ requests for comment, but the company told the Idaho Statesman that the “the changing marketplace and concerns from employers about the rising costs of employee benefits” are the catalyst for the decrease.

The Idaho State Dental Association, concerned about the sudden change, asked the business to hold off on the cuts until the end of the year to give dentists time to adjust. Delta Dental denied their request.

We understand the need to change practices in response to the market. But in a year when Medicaid dropped all but emergency dental care for adults, dentists are already hurting. It’s a shame Delta Dental couldn’t work with these small business owners to come up with a solution that works for both.

CHEERS to the Gooding School District on their healthy lunch program, which recently earned them a nod from the White House.

The Gooding School District opts for fresh, local food for its students, trading out chicken nuggets for veggies and hamburgers for soup. The school district participates in the Farm to School program, which connects schools with local farmers.

For that, Superintendent Heather Williams, Child Nutrition Director Anji Baumann and local farmers Cody Beadz and Fred Mavencamp have been invited to attend an Oct. 17 luncheon with first lady Michelle Obama.

That’s a mighty honor for a small school district. And with increasing childhood obesity rates nationwide, Gooding deserves the praise.

Entertainment on the Supreme Court Docket

What cause could unite the Eagle Forum, American Library Association and Google?

Think Alfred Hitchcock, Picasso and Peter and the Wolf.

Throw in the Constitution and international law, and you have a most intriguing case on the Supreme Court’s docket for the new term that starts Monday.

It doesn’t carry the moral weight of the death penalty cases the court will decide. Nor is it likely to have the political ramifications of the justices’ review of the health insurance reform law, which could happen this term.

But the case of Golan v. Holder (Docket No. 10-545) has multiple wonky dimensions.

For Eagle Forum, it’s about big government. For the librarians, broad access to information. For Google, the ability to innovate.

Then there’s the question of what the founding fathers meant in giving Congress power to “promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts” — and what the first Congress intended when it exercised that power in the Copyright Act of 1790.

Any college student who’s gotten a threatening letter from a lawyer over music downloads that weren’t intended to be free knows a bit about copyright.

It’s about creativity and transformation — and money: who’s making it, who’s paying it.

Copyright law allows the creator of a book, movie, photo, piece of music or other work to make money off it for a certain period of time, during which anyone who wants to use it must pay a fee or get permission. Unless, of course, the point of the use is parody — such as “Family Guy’s” perversion of Disney tunes — or limited quotation for a review or school class.

But once a copyright expires, the work goes into the public domain and anyone can use it free.

There’s always tension between original creators and those who want to use their works, whether it’s to make their own profit, do research or simply derive personal enjoyment at minimal cost.

The legal briefs in the Golan case spar over a 1994 federal law designed to implement an 1886 international treaty that the United States got around to signing in 1989.

The law revived U.S. copyright restrictions on an untold number of compositions, books, movies and other items that were created in foreign countries but had been used in this country free for years.

Legal briefs say the works include Prokofiev’s “Peter and the Wolf,” Hitchcock film “Number Seventeen,” J.R.R. Tolkien’s “The Hobbit” and art by M.C. Escher and Picasso.

College professors had been teaching the music, performers had been buying sheet music and making recordings, business owners had purchased movies and resold them, but the law made continuation impossible or prohibitively expensive. They argue it’s a First Amendment violation caused by Congress exceeding its constitutional authority.

No free speech rights to see here, Attorney General Eric Holder counters: Congress had to comply with a treaty, and protecting copyrights for foreign works will help U.S. artists enforce their rights abroad.

The most interesting reading, though, is in the friend-of-the-court briefs. “There is no plausible basis for arguing that restoring copyright protection for the works created by long dead authors in a Communist country that did not recognize property rights in any way promotes the progress of science and the useful arts,” the American Library Association argues. “While their struggles to express themselves artistically in the face of brutal totalitarian repression are worthy of great admiration, providing their heirs with royalties does not fulfill the constitutional purpose of the Copyright Clause.”

The Eagle Forum argues that, “Withdrawing a work from the public domain is a form of censorship that is simply incompatible with the First Amendment. ... If Congress wants to bolster the rights of foreign writers and authors to advance a goal of harmony, then its approach must fit within one of its enumerated powers, such as using the Spending Clause to directly provide any value deemed appropriate.”

And the Motion Picture Association, which unsurprisingly sides with strong copyright enforcement, argues that only a “narrowly defined class of foreign works” is at issue, nothing as significant as the Bible, Shakespeare’s plays or “Little Red Riding Hood.”

Besides, the MPA says, the works at issue can continue being used “unless and until the copyright holder provides notice of intent to enforce its restored copyright.”

Funny, the film industry’s attitude toward the copyrighted material of its moneyed and powerful members isn’t nearly that nonchalant.

Saudi Women May Run but Still Can't Drive

The following editorial appeared in the Dallas Morning News on Thursday, Sept. 29:

How nice it would be to praise one of the world's richest but most backward countries for finally taking a step to elevate the status of its women. Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has issued an important decree permitting women to vote and to seek local elective office and seats on the king's advisory council as of 2015. But the action puts the kingdom nowhere close to where it should be, here in the 21st century.

Saudi Arabia still doesn't allow women to drive, reportedly the only country on the planet with such a restriction (although women may legally fly aircraft as long as a man drives them to the airport). Women risk being beaten if they appear in public without covering everything but their hands and eyes.

Saudi democracy remains in its infancy. Male-only elections in the kingdom, set for Thursday, mark only the second time in the kingdom's history in which a popular vote has been held. All elective offices carry minimal power since the king is the ultimate arbiter of everything under his domain.

What weight should we give to the king's decision on women? According to some reports, women who seek election may do so only with the consent of their closest male guardian. In order to campaign, they will have to ask a male to drive them around.

A Saudi woman was sentenced to 10 lashes earlier this week for driving herself on the streets of Jeddah, on the Red Sea. Two other women are slated for trial later this year for the same offense. It is an absurd state of affairs, based more on insular, outdated Saudi traditions than on written Islamic stricture.

Man Goes on Trial in Acid Attack Case

LEWISTON (AP) • A 29-year-old Lapwai man will stand trial next week on a charge that he threw a caustic liquid in the face of another man during an argument.

The Lewiston Tribune reports the aggravated battery trial for Brandon Tyler Eddins is to start Monday in Lewiston's 2nd District Court. Prosecutors say he was arguing with 29-year-old Daniel L. Hight in north Lewiston when Hight was hit with the liquid, which caused severe damage to his eye.

Eddins is also scheduled to stand trial on a separate strangulation charge Monday.

Ex-Prosecutor Launches New Effort Against Canyon County Commission

John Bujak announces new campaign on first anniversary of his resignation amid allegations that he used about $300,000 for personal expenses that was promised to county coffers.

BY KRISTIN RODINE
Idaho Statesman

CALDWELL • The long-running dispute between former Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak and the county's top elected officials took a new rhetorical twist with Bujak's announcement of a "Grassroots Militia" to challenge commissioners' handling of county money and politics.

"The commissioners are not going to comment on Bujak's actions," Canyon County Commission Chairman David Ferdinand said Friday morning. "The record speaks for itself."

Bujak announced his new effort against the commissioners late Thursday night in a news release dated Friday, the one-year anniversary of his resignation amid allegations that he used around $300,000 for personal expenses that was promised to county coffers. County commissioners are still trying to recoup that money from Bujak, who in November filed for bankruptcy protection saying he couldn't pay about $1.3 million in debt. The disputed debt to the county concerns money the city of Nampa paid Bujak to use county resources to prosecute Nampa misdemeanors.

At the time, Bujak said publicly that the Nampa contract would save the county several hundred thousand dollars because he would use the Nampa money to cover all of his office's non-personnel expenses. County commissioners say he made that promise to them, and they plan to hold him to it. But in recent legal filings over the dispute with the county, Bujak contends his only obligation was to cover the costs of prosecuting Nampa cases and he does not owe the county additional money.

Bujak is in the midst of several court cases: his bankruptcy, which is expected to effectively end next week after he waives protection from his debts; the county's claim against him in bankruptcy court; and a divorce. A special prosecutor's investigation into possible criminal charges against him is still unresolved.

In his news release, Bujak blasted county commissioners for spending around $100,000 to fight him in court and for making statements about him he has said are untrue. He said he plans meetings of the "Grassroots Militia" and ultimately a march on the county courthouse.

Bujak, who has appointed a campaign treasurer and is considering running next year to regain the prosecutor's office, also signaled a hope that commissioners will be defeated at the polls in 2012. Ferdinand and Steve Rule will be up for election next year, and Kathy Alder has three years left on her term.

"The Canyon County commissioners will be weighed and measured and, if found wanting, will be replaced," Bujak said.

Boise Police Seize 30,000 Jars of Spice, Arrest 4

Police say they think the drugs were being manufactured in a warehouse near South Cole and Overland roads.

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Four Boise residents were arrested and charged with drug-related crime Thursday, after police obtained search warrants and raided a warehouse, retail store and home. Police say they found 30,000 jars of Spice.

Spice is a mixture of herbs sprayed with a synthetic compound similar to the chemical THC found in marijuana. The Legislature outlawed the drug last year.

"Spice is a Schedule I drug and, although it's new, Spice and synthetic drugs like it now fall under the same laws as heroin, marijuana and GHB. People need to know we will enforce laws outlawing Spice just like we do with other illegal drugs," Boise Police Sgt. Mike Harrington said in a press release Friday.

Police say they believe the drugs seized Thursday were being manufactured in a warehouse near South Cole and Overland roads. They found the raw materials for the drugs there, as well as 20,250 jars of finished product in bottles labeled Twisted Potpourri.

More than 100 smoking pipes and about 10,000 jars of Twisted Potpourri were found on shelves at the Red Eye Hut, 2613 W. Camas St. Investigators also found evidence of Spice sales at residence in the 3000 block of South Roosevelt Street.

The four arrested were:

- Morgan C. Alley, a 24-year-old Boise man. He was charged with felony delivery of a controlled substance, felony conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance, felony delivery of drug paraphernalia and unlawful possession of a weapon by a felon.

- Tashina M. Alley, a 22-year-old Boise woman. She was charged with felony conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance and felony destruction of evidence.

- Charlynda L. Goggin, 21, of Boise. She was charged with conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance and felony delivery of a controlled substance.

- Cadee Jo Peterson, 22, of Boise. She was charged with conspiracy to manufacture a controlled substance.

Police say Morgan Alley owns the house and business (Red Eye Hut), and he was renting the warehouse where the drugs were found. Investigators say they also found a shotgun — illegal for Alley to own due to past drug convictions.

The three women arrested are accused of assisting in the manufacture of the drugs. Alley's wife, Tashina, is also accused of destroying evidence in the presence of police.

U.S. Incomes Fall for First Time in Nearly Two Years • Money, N3

Chris Christie to Soon Decide on Primary Run

TRENTON, N.J. • New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie is reconsidering his decision to stay out of the race for the White House in 2012 and is expected to make a decision soon, according to several people close to the governor with knowledge of his thinking.

Christie has long said he won't run in 2012. But those close to the first-term governor, who spoke only on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly on the issue, say he is rethinking his hard stance. A decision will have to come fast. Filing deadlines in primary states are weeks away.

Calls have been intensifying from top GOP donors and party elders for Christie to jump into the race. President Obama's weak approval ratings and a Republican field that has been struggling to put forward a clear front-runner are also creating an opening for Christie.

Christie may think twice about moving forward, however. GOP latecomers have jumped in to see a big initial splash, only to tread water. Michele Bachmann leapfrogged ahead of Mitt Romney only to be pushed back when Texas Gov. Rick Perry joined the field in August after months of insisting he had no interest.

Calif. Man Found Alive By Children After Wreck

Missing for six days, 68-year-old man survives by eating bugs and leaves and drinking creek water.

BY JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press

SANTA CLARITA, Calif. • David Lavau's children drove slowly along the perilously curved mountain road, stopping to peer over the treacherous drop-offs and call out for their father, missing for six days.

Then, finally, a faint cry: "Help, help."

Close to a week after his car plunged 200 feet into a ravine, Lavau, 68, was rescued Thursday by his three adult children, who took matters into their own hands after a detective told them his last cellphone signal came from a rugged section of the Angeles National Forest.

As he lay injured in the woods next to his wrecked car, he survived by eating bugs and leaves and drinking creek water, a doctor said.

One of the first things he requested after his rescue: a chocolate malt, his daughter Chardonnay Lavau said on NBC's "Today" show.

Lavau was in serious but stable condition Friday at Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital with three rib fractures, a dislocated shoulder, a broken arm and fractures in his back, said emergency room physician Dr. Garrett Sutter. He was expected to be released in three to four days after surgery on his shoulder.

Dr. Ranbir Singh, the hospital's trauma director, said Lavau told him he was driving home about 7 p.m. when he was temporarily blinded by the headlights of an oncoming car. He braked, but failed to gain traction. The car flipped and plunged down the embankment.

Lavau said he was unsure if he collided with the car. However, a second car containing a male body was found next to Lavau's vehicle.

That car, a Toyota Camry, was identified as belonging to 88-year-old Melvin Gelfand, whose family had reported him missing on Sept. 14, said

Al-Qaida Lacks Western Voice After Cleric's Death

President Obama heralds strike as 'major blow to al-Qaida,' calling Anwar al-Awlaki group's 'leader of external operations.'

BY AHMED AL-HAJ
Associated Press

SANAA, Yemen • The killings of U.S.-born cleric Anwar al-Awlaki and another American al-Qaida propagandist in a U.S. airstrike Friday wipe out the decisive factor that made the terrorist group's Yemen branch the most dangerous threat to the United States: its reach into the West.

Issuing English-language sermons on jihad on the Internet from his hideouts in Yemen's mountains, al-Awlaki drew Muslim recruits like the young Nigerian who tried to bring down a U.S. jet on Christmas and the Pakistani-American behind the botched car bombing in New York City's Times Square.

Friday's drone attack was believed to be the first instance in which a U.S. citizen was tracked and killed based on secret intelligence and the president's say-so. Al-Awlaki was placed on the CIA "kill or capture" list by the Obama administration in April 2010 — the first American to be so targeted.

The other American killed in the strike, Samir Khan, published a slick English-language Web magazine, "Inspire," that spouted al-Qaida's anti-Western ideology and even offered how-to articles on terrorism — including one titled, "Make a Bomb in the Kitchen of Your Mom."

Their voices elevated the several hundred al-Qaida fighters hiding out in Yemen into a greater threat than similar affiliates of the terror network in North Africa, Somalia or east Asia.

President Barack Obama heralded the strike as a "major blow to al-Qaida's most active operational affiliate," saying the 40-year-old al-Awlaki was the group's "leader of external operations."

"In that role, he took the lead in planning and directing efforts to murder innocent Americans," Obama told reporters in Washington, saying al-Awlaki plotted the Christmas 2009 airplane bombing attempt and a foiled attempt in 2010 to mail explosives to the United States.

Al-Awlaki's death was the biggest success in the Obama administration's intensified campaign to take out al-Qaida's leadership since the May killing of Osama bin Laden in Pakistan. The pursuit of al-Awlaki and Friday's strike were directed by the same U.S. special

Hispanic Students Vanish From Alabama Schools

Obama administration files court documents announcing plans to appeal ruling that upheld new law requiring schools to check students' immigration status.

BY JAY REEVES
Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. • Hispanic students have started vanishing from Alabama public schools in the wake of a court ruling that upheld the state's tough new law cracking down on illegal immigration.

Education officials say scores of immigrant families have withdrawn their children from classes or kept them home this week, afraid that sending the kids to school would draw attention from authorities.

There are no precise statewide numbers. But several districts with large immigrant enrollments — from small towns to large urban districts — reported a sudden exodus of children of Hispanic parents, some of whom told officials they planned to leave the state to avoid trouble with the law, which requires schools to check students' immigration status.

The anxiety has become so intense that the superintendent in one of the state's largest cities, Huntsville, went on a Spanish-language television show Thursday to try to calm widespread worries.

"In the case of this law, our students do not have anything to fear," Casey Wardynski said in halting Spanish. He urged families to send students to class and explained that the state is only trying to compile statistics.

Police, he insisted, were not getting involved in schools.

Victor Palafox graduated from a high school in suburban Birmingham last year and has lived in the United States without documentation since age 6, when his parents brought him and his brother here from Mexico.

"Younger students are watching their lives taken from their hands," said Palafox, whose family is staying put.

In Montgomery County, more than 200 Hispanic students were absent the morning after the judge's Wednesday ruling. A handful withdrew.

In tiny Albertville, 35 students withdrew in one day. And about 20 students in Shelby County, in suburban Birmingham, either withdrew or told teachers they were leaving.

Local and state officials are pleading with immigrant families to keep their children enrolled. The law does not ban anyone from school, they say, and neither students nor parents will be arrested for trying to get an education.

But many Spanish-speaking families aren't waiting around to see what happens.

With Yemen Attack, U.S. in Uncharted Territory

BY MATT APUZZO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama steered the nation’s war machine into uncharted territory Friday when a U.S. drone attacked a convoy in Yemen and killed two American citizens who had become central figures in al-Qaida.

It was believed to be the first instance in which a U.S. citizen was tracked and executed based on secret intelligence and the president’s say-so. And it raised major questions about the limitations of presidential power.

Anwar al-Awlaki, the target of the U.S. drone attack, was one of the best-known al-Qaida figures after Osama bin Laden. U.S. intelligence officials had linked him to two nearly catastrophic attacks on U.S.-bound planes, an airliner on Christmas 2009 and cargo planes last year. The second American killed in the drone attack, Samir Kahn, was editor of Inspire, a slick online magazine aimed at al-Qaida sympathizers in the West.

“Al-Qaida and its affiliates will find no safe haven anywhere in the world,” Obama said in announcing al-Awlaki’s death. “Working with Yemen and our other allies and partners, we will be determined, we will be relentless, we will be resolute in our commitment to destroy terrorist networks that aim to kill Americans.”

Republicans and Democrats alike applauded the decision to launch the fatal assault on the convoy in Yemen.

“It’s something we had to do,” said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee. “The president is showing leadership. The president is showing guts.”

“It’s legal,” said Maryland Rep. C.A. Dutch Ruppersberger, the ranking Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee. “It’s legitimate and we’re taking out someone who has attempted to attack us on numerous occasions. And he was on that list.”

That list is the roster of people the White House has authorized the CIA and Pentagon to kill or capture as terrorists. The evidence against them almost always is classified. Targets never know for sure they are on the list, though some surely wouldn’t be surprised.

The list has included dozens of names, from little-known mid-level figures in the wilds of Pakistan to bin Laden, who was killed in his compound in a comfortable Pakistani suburb. Before al-Awlaki, no American had been on the list.

But the legal process that led to his death was set in motion a decade ago. On Sept. 17, 2001, President George W. Bush signed a presidential order authorizing the CIA to hunt down terrorists worldwide. The authority was rooted in his power as commander in chief, leading a nation at war with al-Qaida.

The order made no distinction between foreigners and U.S. citizens. If they posed a “continuing and imminent threat” to the United States, they were eligible to be killed, former intelligence officials said.

The order was reviewed by top lawyers at the White House, CIA and Justice Department. With the ruins of the World Trade Center still smoking, there was little discussion of whether U.S. citizens should have more protection, the officials recalled.

JUDGE RELEASES JAIL VIDEO OF ANTHONY

A Florida judge released a jailhouse video of Casey Anthony being told that the remains of her 2-year-old daughter had been found in 2008. An Orlando TV station argued in court for the release of the 15-minute video on grounds that it was a public record. The footage had been under judicial seal since June 2009. Judge Belvin Perry ruled Friday that protecting Anthony’s right to a fair trial was no longer an issue following her July acquittal. — Associated Press

Los Angeles police Detective Marla Ciuffetelli of the missing persons unit.

The body found in the car could not be visually identified due to decomposition, but Gelfand’s son-in-law Will Matlack said the family had been contacted by the coroner’s office, which was trying to match fingerprints or dental records to make a positive identification.

“The coroner said it’s 99 percent a sure thing,” Matlack said.

Lavau spent the night in his wrecked car and crawled out in daylight. He found a stream nearby and ate ants, the doctor said. He also found a flare in the other car and tried to light it, but it was expired. He also couldn’t find his cellphone.

Lavau could hear cars and see their lights on the road above and was hopeful he’d be discovered, but as time passed, he grew more uncertain.

“He mentally said goodbye to his family. He wasn’t sure anyone would be able to find him,” Singh said.

His children told “Today” that after realizing he was missing, they contacted a Los Angeles County sheriff’s detective, who was able to narrow Lavau’s whereabouts through his most recent cellphone use, text messages and debit card purchases. That led them to the sparsely populated area about 50 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

The children then organized themselves into a search party.

“We stopped at every ravine and looked over every hill, and then my brother got out of the car and we kept screaming, and the next thing we heard Dad saying, ‘Help, help,’ and there he was,” Lisa Lavau said.

Sean Lavau slid down the embankment to reach his father, who was airlifted to the hospital while firefighters helped his children get back up the ravine.

Lisa Lavau told KABC-TV that while her father was stranded, he used the other driver’s eyeglasses so that he could see.

The California Highway

Patrol is investigating the accident, trying to establish what happened.

Lavau is expected to make a full recovery and was reported in good spirits. “He was very desirous of a lobster taco,” Sutter said.

Matlack said the Gelfand family is grateful to the Lavaus for their search, calling it “a brave and spunky thing to do.”

Gelfand simply disappeared, leaving no clues. How he ended up 50 miles north of Los Angeles in his own car remains a mystery, his son-in-law said.

drones launched the lethal strike early Friday, U.S. officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss matters of intelligence.

Al-Awlaki and his comrades were moving through a desert region east of Yemen’s capital near the village of Khasaf between mountain strongholds in the provinces of Jawf and Marib when the drone struck, U.S. and Yemeni officials said.

A tribal chief in the area told The Associated Press that the brother of one of those killed witnessed the strike. The brother, who had sheltered the group in his home nearby, said the group had stopped for breakfast in the desert and were sitting on the ground eating when they saw the drone approaching. They rushed to their truck to drive off when the missiles hit, incinerating the vehicle, according to the tribal chief, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he did not want to be associated with the incident.

U.S. officials said two other militants were killed in the strike. But the tribal chief, who helped bury the bodies in a Jawf cemetery, said seven people were killed, including al-Awlaki, Khan, two midlevel Yemeni al-Qaida members, two Saudis and another Yemeni. The differing numbers could not immediately be reconciled.

Al-Awlaki, who was born in New Mexico to Yemeni parents, had been in the U.S. cross-hairs since his killing was approved by Obama last year. At least twice, airstrikes were called in on locations in Yemen where al-Awlaki was suspected of being, but he wasn’t harmed.

In July, U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said al-Awlaki was a priority target alongside Ayman al-Zawahri, bin Laden’s successor as the terror network’s leader.

Bruce Riedel, a Brookings senior fellow and former CIA officer, cautioned that while al-Awlaki was the “foremost propagandist,” for al-Qaida’s Yemen branch, his death “doesn’t really significantly change its fortunes.”

Al-Qaida’s branch “is intact and arguably growing faster than ever before because of the chaos in Yemen,” he said.

Al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, as the terror branch in Yemen is called, has been operating in Yemen for years, led by a Yemeni militant and former bin Laden aide named Nasser al-Wahishi.

A school worker in Albertville — a community with a large poultry industry that employs many Hispanic workers — said Friday that many families might leave town over the weekend for other states. About 22 percent of the community’s 4,200 students are Hispanic.

“I met a Hispanic mother in the hallway at our community learning center this morning, where enrollment and withdrawal happens. She looked at me with tears in her eyes. I asked, ‘Are you leaving?’ She said ‘Yes,’ and hugged me, crying,” said the worker, who spoke on condition of anonymity because she was not an authorized spokeswoman.

In Russellville, which has one of the largest immigrant populations in the state because of its poultry plants, overall school attendance was down more than 2 percent after the ruling, and the rate was higher among Hispanic students.

There’s “no firm data yet, but several students have related to their teachers that they may be moving soon,” said George Harper, who works in the central office.

Schools in Baldwin County, a heavily agricultural and tourist area near the Gulf Coast, and in Decatur in the Tennessee Valley also reported sudden decreases in Hispanic attendance.

The law does not require proof of citizenship to enroll, and it does not apply to any students who were enrolled before Sept. 1.

Intermountain Gas Rates Drop

Intermountain Gas customers will pay an average 5.3 percent less starting today, according to the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

The price decrease stems from changes to the company's Purchases Gas Cost Adjustment, a variable fee that changes annually based on the costs of gas supply and transportation. Today's change does not affect Intermountain's base rate. Low growth in demand due to lingering economic issues, and increases in natural gas supply are the main reasons for the decline. Residential customers will see an average reduction of $2.17 per month.

U.S. Incomes Fall for First Time in Nearly 2 Years

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Americans earned less in August, the first decline in nearly two years. With less income, consumers could cut back on spending and weaken an already-fragile economy.

Their lower pay explains why consumers increased spending at a slower pace in August. And most of the increase went to pay higher prices for food and gas. When adjusted for inflation, spending was flat.

Many people tapped their savings to cover the steeper costs. The savings rate fell to its lowest level since December 2009.

The decline in income offered "more evidence that households are in quite a bind," said Paul Dales, senior U.S. economist at Capital Economics.

Consumer spending rose 0.2 percent in August, after growing 0.7 percent in July, the Commerce Department said Friday. Incomes fell 0.1 percent, which was the first decline since October 2009.

The data also contributed to a rough day of Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average tumbled to close 240 points down. Broader indexes also fell.

When people have less income, they spend less and that slows growth. Consumers spending accounts for 70 percent of economic activity.

The economy grew just 0.9 percent in the first half of the year, the worst six-month stretch since the recession officially ended more than two years ago.

Most economists have been predicting the second half of the year will be slightly better, in part because gas prices have come down since peaking this spring.

Dales estimates 2.5 percent growth in the July-September quarter and 1.5 percent in the final three months of the year. Those estimates take into account the weaker income figures.

Such growth may be enough to calm recession fears. But it is far from what is needed to lower the unemployment rate, which was 9.1 percent in August.

And Dales cautioned that he might have to lower his estimates even further if consumers have less money to spend.

"Households haven't seen their incomes increase at all this year. That goes along way to explain why consumption growth has been so weak," Dales said. "Job growth is stagnant and even those people who do have a job are not in a position to spend because their incomes are not growing."

Most people probably didn't experience an actual pay cut last in August.

But the economy added no new jobs. And among those who were working, average hourly earnings dropped 3 cents and hours worked fell slightly. Those factors combined to lower wages and salaries.

Many retailers, particularly discounters like Target Corp. and Wal-Mart Stores Inc., have cut workers' hours. They're under pressure to trim expenses, said Burt Flickinger III, president of retail consultancy Strategic Resource Group, and labor is the biggest expense after inventory.

In June, Target had its first union election in two decades after facing allegations that it paid skimpy wages and reduced hours at a Valley Stream, N.Y. store.

Bank of America Debit Fee is Only the Latest

BY EILEEN AJ CONNELLY AND DAVE CARPENTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Angela Malerba, who works in public relations in Boston, carries a debit card because she likes to know when she buys something that she has enough in her account to pay for it. But paying $5 a month to use her own money? That's too much.

So when Bank of America starts charging the fee next year, Malerba figures she'll rely more heavily on her credit card. Or, in a strategy that seems almost quaint in these swipe-and-go times, she may just carry more cash.

"Paying $60 a year in debit card fees just seems absurd," she says.

The 38.7 million people who carry Bank of America debit cards will face a similar decision in the latest example of banks raising fees or establishing new ones — not just for debit cards but for visiting ATMs or talking to a teller.

Bank of America's announcement follows tests by Wells Fargo and Chase for $3 monthly fees for debit cards in some markets. Other banks have begun charging for basic checking. Banks have sharply restricted their rewards programs for debit cards.

Bank of America said the fee will apply only when customers use their debit cards for purchases in a certain month. The fee will not apply if the card is used only to access ATMs. It will not apply for premium customers, who keep high balances.

Debit fees hit particularly hard because banks have spent the past decade encouraging their customers to go for the ease of the cards, which deduct purchases immediately from a checking or savings account.

Romney, Perry to Reach Deeper Into States With Early Primaries

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT and STEVE PEOPLES
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa • Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney is following his long-planned, tested and methodical strategy to secure the Republican presidential nomination, while his chief rival, Rick Perry, is challenging the experienced campaigner on the fly.

Neither Romney nor Perry is panicking nor retooling after an aggressive September battle in which each landed blows. But as they begin October, they will each reach deeper into the early contest state perceived to belong to the other man.

Romney has kept a low profile in Iowa, but his campaign is growing in the state now, hoping to generate momentum by finishing in the top three in the caucuses, the first of the 2012 nominating contests.

The former Massachusetts governor is dispatching his wife, Ann, there next week and plans his own visit later in the month. After scaling back sharply from his $10-million 2008 campaign in Iowa, Romney is now adding modestly to his small Iowa staff and building support among niche groups, such as the agricultural industry, local businesses and senior citizens.

Perry charged hard out of the gate to cheering crowds after he announced in late summer. But his momentum was slowed by stumbles in recent debate performances. Nevertheless, he's heading to New Hampshire, where active voters hold him with some skepticism, for a series of appearances in front of influential voters who will be able to question him in public.

The following weekend, Perry plans to introduce himself to conservative northwest Iowa, where the Texas governor's opposition to a fence on the U.S.-Mexico border has raised eyebrows.

Perry is organizing aggressively in Iowa and has already peeled support away from rivals Michele Bachmann and Rick Santorum in the state where he is expected to do well. Although Romney has only visited the state twice this year, he has maintained some support, and the latest

"There are enough people in the Republican Party in Iowa who want to keep the focus on jobs and the economy," Romney's senior Iowa strategist David Kochel said. "And we have an opportunity to organize in Iowa. With a small but effective effort, we can do well."

Meanwhile, Perry is showing his clear intentions to challenge Romney in New Hampshire, where the former Massachusetts governor enjoys tremendous advantages and Perry is polling in single digits.

The Texan opened a series of three town hall-like forums over a 20-hour period Friday night in Derry, N.H.

And while he didn't go after Romney by name, he offered at least one subtle jab.

"We need a nominee for the Republican Party who is a clear contrast with Barack Obama," Perry told roughly 150 voters gathered inside the Adams Opera House.

The open forums represent a shift away from the scripted events he favored during his first three trips to the first-in-the-nation primary state. Local Republicans noticed the cautious beginning.

"Rick Perry is going to need to have more events beyond the RSVP-only house parties to illustrate he can handle the pressures of the first-in-the-nation primary," said Michael Dennehy, an uncommitted Republican strategist who managed 2008 GOP primary winner John McCain's campaign here.

Both are also sharpening their criticisms of each other, although Romney's attacks have been systematic while Perry appears to be testing his as he goes.

Romney had sat alone atop national polls until Perry bumped him after entering the race in August. Perry's support dipped somewhat in September, and he fell behind Romney in a Fox News poll published Wednesday, although Perry led in other recent national polls.

WASHINGTON • The Energy Department on Friday approved four more solar energy loan guarantees worth nearly $5 billion, hours before a controversial loan program was set to expire.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department moved to take away control of a failed solar panel maker from its management and transfer it to a court-appointed trustee.

Energy Secretary Steven Chu said the department completed deals on four projects, including two that were sold late this week by Arizona-based First Solar Inc., a major solar manufacturer that had been seeking three federal loan guarantees for projects in California. The sales were announced Friday along with the loan guarantees.

The loans were approved under the same program that paid for a $528 million loan to Solyndra LLC, a now-bankrupt solar panel maker that has become a symbol for critics of the Obama administration's green energy program.

Two other solar loan guarantees worth about $1.1 billion were announced earlier this week, as the Obama administration pushed forward with the loan program despite pleas from GOP critics to halt it to avoid another Solyndra-like debacle.

Even as the loan program continued, the Justice Department took steps Friday to take away control of Solyndra from its management and transfer it to a court-appointed trustee.

In a filing with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Delaware, the Justice Department said it was seeking the appointment of a trustee because top Solyndra executives refused to answer questions about its finances and operations. Solyndra CEO Brian Harrison and financial chief W.G. Stover refused to testify before Congress last week, citing their Fifth Amendment protections against self-incrimination.

The Justice Department did not allege any wrongdoing but said "the inability or refusal of the corporate officers to answer material questions establishes cause for the appointment of a trustee."

Medic: Info From Jackson Doctor Did Not Add Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) • After just a few moments in Michael Jackson's bedroom, the paramedic sent to save the singer's life knew things weren't adding up.

There was the skinny man on the floor, eyes open with a surgical cap on his head. His skin was turning blue. Paramedic Richard Senneff asked the sweating, frantic-looking doctor in the room what condition the stricken man had.

"He said, 'Nothing. He has nothing,'" Senneff told jurors at the involuntary manslaughter trial of Jackson's doctor, Conrad Murray. "Simply, that did not add up to me," he said.

Over the course of the 42 minutes that Los Angeles paramedics tried to revive Jackson, several other things about the room and Murray's responses seemed inconsistent to Senneff.

After repeated prodding, Murray revealed a few details about his actions, saying he had only given Jackson a dose of the sedative lorazepam to help him sleep, Senneff testified.

Also, there were bottles of medicine on Jackson's nightstand, and Murray finally offered that he was treating the singer for dehydration and exhaustion.

Senneff said Murray never mentioned that he had also been giving Jackson doses of the anesthetic propofol and other sedatives, a key omission that prosecutors say shows he repeatedly tried to conceal his actions during the struggle to save the singer.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"You, for example, clever to a fault...."

— Robert Browning

We all have the chance to be brilliantly deceptive when we have plenty of time at our disposal. However, our problem is not only to think of the deception, but also to produce the play in perfect tempo. If we find the right false-card, but break tempo to produce it, declarer can normally see through our little game. With that advance warning, can you see how it might have been possible to deflect declarer from the winning path in today's deal?

North's decision to cue-bid facing short spades might have been ill-advised and encouraged his partner to look for the club slam. As it was, when West led the predictable diamond queen, declarer found himself in a horrid spot. He won the diamond king at trick two, crossed to the heart king, played a club to the queen, then crossed his fingers and laid down the club ace. When the king and jack appeared, he had his slam in the bag.

So who could have done better? West had a shot to deflect declarer from the winning line, if he had dropped the club jack under the queen. Declarer would surely have played West for a singleton club now. He would try to cross to dummy in hearts to repeat the trump finesse — disaster! West would ruff in and lead a third diamond, promoting the club king in East's hand for down two. So much for a friendly trump break!

ANSWER: The choice is a simple one: do you make a negative double, suggesting 4-4 in the majors, or do you bid one heart and temporarily bury the spade suit, hoping that the auction works out to allow you or your partner to bid spades later on if necessary? I'm strongly of the opinion that you really only have four hearts not five, so make the negative double and don't worry about missing the 5-3 heart fit.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bil Keane

“Lunch is ready on three ... hut one, hut two, hut three!”

Today is Saturday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 2011. There are 91 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 1, 1961, Roger Maris of the New York Yankees hit his 61st home run during a 162-game season, compared to Babe Ruth's 60 home runs during a 154-game season. (Tracy Stallard of the Boston Red Sox gave up the round-tripper; the Yankees won 1-0.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1861, during the Civil War, the Confederate navy captured the Union steamer Fanny in North Carolina's Pamlico Sound.

In 1908, Henry Ford introduced his Model T automobile to the market.

In 1910, the offices of the Los Angeles Times were destroyed by a bomb explosion and fire; 21 Times employees were killed.

In 1936, Gen. Francisco Franco was proclaimed the head of an insurgent Spanish state.

In 1940, the first section of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, 160 miles in length, was opened to the public.

In 1949, Mao Zedong proclaimed the People's Republic of China during a ceremony in Beijing. A 42-day strike by the United Steelworkers of America began over the issue of retirement benefits.

In 1964, the Free Speech Movement was launched at the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1971, Walt Disney World opened near Orlando, Fla.

In 1986, former President Jimmy Carter's presidential library and museum were dedicated in Atlanta with help from President Ronald Reagan.

In 1987, eight people were killed when an earthquake measuring magnitude 5.9 struck the Los Angeles area.

Ten years ago: New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, in an impassioned speech to the United Nations, said there was no room for “neutrality” in the global fight against terrorism. The Supreme Court suspended former President Bill Clinton from practicing before the high court. A Pakistan-based militant group attacked the state legislature in Indian-ruled Kashmir, killing 38 people.

Five years ago: The Israeli army completed its withdrawal from Lebanon, clearing the way for a U.N. peacekeeping force. Brazil's leftist President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva fell short of the votes he needed to win a second term outright and was forced into a runoff, which he won by a landslide. Tiger Woods won the American Express Championship in Chandler's Cross, England. (It was his eighth victory of the year, making Woods the first player in PGA Tour history to win at least eight times in three seasons.)

One year ago: White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel, planning an ultimately successful Chicago mayoral run, relinquished his post to Pete Rouse. CNN fired anchor Rick Sanchez a day after he called Jon Stewart a bigot during a radio interview in which he also questioned whether Jews should be considered a minority. Georgy Arbatov, 87, a foreign policy adviser to Soviet presidents and the Kremlin's top America watcher, died in Moscow.

magicvalley.com

DEAR ABBY: Before I met my boyfriend, “Cory,” he had a married female friend he’d go out with — dancing, dinner, movies, etc. He says there was no sex involved, and I believe him. He has asked me to be friends with her and her husband, and I have tried.

However, whenever she’s around Cory, they ignore everyone else. She even tried to go on vacation with us! What really upset me was when Cory thought it was OK to ask if “we” could go out with her! It’s like she has always been in our relationship.

I have told him they are (and have been) having a non-sexual affair. He’s a wonderful man otherwise, and I know he loves me. How can I get her out of our lives?

— FEELING LIKE A THIRD WHEEL

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR FEELING: It would be interesting to know what this female friend’s husband thinks about her relationship with your boyfriend. Dinner, dancing, movies — possible shared vacations — seems like an unusual amount of “togetherness.” Talk to her husband, and you may gain some insight.

As to how you can get her out of your lives, the answer is you probably can’t. Unless your boyfriend is willing to accept that their relationship is a threat to the one he has with you and is willing to let it go, she will be in his life — and yours — for a long, long time.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for four years. Like many couples, we are discussing having a family and we both agree the time is now.

My husband was adopted at birth by a loving couple whom he has always known as his parents. They are fantastic people, but I’d still like to know my husband’s family medical history before putting myself or our child at risk for any hereditary complications.

My mother-in-law thinks this “inquisition into the family’s personal business” is uncalled for. I think it’s important to get a full family medical history before having children. Am I out of line, or should he try to locate his biological parents?

— NEEDS TO KNOW IN IOWA
DEAR NEEDS TO KNOW: I don’t think you’re out of line. However, if your husband is reluctant to reach out — even to request his birth parents’ medical histories — then you may be able to obtain the information you’re concerned about by having genetic testing done on the two of you. If necessary, discuss it with your physician.

DEAR ABBY: I am a coach’s wife and would love some advice on how to handle “fans” who make rude comments about the people who coach their high school-age kids.

I listen to parents constantly gripe and complain about their children’s coaches. How can I gracefully manage this situation? I refuse to listen to degrading, negative comments about my husband and his co-workers. Please advise.

— MRS. COACH IN TEXAS

DEAR MRS. COACH: There is nothing you can do to stop comments like that during a game. Some parents act more like children than their children do. However, if it’s happening in social situations, a way to deal with it would be to remind the offenders that you’d rather not hear about “work” when you’re trying to have fun. Another would be to excuse yourself if the parent has been drinking.

IF OCTOBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: There is ample time and opportunity to stop and smell the flowers in the upcoming 12 months. Friends or acquaintances might point out opportunities that would escape your notice this month. Late November and early December is a good time to make decisions about investments or business. Expect a slowdown in January when your ambition is heightened, but when your energies could falter. You will be fighting an uphill battle to stay on top of things so avoid initiating anything of importance. In April your attractiveness pops, so you could interview for a new position or meet the soul mate you have always yearned to meet. Don't fight changes that occur next May and June, as whatever falls away or alters may free you of unseen restrictions.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Intimate relationships take center stage. Loved ones may have enormous ambition, but be constrained by the chains of past poor judgment. You can steady the helm and guide them to success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A little flirtation is good for the soul. But you may unleash complications by following through on an impulsive desire. You don't need to bite at an attractive carrot dangling under your nose.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are too eager to be seen as an avid adventurer. Don't put additional irons in the fire even if others urge you on. A little caution might be wise as you are apt to bite off a little more than you can chew.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unrealistic expectations can cause a letdown. Harness your ambitions and put them to work for you but don't expect instant gratification. A new hookup or impulsive investment can prove troublesome.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You hope to see a dream walking. Your romantic nature is going full tilt, so you may be gullible if you meet a likely prospect for a fling. It would be wise to get advice from a friend before proceeding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can make ends meet if you don't let something stand in the middle to block the way. Keep a watchful eye on the due dates on your bills and be sure to pay them on time even if it requires sacrifice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mistakes from your past can affect your present. If you run into an old flame, don't give in to the temptation to reignite a relationship. This is not a good time to act on impulse or to give in to a romantic whim.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opportunities that knock won't also open the door. Success requires some dedicated action on your part. This might be the right time to put money to work for you rather than working for your money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Only perspective separates a helping hand from the outstretched palm that begs for help. If your assets are involved, your challenge may be to learn to tell the difference and to avoid being gullible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pay the piper. If you ignore the rules or forget to honor agreements, you might set off an unhappy chain of events. Be sure to act ethically even if you yearn for something exotic and romantic to happen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curl up with a good book. You need to keep your imagination safely secured within its covers. You might have unexpected results if you indulge in a casual fling or let fantasies roam too freely.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be precise and concise. The difference between failure and success is doing a thing nearly right and doing a thing exactly right. Examine all the pieces of the puzzle before you begin to put it together.

Broncos Look Forward to Rematch with Nevada

BY ALEX CALINSKY
For the Times-News

BOISE • Boise State's Chris Petersen is 64-5 in his head coaching career, so when the Broncos lose, it stands out.

Last year's 34-31 overtime defeat in Reno would be remembered even if it was the 64th loss of his career. Few can forget kicker Kyle Brotzman's field goal misses at the end of regulation and in overtime, wide receiver Titus Young's long reception to set Brotzman up, and Nevada quarterback Colin Kaepernick striding and slinging, leading the Wolf Pack's comeback effort.

The No. 4 Broncos host Nevada (1-3) today (12:30, Bronco Stadium), but none of the aforementioned players will be on the field – a theme Bronco players repeated throughout the week.

"It's a different season and Colin's not their quarterback, so very different circumstances," quarterback Kellen Moore said.

"It's a different team from last year... but they still run the same offense, so we're going to have our hands full," defensive back George Iloka said.

Nevada played Boise State tough once Kaepernick arrived in 2007 and finally broke through for the win last season. In each game prior to last season in the series, Nevada lost 44-33, 41-34, and 69-67 (four overtimes).

"It'll be fun," Moore said. "Since I've been here, every game's been a great game. It's a new season, new players, and we'll see what happens."

Petersen is well aware of the history and respects the way Nevada coach Chris Ault gets his players ready to play.

"I think that Nevada is obviously a really good program. I think they're kind of at that point where they've developed guys and they can put them in and they pick up and they're not in a rebuilding situation," Petersen said.

Stepping in for Kaepernick are two quarterbacks with different styles, Tyler Lantrip and Cody Fajardo. Lantrip is a pocket passer and Fajardo is more mobile, but they share a primary receiving target in 6-2, 215-pound senior Rishard Matthews. Matthews shredded Boise State last year for 10 receptions, 172 yards, one touchdown, and one rushing touchdown of 44 yards.

"Good player. He's a guy that can change the game, he's big time, he's a physical receiver," Petersen said.

The entire Boise State defense is looking to improve their second half play from last year and also from last week against Tulsa, in which they gave up 21 points.

Zach Davis was told to put his head down, run hard and no matter what, hold on to the football.

Mission accomplished. With Twin Falls nursing a five-point lead with 3 minutes, 25 seconds left in the game, the Bruins put the ball in the hands of their senior running back and he delivered, ripping off runs of 12 and 10 yards to bleed the clock, sealing a 27-22 victory against Jerome and protecting the Perrine Bridge for one more year.

"I just did what my coaches told me to do and ran as hard as I could," said Davis, who finished the game with 92 yards and one touchdown. "It's Jerome. It's always a big game. They came out with intensity tonight, but we answered. It's a great feeling."

within five on a 24-yard touchdown pass from Zach Thibault to Kolton Parsons with 7:17 remaining.

The Tigers (0-5, 0-3 GBC) took over at their own 34 with just over five minutes remaining and a chance to steal back a game they led early in the first quarter.

Jerome's drive stalled near midfield after Thibault's attempted screen pass to Jake Hollifield flew high above the 6-foot-5 receiver. On 4th-and-5, the Tigers had to make a decision.

They punted. And all the players and coaches on the sideline could do was watch Davis burn down the clock for Twin Falls.

"If I had to make that decision again, I would have gone for it," said Jerome coach Gary Krumm. "We looked at it then, our defense just made a big stop and our play on third down was shaky. Unfortunately we weren't able to make

One Step Closer to Playoffs for Oakley

BY DAVID BASHORE

OAKLEY • Revenge, proving a point, call it what you will. Nothing was going to stand in Oakley's way Friday. Eleazar Tellez ran for four touchdowns and the Hornets took a huge step toward the Class 1A Division I playoffs with a 52-30 dismantling of Shoshone, avenging last year's 14-12 loss that helped knock Oakley out of playoff contention.

"We all knew what we had to do tonight," said Tellez, who rushed for 172 yards on 14 carries.

Oakley (4-1, 3-0 Snake River) didn't punt in the first half on its way to a 38-14 halftime lead.

By beating Grace last week and Shoshone Friday, Oakley now has wins over two of the other three teams expected to vie for the conference title. The Hornets go to Hagerman later in the season with a leg up in the race for two playoff spots.

MINICO SPARTANS SURVIVE WOOD RIVER'S CHALLENGE

RUPERT • For the first time this season, somebody slowed down Minico's up-tempo wing-T offense.

For the first time this season, Minico was behind on the scoreboard.

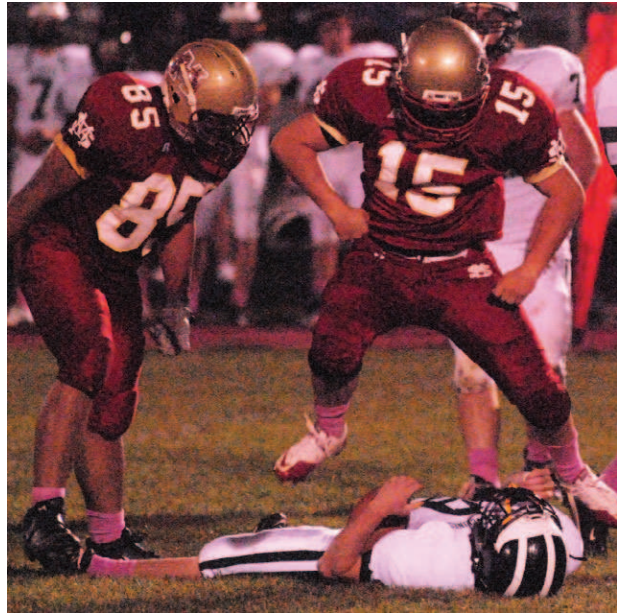

For the first time this season, Tim Perrigot admitted he was nervous.

And for the first time this season, a team stepped up and challenged the undefeated Minico Spartans.

The Wood River Wolverines confidently marched into Spartanville Friday night and matched Minico blow-for-blow in a Great Basin Conference battle that was closer than Minico's 34-15 victory would suggest.

"They're a great team. They're physical, they have speed and they have a nice scheme," said Minico's coach Perrigot, who said this was the best Wood River team he's faced in more than 16 seasons. "They were two or three plays away from beating us tonight. We need battles like this as we head into the playoffs. We haven't had a lot of league games that have been challenges for us and tonight was a great challenge."

ing yards, 43 receiving yards and three touchdowns to lead Minico, which gained 350 yards of total offense.

Wood River emptied out the playbook, running an assortment of fake punts, halfback passes, reverse passes and flea flickers. But there was nothing gimmicky about the way the Wolverines pounded the football inside and exploited Minico on the edges with their sweeps. Led by Greg Lindbloom and Ian Keys, Wood River ran for 180 yards and passed for 115.

"We're not going to back down from anybody, I think we proved that tonight," said Wood River coach Kevin Stilling.

Wood River (4-2 overall, 1-1 GBC) appeared ready to spoil Minico's homecoming when it took a 13-7 lead in the second quarter with touchdown runs by Keys and Lindbloom.

Rays Rookie Moore Dominates Rangers in ALDS Opener

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas • Matt Moore went to the mound as the ultimate wild card.

Seven innings later, he walked off as a postseason ace.

Making only his second major league start, the 22-year-old rookie pitched two-hit ball and left with a huge lead Friday as the improbable Tampa Bay Rays opened the real playoffs with a 9-0 victory over the defending AL champion Texas Rangers.

"You can't be more impressed," Rays manager Joe Maddon said. "What he did tonight was spectacular."

A minor leaguer until mid-September, Moore dazzled with his pitching and poise. He took a deep breath before his first delivery, then was in total control for a team that already had played a month's worth of tense games.

"I may have looked a little more calm than I was, especially early. The first inning, I had a little bit of nerves and adrenaline going," Moore said.

"But these guys made it really easy for me, putting up those numbers. Looking up there after the fourth, I think it was 8-0, it was just a matter of throwing strikes and getting out of the innings as fast as possible," he said.

Kelly Shoppach homered twice and drove in five runs, Johnny Damon also homered and Tampa Bay dominated the whole way behind Moore.

Moore began this best-of-five matchup by striking out six and walking two against the AL's top-hitting team.

The Rays played for the first time since their dramatic rally Wednesday night on the final day of the regular season. Since Tampa Bay needed every out simply to overcome Boston's nine-game lead in the last 3½ weeks to win the wild card, Maddon had to focus on getting this far over trying to set up his pitching rotation.

When Maddon had to pick a rested starter for Game 1 of the AL division series rematch, he had no qualms of going with the lefty who made his first start last week at Yankee Stadium and struck out 11 in five scoreless innings.

DIAMONDBACKS-BREWERS
Schedule: (All times MDT) Game 1, today, at Milwaukee (12:07 p.m.); Game 2, Sunday, at Milwaukee (2:37 p.m.); Game 3, Tuesday, at Arizona (TBD); x-Game 4, Wednesday, at Arizona (TBD); x-Game 5, Friday, Oct. 7, at Milwaukee (TBD). (All games on TBS).
x-if necessary.
Season Series: Diamondbacks won 4-3.
• Daniel Hudson in the Early Innings. The 23-year-old right-hander has a penchant for giving up runs early, then settling down. That might be trouble against the big-hitting Brewers.
• B.J. Upton in the Spotlight. When he played in the 2007 playoffs, Upton had only recently been brought up from the minors and not much was expected of him. Now he is "the man" after enjoying the best season of his career. Still, he's only 24 and has been known to press in the clutch.
• Prince Fielder Against the Shift. The 27-year-old first baseman is one of the league's premier sluggers, but he went 1 for 14 in four games in his first taste of the postseason in 2008 and wasn't a factor. He'll likely face an infield shift early and often, and it's unclear just how many good pitches he'll see because most teams will walk him and face the weaker bottom of Milwaukee's order.

• Ryan Braun's Big Swings. In 2008, he hit a go-ahead, two-run homer on the final day to lift Milwaukee into the postseason. Last week, he hit a go-ahead, three-run homer on the night the Brewers clinched and called it eerily similar. Braun's flair for the dramatic is matched by his plate discipline.
• Home-Field Advantage. Milwaukee, the smallest media market in the league, drew a franchise-record 3 million fans for the third time in four seasons and set an all-time attendance record this year (3,071,373). The Brewers sold out Miller Park 37 times.
CARDINALS-PHILLIES
Schedule: (All times MDT) Game 1, today, at Philadelphia (3:07 p.m.); Game 2, Sunday, at Philadelphia ( 6:07 p.m.); Game 3, Tuesday, at St. Louis (TBA); x-Game 4, Wednesday, at St. Louis (TBA); x-Game 5, Friday, Oct. 7, at Philadelphia (TBA). (All games on TBS).
Season Series: Cardinals won 6-3.
Watch For:
• Red-light Jimmy Rollins. The 32-year-old shortstop and 2007 NL MVP loves playing in the spotlight and enters what could be his final days with the Phillies. Rollins will be a free agent after the season, though it's hard to imagine the team won't re-sign him. Rollins had a nice bounce-back year and was hot during the final week. His career postseason numbers are mediocre, although he enjoys the pressure. Rollins has a .226 average with three homers and 15 RBIs in 41 postseason games.

• Goodbye, Albert Pujols? The three-time MVP got a standing ovation before his final regular-season game at home he'll get at least one more dose of love from adoring St. Louis fans in the playoffs. He's had nothing of substance to say about his impending free agency since cutting off negotiations on a long-term deal before the start of spring training. Rather than allowing Pujols' situation to paralyze them, the Cardinals have already started planning for next season by signing Berkman to a one-year deal and Carpenter to a two-year extension. They've also stated interest in retaining Furcal.
• Cool Cliff Lee. Lee was 7-0 with a 1.26 ERA in his first eight postseason starts before losing Games 1 and 5 of the World Series to San Francisco last year while a member of the Texas Rangers. He had the Phillies' only two wins against the Yankees in the '09 World Series. Lee turned down more money from the Yankees and Rangers to return to the Phillies last winter. He said he came back because he felt the Phillies gave him the best chance to win that elusive ring.

Bengals Recovering From Offensive Collapse

BY MARK LIPTAK
For the Times-News

POCATELLO • Idaho State's Mike Kramer is one of the most enthusiastic, positive people one will ever meet. But he's also brutally honest ... with himself, with his coaches and especially with his players.
After a stunning offensive collapse in a 20-3 loss at Northern Arizona last week, where his high-powered offense didn't score a touchdown, didn't record a first down in the second half and was sacked 10 times, he laid the responsibility on basically one person, quarterback Kevin Yost.
"He was 'Dancing with the Stars' Saturday afternoon," Kramer said. "His footwork was awful. He looked like he was getting ready to do the pirouettes and the things you need to do to be on the TV show."
This is the same Yost who tied a Big Sky record with 47 completions and threw for 508 yards in a win over Northern Colorado. But Kramer is concerned with the here and now and for today's homecoming game against Portland State, and Yost has been put on notice.

"We'll have to reach real quickly to Justin Arias if Kevin continues to struggle," Kramer said.
Portland State comes in to the game at 2-2 overall, 1-0 Big Sky after getting pounded at 20th-ranked TCU last week. More importantly, it defeated Northern Arizona two weeks ago and has one of the best offenses in the conference, albeit one very different from what the Bengals like to do.

"They run the Oregon style offense, the pistol," Kramer said. "They don't run it at the pace Oregon runs it, but it's the same type of read-option offense. They're a very hard-minded team, a team that knows how to run the ball. (Connor) Kavanaugh, their quarterback, is pretty quick, a little bit like the quarterback we faced at Northern Arizona. They're an option attack team, they like to throw the ball to keep you off balance, but they really want to pound you off the ball and that's why they're leading the conference in rushing. They want to hurt you with the run."
This isn't to say ISU (2-2, 1-1 Big Sky) doesn't pose some issues for the Vikings. "With their offense, they are consistently putting pressure on your defense. You understand that on any play if you make a mistake, they can be in the end zone for six points," said Portland State head coach Nigel Burton.

In addition to the game itself, Idaho State is honoring the 1981 National Championship football team in a halftime ceremony. Many of the players on that team and the coaching staff will be at the game and Kramer knows that's important too. "We're excited to play at homecoming in remembrance of the '81 national championship team and to be able to play at home. Today at 1:30 p.m. is a little bit different time, but we've got a great parade and a lot of excitement on campus for it."
Kramer and his team hope they can cap off all that excitement with a win in front of what's expected to be a large crowd at Holt Arena.

Vandals Head Cross-Country to Face Cavaliers

BY JOSH WRIGHT
Times-News Correspondent

MOSCOW • He's a bedrock senior and defensive captain, a player who last year exerted so much energy in a blowout loss to Nevada that he was immediately taken to a hospital and treated overnight for dehydration.
Tre'Shawn Robinson, if there was any doubt, is fully invested in the Idaho football program. And in his last go-around at UI, he remains confident the Vandals can shed their inconsistency and still compete for a WAC title.
But the middle linebacker knows the team's improvement has to start manifesting itself right away — preferably today in Charlottesville, Va.
"I feel a lot of urgency because this is not the way we wanted to start the season," Robinson said. "So it's definitely hurting me a lot mentally because I have high expectations for myself and the team. And I know we're way better than what our record shows."
The Vandals are 1-3 entering a cross-country encounter with Virginia of the ACC, a school the Vandals have never met before today.

Akey would rather not play this game — he wants only one BCS foe on the Vandals' schedule every year — but he understands the financial benefit to UI and the potential upside for his program.
"The best benefit that could come from this game would be for us to go out there and play well and get a win against a BCS opponent," Akey said. "That would bring a lot of charge and a lot of energy to our team and we've got to believe to our fan base also."
Idaho's payout for today is $700,000 after getting $850,000 to play at Texas A&M on Sept. 17. Next year it will bring in its biggest guarantee ever — $950,000 — for traveling to play SEC powerhouse LSU.
The checks help keep the UI athletic department afloat, but the Vandals have largely been uncompetitive against big-conference competition in the last decade-plus. Their last BCS-level win came in September of 2000 against Washington State.

They are 0-22 against such teams since.
"Coaches let us know," Robinson said of the BCS drought. "But at the same time, we don't want to get too caught up in everything else that's going on."
Virginia, 161/2-point favorites, benched starting quarterback Michael Rocco in last week's 30-24 loss to Southern Miss after he injured his ribs. While coach Mike London said earlier in the week that Rocco will play today, the Vandals have also been preparing for true freshmen David Watford.

For the second straight week Idaho will be without tailback Ryan Bass, who has yet to be cleared to play with an internal injury in his stomach area. Receiver Preston Davis, who practiced this week for the first time since injuring his foot before the season, is also out.

Red Sox, Francona Part Ways After Collapse

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON • The Terry Francona era in Boston began with the Red Sox first championship in 86 years. It ended after one of the worst months in club history.
Players who didn't listen to him needed "a new voice," he said, and his employers agreed.
The team announced Friday that it was not exercising its contract option for next season and wouldn't hurry to name a replacement for the manager who rarely criticized his players publicly. That loyalty may not have been returned.
"I trusted them explicitly and things weren't getting done the way I wanted it in the end," Francona said, "and I was frustrated because of that. If that's letting me down, maybe it is."
But, he said he liked his players and "I actually feel I let a lot of people down."
In a statement, the Red Sox said they wouldn't pick up the option for a ninth year as manager following the team's September collapse in which they blew a nine-game lead in the AL wild-card race. They went 7-20 in September, capped by a 4-3 loss to Baltimore, as Tampa Bay beat them for the playoff spot on the final night of the regular season.

Owners John Henry, Tom Werner, and Larry Lucchino acknowledged a change was needed and thanked Francona, who led the franchise to titles in 2004 and 2007. But the statement also mentioned that Francona was ready to head in a different direction.
"Tito said that after eight years here he was frustrated by his difficulty making an impact with the players, that a different voice was needed, and that it was time for him to move on," the statement said.
The decision was part of a whirlwind day at Fenway Park that saw the principal parties shuttle in and out of the facility. Francona was in the building three different times.

only one previous career start until the seemingly unfazed Moore took the mound at Rangers Ballpark less than 22 hours after being told he was pitching in the playoffs less than three months after pitching in the Futures game during the All-Star break.
Rookie Brandon Gomes and Wade Davis both pitched a hitless inning in relief to complete the first shutout in Rays postseason history.
Except for Josh Hamilton's two hits, the Rangers — who hit .283 to lead the majors for the second consecutive season — never solved Moore. They got only one runner to third against him.
Yankees-Tigers Suspended
NEW YORK • The playoff opener between the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees was suspended because of rain in the second inning Friday night, probably wiping out the ace of each pitching staff for a few days.

Justin Verlander started for Detroit against CC Sabathia in a highly anticipated matchup between two of the game's best pitchers. The score was tied at 1 in the middle of the second inning when play was halted.
According to a rule adopted by Major League Baseball two years ago, the game is not postponed. Instead, it will pick up Saturday night at the point of suspension — weather permitting — with the Yankees coming to bat in the second inning. The forecast calls for rain through late Saturday night.
Yankees manager Joe Girardi said rookie Ivan Nova will start Saturday. He had been slated to go in Game 2, which was moved back to Sunday at 3:07 p.m., a scheduled day off in the best-of-five American League series.

showing than we had at the end," defensive lineman Jarrell Root said. "Nevada is a second-half team and we have gone out and dominated in the first half but left things to be desired in the second. This is definitely a challenge we're looking forward to."
The coaching staff preached the importance of starting fast, like the Broncos have done, and finishing stronger. Petersen acknowledged that emotions stemming from last season will be part of the game, but is focused on a larger perspective.

"I'm not worried about (emotions). We're so focused on ourselves and taking care of the issues we have and just trying to get better," Petersen said.
While some players dismissed the notion of unfinished business, Root wasn't afraid to admit his defensive unit hasn't forgotten about last year.
"Last year we didn't come out of it the way we wanted to and that sticks with you," Root said. "Even though it's a new season it's definitely something we were looking forward to."

Castleford Routs Jackpot

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

JACKPOT, Nev. • The national anthem had just finished playing, everyone was still standing at attention and the south wind was blowing across the football field at Jackpot High School. For the briefest of moments, it was as quiet a scene as one would ever experience at a football game.

And then, after his team's long wait from its bye week, the switch was tripped on Castleford's Destry Weekes. He jumped in front of his teammates lined up on the sideline, cutting the air with a scream that left no doubt as to his eagerness to play.

"YEEEEEEEEAAAAHHH-HHHHH! LET'S GO GET 'EM BOYS!"

His Wolves teammates followed his lead from the get-go, flattening Jackpot 73-0 in a game that was called at halftime due to the mercy rule.

"You can never expect it to be easy," Weekes said. "You always got to come out and play your hardest. You have to be prepared for what might happen, whether it happens or not."

Two plays into the game, Weekes' preparation made an impact. He rushed Jackpot quarterback Ben Messmer from his blind side, jumped on his back in the end zone and knocked the ball free. Teammate Samoa Etelu fell on the ball, and just 49 seconds into the game, the Wolves led 8-0 after Ty Zimmers' conversion run.

On Jackpot's next play from scrimmage, Pablo Perez fumbled a handoff, and Weekes picked up the loose ball and returned it 9 yards to the Jaguar 10. Zimmers ran it in from there on the next play and added the conversion run for a 16-0 lead with 10:57 left in the first quarter.

Game. Over.

Castleford never punted, faced third down just once, forced four turnovers, scored on every possession but its final one when it went into the victory formation to end the half and held Jackpot to two first downs and 24 yards total offense.

And no one could accuse Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore of running up the score, as he began emptying his bench early in the second quarter and called all of two pass plays in the game.

"The first thing I'm thinking about is, I don't want to make enemies," Vulgamore said. "We're trying to get other kids in there and let them play at the varsity level"

Such a luxury is one first-year Jackpot coach Rick Pike could certainly use.

"We need 25 more kids to show up," Pike said. "I'd like to see some of our freshmen come out and join this team. It's a shame we've got kids in this town that don't want to fight for their ... classmates. They need to show up and play this game for the rest of their school. Juniors that could have played this year, they chickened out."

Andreas Robledo returned a kickoff 89 yards for a game-changing touchdown.

"I felt it coming on," Robledo said. "We needed a boost. I saw our team was dragging and our heads were down. I knew tonight would be a good night. I've got to thank my players, they blocked for me, there was a big hole and I just took advantage of it."

Minico rode the momentum of Robledo's big return and scored two more touchdowns before halftime to go up 28-13.

"Going up 13-6 was huge, but I think we let our guard down a little," said Stilling. "That kickoff return was huge and it took the wind out of our sails for four or five minutes, and against a football team as good as (Minico), you can't let your guard down for one play."

Wood River had two first-and-goal opportunities late in the game, but Minico's defense denied both, and May scored a 30-yard touchdown run with 2:20 remaining to give the Spartans breathing room.

"I don't think we were ready to play," said Minico's Jordan Browning, who ran for 102 yards. "Last year we had the same problem, we went up there thinking we were going to kill them. They're a good team. They'll probably take second in the conference, I don't know. This has been our worst game, by far. We'll have to get back to work Monday."

Minico (6-0, 3-0) will take a break from the GBC race next week when it hosts Century out of District V. Wood River hosts Twin Falls.

LDS CONFERENCE

Find out what's new in the realm of Latter-day Saint novels, films and music • L4

It's Conference Time

The 181st Semi-Annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held today and Sunday.

Today's general sessions begin at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The priesthood session for men and boys ages 12 and older begins at 6 p.m. Today, Sunday general sessions begin at 9:30 a.m. (with the weekly half-hour broadcast of "Music and the Spoken Word") and 2 p.m.

All sessions are held in the Conference Center at 60 W. North Temple St., Salt Lake City and have a duration of approximately two hours. Tickets to attend sessions at the Conference Center are passed out by local church leaders (and are typically few in number).

Ticket holders should be in their seats a half-hour prior to the start of each session. No one younger than age 8, including infants carried by parents, will be admitted. Sunday dress is encouraged. Language-translation headsets and American Sign Language interpretation are available.

Unoccupied seats are released to people in long lines of standby conferencegoers that curl around nearby

Temple Square. Those wishing to stand by should arrive early and look for the end of the line that forms at the north gate of Temple Square. (Lines on the Conference Center premises are typically for ticket holders.)

Overflow seating for all sessions is available in the Tabernacle, Assembly Hall, both Temple Square visitors' centers and the Joseph Smith Memorial Building.

All general sessions of the conference also will be aired on the official church radio station, Mormon Channel (radio.lds.org online).

BYU Television can also be viewed online at byu.tv. For more information on live Internet streaming of sessions, visit lds.org.

The priesthood session can only be viewed at LDS meetinghouses (typically stake centers) that are equipped to receive church satellite broadcasts, or at the Conference Center and church facilities on Temple Square.

Information about the availability of conference talks in print and other formats following general conference is available at lds.org/general-conference/.

Twenty-six-year-old actor Dustin Harding plays Joseph Smith in a new film about the beginnings of Mormonism called 'Joseph Smith — Volume 1: Plates of Gold.' The film already has been released in Utah.

New film about the life of Joseph Smith focuses on translation of the golden plates.

BY CODY CLARK
Daily Herald

One of the better-known quotations attributed to the famous King Follett Discourse — delivered by Joseph Smith, founder and first president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, at a conference of the church on April 7, 1844 — is as follows: "No man knows my history. I cannot tell it: I shall never undertake it."

That hasn't stopped a legion of scholars, writers, filmmakers and even Smith's own mother, Lucy Mack Smith, from undertaking to tell Smith's history. The newest effort is a film written, produced and directed by Christian Vuissa, founder of the LDS Film Festival.

Vuissa said that "Joseph Smith — Volume 1: Plates of Gold," which opened in Utah Sept. 2 and moved into second-run theaters like Movies 8 (in Provo) and the Water Garden Cinema 6 (in Pleasant Grove) on Friday, is a labor of love aimed primarily at fellow Latter-day Saints. "For me the goal was to bring Joseph Smith, who's such an iconic figure in our history, to bring him closer to the members of our church," Vuissa said. "To make him a human being and, by doing so, actually elevate him."

Vuissa's preparations to make the film included extensive research that went beyond just immerging himself in the numerous other accounts of Smith's life. While in New York state, the site of Smith's early life, Vuissa, 41, measured the distance on foot from the Smith family home to the Sacred Grove — where Smith claimed to have spoken face-to-face, as a 14-year-old boy, with God and Jesus Christ — and drove between Palmyra and Harmony, Pa., a journey made frequently by Smith on foot or by horsedrawn carts, to get a sense of the terrain and the time it would have taken to travel it.

(One scene in the film includes a shot of Joseph, headed to Harmony on foot, wrapping up in his cloak to sleep for the night on a bed of dry leaves by the side of the road.)

Vuissa is joined in his passion for the film by its young star, Dustin Harding. Harding, 26, has also portrayed Joseph Smith in a handful of other films, including official LDS

Vuissa

Church productions. Harding said that he received his patriarchal blessing (a Latter-day Saint rite that involves receiving divine and personalized life instruction through a specially appointed church leader) not long after his first experience portraying Smith, in an LDS Church film about Smith's First Vision.

The blessing, Harding said, "talks a lot about my calling of portraying Joseph Smith. I don't know why it happened this way, but I know without a doubt that this is a calling the Lord has had for me."

An Economical Production

The title of "Plates of Gold" includes the words "Volume 1" because Vuissa would like to continue telling the story, which he envisions would spread out over at least two more films. Whether or not that happens depends in part on the commercial success of "Plates of Gold," both in theaters and on DVD.

In that regard, the bar is not as high for Vuissa as it's been for other, similar projects in past years. The "Work and the Glory" movies, adapted from popular LDS historical novels and backed by the late Larry H. Miller, were filmed at a cost of several million dollars each — about $20.5 million altogether, according to box office tracking site boxofficemojo.com — but brought back just $6.7 million theatrically, with nearly half of that total coming from the first film.

Ron Brough, creative director for Covenant Communications, which is helping to market "Plates of Gold" theatrically and will handle its distribution on DVD, said that

New Relief Society Book Aims to Unify Members

BY KIMBERLY CHRISTENSON
For the Daily Herald

Darlene Carlisle starts her morning by walking with a friend in the hills behind her home in Genola, a small farming community west of Santaquin.

She might spend the rest of the day working on her farm or helping her husband, Dennis, with his surveying business. But when she is not harvesting fall produce or performing property surveys, Carlisle is most likely doing something for her calling as a stake Relief Society president for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Carlisle has been the stake Relief Society president in the Goshen Stake for three years. A year ago, she was told that the LDS Church was compiling a history of the Relief Society to distribute among members of the Relief Society organization.

But when the book, "Daughters in My Kingdom: The History and Work of Relief Society" was released by the church's First Presidency this month, Carlisle was surprised at its contents.

"We were expecting it to be more of a history book," Carlisle said. "It is very different from what I expected, but I am excited. Very excited. I think it is going to be a real strength to the sisters."

The publication of "Daughters in My Kingdom" is the first time a church-sponsored history of the Relief Society has been written specifically for its female membership. Copies of the book are being distributed to members of the Relief Society worldwide.

United in Purpose

The 208 pages in "Daughters in My Kingdom" are divided into chapter headings such as The Female Relief Society of Nauvoo; The Blessings of the Priesthood; and Establishing, Nurturing and Defending the Family.

While the book includes historical accounts, it also includes modern personal experiences, scriptures and words of church leaders.

The preface states that the book's focus is less on a comprehensive history of the Relief Society and more on "the responsibilities and opportunities Latter-day Saint women are given in Heavenly Father's plan of happiness."

Carlisle said she feels that the modern experiences shared in the book will help women realize they are not alone.

In a recent Relief Society lesson, Linda Fullmer, shared a story from "Daughters in My Kingdom" about a woman named Cathie Humphrey, who continued to visit teach her neighbor although she would remain silent and keep her screen door shut throughout each visit.

Later, the neighbor lost her baby and invited Cathie to the graveside service, claiming Cathie as her only friend. Carlisle says that stories like these help women realize they are not alone in their experiences and that they can

Romney or Huntsman: Who Said It?

BY CODY CLARK
Daily Herald

Mitt Romney, Jon M. Huntsman Jr. Both men are former governors. Both are wealthy and handsome. Both have movie-star caliber hair. Both are Republicans and members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Oh, and both of them are running for president. They have so much in common, that it might be impossible to tell them apart — if they never opened their mouths, that is.

Test your knowledge of their political views by seeing if you can correctly guess which candidate made each of the following statements:

- 1 — “Corporations are people, my friend.”
2 — “I would say that there’s going to have be a shared sacrifice in this country. I think that people at all levels are going to have to step up.”
3 — “He’s been one of the

Romney Huntsman

most ineffective presidents at the job at hand that I’ve ever seen. The number-one issue he faced walking in the door was an economy in fast decline. He didn’t cause it, but he made things worse.”

4 — “History will show how effective he is.”

5 — “If you can’t define a winning exit strategy for the American people, where we somehow come out ahead, then we’re wasting our money, and we’re wasting our strategic resources. It’s a tribal state, and it always will be. Whether we like it or not, whenever we withdraw from Afghanistan, whether it’s now or years from now, we’ll have an incendiary situation.”

6 — “It’s time for us to bring our troops home as soon as we possibly can, consistent with the word that comes from our generals. We’ve learned that our troops shouldn’t go off and try and fight a war of independence for another nation. Only the Afghanis can win Afghanistan’s independence from the Taliban.”

7 — “I have refused every pledge. I pledge allegiance to my country. I have a pledge to my wife. But beyond that, I don’t do pledges. I don’t think it’s fair to tie somebody up once they do get elected in ways where they can’t properly serve the people who got them there in the first place.”

8 — “Because I love my country. And I can’t stomach the thought that we are passing down to the next generation, a country that is less viable, less good, less competitive, less compassionate than the one we got. You have a choice then, you can either stand on the sidelines or you can do as Teddy Roosevelt used to preach, and you can get in the arena and do something about it.”

9 — “The president is a good man. He’s earnest, he’s hard working, he’s a great family man. But I got to say on the economy, we’re not near where we should be, and internationally we’re in places I believe we should not be, spending one out of every six Defense Department dollars on Afghanistan. And I’m here to tell you that America’s future is not going to be won or lost in the prairies of Afghanistan.”

10 — “I don’t like vampires personally. I don’t know any.”

11 — “We as governors, our states, we all make contributions to Washington. And when stimulus dollars are coming back, you ultimately found that every governor took those dollars.”

12 — “It depends on what the money was. I haven’t looked at each piece of it ... I can tell you I have not supported the Obama stimulus plan. I think it was an enormous mistake.”

13 — “I can’t begin my day until I’ve read The Washington Post and Kim Kardashan’s tweets.”

14 — “President Barack Obama’s head would roll. It starts at the top.”

15 — “To be clear. I believe in evolution and trust scientists on global warming. Call me crazy.”

Testament

the film was made for less than $500,000.

“Christian is able to make very good movies for a very low budget,” Brough said. “It’s unbelievable what he does with the small amount of money that he spends.”

Vuissa said that he’s learned a fair number of secrets to cost-effective filmmaking over the years.

“Part of it is to have a small crew, and that’s not an easy thing,” he said.

Vuissa said that he used a much larger crew to make his first feature-length film (the LDS comedy “Baptists at Our Barbecue”) than he uses now, and credits his experience making short films with helping him learn how to use fewer filmmakers without sacrificing quality.

The filmmaking team also saved money on “Plates of Gold” by doing much of the actual shooting in existing locations that didn’t require a whole lot in the way of building or decorating sets. Most of the filming was split between historic Old Sturbridge Village in Massachusetts and This is the Place Heritage Park in Salt Lake City.

And while Vuissa signed up veteran character actors Geoff Hansen and Michael Flynn to play, respectively, Smith’s devoted father and resentfully supportive father-in-law, the production also saved money by using mostly local actors with small (and hence less-expensive) resumes.

Far from being a professional actor with a costly quote, Harding is a junior at Brigham Young University studying statistics. Lindsay Farr, who plays the key role of Smith’s wife, Emma, is also a BYU student, though currently serving an LDS Church proselytizing mission to Hong Kong.

A scene that depicts Joseph and Emma Smith in the new LDS film ‘Joseph Smith — Volume 1: Plates of Gold.’

Portrait of the Prophet as a Young Man

Another reason that “Plates of Gold” was comparatively cheap to produce is that it focuses on a more intimate period in Joseph Smith’s life, when the scope of his religious following was mostly his immediate family members and a handful of friends.

The film begins with Smith preparing to marry Emma and ends with the publication of the Book of Mormon and the formal establishment of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Vuissa said that he’s especially intrigued by this period because of the various pressures that were brought to bear on the still very young prophet-in-waiting.

Smith told family members and friends that he’d been commanded by an angel of God to translate an ancient record, but wasn’t certain when, or even, for a time, whether, he would actually receive it. Detractors offended by what they viewed as being Smith’s wild religious claims were an ongoing distraction, and not always one that could be brushed aside.

Emma’s father, Isaac Hale, supported the young couple financially by providing them a place to live, first beneath his own roof and later in a small farmhouse. But Hale was deeply and openly distrustful of Smith, who had married Emma against her father’s express desires, and scornful of Smith’s remaining devoted to his prophetic calling instead of focusing solely on providing a living for his young family.

Most moving for Vuissa was Smith’s eventual loss, after he had finally commenced his translation project, of the first 116 pages of his manuscript. After being badgered incessantly by Martin Harris, a friend and early supporter, Smith went against his better judgment and against what he had stated more than once were his divine instructions, and loaned Harris the pages to show to his wife, Lucy.

The story is prominent in LDS lore, but Vuissa said one thing not often remembered about it is its timing: Smith finally gave in to Harris just days after the stillbirth of his first child, a son.

“Even in our time, where childbirth is a pretty safe thing, it’s an emotionally overwhelming experience,” Vuissa said.

Making the film, Vuissa said, gave him a special empathy for Smith. The struggles of depicting Smith’s early adulthood on film were like a small reflection of the story the film tells, about Smith’s extended ordeal of obtaining, translating and publishing the Book of Mormon, which Smith said was an ancient scriptural record inscribed by early inhabitants of North and South America on plates of beaten gold.

“In my own tiny little way,” Vuissa said, “I was living Joseph’s story a little bit — trying to make something out of nothing.”

The film ends with the information that, since its publication, more than 150 million copies of the Book of Mormon have been printed, in more than 100 different languages. It’s clear that, for Vuissa, the best kind of success that could come from “Plates of Gold” would be to push those numbers just a little bit higher.

Oaks to Preside at Payson Temple Groundbreaking

BY CODY CLARK
Daily Herald

Elder Dallin H. Oaks, of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will preside at the groundbreaking for the new Payson Utah Temple.

The groundbreaking, a precursor to construction of the new temple, will be held 9 a.m. Oct. 8 at the 10-acre lot where the finished temple will stand, adjacent to the intersection of 930 West and 1550 South in Payson.

The Payson Utah Temple was announced Jan. 25, 2010. When completed, it will be the 15th operating temple in Utah and the third in Utah County. The 96,300-square-foot temple will serve about 78,000 church members in 22 stakes from Spanish Fork to Nephi, helping to ease the heavy use of the Provo Temple.

At the time that the new temple was announced,

President Thomas S. Monson said in a statement: “Temples answer those soul-searching questions of the purpose of life, of why we are here and where we are going. They are sanctuaries from the storms of life and bless the lives of members of the church who worship within their sacred walls.”

Cougar Football Goes Independent

DAILY HERALD

On Sept. 3, the Brigham Young University football team began its first season as an independent program with no athletic conference affiliation. Following are some of the significant mileposts on BYU's path to football independence:

1896: Brigham Young Academy, the precursor institution to BYU, fields a football team that plays a handful of seasons before being discontinued. BYA loses its first game against longtime rival the University of Utah 12-4 on April 6, but does put together a three-game win streak spanning 1896 and 1897. (The teams played each other five times those two years.)
1922: BYU football is born with Coach Alvin Twitchell leading the team in its first season in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference. The first game is a 41-3 loss to Utah State University on Oct. 7, with a 49-0 loss to the University of Utah the following week. In six total games, BYU is outscored by its opponents 183-10 and finishes 1-5, with the lone bright spot of the season being a 7-0 win over the University of Wyoming.

1925: Coach C.J. Hart leads BYU to its first non-losing season, finishing with three wins and three losses.
Oct. 15, 1926: BYU battles Utah State University to a 0-0 tie in its homecoming game, marking its first result against USU or the University of Utah that is not a loss.
Nov. 17, 1928: With Coach G. Ott Romney at the helm, BYU logs its first non-loss against the University of Utah, another 0-0 tie.
Oct. 18, 1929: In the midst of its first winning season (final record: 5-3), BYU beats USU for the first time, winning 7-6.
Oct. 10, 1942: After 20 years of futility, BYU, now in the Mountain States Conference and with first-year coach Floyd Millet at the helm, beats the University of Utah, 12-7, in Salt Lake City.

1964: BYU completes Cougar Stadium at the north end of campus. The new facility has seating for slightly fewer than 30,000 fans, nearly 25,000 more than the previous facility (also called Cougar Stadium).
1965: Despite having just a 6-4 record overall, BYU — now in the Western Athletic Conference and with second-year coach Tom Hudspeth steering the ship — closes out the season with wins against the University of Arizona (20-3) and the University of New Mexico (42-8), to clinch its first-ever conference championship.

1971: In Hudspeth's final year at the helm, BYU goes 5-6, finishes fourth in the WAC, and loses to both its in-state rivals, ending the season with a two-point loss (17-15) to the University of Utah in Provo.
1972: In his first season as head coach, LaVell Edwards guides BYU to a 7-4 finish, including a 16-7 victory over the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. The following year, BYU finishes 5-6, its only losing season out of 29 with Edwards at the helm.
Dec. 19, 1980: BYU caps its first-ever 12-win season with a dramatic comeback victory against Southern Methodist University in the Holiday Bowl. With his team down 42-25 with just four minutes remaining, BYU quarterback Jim McMahon leads an incredible 21-point comeback that ends with a Hail Mary touchdown pass to Clay Brown on the final play of the game. Final score: 46-45.
1982: A major expansion of Cougar Stadium bumps its seating capacity up to more than 65,000. The first game in the new stadium is a 39-38 loss to the Air Force Academy, the only home loss of the season.

1984: Edwards guides his team to the only undefeated season in BYU football history. Due to a number of factors, including a pristine 13-0 record, a dramatic win over the University of Michigan in the Holiday Bowl, and the absence of any other undefeated teams, BYU finishes the season as the first-place team in both major national polls, resulting in its first and only college football national championship.
Sept. 8, 1990: For the first time in school history, BYU beats the No. 1-ranked team in the nation, topping the University of Miami 28-21 in Provo.
Dec. 1, 1990: BYU quarterback Ty Detmer wins the Heisman Trophy, awarded annually by the Downtown Athletic Club to the best player in college football. Jan. 1, 1996: Playing in its first-ever New Year's Day bowl game, BYU defeats Kansas State University 19-15 in the Cotton Bowl. The game is BYU's 14th win of the '96 season, the highest single-season win total in school history. The team's only loss of the '96 season was in its third game, a 29-17 defeat at the hands of the University of Washington in Seattle.
Nov. 18, 2000: President Gordon B. Hinckley announces that Cougar Stadium will be renamed LaVell Edwards Stadium in honor of the legendary, soon-to-retire coach. In a meeting with players before Edwards's final home game, against the University of New Mexico, Hinckley urges victory, warning the team, "Don't muff it." The players respond with a 37-13 victory. Edwards expresses surprise at the stadium's new name, telling media members that the honor came much sooner than he would have expected: "I thought you had to be dead. During that game at Colorado State (a 45-21 loss the previous week), maybe they thought I was."

December 2001: After launching his tenure at BYU with an Edwards-ian 12 straight wins, new head coach Gary Crowton sees him team lose its final two games of the season, to the University of Hawaii (72-45) and the University of Louisville (28-10). It's all downhill from there, as Crowton follows up his big debut with three straight losing seasons.
2005: New head coach Bronco Mendenhall engineers a promising 6-6 bounce-back year marked by two narrow overtime losses and a close loss versus the University of California, Berkeley, in the Las Vegas Bowl.

Diamond Anniversary of Welfare Program Prompts Celebration Through Service

BY CODY CLARK
Daily Herald

What do you get an old friend who's turning 75? During General Conference in April, President Henry B. Eyring asked members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the church's welfare program by giving the gift of community service.

Eyring

The church developed an overall welfare plan in the heart of the Great Depression in 1936 to provide for those in need and help people who have fallen on hard times return to self-sufficiency. Today, bishops around the world use church welfare resources to provide food, clothing and other essentials to members and others coping with long-term or short-term poverty. In his April address, Eyring promised that members who accepted the invitation to serve would grow spiritually from the experience. "Whenever I am invited to be a giver," Eyring said, "I remember and believe the lyrics 'Sweet is the work, my God, my King.'" vide opportunities for all ward members to work side-by-side in the service of others. Almost all of the other details were left up to the creativity of ward leaders. There's still time to act for wards that have procrastinated, but plenty of congregations have already accepted the challenge and experienced some of its blessings. In Provo, members of the Lakeside 7th Ward and Lakeside 10th Ward teamed up with the congregation of Provo Community United Church of Christ to perform maintenance and renovation tasks at PCUCC's historic building on University Avenue. Mark Kirkwood, a member of the 7th Ward, said that the people in both wards got so excited about their project, spread out over two Saturdays in August, that they already have long-term plans in mind. "We're just terribly excited and look forward to probably a several-year commitment" of helping PCUCC to gradually overhaul its aging premises, Kirkwood said. Wards in every corner of the globe have been answering Eyring's challenge, and visitors to the 75 Years of Welfare website (lds.org/service/welfare-75th-anniversary?lang=eng) are urged to submit video footage and photos of their ward's service activity to provide inspiration for others. In Orem, members of the Lakeview 7th Ward made extensive preparations over several weeks for an Aug. 27 day of service at the Food & Care Coalition, which is now in the process of completing a brand-new facility to provide temporary housing to those in need. Nicia Whitaker, a Relief Society teacher in the Lakeview Ward, said that ward members, following one of Eyring's suggestions, used email and fliers to invite everyone — not just Latter-day Saints — who lives within their ward boundaries to participate. "We opened it up to everyone in our neighborhood," she said. The ward members and others purchased goods from lists provided by Food & Care (which has wedding-like gift registries at some local stores such as Bed Bath & Beyond), including bed linens and personal hygiene items, to go toward completing and furnishing the community coalition's new temporary housing building. Brent Crane, executive director of Food & Care, said there are many small needs to be met, and that the coalition, which has been assisted by many different faith groups, is deeply grateful to everyone who pitches in. The Lakeview Ward, Whitaker said, found jobs for people of all ages. Primary children decorated paper bags, then helped fill them, for sack lunches to be donated to the coalition. Men from the ward installed shelves and towel rods in the new housing building (which Crane said that Food & Care hopes to open by October). A crew of teenage boys served a meal to 100 Food & Care patrons (and cleaned up afterward), while a 9-year-old boy provided mealtime entertainment by telling jokes (one of several such diversions). "We had a 92-year-old woman make five home-made quilts," Whitaker said. "Three 12-year-old girls learned how to decorate cakes so we could take dessert." The ward prepared and donated 22 frozen casseroles and purchased and donated 38 sheet sets, 18 mattress pads and 39 towels. The list goes on, including everything from apartment kits (to help Food & Care patrons who are transitioning from temporary housing to an apartment) to handwritten notes. "It was a great opportunity to rub shoulders in a working environment," Whitaker said. "There was such a great spirit of unity." That's something that every ward can enjoy, including the ones that still need to rise to Eyring's challenge. There are still three months to get the job done.

Watch, Read, Listen: New LDS Releases

BY CODY CLARK
Daily Herald

There’s always something new in the realm of Latter-day Saint novels, films and music. Here’s a small sampler of some of the latest developments. Maybe some of these items will help to fill up the idle hours between, before and after general conference sessions.

Books

“A World Without Heroes” by Brandon Mull

Aladdin (Simon & Schuster), hardcover, 464 pages, $19.99; Online: brandon-mull.com

If you’ve been craving a Brandon Mull fix ever since the best-selling young adult fiction author wrapped up his epic, five-volume “Fablehaven” series, then prepare to be satiated.

Mull returns to the realm of contemporary fantasy with this story about young Jason Walker, whose life is booo-ring until the day that a close encounter with a hippopotamus at the zoo lands him in the magical realm of Lyrian.

The land is in thrall to an evil emperor, and people who once resisted his tyrannical rule have all accepted his bribes, or had their spirits broken. Jason might be just the person to shake things up, especially after he meets Rachel, a fellow stranger in a strange land.

The first book in Mull’s new “Beyonders” series got a 350,000-copy first printing from a national publisher, so someone is convinced that he’s written another winner.

“Vengeance” by Clair M. Poulson

Covenant Communications, paperback, 272 pages, $16.99; Online: www.clairmpoulson.com

After a nearly four-decade career in the criminal justice system, Utah author Clair M. Poulson changed over from catching crooks in real life to catching them on the pages of his popular novels.

Crime hits close to home in “Vengeance,” which begins with an 8-year-old girl on the witness stand — to give testimony against her father in a murder trial.

Ten years later, Dad is released from prison, and 18-year-old Aubree Lansing has little doubt that he’d like to meet and discuss their daddy-daughter day in court.

A cruise ship offers temporary refuge — as well as the possibility romance with the vessel’s handsome young skipper — but can Aubree run far enough to stay free of the clutches of cold-blooded Stone Lansing?

“Borrowed Light” by Carla Kelly

Bonneville Books (Cedar Fort), paperback, 408 pages, $8.99; Online: www.cedarfort.com

Watch your back, Anita Stansfield! Award-winning romance novelist Carla Kelly, author of numerous novels for national romance publishers, brings her clout to the LDS fiction market with her first novel for Springville-based Cedar Fort’s Bonneville Books imprint.

After backing out of an engagement to a returned missionary in Salt Lake City, Julia Darling answers an ad from a Wyoming rancher who needs someone to cook for him and his ranch hands. It seems like destiny is calling out to Julia, whose training at the Fannie Farmer Boston School of Cookery is ideally suited to this impulsive new direction. But is a ranch job in Gun Barrel, Wyo., a recipe for romance, or is Julia about to taste disappointment and drudgery?

Films

“17 Miracles”

Excel Entertainment, PG for thematic material involving hardships and suffering, $24.98; Online: www.17miracles.com

Hollywood films that don’t make money can vanish from theaters in as little as two weeks, as happened recently in Utah Valley to Disney’s big 3-D remake “Fright Night.”

So it’s no little feat — it’s almost miraculous, really — that “17 Miracles” pulled its tale of pioneer handcars and religious faith into first-run theaters in Utah on June 3, and then held its ground all the way into September.

“X-Men: First Class,” which opened the same weekend as “17 Miracles” made it a little more than a month before being dropped from first-run theaters. Rather than simply retell the familiar story of the ill-fated Willie and Martin companies of handcart pioneers, writer and director T.C. Christensen focuses on the seemingly miraculous incidents that befell them along the way.

“Mormon Messages”

Excel Entertainment, no MPAA rating, $9.98; Online: www.youtube.com/user/MormonMessages

If you fear technology and don’t use the Internet for anything but Facebook and email, then you may not know about the official LDS Church channel on YouTube, the leading Internet site for free streaming video.

Among the videos posted there since the church carved out a YouTube niche for itself in August 2008 are the many “Mormon Messages” clips.

Typically not more than five or six minutes in length, some of the “Mormon Messages” videos are short narrative films, some take a documentary approach and all are intended to teach and promote LDS values and doctrines.

Music

“Fount of Every Blessing” (Amy B. Hansen)

12 tracks, Covenant Communications, $15.99; Online: www.amybhansen.com

Pianist Amy B. Hansen is a valley girl — a Utah Valley girl, that is — turned professional pianist. After studying piano at Utah State University and Brigham Young University, Hansen now operates a private piano studio with more than 20 students.

On her first recording, she serves up one original composition and arrangements of 11 hymns that will be familiar to LDS listeners, including a few “Glee”-style mash-ups: Did you know that “A Poor Wayfaring Man of Grief” and “Sweet Hour of Prayer” go together like chocolate and peanut butter?

“American Day” (Joshua Creek)

12 tracks, Covenant Communications, $15.99; Online: www.joshuacreekmusic.com

The mellow “inspirational country” vibe of Joshua Creek has been flowing through the Utah music scene for a several years now. With its fourth studio album, the onetime duo has become a quartet, but it seems likely that songs like “Grandpa Was a Rock Star,” “The First Mechanic’s Church of Abilene,” “Bad Math” and “Don’t Wait for Perfect” will sound just right to longtime listeners.

Unify

hope for a positive outcome.

The compilation of “Daughters in My Kingdom” was first announced to the public during a general conference talk given by Julie B. Beck, the LDS Church’s general Relief Society president, in October 2010.

“Our presidency has prayed, fasted, pondered and counseled with prophets, seers and revelators to learn what God would have us do to help his daughters be strong in the face of ‘the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth,’” Beck said. “An answer has come that the sisters of the church should know and learn from the history of the Relief Society. Understanding the history of the Relief Society strengthens the foundational identity and worth of faithful women.”

In an effort to teach women worldwide about the history of the Relief Society, Susan W. Tanner, former general Young Women president, was assigned to write “Daughters in My Kingdom” under the direction of the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve. Although she doesn’t consider herself a writer or historian, Tanner said she drew on her testimony of the role of women in God’s plan as she prepared the book.

“This book is not necessarily meant to be a conclusive history; there are already historians who are doing that,” Tanner said. “The Relief Society presidency wanted a volume that would be accessible to the whole world, to sisters everywhere. I did have perspective on that, having seen sisters in so many circumstances and situations. The book needed to be something that every woman could read and understand and be invited into this work no matter where they are coming from.”

Women of Worth

According to Carlisle, “Daughters in My Kingdom” could not have come at a better time.

“We have been discussing as a Relief Society stake presidency our concern that women young and old are very confused about their roles in life,” Carlisle said. “The world gives us a view, but it is very limited. I am 51 and I have never seen a time when so many women are leaving families to go out and ‘find themselves.’ ‘Daughters in My Kingdom’ connects us to our past and tells us of our worth, our purpose and our natural tendency to be loving.”

“Daughters in My Kingdom” highlights the lives of faithful LDS women from Biblical times through to the current day. Susan Easton Black, who became Brigham Young University’s first female professor of religious education in 1980, has had a passion for church history since her childhood, when her grandmother started telling her bedtime stories of the early Mormon pioneers.

“‘Daughters in My Kingdom’ is filled with inspiring stories of Latter-day Saint women,” Black said. “These stories clearly show the spiritual legacy of women in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.”

Sharing the Society’s Purpose

As stated on the church’s website LDS.org, the influence of the book is meant to extend beyond Relief Society meetings. One of the ways Carlisle said she thinks that will happen is through sharing messages from the book with people who are not members of the LDS Church.

Carlisle has been an active member of the LDS Church her whole life, but she knows there are a lot of misconceptions about the church and the Relief Society organization. While she was living in Massachusetts with her husband, a man entered the church building she attended after seeing a sign on the door that listed a Relief Society at 11 a.m. The man walked inside and said he was looking for the Relief Society, because he needed relief.

“When you think of it, ‘Relief Society’ is a strange name for someone who knows nothing about it and reads it on a sign outside the church,” Carlisle said.

While living in Massachusetts, Carlisle had several neighbors who were shocked when she brought them meals during times when their families were struggling.

“People are amazed we have an organization that cares about others this way. The Relief Society is not just games and canning, it’s all about teaching us to be better and relieving burdens,” Carlisle said. “The Relief Society has helped me learn skills and compassion beyond myself — to be unselfish and think of others.”

“I think it is a refining organization. It is not just a Sunday class you go to. It is who we are — who we should be. I think it blesses the lives of everyone, not just members of the church, if it is functioning properly.

“It blesses communities. It helps people beyond our ward or church or our little finite circle of family and friends.”
