Road Crews Head Toward Finish Line

Workers hope to wrap work on Washington Street North by the end of October, though rain could hamper the work again.

Road crews are pushing ahead to the finish line of the Washington Street North project in Twin Falls. Crews last week were doing concrete work on sidewalks and curbs. This week, paving should start, but the rainy forecast could temporarily stall the project, said Nathan Jerke, a spokesman for the Idaho Transportation Department. Within the upcoming week or two, roadwork at the intersection of Washington and Falls Avenue will lead to partial road closures, Jerke said, adding that those details still need to be worked out. The roads won't be shut down entirely, he said. The goal from there is to have the roadway stripes put on the newly

MORE THAN 1 IN 10 PARENTS SKIP, DELAY KIDS' SHOTS

BY LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press

CHICAGO • By age 6, children should have vaccinations against 14 diseases, in at least two dozen separate doses, the U.S. government advises. More than 1 in 10 parents reject that, refusing some shots or delaying others mainly because of safety concerns, a national survey found. Worries about vaccine safety were common even among parents whose kids were fully vaccinated: 1 in 5 among that group said they think delaying shots is safer than the recommended schedule. The results suggest that more than 2 million infants and young children may not be fully protected against preventable diseases, including some that can be deadly or disabling.

Burley Woman Dies in Sunday Morning Crash

TIMES-NEWS

A Burley woman died on Sunday after her car was hit by another vehicle as she pulled out of a restaurant parking lot. Janet Kingsley, 74, succumbed to her injuries at Minidoka County Hospital after a two-vehicle collision on State Highway 24 near Heyburn. The crash, which occurred sometime between 9 and 10 a.m., happened as Kingsley attempted to leave the Wayside Café parking lot. Her 2005 Ford Taurus was hit by a 2006 Dodge pickup truck, driven by Trevor Stapelman, 34, of Burley. Kingsley's passenger, Betsy Wood, 63, of Blackfoot, was also taken to the hospital with life-threatening injuries. Stapelman, who was heading northeast toward Rupert, was not injured in the collision. Lanes of the highway were partially blocked for two-and-a-half hours while emergency personnel responded and crews cleared the wreckage.

GRADING THE LONG-TERM CARE SYSTEM

The AARP has ranked Idaho both a leader and a loser on its ability to support and provide care to the elderly.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesti@magicvalley.com

Some plan for natural disasters. The AARP is preparing for age. The AARP recently graded the nation's long-term care services, ranking Idaho as both a leader and a loser on its ability to support and provide care to the elderly. "This is an educational piece on a national and state level," said David Irwin, a spokesman for the AARP of Idaho. "It's going to help us prepare for the gray-haired tsunami that's coming in the near future." The public must have easy access to long-term care as more people begin to prepare their parents' and, eventually, their own long-term care arrangements, Irwin said. This is especially important for south-central Idaho residents because the region has seen the second-highest growth in senior citizens over the past 10 years, reports the College of Southern Idaho Office on Aging in Twin Falls. "We have a very large number of people entering into the long-term care system," Irwin said. "Now is a critical time to make sure the system is in tiptop shape. If not now, when?" The report showed that Idaho has a high turnover rate of employees who work in the long-term care industry. How quickly a facility goes through staff is a critical indicator of the facility's quality of care, Irwin said.

Please see ELDERLY, M2

How Idaho Scored

THE GOOD: Idaho is one of the top 10 states with the best choices for long-term providers. The state has a high number of home health and personal aides and numerous programs to assist in choosing a facility. THE BAD: Idaho received a mediocre score on its quality of care. The state has a high turnover rate in elderly staff and high avoidable hospital admissions. THE UGLY: The state ranks almost dead last on its access to long-term care services. While Idaho may have many options for elderly care, most people cannot decipher the system.

161-acre Land Transfer on T.F. Council Agenda

bbotkin@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls City Council will vote today on an agreement that would put 161 acres of federal public lands into city hands, furthering the expansion of Auger Falls Heritage Park. The pending transfer of U.S. Bureau of Land Management property would increase the park's size from 520 acres to 680 acres. It's a final step in work started several years ago by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson and U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo. The two members of Idaho's congressional delegation helped get legislation through the U.S. House and Senate needed for the land transfer. The park has about 3.3 miles of Snake River frontage. The council meets at 5 p.m. today in council chambers, 305 Third Ave. West, Twin Falls. In other business, the council will: • Hear a presentation from Jim O'Donnell, air show chairman, about the planning of the Air Magic Valley Air Show. Featuring the Blue Angels, the show is scheduled for July 28-29, 2012. • Consider an ordinance to annex 35 acres at the southeast corner of Pole Line Road and Washington Street North.

TWO DIE IN TRUCKING ACCIDENT IN CASSIA CO.

TIMES-NEWS

Two people died on Saturday as the result of a trucking accident in Cassia County.

Cynthia McVey, 33, of Burley, and John Tolman Sr.,

68, of Heyburn, sustained fatal injuries, but the Cassia County Sheriff's Office has not provided specifics on when, where or how the accident happened. A call to Sheriff Randy Kidd was not returned on Sunday.

Vaccinations

The nationally representative online survey of roughly 750 parents of kids age 6 and younger was done last year and results were released online Monday in the journal Pediatrics. They are in line with a larger federal survey released last month, showing that at least 1 in 10 toddlers and preschoolers lagged on vaccines that included chickenpox and the measles-mumps-rubella combination shots. That survey, also for 2010, included more than 17,000 households.

The Pediatrics survey follows other recent news raising concerns among infectious disease specialists, including a study showing the whooping cough vaccine seems to lose much of its effectiveness after just three years — faster than doctors have thought — perhaps contributing to recent major outbreaks, most notably in California. Also, data reported in September show that a record number of kindergartners' parents in California last year used a personal belief exemption to avoid vaccination requirements.

Kandace O'Neill is a Lakeville, Minn., mom whose views are shared by many parents who don't follow federal vaccine advice. Her 5-year-old son has had no vaccinations since he turned 1, and her 7-month-old daughter has received none of the recommended shots.

"I have to make sure that my child is healthy, and I do not want to put medications in my child that I think are going to harm them," said O'Neill, who was not involved in the survey appearing in Pediatrics.

O'Neill said she's not an extreme anti-vaccine zealot.

She just thinks that parents — not doctors or schools — should make medical decisions for their children.

Study author Dr. Amanda Dempsey, a pediatrician and researcher at the University of Michigan, said vaccine skepticism is fueled by erroneous information online and media reports that sensationalize misconceptions. These include the persistent belief among some parents about an autism-vaccine link despite scientific evidence to the contrary and the debunking of one of the most publicized studies that first fueled vaccine fears years ago.

Some parents also dismiss the severity of vaccine-preventable diseases because they've never seen a child seriously ill with those illnesses.

But vaccine-preventable diseases including flu and whooping cough can be deadly, especially in infants, said Dr. Buddy Creech, associate director of Vanderbilt University's Vaccine Research Program. Creech has two school-aged children who are fully vaccinated and a newborn he said will be given all the recommended vaccinations.

"From being someone in the trenches seeing children die every year from influenza and its complications... I would not do a single thing to risk the health of my kids," he said. Creech has served on advisory boards for vaccine makers and has accepted their research money.

Dempsey, the survey's lead author, has been a paid adviser to Merck on issues regarding a vaccine for older children but said that company made no contributions to the survey research.

Knowledge Networks conducted the survey, which had an error margin of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

TRIPLE A: ACADEMIC, ATHLETIC AND ARTISTIC STUDENTS OF THE WEEK

Artist Hali Moore

Hali Moore is an incredibly artistic individual. She is a senior at Valley High School, who combines talent with an excellent work ethic.

Athlete Kylee Denney

Kylee Denney is an outstanding senior athlete at Canyon Ridge High School. She maintains a 4.0 GPA while participating in volleyball, basketball and track. Kylee has already lettered in track as a freshman, sophomore and junior. She has lettered in volleyball and basketball as a junior. Principal Brady Dickinson says "Kylee is a model student athlete. She works hard in classroom and on the playing surface."

Academic Kaylee Kostka

Kaylee, a senior at Minico High School, maintains a 4.0 GPA while holding the positions of editor-in-chief of the school newspaper, Young Republicans and Key Club President, and varsity volleyball and softball player. Kaylee is an Idaho Science and Aerospace Scholar and was selected to attend the ISAS Summer Academy held at BSU and Ames Research Center in CA. She would like to attend the Air Force Academy next fall and major in Aeronautical Engineering.

paved surface by Oct. 15. That process moves along quickly, requiring only short-term lane closures, Jerke said.

At a Glance Magic Valley Roadwork

The Washington Street work is only one of several pending road projects. Here's where other ongoing construction stands.

IN TWIN FALLS:
Hankins Road • Hankins will be closed to one lane slightly north and south of its intersection with Kimberly Road on Tuesday through the end of this week. The closure is for a $2 million urban renewal project to install a 24-inch water pipe for increased capacity in Twin Falls.

Eastland Drive • There's roadwork along Eastland Drive from Addison to

"It's the most visible thing, and it really gives people the feeling that this road is going to be open soon," Jerke said.

After mid-October, there should still be a couple weeks of work left. Crews will still need to put the finishing touches on the medians on the street, which have landscaping and automatic sprinklers.

That work will require lane reductions for safety and parking equipment, Jerke said.

"Everything should be completed by the end of October," he said.

Hillcrest Drive, where concrete will be poured. Unlike asphalt, the concrete takes at least a week — sometimes longer — to cure and become ready for vehicles, said Troy Vitek, assistant city engineer. The road's still open to southbound traffic, but large vehicles with heavy loads are encouraged to take alternate routes.

ELSEWHERE:
Junction of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84 • Drivers on both roads need to be prepared for shifting traffic patterns because of nearby work on the highways. There will be paving on about one mile of eastbound I-84 near the U.S. Highway 93 overpass and the eastbound ramps at exit 173, ITD said.

The traffic along eastbound I-84 will be reduced to one lane during paving, which is planned for Tuesday through Friday. Alternate routes are recommended, as there will be delays.

Cassia County • Crews are finishing an overlay project and putting rumble strips and stripes along Interstate 84 south from its intersection with Interstate 86 to the Cotterell Rest Area. Traffic will be reduced to one lane in either direction this week.

A separate paving project is along Interstate 84 between Sweetzer Summit and the Juniper Rest Area near the Utah border. Traffic is reduced to one lane for either direction and it should be done in about two weeks.

Elderly

Ramona Farmsworth, owner of two assisted-living facilities in Twin Falls, considers herself lucky when it comes to her staff retention.

"My staff sticks with me," she said. "Some of my employees have been with me nine to 10 years but I know that's not the same for every facility."

Diane Holley, owner of Creekside Residential Care Center in Jerome, says she experiences high turnover in her younger staff members who are still in school.

Holley hires 26 staffers to run her facility. She says her older employees tend to work for her for several years, but about a quarter of her staff tends to leave on a regular basis.

"Once they are out of school, they quit and move or go on to do more school outside this area," she said.

While Idaho ranked high on its multiple care programs, it ranked as one of the lowest on accessibility.

"The availability of support to help consumers navigate the system is incredibly low," Irwin said. "That's a big red flag. We're going to work with state legislators to push for better access."

Idaho Growers Increase Corn Acreage in 2011

BOISE (AP) • Idaho growers set a record for the number of acres devoted to corn in 2011, according to national agricultural figures.

Across the state, farmers planted an estimated 390,000 acres of corn, a 21.8 percent increase compared to 2010 and enough to enable corn acreage to surpass potatoes, the state's signature crop, according to figures released by the National Agricultural Statistics Service.

Producers and farm officials say the increase was fueled by higher commodity prices and a boost in demand for corn silage from dairy producers.

Caldwell-area farmer Sid Freeman said he increased his corn production by 20 percent this year. One factor was crop rotation strategies, but Freeman says it the economy also drove his decision.

"It so happens that the markets are pretty decent right now," Freeman told the Idaho Business Review last week.

Freeman said his profit margin on corn has increased about 5 percent this year.

The bulk of the corn harvested in the state this year will be used for silage, a key component of animal feed and chopped in a pre-grain form. Most of the silage will be directed to dairy operations, said Vince Matthews, NASS field office director. Idaho milk production was up 3.9 percent in August compared to the same month a year ago.

Corn harvested simply for grain is used for ethanol production. Idaho's corn harvest of corn for ethanol production was 130,000 acres this year, up from 110,000 a year ago, according to NASS.

Farm experts predict corn production in the state will continue to grow, thanks to demand and development of seeds better suited to the climate.

Idaho Farm Bureau Spokesman John Thompson says companies are introducing seeds that perform well in Idaho's Upper Snake River valley, which offers growers a shorter season. Growing silage corn in this region of the state was simply not feasible a decade ago.

"It doesn't take nearly as much babysitting as potatoes, sugar beets or alfalfa, for example," Thompson said. "And it's good to have another crop in the rotation — good for the soil!"

The rise of corn is not perceived as a threat to those in Idaho's potato world.

"It's not how many acres, but how many we harvest and what we can sell them for," said Frank Muir, president and CEO of the Idaho Potato Commission.

N. IDAHO COUNTY COMMISSIONER EYES SMOKING BAN

SANDPOINT (AP) • A northern Idaho county commissioner on a campaign to promote healthy lifestyles says he wants to limit public employee hires to non-smokers.

Bonner County Commissioner Mike Nielsen says current employees wouldn't have to adhere to the ban, but new applicants would only be considered for jobs in local government if they refrain from tobacco products on and off the job, under the proposal.

The Bonner County Daily Beereports Nielsen's plan to offer public employees a 5 percent discount on their health insurance premiums — if they can pass a wellness screening — took effect on Saturday.

But he's still trying to convince the two other county commissioners to back him on the smoking ban.

Critics contend it's an overreach, while Nielsen claims it will cut health care costs.

State to Raise E. Coli Levels for Big Wood River

KETCHUM (AP) • State environmental officials say they are planning to increase the amount of allowable E. coli bacteria in central Idaho's Big Wood River basin.

Idaho Department of Environmental Quality official Marti Bridges says the adjustment will be made to correct a previous error in calculating discharge standards.

The Idaho Mountain Express reports the change will have little impact on the region's water quality.

The new allowable amounts of E. coli bacteria are based on capacities of wastewater treatment plants in Hailey, Ketchum and a local mobile home park.

Bridges says the plants were designed to handle growth, and were not operating at capacity when calculations were made in developing E. coli discharge standards at the plants.

The agency is taking public comments on the proposed changes through Oct. 21.

Dental Insurer to Reduce Idaho Reimbursement Rates

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's largest dental insurer has announced plans to reduce payments to dentists by 4 percent to 13 percent beginning next month.

Delta Dental of Idaho spokeswoman Kym Browning said the fee cuts are a response to concerns by employers about the rising costs of employee benefits.

"By making changes to our dentist fee structure, we can help ensure employers (keep) offering ... dental benefits for their employees," Browning said.

The rate cuts affect dentists that are members of Delta Dental's preferred provider organization.

The Idaho State Dental Association asked Delta to delay the cuts until January 2010 so dentists could decide if they wanted to remain part of the company's preferred provider organization, said ISDA executive director Tami Chafin. The company denied the request.

"We all understand the need to share the pain, but there needs to be balance," said Gregory Bengston, president of the ISDA.

"This is a huge hit to what we are, after all, very small businesses.

Jerome dentist Don Wyatt says he believes he will have to change his rates.

"In the past, Delta Dental has been a great partner with dentists," Wyatt said. "This is a little out of the blue. I've never seen this before."

Idaho is the second state in which Delta Dental has cut its reimbursement rates. In April, Washington Dental Service — a member of the Delta Dental Plans Association — announced it would reduce its reimbursement rates by up to 15 percent.

Delta Dental received about $39.5 million in Idaho premiums in 2009, according to the Idaho Department of Insurance, making a net income of $890,675.

Fires in Elmore County Consume 30K Acres

TIMES-NEWS

The Bureau of Land Management reported on Sunday that more than 30,000 acres have burned in three separate fires near Glenns Ferry in Elmore County.

The Grindstone Fire has burned 21,619 acres on the U.S. Air Force's Saylor Training Range, and containment occurred at approximately 6 p.m. on Sunday. Control of the fire is expected today in the early evening hours. BLM fire crews responded with seven engines, two dozers, three water tenders and one helicopter. A second fire, named the Hot Springs Fire, consumed 10,400 acres and was reported as contained mid-day on Sunday. Control is expected sometime tonight.

The smallest of the fires, the Walker Fire, scorched 238 acres approximately five miles northwest of Glenns Ferry through Sunday. The Walker Fire started sometime on Saturday and was reported as controlled around 6 p.m. on Sunday. Containment of the fire occurred in the early afternoon hours. Lightning is suspected of starting the blaze.

Strong winds over the weekend complicated firefighters' efforts until Sunday, when cooler temperatures and calmer winds prevailed.

OPTIMISTS SELL APPLES FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING PROGRAM

Calif. Gov. Signs Bill to Prevent Circumcision Bans

California's governor has signed a bill that that will prevent local govern-ments from banning male circumci-sion. Gov. Jerry Brown's office an-nounced Sunday that the Democrat signed AB768, a bill written in re-sponse to a ballot measure proposed in San Francisco. Backers of a ban collected more than 7,700 signatures to put a measure on the November ballot in San Francisco to outlaw the circumcision of most male children. It was later blocked by a judge.

Hurricane Ophelia Picks Up Speed as It Heads North

Forecasters say Hurricane Ophelia is expected to pass near or over New-foundland, Canada, by early Mon-day. The National Hurricane Center in Miami said Sunday that Ophelia was a Category 2 storm with top sus-tained winds of about 100 mph. The storm was moving north-northeast at 33 mph. Ophelia was centered about 485 miles southwest of Cape Race, Newfoundland, and a tropical storm watch was in effect for New-foundland's Avalon Peninsula.

CANDIDATE CHRISTIE COULD UPEND GOP RACE

BY KASIE HUNT
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. • New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie's entry in-to the 2012 presi-dential race could dramatically re-shape what has be-come a two-man race between Mitt Romney and Rick Perry. But Christie, who's under pressure from party eld-ers to run, hasn't faced national scrutiny — and he could join other early favorites who burned out fast.

Christie

The budget-cutting Christie is the latest heartthrob of Republicans who have been looking for a more exciting candidate than Romney. The former Massachusetts governor ran in 2008 and has long been considered the one to beat in the GOP, which has a history of nominating candidates who lost once before.

Indiana Gov. Mitch Daniels, a fa-vorite of fiscal conservatives, decided not to run. So did Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour, long a part of the GOP establishment.

Perry, the Texas governor, jumped in to much fanfare only to sweat under the scrutiny his first national cam-paign brought. Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann rallied restive conservatives long enough to win a key test vote in Iowa but just as quick-ly receded to the background.

Christie said in January he wasn't "arrogant enough" to run for presi-dent in 2012. Now he is reconsidering in light of encouragement from GOP luminaries like Henry Kissinger, Nan-cy Reagan and Barbara Bush.

If he runs, Christie probably would be able to raise millions for a cam-paign, though his rivals have a huge head start. With about 100 days before the caucuses in Iowa, he'd face the tough task of setting up state cam-paign organizations swiftly, though he already has a team of advisers with na-tional campaign experience. As a Re-publican governor of a Democratic mid-Atlantic state, he could appeal to

An Occupy Wall Street protestor rests Sunday in Zucotti park the morning after police arrested over 700 marchers on the Brooklyn Bridge for blocking traffic and disorderly conduct, Sunday in New York. Protestors have occupied the financial district park for three weeks in opposition of corporate greed.

Wall Street Protesters: We're In for the Long Haul

BY VERENA DOBNIK
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The protesters who have been camping out in Manhattan's Financial District for more than two weeks eat donated food and keep their laptops running with a portable gas-powered generator. They have a newspaper — the Occupied Wall Street Journal — and a makeshift hospital.

They lack a clear objective, though they speak against corporate greed, social inequality, global climate change and other concerns. But they're growing in numbers, getting more organized and show no sign of quitting.

City officials "thought we were going to leave and we haven't left," 19-year-old pro-tester Kira Moyer-Sims said. "We're going to stay as long as we can."

Saturday's arrests of more than 700 protesters who tried to cross the Brooklyn Bridge appeared to do little to dampen enthusiasm Sunday.

The Occupy Wall Street demonstration started out last month with less than a dozen college students spending days and nights in Zuccotti Park, a private plaza off Broadway. It has grown sizably, however, both in New York City and elsewhere as people across the coun-try, from Boston to Los Angeles, display their solidarity in similar protests.

Moyer-Sims, of Portland, Ore., said the group has grown much more organized. "We have a protocol for most things," she said, in-cluding getting legal help for people who are arrested.

The protest has drawn protesters of diverse ages and occupations, including Jackie Fellner, a marketing manager from Westchester Coun-ty.

"We're not here to take down Wall Street. It's not poor against rich. It's about big money dictating which politicians get elected and what programs get funded," she said.

On Sunday, a group of New York public school teachers sat in the plaza, including Denise Martinez of Brooklyn. She most stu-dents at her school live at or below the poverty level, and her classes are jammed with up to about 50 students.

"These are America's future workers, and what's trickling down to them are the prob-lems — the unemployment, the crime," she said. She blamed Wall Street for causing the country's financial problems and said it need-ed to do more to solve them.

Police officers have been a regular sight at the plaza, but NYPD spokesman Paul Browne said the protest has not led the department to assign additional officers to the area. The de-partment won't change its approach to han-dling the protest and will continue regular pa-trols and monitoring, he said.

"As always, if it is a lawful demonstration, we help facilitate and if they break the law we arrest them," Browne said.

FILIPINOS STILL TRAPPED ON ROOFS; TYPHOONS KILL 59

BY JIM GOMEZ
Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines • Rescuers scrambled Sunday to deliver food and water to hundreds of villagers stuck on rooftops for days because of flooding in the northern Philip-pines, where back-to-back ty-phoons have left at least 59 people dead.

Typhoon Nalgae slammed ashore in northeastern Isabela province Satur-day, then barreled across the main is-land of Luzon's mountainous north and agricultural plains, which were still sodden from fierce rain and winds unleashed by a howler just days ear-lier. Nalgae left at least three people dead Saturday. Typhoon Nesat killed 56 others and left 28 missing in the same region before blowing out Fri-day.

Nalgae was whirling over the South China Sea and heading toward south-ern China late Sunday afternoon, 230 miles from the Philippines' northeast

Residents evacuate to safer grounds as massive flooding continues for the second day Saturday at Calumpit township, Bulacan province north of Manila, Philippines. Typhoon Nalgae, the second typhoon in a week to hit the rain-soaked northern Philippines, added misery to thousands of people, some of whom are still perched on rooftops while several other Asian nations also reeled from flooding.

Long Road from Farm to Fork Worsens Food Outbreaks

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Outbreaks of listeria and other seri-ous illnesses linked to tainted food are becoming more common, partly because much of what we eat takes a long and winding road from farm to fork.

A cantaloupe grown on a Colorado field may make four or five stops before it reaches the dinner table. There's the packing house where it's cleaned and pack-aged, then the distributor. A processor may cut or bag the fruit. The retail distribution center is where the mel-ons are sent out to various stores. Finally it's stacked on display at the grocery store.

Imported fruits and vegetables have an even longer journey.

The Colorado cantaloupe crop that's linked to 84 ill-nesses and as many as 17 deaths in 19 states has traveled so far and wide that producer Jensen Farms doesn't even know exactly where their fruit ended up.

The company said last week that it can't provide a list of retailers that sold the tainted fruit because the mel-ons were sold and resold. It named the 28 states where the fruit was shipped, but people in other states have re-ported getting sick.

"The food chain is very complex," says Sherri McGar-ry, a senior adviser in the Food and Drug Administra-tion's Office of Foods. "There are many steps, and the more steps there are the harder it can be to link up each step to identify what the common source" of an out-break is.

the donors and voters who like Romney's business background but are looking for a more charismatic candidate.

If he does run, Christie would push a long list of second-tier candidates even further to the back of the pack. Still, some positions he's taken as New Jersey governor could run afoul of conservatives who make up the GOP base.

He would also face a national spotlight that's much harsher than those on the state or local stage.

"The swimming pool looks a lot better until you jump right in. The water may not be quite as warm as you think," Sen. John McCain, the Republican nominee in 2008, warned Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"The best thing to be is a potential candidate," said Rich Galen, a longtime Republican strategist. "I don't think anybody can stand up to that scrutiny without laying the groundwork for a long time before. ... His positions, whatever he's done as a prosecutor, any case he's ever tried, any opinion he's ever gotten out of a judge, everything — it's all going to go under scrutiny that we've seen time after time is enormously more difficult to deal with as a presidential candidate."

Just ask Perry. Two months ago, Republicans were pushing him to run. He shot to the top of national polls after his announcement in mid-August. He was lauded as the kind of candidate who could energize a passionate base and

"The swimming pool looks a lot better until you jump right in. The water may not be quite as warm as you think."

Sen. John McCain, the Republican nominee in 2008

lure business conservatives.

A few shaky debate performances and many attacks from Romney later, Perry has already begun to fade. His weaknesses were on stark display this weekend in New Hampshire, where he held a series of town hall meetings and was asked over and over again about a bill he signed that allows illegal immigrants to receive in-state tuition at Texas universities.

Other questioners wanted to know how he would help senior citizens after he called Social Security a "Ponzi scheme." Romney signs and mocking campaign literature greeted him at almost every stop.

Perry aides point to the fact that he has been running for about six weeks, while Romney has been preparing his second presidential bid since the first one ended. But they acknowledge that starting later has made Perry's path more difficult — and while they insist immigration and Social Security are much less important issues than the economy and jobs, they also say Christie could face similar problems.

"I don't actually know where (Christie) is on abortion and guns and things like that, but there may be people on the conservative side who have problems with that," said David Carney, Perry's top strategist. "The scrutiny that will come on his ideological and fiscal policies and social policies will be magnified greatly because of the short time period."

Christie favors some restrictions on gun rights, as well as civil unions for gay couples. He now opposes abortion, but described himself as "pro-choice" at the beginning of his political career.

All of that will provide plenty of fodder for Romney, whose carefully built, long-running campaign has moved steadily through repeated rounds of doubt and speculation about other candidates. In some cases, he has tweaked his message — downplaying his time as governor to paint Perry as a career politician, for example — but made no major course corrections. While Christie's similar profile threatens Romney more directly, there's no indication Romney plans to make a major shift if Christie jumps in.

"The Romney campaign has been built to withstand all elements and endure every candidate scenario," said Kevin Madden, a senior Romney aide in 2008 who now serves as an informal adviser. "The last nine months have seen a series of 'insert name here' candidates, but the campaign has focused relentlessly on the economic message and making the case that Gov. Romney is the best candidate to beat President Obama, and will continue to do so."

And a Christie entry could end up actually helping Romney.

"Everyone will aim at the perceived frontrunner," said Galen, the Republican strategist. "It helps Romney because it will keep the pressure off of him for the next three to four weeks, and depending what happens with the calendar, Romney just has to gather himself and sprint to the finish."

As early as this week, Christie could announce whether he will run and reverse himself after more than a year of ruling out a candidacy. Changes in the primary calendar have left him with much less time to put together a campaign. Christie would have scarcely three months to set up a campaign for the Iowa caucuses, which appear likely to happen in early January. New Hampshire's primary would come soon after.

So far, there's scant evidence that Christie has begun to organize campaigns in the early states. He has some foothold in Iowa, where he campaigned for Republican Gov. Terry Branstad and hosted a fundraiser with Republican Rep. Steve King. A delegation of Iowa donors traveled to New Jersey earlier this year to urge Christie to run.

But top operatives there say they haven't yet heard from Christie's team, and the story is much the same in New Hampshire.

"Gov. Christie would make a compelling candidate for president, but there is no evidence whatsoever that he has reached out to top Republican officials and opinion leaders," said Mike Dennehy, a top New Hampshire Republican strategist who was McCain's political director in 2008.

Members of the Occupy Wall Street media organization produced bails of newspapers chronicling the past three weeks of protests under the title 'The Occupied Wall Street Journal,' Sunday in New York.

Protest

The Fire Department said it had gone to the site several times over the past week to check for any fire safety hazards arising from people living in the plaza, but there have been no major issues.

The protesters have spent most of their time in the plaza, sleeping on air mattresses, holding assemblies to discuss their goals and listening to speakers including filmmaker Michael Moore and Princeton University professor Cornel West.

On the past two Saturdays, though, they marched to other parts of the city, which led to tense standoffs with police. On Sept. 24, about 100 people were arrested and the group put out video which showed some women being hit with pepper spray by a police official. On Oct. 1, more than 700 people were arrested as the group attempted to cross the Brooklyn Bridge.

Some of the protesters said they were lured onto the roadway by police, or they didn't hear the calls from authorities to head to the pedestrian walkway. Police said no one was tricked into being arrested, and that those in the back of the group who couldn't hear were allowed to leave.

The NYPD on Sunday released video footage to back up its stance. In one of the videos, an official uses a bullhorn to warn the crowd. Marchers can be seen chanting, "Take the bridge."

Browne said that of the most recent arrests, the vast majority had been released. Eight people were still being held Sunday, three because of outstanding warrants and five others who refused to show any identification.

Gatherings elsewhere included one in Providence, R.I., that attracted about 60 people to a public park. The participants called it a "planning meeting" and initially debated whether to allow reporters to cover it.

In Boston, protesters set up an encampment across the street from the Federal Reserve Building.

coast, with sustained winds of 75 miles per hour and gusts of 93 mph, according to the Philippine government weather agency.

China's National Meteorological Center urged people in areas expected to be lashed by rainstorms in the next three days, including on southernmost Hainan island and in eastern Taiwan, to stay indoors and cancel large assemblies, China's official Xinhua News Agency reported Sunday.

Nalgae's ferocious winds set off a rock slide in the northern mountain province of Bontoc in the Philippines on Saturday, causing boulders to roll down a mountainside and smash a passing van, where a passenger was pinned to death and another was injured, police said.

In northern Tarlac province's Camiling town, a man sought safety with his two young nephews as flooding rose in their village Saturday. But one of the children was swept away by rampaging waters and drowned, while his uncle and his brother remained missing. A drunken man drowned in flooding in a nearby village, provincial disaster officer Marvin Guiang said.

Nalgae roared through parts of Luzon that had been saturated by Typhoon Nesat, which trapped thousands on rooftops and sent huge waves that breached a seawall in Manila Bay. Nesat then pummeled southern China and was downgraded to a tropical storm just before churning into northern Vietnam on Friday, where 20,000 people were evacuated.

Seven towns north of Manila were still flooded Sunday, including Calumpit in rice-growing Bulacan province, where hundreds of residents remained trapped on rooftops in four villages for the fourth day, many desperately waving for help. Rescuers aboard rubber boats could not reach them because of narrow alleys. Two air force helicopters were ordered deployed to drop water and food packs to the marooned villagers, officials said.

Calumpit Mayor James de Jesus said floodwaters were receding later Sunday, sparking hope the crisis would end sooner. Local leaders have been asked to help distribute relief supplies to residents in areas in the four villages that could now be accessed, he said.

"It's still critical. There are still houses which could not be reached," de Jesus told DZBB radio.

Roger Kennedy, Former National Park Service Director, Dies at 85

BY JULIE CART

Los Angeles Times

One day deep in the administration of George W. Bush — a time of tumult among environmentalists and conservationists — Roger Kennedy shook his head and sighed. The Endangered Species Act was in the cross hairs of a Republican Congress and his beloved National Park Service, which Kennedy directed from 1993 to 1997, was under assault.

Kennedy was disgusted by the partisan bickering. When had stewardship of the environment become a political football? he said to a reporter. Don't they know that much of the landmark environmental legislation was passed when a Republican, Richard Nixon, was in the White House?

"In those days there was more civility; members of Congress may have disagreed, but they went out to dinner together," Kennedy said. "One guy would come up with the beginnings of the Clean Water Act or the Clean Air Act and go to another senator and say: 'We need to pass this. It's the right thing to do.' And they would pass it, and Nixon would sign it. Different times."

Kennedy often invoked the spirit of bipartisanship in his various roles as passionate defender of all things American — its history, its landscapes and its diverse population.

Kennedy, 85, died of melanoma Friday at his home in Rockville, Md.

"Roger Kennedy was a Renaissance man," said National Park Service Director Jonathan Jarvis.

He was a Washington correspondent and covered the Supreme Court for NBC, and wrote and presented documentaries for PBS as well as two television series for the Discovery Channel. Kennedy also was a bank chairman, failed political candidate, vice president of the University of Minnesota and an executive with the Ford Foundation.

He served six different presidencies, and in the 1950s was a special assistant to the U.S. attorney general, the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and the secretary of Labor. He wrote more than a dozen books.

Kennedy was a genial man, a keen storyteller and a valuable asset for reporters seeking thoughts on an array of topics. His unfailing courtesy and impeccable manners tempered a lifelong knack for starting trouble and cutting against the grain.

It was as director of the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History that Kennedy left an indelible mark. He began his 13-year tenure in 1979 and sought to cast open the doors on the stuffy, traditional institution often referred to as "America's attic."

Salads Are Nice, but Burgers Are What Really Sell Well

BY CHRISTINA REXRODE

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Americans talk skinny but eat fat.

No matter that First Lady Michelle Obama has been on a crusade for a year and a half to slim down the country. Never mind that some restaurants have started listing calories on their menus. Forget even that we keep saying we want to eat healthy. When Americans eat out, we order burgers and fries anyway.

"If I wanted something healthy, I would not even stop in at McDonald's," says Jonathan Ryfiak, 24, a New York trapeze instructor who watches his diet at home but orders comfort foods like chicken nuggets and fries when he hits a fast-food joint.

In a country where more than two-thirds of the population is overweight or obese, food choices are often made on impulse, not intellect. So, while 47 percent of Americans say they'd like restaurants to offer healthier items like salads and baked potatoes, only 23 percent tend to order those foods, according to a survey last year by food research firm Technomic.

That explains the popularity of KFC's Double Down, a sandwich of bacon and cheese slapped between two slabs of fried chicken. It's the reason IHOP offers a Simple & Fit menu with yogurt and fruit bowls, but its top seller remains a 1,180-calorie breakfast sampler of eggs, bacon, sausage, ham, hash browns and pancakes. It's also why only 11 percent of parents ordered apple slices as an alternative to fries in McDonald's Happy Meals.

The mixed message hasn't stopped many restaurants from offering healthier fare. After all, the government has stepped up its oversight — and influence — over the industry that it blames for America's expanding waistline. National rules about putting calorie information on menus are expected to take effect next year and Mrs. Obama touts restaurants and companies that slash calories in foods.

But revamping a menu can be difficult and expensive, requiring months or even years. It took Dunkin' Donuts four years to figure out how to make its doughnuts without trans fat — which doctors say is one of the unhealthiest types of fat — without altering the taste. And efforts to curb unhealthy eating aren't always fruitful. In 2009, a year after New York made chains start listing calories on menus, only 15 percent of diners ordered lower-calorie foods, according to a study in the British Medical Journal.

Most restaurants won't share specifics about how their salads and veggie omelets compete when they're up against burgers and crepes. But the healthy stuff appears to be only a small proportion of revenue at most chains.

The IHOP pancake house, owned by DineEquity Inc., says that Simple & Fit sales have roughly doubled in the year since the menu was introduced. But it still makes up only a single-digit percentage of revenue.

The Cheesecake Factory, which introduced a "Skinnylicious" menu in August featuring entrees with 590 calories or less, says those foods have also performed well. But sales of its decadent cheesecakes are up too. "We recognize that 'cheesecake' is in our name," said Alethea Rowe, senior director of restaurant marketing.

There's a host of reasons for the disparity between word and deed. Sometimes people who eat healthy at home want to treat themselves when they go out. Others doubt that the so-called healthier items on fast-food menus are really healthy. Even peer pressure can play a role.

Jason Sierra, who was eating a Whopper hamburger and fries at a Burger King in New York recently, said he's cut back on unhealthy foods because his cholesterol and blood pressure were getting too high. But when his office buddies order lunch, he opts for "man food" like pizza to fit in.

"One day I did try to order a salad," said Sierra, 40, who works in tech support. "And I caught hell for that."

Healthier foods also are usually among the most expensive menu items, which can be tough for recession-weary customers to stomach. Efrain Vasquez and his wife, Evelyn, were recently eating fried chicken and gravy-drenched mashed potatoes at a KFC in New York. They say there's a big difference between a $2 burger and a $6 salad when you're on a tight budget.

"We've got bills to pay," said Efrain Vasquez, 51, a maintenance worker who's raising four kids with Evelyn, a 37-year-old receptionist. "We try to economize."

Like so many American dieters, fast-food restaurants have tried and failed to go healthy. The Wendy's Co. burger chain led the way in the mid-1980s with a short-lived effort to sell tomato halves filled with cottage cheese and pineapple chunks on lettuce leaves.

"Consumers weren't ready for it," said Denny Lynch, a spokesman for Wendy's, where burgers and chicken are the biggest sellers. "Or at least they certainly didn't buy it."

In 2003, during the low-carb Atkins diet craze, Domino's Pizza Inc. couldn't get people to bite on a low-carb pizza it tested in Indianapolis. "While many people at the time made their voice heard that they wanted it, few people actually ordered it," said Chris Brandon, Domino's spokesman.

McDonald's, the world's largest burger chain, says the fruit smoothies and oatmeal with brown sugar and raisins it rolled out last year are selling well, although it declined to disclose their revenue. "We would not have them on the menu if we were not selling them at a rate that we could sustain them at," said Molly Starmann, director of McDonald's family business category.

But the chain didn't always have such luck. It spent three years developing the McLean Deluxe, a 91-percent fat-free hamburger it introduced in 1991 only to suffer disappointing sales.

More recently, McDonald's got a lukewarm response when in 2004 it began offering parents the option of choosing apple slices instead of fries for Happy Meals. So, in July, McDonald's said it would stop offering a choice and instead serve a half portion of both. It had considered taking fries out Happy Meals completely, but nixed the idea when parents in tests said "No."

Restaurants continue to straddle the line.

Burger King Corp. this summer pledged to promote healthier foods for kids, but announced last week that it would sell ice cream desserts nationwide, including an Oreo brownie sundae with 530 calories and 17 grams of fat. KFC introduced grilled chicken in 2009, then launched the Double Down sandwich the following year. The 540-calorie, 32-grams-of-fat breadless sandwich started as a limited-time offering, but proved so popular that the chain ended up keeping it.

Andy Puzder, CEO of CKE Restaurants Inc., which runs the Hardee's and Carl's Jr. fast-food chains, said even though his restaurants offer salads and turkey burgers, he figures his best seller at Hardee's is probably the Thickburger. The most decadent version of it comes with two types of cheese, fried onions, mayonnaise and nearly half a pound of beef and weighs in at 1,170 calories and 83 grams of fat. (The government recommends that most people consume 2,000 calories and no more than about 70 grams of fat each day.)

"We have wonderful, healthy foods if people want to buy them," Puzder said. "But they don't sell particularly well."

NEVADA REPUBLICANS MOVE PRESIDENTIAL CAUCUSES AHEAD OF FLA.

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH

Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • Nevada Republicans have decided to move up their presidential caucuses to stay ahead of Florida's newly scheduled Jan. 31 primary, a move that will cost the state party half of its delegates to the GOP's national convention.

Executive board members voted Saturday night in a special telephone conference meeting to hold the caucuses sometime in January instead of February, saying it was worth the price to have more influence on the nomination as an early voting state.

Nevada GOP national Committeewoman Heidi Smith said Sunday that she was the lone dissenter in the vote to move up the caucuses from Feb. 18, when they had tentatively been scheduled. She noted Nevada still would have been the first state in the West to vote by sticking to a February date.

"We still would have maintained our influence in the nominating process and attracted the presidential candidates," Smith said. "I thought it would be best to keep our full contingent of convention delegates."

But other board members thought it was more important to have the nation's third presidential vote after Iowa and New Hampshire than to retain the state's full slate of 28 national delegates.

"The likelihood of it (nomination) coming down to the convention is really remote," said David Gallagher, the state party's executive director. "The bottom line is we'll have more influence by holding our caucuses after Iowa and New Hampshire."

No specific new date in January was immediately set for the 2012 caucuses.

Under Nevada GOP rules, the caucuses are held the Saturday after the New Hampshire primary. New Hampshire has yet to set its primary date.

Some party leaders think a solution can be reached so Nevada doesn't lose half of its delegates to the national convention.

But Smith, a member of the convention's Rules Committee, disagreed. "There's absolutely no way to reverse that. The rules have to apply to Nevada as well as all the other states," she said.

Nevada Republicans moved up the date of their caucuses after Florida decided Friday to hold its Republican presidential primary on Jan. 31, snubbing a party rule against fast-track delegate-selection for 2012 and costing Florida half of its national convention delegates.

Andy Rooney Ends '60 Minutes' Run of 33 Years

BY FRAZIER MOORE

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Andy Rooney insisted he's not retiring. He's a writer, and a writer never stops being a writer.

Even so, he delivered his final weekly essay on "60 Minutes" Sunday night, his last in his 33 years with the news-magazine. It was a moment, he said he has dreaded.

"I wish I could do this forever. I can't, though," he said.

CBS News announced last week that the 92-year-old Rooney would be stepping down from his well-entrenched berth on "60 Minutes" after delivering his 1,097th commentary.

"I probably haven't said anything here that you didn't already know or have already thought," he said. "That's what a writer does. A writer's job is to tell the truth."

Rooney began his long career by writing the words for people to say who were on TV or radio. Then when he began his weekly "A Few Minutes with Andy Rooney" in 1978, he began saying them on camera himself, though not as a television personality, but as "a writer who reads what he's written."

Rooney said in his farewell piece that he has lived a lucky life, luckier than most. But befitting his trademark crotchety nature, he voiced one parting complaint: He doesn't like being famous, nor does he like being bothered by fans.

"I spent my first 50 years trying to become well known as a writer, and the next 30 trying to avoid being famous," he said. "I walk down the street now or go to a football game and people shout, 'Hey, Andy!' And I hate that."

So if you see him in a restaurant, Rooney said as he signed off, "please, just let me eat my dinner."

THEIR VIEW

Risk-averse America

Economist Robert Litan of the Kauffman Foundation likes to recall that half of today's Fortune 500 companies began as start-ups in a recession or a bear stock market. And why not? During a recession, it's cheaper to hire new workers, rent office space, buy supplies. But Litan suspects the same process may not be working now. In contrast to earlier slumps, when the number of startups barely fell, there's been a steep decline. From 2006 to 2009, startups dropped 27 percent.

That's one cause of weak job creation, which depends heavily on start-ups. "It's not encouraging," says Litan. "It looks like more risk aversion."

Americans see themselves as go-getters and risk-takers. Our optimism will ultimately rescue us. So it's said. But the folklore increasingly collides with reality. The 2008-09 financial crisis traumatized millions. It swelled the ranks of risk-avoiders, worrywarts and victims. Of course, this was mainly a reaction to overborrowing, inflated home values and lost jobs. But now the fear factor is feeding on itself — and it's smothering the recovery.

We are prisoners of our rotten mood. Everywhere, the bias is to spend less and wait to see how things turn out. Just as optimism sustained the boom, pessimism prolongs the bust. This is the reverse of "irrational exuberance," because as long as most people feel this way, the psychology is self-fulfilling. Unfortunately, that's how they feel.

Consider:

Consumers: Confidence surveys show the longest streak of low ratings on record. The Conference Board's index, based on people's outlook and buying plans, sets 1985's attitudes at 100 and, in good times, usually registers between 120 and 140. The latest reading (August) was 44.5; the low was 25.3 in February 2009. "We've never seen it drop so low and stay so low," says the Conference Board's Ken Goldstein.

Corporate managers: As is well known, large companies have $2 trillion of cash and securities, up $520 billion since year-end 2007. That's money firms could use to hire and invest in plants or new products — if managers were more confident. Instead, they're stockpiling funds against another financial crisis.

Small-business managers: "These are the most depressed numbers in history," says Holly Wade of the National Federation of Independent Business, whose optimism index started in 1974. Only 11 percent of firms expect to hire in the next three months. Small companies (500 workers or less) represent half of all employment.

Investors: Stock values reflect low expectations of future profits. One measure of mood is the P/E ratio: a stock's price (P) compared to each dollar of per share earnings (E). High P/Es signal optimism. Today's P/E is 13.8 for the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, well below the average of 18 from 1950 to 2011, says S&P's Howard Silverblatt.

"Risk aversion" — understandable for individuals and firms — has become a collective curse. When everyone is super-cautious, the result is stagnation or worse. Imagine an economy doing just slightly better: consumers work off some pent-up demand; stock prices are 10 percent higher; companies channel $200 billion of their cash to new products or plants; entrepreneurs nurture 10 percent more startups. A stronger recovery would be self-sustaining.

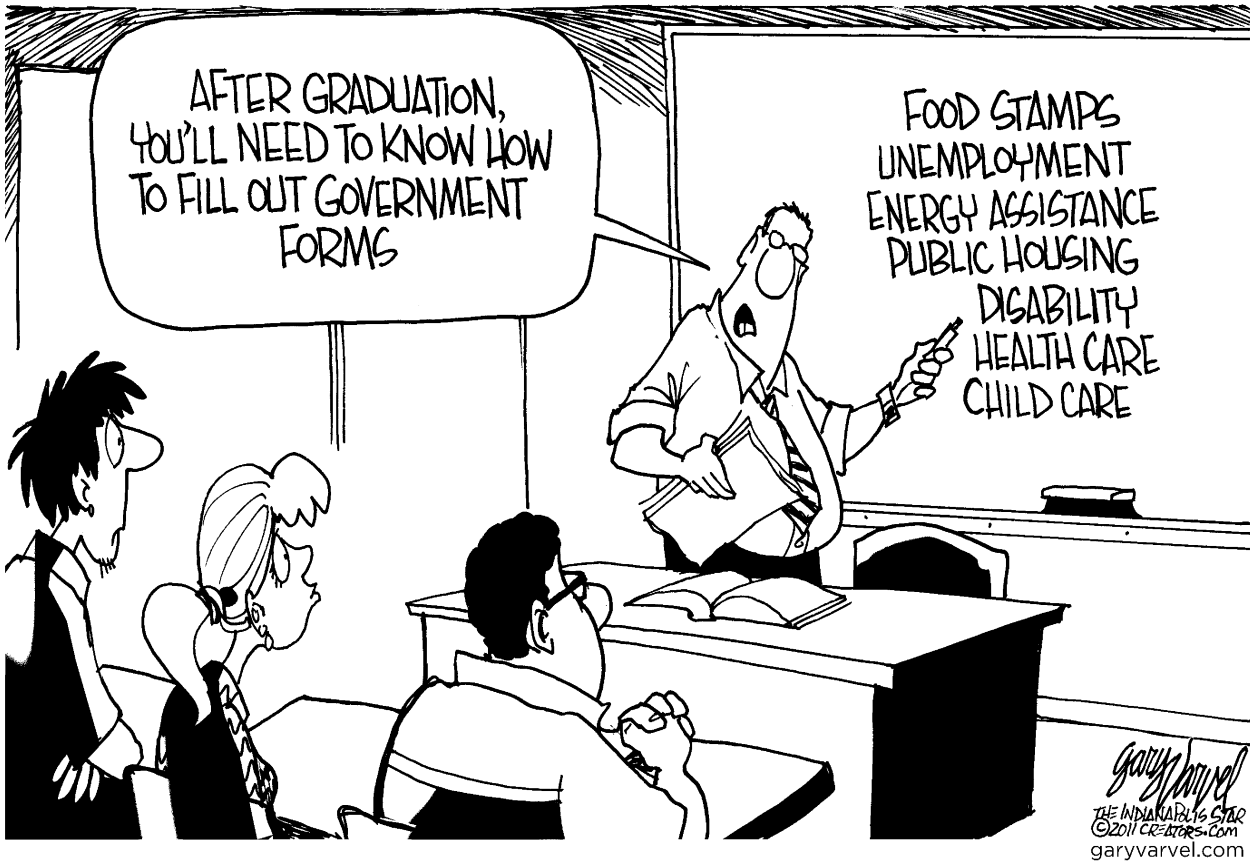

The good news is that this could happen. Mood swings can go both ways. Objectively, some economic conditions have improved. Households, for example, are much less indebted. Much mortgage and consumer debt has been paid down or written off. Federal Reserve statistics show debt service burdens (the share of income devoted to repaying) at their lowest levels since 1994. Consumers could be more expansive.

But that's hardly preordained. Shifts in psychology mean shifts in economic behavior. One reason many 2011 forecasts were too optimistic is that economists discounted psychology. Some prominent forecasters have admitted the error. "Confidence normally reflects economic conditions; it does not shape them," notes Mark Zandi of Moody's Analytics. But at times, he says, "sentiment can be so harmed that businesses, consumers and investors freeze up. ... This is one of those times."

"Al-Qaida and its affiliates will find no safe haven anywhere in the world. ... We will be resolute in our commitment to destroy terrorist networks that aim to kill Americans."

Barigar Showed Leadership While on City Council

I am excited to support Shawn Barigar in his bid for election to the Twin Falls City council.

Shawn provided excellent leadership during his last stint on the city council. I was particularly pleased with Shawn's vision for our community and his willingness to plan for our future. Shawn had a hand in the city's water conservation program and water right acquisition for our future needs. Shawn was also involved in the planning for the purchase and development of the Auger Falls property in the Snake River Canyon, which was an excellent proactive and forward thinking development and will benefit many future generations in the Magic Valley.

Shawn Barigar is a committed, energetic and talented leader, and I encourage you to vote for Shawn in the upcoming city council election.

F&G Officers Send Wrong Signals

Your article about jumping fish and the "legality" of keeping the fish reminds me of sometimes how Fish and Game law enforcement officers and their superiors send the wrong signals to sportsmen, sportswomen and our youngsters about what is the proper handling of our wildlife when "taken" by any means.

While the keeping of this fish may be a technical violation of Mr. Hill's "interpretation" of the Fish and Game code, it was the proper utilization of our resource. This sportsman had the proper license and tag to "take" a steelhead, and he recorded his "take" properly. Had he discarded the fish because he had not taken it by "hook and line," he would have been guilty of the "waste of a game fish."

As far as the tagging of a deer hit by a car, this has always been the most ethical and sportsmen-like use of a hunter's deer tag. To give up your hunting experience so as to not allow an animal to be wasted is most honorable.

As has been quoted many times in the past, "Sometimes the law is an ass," and should be ignored by all! I sincerely hope that Mr. Morton's fish was tasty and enjoyed.

Barigar Has Skills Necessary for Council

I am writing this letter to urge you to vote for Shawn Barigar for City Council Seat 2 in the upcoming election.

I am privileged to call Shawn a friend and also to work with him in community and regional endeavors. At all times, he is thoughtful, articulate, engaged and prepared. These are the skills needed by our representatives on city council in challenging times.

Shawn is qualified and has demonstrated his ability and experience in bringing diverse interests together and working cooperatively to achieve a common good for the citizens of Twin Falls. Shawn's commitment to our community runs deep. He and his wife Camille and two sons are active and contribute to our community. Camille and Shawn are supportive of their sons' school and extracurricular activities. Like most of us, their professional lives are busy, yet they always make the time to participate in various arts and charitable activities that assist our citizens and contribute to the quality of life we enjoy in Twin Falls.

Shawn is pro-citizen and pro-business; the two are not mutually exclusive. We must have a healthy and diverse business community to meet the needs of our community and support the services that citizens want and need safety, sound infrastructure, education and healthcare.

Please take the time over the next month to become informed of the issues our city faces. As you do, you will find Shawn Barigar has the skills, commitment and desire to serve the citizens of our community.

Support Your Local Hospital

I recently moved to Albion after the death of my husband. One of the deciding factors for this decision was because of the excellent hospital we have in the Cassia Regional Medical Center.

Coming from an area with only a small rural hospital, my husband and I were often forced to travel a distance for our medical procedures which was expensive and inconvenient. When my husband had to undergo a surgical procedure for a major health issue, we opted to have it done at Cassia Regional Medical Center so we could stay with my daughter and her family during his rehabilitation. I was so impressed with the care he received there. The doctors and medical staff were professional, well trained, helpful, supportive and caring.

I have since been a patient myself at CRMC and have also been treated with the same professionalism, concern, knowledge and integrity. In obtaining this medical treatment, I have learned that if there is a need the hospital or doctors cannot accommodate, they are qualified, willing and helpful to make arrangements at the closest treatment center.

In the last few months, I have had several people tell me they are seeking medical care outside of the area, even for minor issues. Because of the excellent care I have received locally, I am hard pressed to understand why they would opt to go out of town instead of having their health care needs taken care of by our local hospital and physicians.

We all know the importance of supporting our local businesses and, if we do not take advantage of and support the health care system in our own community, in the future we may be required to travel out of the area for even our most basic health care needs. Please support our local hospital.

One Construction Project at a Time

The construction in the valley this year is outrageous.

With all of the construction, the flow of traffic has been backed up astronomically. I believe that anyone will agree when I say, why can't they finish one project before the other?

I know that the summer is the best time to be doing the construction, but it is still ridiculous that the projects can't be postponed for other summers. This isn't going to be the last summer before the world ends. I mean that the main road inhibits the non-locals, and the back roads that the locals do use also have construction on them.

To put it in whole, finish one before you start another one.

Hawkins Has Deep Ties to the Community

Suzanne Hawkins (running for City Council Seat 4) will be an amazing asset to the city of Twin Falls.

She is not only an honest, hard-working, organized individual, she has also been active in the community for many years. She has been a small business owner in Twin Falls for 17 years, during that time raising six kids in the community and managing to stay involved with sports, theater, school activities and more. She served on the board of Magic Valley Little Theatre, serving as president for two years. She has served and continues to serve meals at the Salvation Army every month. She is a dedicated and caring person that I know will work hard to ensure the best for the people of Twin Falls.

While I no longer live there, I can promise you that if I did, she would have my vote. I also know she is willing to answer any questions you may have for her, so feel free to look her up and learn for yourself how she will benefit you. Thank you!

From The Home of Wal-Mart, a World-Class Museum Rises

BY PHILIP KENNICOTT
The Washington Post

BENTONVILLE, Ark. • On Interstate 540 near Bentonville, a billboard shows what appears to be a wild circus costume, or an outlandish party dress for someone who stands about eight feet tall. It is a Soundsuit, a work by the contemporary African American artist Nick Cave, famous for his distinctive fabric sculptures covered in strange geegaws and decorative exotica.

It is also an advertisement for Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art, the most-talked-about new museum in the United States in a generation. Opening Nov. 11 in the corporate home town of Wal-Mart and a bedrock of Middle America, the museum has ruffled feathers, challenged stereotypes and raised expectations as this country's newest major cultural institution. That it is announcing its debut to a presumably conservative local audience not with a classic Western landscape, or a meticulous portrait of a Founding Father, but with a work of contemporary sculpture, is a sign of its larger cultural ambition.

"Going against type is a big part of it," says Crystal Bridges Executive Director Don Bacigalupi, who has been helping the fledgling museum beef up its contemporary art collection. As the museum prepares for a deluge of foreign and national media coverage, it's easy to anticipate the ready-made story line: The oddity of a world-class art museum rising in Arkansas, with reflexive condescension about its focus on American art and its origins in the Wal-Mart corporate fortune.

But as workers put the finishing touches on the new building and curators oversaw the installation of art collected over decades by founder Alice L. Walton, a visit to the museum made it clear that Crystal Bridges intends to be taken seriously well beyond northwest Arkansas. It has not only gathered a synoptic view of American art, it will feature contemporary galleries and an extensive library, and its leaders profess no squeamishness about embracing all aspects of the canon, including the experimental and the controversial.

Endowed by the Walton Family Foundation with $800 million, Crystal Bridges instantly joins the ranks of the richest museums in this country, and it has been using its extraordinary resources to assemble a collection of American art that may rival in quality, if not quantity, anything available to museum visitors in New York, Washington, Los Angeles or Chicago. It has aggressively pursued some of the most prized and iconic pieces of American art to come on the market in the past five years, leading some observers to detect an impact on prices that they call the "Walton effect."

The museum, designed by blue-chip institutional architect Moshe Safdie and nestled in a thickly forested basin near the main square of Bentonville, is Walton's legacy project. Walton, 61, is the daughter of Wal-Mart founder Sam Walton, who died in 1992. She is also "media shy," a major contributor to Republican political candidates, a horse lover and, in the rare interviews she has given over the years, unabashedly patriotic and sentimentally devoted to the rolling Arkansas landscape she grew up in. Married and divorced once, she lives on an immense ranch in Texas and has been known to bid on art by cell-

Architect Moshe Safdie designed the new Crystal Bridges museum in Bentonville, Ark., which will be free to the public thanks to $20 million from Wal-Mart.

While millionaires and billionaires before her have created museums, Walton's Crystal Bridges — with its mix of contemporary and classic art, and its origins in the frugal, self-made ethos of the Wal-Mart empire — feels decidedly different from the museums of the Gilded Age, or the boomtown art collections of mid-century Texas. There is no anxiety about the status of American art, no looking to Europe for validation. There's no embarrassment about the immense fortune that made the museum possible, no old-fashioned cultural money-laundering in the manner of Carnegie or Mellon. Nor is there any worry about whether the art is too conservative or too edgy. It is a mature, serious, relatively progressive museum launched at a time when increasing numbers of people consider themselves socially tolerant and fiscally conservative. It is a museum for people who are as comfortable with art as social experiment and provocation, as they are with untrammelled, winner-takes-all capitalism.

The museum's wealth, and its connection to the Wal-Mart fortune, has also led to a remarkable amount of hostility in art world circles, where there is an assumption that it is too rich, too conservative and too reflexively American in its focus to be a serious new player. The leaders of Crystal Bridges acknowledge the grumbling, mostly detectable in the blogosphere, but also aired publicly as it became clear that a 2005 Arkansas law specifically designed to exempt the museum from taxes could cost taxpayers millions of dollars of lost revenue. They point out that Crystal Bridges is hardly unprecedented, that virtually all of this country's museums began with a collection, and a fortune, assembled by a wealthy art-loving member of the nouveaux riches.

The museum, when it opens, will be free to the public (thanks to a $20 million gift from Wal-Mart), with a vigorous public education program and a serious scholarly and curatorial agenda. Crystal Bridges is doing everything right, by the standards of contemporary museum practice. And while it is a beneficiary of Walton's largess, it is also an independent nonprofit and not a Wal-Mart proxy.

"It is unprecedented what she is doing," says Julian Zugazagoitia, director of the Nelson-Atkins Museum in Kansas City, Mo., the closest major art museum to Bentonville. Zugazagoitia says his museum expects to benefit in a spike of visitors as patrons drawn to Crystal Bridges explore regional options. "I hope for a Bilbao effect" in Bentonville, he says, referring to the Guggenheim outpost that opened in Spain in 1997, transforming a little-known Basque city into a major cultural hub. He says Crystal Bridges is already a good neighbor, planning collaborations with his museum.

As Crystal Bridges has taken shape, hired respected staff from other major collections, and revealed details of its collection and education programs, opinion has shifted. Few museum professionals will speak openly about their initial suspicions and any lingering resentment about the impact of Crystal Bridges on the art market.

Michael Conforti, director of the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, Mass., sees Walton and her collection in a broader historical perspective.

"Look at the ways that Morgan and Frick were satirized in the British press a hundred years ago," he says of Pierpont Morgan and Henry Clay Frick, who used their robber-baron wealth to build up major collections of European cultural treasure, causing heartburn and eliciting scorn in Europe at the time. "Any new player who goes into the marketplace with a particular ambition is always going to create rumbles."

Another East Coast museum insider puts the art world response to Crystal Bridges more simply: "In a word, they're jealous."

There is plenty to envy at Crystal Bridges. The museum has been methodically building a major collection for more than five years, and though the process has been shrouded in decorous secrecy, news of major acquisitions has leaked. In 2005, Walton reportedly paid $35 million for Asher Durand's 1849 "Kindred Spirits," one of the most admired works of 19th-century American art. The acquisition, for more than $8 million, of Gilbert Stuart's 1797 portrait of George Washington, looking grim and dignified with a turbulent seascape in the background, also made news. Occasionally acquisitions created controversy. In 2006, Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia announced that it had agreed to sell Thomas Eakins' 1875 painting "The Gross Clinic" jointly to Walton's museum and Washington's National Gallery of Art, for $68 million.

From Philadelphia Mayor John F. Street to native son Kevin Bacon, the city was outraged, and raced to take advantage of an offer by the university to keep the painting in Philadelphia if someone could muster a matching offer. With the help of local foundations, Philadelphia succeeded, but the incident collection of American masterworks for years.

"Before there was a Walton effect, there was a Gates effect," one museum leader says.

That makes it all the more impressive that Crystal Bridges has managed to assemble the collection it has. Even as work continued on several of the building's pavilions, arrayed around two large ponds set into a leafy, green hillside, the first two galleries of the collection were open in September for docent training. There is a cinematic quality to the art on display, hung on slightly curved walls painted in rich colors. The portraits, landscapes and genera scenes all seem to pop off the wall, and if they have anything in common — besides the starry list of artists represented — it is a tendency to clear, easily legible narratives.

Along with the Gilbert Stuart portrait of Washington, there is a Charles Willson Peale portrait of the Founding Father, with red cheeks, resting his left hand on the barrel of a cannon. These paintings and others, including a series of six Colonial-era portraits of the Levy-Franks family, make the museum's first room feel distinctly canonical, like a miniature National Portrait Gallery. They are conservatively hung, and each one is carefully chosen to allow curators to teach American history alongside art history. The Levy-Franks portraits are billed as "the only large set of early colonial family portraits to survive intact." But they are also images of a prominent Jewish mercantile family, opening up discussion of religion and tolerance in Colonial America.

"The institution has been built with a serious and real focus on public education — more than other new museums that I am familiar with," says Clark Institute's Conforti. There has also been an effort to appeal directly to people who have not previously been the targets of most cultural institutions.

"It parallels some of the core values of the Wal-Mart corporation: to look at rural audiences and nontraditional museum-going public as the primary audience for her museum," he says.

SUSPECT IN 1957 ILL. KILLING NOW CHARGED WITH RAPE

SYCAMORE, Ill. (AP) • A 71-year-old Washington man accused in the 1957 kidnapping and killing of a 7-year-old Illinois girl has been charged in a separate case with sexually assaulting a 14-year-old girl from the same small town.

Illinois State Police announced the grand jury indictment of Jack McCullough on Friday but didn't say when the sexual assault happened. He was indicted this summer on felony murder, kidnapping and abduction charges in the death of Maria Ridulph of Sycamore.

McCullough was arrested in Seattle in July in one of the oldest cold-case murders in the nation to be reopened. He has been held on $3 million bail in a jail about 65 miles west of Chicago.

The 14-year-old girl told investigators McCullough raped her when she was 14 in Sycamore, prosecutors and state police said. He's now also charged with one count of child sexual assault and four counts of indecent liberties with a child.

"Sadly, we have another victim, and for the families of all victims, the pain never goes away," Illinois State Police director Hiram Grau said in a news release.

3 Dead, 3 Wounded in California Party Shooting

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) • Three people were killed and three others wounded when at least two gunmen opened fire as partygoers left a Northern California warehouse early Sunday, authorities said.

The gunmen started shooting as a group of people walked out of the building around 1:20 a.m., San Leandro police Sgt. Doug Calgano said.

Three people were pronounced dead at the scene. Police did not know the condition of the three wounded people. The names of victims had not been released, but Roger Kiel told San Francisco television station KABC-7 that his daughter, Shanice Kiel, 19, was one of the people fatally shot.

"I'm devastated," he told the station as police examined a bullet-riddled SUV in the background. "I'm looking at my car with the bullet holes in my windshield where I sit. So, I know my daughter suffered a horrible death."

At least 100 people attended the party, which had been advertised on the Internet, Calgano said. He was not aware of a permit being issued for the party, which would have been required for a gathering of that size.

As the shooting began, many of the partygoers fled.

"Obviously it was a chaotic scene," Calgano said.

The gunmen were armed with semi-automatic handguns, but police have not determined how many shots were fired. Investigators were trying to establish if the gunmen had attended the party, or arrived as people left the party. It was not clear if the gunmen were in a vehicle or on foot when they opened fire.

No arrests have been made, and police have not determined a motive.

YEMENI JET BOMBS ARMY POST, KILLING 30 SOLDIERS

BY AHMED AL-HAJ
Associated Press

SANAA, Yemen • A government warplane bombed an army position in southern Yemen, killing at least 30 soldiers involved in months of intense battles against al-Qaida members, officials said Sunday.

The strike appeared to be a mistake, but the soldiers hit were from a unit that had defected to side with protesters seeking the president's ouster in Yemen's chapter of the Arab Spring, raising questions about whether the bombing might have been intentional.

Yemen's government and the renegade military units both consider Yemen's al-Qaida branch an enemy. The president's political opponents, however, accuse him of allowing the Islamic militants would take over.

The airstrike, which took place on Saturday evening in Abyan province, targeted an abandoned school used as a shelter by soldiers of the army's 119th Brigade who were battling the al-Qaida fighters, military and medical officials said. The brigade is thought to have received significant support from the U.S. military to enable it to fight the militants in the south more effectively.

The school is located just east of Abyan's provincial capital, Zinjibar, seized in May by Islamic militants taking advantage of Yemen's political turmoil to expand their reach. In recent days, fighting in the area has been heavy; 28 soldiers and militants were killed there Saturday.

Mass. Police: Singer Owes $420K in Child Support

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) • Police say a singer known for his 1990 chart-topping love song was hauled off a Massachusetts stage and arrested on charges of owing $420,000 in unpaid child support.

Steven Bernard Hill of Las Vegas was arrested Friday night at the MassMutual Center, where he was performing on tour.

Hill performs as Stevie B and is best known for the song "Because I Love You

(The Postman Song)." It reached No. 1 on the Billboard charts in late 1990.

Springfield police Sgt. John M. Delaney tells the Springfield Republican that Hill was surprised by the arrest and concerned that he might miss a weekend show in Providence, R.I.

Hill is scheduled to be arraigned Monday. He couldn't be reached for comment Sunday. Police didn't know if he had an attorney.

What We Learned: Week 5

TIMES-NEWS

Wow. We're already through Week 5, past the halfway point of the regular season in high school football. It's pretty clear who the pretenders and contenders are across the board, but there's still time for some shakeup in the conference standings. Here are three things we learned this week.

Wood River can hang tough: We've been high on the Wolverines this season, who, coming into the game against Minico, were a missed field goal away from potentially being undefeated. But, Wood River's wins came against Class 3A teams and Minico was by far its toughest test of the season. The Wolverines (4-2, 1-1 Great Basin) didn't beat Minico, but no one has against the 6-0 Spartans. The Wolverines did, however, put up a fight, taking a 13-6 lead in the second quarter — the first time all season Minico had trailed in a game this season. Spartans head coach Tim Perrigot said after their 34-15 win, this Wood River team is the best he's seen in more than 16 seasons. Wood River head coach Kevin Stilling said after the game, "We're not backing down from anybody. I think we proved that tonight."

The Wolverines certainly did and with a win over visiting Twin Falls on Friday, they will be in prime position for the No. 2 spot in the GBC.

Say hello to your Class 1A playoff teams: Carey, Hagerman, Dietrich, Lighthouse Christian, Castleford and Oakley all won in convincing fashion Friday night and are in the driver's seat toward the state playoffs. The Panthers in Carey are still undefeated and rolled over North Gem. Hagerman ran away from Grace and Dietrich destroyed North Valley Academy.

The Blue Devils talked in the pre-season of competing with Carey and they'll get their chance next week when they travel to Carey. In the Division I ranks, Oakley impressed for the second week in a row, beating Shoshone in a game that could have ended in the mercy rule had the Hornets wanted to.

Jerome might be staring at an 0-8 season: It's homecoming for the Tigers this week as they host Mountain Home, and with games remaining against an improved Burley team and Great Basin front-runner Minico, this might be the last chance for Jerome to pick up a win. Jerome has improved after two early season losses to tough Middleton and Bishop Kelly teams, but its still 0-5, including 0-3 in GBC play. Tough year for the young Tigers. But the future looks bright with sophomore Zach Thibault under center.

Boise State's Kellen Moore throws during the first half of the Broncos' 30-10 win over Nevada Saturday at Bronco Stadium

Moore Shaking off His Struggles

Boise State star quarterback Kellen Moore had a rare off-game against Nevada Saturday, throwing two interceptions.

BY ALEX CALINSKY
For the Times-News

It's not very often Kellen Moore is off.

Moore's 19-of-33, 142-yard performance with two touchdowns and two interceptions in Saturday's 30-10 win over Nevada isn't exactly what Boise State has come to expect from its star quarterback, regardless of the defense he's facing.

The 58 percent completion rate in the game is low for him (he's a 69 percent passer in his career), but the two interceptions are perhaps the most notable aspect of his day.

"I don't necessarily worry about the missed throws," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said. "There's going to be those now and again, those just come off your hand funny or your feet aren't just right.

"The turnovers are the ones you really want to analyze — 'Could I have prevented that?' and I think both of them he could have, probably would like to have those back," Petersen said after the game Saturday.

Just like on the field, Moore didn't seem flustered after the game when asked about the worst statistical game of his career.

"Jeez, come on," Moore said pretending to be hurt by the question. "Learn from it and move on" was the phrase he repeated multiple times during the press conference.

Both of Moore's picks came as the Broncos were poised to score in the first half. The first followed a J.C. Percy interception of Nevada quarterback Tyler Lantrip, giving the Broncos the ball inside Nevada's 20 yard line.

Just two plays later, the Wolf Pack defense hit Moore as he delivered the throw, lobbing the ball into the air with Nevada linebacker Jeremiah Green waiting underneath it.

"Probably trying to force it and get too aggressive," Moore said about not taking the sack. "There were plenty of things on my part to get better at, hopefully you get all those things out of you and move on."

Through Boise State's first three games of 2011, Moore played wonderfully and set the bar extremely high for the rest of his final collegiate season.

Add in the three impressive years before this year and it seemed impossible for him to simply have a bad day.

"We have high expectations, bottom line. You just look at each game, it's never as good or as bad as you imagine," Moore said.

The Broncos didn't need a huge passing game out of Moore to win Saturday, reinforcing they are more than just a passing offense.

Boise State rolled up 169 rushing yards on 36 attempts (4.7 YPC), led by Doug Martin's 126 on 22 carries. The senior running back scored two touchdowns and had a long rush of 43 yards.

"It's interesting sometimes how this team comes together," Petersen said. "We end up being kind of a control-the-clock, grind the ball out (team) — that's not really who we think we are. We think we're more of a spread-it-out, throw it all over, explosive team. We'll do whatever we need to do to be successful."

Boise State (4-0) dropped to No. 5 in this week's AP Poll and travels to Fresno State to play the Bulldogs (2-3) on Friday night at 7 p.m. on ESPN.

Down 24, Lions Rally to Stun Cowboys Late

BY JAIME ARON
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas • Matthew Stafford took the final snap, dropped to a knee and tucked the ball under his jersey for safekeeping.

He wanted a souvenir to remind him of his first NFL game in his hometown — not that he, or anyone else involved, is likely to forget this one.

A week after turning a 20-point halftime deficit into an overtime win, the Lions provided further proof they're a legitimate contender by turning a 24-point, third-quarter deficit into a 34-30 victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

Detroit's defense started the rally with interceptions returned for touchdowns on consecutive drives, then Stafford and Calvin Johnson took over from there, hooking up for a pair of touchdowns in the final period, including a 2-yarder for the winning points with 1:39 left.

"It's crazy how it happens," Stafford said. "When it was 27-3, we knew we had to start making plays. Once we did, we started catching fire."

Detroit is 4-0 and has won an NFL-best eight straight games. This also was its franchise-record fifth straight road win, avenging a loss here last November that had been its NFL-record 26th straight road loss.

Tony Romo and the Cowboys (2-2) continued to show there's no lead and no deficit too big for them. They blew a 14-point fourth-quarter lead for the first time in franchise history in the opener, and this was their largest lead blown in a loss in franchise history. Dallas' previous biggest blown lead was 21 against Washington on Nov. 28, 1965, when the Cowboys led 21-0 in the second quarter on the way to a 34-31 loss.

Meltdowns against the Jets in Week 1 and this one are bookends around two straight late-game victories pulled

TONY GUTIERREZ • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Detroit Lions wide receiver Calvin Johnson and quarterback Matthew Stafford celebrate a 23-yard touchdown against the Dallas Cowboys during Detroit's comeback out by Romo despite a cracked rib.

The rib wasn't to blame this time, but Romo certainly will be because of the two interceptions returned for TDs, and another interception with 4:13 left that set up Detroit's winning score. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones was quick to defend his quarterback, saying: "I have a lot of faith in Romo. This doesn't touch that."

This was a bizarre way for the Cowboys to end an NFL-record streak of nine straight games decided by a field goal or less. The final play was wacky, too, with Felix Jones catching a short pass with no one around him on fourth-and-20, then running out of bounds after only gaining 8 yards.

So much for a 3-1 start and a bye week to savor it.

Instead, Dallas players will suffer through an additional week of questions about Romo's leadership and their overall inability to put games away.

ALABAMA MOVES TO NO. 2 BEHIND LSU IN AP POLL

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

LSU and Alabama are the top two teams in the country one month before their game in Tuscaloosa.

The SEC West rivals held the first two spots in The Associated Press college football poll released Sunday as the second-ranked Crimson Tide jumped past No. 3 Oklahoma.

Alabama's rise gives the Southeastern Conference the top two teams in the country for the 10th time in the last four seasons. And for the first time since 2000, the Nos. 1 and 2 teams reside in the same division. That season Nebraska and Kansas State of the Big 12 North held the top two spots in the AP poll for one week.

The Tide beat Florida 38-10 on Saturday night in Gainesville, then received 12 first-place votes in the media rankings.

LSU remained No. 1 for a second straight week, receiving 40 first-place votes and 1,473 points. Alabama had 1,435 points. The Tigers play the Tide on Nov. 5 in a game that could ultimately decide the division — and much more.

Oklahoma, which started the season No. 1 before slipping behind LSU last week, got seven first-place votes.

Wisconsin also moved up after a big victory, jumping three spots to No. 4 after a 48-17 win against Nebraska.

Boise State, which had one first-place vote, slipped a spot to No. 5.

Oklahoma was No. 1 in the USA Today coaches' poll, followed by LSU, Alabama, Stanford and Wisconsin.

The top eight in the AP poll were

Rodgers Has Career Day as Packers Rout Broncos 49-23

GREEN BAY, Wis. • Aaron Rodgers threw for a career-high 408 yards, tied a personal best with four touchdown passes and ran for two more scores and Green Bay remained unbeaten.

Charles Woodson ran an interception back for a touchdown for the Packers (4-0), who join resurgent NFC North rivals Detroit as the only undefeated teams left in the NFL.

Eric Decker caught a pair of touchdowns from Kyle Orton for Denver (1-3). Orton threw for 273 yards with three touchdowns and three interceptions.

Backup Tim Tebow made a brief and uneventful appearance at quarterback for the Broncos early, but coach John Fox chose not to give Tebow more work when the game got out of control in the fourth quarter.

Falcons 30, Seahawks 28

SEATTLE • Matt Ryan threw for 291 yards, rookie Julio Jones caught 11 passes for 127 yards, and Atlanta held off a second-half rally.

Ryan was brilliant in the first half. He started out 13-for-15 and had a 1-yard touchdown pass to Tony Gonzalez on Atlanta's first possession. Michael Turner also ran for TDs of 21 and 1 yards in the first half.

Bengals 23, Bills 20

CINCINNATI • Rookie quarterback Andy Dalton shook off a horrid first half and led his first comeback victory, culminating in Mike Nugent's 43-yard field goal as time ran out against previously unbeaten Buffalo.

The Bills (3-1) came in as the AFC's last perfect team after pulling off historic comebacks. This time, they couldn't hold a lead.

49ers 24, Eagles 23

PHILADELPHIA • When Alex Smith began to air it out, he outdid Michael Vick and Philadelphia. Chucking its conservative approach in the second half, the 49ers surged back from a 20-point hole for the victory.

Vick wasn't hampered by his bruised right hand, throwing for a career-high 416 yards and two touchdowns and rushing for 75 yards. But Philly's defense fell apart in the final 30 minutes, and Frank Gore capped a 77-yard drive with a 12-yard TD run with 3 minutes remaining.

Former Eagles kicker David Akers, who left for San Francisco as a free agent this summer, kicked the decisive extra point. His replacement, rookie Alex Henery, missed from 39 and 33 yards in the final period.

Texans 17, Steelers 10

HOUSTON • Arian Foster rushed for 155 yards and the go-ahead touchdown in the fourth quarter as Houston overcame an injury to All-Pro Andre Johnson for the win.

Johnson left in the second quarter with a right hamstring injury and did not return though he was back on the sideline late to watch Houston (3-1) finish off the injury-plagued Steelers (2-2).

Poll

all undefeated, with No. 6 Oklahoma State followed by Stanford and Clemson.

Oregon was ninth and Arkansas was No. 10.

Three more unbeaten teams were next: No. 11 Texas, which faces rival Oklahoma on Saturday in Dallas, No. 12 Michigan and No. 13 Georgia Tech.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Patriots 31, Raiders 19

OAKLAND, Calif. • Tom Brady bounced back from a four-interception performance by throwing for 226 yards, two touchdowns and committing no turnovers.

Wes Welker caught nine passes for 158 yards and a score, BenJarvus Green-Ellis and Stevan Ridley adding rushing touchdowns and the Patriots (3-1) played a mostly mistake-free game after last week's surprising loss in Buffalo.

Redskins 17, Rams 10

ST. LOUIS • Ryan Torain ran for 135 yards and a 20-yard score, and Washington held off a late rally by winless St. Louis.

Titans 31, Browns 13

CLEVELAND • Matt Hasselbeck's fresh start in Tennessee has his team off to an unexpected one.

The 13-year veteran quarterback, who left Seattle as a free agent after a playoff-filled decade, threw three TD passes in the first half and safety Jordan Babineaux returned an interception 97 yards for a TD for their third straight win under first-year coach Mike Munchak.

Saints 23, Jaguars 10

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. • Drew Brees threw for 351 yards and a touchdown, Darren Sproles added 188 all-purpose yards and New Orleans improved to 3-1.

The Saints scored TDs on their first two possessions and looked well on their way to reaching 30 points for the fourth consecutive week. But Brees threw two interceptions, and the Saints were forced to settle for three field goals in the second half.

Bears 34, Panthers 29

CHICAGO • Devin Hester set an NFL record with his 11th punt return for a touchdown, Matt Forte ran for a career-high 205 yards for Chicago (2-2).

Chargers 26, Dolphins 16

SAN DIEGO • Philip Rivers threw for 307 yards and one touchdown, Mike Tolbert ran for another score and San Diego knocked out Miami quarterback Chad Henne.

Henne hurt his left shoulder at the end of a run on a broken play on the Dolphins' second possession and didn't return. Although backup Matt Moore led the Dolphins to the game's first TD, Rivers' passing eventually overpowered the Dolphins (0-4).

Giants 31, Cardinals 27

GLENDALE, Ariz. • Eli Manning threw two touchdown passes in a 58-second span late in the game to rally New York.

Chiefs 22, Vikings 17

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Matt Cassel hit Dwayne Bowe for a 52-yard fourth-quarter touchdown pass, Ryan Succop was perfect on five field-goal attempts and the Chiefs are no longer winless.

Ravens 34, Jets 17

BALTIMORE • The Baltimore Ravens scored three touchdowns on defense, all off turnovers by New York Jets quarterback Mark Sanchez, and cruised to a 34-17 victory Sunday night in a bizarre game that featured an NFL-record five returns for scores.

Baltimore's three touchdowns on defense were the most in franchise history. Jameel McClain took a fumble by Sanchez 6 yards for a score on New York's first offensive play, Jarret Johnson scored on a 26-yard fumble return and Lardarius Webb put the Ravens up 34-17 in the third quarter by taking an interception 73 yards into the end zone.

It was a performance that would have made Rex Ryan proud — if he was still Baltimore's defensive coordinator. Unfortunately for Ryan, he is now New York's head coach.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT
FILER MUTUAL TELEPHONE COMPANY SERVICE IN NEVADA

We provide a wide variety of products and services including the following basic residential service offerings in Nevada:

	Monthly Rates	One-Time Charges
Single Party Residential Service	$16.00	$25.00
Single Party Lifeline Service*	$ 9.00	$12.50

In addition to the above monthly rates, a $6.50 Federal Subscriber Line Charge applies. The $6.50 charge is paid entirely by the federal lifeline program for lifeline customers.

The above rates include the following:

- Local calling and the ability to receive unlimited incoming calls;
- Touch tone capability;
- Access to operator services, directory assistance, and long distance service providers;
- Voice grade access to the public switched network;
- Free access to emergency 9-1-1- and 800 or 800-like toll free services;
- Free toll blocking for lifeline customers;
- Access to the telephone relay service; and
- Free access to the business office

* This is a federally funded program, which provides discounted service to low-income residential customers who meet the eligibility rules established by the Public Utilities Commission of Nevada. The federal lifeline program provides a $1.75 credit for Tier 2 and another $1.75 credit for Tier 3. These are credits toward the basic monthly rate. The Nevada program provides a $3.50 credit toward the basic monthly rate effective January 1, 2011. A discounted basic service rate, discounted one-time initial installation charges, and free toll blocking are offered to eligible customers. The basic service rates shown above do not include state mandated fees.

DEAR ABBY: Over the past several years I have fallen out of love with my wife. We're now at a point where all we do is cohabitate for the sake of the children. She often says she wants nothing to do with the kids and treats me as below human. She calls me at work repeatedly, then hangs up on me if I don't agree or give her the answer she wants. I finally had enough and told her I can no longer live like this.

She's now saying she has "seen the error of her ways" and wants to change. I don't know if I believe her or even care at this point. I have been so beaten down I just go through the motions. Part of me would like to see who else is out there for me, but then my wife cries and says she has "nowhere to go" and that I'd be putting the mother of my children "out on the street." She doesn't work because she can't keep a job. (Something always comes up that forces her to walk out.) Please help me. I am beside myself and don't know what to do.

— AT A CROSSROADS
IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR AT A CROSSROADS: Try marital counseling for your children's sake, to determine whether your wife is capable of changing and whether your marriage can be salvaged.

If the answer is no, consult an attorney who specializes in family law, and when you do, seek custody of your children. If your wife says she wants nothing to do with them now, after a divorce her attitude isn't likely to improve. They will need a caring, supportive parent close to them. If your wife is as you have described, she appears to be more interested in a meal ticket than a partner, and you deserve better.

DEAR ABBY: I am a college student. In order to save money on housing, my best friend, "Keira" and I decided to get an apartment together. She's engaged, so it's actually the two of us and her fiancé, "Bruce." All of us were enthusiastic about the idea. They moved in a few months before me because I had a job back home and their jobs were at school.

Because they moved in first, they treat me as if it is "their" apartment and I merely have a room there. When I try to buy things for the apartment, such as a new tablecloth, bath mat, etc., Keira immediately undoes any changes I have made when I leave for the day. I feel it is her passive-aggressive way of undermining me. It happens every day with something.

This may seem petty, but this is my apartment, too. I pay rent just as they do, and I want to feel at home here as well. Keira is stubborn and wants things her way. How can I get her to quit this behavior without causing further animosity within our home?

— HOME-LESS
IN NEW YORK

DEAR HOME-LESS: Convene a household meeting and tell Keira and Bruce what you have told me. While they arrived first and furnished "their" nest, you have an equal right to have it reflect some of your taste and personality. For your friend to erase it while your back is turned is inconsiderate of your feelings.

If you don't bring this out in the open, you will never establish a compromise. Because Keira is planning to be married, she had better get used to the concept of compromise because a successful marriage is full of it.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Hateful to me as the gates of Hades is that man who hides one thing in his heart and speaks another."

— Homer

My friend Billy Clegg, a multiple winner of the Ace of Clubs award, was the CEO of an elite office-supply house in San Antonio, The Clegg Company, and he and his wife, Terri, were among the best players in town.

Clegg believed strongly in opening one no-trump when at all possible, thereby concealing suits and having the opening lead come up to the strong hand. Sixty years ago it was frowned upon to take liberties with one-no-trump openings — there were those who believed it was verboten with 5-4-2-2 shape or with a suit completely unstopped.

Years later, the expert community is now echoing the advantages of opening one no-trump whenever possible, but Billy was there before them.

In this deal from a team game, Clegg reached no-trump from the South seat, whereas in the other room, that South opened his hand one diamond. Three no-trump was played by North, down quickly on a club lead.

On a spade lead Clegg won in hand and carefully played diamonds in the recommended way by cashing the diamond ace first, since he knew he could not guard against 4-0 diamonds with East having the length. After finessing the diamond eight, he saw East pitch a spade and a heart, so he led a heart to his hand, setting up the hearts before the clubs.

He won the spade return, repeated the diamond finesse, and led a club toward his queen. The defenders had two spades and two aces, but that was all.

ANSWER: I would not lead a diamond (partner had a chance to double a diamond bid, but did not do so). The choice is a spade, hoping to set up a winner before declarer develops one of the side-suits for discards, or a club, hoping to give partner a ruff when in with the heart king. Both plans are perfectly reasonable; I tend to favor the second approach.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF OCTOBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Your romantic fantasies could be working overtime this month. If you think you have found your own "one and only," you might be wise to double check with your friends. Your desire to see only what you want to see might blind you to the drawbacks of a deal or the faults of a prospective partner. Shelfe plans to make crucial commitments, job changes, or investments until next March or July. In March, your popularity hits a high note that allows you to impress prospective employers and partners. In July, Lady Luck will guide your hand to make the most beneficial decisions.

HOROSCOPE

 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19):

Don't restrict yourself with limits. You are able to achieve any goal though simple willpower today. A sustained effort will erode any walls or barriers that stand in your way. Perseverance is the key.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20):

Spread good cheer. Your bubbly, outgoing nature will be contagious. A mere smile at others will spread until the workplace hardly seems like work at all. Save serious decisions for another time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):

Only one can be the best. There's no need for frustration simply because someone does a job better than you. Remember that you're not in a competition. You are quite capable on your own merits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):

Things are looking up. Good fortune and lucky events seem to just fall into your lap. Keep your attention focused on the home front, as there is likely to be a matter that will require your careful consideration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22):

Don a set of butterfly wings and flutter through the social set. Give a pat on the back to those who have earned it, or look up an old pal to reminisce. Pay attention to the wants and needs of family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22):

Let business and pleasure mix. Your natural social prowess allows you to find just the right words that will seal the deal. You'll do more good by loosening your tie a bit than by following protocol.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

Start the day off on the right foot. It will make a difference if you approach problems with high hopes rather than dread. Indulge in the things that bring you joy and let your good mood spread.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

Flattery will get you everywhere. A few kind words will break the ice and get the ball rolling. Bring strong points to light, rather than pointing out shortcomings. A brief run of luck brightens the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):

The solution to any problem is in how you look at it. If you are at a loss at how to proceed, step back and try to look at it from a new perspective. Fresh insight is all you need to make it happen.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19):

Work isn't work if you enjoy yourself. Making a game out of daily tasks will make the day pass effortlessly. If you can't find joy and satisfaction in your work, it may be time to look for a new job.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):

The safest bet is to not to bet at all. Don't risk your current security with a risky investment. Gambling on a "sure thing" could cost you more than you bargained for. Indulge creative whims.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20):

Pace yourself. You can still do good work, but remember to take a break when necessary. Manage your time carefully. You'll shine brighter as a supporting player than as the star of the show.
