THE PRICE OF PAYDAY LOANS

Licensed Payday Lending Locations in Idaho

Currently: 223
Idaho's Payday lending locations have increased from 162 to 223 since 2002, which is a 37.6 percent increase. The numbers represent individual locations, not necessarily companies. If the same company has three locations, it will show up as three additional units.

Hampered by few restrictions in Idaho, Gem State payday lenders have increased their ranks by 37.6 percent since 2002. But financial planners say the quick cash offered can land borrowers in long-term hot water.

The sight has become more common than ever for Idaho's storefronts — including those in the Magic Valley. Brightly colored signs offer passers-by the promise of quick cash to make ends meet before payday. Thirteen payday lending stores operate in Twin Falls alone, with 10 of them lining the city's well-traveled Blue Lakes Boulevard. Twin Falls isn't alone. Licensed payday lending operations in Idaho have multiplied by 37.6 percent since 2002, up from 162 state-licensed lending locations to 223, according to the Idaho Department of Finance. There's no shortage of business for the lenders. In 2010, Gem State payday lenders awarded 499,704 loans for a combined $185.3 million, according to the state finance department's annual lending report. Compared to some of its neighbors, Idaho's regulations create a haven for payday lenders. In Montana, for example, voters in 2010 passed a measure that capped the annual interest rate for

HAILEY • Bring on the blizzards, Magic Valley. Chester won't be getting cold this winter, thanks to the new wool coat of many colors he'll be wearing home to Twin Falls this afternoon. The tiny Yorkshire terrier was outfitted in his new coat by his human companions - Miranda and Desi Overacre — at one of a dozen-plus fiber booths set up at the Trailing of the Sheep Folklife Fair Saturday in Hailey. "I'm just amazed at all the different things people do with wool fiber," said Miranda Overacre, gesturing towards booths that carried everything from marionette animal puppets made of wool to wool caps in the shapes of animals. "And I'm looking forward to Sunday. Even though we have a condo in Sun Valley, this is the first time we've

Medicare Open Enrollment Starts This Saturday

Help is available to review your coverage and see if it's right for you.
TIMES-NEWS
Medicare's open enrollment period is early this year, says the Idaho Department of Insurance. But the state is offering its usual help as enrollees review their current coverage, next year's options and determine if any changes should be made. Open enrollment runs from this Saturday, Oct. 15, through Dec. 7. First, state officials recommend you visit the Medicare Plan Finder compiled by the federal government, at www.medicare.gov. Next, the department's Senior Health Insurance Advisors program has set up a network of enrollment assistance sites where a SHIBA representative will help you navigate the options. Be sure to bring your Medicare Card, a current list of prescriptions with quantity and dosage, proof of income, your Idaho Medicaid card if you receive Medicaid, and any pertinent letters or information from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services or Social Security. Sites in south-central Idaho include the following (be sure to call ahead for appointments):

- Blaine County Senior Center, 721 3rd Ave. S., Hailey; 788-3468.
- Camas County Senior Center, 129 West Willow, Fairfield; 764-2226.
- Cassia Regional Medical Center, 1501 Highland Ave., Burley; 678-2984.
- Community Kitchen, 1004 Burley Ave., Buhl; Wednesdays only. 736-4713.

The DIY Champs

You're about to meet south-central Idaho's champion do-it-yourselfers. The Times-News asked readers about 2011 DIY projects worthy of that honor, and today we're profiling two of our favorites: the Jerome woman and the Burley man who tied for third place. She gave discarded wood new life, and he found a pretty, practical solution to a safety hazard. See those two stories on People 1 today. Then watch for our stories about the second- and first-place winners on Oct. 16 and Oct. 23.

Scientist's Research Produces Risky High

John W. Huffman contributed to the spread of "designer marijuana" so potent, that some of what he made has been declared illegal.

BY DAVID ZUCCHINO
Los Angeles Times

SYLVA, N.C. • John W. Huffman is a bearded, elfin man, a professor of organic chemistry who runs model trains in his basement and tinkers with antique cars. At 79, he walks a bit unsteadily after a couple nasty falls. Relaxing on his back porch in the Nantahala National Forest, watching hummingbirds flit across his rose beds, Huffman looks every bit the wise, venerable academic in repose. But this courtly scientist unwittingly contributed to the spread of "designer marijuana" so potent that the Drug Enforcement Administration has declared some of what he created illegal. Huffman's years of scientific research at Clemson University on the interaction between drugs and brain receptors led to so-called fake marijuana with effects far more powerful — and dangerous — than garden-variety marijuana. "Spice," "K-2," "Skunk" and similar products made using the chemical compounds he formulated have surged in popularity in recent years. That prompted the Drug Enforcement Administration in March to temporarily list "stealth marijuana" products containing three cannabinoid compounds invented by Huffman as Schedule 1 drugs illegal to sell or possess. Some interviewers and critics have

Change is a Good Thing, Don't You Think?

Retired Sept. 1, but so far I haven't had to dial back my notably opulent lifestyle (I drive a 1997 Toyota, I've been to one movie in two years, and I consider salsa a main dish).

See, the good times roll whenever I do the laundry in our household. Never once have I come away with less than a buck worth of coins and currency that fell out of the pockets of dirty clothes. Last weekend, I struck the mother lode: $21.

"Look what I found," I said to my wife, displaying a damp $20 and a equally soggy $1 bill. "It's mine now," Victoria replied, taking the currency and carefully spreading it out on her dresser to dry.

"What happened to 'possession is nine-tenths of the law?'" I wondered.

"I agree wholeheartedly with that," she explained. "That's why I'm taking possession of it."

Things were even more flush when our two daughters were living at home. They'd actually recycle their allowances through the laundry.

"See, it works like this," my wife explained. "On Friday, I give each of the girls a $10 bill. On Sunday, all or most of the money shows up at the bottom of the washer or the dryer. Clearly, if the cash was important to them they'd have taken it out of their pockets before their jeans went into the hamper. The fact that it ends up in the washer means they've forgotten they even had it."

"So, the following Friday I take the same $10 bill and hand it back to them, saying, 'Here's your allowance, sweetheart.' They invariably smile and say, 'Thanks, Mom!'"

Back in my day, though, times was tougher. I got just $2 a week allowance, plus — at the end of the month — any change left at the bottom of my mother's purse.

It worked like this: We lived in a trailer house, so we had to go to the Laundromat every 10 days or so. Mom — a school-teacher — got paid every two weeks, and when she'd deposit her paycheck at the bank she'd always get a $10 roll of quarters.

The coin-operated washers and dryers of the era took dimes and nickels, obtainable from a change machine on the premises. To get the correct change, my mother would remove the paper cylinder off the quarters and let them fall to the bottom of her purse.

And on the 30th or the 31st, I got whatever was left.

When the first G.I. Joe was introduced in 1964, it sold for $4.95 — which for me was two weeks allowance plus whatever came out of Mom's purse. I had managed to save 50 cents extra from mowing the neighbor's lawn, so by the last day of the month I needed just 45 cents.

Unfortunately, Mom was visiting my grandmother up in Soda Springs, so my recently divorced Aunt Carolyn was babysitting.

Feeling sympathetic, Carolyn suggested that there might be 45 cents in spare change under the bed in my room. The color instantly drained from my face.

See, beneath the bed was where I stashed dirty laundry and D.C. Comics whose content wouldn't necessarily please my aunt, a retired Catholic elementary school principal.

"I-I-I-I-I really don't need a G.I. Joe that bad," I stammered.

"Well, at least look," Carolyn said, lifting up first the mattress, then the box springs and finally the frame.

So we went to the Laundromat. By way of retribution, I had to wash both the offending laundry and the comic books (in separate machines). The socks fared somewhat better than the Sgt. Rock graphic novels and five dog-eared copies of Mad magazine.

I vividly remember the cover of the last comic book that went into the washer, probably because I saw one just like it not long ago.

It sold for $1,400 at a collector's auction.

Could you spare me some dirty laundry?

Marijuana

blamed Huffman for turning an entire generation onto “monster weed.”

“It’s become a royal pain in the rear end,” Huffman said recently, reflecting on the unwelcome attention his research has received. “I had a TV station in Moscow accuse me of trying to poison America’s youth.”

In that interview, live on Russian radio, he said, his responses seemed slow because of a satellite delay _ so slow that the questioner accused him of smoking his own creations.

In a separate conversation, a BBC interviewer “basically asked me when I stopped beating my wife,” he said. “They accused me of creating all these horrible drugs.”

But Huffman laughs as he describes emails assuming he has created a super form of medical marijuana or has profited by designing lucrative marijuana substitutes. “We were not. It was all just basic science,” he said. To counter misinformation, he and Clemson have devised a boilerplate statement describing his research and warning against consuming synthetic marijuana.

That hasn’t stopped alert entrepreneurs from using Huffman’s formulas, published in scientific journals. Their products, often sold as “herbal incense” and smoked like traditional marijuana, can produce seizures, hallucinations, tremors, paranoia, convulsions, high blood pressure and rapid heart rate, say emergency room doctors.

Poison control centers have received 4,500 calls over the last two years from people using fake marijuana, according to the American Association of Poison Control Centers.

There also has been “a significant jump” in the last couple of years in emergency room admissions, said DEA spokesman Lawrence Payne. “Unfortunately, there are many retailers out there who care nothing about the products they are selling and what they do to kids,” he said.

No studies have been completed on fake marijuana’s effects on human health or behavior, according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse. But Huffman warns that the compounds can cause high blood pressure, elevated heart rate and “serious and unpredictable psychological effects.”

Of the five cannabinoid compounds declared temporarily illegal by the DEA, the most widely used are three invented by Huffman and bearing his initials: JWH-018, JWH-073 and JWH-200.

“We didn’t think anything of these compounds. We wrote papers about them and that was it _ or so we thought,” he said.

His research colleagues tease him, asking him what mad compounds he’s cooked up lately, or suggesting he open a chain of head shops. A little old lady at his church told him, “Oh, it’s so awful what they’ve done with your stuff!”

On a recent trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., Huffman got a kick out of a sign in front of a head shop that read: “K-2 _ Two For The Price of One!”

And when he gave a talk recently to a group called the Carolina Cannabinoid Cooperative, Huffman titled it, “JWH-018 _ A Good Compound Gone Bad.”

From 1984 until early this year, Huffman and his team at Clemson created 460 synthetic cannabinoid compounds for tests on lab animals. Under a $2 million federal drug grant, they studied the interaction between drugs and brain receptors.

“These receptors don’t exist so that people can smoke marijuana and get high,” Huffman said. “They play a role in regulating appetite, nausea, mood, pain and inflammation.”

Synthetic cannabinoids are structurally different from THC, the active ingredient in marijuana. But they have the same biological effects on the human body, which is why they are useful in research.

DAVID ZUCCHINO • LOS ANGELES TIMES • MCT

John W. Huffman, 79, a professor of organic chemistry, reviewing a research paper at his home in Sylva, N.C. Synthetic cannabinoid chemical compounds created by Huffman and his research team were hijacked by stoners to create potent ‘fake pot,’ sold as ‘herbal incense’ in head shops and convenience stores. ‘Designer dope’ products containing three of Huffman’s chemical compounds were declared temporarily illegal by the DEA in March. Some people have accused Huffman of poisoning America’s youth and creating ‘monster weed.’ ‘It’s become a royal pain in the rear end,’ Huffman said.

In tests on lab animals, some have shown promise in developing treatments for pain and inflammation and some skin cancers, Huffman said. But because of their powerful effects on brain receptors, it’s extremely risky to ingest them.

“These things are dangerous—anybody who uses them is playing Russian roulette,” Huffman said. “They have profound psychological effects. We never intended them for human consumption.”

But after Huffman’s team published its work, opportunists who saw a ready market in stoners seeking stronger highs grabbed the formulas. They mixed the pale, amber, gummy compounds with benign herbs to resemble marijuana.

Huffman said he first got calls in early 2009 about head shops selling products

Although he was irritated that people were smoking his creations to get high, he was not entirely surprised.

The effects of JWH-018 can be 10 times stronger than those of THC, the active compound in marijuana. Some of his more complex compounds are even more potent, he said, and carry an even higher risk of hallucinations and psychosis.

“I always had a hunch that someday somebody would say: ‘Hey, let’s try smoking them.’ And lo and behold, that’s what happened,” he said.

Huffman said other cannabinoids among the 460 are very difficult to make, even for scientists. But the three of his compounds outlawed by the DEA _ especially JWH-018 _ are easily produced.

TFPD TO HOST PRESCRIPTION DRUG DROP-OFF

TIMES-NEWS

The Twin Falls Police De-partment, with the help of Safe Kids Magic Valley and Neuhoﬀ Communications, will provide Magic Valley residents a chance to safely dispose of old prescription medications on Oct. 29.

That day, police will ac-cept unused, unwanted and expired prescription meds on the north side of the KMTV Building, 1100 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The event is in conjunc-tion with the U.S. Drug En-forcement Administration's National Prescription Take Back Day. Data cited na-tionally states that more than 7 million Americans currently abuse prescrip-tion drugs, including about 2,500 teens each day who use them to get high for the first time. Studies show that a majority of abused prescription drugs are ob-tained from family and friends, including the home medicine cabinet.

Twin Falls police collec-tion more than 100 pounds of prescription drugs at a sim-ilar event last spring.

Medical waste, needles or illegal drugs will not be ac-cepted for disposal. For more information, contact Officer Luke Allen at 735-7358 or lallen@tfdid.org.

COMING OUT DAY VIGIL IS TUESDAY

TIMES-NEWS

The College of Southern Idaho's Gay Straight Alliance Club will sponsor an observance of the 23rd annual National Coming Out Day on Tuesday.

Started in 1998, the nationwide annual event is meant to celebrate life beyond the closet doors and to invite more meaningful conversations on what it means to live openly and honestly as a gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender individual, according to a press release.

A candlelight vigil is planned from 7:30-8:30 p.m. on the steps of the Twin Falls County Courthouse. It is free and open to the public.

The club also will hold a free professional counseling night on Monday for students needing to talk to someone about their sexuality or other problems.

Club members say the event will draw attention to concerns that many individuals throughout Idaho could lose their employment and housing for publicly acknowledging their sexual preference. In the release, club president Tracy Bliss also says the observance will give the community an opportunity to see that hate and tolerance toward gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender individuals won't be tolerated.

AGENCY PUSHES RULES TO REDUCE WILDLIFE CONFLICTS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COEUR D'ALENE • The U.S. Forest Service is putting new rules in place Tuesday that prohibit feeding deer and require the use of bear-resistant containers in parts of a national forest that include eastern Washington state, northern Idaho and northwestern Montana.

The rules are an effort to prevent conflicts with bears and other animals, officials said. Visitors to the popular Priest Lake, and backcountry explorers in the Selkirk and Cabinet mountains, will be required to store and dispose food in a “bear-resistant manner.”

“The Priest Lake area has a high density of people, recreation and wildlife, which increases the odds for wildlife conflicts,” said Jason Kirchner, Forest Service spokesman in Coeur d’Alene. “Bears are among the most dangerous animals, but other wildlife can be problems, too, if they’re lured by food. We have a huge issue with people feeding deer in the Sam Owens Campground.”

A woman was treated at a hospital after being raked by a buck’s antlers and having her legs gored in the past week, Kirchner said. Wildlife experts speculated the deer might have been habituated to humans through feeding or even raised as a pet and lost its fear of humans.

The Spokesman-Review reports that the new rules apply to the Priest Lake, Sandpoint and Bonners Ferry ranger districts of the Panhandle National Forests, and will be in effect each year from April 1 to Dec. 1. Kirchner said similar rules already exist in the Colville, Kootenai and Lolo national forests.

He said the agency will see how the rules work in those northern parts of the Panhandle National Forests before applying them farther south to the Coeur d’Alene and St. Joe ranger districts.

“We’re planning on installing more lockers in areas such as Kalispell Island (on Priest Lake) to make it easier to keep food stored properly,” Kirchner said.

Besides prohibiting the feeding of wildlife, the rules will also prohibit in certain areas putting up bird feeders where they could attract bears.

The agency will also designate bear-resistant garbage containers in some areas. New rules in the backcountry will also apply, with hunters required to move wildlife carcasses at least 200 yards from a designated national forest trail and at least half a mile from a camping area.

Livestock deaths, which can attract bears, must be reported within 24 hours, or 48 hours in more remote areas.

come up to see the Trailing of the Sheep parade.”

Some 4,000 people, hailing from as far away as Michigan and even Germany, flooded Hailey’s Roberta McKercher Park Saturday. As the sun highlighted snow on the surrounding peaks, the crowd watched Polish Highlanders as they performed colorful folk dances swinging axes in their white woolen pants, sampled lamb tacos and sliders served up by Hailey restaurants and watched sheep get sheared.

Debbie Dehoney of Eden taught youngsters like 4-year-old Liam Nelson of Hailey how to make a yarn Ojos of God.

“Wrap it around the stick as you turn the stick,” she told the 4-year-old who insisted on doing his in Bronco orange and blue. “It’s like driving a car and turning the steering wheel.”

The 15th Trailing of the Sheep Festival concludes today with a sheep dog competition from 7 a.m. to dusk in Quigley Canyon east of Hailey. A sheep photography workshop starts at 9 a.m. at the Ketchum Post Office on Fourth Avenue.

And a free tour showing off pictures sheepherders have carved on the aspen trees in a canyon a few miles north of Ketchum starts at 2 p.m. at the Ketchum/Sun Valley Ski and Heritage Museum, First and Washington streets.

The actual Trailing of the Sheep Parade begins at noon, running the length of Ketchum’s Main Street. It will feature music and dancing by the Basque Oinkari Dancers, Polish Highlanders, Peruvians and Boise Highlanders. The spotlight, though, will be on 1,500 of Gooding rancher John Faulkner’s sheep parading through town on their way from summer grazing pastures to ranch land further south.

The sheep have spent all summer in the mountains north of Sun Valley away from the hustle and bustle of city life. “So they’re go-payday lenders at 36 percent. In 2007, Oregon lawmakers limited the interest and fees that can be charged. In Washington, a borrower cannot take out unlimited payday loans in the same 12-month period.

Loans

But Idaho payday lenders' interest rates are unlimited, and the state doesn't cap how many payday loans a borrower can take out from multiple lenders.

As a result, the industry has gathered numerous backers and critics. Financial counselors say the ease of obtaining payday loans — often at an annual interest rate of about 521 percent in Idaho — can create a cycle of debt that Idaho residents should avoid at all costs.

But supporters contend the loans fill a niche by providing short-term help banks don't provide to cash-strapped Idahoans.

The pitfalls

Todd Christensen is director of education for Debt Reduction Services, Inc., a Boise-based company that works with people struggling to get out of debt in Idaho and other states. He said that getting a payday loan can be the start of a vicious cycle of additional fees and loans if a borrower is unable to pay the first one off immediately.

"People get into it because they think it's just a one-time thing — 'I just need a little cash to get me through,'" he said.

The need for payday loans often can be traced back to poor budgeting habits or borrowers being overly optimistic about their economic situation, he said.

Since 2010, about one in 45 of his company's Idaho clients filing for bankruptcy listed payday loans among their debts. That number can include extreme cases, such as one client who racked up 23 outstanding payday loans.

For those who are paying the minimum fees on payday loans and are still in debt, Christensen said paying the debt off as quickly as possible is necessary. That may mean only paying the bills that are necessary to survive until the payday loan is eliminated, Christensen said.

"Are there appropriate times to get a payday loan?" he said. "I'm not going to say no, but I think it gets way out of hand for too many people. It's just really easy to lose control of your finances so a lot of people who are going to payday loans are those who are not in control of their finances to begin with."

Borrowers aren't helped, Christensen said, by Idaho regulations that don't prevent payday loan overuse.

"We live in Idaho," he said. "Idaho doesn't really like regulating anything. When it comes to payday loans, that's no exception."

South Central Community Action Partnership, a nonprofit low-income assistance organization in Twin Falls, uncovers payday loan struggles when working on budget plans with people seeking help.

"We're seeing more and more of it," said Leanne Trappen, SCCAP community services director. "What really concerns me is it's so easy to get so that people that really shouldn't be getting loans are getting loans. ... What we do try to do is point out that without those loans you should be able to handle your daily expenses, but because you have those loans, you're unable to meet this need."

Filling a niche?

The industry points out that its lending practices fill a need unaddressed by traditional financial institutions. Its niche is short-term loans for small amounts of money, typically to high-risk borrowers.

"It's the kind of loan that banks and credit unions simply don't make," said Stephen Altobelli, spokesman for Financial Service Centers of America, a trade association for lenders.

Altobelli puts the industry standard fee at about $15 for each $100 borrowed for every two weeks — a bit less than the state's finance department. He said that looking at the annual interest rate alone is misleading because payday lenders intend for their loans to be short-term.

Those triple-digit annual interest rates are calculated by applying the fee for a two-week loan across all two-week periods in a year.

But if a payday loan is paid off promptly, a consumer doesn't spend a year paying it off, Altobelli said.

"The fact is, it's not a loan you take out for a year," he said. "It's a loan you take out for two weeks."

It's a high-risk business, Altobelli said, and one that still has the same overhead as any other retail business. He also stressed that the cost of a payday loan can be better than the alternative of paying service fees to a bank for bounced checks.

"Payday loans are like anything else," he said. "It's not black and white and it's not a simple issue. The consumers who use the product are not in simple situations and the alternatives aren't simple. I think the industry feels misunderstood, frankly, by regulators and legislators and the media."

Jennifer Corrao is regional manager of ColorTyme, a payday lender along Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The business reopened last year after closing in 2005. Business has increased every month since, she said.

She said clients seeking payday loans can be in a wide range of circumstances, such as needing to pay a fine for a traffic ticket or an unexpected car repair bill. In cases where someone is facing multiple overdraft fees from their bank, she said, it can be cheaper to take out a payday loan to avoid overdrafts.

Corrao believes the number of payday lending operations will keep fees competitive, despite the lack of any legal cap on interest rates.

If someone cannot pay their loan back after three renewals, ColorTyme works out a payment plan with them, she said.

Other states, other rules

In recent years, payday lenders have faced a growing trend of new restrictions throughout the U.S.

In Washington state, a law that started last year limits the number of payday loans borrowers can take out each year, with a network in place to monitor the loans.

Since 2008, voters in Arizona, Ohio and Montana have supported capping interest rates at 36 percent or lower. In 2006, Congress limited interest rates to 36 percent for members of the military.

"The best public policy is to limit the rate that payday lenders can charge to 36 percent," said Diane Standaert, legislative counsel for the Center for Responsible Lending, a watchdog organization that advocates against abusive lending practices. "It is not a two-week quick financial fix; it is a long-term debt

At a Glance Payday Loans

How a payday loan typically works:

A payday loan is a cash advance that a lender secures with a postdated check and no credit check.

An example:

- The borrower of a two-week payday loan of $100 would write a check for $100 plus a fee, typically about $20.
- The lender agrees to hold the check until the borrower is paid, usually for a 14-day period.
- When the deadline arrives, the lender deposits the check. If the borrower cannot pay the entire loan back, it can be renewed, for a fee, for another two weeks. The law allows the same payday loan to be renewed up to three times — $80 in fees on a $100 loan in the given scenario. At that point, the loan must be repaid and no more fees can be charged.
- Though not required under law, many licensed payday lenders in Idaho offer a repayment plan to borrowers who cannot meet the terms of their original loan after three renewals, said Mike Larsen, consumer finance bureau chief for the Idaho Department of Finance.

Idaho borrower rights

- A payday loan cannot be more than $1,000 in principal.
- The same lender cannot give a client another payday loan to pay off the first one after three renewals. Nothing prevents a bor-product and, in fact, the business model depends on borrowers being stuck in it for the long term."

Montana's approval came last year, with 72 percent of voters supporting the ballot measure. It's now one of 17 states, including Oregon, that prohibit triple-digit annual interest rates.

The Montana Community Foundation organized the effort to get the measure on the ballot after failed attempts to get bills through the Montana Legislature. The industry organized opposition efforts both when signatures were rower from taking out multiple loans from different payday lenders.

- Borrowers can return the money at no cost by the end of the next business day after taking out a payday loan.
- Payday lenders can charge only $20 for a bounced check.
- Lenders must disclose what their fees are when converted into an annual interest rate.
- State law prohibits criminal prosecution of defaulters, though lenders can still try to collect by suing in civil court.
- Borrowers do not have to pay back the principal or interest/fees of a payday loan obtained from an unlicensed lender. Under a state law passed in 2009, a loan from an unlicensed lender is void. Source: Idaho Department of Finance.

collected and leading up to the election.

Linda Reed, president and chief executive officer of the foundation, said that since the ballot passed, payday lenders have started closing throughout the state after years of expansion. Some are still open so they can collect loans taken out prior to the change, and others have turned into pawn shops, she said.

"It was work worth doing," she said.

Boise Unveils Downtown Car Sharing Program

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Stuck in downtown Boise and need a car to get around?

City officials are testing out a new solution.

As part of a partnership with private business, the city is making two cars available to anyone willing to sign up for its new car-sharing program.

Downtown Business Association Director Karen Sander says the idea is to give residents and downtown workers a convenient and energy efficient option to get around town. Another goal of the so-called “WeCar” program is to help those using other forms of transportation to commute to the city’s downtown.

The program is the result of a partnership between the downtown business association, the city and Enterprise Rent-A-Car.

Those hoping to use the cars must sign up as a member of WeCar then reserve a vehicle online.

Wyoming Ski Area For Sale

The owners of Wyoming’s oldest ski resort are looking for a buyer amid persistent losses at its ski operation.

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

JACKSON, Wyo. • Plenty of Jackson locals enjoy having Snow King Resort just a few blocks from where they work so they can make a couple quick ski runs over their lunch breaks. Such loyalty and ample snow over the past couple winters haven’t kept ski operations at the resort from losing between $500,000 and $1 million a year. Now, after a nonprofit community group tried but failed to step in and run Snow King, the 72-year-old resort is up for sale. Locals are left wondering what will become of Wyoming’s first ski area. For many, it’s not only the ski spot closest to home, but the one nearest their hearts, despite existing for decades in the shadow of the vacation destinations Jackson Hole Mountain Resort across the valley and Grand Targhee Resort across the Teton Range. “It’s in town. It’s affordable. It’s a great place to learn to ski for young kids and expose kids to skiing, a great place for families. It really to me is the center of the recreational community in Jackson,” said Steve Sullivan, president of the nonprofit Friends of Snow King. In a sense, Snow King’s small-town charm also has been its downfall. Many of Jackson’s youth used to ski at Snow King on the way home from school, said Manuel Lopez, managing partner of the resort. Nowadays, not so many kids live nearby, and those who do have more options for winter recreation. Also, fewer people who ski at Snow King bother to buy lift tickets. “It’s a fashion to hike up the hill and ski down. But we are grooming the trails, we are making the snow,” Lopez said. He dismissed any suggestion that Snow King could put up a gate. Nationwide, small ski areas near urban centers did relatively well during the recession, said Troy Hawks, spokesman for the National Ski Areas Association. “Folks were just choosing to ski closer to home, maybe families that traditionally had taken a vacation at a destination area in Wyoming, Colorado or California,” Hawks said. Snow King somewhat offsets its wintertime losses with summertime activities including an alpine slide and miniature golf course.

Beet Crop Death Shrinks Sugar Stockpiles

BY JOE RICHTER
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • U.S. sugar stockpiles are shrinking to the lowest in 37 years after rain and freezing weather damaged the beet crop, potentially reversing a price slump and forcing the government to ease import limits. Farmers in Minnesota, the nation’s biggest beet grower, will reap 19 percent less than last year and output will drop in four more of the 10 biggest producing states, the Department of Agriculture estimates. Domestic prices may rise 10 percent to 41 cents a pound by year end, said Frank Jenkins, the president of Jenkins Sugar Group Inc., the largest U.S. raw-sugar broker. Sugar is the only major agricultural commodity produced in the United States that is subject to import quotas, and the USDA increased the limit by 45 percent this year as futures surged 21 percent in the three months through August. Retail prices have gained 9 percent since the start of January, twice the rate of food inflation. Rising costs are squeezing margins for Kraft Foods Inc. and Hormel Foods Corp. “If you’re a candy or pop maker, you’re going to have a headache,” said Sterling Smith, an analyst at Country Hedging Inc. in St. Paul, Minn. A smaller beet harvest “is going to increase the costs of sweeteners in general,” he said. Stockpiles in the U.S., the world’s fourth-largest consumer, will drop more than 35 percent in the year through August 2012 to almost 1.13 million short tons (1.02 million metric tons), the lowest since 1975, the USDA estimates. Inventories will equal 9.8 percent of consumption this year, the least in 38 years. India, China and Brazil are the world’s biggest consuming nations. Consumers are still paying more. Retail sugar averaged 70.1 cents a pound in U.S. cities in August, 16 percent more than a year earlier and the highest since at least 1980, Bureau of Labor Statistics data show. Food-price inflation is running at 3 percent to 4 percent this year, Please see SUGAR, M4

From All Systems Fail to Security For All

Take one financial crisis, fold in a federal budget crisis, add in a nasty recession and mix with two decades of rapid globalization, and what you have is a recipe for the deep economic insecurity now felt by much of the American middle class. What has been revealed is that the systems set up during an industrial era to provide health care, retirement income and support during economic downturns are inadequate for and ill-suited to our post-industrial, globalized economy. Not only do these systems no longer provide the economic security Americans crave, but they have reduced the efficiency and flexibility of labor markets, exacerbated the growth of income inequality and reduced the competitiveness of American companies. “The existing social safety net policies and programs . . . are not well designed to reduce insecurity, increase risk-taking and help the nation prosper in the global innovation economy,” says a National Governors Association working paper.

Our setups for health insurance, unemployment insurance and pensions were all designed for a time when male heads of households worked their whole careers for one or two large and stable companies, layoffs were short and temporary, and retirement stretched from 65 to 75. That’s all changed. Women account for a much bigger share of the workforce. People typically have a dozen or more employers during their careers, at companies of all sizes, with chances that the company they work for will be bought up or closed down by the time they retire. Layoffs are common and permanent. And retirement starts anywhere from 55 to 75 and stretches into a person’s 80s and 90s. As a result, defined-benefit pension systems are history, unemployment insurance covers only about a quarter of those without a job, and health insurance costs are rising so fast that growing numbers of private-sector employees are going without. Oh, and did I mention that Medicare, Social Security and public-sector pension programs are gobbling up government budgets? There are thousands of proposals for fixing all this. It seems clear that the first step is to move from employer-based systems to ones in which people and the government take a broader role. In health care, for example, one can imagine a system in which all workers and nonworkers are required to buy insurance from the government-regulated exchanges being set up in each region or state under the Obama health-care reform plan. In lieu of the tax exemption for employer-paid health insurance that benefits the rich and encourages lavish coverage, everyone would get a voucher to help pay for policies offered at the exchange, which could range from low-premium, high-deductible policies to cover “catastrophic” illness to high-premium policies that cover virtually everything.

Vouchers would vary according to household size and income, allowing for an additional subsidy for low-income families. Employers could provide additional taxable vouchers to employees, but otherwise their role would mainly be as premium collectors. In time, Medicare and Medicaid could offer their own vouchers, using exchanges and managed competition to replace current programs. If this sounds broadly like a shotgun marriage between Obamacare and the plan offered by Paul Ryan, the Republican chairman of the House Budget Committee, that’s because it is. It would maintain the private-insurance model while giving most consumers more choices. It would ensure a choice of affordable, basic insurance plans for all Americans, irrespective of income, age, geography or health condition. It would generate a one-time cut in premiums through increased competition, reduced administrative and marketing costs and the creation of larger risk pools. And it would Please see PEARLSTEIN, M2

Zions Bank Sued in Utah Over Fees

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, • Customers who say Zions Bank makes it difficult — if not impossible — to avoid overdraft fees from debit card transactions have filed a lawsuit against the bank in a Utah federal court. The lawsuit, which seeks class-action status, was filed this week by three law firms on behalf of Melinda Barlow, of Sandy and other customers who were charged overdraft fees under policies that were in place between 2005 and 2010. Court papers say the bank’s policies allowed it to manipulate and alter the order in which debit transactions were posted in order to maximize the number of overdrafts, increasing the fees collected from customers. The lawsuit also contends the bank does not routinely decline debit transactions when it’s clear that doing so will overdraft a customer’s account, which also results in additional charges to consumers. For Barlow, a Zions customer since 1990, the practices resulted in about $100 in overdraft charges on a single day in 2009, the lawsuit states. Another contention of the lawsuit: Zions doesn’t routinely post deposits ahead of debit transactions, which could prevent accounts from becoming overdrawn. “As a result of those acts and practices, Zions Bank’s customers have been charged excessive overdraft fees,” the lawsuit states. “Zions Bank’s collections of those excessive fees is patently unconscionable and unfair.” The lawsuit’s allegations are specific to Zions roughly 130 bank branches in Utah and Idaho. Parent company Zions Bancorp also operates financial institutions in Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Texas, and Washington. Zions Executive Vice Please see FEES, M4

Sprint Down After Testy Meeting with Analysts

NEW YORK (AP) • The struggling wireless carrier Sprint Nextel Corp. said Friday that it will need to raise more money to build a higher-speed data network even as it must spend more to subsidize sales of the new iPhone to its customers. Sprint's stock fell 20 percent. Shares of Clearwire Corp. fell 32 percent after Sprint disclosed details of its new network, known as 4G, for fourth-generation. Sprint said it will stop selling phones and other devices compatible with Clearwire's current network at the end of next year, after it switches on its own 4G network. Sprint is Clearwire's largest customer and majority owner, but doesn't control it. Phones labeled "Sprint 4G" use Clearwire's network today. Sprint's stock rose as much as 13 percent on that news, but reversed those gains after Sprint disclosed the need to raise more money for the new network and failed to offer earnings guidance that incorporates the effect of the iPhone. At an event for investors and analysts in New York on Friday, CEO Dan Hesse said that the iPhone would over time "be one of our most profitable devices" but did not elaborate. Sprint, which is based in Overland Park, Kan., started taking pre-orders for the iPhone 4S on Friday and hopes the phone will help the company recruit and keep customers in competition with AT&T Inc. and Verizon Wireless. Those two larger carriers had been able to lure people with the iPhone, which Sprint didn't have until now. But Sprint will pay Apple Inc. dearly for the privilege of

DETROIT (AP) • General Motors Co. is delaying plans to add a second shift at the factory that makes Chevrolet Volt electric cars. The company said Friday it has found ways to make one shift more efficient, so it can produce the same number of cars as two shifts. Spokesman Chris Lee says GM still will add 300 workers at the Detroit-Hamtramck plant — but not a second shift — by the end of this year to make more Volts. In May, the company announced it would add a second shift late this year to increase Volt production from 16,000 per year to 60,000. A second shift will be added, though, but not until the last half of 2012, when the plant starts building the 2013

Chevrolet Malibu midsize sedan in addition to the Volt. GM said the change had nothing to do with Volt sales, which have been slower than expected. The company said demand for the car still is strong and it's sticking with plans to build 60,000 next year. That number includes the Opel Ampera, a version of the Volt to be sold in Europe. "This decision will significantly reduce costs, and has no impact on the plant's ability to make 60,000 Volts and Amperas," Lee said in a statement. "This approach is just a more efficient way to make the same number of vehicles."

give employers and government a way to control the long-term growth in the cost of Medicare, Medicaid and private coverage. Significantly, it would also largely get employers out of the health insurance business and end the threat that losing a job means losing medical care. In the case of retirement income, only about 17 percent of private-sector employees are accruing benefits in a plan that provides retirees with guaranteed monthly income. Such plans proved too costly and risky for employers and useless to employees who don't stay long enough for their benefits to be vested. Today, about 60 percent of private-sector employees participate in 401(k)-type plans in which employers and employees make monthly, tax-free contributions into selected mutual funds. The defined-contribution plans eliminate the risk for employers and give workers immediate vesting, portability and control over how their funds are invested. But they also have disadvantages. Most employers and employees do not contribute enough to fund a decent retirement. Many workers are uncomfortable making investment decisions and befuddled by the range of options. Most significantly, retirees are saddled with the risk that they will outlive their money. The ideal system would combine the best of the old defined-benefit pension (guaranteed lifetime benefits, lower administrative costs) with the benefits of retirement accounts (greater choice, portability, immediate vesting and ownership of assets). AllianceBernstein, a money management and market research firm, offers such a hybrid product to large companies, mostly as an alternative to a defined-benefit pension. The only choice employees make is to designate the year they plan to retire, leaving it to AllianceBernstein to make the investment decisions and gradually adjust the portfolio from stocks to bonds as the retirement year approaches.

Starting at age 50, accounts are charged a small annual insurance fee, based on the size of the account, to guarantee retirees will receive a fixed monthly payment irrespective of how long they live or what happens to their investments. Those monthly checks are drawn from the account, so long as there is enough money in it. Should it ever be depleted, the insurers will make good on the guarantee. One can imagine variations on AllianceBernstein's product — one with a higher investment risk and lower guaranteed payment, one with a lower risk and higher payment, maybe one in between. And one can imagine that asset managers might offer such products through a regulated exchange not unlike the one used for health insurance, with employees free to choose from the competing offers. The government would set minimum and maximum tax-free contributions for both employers and employees, with subsidies for lower-income workers. Employers would be largely out of the picture. Initially, such a system could be used to build another layer of retirement security on top of Social Security. Once people got used to it, a political decision could be made (or not) to cap Social Security benefits at current levels and begin a gradual conversion over many decades from the pay-as-you-go system to the pre-funded and privatized system that Republicans have advocated. Also, this system could retain the take-from-the-rich progressivity that Democrats demand. Best of all, it would increase retirement savings and benefits for everyone. A variation on this model of regulated competition could transform unemployment insurance into a more universal program focused more on retraining and re-employment. One can imagine insurance companies offering workers a limited number of competing programs through regional exchanges, with mandatory contributions from employers and employees. Benefits could be structured to decline gradually after six months unless regional unemployment exceeded 8 percent. While unemployed — or at any time — workers could withdraw their contributions from their individual accounts to pay for education, training and counseling programs that meet federal standards for completion, placement rates and cost-effectiveness. At retirement, money left in the accounts could be rolled over.

These aren't mostly my ideas — they are drawn from two decades of academic research, industry proposals and think-tank papers from the right and the left. The only thing radical about them is that they dare to ignore the paralyzing reality of a polarized political system that has left Americans with a frayed safety net perfectly designed for their grandparents.

Census: Housing Bust Worst Since the Great Depression

BY HOPE YEN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The American dream of home-ownership has felt its biggest drop since the Great Depression, according to new 2010 census figures released Thursday.

The analysis by the Census Bureau found the homeownership rate fell to 65.1 percent last year. While that level remains the second highest decennial rate, analysts say the U.S. may never return to its mid-decade housing boom peak in which nearly 70 percent of occupied households were owned by their residents.

The reason: a longer-term economic reality of tighter credit, prolonged job losses and reduced government involvement.

Unemployed young adults are least likely to own, delaying first-time home purchases to live with Mom and Dad. Middle-aged adults 35-64, mostly homeowners who were hit with mortgage foreclosures or bankruptcy after the housing bust in 2006, are at their lowest levels of ownership in decades.

Measured by race, the homeownership gap between whites and blacks is now at its widest since 1960, wiping out more than 40 years of gains.

"The changes now taking place are mind-boggling: the housing market has completely crashed and attitudes toward housing are shifting from owning to renting," said Patrick Newport, economist with IHS Global Insight. "While 10 years ago owning a home was the American Dream, I'm not sure a lot of people still think that way."

He noted the now-diminished roles of mortgage buyers Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which for decades at the urging of government helped enable loans to borrowers with poor credit, many of them minorities. In a shift, the Obama administration earlier this year said it would move from a longtime government focus on promoting homeownership for all and instead steer people with low incomes toward renting where appropriate.

Congress has been considering whether to eliminate the federal tax deduction for home-mortgage interest, a popular incentive to home-buying that's been in place since the early 20th century.

Given depressed housing values that could continue for at least another four to five years, it now makes more sense in most cases to rent than own, Newport said.

Nationwide, the homeownership rate fell to 65.1 percent — or 76 million occupied housing units that were owned by their residents — from 66.2 percent in 2000. That drop-off of 1.1 percentage points is the largest since 1940, when homeownership plummeted 4.2 percentage points during the Great Depression to a low of 43.6 percent.

Since 1940, the number of Americans owning homes has steadily increased in each decennial census due to a mostly booming economy, favorable tax laws and easier financing. The one exception had been 1980-1990, when ownership remained unchanged at 64.2 percent.

Broken down by state, 41 states saw declines in home ownership since 2000, many of them in the South and West where foreclosures were more common. They were led by South Carolina, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and North Carolina. On the other end of the scale, states with higher shares of vacation homes owned by affluent baby boomers saw small increases in ownership, including New Hampshire, Hawaii, Alaska and Vermont.

The U.S. housing crisis is far worse than the experience in most Western industrialized nations, which, unlike the U.S., did not foster markets of subprime lending to promote homeownership. The U.S. continues to maintain a relatively high rate of homeownership, surpassed only by countries such as Spain, Ireland, Australia and England.

"In the U.S., there's still a strong cultural pull toward homeownership, because in normal times it's always been seen as a way to build net worth and equity," said Dan McCue, research manager at Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies. But with many former homeowners now renting, he said, clearly that dynamic has changed: "It puts a renewed focus on rentals, and on ways to create new opportunities for low-income households to build their wealth."

Blacks, who as a whole have lower income and higher unemployment than other groups, were particularly set back by the housing bust. Their homeownership rate fell from 46.3 percent in 2000 to 44.3 percent; among whites, the rate dipped slightly from 72.4 percent to 72.2 percent. Whites are now on average 1.63 times more likely than blacks to own a home, the widest gap since 1960.

Among all minorities, homeownership in the U.S. rose slightly over the past decade to 48 percent from 47.4 percent, boosted by more home buying among the younger and larger Hispanic population. Hispanic homeownership increased from 45.7 percent to 47.3 percent.

In all, nearly 44 percent of all renters in the U.S. are minorities, compared with only 22 percent of homeowners. Broken down by state, minorities make up more than half of all renters in 10 states and the District of Columbia, up from 6 in 2000 — with the new states being New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Louisiana and New Mexico.

"There is no doubt that a large part of the white-minority economic divide is reflected in the disproportionate minority representation among the nation's renters," said William H. Frey, a demographer at

Brookings Institution, who analyzed the race data. "The recent financial crises, including large numbers of subprime loans to African Americans, has dramatically widened the white-black homeownership disparity."

Fees

President Rob Brough said the company can't comment on the details of pending litigation. However, Brough said he believed this was the first litigation brought against Zions related to the issue of overdraft fees or policies.

But it adds to a long list of such lawsuits against other banks nationwide.

In August, a federal judge in California ordered Wells Fargo & Co. to change what he called "unfair and deceptive business practices" that led customers to pay multiple overdraft fees, and to pay $203 million back to customers.

A month earlier, a federal judge in Florida said customers from San Francisco-based Union Bank can team up as a class to sue over its overdraft fee policy. That case is one of about 35 from around the country consolidated in Florida involving banks like JP-Morgan Chase & Co. and big regional players like Regions Bank, U.S. Bancorp and BB&T Corp.

The Utah lawsuit seeks a recovery of fees and other restitution payments for losses customers have suffered "as the result of Zions Bank's unlawful and unconscionable overdraft fee practices and policies." It also asks a federal judge to bar Zions from continuing the policies.

U.S. banks pulled in overdraft revenue of about $37 billion a year before federal regulations kicked in last year, requiring that customers agree to use overdraft programs and limiting the number of fees that can be charged.

Sugar

the USDA estimates.

"Supplies have been very tight for our members," said Susan Smith, a senior vice president of public affairs at the National Confectioners Association, whose members include Kraft and Hershey Co. "The price that our companies are paying is higher than it would be on the world market."

Kraft, based in Northfield, Ill., raised prices this year. Costs will probably increase in the "low teens" compared with 2010, Chief Financial Officer Dave Brearton said on a conference call in August.

Sugar "is a big one because of what we make," said John Simley, a spokesman for the company, which makes Oreo cookies and Cadbury chocolate.

Operating profit at Austin, Minn.-based Hormel's specialty food unit, which makes ingredients for food manufacturers, fell 8 percent in the quarter ended July 31, as "steep" cost increases for sugar and dairy helped erase the benefit of rising sales, Chief Executive Officer Jeff Ettinger said on a Sept. 7 conference call.

Beets supplied about 42 percent of the sugar consumed by Americans last year, with imports and domestic cane accounting for the rest, government data show.

The USDA has cut its crop forecast twice in as many months and will probably do so again in its next report on Oct. 12, said Jimmy Tintle, an analyst at Transworld Futures in Tampa, Fla.

As many as 10,000 acres of beets were lost to disease or floods in May and June, equal to 2.3 percent of Minnesota's harvested area last year, according to Mohamed Khan, a beet specialist from North Dakota State University and the University of Minnesota. More wet weather that followed delayed planting and made the crop more vulnerable to disease, he said.

Temperatures in mid-September in areas from eastern North Dakota into Minnesota averaged 28 degrees Fahrenheit to 33 degrees, according to World Weather Inc., based in Overland Park, Kan.

OUR VIEW

Anatomy of a Press Release

Every day, the Times-News gets dozens of press releases. They come to us from stores, musicians, and politicians, all looking for free publicity for their event or platform. Most of the time, we're happy to lend them space, but we also like to check all releases for both spin and accuracy before we publish them. In the interest of transparency, here's a look at a recent release from Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho. In this case, the release is accurate, although much of the data is represented to look scarier than it might actually be.

The call to action

Completely true: There is definitely a tax hike coming. The part about particularly affecting American business, seniors and investors of all sizes is alarmist, though. The impending tax hike would largely affect businesses and investors, but the inclusion of "seniors" into the phrase makes the hike seem more all-encompassing than it is.

The numbers, part one

Here's where things start to get subjective. In the case of the "guaranteed 3.8 percent tax from the president's healthcare law," it's a half truth. There is a 3.8 percent tax coming for the new health care laws, but most of us will never pay it.

The tax is on "unearned" income, which is mostly dividends and income made from investments, and it only applies if you're making more than $250,000 as a couple (or $200,000 for singles).

That rules out a lot of us. It applies on home sales, too. If you're married and sell your home, you'll pay the tax — but only if you walk away with half a million dollars in net profit.

The law applies to selling a business or other capital gains, too, but you'd have to have a business worth a lot of money and still be drawing a pretty hefty salary.

The numbers, part two

These numbers sound pretty scary, too. And, technically, they're all accurate. But the truth lies in how they're cast. Here's the short version:

58% increase: The capital gains rate is currently 15 percent. If the Bush tax cuts expire, that goes up to 20 percent. Add the aforementioned Medicare tax (if your salary is more than $200,000), and it could go as high as 23.8 percent. That's 8.8 percent higher, and not something to take lightly — but it doesn't sound as dire as a 58 percent increase.

189% increase: The other number has gone through a similar treatment. It is technically accurate, but there's more to it.

This staggering percentage pertains if you factor in all of the worst-case scenarios. In order to hit that increase, you'd have to be in the highest tax bracket possible — making $380,000 per year. If the Bush cuts expire, the bracket for people at that level of income goes up 4.6 percent. Add in the 3.8 percent increase from the previous example.

Now, toss in the hammer — that any short-term gains you make have to be taxed at the same rate as the rest of your income — and you have a substantial increase.

But that 189 percent number only pertains to people who are making more than $380,000 per year in earned income and who make a large share of their income through investing — hardly a statistic that applies to most seniors.

The soundbites

Farmers and ranchers? Where did that come from? While it's true that some farmers and ranchers deal in capital gains in excess of $500,000 for their families, the tax is realistically one that will be paid by investors dealing in large sums of money and those selling a business lock, stock and barrel.

Adding farmers and ranchers into the sound bite seems like a heavy-handed way to pander to rural Idahoans.

The third-party endorsement

Of course, every press release needs to have an endorsement by someone other than the originators.

In this case, it's the Alliance for Savings and Investments, a coalition of companies like large telecoms and investment firms.

It's a credible group, but it's also one whose primary position statement is "making permanent the differential tax rates on capital gains and dividends."

Hardly a neutral party.

The background

You might recognize these as the "Bush tax cuts" that were extended by President Obama through 2012. What's not mentioned is that, should the cuts stay in place to 2020, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that it would add $3.3 trillion to the national debt.

Summary & analysis

As with most press releases we receive, Crapo's release is completely factual. But the data is also spun harder than it should be.

We believe that the truth of the matter should stand on its own. Relying on the most hyperbolic of methods to crunch statistics and resorting to "we must pass this now" -style scare tactics only result in increasing the divide between us all.

Our elected officials should stick with the facts, and help educate us in making up our minds, instead of trying to guide us through selective representation of the data.

The Difference Between Twitter and Facebook (and Why You Should Care)

Most of you have a Facebook page, even if it's just because your kids made you set it up so they could more easily send photos of your grandkids.

But when it comes to Twitter, many of you are largely in the dark.

"What's the point of Twitter?" I've heard folks ask.

A little something happened to me on Thursday that may help explain the powerful second sibling of social media:

On a cold, rainy morning, I sought comfort food in the form of an Egg McMuffin from McDonalds. I pulled up, ordered and breezed through the drive thru without giving it a second thought.

Josh Awtry

Letter from the Editor

Three minutes later, my phone chirped at me.

"I just took your order at McD's!" said a Twitter alert. The sender, who goes by the Twitter handle Landoneatsfood, is someone I'd never met in person, and never talked to, online or off.

I first became aware of Landon Smith — along with a few dozen other Magic Valley residents — in my first week on the job. I used Twitter's search page to find everybody I could that was using the service within a 50-mile radius of Twin Falls. I chose to "follow" them, which meant that I could see their tweets. Most decided to follow me back, so they could see mine.

I've kept up a dialogue with some, but many, like Landon, led their own lives, tweeted their own messages and never really engaged in a conversation. I knew his photo from the tweets that would breeze by on my screen, and he must have recognized mine.

The spontaneous, human connection caused me to modify my social media elevator pitch:

Facebook is for connecting with people you know. Twitter is for connecting with people you should know.

On Facebook, you tend to "friend" your real-life friends: family, colleagues and people you come across in real life. Twitter, on the other hand, is less concerned with your real-life circles and more focused on your interests and geography, aligning you with others who have similar hobbies or live in similar places.

I'd never have met Landon without Twitter. Because I'm guilty of the same thing we all are: Surrounding yourself with people who are a lot like us.

More Online Courses is a Good Thing for Students

Like Florida, Idaho is leading the way in innovative education reform via incorporating online courses (Idaho to take comment on online education rule, Sept. 28). As executive director of Northwest Professional Educators, (a non-union teacher organization with members in Idaho), we are pleased to offer member feedback on this issue.

Clearly we are moving in the direction of incorporating technology into the everyday life of students. As an NWPE member points out, online classes can provide great opportunities for students seeking to pursue academic disciplines that are currently unavailable to them. While many NWPE members have valid concerns about mandating online classes, the current requirement is a compromise that starts the program off on a cautionary foot to ensure true educational advancement.

Many NWPE members cite the need for increased online fluency among students. The reality is, many college courses are now conducted online and most contact in the business world is done online. Exposure to and achievement in online classes, in addition to traditional course delivery, can provide students with the independence, knowledge and academic diversity required for post graduation success.

Our first priority is what best serves Idaho’s students, but we must also consider how increasing online courses can potentially preserve and enhance teacher jobs by saving limited education resources. It can also increase educator opportunities and provide flexibility in student and teacher schedules.

We urge the State Board of Education to consider these points and encourage all educators to make their views known.

Cope Unable to Go Against His Principles

With the recent increase in city utilities, I am more than convinced we need new people on city council.

How do the people that are already on a fixed income, dealing with the cost of living going up but not their income, handle this? Why did they choose to raise our rates when they could have sold some of the land they are not utilizing and not raise the rates?

If Kevin Cope was on the city council, he would not have voted rates increased. He believes that the city should never ask the community to do more than what the city has done. He would have fought to have land sold. He understands that the people are financially struggling and would do everything possible to avoid raising rates or fees.

Kevin will be one city councilman that is there to truly represent the people of the city for Seat 7. He will do what the majority of the constituents want. Kevin is unable to go against his principles. Kevin wants to bring good paying jobs with benefits to the community and he is willing to work hard to accomplish that.

Kevin will work for all people young, middle aged and those like me and above, ready to retire or retired. I am almost 62. I want to have the opportunity to enjoy my retirement years, not have to work till I have one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel.

With Kevin on city council,

I feel that he will help when it comes to city affairs. This Nov. 8 when casting your vote, please consider voting for Kevin Cope. It will be the best vote you cast.

Protest New Apartment Complex at City Council

To the parents of children who attend I.B. Perrine or Robert Stuart schools:

The traffic on Sparks between Falls and Caswell is already a tragedy waiting to happen. The development of an apartment complex at the north corner of Robbins and Washington will add approximately 100 more cars per day. This will further endanger children approaching and leaving their parents’ vehicles, as well as when crossing Sparks, Robbins, Falls and Caswell.

Help protect your children. Attend the city council meeting on Oct. 10 to protest this development and the ensuing traffic that will endanger your children.

If Facebook is a giant family reunion, Twitter is an exponentially wide-casting CB radio network. You can just listen to strangers, or you can jump into the conversation.

In the Middle East, Twitter has been highlighted as helping to topple regimes and be a great equalizer.

While its effects in the Magic Valley are more subdued, its ability to connect strangers is no less powerful.

Why We Don’t Cover Suicides

The Perrine Bridge is a regional landmark we’re all proud of, but it’s height makes it a destination for those seeking a way out.

When someone jumps off the bridge with the intent of committing suicide, it can create ripples through our community.

People turn to the paper for information on the death and often wonder if they missed a story, or if we’re covering something up. Enough of you have asked that I wanted to clarify our position:

The Times-News’ policy is to not publish information on suicides. We believe that doing so calls attention to a sad event which should have none, and the posthumous publicity might convince someone else to do the same thing.

We don’t differentiate between the methods people may employ, and that includes jumping from a landmark.

There may be rare times when we make exceptions – if the event caused such a public disturbance as to disrupt traffic flow or cause related news events to occur, we’d consider running enough of it to answer reader questions.

But, generally, you won’t find details on suicides in the newspaper. It’s a tragic enough event on its own.

Here's The Tax System We Need

Tax reform is back on the national agenda, the result of public disdain for the current tax system, if something so chaotic and ad hoc can be called a system.

Once you look beyond the consensus for change, there remains the difficult job of identifying a specific reform proposal with bipartisan appeal that meets what Americans want in a tax regime: namely, a tax code that is fair, clear and efficient, and that encourages growth and job creation. It probably would help, too, if Warren Buffett smiled on it.

Such a proposal exists; in fact, it has been around for about 15 years. It's called the Unlimited Savings Allowance Tax System, or USA Tax. It deserves a new look today.

The USA Tax Act was introduced in the Senate in 1995 by two of the finest legislators of their generation, Democrat Sam Nunn and Republican Pete Domenici. Its supporters included then-Sens. Robert Bennett, Bob Kerrey, Joseph Lieberman and, yes, businessman Warren Buffett. The proposal was that this tax would replace, not supplement, current business and personal income taxes.

For individuals, the USA Tax has two essential characteristics. First, through a combination of graduated rates, large exemptions and a deductible family living allowance, it can be made as progressive as policymakers choose.

Additionally, the USA Tax would permit individuals an unlimited deduction for personal savings. In other words, taxpayers would subtract their net new savings each year from their annual income. They would be taxed on the remainder, which, by definition, is their annual consumption. To keep the base broad, there would be few other deductions and credits, but those would include, critically, a new payroll tax credit and a new deduction for post-secondary education.

John Endean

The Washington Post

On the business side, the USA Tax would levy a low flat tax on all businesses, regardless of how they are organized. It would be territorial, covering only revenue earned in the United States. It would also be adjustable, excluding export sales from the business tax base while imposing the low, flat rate on imported items. Most importantly, it would provide businesses with an annual and unlimited deduction for new capital investment in the United States.

At the center of the proposal are the unlimited deductions for personal savings and business investment. Saving and investment are the keys to long-term growth and job creation.

The USA Tax's unlimited deductions eliminate a major problem with the tax code today: the multiple taxation of savings and investment. By deferring taxes on savings until that savings is consumed, sums that are already tracked by the IRS in brokerage and banking accounts, the USA Tax ensures that every dollar is taxed only once.

The individual savings deduction also carries profound implications for tax simplification. With it, no one will need to invest in nonproductive or superfluous business arrangements to avoid the personal income tax. Just by keeping money in the bank, individuals can defer taxes on that income.

The savings deduction would render obsolete the tax-shelter industry while giving all taxpayers, including those of modest means, a financial advantage now enjoyed only by those able to hire accountants to search out loopholes.

Moreover, the Nunn-Domenici proposal offers a constructive, bipartisan way to address the "class warfare" controversy. The USA Tax effectively encourages the wealthy to keep their money in the common national savings "pot," where it would be available for economic growth. But when the wealthy person takes that money out of the pot to buy a Ferrari, that money is taxed and at progressive rates. Conspicuous consumption would still exist in America, but at a higher price.

When the USA Tax was introduced, there was no sense of a national fiscal emergency, nor was it as apparent that the tax code, as a vehicle for growth, had run out of gas. Today, few people doubt either of these propositions, which means there is a better chance of overcoming the resistance to such a fundamental change.

Nunn and Domenici offered an excellent approach for constructive change. What we need now is the leadership to follow through.

Endean is president of the American Business Conference, a Washington-based organization of mid-size growth companies.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Reader Offers Support to Ross

This letter is to announce my support of Dale Ross for Jerome City Council. His experience on the Jerome City Planning and Zoning Commission and his community involvement makes him a reliable and insightful candidate that we can count on to do the job right.

Dale is a very thoughtful person who researches every side of an issue before a decision is made. He is also troubled about the lack of effort to improve the appearance of downtown. I know Dale was impressed with the success of Operation Face Lift, but there is still work to do. Downtown revitalization will be one of his highest priorities while still promoting a friendly and tolerant community.

Jerome is facing some major issues, mainly waste water, roads and code enforcement. These issues are in the forefront due to costly mistakes made in the past. We cannot continue to have hesitant leadership and lack of foresight in the upcoming years.

I think that Dale has a fresh perspective. His desire to make sure that the city government is responsive to our concerns would be a perfect fit for our new council. I ask the voters to give him the opportunity. If you want a councilman with integrity, fiscal responsibility and common sense, the choice could not be clearer. Vote for Dale Ross on Nov. 8.

Thousands Take Wall Street Protest to NYC Park

Several thousand Occupy Wall Street protesters have marched to New York City's Washington Square Park for a peaceful general assembly. Demonstrators marched Saturday from Manhattan's Zuccotti Park, the group's unofficial headquarters where protesters have been camped out for the last 22 days. The trek was peaceful and orderly. On Wednesday, dozens were arrested when thousands marched on Wall Street in their biggest show of support yet. Last Saturday, 700 people were arrested after they spilled onto the roadway while crossing the Brooklyn Bridge. Protesters are speaking out against corporate greed and the gap between the rich and poor. They say they have no leaders and are making decisions by consensus.

Libyan revolutionary fighters hide behind a trench during an attack against pro-Gadhafi forces in Sirte, Libya, Saturday. Rebel forces have besieged Sirte since mid-September, but have not managed to penetrate the heart of the city because of fierce resistance from loyalists inside the home town of Libya's ousted leader Moammar Gadhafi.

Libyans Claim Gains in Gadhafi Hometown Offensive in Sirte

BY CHRISTOPHER GILLETTE and KIM GAMEL
Associated Press

SIRTE, Libya • Libyan revolutionary forces claimed to have captured parts of a sprawling convention center that loyalists of Moammar Gadhafi have used as their main base in the ousted leader's hometown and were shelling the city to try to rout snipers from rooftops in their offensive aimed at crushing this key bastion of the old regime.

The inability to take Sirte, the most important remaining stronghold of Gadhafi supporters, more than six weeks after the capital fell has stalled efforts by Libya's new leaders to set a timeline for elections and move forward with a transition to democracy.

Gadhafi supporters also hold the enclave of Bani Walid, where revolutionary forces have been stymied by a challenging terrain. But the transitional leadership has said it will declare liberation after Sirte's capture because that will mean it holds all of the seaports and harbors in the oil-rich Mediterranean coastal country.

British Defense Secretary Liam Fox pledged to keep up NATO airstrikes even after Sirte's fall, saying the international military action would continue as long as the remnants of the regime pose a risk to the people of Libya.

"We have a message for those who are still fighting for Gadhafi that the game is over, you have been rejected by the people of Libya," he told reporters Saturday in Tripoli before flying to Misrata.

Revolutionary forces began a major attack on Sirte on Friday after a three week siege from the outskirts of the coastal city, during which they said they were giving civilians time to flee.

On Saturday, fighters fired rockets into the city from the backs of pickup trucks, though visibility was severely limited by a sandstorm.

Libya's de facto leader, Mustafa Abdul-Jalil, the head of the governing National Transitional Council, said the battle for Sirte has been "ferocious," with 15 revolutionary fighters killed and 180 wounded on Friday.

"Our fighters today are still dealing with the snipers positioned on the high buildings and we sustained heavy casualties," he said at a joint news conference in Tripoli with Fox and Italian Defense Secretary Ignazio La Russa.

Abdel-Basit Haroun, a revolutionary field commander, said 32 people had been killed in two days of fighting, while the military council in the nearby city of Misrata, which has sent many fighters to Sirte, reported 80 wounded.

MINN. WOMAN ACCUSED OF ROBBING HOME TO BUY PORN

EAST BETHEL, Minn. (AP) • Authorities say an 18-year-old Minnesota woman admitted to investigators that she broke into a neighbor's home three times looking for items she could fence to feed her porn addiction.

Anoka County sheriff's investigators say the neighbor called to report he had surveillance footage of Amanda Rose Owens sneaking into his East Bethel home through a dog door.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press reports that the neighbor set up the camera after $300 and several items were stolen.

Investigators say Owens admitted she had broken in three times. She said she needed money so she could pay for 20 to 30 pornographic DVDs she bought.

Owens was charged Wednesday with second-degree burglary. She does not have a listed phone number and it wasn't clear Saturday if she had an attorney.

'Zombie' Program Cuts Deficit

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • They're calling it the zombie in the budget.

It's a long-term care plan the Obama administration has put on hold, fearing it could go bust if actually implemented. Yet while the program exists on paper, monthly premiums the government may never collect count as reducing federal deficits.

Real or not, that's $80 billion over the next 10 years.

The Community Living Assistance Services and Supports program, CLASS for short, may just keep lurching along indefinitely. It would join other peculiar creatures of the federal budget such as "trust funds" that are actually more like IOUs and Medicare cuts that can be counted twice.

"It's a gimmick that produces phantom savings," said Robert Bixby, executive director of the Concord Coalition, a nonpartisan group that advocates deficit control.

"That money should have never been counted as deficit

"It's a gimmick that produces phantom savings. That money should have never been counted as deficit reduction because it was supposed to be set aside to pay for benefits. The fact that they're not actually doing anything with the program sort of compounds the gimmick."

Robert Bixby, executive director of the Concord Coalition, a nonpartisan group that advocates deficit control reduction because it was supposed to be set aside to pay for benefits," Bixby added. "The fact that they're not actually doing anything with the program sort of compounds the gimmick."

The program was created under President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, and arguably provided much of the 10-year, $143 billion in savings claimed under the law. But now some Capitol Hill aides have dubbed CLASS a "budget zombie."

The administration recently asked Congress to hold off on money for implementing CLASS as it tries to find a way to make it solvent for the long run. The chief financial expert for

CLASS was a priority of the late Democratic Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who envisioned a voluntary, long-term care insurance plan sponsored by the government, without the overhead costs of private insurers, or the rigorous pre-screening they require.

CLASS beneficiaries would pay an affordable monthly premium while they were healthy and working. In exchange, they could collect a modest daily cash benefit if they became disabled. Congress included CLASS in the health care law, specifying it must be self-sustaining.

Romney Responds to Mormon Flare-up; Perry Passes

BY KASIE HUNT and CHARLES BABINGTON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Republican presidential hopeful Mitt Romney on Saturday denounced "poisonous language" against faiths as he grappled with a flare-up over religion sparked by a prominent supporter of Texas Gov. Rick Perry, his rival. Perry steered well clear of that simmering issue and pushed another hot button instead: Social Security.

Romney, in remarks to the Values Voters Summit, a gathering of cultural conservatives in Washington, did not directly confront the words of a prominent Perry supporter who called Romney's Mormon faith a "cult." Indeed, Romney was criticizing another speaker at the meeting who is known for anti-Mormon and anti-Muslim rhetoric, and who followed him on stage.

But his cautionary words served as notice that attacks on faiths should, in his view, be off the table. He appealed to the social conservatives to support a presidential candidate who has the best record on the economy.

Until now, Romney's Mormon faith and Perry's evangelical Christianity were secondary to a GOP primary focused on who can best fix the country's economy. Questions about his faith plagued Romney's 2008 presidential run, but he had been able to keep them at bay so far this time.

That changed when a pastor who introduced Perry to cultural conservatives called Mormonism a "cult" and said Romney is "not a Christian," forcing Perry to distance himself and Romney to respond. The back-and-forth suggests the primary race — with a field finally settled and just three months before voting begins — has moved into a more aggressive phase. And it illustrates that Perry's very public religiosity and long history with evangelical Christian leaders won't remain on the sidelines of the presidential race.

But Perry, campaigning Saturday in Iowa's staunchly conservative northwest, barely touched on religion at all. In stops at Sioux City and Orange City, Republican presidential candidate former Gov. Mitt Romney, speaks at the Values Voter Summit in Washington, Saturday. For the cultural conservatives at the summit, who care deeply about abortion, gay marriage and other social issues, pocketbook issues seem to matter more this year than pulpit preaching, and at least some are willing to embrace Romney, who many have long looked at skeptically for his reversals on some of their priorities and his Mormon faith.

Kennedy's idea was to give families some financial breathing room. The burden of long-term care is growing. Most families cannot afford to hire a home health aide for a frail elder, let alone pay nursing home bills. Long-term care is usually provided by family members, often a spouse who may also have health problems.

But a central design flaw dogged CLASS from the beginning. Unless large numbers of healthy people willingly sign up during their working years, soaring premiums driven by the needs of disabled beneficiaries would destabilize it, eventually requiring a taxpayer bailout. The main reason the program produced budget savings in its first 10 years was a rule that enrollees pay in for at least five years before collecting benefits.

The chairman of the House subcommittee that oversees money for Health and Human Services says the administration is playing a shell game.

"They've shelved it, but they're keeping it around," said Rep. Denny Rehberg, R-Mont. "The only logical reason I can see is that they need the money — even though there is no money there — to make Obamacare work."

Absolutely not, says the administration.

"We are looking at the CLASS program from every angle," Kathy Greenlee, assistant HHS secretary for aging, blogged recently. "We are doing our due diligence." The administration will soon release a report with recommendations about how to proceed, she added.

Although Greenlee did not give any hints, one option is to go back to Congress for additional legal authority to revise the program.

Meanwhile, supporters of CLASS are getting concerned. Many groups that pushed for the health care law also backed CLASS. They wrote Obama recently, saying he doesn't need any additional authority from Congress to go forward.

"The people who care about this program are just getting angry," said Connie Garner, a former Kennedy aide who is directing a coalition of CLASS supporters.

Don't expect CLASS to go away easily. If the congressional supercommittee tackling the debt decides to recommend repeal, the panel would have to come up with about $80 billion in other cuts — possibly real and painful — to offset the hypothetical savings from CLASS.

"They'll probably ignore it," said Bixby, the deficit hawk. "I think they're not sure what they're dealing with."

Romney

he never mentioned Mormonism, Romney by name, or even Christianity, for that matter.

Asked by Republican Steven Bernston what books have most influenced him, Perry mentioned only one: the work of conservative economist Friedrich Hayek. Bernston, a corn and beans farmer from Paullina, later said he was surprised that Perry didn't at least mention the Bible.

"I don't think he's a reader," Bernston said in an interview, noting that Perry used the question to switch to previous statements about his opposition to government efforts to stimulate the economy.

Perry waded back into Social Security instead, a tricky issue for him after he roundly criticized the popular entitlement in his book and his Republicans rivals piled on against him. Responding to a question in Sioux City, he said "it makes sense" to increase the eligibility age for benefits and it may be time to reduce those benefits for the wealthy, a process known as means-testing.

In each of four Iowa campaign stops over two days, Perry took questions from voters, and none from reporters. None of the questioners mentioned Mormonism or asked overtly religious questions.

On Friday, Robert Jeffress, the lead pastor at First Baptist Church in Dallas, introduced Perry as "a committed follower of Christ." Perry thanked him, and said Jeffress had "hit it out of the park." Afterwards, Jeffress told reporters Romney was "not a Christian" and that Mormonism is a "cult." Jeffress had repeatedly made similar comments during Romney's 2008 campaign.

Mormonism sparks concern among evangelical Christians, a critical bloc of voters in the Republican primary. Many do not believe that Mormons are Christian because they also rely on the Book of Mormon as a holy text, which they view as deviating from the Jesus Christ who is portrayed in the Bible.

The council said revolutionary forces were attacking houses to try to eliminate the "overwhelming hordes of snipers out there."

Sirte, 250 miles southeast of Tripoli, is key to the physical unity of the nation of some 6 million people, since it lies roughly in the center of the coastal plain where most Libyans live, blocking the easiest routes between east and west.

Mohammed al-Rajali, spokesman for the brigades attacking the city from the east, said the fighters have gained control of the Ouagadougou Convention Center, an ornate complex in the city center that Gadafi frequently used for international summits. But they were meeting heavy resistance from villas behind the building so were focusing on firing artillery from the outskirts.

"After the intensive shelling, we will move forward," he said.

A military spokesman in Tripoli, Abdul-Rahman Busin, and several commanders and fighters confirmed the center was under control of revolutionary forces.

"We have passed the area and we moved on to the residential area behind it," brigade commander Mushbah Alhadar said. "Our forces are camping around the center because the center itself has been destroyed by the NATO airstrikes and our artillery."

Seizing the convention center complex, named after the capital of the West African nation of Burkino Faso, would be a significant gain for the attackers. Throughout the siege, Gadafi fighters have used the walled complex as a base and stronghold. From there they were able to dominate surrounding neighborhoods and assault revolutionaries trying to enter Sirte.

Killing of Syrian Kurdish Leader Sparks Outrage

BY ZEINA KARAM
Associated Press

BEIRUT (AP) • More than 50,000 mourners marched through the capital of Syria's Kurdish heartland Saturday in a funeral procession for one of the country's most prominent opposition figures a day after his assassination. Security forces fired into the crowds, killing five people, witnesses said.

The turnout was by far the largest in the Kurdish northeast since the start of the uprising against President Bashar Assad's autocratic regime seven months ago.

But it remains to be seen whether Friday's slaying of charismatic Kurdish opposition figure Mashaal Tammo will trigger a sustained, large-scale outpouring by Syria's Kurds that might bolster the wider uprising against Assad taking place across the nation.

Despite the gunfire, crowds pouring into the streets of Qamishli called on Assad to step down, chanting, "Leave! Leave!" — adopting the cry used by tens of thousands of other Syrian protesters during the uprising. Some demanded Assad's execution; others ripped down a statue of his late father and predecessor, Hafez Assad.

Tammo was killed Friday by masked men who burst into an apartment and gunned him down.

"All of Qamishli is out today. The funeral is turning into a massive protest," Kurdish activist and lawyer Mustafa Osso told The Associated Press by telephone. The grieving cries of fellow mourners could be heard in the background.

Members of the Kurdish ethnic minority — Syria's largest — have long complained of neglect and discrimination. Assad granted citizenship in April to stateless Kurds in eastern Syria in an attempt to address some of their grievances in the face of the swelling anti-government uprising that began the month before.

While many Kurds — who make up 15 percent of the country's 23 million people — have been taking part in the anti-government protests, Kurdish groups have yet to put their full weight behind the revolution.

If they do, their numbers could significantly reinforce the protest movement. Syria's security forces already have their hands full in trying to stamp out dissent across much of the rest of the country.

A Syrian opposition figure said many Syrians were pinning their hopes on the Kurds joining the revolution. But he said Arab-Kurdish ethnic sensitivities might keep them from doing that.

"There is a mutual lack of trust between the two sides; the Kurds are worried. They already feel excluded from the decision making process and they fear for the future," he said on condition of anonymity, because of the sensitivity of the subject.

Outrage over Tammo's killing spilled over the border into Iraq's Kurdish region.

Syrian Kurdish opposition parties based in Iraq's self-ruled northern Kurdish region accused the Syrian government of killing Tammo and called for international intervention.

"The assassination of Mashaal Tammo is evidence of the barbaric nature of the Syrian regime," the spokesman of the Syrian Left Party, Nooreddin Othman, told the AP in a phone interview.

Tammo's slaying was also significant because he was the most prominent person to fall victim to a recent string of targeted killings that has raised concern Syria may be sliding toward civil war.

Other signs of growing disorder include fierce gunbattles between army units and fellow soldiers who have defected to join the opposition. There are also signs that some of the protesters, who have remained largely peaceful, are taking up arms to defend themselves from regime attacks.

The crowd of mourners in Qamishli Saturday swelled to more than 50,000 people, Osso said.

Security forces fired on the crowd, killing five mourners and wounding several others, he said.

An activist network called the Local Coordination Committees also said five people were killed and several others were injured in the gunfire. The group said the city has been completely shut down after a general strike was declared to mourn Tammo.

Security forces also fired on a funeral procession in the Damascus suburb of Douma for three people killed a day earlier, activists said. A 14-year-old boy was killed and 10 other people were wounded, according to the Local Coordination Committees and the London-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

Tammo, a 53-year-old former political prisoner, was a spokesman for the Kurdish Future Party. He was also a member of the executive committee of the newly formed Syrian National Council, a broad-based front bringing together opposition figures inside and outside the country in an attempt to unify the deeply fragmented dissident movement.

A vocal regime opponent, Tammo had been instrumental in organizing anti-government protests in Qamishli in recent months.

It was not clear who carried out the killing. Some in the opposition said the regime was responsible for his assassination. Osso said Tammo had no enemies and blamed security forces, but others noted there was a power struggle between him and rival Kurdish parties.

State-run news agency SANA reported his killing by "four masked gunmen in a black car," calling him a "national" opposition leader.

Man Hurt in Hunt for Christmas Wreath Sues His In-laws

WEST BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) • This Thanksgiving could be a little uncomfortable for one Michigan family after a Detroit-area man hurt in a hunt for a Christmas wreath sued his in-laws.

A Michigan appeals court has overruled a trial court judge and said the lawsuit filed by Christopher Karim should go to a jury.

He was in the attic looking for a wreath when he stepped on dry-wall instead of plywood and fell to the garage floor. The appeals court's decision says Karim's mother-in-law had just said, "No, don't step there."

The decision doesn't describe Karim's injuries.

The court says a jury must decide if the hazard was "open and obvious."

Nestlé Purina Releases Commercial Aimed at Dogs

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) • Nestlé Purina PetCare is releasing what it says is the first television commercial designed to appeal to dogs.

The company told the St. Joseph News-Press that animal behavior experts at the Nestlé Purina Product Technology Center in St. Joseph, Mo., helped it develop the commercial aimed at selling Beneful dog food.

The ad will be shown in Austria.

Nestlé Purina says its first attempt to develop an ad for dogs had little success. But its experts in Missouri discovered a combination of sounds that attract a dog's attention without distracting from the human-focused dialogue.

The ad features the squeaky sound of a dog toy and a bell.

SENIOR

Q. My mother is still driving her car around town and she is in her 80's. Is she too old to be driving? Should I do something?

A. For most older people the privilege of driving is precious. The ability to drive provides freedom and independence. However, we all know someone who stopped driving safely years ago, but is still operating a vehicle! Of course, age isn't the only factor in safe driving. But, if you know that your mother's driving isn't as safe as it once was, you should talk with her. She may already know there is a problem, but just hasn't said anything. Be respectful, but also be firm. Offer specific examples of lapses in good driving. It may help to have other family members be part of this discussion. Give your mother suggestions that can reduce, if not eliminate, her need to drive a car. Sometimes the easiest path for everyone is to help a senior transition out of driving. For example, by no longer driving at night, or using the local senior citizens' bus to drive to a medical appointment.

SPORTS

UNSUNG HEROES

Unsung Heroes are about excellence beyond the box score and statistics. It's about being a good teammate and doing whatever it takes to help one's team win.

With that in mind, here are just a few of the hundreds of Unsung Heroes across the Magic Valley:

Girls cross country

JORDAN MOGENSEN, JUNIOR, JEROME
What is your role on the team? "That's a hard question to answer. I'm just trying my best to help the team. I try to fill that gap between our top runners."
Why is that important? "To win the meets, it's up to us (No. 4-6 runners). We have to be as close as we can as a team," Mogensen said.
Coach Randy Tolman says: "She's made huge strides for us this season, which is great for our team. She just has a really, really good work ethic. Jordan has had shin splints most of the season, but she just keeps on running and working through it all."
Teammate Matt Ahrens says: "She just needed to believe that she could do it. There's always that doubt that you can do it, so I just tried to give her that confidence. She always shuts me down when I compliment her, but she is doing great and is cutting her time a ton. It's cool to see."
Mogensen's athletic dream scenario: "I think it'd be awesome to run in college somewhere. If a school wants me to sprint for them, that would be really cool," Mogensen said. "I've always liked BSU, so if I could run anywhere that's where I would want to go."

Football

KEVIN BOS, JUNIOR, JEROME
What is your role on the team? "I'm the long snapper. One day in practice, the coaches asked if anyone knew how to long snap. I was like, 'I'll try it.' They taught me the technique and the first snap I did was perfect, so it was like, 'Well I'm the long snapper now.'"
Why is it important? "They're important plays. If you have a bad snap that flies 15 yards over the head of the kicker or punter, it could bounce back really far and give the other team good field position."
Coach Gary Krumm says: "It's a huge advantage to have a consistently good long snapper. It's not just on extra points, but punts and field goals too. I think his role will get bigger and he'll be a stud for us in the future."
Teammate Simon Espinoza says: "He's definitely our 'funny guy' on the team. When things get bad, or when we get into a pickle, he brightens the mood. He's pretty essential to our team and I think it shows a lot of leadership, what he does."
Bos' athletic dream scenario: "I'm a baseball guy, so playing as far as I can in baseball would be awesome. Anywhere outside of Idaho ... somewhere like Arizona or San Diego where it's warm."

Volleyball

LARISSA STEWART, SOPHOMORE, CAMAS COUNTY
What is your role on the team? "I'm the setter. My job is to take the pass and make sure I get a good set to our attackers to kill the ball."
Why is that important? "You have to get a good ball out to the attackers. You can't score points (consistently) without a good pass, set and kill."
Camas County coach Shelli Schroeder says: "Larissa is one of the quietest players I have, but one of the most reliable. She sets the block well for my middle. She is a solid all-around player and always has been. She can pass, play defense, set the block and she's a remarkable setter and is being introduced as a hitter as well."
Teammate Katelyn Peterson says: She's a hustler and is a strong, motivated and all-around great player. She's very positive and a really good setter; she gets the ball to the right places.
Stewart's dream sports scenario? "My dream would be to play college volleyball for Penn State. They're the best program in the nation over the last few years."

Boys soccer

PABLO SERRANO, SENIOR, BUHL
What is your role on the team? "I play right fullback, and I'm also a team captain. I've got to take care of (opposing) forwards and midfielders on my side and give good passes to our midfielders so we can start the attack."
Why is that important? "You obviously have to keep the other team from scoring goals. Being a captain is important because I have to lead the team and keep them up if they're down."
Buhl coach Bill Fields says: Pablo leads more by emotion than in the traditional sense. When he's up, the whole team is up, and the opposite is true as well. As he goes, so goes the rest of the team.
Teammate Daniel Peralta says: Pablo's fiery. He doesn't always lead by encouraging, either - sometimes he challenges you and gets you just mad enough to go out there and prove him wrong, without getting you too mad. He pushes all the right buttons to get guys to play their hardest.
Serrano's dream sports scenario? "I'd love to play for the Mexican national team and FC Barcelona (in Spain). At Barcelona they pass the ball like crazy and score a lot of goals, and they really play as a great team even though they have some of the world's best (individual) players."

Girls soccer

CAROLYN HERNANDEZ, SOPH., TWIN FALLS
What is your role on the team? I play in the center of our defense. Part of my job is to support our midfielders when they're attacking, and to make sure that the other team's forwards don't get past us. I also take some free kicks.
Why is that important? Other than keeping the other team from scoring, obviously, we like to get our defenders forward when we can, to be a drop for midfielders if they get bogged down and to keep things balanced. If the mids attack we support them, and if they're back (defending) we can get forward."
Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman says: "Carolyn is a calm player in the back. She doesn't get very flustered and that's something we needed after losing our seniors. ... She knows the style we like to play and she never backs down."
Teammate Claire Goss says: Carolyn keeps the back line in order, and she's the fastest one back there so she clears a lot of balls. She's improved a lot in being a leader in defense.
Hernandez' dream sports scenario? "I really want to go to play in college, and my dream would be to play at USC or UCLA. Soccer is a big part of my life, and I'm the only one in my family that plays so it's special to me."

Boys cross country

ETHAN JUDD, BURLEY, JUNIOR
What is your role on the team? "I try to stay positive and always try to be happy. I try to work hard and get all the guys motivated and ready to do their workouts."
Why is that important? "Because if we're going to be the team we want to be, then we're going to have to do our best every day. We're really hoping that we can win districts; it's going to be pretty tight, but it will be a fun race."
Coach Kevin Green says: "He's the hardest worker on the team and with his work ethic he should be the No. 1 runner but he hasn't had that breakthrough yet. He's very dedicated and all the kids know he does the most work, but he's quiet and he doesn't brag about anything. He just goes out and does what he's supposed to do."
Teammate Parley Pickett says: "Ethan works harder and has more dedication than anyone. Whenever the team's feeling a little goofy he's always there to make sure we stay on track with our workouts."
Judd's dream athletic scenario: "I really want to place at state and bring back a trophy. For me personally, I want to run Division I in college."

Bengals Shutout By Montana

BY MARK LIPTAK
Times-News Correspondent

POCATELLO • Halfway through his first season, Idaho State head coach Mike Kramer didn't expect his high powered offense to go into hibernation and disappear, but for the second time in three weeks that's what took place as his team was shutout by Montana 33-0 in front of 9,124 fans at Holt Arena. It was the first time since 1997 that an ISU team was shutout in a Big Sky Conference game ending a streak of 107 games scoring at least a point. The Bengals (2-4, 1-3 Big Sky) turned the ball over seven times, including twice in the first two minutes of the game and were held to five first downs and 122 total yards on the day. "Five first downs," Kramer said incredulously afterwards. "You can't have five first downs and expect to win anything." When asked if he could pinpoint what has gone wrong in two of the last three weeks, Kramer didn't have an answer...for now. "I can't define for sure what the problem is outside of the fact that we're still a work in progress and lack consistency. We never got into a rhythm early and we started to lose confidence," he said.

Offensive Woes Continue for Vandals

BY JOSH WRIGHT
Times-News Correspondent

MOSCOW • The faint sound of boos began early in the third quarter, just a small segment of University of Idaho fans voicing their frustration over the Vandals' offensive futility.

By the time the fourth quarter rolled around Saturday, the jeering was unmistakable — from every corner of the Kibbie Dome.

On what was supposed to be a festive homecoming afternoon, the Vandals absorbed perhaps their most disheartening loss of the season, falling to Louisiana Tech 24-11 with an announced crowd of 15,309 on hand for the WAC contest.

Idaho (1-5, 0-2 WAC) has dropped four consecutive games, and it hasn't mustered an offensive touchdown in regulation since early in the fourth quarter against Fresno State on Sept. 24.

The touchdown drought spans nearly nine quarters and comes at an unfortunate time. Just as the funk set in, the UI defense has put together back-to-back gems against Virginia and the Bulldogs (2-4, 1-1).

"I put a lot of the blame on myself," quarterback Brian Reader said. "I need to play better. The team needs to play better. The defense (did) a great job today. When they make stops, we need to put points on the board."

Reader continued his recent slide with a 19-of-47 passing performance that included three interceptions. The first pick was cradled by LTU linebacker Jay Dudley, who took off for a 53-yard touchdown return to put the Bulldogs up 10-2.

The Vandals closed to within five points late in the second quarter, but they were burned by three turnovers in the second half and never drove inside the Bulldogs' 45 after halftime.

Reader admitted his confidence has dipped "lower and lower and lower," and Akey said he contemplated Saturday making a switch to backup Taylor Davis.

"Those are things that cross my mind at times," Akey said. "Those are things that we take a look at. But I also know that if you're that close, that's kind of a fine line there, if you understand what I am saying."

Later he said, "But at any point in time, is (a change) a possibility? Yes. Is that one that I'm going to be quick to pull the trigger on? You obviously haven't seen it happen it, no."

"But Brian is our starting quarterback and I believe we'll make things click."

The last time Idaho scored 11 points was in 1933 against College of Idaho. Saturday, the Vandals managed a safety in the second quarter and an 81-yard punt return from Justin Veltung.

Still, the defense held La. Tech in check for much of the game. In the third quarter, the Bulldogs scratched out touchdown drives of 53 and 40 yards, the first coming after a Reader interception gave them prime field position.

LTU true freshman QB Nick Isham, who turned 18 on Friday, never settled into a groove. But tailback Hunter Lee — a true freshman who walked on this fall — rang up 134 yards on the ground on 28 carries.

Kicker Brady McKnight converted four field goals, quarterback Jordan Johnson fired a 39 yard touchdown pass to Sam Gratton and Jabin Sambrano and Joe Canada had touchdown runs.

Receiver Rodrick Rumble, who was leading the nation in catches per game and yards per game, was held to six catches and 73 yards, the first time this year he was under the 100 yard receiving mark. Linebacker A. J. Storms recorded 17 tackles and had an interception for Idaho State.

Next week the Bengals try to break a three game losing streak when they head to Weber State to play their longtime rival. It's the start of four straight weeks on the road as ISU won't have another home game until the final week of the season when it hosts Eastern Washington.

TOP 25 ROUNDUP

Oklahoma Smashes Texas in Red River Rivalry

DALLAS • Landry Jones threw for 367 yards and three touchdowns, Dominique Whaley ran 64 yards for another touchdown and the Oklahoma defense scored three more touchdowns in the 55-17 thumping.

Having slipped from first to second to third over successive weeks, Oklahoma (5-0, 2-0 Big 12) stomped its top rival almost as easily as it did lowly Ball State the previous week. The Sooners wound up with their most lopsided win in this series since 2003, when they won by a series-record 52 points.

The Longhorns (4-1, 1-1) couldn't get anything going on offense. Their only touchdowns came on a kickoff return late in the first half, and a pass in the final minutes when they were down by 45.

NO. 1 LSU 41, NO. 17 FLORIDA 11
BATON ROUGE, La. • Spencer Ware rushed for 109 yards and two scores and each of LSU's quarterbacks passed for touchdowns.

Jarrett Lee gave the Tigers (6-0, 3-0 SEC) the lead for good on their second offensive play, hitting Rueben Randle deep over the middle for a 46-yard touchdown. Jordan Jefferson used a jump pass to Mitch Joseph for another score.

LSU's fast, fierce defense was too much for Florida (4-2, 2-2), which started freshman Jacoby Brissett at quarterback because of injuries to senior John Brantley and freshman Jeff Driskel.

Brissett was intercepted twice on deep throws, once each by safety Brandon Taylor and star cornerback Tyrann Mathieu.

NO. 2 ALABAMA 34, VANDERBILT 0
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. • AJ McCarron passed for career-highs of 237 yards and four touchdowns for Alabama.

Trent Richardson rushed for 107 yards and a touchdown in his fifth straight 100-yard effort for the Crimson Tide (6-0, 3-0 Southeastern Conference).

The Commodores (3-2, 1-2) trailed by only seven points until the final minute of the opening half, then Alabama took over with four straight touchdown drives.

McCarron was 23 of 30 passing and didn't add to Vandy's national-best 14 interceptions before sitting out most of the fourth quarter. He hit DeAndrew White for touchdowns of 5 and 39 yards, the first scores of the receiver's career.

Vanderbilt quarterback Jordan Rodgers replaced starter Larry Smith in the first half and played the rest of the way. Smith had a lower leg injury.

NO. 6 OKLAHOMA STATE 70, KANSAS 28
STILLWATER, Okla. • Brandon Weeden threw for 288 yards and five touchdowns playing less than a half and Oklahoma State had its highest scoring game since 1970.

Jamie Blatnick recovered a fumble and leaped to tip an interception to himself for two of the Cowboys' four first-half takeaways, and Oklahoma State (5-0, 2-0 Big 12) scored touchdowns on all eight of its possessions before halftime against the nation's worst defense.

NO. 7 STANFORD 48, COLORADO 7
STANFORD, Calif. • Andrew Luck threw for a season-high 370 yards and three touchdowns, and Stanford stayed perfect.

With former Stanford standouts Tiger Woods and John Elway joining the crush of NFL scouts on the sidelines, Luck completed 26 of 33 passes with a rare interception to extend the nation's longest winning streak to 13 games. Max Bergen blocked a field goal and returned it for a score and Ryan Hewitt caught two touchdown passes to help the Cardinal (5-0, 3-0) cruise past another opponent.

NO. 8 CLEMSON 36, BOSTON COLLEGE 14
CLEMSON, S.C. • Tajh Boyd threw for a touchdown and ran for another before leaving with a hip injury.

The severity of Boyd's injury was unknown. He came in leading the Atlantic Coast Conference in total offense and has been the catalyst for the Tigers' first 6-0 start in 11 years.

Clemson (3-0 ACC) got five field goals from Chandler Catanzaro and 117 yards and a touchdown from tailback Andre Ellington to put away Boston College (1-5, 0-3).

NO. 10 ARKANSAS 38, AUBURN 14
FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. • Tyler Wilson threw for 262 yards, completing 19 straight passes at one point for Arkansas.

Wilson, who set a school record with 510 passing yards in a win over Texas A&M last week, ended the first half against the Tigers by completing 18 straight passes. That included a 5-yard touchdown pass to Jarius Wright in the second quarter that gave the Razorbacks (5-1, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) their first lead at 21-14.

NO. 12 MICHIGAN 42, NORTHWESTERN 24
EVANSTON, Ill. • Denard Robinson threw for two touchdowns and ran for two more, helping No. 12 Michigan come back from a 10-point halftime deficit to beat Northwestern 42-24 Saturday night to remain unbeaten.

Robinson matched his season-high by throwing for 338 yards and ran for 113 as Michigan (6-0, 2-0) scored on its first three possessions of the second half. The Wolverines trailed 24-14 after a first half in which Robinson threw three interceptions.

NO. 13 GEORGIA TECH 21, MARYLAND 16
ATLANTA • Tevin Washington ran for 120 yards and two touchdowns and Georgia Tech's least impressive offensive showing of the season was enough.

Georgia Tech led 21-3 before holding off the Terrapins' fourth-quarter comeback.

Georgia Tech (6-0 overall, 3-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) matched its wins total from 2010, when it finished 6-7. The Yellow Jackets averaged almost 52 points in their first five wins and began the day ranked first in the nation in rushing and second in scoring.

NO. 14 NEBRASKA 34, OHIO ST. 27
LINCOLN, Neb. • Taylor

Martinez ran for a touchdown and passed for two others while bringing No. 14 Nebraska back from a 21-point second-half deficit, and the Cornhuskers defeated Ohio State 34-27 Saturday night in the biggest comeback in school history.

Rex Burkhead scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 17-yard run with 5:10 left.

Ohio State (3-3, 0-2 Big Ten) built a 27-6 lead behind freshman quarterback Braxton Miller. Miller injured his right leg in the third quarter, and the Buckeyes' offense went dormant with backup Joe Bauserman.

NO. 16 WEST VIRGINIA 43, CONNECTICUT 16
MORGANTOWN, W.Va. • Geno Smith threw for 450 yards and four touchdowns and West Virginia navigated through another slow start to win its Big East opener.

West Virginia (5-1, 1-0) struggled to a 10-9 halftime lead before erupting for 23 points in a 7:35 span of the third quarter to take control.

NO. 18 SOUTH CAROLINA 54, KENTUCKY 3
COLUMBIA, S.C. • New starting quarterback Connor Shaw threw for 311 yards and four touchdowns for South Carolina.

Shaw, a sophomore who took over as starter this week from fifth-year senior Stephen Garcia, completed 26 of 39 passes and had no interceptions.

NO. 19 ILLINOIS 41, INDIANA 20
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. • Nathan Scheelhaase and A.J. Jenkins hooked up on two long TD passes to lead the Illini.

Illinois (6-0, 2-0 Big Ten) is off to its best start since the 1951 team was 7-0.

Indiana (1-5, 0-2) lost its third in a row, still has not beaten a Football Bowl Sub-division team this season and has lost 13 consecutive games against Top 25 teams since a 31-28 victory over then No. 13 Iowa on Oct. 14, 2006.

NO. 20 KANSAS STATE 24, MISSOURI 17

MANHATTAN, Kan. • Collin Klein ran for three touchdowns and the Wildcats, who nearly blew a big second-half lead, improved to 5-0 for the first time since 2000.

Klein finished with 157 yards of total offense and John Hubert added 126 yards on the ground for the Wildcats, who had lost the last five matchups between the Big 12 rivals.

NO. 21 VIRGINIA TECH 38, MIAMI 35

BLACKSBURG, Va. • Logan Thomas ran 19 yards for a touchdown with 56 seconds to play, capping a wild fourth quarter for Virginia Tech.

The Hokies (5-1, 1-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) rescued their chances of contending in the Coastal Division with the dramatic rally, and may have killed the hopes for Miami (2-3, 0-2).

WAKE FOREST 35, NO. 23 FLORIDA STATE 30

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. • Tanner Price threw three touchdown passes, Josh Harris rushed for 136 yards and Wake Forest beat Florida State.

Price was 21 of 35 for 233 yards with touchdowns covering 22 yards to Chris Givens, 2 yards to Tommy Bohanon and 8 yards to Terence Davis to give the Demon Deacons (4-1, 3-0) their best start to ACC play in school history.

Wake Forest — a 10-point underdog — trailed for only about five minutes of the first half, led the entire second half and rolled up 391 yards against one of the ACC's toughest defenses. Florida State (2-3, 0-2) entered giving up just 257 total yards per game.

NO. 24 TEXAS A&M 45, TEXAS TECH 40
LUBBOCK, Texas • Ryan Tannehill ran for two touchdowns and threw for another to lead Texas A&M.

After leading by double-digits at halftime and losing the last two weeks, Texas A&M finally put together four quarters, despite being outscored 20-14 in the second half.

The Aggies (3-2, 1-1) ran for 205 yards on 46 carries.

NO. 25 BAYLOR 49, IOWA STATE 26
WACO, Texas • Robert Griffin ran for a season-high 107 yards and Terrance Ganaway rushed for a career-high 200 yards for Baylor.

Tevin Elliott returned a fumble 86 yards for a touchdown for the Bears (4-1, 1-1 Big 12), who bounced back from a 36-35 loss last weekend to No. 20 Kansas State.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

FIVE TURNOVERS DOOM UTES IN LOSS TO ASU

SALT LAKE CITY • Brock Osweiler passed for 325 yards and three touchdowns and No. 22 Arizona State forced five Utah turnovers to turn a close game into a 35-14 victory Saturday.

Jon Hays threw three interceptions in his first major-college start for the Utes (2-3, 0-3 Pac-12).

Osweiler had the third 300-yard game of his career to lead the Sun Devils (5-1, 3-0 Pac-12).

Utah had taken a 14-10 lead with 10:32 left in the third quarter on Hays' 2-yard TD pass to tight end Dallin Rogers.

Arizona State then scored 18 straight points in less than four minutes to take a 28-14 lead. The Sun Devils turned Utah's fifth turnover of the game into another seven points, with Osweiler's 12-yard TD pass to Mike Willie capping a 10-play drive set up by Reggie Dunn's fumble with 14:12 left to play.

At the beginning of the season, many thought the Pac-12 South would be a three-team race between USC, Arizona State and Utah, a new member in the conference.

Now everything is lined up for Sun Devils to claim the South. They already have big wins over the Trojans and now Utah.

Castaneda Strike Sinks Wood River

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

In tournament play, one moment of magic is oftentimes all it takes.

Brandon Castaneda provided that moment Saturday at Sunway Soccer Complex, as Burley stunned Wood River 1-0 in overtime to advance to the Class 4A District IV boys soccer tournament championship game.

Nearing the end of the first of two golden-goal periods, Castaneda latched onto a bounding ball over the top of the Wood River defense and, his body drifting more toward the right corner flag than the goal, lashed a shot from the corner of the penalty area that beat Wood River goalkeeper Dylan Carey and snuck just inside the far post.

“It’s a beautiful experience. I’m speechless,” Castaneda said moments after his teammates and coaches mobbed him in Burley’s attacking half of the field. “I just saw the ball and hit it like I knew I could.”

It was the last salvo in a game full of chances but short on goals.

That was because both goalkeepers were on the top of their game, particularly in the first half.

Burley was awarded a penalty kick midway through the first half, and Angel Anguiano took a picture-perfect shot, low to the left of the goal as if the ball were to touch the side of the net just beyond the post before hitting anything else. But Carey made an even better play, diving low to his right and tipping it around the post.

Seconds later Juan de Leon stopped a blistering shot from 30 yards, and after that he too dove low to his right to make a terrific save on the post.

“That’s the way games like this are supposed to be,” said Burley coach Wes Nyblade. “Regardless of which way it went, that was a great game. Both teams played hard, both keepers made hellacious saves, and in a game like this it’s going to take something like (Castaneda’s goal) to separate teams.”

Burley (7-6-4) now gets to host the district championship on its own field, Tuesday against Jerome.

Wood River (7-5-2), meanwhile, has to run the gauntlet, beginning with Canyon Ridge coming to town on Monday.

“We talked to the kids and we’re fine,” said Wood River coach Luis Monjaras. “Obviously we wanted to win, but now it’s on to Plan B. It’s a few more games but we’re more than fine with that.”

JEROME 1, MINICO 0, SO Jorge Baeza’s penalty save proved to be the difference as Jerome reached the district championship by stunning top-seeded Minico 5-3 in a penalty shootout after neither team found the net in 100 minutes of open play.

Eddie Lopez was saved on Minico’s third kick, shooting straight at Baeza, who calmly used both palms to deaden the ball in front of him. Moments later Ricardo Rodriguez clinched a shootout win for the second straight day, sending his spot-kick into the top-right corner.

Jerome (8-2-6) visits Burley on Tuesday, while Minico (8-5-3) awaits the winner of Monday’s clash between Canyon Ridge and Wood River.

CANYON RIDGE 3, TWIN FALLS 2

Suren Thapa scored his second goal of the game with five minutes left to keep the Riverhawks alive and eliminate their cross-town rivals.

Hadir Saad opened the scoring for Canyon Ridge (10-7-1), while Ryan Geist scored both goals for Twin Falls.

The Riverhawks visit Wood River on Monday.

Girls Soccer
TWIN FALLS 5, JEROME 0

Claire Goss scored a hat trick and Twin Falls got goals from Morgan McInnes and Becca Behrens as the Bruins advanced the district championship.

Twin Falls (10-2-2) hosts Wood River on Tuesday afternoon, while Jerome (5-9-2) waits for Monday’s winner between Canyon Ridge and Minico.

WOOD RIVER 13, MINICO 0

Sloan Storey scored five times as Wood River thrashed Minico to set up a title clash with Twin Falls.

Erin Murphy and Sammy Sutton each struck twice for the Wolverines (11-2-2), who also got goals from Haley Montgomery, Rory Cole, Olivia Thornton and Tate Morrell.

Wood River visits Twin Falls on Tuesday, while Minico (2-13-1) visits Canyon Ridge on Monday.

CANYON RIDGE 3, BURLEY 0

Ellie Packham scored twice and Emily Grindstaff added the third as Canyon Ridge ousted Burley to remain alive in the district tournament.

Raven Oesterein had 10 saves to pitch the shutout for the Riverhawks (6-10-1), who will host Minico on Monday.

Buhl, Gooding Boys Advance Easily in 3A Tournament

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

Gooding and Buhl are set to duke it out again in the boys Class 3A District IV Soccer Tournament.

The second and third seeds, respectively, breezed through the first round of the tournament Saturday at Sunway Soccer Complex, setting the stage for a match Monday in Gooding, with the winner clinching one of three seeds to the state tournament.

“That’s going to be a really good match,” said Gooding coach Roger Johnson. “Buhl and Gooding have met head-to-head and it’s always all-out. You’re not going to predict it. It ought to be a fun matchup.”

Behind a hat-trick from junior striker Rico Mendez, Gooding cruised to a 7-3 win Saturday to knockout Declo (0-8-0). Jesse Cardenas also scored three goals and Luis Patino added another for the Senators (7-2-3), who built a 6-1 lead at halftime.

After the break, Johnson emptied his bench, allowing for every player to get on the field in the second half.

“We played really well today, but I’m glad that all the kids got to play and have a good time,” Johnson said. “Both teams, they were all smiling when they came off the field after the game.”

Bliss ends its season at 1-12-0.

Declo, which had only 11 players this season, got two goals from Alex Alonzo and one from Jose Zavala.

Buhl (8-3-4) shutout Bliss 6-0 as Daniel Soria scored twice. The Indians built a 5-0 lead at halftime as Daniel Peralta assisted Soria’s first goal and an Alex Arizmendi goal to open the scoring. Gustavo Magana and Joey Ordaz also scored before the break as Tony Lopez rounded out the scoring in the second half.

“This was a good game for us,” said Buhl coach Bill Fields. “This is more what we like to see. We were aggressive and got into a good flow on the offensive side of the ball. The first round is always tricky and you don’t want to overlook any team. We’ve seen it both ways (losing in the first round) and it’s not fun.”

After splitting the regular season series, the Indians now look forward to their match against Gooding on Monday.

“Us and Gooding, it seems like we always play them in the tournament,” said Fields. “It’s always a battle with them and we have to be ready.”

In last year’s district tournament, Gooding ended the Indians’ season with a 2-0 win to punch a ticket to state.

“They play a completely different game than we do,” Johnson said. “We have to play our own game in a match that will be high emotion. Every game we have with them is like that.”

FILER 1, WENDELL 0

With a lose-and-you’re-out first round, it was a possibility the 2010 champs could be sent home on the first day of the tournament.

The Filer Wildcats sent the Wendell Trojans packing on Saturday.

Ryan Karel struck the net in the final 10 minutes for the only score of the game to advance No. 4 Filer and end Wendell’s season with a record of 4-7-2.

Filer (5-7-4) travels to Sun Valley to play top-seeded Community School (9-2-2) on Monday.

Girls Soccer
COMMUNITY SCHOOL 12, GOODING 0

Hannah Dies scored four goals in the game’s first 12 minutes to pace the Cutthroats in the lopsided affair.

She added a fifth in the second half after Community School had built an 8-0 lead before the break. Hayley Murach netted twice, and Hailey Rheinschild, Katie Feldman, Ellie Swanson, Chloe Francois and Josie Allison scored one goal apiece for the Cutthroats.

Gooding (0-13) ends its season as No. 2 Community School (11-4-1) advances to host Bliss on Monday.

BLISS 2, DECLO 0

After a slow start, the Bears ratcheted up the intensity in the second half to score two goals and put away the Hornets.

“It’s hard to beat a team three times (in a season). Then you get into your head that it’s probably easy,” said Bliss coach Diana Butler. “Declo played well and they hustled today, you have to give them credit. We did a lot better in the second half attacking the goal and forcing them into a couple of mistakes.”

Kendall Martin and Stephanie Altamirano scored for No. 3 Bliss (9-4-1), which travels to Sun Valley to play the Community School on Monday.

Declo ends its season with a 2-10-2 record.

FILER 1, WENDELL 0, SO

Knotted at zero after extra time, Filer and Wendell went to penalty kicks, where goalkeeper Jenna Jarolimek made three huge saves and Alyssa Lekkerkerk and Jennifer Lantz found the net to knock Wendell out of the tournament.

Wendell’s fourth penalty kick attempt sailed over the cross bar to hand Filer the win. The No. 4 Wildcats (7-6-0) travel to top-seeded Buhl (11-1-3) on Monday. Wendell ends its season with a record of 4-8-2.

Renegade Oakland Raiders Owner Al Davis Dead at 82

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. • Al Davis was a rebel with a cause — “Just win, baby” he exhorted his beloved Oakland Raiders.

And as the NFL well knows, he was also a rebel with a subpoena.

Davis, who bucked league authority time and again and won three Super Bowl titles during his half-century in professional football, died Saturday. He was 82.

The Hall of Famer died at his home in Oakland, the team said. The cause of death was not immediately disclosed.

Davis was one of the most important figures in pro football history from his role in the development of the AFL, the merger with the NFL and the success he built on the field with the Raiders.

“Al Davis’s passion for football and his influence on the game were extraordinary,” Commissioner Roger Goodell said. “He defined the Raiders and contributed to pro football at every level. The respect he commanded was evident in the way that people listened carefully every time he spoke. He is a true legend of the game whose impact and legacy will forever be part of the NFL.”

Davis was also a litigious gadfly. That was most evident during the 1980s when he went to court — and won — for the right to move his team from Oakland to Los Angeles. Even after he moved the Raiders back to the Bay Area in 1995, he sued for $1.2 billion to establish that he still owned the rights to the L.A. market.

Before that, though, he was a pivotal figure in hastening the merger between the AFL — where he served as commissioner — and the more established NFL. Davis was not initially in favor of a merger, but his aggressive pursuit of NFL players for his fledgling league and team helped bring about the eventual 1970 combination of the two leagues into what is now the most popular sport in the country.

“Al Davis was a good man, and we were friendly rivals,” Steelers chairman emeritus Dan Rooney said in a statement released by the Steelers. “He was a football man and did a lot for the game of football. I had a lot of respect for him, and he will be missed throughout the entire NFL.”

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

Dear Mr. Wolff:

Why is it a good idea to play two-suit transfers into the majors? Would four-suit transfers be better, so that you have a bid to show each of the minors? I rarely have hands with which I want to play a partscore in the minor facing a no-trump opening bid.

Luddite, Orlando, Fla.

ANSWER: While there is no single best transfer scheme, using a two-spade response to one no-trump to show clubs, and using three clubs to show diamonds, keeping a two-no-trump call as natural, is both simple and easy to remember. What you do after that may require considerably more discussion, of course. But one employs these methods to improve bidding to slam and game — not to find a way to play the best partscore.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

What would you bid with ♠ K-10-3-2, ♥ 10-4, ♦ J-9, ♣ A-Q-7-3-2 if your partner opens one club and the next hand makes a one-spade overcall? Is this hand worth a club raise, or a no-trump bid — or something else?

Make a Noise, Levittown, Pa.

ANSWER: If you gave me just one guess, I'd say it was right to bid one no-trump, but to compete in clubs if the opponents bid a red suit. The attraction of bidding one no-trump is that you hope partner will be able to act again if he has either shape or reasonable extras, or both.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

Are there some simple rules that will help me master the general principles of how suits break?

Numbers Nut, Mitchell, S.D.

ANSWER: Leaving aside the rule that when you are missing two cards, it is a toss-up whether you play for the drop, the simple rule is this: An even number of cards are most likely

NOT breaking evenly (call the even break a one-third chance). An odd number of cards rate to break as evenly as possible — this has a two-thirds likelihood. Everything else follows from there.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

I was playing with a very strong partner who sometimes assumed I knew (or remembered!) more than I did. How would you cope with ♠ J-7-4-2, ♥ A-2, ♦ K-10-8-6-2, ♣ A-4 after you opened one diamond, your LHO overcalled one spade, and your partner bid three spades?

A Leap in the Dark, Portland, Ore.

ANSWER: A jump cue-bid here should have a very precise meaning. It is a raise in diamonds with a singleton spade — in other words, a splinter raise. Your hand is not suitable for no-trump, but it is very suitable for diamonds. (Imagine partner with the heart and club kings, plus five diamonds to the ace.) Cue-bid four clubs now — don't even think of bidding three no-trump or closing out the auction at five diamonds.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

What would you respond to a two-heart opening if you hold: ♠ Q-J-7, ♥ A-9-7-3, ♦ K-9-2, ♣ Q-10-4? How would you rate passing, raising, or inquiring with two no-trump?

Advanced Placement, Boise, Idaho

ANSWER: I have enough values to expect the opponents not to make game anywhere. The choice is to raise to three hearts at once (maybe that will suck my opponents in) or to pass and bid up to three hearts if necessary. Either approach makes sense. I favor the latter, but it is close.

DEAR ABBY: My mother watches my two children before and after school and during the breaks. She is a caring person, but she is also very critical of my daughter. (She's fine with my son.)

Mom constantly tells my daughter she needs to lose weight or exercise more, or her hair looks stringy, or she isn't dressed properly. My daughter is only 9.

My mother did this to me when I was younger, and it made me feel I could never live up to her standards. How should I approach her about this? I don't want my daughter to feel inadequate. She's a beautiful, intelligent little girl.

— FRUSTRATED IN MISSOURI

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Deal with this firmly, before your mother erodes your daughter's self-esteem as she did yours. Tell her how her constant criticism made you feel, that you don't want the same thing to happen to your little girl, and that anytime she's tempted to make a negative comment, she should substitute a POSITIVE one instead. Be direct with her, and if she isn't able to comply, make other arrangements for your daughter.

DEAR ABBY: My siblings have noticed my distant, odd behavior toward one of my brothers. This sibling and I have a history of incest. He raped me repeatedly for years, and I want nothing to do with him. When the family gathers, one or the other of us declines the invitation if the other one is going to be present.

I have told one sibling, "We just don't get along — old stuff, ya' know!" and left it at that. I want to keep the reason to myself. I feel I may be pushed for a better answer. Shouldn't "old stuff" be enough of a reason? Should I tell or not?

— SHOULDI OR SHOULDN'T I?

DEAR SHOULD I? A person who repeatedly rapes someone "for years" is a predator. This wasn't two kids "experimenting"; it was sexual assault. How do you know he didn't prey on other siblings or cousins? You should have sought counseling about this years ago, and it's still not too late. Once you do, I'm sure you'll find the strength to stand up for yourself and speak out.

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago, when I was 25, I quit a good job before I had a new one. Hard times ultimately led to my husband and me divorcing. I went back to school and am now starting a new career. But I can't help but feel that if I had not quit my job years back, I'd be established in a career by now and still be married.

I never listened to anyone back then, although I was polite and quiet. I have grown from the experience, but my heart aches for what I lost. I don't drink or do drugs, so there is no numbing this pain. How do I get over my regrets and heal?

— LOOKING BACK IN ILLINOIS

DEAR LOOKING BACK: You can't change the past. You can only concentrate on and build a future. Do that by making a conscious effort to STAY IN THE PRESENT.

When you feel yourself slipping backward and reliving the pain, pull yourself into the here and now. Then thank your higher power for your health, your job, and the chance to rebuild your emotional and financial future. Regret is the cancer of life. Dwell on it, and it will keep you from progressing.

It pays to read the fine print.

IF OCTOBER 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have the gift of self-reliance to help you in the year ahead — but even so, you must earn your way. Your ambitions could be all-consuming in the next six weeks and you will need to work hard to keep up with increased responsibilities. Only the strong and capable are given extra duties, so be proud of the ability to manage your time sensibly. A new romance or friendship could brighten the winter months. January offers a good time to reassess your financial or business situation. In April, opportunities might come your way that will permanently improve some key segment of your life. Rely on your good business sense to make the most of a lucky break.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The more you do, the more that comes up. This week, you are eager to try something new at the drop of the hat and relationships seem exciting and delightful. By midweek, however, you must be more serious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The possibility of heart-break is behind you, so the future is made clear this week. Focus on expanding your business influence or upgrading your education and you will find that doors open effortlessly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You don't necessarily see things as they are; you might see them as you would like them to be. In the week ahead, take information with a grain of salt and if you need advice get it from an expert source.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Success might depend upon taking a misstep in the right direction. When you are led astray by misinformation you can find that the error is beneficial. Make lemonade from the lemons that life hands you this week.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You aren't only barking up the wrong tree, you aren't even in the forest. Today and tomorrow are great for romantic interludes and social activities, but by mid-week, suspicions could get the worst of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Everything is coming up roses this week. You have excellent taste. You can head off potential problems in midweek however, by not making any financial commitment that could tie you down for a long time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Before you drink from the well this week, consider the source. Right now you are at your romantic best, but since you are delightfully sociable and affable you could also swallow a story hook, line, and sinker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unless you stand for something, you might fall for anything. Keep your principles in mind during the upcoming week. You might otherwise misunderstand something that is well intentioned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is fine to be left in the dark as long as you know where to find the light switch. In the week to come, you might be forced to feel your way through to the truth but it will eventually be illuminated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can only get past something if you go through it. Get as much accomplished as possible in the first few days of the week, as you might run into a roadblock or midweek frustrations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are the lens through which a message must pass. This week, take information and expand upon it. Put ideas into the framework of your own intuitiveness and create a learning experience.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romance might ring your bell. For the next few days, your amorous fantasies seem to be your only reality. By midweek, however, you will need to buckle down and pay attention to the material world.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas

Rocking Whale

Like a panda bear or a zebra, an orca (or "killer whale") is easy to recognize by its distinctive black-and-white markings. Here's a unique do-it-yourself project that can add this favorite to your own child's (or grandchild's) menagerie for less than $50.

The secret is that the entire project is made from just one 4-by-8 sheet of plywood. Laminated plywood construction makes it inexpensive, stronger than dimensional lumber and much easier to make. Simply trace the pieces onto plywood, cut out and laminate together with glue and clamps. To finish, sand, paint and assemble with screws and glue.

The rocking whale measures 43 inches long by 16 inches wide by 25 inches tall.

The motivation: Kelly Averbeck and her husband, Wayne, purchased a 1916 house in rural Jerome. A couple of years later, she started using discarded wood to make furniture. Her goal: To restore the home to its original early-20th century look.

Kelly has done a nice job of that. New paint and old-style homemade furniture now decorate the two-story home.

Two pieces of furniture that Kelly completed this summer include a bookcase — painted white and stressed to look worn — and a dining room hutch made from an old cabinet and discarded doors. The hutch is stained Bombay mahogany.

The doors, some of which Kelly already had in her stockpile of discarded material, fit perfectly. "It was meant to be," she said.

The bill: Kelly estimated that it cost her around $40 to build the bookcase

Tie for 3rd Place: Two Benches

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

The motivation: When Gerald and Shanon Egan would invite friends to their Burley home for barbecues, the crowd naturally would gather on the couple's large patio. But Gerald always worried about the two nearby window wells that a guest could fall into.

He considered what he should do: put grates over the wells or build a small fence around them? He decided instead to cover them with home-built patio benches.

The bill: Gerald estimated the project cost him around $150, mostly for the cushions. He already had some of the wood.

The timeline: It took Gerald about two weeks this spring to make the benches, he said. Shanon helped him with the cushions. They purchased the material at an area fabric shop.

Bang for the buck: "It worked out better than I thought," Gerald said.

He built the benches in such a way that if he and Shanon need to evacuate their home through the basement windows, the benches can easily be pushed out of the way.

Friends who come to the house today seem to like the benches, he said. And now he doesn't worry about people falling into the wells.

Biggest challenge: "Figuring out how to do the cushions," Gerald said. "But my significant other had some experience that way and she helped me out."

Skills learned: Gerald had done a number of other home-improvement projects but knew little about how to make benches. He didn't use any how-to books or other instructions but relied on his own ingenuity.

"It was all new to me," he said.

What's next: To complement the benches and his large patio — it's about 12 by 35 feet, he said — Gerald is thinking about installing fans and enclosing the patio. But with colder weather approaching, he said, those projects likely will have to wait. At least until next year.

Live Near Shoshone? Show Off Your Holiday Decorating

TIMES-NEWS

North Shoshone's Christmas Home Tour is a chance to get to know your neighbors — by decorating your home or business in the season's spirit and inviting them in to see your handiwork.

The public tour, set for 2-6 p.m. Dec. 10, already has some family homes signed up, as well as Salli's Back Porch Fabrics and Fresh Country Hair.

"A few of us have been talking about this for a long time," Salli's and Fresh Country owner Salli Hubbs said in a press release. "We live in a wonderful community, but people get so busy they often don't get the chance to meet the people they pass on the road every day. We're hoping this will start to change that."

Inside her business, Hubbs plans a display of holiday quilts, and she'll show off the house she and her family built, as well. Down the road, another neighbor will give horse-drawn wagon rides to a live manger scene. Another home will host artisans for demonstrations, and local authors will sign books.

To add your home to the tour list, register by Nov. 1 and start decorating. Organizers are charging hosts a $10 registration fee to help pay for advertising. Participants may choose to provide refreshments for guests, and they're welcome to sell products.

Ticket proceeds will benefit the Lincoln County Chamber of Commerce's scholarship fund. An informational meeting for hosts is set for 6:30 p.m. Nov. 1 at Salli's Back Porch Fabrics, to go over the marketing plan and distribute tickets and maps for hosts to sell. Register: Hubbs, 316-1003 or 886-2022.

and hutch, because most of the material she already had or had gotten for free.

The timeline: Once she sets her mind to doing something, Kelly doesn't waste time finishing her projects. It took her just two days on the bookcase, and another two to complete the hutch.

"I have the ideas in my mind for a long time before I do anything," she said.

Bang for the buck: Kelly likes to stand back and admire the furniture she's made, knowing that what could have been wasted material has instead become something practical. You'd never know where the furniture came from. It looks pricey, like something you'd buy in a specialty store.

"It looks like it should have been here in 1916, back when the house was built," she said. "People, when they see it, are going to walk away and say 'Wow!'"

Skills learned: Kelly always learns something when working on a project. Most difficult this time around was making sure all the wood pieces lined up evenly. When it came to using a miter saw, she relied on Wayne's expertise.

What's next: Kelly held an open house last week to show off her remodeled home. Everything she wanted to do to the home is pretty much finished now, she said. But give it time — she's confident she'll find something else to do. She might even help friends with their own home-improvement projects.

"It takes a lot of time, patience and respect to train a tiger, and one of the hardest things is getting (the tiger) to sit on their pedestal," promotion director Cuinn Griffin said.

Bring on the Clowns: The Terablanca family of four spends about an hour prepping for each act — putting on makeup and costumes and getting into character. "It's simply a matter of flipping a switch and bringing out the kid in themselves," Griffin said.

Dynamic Duo: The Piccadilly elephants are known for more than tricks. After a tornado tore through Joplin, Mo., in May, the animals were brought to the scene, to where emergency vehicles couldn't yet reach to drag debris, cars and other rubble out of the wreckage. You can find a clip of their service here: thefuncircus.com

Although the pair of elephants helped clean up then, they need a good scrubbing themselves before they go into the ring. "Their bodies need to be swept with a broom to remove dirt and their feet polished so they shine," Griffin said.

Meredith Wilson's 1957 Broadway musical, which won five Tony Awards, revolves around a con man who makes a living selling band instruments and uniforms to naive townsfolk before skipping town with the cash. Harold Hill's scheme hits a roadblock in River City, Iowa, when a prim librarian falls in love with him.

The musical's well-known tunes include "Seventy-six Trombones" and "Till There Was You," which The Beatles recorded.

"It's a story of love and redemption. But it's also darn fun," said Cherie Kessler, the Playhouse's executive director. "The characters are quirky, irascible, endearing, maddeningly practical, steeped in town gossip, some smart and some not so smart. But all are folks who just want to work hard and made a good life for their families. ... And in the end everyone responds to the heart of this con man's scheme as opposed to the scam."

Director R.L. Rowsey aims to trim the musical from two hours and 45 minutes to two hours — by cutting out a little dance and never letting the lights black out.

"I like how every scene connects," said female lead Sara Bradshaw Gorby, who played in "The Music Man" with Twin Falls' Dilettantes while studying theater and music at College of Southern Idaho. "It keeps things moving. People flow on and off stage — just like life."

The St. Thomas production will feature a cast of 60 — the kids decked out in blue-and-white ruffled uniforms worn by Boise State University's marching band during the 1970s. Carey School owns them now.

A seven-piece band, housed in a stage gazebo, will provide the music.

Hazy About Grout?

BY AL HEAVENS

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Question: The contractors who installed my tile floor six months ago left a haze of grout over the tiles and I'm unable to remove it.

Answer: Removing grout haze from a tile floor as the work is in progress is one of the keys to a job well done, and it seems that your contractors didn't care.

I've installed several tile floors over the years, and the Hometime video I watched 200 times in the late 1980s stated clearly that if you removed the haze as you worked on the floor, clean water and a clean sponge were all that was necessary.

Let the tile set for 24 to 36 hours, and follow the clean sponge/clean water procedure again. You then use a clean, dry rag to wipe down the tiles, and another clean dry rag to polish off the haze.

If you let haze removal go for six months, the sponge and water technique won't work, and you'll need a commercial cleaning product instead. If you know the name of the tile manufacturer, you might want to contact it to find out what is recommended for the tile so it won't be damaged. If you buy a grout haze remover at the hardware store, test it first in an area that is somewhat hidden from view in the event it damages the tile.

Follow the safety directions on the product, and wear gloves, long sleeves and safety glasses while you are working.

VOICES OF FAITH

Is It Wrong for Radio and TV Preachers to Mix Religion and Politics?

MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

ADVOCATE HONESTLY

Religion's role is to formulate values. It does so through sacred documents interpreted by authoritative representatives of the tradition. There is nothing wrong with presenting those values honestly in any public manner. However, the authority of the clergy stems from the tradition she or he represents. Those traditions are often centuries old, offering a variety of opinions on all topics. To teach the entirety of the tradition on a given subject may be impossible. What then is the preacher's obligation? It is to advocate the tradition honestly. On a difficult issue, no single opinion can represent every aspect completely.

Preachers are obligated to be truthful about the tradition message and not simply represent personal bias or political affiliation masked as religious truth. Most often we go astray when we knowingly withhold the countervailing argument represented within our own tradition. For instance, in Judaism, I have heard rabbis teach that Judaism permits abortions, which is true. But it is not true in all circumstances. As a matter of fact, in most current circumstances in which people choose abortions today our tradition would historically oppose abortion. People most often choose personal autonomy over historic religious principle, and rabbis ought to say that when speaking from the pulpit. It's not the preaching, it's whether we represent the actual values of our traditions as we understand them to be.

— Rabbi Mark Levin of Congregation Beth Torah, Overland Park, Kan.

FIND A CHURCH FOR YOU

This week my church, the Midwest Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, was in Annual Conference. We gathered as a body of believers because we have a shared faith in God, a love of our denominational history and traditions and a commitment to the liberating and reconciling ministry that we have practiced for over 200 years. Not every visitor who comes to an African Methodist Episcopal church becomes a part of the fellowship. Visitors may determine that they don't share our view of God, cannot relate to our history and traditions or that they do not desire to commit to our definition of liberation and reconciliation. Such responses can be expected for we come to the worship fellowship with different needs.

These same kinds of responses hold true for those viewing television ministries. Television viewers are the equivalent of church visitors. Viewers/visitors may well determine that the preacher for whatever reason does not meet their needs. They don't like the preaching style or the content of the message — too much politics, too little politics, too conservative, too liberal, too dramatic, too boring. Viewers may then decide to visit another church by changing the channel and sampling another presenter of the gospel message. My prayer is that everyone keeps visiting until they find the place/television program that speaks to their needs.

— The Rev. Betty Hanna-Witherspoon, pastor of Ebenezer A.M.E. Church, Kansas City, Mo.

BIBLE MANUSCRIPTS FROM DAMASCUS GO ON RARE DISPLAY

BY MATTI FRIEDMAN

Associated Press

JERUSALEM • Precious Bible manuscripts originating in the Jewish community of Damascus, Syria, went on display for several hours Wednesday, offering a rare glimpse at a collection that includes books spirited to Israel in clandestine operations before the ancient community disappeared at the end of the 20th century.

The books are held at Israel's national library. Because of security and conservation concerns, most of the collection has been on display just once before, also for just a few hours, more than a decade ago.

The collection includes 11 volumes. Three, including the oldest and most important book in the collection, were brought out of the library's vaults and displayed during a symposium Wednesday evening.

Ranging from 700 to 1,000 years old and written in the Middle East and Europe, the parchment manuscripts include meticulous Hebrew penmanship and illustrations in ink and gold leaf. Some boast intricate micrography — decorations made up of thousands of tiny Hebrew letters.

None were written in Damascus, but rather came to be held in synagogues in the city over the centuries. They are known collectively as the Damascus Crowns, "crown" being a Hebrew term sometimes used to describe particularly important and venerable biblical manuscripts.

The Jewish community in Syria's capital had been there for more than 2,000 years before its members were driven out by government persecution and mob violence linked to the rise of Arab nationalism and the establishment of Israel in 1948. A second ancient community in the country's business center, Aleppo, met the same fate, as did others across the Arab world.

The oldest of the Damascus Crowns was written in the late 10th century A.D. in what is now Israel. Because it shows the influence of two rival schools of textual scholars, it has provided modern researchers with important information on how the Biblical text evolved. It was purchased by a famed British collector of manuscripts, David Solomon Sassoon, in 1914 and taken to Britain. The library purchased it in 1975.

DAR Announces History Essay Contest for Students

The Twin Falls Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution is now accepting entries in its American history essay contest and Junior American Citizens contests for this year.

The contests are open to public, private and home-schooled students, as well as members of youth groups and service organizations. All entries must be postmarked by Dec. 16.

American history essay contests are open to students in grades 5-8 and 9-12. For students in grades 5-8, this year's topic is "Young America Takes a Stand: The War of 1812." Students are asked to pretend they were alive during the War of 1812 and had a friend who has become famous in history because of standing up for America during that exciting, but dangerous time. Describe the person and how he or she stood up for America, and explain why it is important to honor such heroes when we celebrate the 200th anniversary of the War of 1812. Essays must be 300-600 words for students in grade 5, or 600-1,000 words for students in grades 6-8.

Students in grades 9-12 are eligible to enter the Christopher Columbus essay contest with the topic "Christopher Columbus: In his own time, in history, and today." Describe Christopher Columbus, who had primitive ships and no computers or modern navigation equipment, as he was understood in three different time periods: the 15th century, the 19th century and today. Essays should be no more than 750 words.

Students in grades 1-12 may compete in DAR Junior American Citizens contests in the categories of poster design, photographic essay, short story and community service. All entries must be based on the theme "Enhance the Present."

Entries for all contests must meet specific requirements.

For complete contest rules: dgreene@northrim.net or 308-1810.

Local winners will be recognized at a reception in March 2012, receive a small monetary award and have their entries forwarded to the Idaho State DAR for consideration for state-level awards.

The DAR is a national organization promoting patriotism, education and historic preservation.

- The Hope for the Hungry Community Food Pantry in Shoshone will get $3,700 for its operations.

The Idaho Food Bank Fund was established by the 2009 Legislature as a cooperative effort among three well-respected statewide nonprofit organizations: The Idaho Foodbank, Community Action Partnership Association of Idaho and Catholic Charities of Idaho. Taxpayers were able to donate on their 2010 state income forms — providing about $13,000 more for the fund to dole out this year than they did the year before.

Grant funds were targeted at projects that would expand existing food storage or distribution capacities, or otherwise increase support services related to hunger relief in Idaho.

Students in the College of Southern Idaho's Surgical Technology program know what people want, especially right now: cash. And the only prize in the raffle they're selling tickets for is pretty close — a $500 Visa card.

When all 400 tickets are sold, the students will hold a drawing to see who wins the prize. Tickets are $5 each and will be sold as long as any are left. Proceeds from the fundraiser will be used to support projects for the Surgical Technology class.

Tickets are being sold by all Surg Tech students and can also be purchased through instructor Janet Milligan at jmilligan@csi.edu.

It's Up to You to Guard Your Mail

Lately, I have missed some payments because I did not get my statements in the mail. I think it's because somebody has been taking my mail but can't prove it. What can I do if somebody is taking my mail?

— Alison

I think somebody has been taking my mail, too, because now instead of the "you might be a winner" notifications I get "don't worry, you didn't win so give it up" letters.

OK, another bad one, but there are a few things that you can do if you believe someone has been taking mail from your mailbox.

Some people have mailboxes at the post office for this very reason. They like the fact that their mail is secure and the cost for the box is minimal, I believe. The only downside is that you need to go to the post office to get your mail and if distance is a factor, it can almost make it a chore (especially if you only have junk mail). Some people do drive the distance, but only do it every few days so that it's not a trip in vain.

The next thing you could do, if you have or can get a video camera, is to set up a camera to record your mailbox. It is legal to do this and I would suggest not giving up if you don't see anybody around your mailbox on the first session. If anybody is getting into your mail it could be on certain days of the month when they might think you would be getting mail they could benefit from.

If you do find that somebody is getting into your mail, then I would call your local police first to make a report. Even though stealing mail is a federal offense the post office usually likes a police report to go with its investigation. The U.S. Postal Service also has an online form you fill out and electronically send to USPS to report theft of mail. Other tips from USPS to keep your mail safe can be found online at postalinspectors.usps.gov.

Another tactic thieves use is to try and file a change of address form on their victims and have the Postal Service deliver the victims' mail to them. If your mail stops completely, you need to contact the Postal Service immediately to make sure that this has not happened to you.

The last thing I will tell you is that most thieves who steal mail are not stealing it just for account information or those new cute checkbooks you ordered — they are also looking for any information that can be used to steal your identity. Not making it easy for them is up to you.

CLEANING

Question:

My dog urinated on my carpet repeatedly while I was on vacation! (I hired a dog-sitter, but she fell ill and was not very attentive to Bowser) I need to eliminate the odor; he keeps going back to the same spot over and over!

"Busting Bowser's Doggy Dung & Puppy Pee!"

Answer:

Regular carpet cleaners and shampoos will not work! What you need is Don Aslett's Bacteria/Enzyme DIGESTER. This amazing product eats away the bacteria and eliminates biological odors. It provides immediate relief with deodorizers while the enzymes go to work.

P.S. Nursing homes use this product to eliminate biological human odors caused by urine, feces & vomit. (Sorry if I sound gross, just trying to help!)

Gardeners, Extend Your Season with Cold Frame Workshop

The Building Material Thrift Store in south Hailey will present a free workshop on cold frame construction using reclaimed materials, from 10 a.m. to noon Oct. 15. You'll learn from Rebecca Bundy, associate planner for the city of Ketchum and an avid year-round gardener, and Tom Harned, a green builder and owner of Five Bee Hives.

You'll learn how to construct a simple cold frame from reclaimed materials, and learn about season extension gardening and cold frame placement. The store will have materials available for purchase for those who would like to build along with the facilitators.

You can also elect to build a cold frame and donate it to The Hunger Coalition's Hope Garden.

The event is a part of the Hailey Community Climate Challenge, which explores steps communities can take to reduce greenhouse gases.

"With cold frames, we demonstrate in an easy do-it-yourself project how you can divert materials from our landfills and avoid the production of new materials, all while growing your own food," said Lisa Hutteringer of the Environmental Resource Center, the challenge's outreach partner.

UMS – It just got a lot warmer for lucky Idahoans.

That’s because U.S. based Heat Surge has just announced that they are releasing brand new high performance zone heaters that drastically slash heat bills to residents of the state of Idaho.

Company spokesman, David Brokaw, says, “We only have 6,049 new heaters to hand over right now, so residents of the state of Idaho who find their county listed in today’s paper need to call the Idaho Distribution Hotline immediately to get theirs.”

This is all happening to announce the Heat Surge high performance zone heater with new Complete-Heat™ technology that can make heat bills so cheap you may never have to pay high heat bills again.

“Most people don’t even realize that their furnace continuously runs and runs to heat areas of their home that they’re not even using, costing them hundreds if not thousands of dollars every year. But the Heat Surge high performance zone heater heats both you and the air around you in just minutes to save you money on heat bills,” said Brokaw.

Complete-Heat is a revolutionary breakthrough in home heat technology that incredibly uses only nine cents an hour of electricity to produce a warm, healthy heat that practically eliminates high heat bills.

Everyone is calling to get one because they cost just pennies an hour to operate and easily go from room-to-room so you can turn down your thermostat and never be cold again. They even come fully assembled so all you do is plug them in.

Idahoans are being urged to immediately call the Toll Free distribution hotlines at 1-888-414-2415 because only the first 6,049 readers who beat the 48-hour deadline are getting the high performance heaters delivered directly to their door.

And here’s the best part. Residents of the counties listed in today’s paper are actually getting their Heat Surge high performance heater with new Complete-Heat technology encased in a real wood fireplace mantle that is built to last forever. The mantles are being hand-made right here in the U.S.A. where they are beautifully hand-rubbed, stained and varnished.

That’s why for just three hundred ninety-eight dollars it’s a real steal because these high performance zone heaters have sold for as much as six hundred forty dollars delivered. “It just makes good sense to get one now because with all of the money you save on your heat bills, these high performance zone heaters actually pay for themselves in just a matter of weeks. After that, they just keep on putting cash in your pocket month after month,” Brokaw said.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but we only have 6,049 high performance heaters to hand over and when they’re gone, they’re gone so residents of the counties listed in today’s paper need to call right now. Those who do will be the really smart ones because we’re letting residents have two heaters per household until we run out just as long as they call before the deadline ends,” confirms Brokaw.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because with the amount of money these high performance zone heaters save people on heat bills everyone wants one,” said Brokaw.

“So if the lines are busy keep trying. We promise to answer every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can start saving money immediately,” Brokaw said.

“That way you’ll never have to be cold and miserable again,” he said. ■
