Bruins Paint the Town Blue

The Twin Falls High School student body lines up along the goal line to watch the presentation of the American and Idaho flags before the Bruins took on Canyon Ridge Friday during the annual Service Bowl. The Bruins used a strong second-half effort to hold off the Riverhawks 18-6 in the third game between the rival schools, all won by Twin Falls.

Are These Idaho's New Legislative Boundaries?

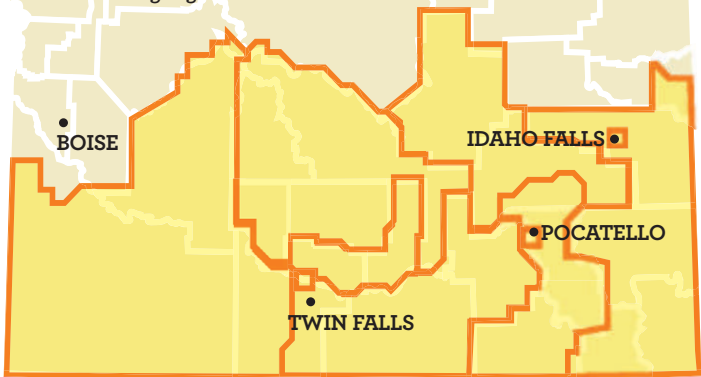

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho's second 2011 redistricting commission has unanimously adopted a map laying out the state's 35 legislative districts. The unity of the three Republican, three Democrat panel's decision on Friday was a marked departure from the rancor that divided the first redistricting panel, which met for 92 days before adjourning empty-handed on Sept. 6. The new panel, which has met for less than a month, so far, still must adopt a U.S. congressional map. It plans to meet Monday. Population changes require Idaho to come up with new maps every 10 years, to preserve one-person, one-vote principles.

This one includes 11 county splits, which could be a point of contention given the Idaho Supreme Court has highlighted the importance of keeping counties together. The 2001 redistricting spilled over into 2002 because of several contentious legal battles. Still, the panel on Friday offered justification for its new plan in a 13-page report. Among the highlights: The population deviation between the biggest and smallest districts falls within the legal 10 percent. And Republican Commissioner Dolores Crow said the county splits were necessary as the panel sought to preserve communities of interest. "Only God could make one that would make everybody happy," Please see REDISTRICTING, M2

What It Would Do for Southern Idaho's Political Clout

THE BIGGEST CHANGE: Twin Falls would get its own city district, while the western part of the county would be divided at Highway 93. Buhl and Filer would be part of a district encompassing Owyhee and Elmore counties. WHAT'S NEXT: The plan is final, though lawsuits may be filed challenging it.

The new state legislative districts selected Friday will bring a mix of change and continued stability to south-central Idaho's political representation. The plan, approved unanimously by the state's second redistricting commission on Friday, will determine the political boundaries of legislative districts for the next decade if it's not overturned in court. But six miles north of town, thousands of logs are stacked next to the highway. With no visible explanation as to how the logs got there, they remain amusing or confusing to the average passerby. Dave Zortman understands the puzzle. As the owner of Sticks and Stones since 2002, he runs one of the only large-scale timber companies in the Magic Valley. He says business boomed a few years in because people soon realized it was cheaper to buy from a professional than travel to the woods to gather their own firewood. # Over 40? Get that Mammogram

I am 42 years old and have never had a mammogram. I've heard that it is important to get them after age 40, but is it really necessary? I've heard they can be painful.

— Theresa, Buhl

Answered by Lana Hill, RN, breast care coordinator at St. Luke's Center for Breast Imaging:

Yes, it is recommended by the American Cancer Society that all women over the age of 40 have an annual screening mammogram. Many women have a misconception that if you don't have a family history, it won't happen to you. But most breast cancer occurs in women without any kind of family history. An annual screening mammogram, beginning at age 40, is the best possible means of early detection. If you feel a significant lump or have a concern before the age of 40, you should see your health care provider and have your physician order a diagnostic mammogram. Early detection is important because breast cancer can be treated more effectively when it is diagnosed early. That's why an annual screening mammogram is so important — it increases the chance of catching cancer earlier. And with the newer digital mammography, breast cancer is much more detectable at an early stage. Many insurance companies now pay for an annual screening mammogram for women over the age of 40. There is also the 900 Women program, which enables women to obtain a mammogram at no cost if they are eligible. You asked about pain and screening mammograms. New digital mammograms offer less compression than previous screening mammograms. They also expose you to less radiation, which takes less time. If you do experience pain during the screening, talk to your technician — there are pads and cushions that can be used to ease your discomfort or you can be realigned for more comfort. There are a few things you can do to ensure less breast tenderness before your annual screening mammogram. Schedule your appointment a week after your period for the least amount of sensitivity. Caffeine can also add to breast discomfort during a mammogram, so limit caffeine intake two weeks prior to your appointment. You can also schedule your annual screening mammogram with a friend for added support and comfort with the process. Annual screening mammograms after the age of 40 are very effective in early detection of breast cancer. Early detection is the key in fighting breast cancer!

Juvenile Charged as Adult in Vehicle Thefts

TIMES-NEWS

A juvenile accused of breaking into several vehicles in Twin Falls has been formally charged as an adult. Thomas Pettus, 17, of Twin Falls, is one of three people who police say broke into vehicles one night in August and stole various items from them. He was arraigned Friday on one felony count of burglary and a misdemeanor charge of petit theft.

Also arrested the night of Aug. 24 were Andrew Mandis, 19, and Mason Tanner, 18, both also of Twin Falls.

The arrests were made near the 2500 block of Whispering Pine Drive after a resident spotted a suspicious vehicle in the neighborhood. According to court documents, upon checking out the vehicle, police found the trio hiding inside, along with latex gloves and valuables. Officers recovered three iPods, a GPS device and a purse, all of which were identified and claimed by their owners.

The police report notes that four vehicles were broken into during the alleged crime spree.

In court documents, justifications for charging Pettus as an adult include the seriousness of the crime and his past record in the juvenile corrections system. He next faces a preliminary hearing, at 8:15 a.m. Oct. 21.

Mandis and Tanner each face three felony counts of burglary. Mandis is listed in online court records as planning to change his plea; that hearing is set for 10 a.m. Wednesday. Tanner, already having pleaded to the thefts, will be sentenced at 2:30 p.m. Nov. 28.

Hankins Road Closure Extended in Twin Falls

TIMES-NEWS

A road closure in Twin Falls associated with that city's arsenic-reduction project will last longer than originally expected.

Hankins Road between Falls Avenue East and Stadium Boulevard will remain closed until Oct. 26, according to a city news release. The closure must be extended because more time is needed to prepare the road for paving.

When Hankins reopens, city officials expect the work will be substantially complete and that segment will not face any future closures for the project.

Originally, the road was set to reopen at the end of this week.

Redistricting

Crow said, of the map that won the 6-0 vote. "And I'm not God. I believe we covered all the angles possible to cover. We did what was necessary for the state and national constitutions."

Others besides Crow on the panel were Republicans Randy Hansen, a former state lawmaker from Twin Falls, and Sheila Olsen of Idaho Falls, a GOP activist. Democrats were Ron Beitelspacher, a retired Grangeville utility lineman; Shauneen Grange, a Democratic activist; and Elmer Martinez, a former state representative from Pocatello.

Lou Esposito, a Republican member of the previous redistricting committee, said on Friday he hadn't yet closely scrutinized the plan.

But he told The Associated Press he's been getting phone calls from GOP loyalists who are concerned that the map may not be advantageous to Idaho's dominant political party.

State Republican Party Chairman Norm Semanko has complained the redistricting process in Idaho gives too much power to Democrats because of the even split on the panel.

Like in virtually any redistricting, some Idaho incumbents wound up as victims in Friday's map, forced to face off against other sitting legislators.

Northern Idaho Republican Sens. Shawn Keough and Joyce Broadsword both were placed in District 1.

Meanwhile, Republican Reps. Tom Trail and Dick Harwood, along with Democratic Rep. Shirley Ringo, must vie for just two seats near Moscow in District 5, while west-central Idaho's District 8 includes five sitting representatives including House Speaker Lawrence Denney and House Majority Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts.

Republican Sens. Patti Anne Lodge and Melinda Smyser could face each other in May in the District 11 primary, if they opt to run again.

In Boise, Democratic Sen. Les Bock would square off against Republican John Andreason, while District 20 pits Republican Sen. Shirley McKague against Senate Assistant Majority Leader Chuck Winder.

There's also a cluster of sitting Senate and House lawmakers in southern Idaho's District 23 affected, including Republican Sens. Bert Brackett and Tim Corder.

Incumbents in the House are also affected in Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Ada County, where Republican House Majority Leader Mike Moyle was put together with Reps. Reed DeMordaunt and Marv Hagedorn.

But Beitelspacher said Democrats and Republicans panelists alike on this renewed effort to set Idaho's election boundaries for the next decade ignored political and incumbent considerations, focusing instead on meeting their constitutional and statutory obligations.

"When you follow those Supreme Court decisions, you start eliminating a lot of the partisan stuff in a hurry," he said. "We did not deal with any partisan politics. We started out as strangers, we became friends. And we did it according to the Constitution, so help me God."

purchased from the U.S. Forest Service.

Most of the logs he gathers are already dead, killed by the mountain pine beetle. The Sawtooth National Recreation Area first experienced a beetle outbreak in the late 1990s. The worst of the infestation is over but the dead trees remain, which is good for timber businesses, said Jim Rineholt, SNRA forester for the Sawtooth National Forest's Ketchum district office.

"We have accelerated some of that harvesting, he said. "This has helped local timber businesses because we are putting up more timber sales to remove the dead wood."

Rineholt said at one time, he received complaints that the Sawtooth area didn't have enough firewood. Now he receives phone calls from people complaining there is too much.

"We're selling close to 3,000 to 4,000 cords of wood alone from the Sawtooth area," he said.

The plethora of logs helps Zortman keep up with rising demand. When he first opened his business, he sold only 200 cords of wood the first year, for $170 per cord. Now he sells close to 2,500 cords a year for the same price.

With winter approaching, firewood is Zortman's fastest-selling product right now. In the spring, fence posts are his prime sellers. Zortman also sells the saw-

Burley Council Field Sounds Off

Meeting etiquette, police contract, library funding among top topics during first of two candidate forums.

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • About 70 people filled the seats at the Burley Public Library Thursday night to hear from eight of the candidates vying for a chair on the Burley City Council in November.

Candidates answered a series of questions ranging from what they think of city council members asking condescending questions of department heads during city meetings, to their takes on the biggest issues facing the city.

Here's a sampling of what each candidate had to say about the state of things in Burley.

John Craner, banker • Craner said it's a fundamental right to be treated with dignity and respect, and he disapproves of council members treating city employees poorly. He said the three most important issues facing the city are establishing a cohesive city council, preparing for growth and coming together as a city.

Craner said now is not the time to pursue funding to build a new public library, adding that people should be allowed to recover from the recession first.

Dennis Dexter, county employee • Dexter said he has seen councilmen ask department heads condescending questions and he doesn't agree with that at all. He said the three top issues are removing the bickering during city meetings, fiscal responsibility and improving city services without overspending.

Dexter said he would support a library bond.

Randall Hawkins, retired banker • Hawkins said several years ago the city hired an administrator, who council questions should filter through. He said redirecting city meetings from the current "perverse form of entertainment" they've become, along with keeping the city's police contract with the county intact and economic growth, tops his list of most important issues.

Hawkins said he "seriously questions" whether a library bond would succeed right now.

Samuel Kuoha, police officer • Kuoha said in the eight months he's attended city meetings, he hasn't observed any condescending questions being asked of department heads. He said economic growth, establishing a future for the city's youth and the unification of Mini-Cassia are his utmost concerns.

Kuoha would support a library bond.

Jay Lenkersdorfer, newspaper publisher • Lenkersdorfer said the issue of condescending questions asked during meetings is a "conjured-up problem in many aspects."

He said his top priorities are replacing aging infrastructure, keeping fees in line and fostering business retention. Lenkersdorfer said he'd support a library bond, and the people should decide whether to fund a new facility.

Russell Mallory, retired from fertilizer and chemical industry • Mallory said it's interesting how two people at the same meeting can interpret things differently. He said keeping Burley a great place to live, bringing new business into the city and keeping the city-county law enforcement contract intact are the most important challenges facing the city.

Mallory said he's supportive of a library bond, but not now.

Joyce Merrill, teacher •

Merrill said council members need to respect the people who have been hired by the city for their expertise.

"You have to be careful throwing stones when you're not in the trenches," she said.

Merrill said maintaining effective communication between the citizens and the city, putting more than a one-year bandage on the police contract and leading smart economic growth are her top issues. Merrill said now is the time for a library bond.

Tom Tolness, business owner and property manager for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation • Tolness said all people need to behave in a respectful and professional manner during city meetings. Tolness said keeping the police contract in place, improving the city's infrastructure and improving and maintaining recreational opportunities in the city are his top concerns.

Tolness said a library bond is necessary and now is the time for it.

Boundaries

Twin Falls County: South-central Idaho's most populous county saw the most drastic change. Twin Falls County is split into three different districts in the new plan, one more than it is currently. The city of Twin Falls comprises one of those districts, a first for the region.

Outside of that city, the county west of U.S. Highway 93 is grouped with Elmore and Owyhee counties in another district. To the east, residents join Cassia and Power counties in a district.

The changes will pit incumbents against each other next year if all end up running for re-election. Rep. Stephen Hartgen will be in the same district as fellow Twin Falls Republican Reps. Leon Smith and Sharon Block.

If all three run for the same two seats, one will have to go. Smith said he hasn't decided if he'll run again. Hartgen said he plans to seek re-election.

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, actually lives just southwest of town — putting him in competition with Reps. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry, and Pete Nielsen, R-Mountain Home. Also in that new district, Sens. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, and Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, would have to compete for just one available seat. Brackett said Friday he hasn't decided yet if he'll seek re-election; Corder said he plans to run.

Hartgen and Patrick expressed concern about the split.

"It was gerrymandering in the worst case," Patrick said, adding that he hasn't decided if he'll run. "... We asked not to be destroyed three ways or four ways as a county because it destroys our representation."

The redistricting commission had one member from Twin Falls: Randy Hansen, a Republican. He said the plan offers a good balance of representation for communities of interest — an important factor laid out in state law — including the needs of metropolitan areas and agriculture. With two districts for rural Twin Falls County and the one for the city, there's plenty of chances for representation, he said.

Complicating it, he said, Twin Falls County has grown more than the surrounding regions, meaning the less-populated districts had to expand to include more people.

Mini-Cassia: Unlike prior proposals, Minidoka and Cassia counties remain in two different districts in the approved plan. Minidoka County is still paired with Jerome County.

"I'm very pleased and grateful that my district was essentially kept the same," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert. "... It looks like the Magic Valley is treated very well."

Wrapping Minidoka and Cassia counties together would have put Cameron in the same district as his longtime mentor, Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo. Had that happened, Cameron said, he and Darrington would have needed to do some talking before the election.

With the new plan, the influence of Mini-Cassia isn't diluted, Cameron said. In District 27, Cassia County loses Oneida County, but keeps Power County and gains a portion of Twin Falls County.

To the north: The four remaining counties in the region — Blaine, Gooding, Camas and Lincoln — still make up their own district. It's the one legislative district in the region that has leaned Democratic in voting trends, electing lawmakers like Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, and Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum.

N. IDAHO CITY FIRES WORKERS RELATED TO COUNCILMAN

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) •

The northern Idaho city of Coeur d'Alene fired three part-time employees after learning they were related to a longtime city councilman.

City attorneys found the hires in violation of Idaho's nepotism law amid questions from a candidate challenging city council president Ron Edinger for his seat.

Edinger's grandchildren — Brock Poole, Cameron Poole and Chris Willoughby — have worked on a seasonal basis for the city's recreation and street departments dating back to 1999. They earned $9 to $12 an hour.

Edinger, the city's longest serving councilman, says he was unaware his position made them ineligible for employment.

But the Coeur d'Alene Press reports that Edinger had previously discussed the nepotism rules in relation to his daughter, who was hired by the city before the 1990 law was enacted.

SW Idaho County Asks Sheriff to Resign

BOISE (AP) • The sheriff of a sprawling, sparsely populated county in southwestern Idaho may have been asked to step down — but Daryl Crandall plans to stay put.

The Owyhee County sheriff issued a statement Friday saying he plans to finish his elected term, which ends 2012.

Crandall was elected in 2008. He was targeted a recall campaign last year because some people thought he'd created a hostile work environment and wasn't cooperating with other law enforcement agencies. But the former sheriff's department employee behind the recall push didn't get enough signatures to put it to a vote.

Commissioners passed a resolution Tuesday asking Crandall to resign amid concerns about his management of the sheriff's office and spending.

Crandall says he has tried to use taxpayer money in the wisest way possible.

Workers Ask Idaho Fiduciary: Where is Their Money?

Would-be Tamarack Resort buyer Matthew D. Hutcheson has pledged to clear everything up once he talks to federal investigators.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Would-be Idaho ski resort buyer Matthew D. Hutcheson spent his career building a reputation as an independent investment adviser helping multi-employer retirement plans manage workers' money, regularly regaling listeners with tales of his testimony on Capitol Hill.

"I am Congress' policy adviser on everything retirement," he once said.

But in Hutcheson's obscure corner of the retirement savings world where trust is everything, workers and investment managers in Washington state, North Carolina and Hawaii now say he won't tell them where their money is.

The U.S. Department of Labor is investigating, and questioned his associates in Boise on Wednesday. But officials have not said exactly what they are looking for.

Hutcheson has pledged to clear everything up once he talks to federal investigators.

"I'm taking responsibility," Hutcheson said Friday. "I'm going to get this fixed."

Liens on Hutcheson's house near Boise, as well as a former employee's lawsuit and bad check claims, also add up to $350,000, while his $40 million bid for the half-finished Tamarack Resort some 90 miles north of Boise in a remote spur of the Rocky Mountains has stalled.

The Associated Press has also found Hutcheson has exaggerated claims in four in-person interviews, a dozen phone conversations and emails obtained by the AP since he announced his Tamarack bid last November.

During one session, he told the AP he'd struck a deal with Palo Alto, Calif.-based electric car maker Tesla Motors to build a factory near Tamarack. This week, Tesla said it had no idea who Hutcheson was.

"Tesla has not taken part in discussions about relocating our manufacturing facility to Idaho," said spokeswoman Khobi Brooklyn.

Hutcheson also said he's a co-founder of BrightScope, a company that tracks 401(k) performance. On Friday, BrightScope Chief Executive Officer Mike Alfred said Hutcheson was only an early adviser. "Matt was never a founder of BrightScope," Alfred said.

And billionaire Marc Lasry's Avenue Capital Group in New York disputes Hutcheson's email indicating the hedge fund had pledged $50 million toward Tamarack. The hedge fund said it was shown the resort, but rejected any investment. "It absolutely misrepresents our level of involvement, since we have none," Avenue Capital said.

Hutcheson said he couldn't go into his discussions with Tesla.

"My contact at Tesla has not given me permission to share our email exchanges," he told the AP in an email Wednesday.

Hutcheson disagreed with Alfred's assessment of his BrightScope role, insisting he purchased "founders shares" in the company, making him a founder.

And he provided documents detailing correspondence in July between Avenue Capital and his company over Tamarack, though they don't indicate Avenue Capital ever committed $50 million to help buy the resort.

Hutcheson emerged suddenly in Idaho last year with his bid for Tamarack.

Its French-born owner, Jean-Pierre Boespflug, who is now on the run from banks and has disappeared, was trying to unload the property after defaulting on a $250 million loan from lenders, including Credit Suisse Group in 2008.

Hutcheson relished the role of rescuer — not just for the resort, but the region where it was located. "I'm on a humanitarian mission for the people of Valley County," Hutcheson said.

So far, however, Hutcheson hasn't assembled financing to complete his first foray into speculative vacation real estate.

This January, he backed out of a deal to buy Tamarack's golf course, leaving its majority owner, Randy Hopkins, at the title company with sale documents — but no cash.

"It simply didn't happen," Hopkins said, adding Hutcheson never told him why.

Hutcheson did acquire a $3.5 million promissory note on the golf course.

Now, even that's in question.

A new lawsuit, filed in Virginia's Rappahannock County Circuit Court, alleges Hutcheson defaulted on a $425,000 hard-money loan this year and now won't relinquish the golf course note that he'd pledged as collateral.

Hutcheson declined to tell the AP where he got the cash to buy the golf course note.

In August, Rolf Trautmann and Dennis Maher, two Washington state actuaries, complained to the Department of Labor about Hutcheson's handling of $1.9 million in G Fiduciary, a retirement plan where Hutcheson had been trustee until recently.

Trautmann and Maher say Hutcheson wanted them to credit the money to a new plan without actually transferring it — or telling them where the cash was.

"We refused," Trautmann said. "We don't know if he has done anything wrong, but it doesn't smell right."

Hutcheson, 41, also won't detail the whereabouts of $275,000 from a North Carolina dentist's office 401(k) plan, saying only a "liquidity event" froze the funds. And Hawaii-based investment manager Cris Borden said he's pressed Hutcheson for months about $24,000 belonging to employees of a Honolulu restaurant and its owner, Jesus Puerto, to no avail.

"Where is Jesus' money?" Borden wrote Hutcheson in a Sept. 20 email.

His new lawyer said everything will be cleared up.

"The money is secure, the money is bonded and the money is insured," said Hutcheson's attorney Dennis Charney. "We will demonstrate to the appropriate forum at the appropriate time that Mr. Hutcheson's dealings are above-board and perfectly legitimate."

The Department of Labor declined comment.

Amid these concerns, however, Hutcheson's one-time supporters are distancing themselves.

Ary Rosenbaum, a New York lawyer who has taken over as fiduciary at the $7 million, multi-employer National Retirement Security Plan that Hutcheson founded, said Hutcheson relinquished all his duties there on Oct. 4.

"Believe me, I've seen quite a lot of messes," Rosenbaum said. "This one is odd."

Trial Set in Snake River Drowning of Child

BOISE (AP) • A western Idaho man faces a January trial on a charge of felony involuntary manslaughter after a 2-year-old girl who was a passenger on his boat drowned in the Snake River.

The Idaho Statesman reports 22-year-old Andrew Pevler pleaded not guilty this week. Washington County Prosecutor Delton Walker says the trial was set for late January.

Court records say Pevler took a group fishing late on June 3. Investigators say he had someone on the boat drop anchor in a swift section of the river and the current pulled the bow into the water, causing everyone on the boat to be swept into the river.

Tea Party Leader Leads Effort to Cut Government

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • In the conservative crucible of Idaho's far north, a tea party leader aiming to slim down government has a new title: Government employee.

Pam Stout, a tea party activist interviewed by late-night TV's David Letterman last year, landed a $25,000, 19-hour-a-week post heading the Bonner County Property Rights Council.

Stout is recruiting volunteers to this new arm of local government to advise county commissioners about slashing spending, free-market alternatives to regulations, and intervening in disputes with Washington, D.C., bureaucrats. Not everybody need apply, she said.

"If you don't have a free-market perspective, you'd be uncomfortable," said Stout, whose title is paralegal assistant, though she's not a trained paralegal.

Some people in the region of deep lakes, evergreen trees and snowcapped mountains sandwiched between Washington state and Montana are responding warily to what they see as an ideologically motivated panel installed inside the courthouse, funded with taxpayer dollars and blessed by elected leaders.

They fear its work could have a chilling effect on county employees trying to uphold local, state and federal laws, particularly those protecting the environment.

"Government should be inclusionary," said Terry Harris, director of the Kootenai Environmental Alliance. "This is a layer of bureaucracy by ideologues who you would think would be opposed to bureaucracy. It's spending where you'd think they'd be opposed to spending money."

This new council is the first of its kind in Idaho, said county Commissioner Cornel Rasor, who rejected Harris' suggestion that it's a right-wing shock troop aiming to gut government from the inside while on the public's dime.

Too often, he said, government has only this message: "Shut down, regulate, close and control."

"We're not taking anything away from people who believe property should be regulated," Rasor said. "We're simply providing an alternative perspective that was never there before."

Clare Marley, the county planning director, was out of the office and couldn't be reached for comment.

Rasor, the council's founder, and the two other county commissioners are due next Tuesday to vote on formalizing how the council is run.

Its seven charter members — who include a former Republican commission candidate, GOP officials, tea party activist and Planning Commission member — are already getting started.

Their first tasks include figuring out how to jettison the historical society, extension agency and county fairgrounds from taxpayer support, Stout said.

On Oct. 6, they initiated an investigation of how the county might intervene in a dispute between a couple and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency after the agency declared their property near Priest Lake a wetland.

Council members will also vet proposed county watershed rules that could limit junkyards, landfills, feedlots and hazardous materials near Lake Pend Oreille and Priest Lake, to make sure the regulations don't meddle too much in individual freedoms.

The council is being advised by the State Policy Network, a free-market California think tank that aims "to push back against an oppressive federal government," according to its website. The Idaho Freedom Foundation, the network's Idaho branch, will teach classes on free-market theories to council volunteers, Stout said, including using a text called "Government Failure" supplied by the libertarian Cato Institute.

Pushing back against the federal government is hardly a novel concept in Bonner County, where many people have moved to live out their own fiercely held beliefs of independence.

Ruby Ridge, the remote mountain sanctuary where Randy Weaver's deadly 1992 standoff with federal agents helped inspire the militia movement, is just to the north.

And love for Washington, D.C., wasn't exactly inspired earlier this year when federal prosecutors alleged violations of the federal Endangered Species Act against a northern Idaho man who shot a grizzly bear just south of the Canadian border. The man said he was acting in defense of his children. He eventually paid a $1,000 fine.

"This kind of attitude at the federal government level has created that kind of a backlash, particularly here in northern Idaho where we're more conservative," said county Commissioner Mike Nielsen, a former law enforcement officer from Alaska who lives in a home at the end of a mile-long driveway and has three propane tanks to keep it heated.

Schweitzer Bridge Facing Removal

BY KEITH KINNAIRD
Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • The Selkirk Recreation District struck out Friday in obtaining an order thwarting the removal of Telemark Bridge on Schweitzer Mountain.

The district moved in 1st District Court earlier this month for a temporary restraining order barring a landowner from further dismantling the span, which skiers, snowboarders, hikers and cyclists use to access Schweitzer Mountain Resort's lower slopes.

District Judge Benjamin Simpson declined to grant the restraining order without a hearing.

The landowner, Grand Pines LLC, began dismantling the bridge because its design deviated from the original plan, according to court documents.

The district and Grand Pines entered into an agreement in 2008 which enabled the district to construct the bridge. Grand Pines erected barriers at either end of the bridge in September and advised the recreation district the following month that the bridge was going to be removed because of the dispute over the bridge's load capacity.

Removal of the bridge commenced in early October, court records indicate. It was not immediately clear Thursday how much of the structure remains.

Grand Pines said it had no choice but to remove the bridge because of liability concerns.

"Although the removal of the bridge creates a significant and unplanned expense for Grand Pines, we are obligated to protect our interests in this matter," board President Michael Brown said in an Oct. 5 email to the district.

The district offered to hire an engineer to rectify the bridge's shortcomings and cover the span under its liability insurance, but Grand Pines declined the offers.

The district filed suit once the bridge started to be dismantled. The district argues Grand Pines are in breach of contract because a clause in the agreement requires mediation to resolve any disputes involving the bridge.

It's not clear in the court record why the bridge was not built to the original specifications. It's also not clear if the district intends to pursue further action to keep the bridge from being dismantled.

Toby McLaughlin, the district's counsel in the dispute, did not respond to a request for comment.

Judge to Issue Decision Soon in College Guns Suit

MOSCOW (AP) • A northern Idaho judge plans to issue a written decision soon in a college student’s lawsuit challenging a policy that restricts firearms on his campus.

University of Idaho law student Aaron Tribble’s lawsuit calls the policy an illegal infringement on the U.S. Constitution’s Second Amendment right to bear arms. Second District Judge John Stegner heard oral arguments earlier this week.

Stegner said after the hearing that he would issue a written decision in the case “as quickly as I can,” the Moscow-Pullman Daily News reported.

Tribble, who is representing himself in the case, claims he should be allowed to keep guns and ammunition at his residence in a campus housing complex for students who are married and with children. Tribble argues that the university’s policy is unconstitutional and filed a civil suit in January.

In his lawsuit, he contends the policy violates his inalienable right to “enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing and protecting property; pursuing happiness and securing safety” as stated in the Idaho Constitution.

“I believe it naturally follows that a person cannot effectively defend life or property without the ability to keep and bear arms, especially in the home,” Tribble said during oral arguments in a Moscow courtroom Wednesday.

The university bans firearms on campus, but students are allowed to store and check out their guns at a police substation on the Moscow campus in northern Idaho.

Earlier this year, a state Senate committee halted legislation that would have prohibited schools from banning firearms anywhere except in undergraduate residence halls.

University general counsel Kent Nelson said that when Tribble entered into an agreement to live on campus, he agreed to waive certain rights.

“He promised the university he would not bring his weapons onto the housing premises,” Nelson said.

After filing the lawsuit earlier this year, Tribble voluntarily entered into a new housing contract to remain living in his on-campus residence for another year, said Nelson, who also emphasized that students are not required to live on campus and Tribble could have secured housing elsewhere in Moscow.

“We are not the only source of housing, and we don’t require Mr. Tribble to live on campus,” Nelson said.

Tribble is not the first student to challenge the legitimacy of the university’s rules for firearms.

Al Baker, a third-year UI law student and the Idaho director of the Students for Concealed Carry organization, has been working to overturn campus bans. He has said that he supports Tribble’s efforts to fight rules targeting on-campus family housing.

N. Idaho Man to Stand Trial in House Wrecking

SANDPOINT (AP) • A northern Idaho landlord accused of trying to tear down a house while a woman and two children were inside will stand trial on assault charges.

Paul Fagerlie Finman, 56, of Rathdrum pleaded not guilty to three counts of felony aggravated assault after prosecutors claimed he used a tractor to dismantle the rental home last October.

No one was injured during the attempted demolition, the Bonner County Daily Bee reported Friday.

Finman claims the family had been evicted and he didn’t know anyone was in the house when he started tearing it down on Oct. 8, 2010. He said the family had told him they would move from the home by Sept. 30, 2010.

A judge two weeks ago denied a motion seeking to dismiss the case, noting that an eviction order gave the family until Oct. 31, 2010, to leave.

A deputy testified during a preliminary hearing that Finman acknowledged he had heard voices from inside the home after he threw a rock through a sliding glass door and it shattered. Finman still proceeded with the demolition, authorities said.

First District Court Judge Benjamin Simpson on Sept. 30 rejected a motion seeking to dismiss the case.

“At that point, there appears to be no question that Mr. Finman knew that there were people in the house,” Simpson said in his 13-page ruling.

Simpson also agreed with a previous ruling that found there was ample evidence outside the home that people were living inside, including clothes, toys and other belongings.

Defense attorney Jeremy Featherston said there is insufficient evidence that his client meant to harm the occupants. He also contends the conduct amounted to malicious injury to property not aggravated assault, a charge punishable by up to five years in prison.

Trial is set to begin Oct. 25 and last five days.

Caldwell Murder Suspect to be Arraigned Next Week

CALDWELL (AP) • Theodore Kestner, charged in the killing of his former landlady in Caldwell, will be arraigned Oct. 21 at the Canyon County Courthouse.

Magistrate Judge Gregory Frates found sufficient evidence during the preliminary hearing Friday to hold the arraignment, which will start at 9 a.m. before District Judge Thomas Ryan.

A video tape of Kestner saying he murdered his former landlady Sept. 1 was shown at the preliminary hearing.

He was charged with first-degree murder Sept. 8 for allegedly strangling 53-year-old Jennifer Kirkpatrick, of Caldwell.

Caldwell police said Kestner, 51, rented a room from Kirkpatrick until the two had a disagreement and Kestner moved out.

The Coeur d’Alene Resort Launches Major Upgrades

COEUR D’ALENE (AP) • With 25 years under its belt as a destination travel icon, The Coeur d’Alene Resort is preparing for the next quarter-century — and beyond.

Hagadone Hospitality Co., which owns and operates The Resort, has launched part two of a three-phase construction and renovation program.

Construction crews are busy putting new roofs on The Resort, as well as restoring its iconic copper peaks.

The 4,400-square-foot deck on the second floor, formerly occupied by a swimming pool, will be transformed to an outdoor dining area for receptions, banquets and weddings, complete with a paver surface, glass railing and two fireplaces. Half of the dining deck will be covered for all-weather use.

“This is a superb facility we didn’t have before,” said Jerry Jaeger, president and co-owner of Hagadone Hospitality. “The view from there is truly breathtaking.”

Crews will install a new elevator to serve the upper deck and north annex, and will replace decorative roof pallets and accent wood beams.

Since opening in 1986, The Resort has garnered enthusiastic accolades from the world’s top travel press. Conde Nast Traveler named it the best resort in the U.S. and the finest travel experience worldwide. The AAA consistently gives The Resort a four-diamond rating, and MSNBC recently named The Spa Coeur d’Alene “the world’s most romantic spa.”

The company is planning a significant project for phase three, which is expected to begin shortly after a New Year’s Eve event celebrating the hotel’s 25-year milestone.

KINGSTON • Peg Kingery knows the feeling that comes over her when she steps out into a river and casts her line, hoping a cut-throat trout will rise to the fly.

“It’s a tremendously healing, peaceful, fulfilling activity,” the Moscow fly fisherman said earlier this week while fishing on the North Fork of the Coeur d’Alene River. “If fly-fishing can be even a tiny bit to them what it is to me, that would be awesome.”

Kingery is referring to the female breast cancer patients who will have a chance to attend a free retreat next summer a few miles upstream, at Shoshone Base Camp. Kingery plans to volunteer at the retreat, which will include lessons in fly-fishing, medical and psychological counseling, companionship and support from others.

“This is so much more than a fly-fishing retreat. I really want everyone to know that,” said Charlene Douglas, program coordinator for Casting for Recovery North Idaho, which will host the event. “The whole idea is to educate them and let them hang out with fellow survivors and get away from cancer and just enjoy life.”

Douglas’ mother died of breast cancer in 1951, two weeks after Douglas was born. When Douglas had the opportunity to form a local chapter of Casting for Recovery, she said, “It was kind of like my mom saying, ‘OK, kid, here’s your chance.’”

Casting for Recovery, a nonprofit organization, was formed in 1996 in Vermont and offers breast cancer patients in all stages of treatment or recovery a free weekend of respite to learn a new hobby, receive counseling and support, and meet other women in similar circumstances. At last count, the nonprofit had 44 programs in 34 states, Douglas said. It has helped more than 4,500 women through its retreats and also has programs in Canada, England and New Zealand.

Douglas urged women to visit the website (castingforrecovery.org/retreat-schedule) and sign up to be considered for the retreat. The 14 women who attend will be selected by lottery. The organization is also seeking volunteers – both fly fishermen and others – to help support the event. The retreat will cost about $20,000, of which $6,200 has been raised so far, Douglas said. The biggest fundraising event – a dinner and auction – will be held today at the Post Falls Red Lion Hotel.

The fundraiser is one of many events being held during National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

The North Idaho chapter of Casting for Recovery was formed by members of two fly-fishing clubs – the North Idaho Flycasters of Coeur d’Alene and the Kelly Creek Flycasters in the Lewiston-Clarkston area. The retreat will be open to breast cancer patients or survivors from the 13 counties of North Idaho and five Eastern Washington counties bordering Idaho.

The national organization sets the agenda for retreats and supplies the fly-fishing equipment. It also provides medical personnel and counselors.

“They bring their clothes and their toothbrush, and that’s all they have to bring,” said Dave Londeree, a representative from the North Idaho Flycasters. The goal is for the women “to come out and have a weekend away from husbands and children. They’re just going to have a weekend away from that with nothing to do except relax and take care of themselves.

“And hopefully,” he added, “catch a fish.”

N. Idaho County Seeks Reimbursement for Megaloads

MOSCOW (AP) • The Latah County Sheriff’s Office has joined the list of law enforcement agencies seeking money from a company that is transporting oil equipment for Exxon Mobil along a highway in northern Idaho aim protests from environmentalists.

Sheriff Wayne Rausch plans to bill hauling contractor Mammoet for about 90 hours of overtime deputies incurred while overseeing the shipments. The Moscow-Pullman

Daily News reports that the overtime equates to about $5,800.

The city of Moscow, which serves as the Latah County seat, has issued a similar request and wants the company to pay $12,800 for police services.

The Imperial Oil/ExxonMobil shipments were originally slated for U.S. Highway 12 but have been diverted through Moscow on U.S. Highway 95 while a court challenge in Montana holds up transports on the original route.

Sugar Shortage Brings Higher Prices for Idaho Beet Farmers

BY BILL ROBERTS
Idaho Statesman

Idaho sugar beet growers expect to get good prices for this year’s crop, because beet production in the Midwest has faltered after rain and freezing weather hurt much of the crop.

Idaho growers can expect prices in the $50-per-ton range, about the same as last year, but above historical averages in the $40-to-$45 range, said Vic Jaro, president and CEO of Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Nampa.

Worldwide supplies of sugar are tight following a runup of commodity prices in 2008 that did not include sugar, Jaro said. Growers followed the money, planting less sugar and more crops that brought higher prices.

Idaho beet growers suffered a bit of a setback with a late spring this year, although the summer was warm and good for beet growing.

Jaro estimates the average yield in Idaho at about 33 tons per acre this year, slightly less than the typical 34 tons.

Domestic prices may rise 10 percent to 41 cents a pound by year end, said Frank Jenkins, the president of Jenkins Sugar Group Inc., the largest U.S. raw-sugar broker.

U.S. sugar stockpiles are shrinking to the lowest in 37 years, potentially forcing the government to ease import limits. Sugar is the only major agricultural commodity produced in the United States that is subject to import quotas, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture increased the limit by 45 percent this year as futures surged 21 percent in the three months through August.

Retail prices have gained 9 percent since the start of January, twice the rate of food inflation. Retail sugar averaged 70.1 cents a pound in U.S. cities in August, the highest since at least 1980, Bureau of Labor Statistics data show.

“If you’re a candy or pop maker, you’re going to have a headache,” said Sterling Smith, an analyst at Country Hedging Inc. in St. Paul, Minn. A smaller beet harvest “is going to increase the costs of sweeteners in general,” he said.

Idaho sugar-beet farmers have produced 5.7 million tons of beets this year, up from 5.3 million last year, according to USDA. Most of the farmers are in the Snake River valley, including Canyon County.

OPINION

“I am running because I want to win, not because I’m trying to raise my profile or get a TV show. I don’t want a TV show. I want to do what I can to help get this nation back on track.”

— Republican presidential candidate Herman Cain on Thursday after speaking during a Faith and Freedom Coalition rally at Ohio Christian University.

CHEERS AND JEERS

JEERS to whoever took the yellow ribbons off the Perrine bridge.

Our guess is that it wasn’t the work of an anti-soldier ne’er-do-well, and that a misguided citizen just thought they were doing his or her job in tidying up.

Whether intentional or not, the perceived message remained. Thanks to Shari Martinez and cheerleaders from Lighthouse Christian School for putting up the ribbons to welcome home the remaining members of the 116th Cavalry Brigade as they come back to town.

CHEERS to the city of Kimberly, for forging ahead in difficult economic times. The bustling burg is taking a hard look at encouraging downtown development. When Twin Falls is beleaguered with its own sea of vacant storefronts, it could be daunting for a small community filled with such a high percentage of commuters.

But the city is moving forward in drafting lofty goals, including infrastructure work and burying unsightly power lines. Even if they can’t accomplish everything on their list, the very act of raising the issue of revitalization has gotten people thinking and dreaming big.

JEERS to the rushed tech funding process. It’s not that we’re opposed to introducing technology into the classroom — when used wisely, the tools can increase the pace of learning and engagement of students.

But, at a time when education funding is so tight, the technology money seems to be falling in to districts’ laps without a good plan at the ready.

Some districts, like Twin Falls School District, are using the money to follow a predetermined path. Others, like Kimberly, are still trying to figure out the smartest way to spend it.

As with many things in Idaho’s Students Come First plan, there are kernels of good ideas, but they all came out rushed. Schools should have had to develop an approved plan for use of the money before the state cut the checks.

We want technology to be used in our kids’ education, but with a plan. Doling out the money before a plan is in place is a recipe for a district to end up with a closet full of rarely-used gizmos.

WORST WEEK

Worst Week? Had to Be BlackBerry

WASHINGTON • Hell, the French philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre said, is other people.

Washingtonians learned that the hard way this past week when — horror of horrors — their beloved BlackBerrys stopped working.

The problem — or so our overlords at Research in Motion, BlackBerry’s parent company, told us — began in Europe (no surprise there) and spread to Africa, the Middle East, India and, finally and most importantly, Washington.

Capitol Hill, the center of the BlackBerry universe and a symbolic Alamo standing against an overwhelming iPhone army, ground to a halt. Congressional staffers, used to ignoring the humans around them and using their constant BlackBerrying as a sign of their importance in the political food chain, were left peering at their tiny black devices, hoping against hope that some message — any message! — might appear.

Research in Motion apologized for the three-day disruption, but the damage was done. The company’s stock tumbled 2.5 percent in the wake of the troubles; for the year, RIM stock has lost more than 60 percent of its value.

And perhaps most importantly, for many BlackBerry users, those of us who have long fought the good fight against the cultural coolness of all things Apple, the outage amounted to a final indignity. That, and the fact the new iPhone 4s came out on Friday, of course.

Research in Motion, for forcing us to actually talk to one another, you had the worst week in Washington. Congrats, or something.

A Little Honesty

I would like to commend you and say thank you to all of you at your McDonald’s.

On Monday morning early, I stopped at your restaurant and grabbed a quick breakfast. Later in the morning, as I saddled up for a day of cattle chasing, I noticed my wallet was gone. I was pretty sure it had to be at your store as I had not stopped anywhere else. The wallet had my license, credit cards and quite a bit of cash; I was sure it was gone forever! I had my wife hurry and cancel all the cards and figured I would be spending a day at the DMV getting a new license and that I was several hundred dollars broker than I was before breakfast.

As I came back through town that evening, I stopped and figured it would not hurt to check again. To my surprise and delight, my wallet was waiting for me at the register. One of your fine and honest employees had found it and, without hesitation, turned it in. Thank you!

I offered a reward; it was declined and a handshake was all that was accepted. What a fine young man! What a fine establishment who employs such good people. Thank you! Needless to say, I will be stopping by again — my breakfast of choice!

Law enforcement officers keep a perimeter around the scene of a double homicide Thursday near downtown Helena, Mont.

‘Don’t Do It’: 911 Call Captures Montana Shooting

The shooting happened two days after Joseph Gable filed for divorce from his wife.

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • A 911 call captured two women’s voices saying, “Don’t do it,” and, “You took my husband,” before gunshots rang out in a shooting that left a man and a woman dead in a Helena apartment.

The line went dead, and the dispatcher at the other end put out the alert to officers: “Shots fired! Shots fired!”

Seven minutes later, another 911 call came from the same address, and a woman said: “I loved you with all my heart. It’s because of that b— —. You traded me for her, Joe. I loved you.”

The quotes from court documents and a police dispatch log provided new details into the Thursday morning slayings of Joseph Andrew Gable, 48, and Sunday Cooley Bennett, 50, at Gable’s home. Gable’s estranged wife, Michelle Collier Gable, appeared in court Friday to face two counts of deliberate homicide.

The shooting happened just two days after Joseph Gable filed for divorce from his wife of 25 years and three weeks after he attempted to obtain a protection order from her after she came to Helena from her home in Maryland. District Judge Dorothy McCarter denied that request, writing in her order, “No personal danger or threat involved.”

Just after 6 a.m. Thursday, a woman called 911 from the apartment and said a man was being shot by his wife and the wife was going to shoot the caller, too, according to an affidavit by Helena police Lt. Corey Livesay.

Police declined to release the audio from the calls because of the investigation, but the affidavit said the 911 recording captured the sound of gunshots. Then the woman who called 911 could be heard saying, “Don’t shoot me, you b— —,” and, “Don’t do it.”

A second female voice said, “You took my husband,” then gunshots were heard once more.

Nobody came back on the phone and the line was disconnected, according to the log from the Helena Police Department’s dispatch center.

The log noted another call seven minutes later, after the gunfire had ended, with the unidentified woman saying, “I loved you with all my heart.”

Moments later, responding officers found a woman in the apartment’s doorway who said her husband had been shot and she needed help, Livesay wrote. The officers heard groaning and saw an injured man lying across the doorway. They dragged him away and laid him on a sidewalk because he was unable to move, according to the documents and interviews with neighbors.

The man told officers, “My wife shot me,” and, “Sunday is in the basement.”

Inside, they found a dead woman near a staircase with an apparent gunshot wound to her chest, Livesay wrote. They also found two handguns and spent ammunition.

Joseph Gable died from his gunshot wounds at a hospital about an hour after the first shots were fired, according to the dispatcher’s log. His wife was treated for an undisclosed injury and turned over to police.

Michelle Gable, handcuffed and in an orange jail jumpsuit, made a brief court appearance Friday to hear the allegations against her. The 48-year-old told Justice of the Peace Michael Swingley that she understood the charges and that she had requested a public defender.

Swingley set bail at $250,000, which is $50,000 more than prosecutors recommended. Gable’s next hearing was scheduled for Oct. 28.

Police did not release any information about Bennett, other than to say she had recently moved to Helena from Texas. Her relationship to Joseph Gable was not immediately clear.

A white vehicle with Texas plates registered to Robert and Sunday Bennett was parked in Gable’s driveway the morning of the shooting, police said.

Two phone numbers listed for Sunday Cooley Bennett in Rosenberg, Texas, were disconnected.

On Sept. 20, Joseph Gable sought a temporary protection order from his wife, saying that he and his Michelle Gable were separated but that she had shown up in Helena from her home in Clinton, Md.

He alleged that his wife was stalking him and then confronted him at his apartment while he was trying to change the locks. He said she threw a laptop computer down the stairs, tried to block him from leaving the apartment and prevented him from driving away because her rental car was parked behind his vehicle.

“She has been out of Montana on the East Coast in Maryland for over two years, came back unannounced and is trying to disrupt my life anyway she can, apparently,” he wrote in court documents.

He said his wife didn’t have any firearms that he knew of, but he accused her of intimidation and holding him against his will, along with stalking. He asked that McCarter order Michelle Gable to stay at least 1,500 feet away from his home or office. McCarter denied the request the next day.

Joseph Gabler, in his petition to dissolve his marriage, said the pair had been married in 1986 at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, and that they have no children. He wrote that he is a computer support specialist and that he worked for the Montana Department of Transportation.

He said the reason for the divorce is that “there is serious marital discord” and “no reasonable prospect of reconciliation.”

Iraq War Veteran Gets 32 Years for Brutal Nev. Attack

ELKO, Nev. (AP) • A Nevada judge has sentenced an Iraq war veteran to up to 32 years in prison for the severe beating of a 71-year-old Spring Creek man at an Elko car wash two years ago.

Elko County District Judge Michael Memeo sentenced John Fenton to the maximum on Thursday, rejecting pleas from his lawyer and family for leniency because Fenton suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder.

Fenton was convicted in May of battery causing substantial bodily harm, burglary, robbery of a person older than 60 and grand larceny of a vehicle in connection with his attack on George Swett at the Buggy Bath car wash in September 2009.

Fenton was arrested after he was found bloody in the driver’s seat of Swett’s vehicle parked on the side of Lamoille Highway. Swett sustained broken orbital sockets around his eyes, substantial bruising around his head and bleeding on his brain.

Fenton’s lawyer, Alina Kilpatrick, said his family’s testimony made it clear Fenton was not a violent person until he returned from the war in Iraq earlier in 2009. She tried to persuade the judge to sentence him to an inpatient treatment center in Los Angeles for treatment of substance abuse and psychological problems associated with PTSD.

But Memeo said Fenton had been to other treatment facilities with little success. He said he was a danger to society.

“If treatment is unsuccessful there’s still a threat,” the judge said.

Earlier, when a photo on a courtroom projection screen showed Swett in the hospital with practically his entire head bruised and swollen, Memeo said:

“I didn’t know what being beaten to a pulp meant until I saw that picture.”

Swett’s wife, Judy, said he lost one quadrant of his vision because of the beating and continues to suffer from constant ringing in his ears.

“In my opinion, John Fenton tried to kill George,” she said in a statement. “A lesser man would likely not have survived the pummeling George endured at the hands of this brutal man.”

She told the Elko Daily Free Press after the sentencing hearing: “We’re glad he’s being held accountable for what he did.”

Huntsman Campaign Shows it is Nearly $1 Million in Debt

WASHINGTON (AP) • Former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman's presidential campaign is nearly $1 million in debt, despite contributing more than $2 million of his own money to his flailing run for the Republican nomination.

Huntsman was set on Friday to report having $327,000 in cash against $890,000 in campaign debts, even though he raised more than $4.5 million from July through September. That includes his own $2.5 million contribution.

The numbers suggest that Huntsman is having difficulty raising money and explain why he shut down his national campaign headquarters in Or-

The candidates' third-quarter financial reports are due Saturday. They're offering the first broad look at the financial health of the GOP field. This will be the first official tally of donations and expenses Huntsman has had to file.

Polygamist Appealing Sex Conviction Seeks Hearing

BY JENNIFER DOBNER

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A follower of jailed polygamous sect leader Warren Jeffs is asking a Texas court to rehear an appeal of his conviction on sexual assault charges that came after a 2008 raid on a church-owned ranch.

Michael Emack contends that a second search warrant issued by police to seize church and family records during a raid on his church's Eldorado, Texas, ranch was invalid. In court papers filed Tuesday with the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin, attorneys for Michael Emack said the court failed to consider that the information used to justify the warrant was wrongly based on the misrepresentations of state family services workers who interrogated dozens of ranch children. The attorneys also said it should be considered "fruit of the poisonous tree."

Authorities used the records from the Yearning for Zion ranch to bring charges against 12 Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints men, including the faith's president and prophet, Jeffs. Emack, 60, was the first to be prosecuted.

An initial warrant allowed authorities to enter the 1,691-acre ranch. The second sought a broader search of all buildings, temples, temple annexes, places of worship, vaults, safes, lockboxes, locked drawers, medical facilities, structures, places and vehicles.

In August a three-judge appeals court panel upheld the validity of both warrants as part of Emack's initial appeal of his conviction.

But Emack's new attorneys contend that in the case of the second warrant, the court "went awry when it failed to recognize that the misrepresentations made by (state) officials allowed them to illegally enter the ranch," and that the information gathered from sect children should be suppressed.

A comment from the Texas Attorney General's Office was not immediately available on Friday.

Emack pleaded no contest last year to charges of sexually assaulting a 16-year-old girl. He's now serving a seven-year term in a Texas prison. Among six others convicted so far is Jeffs, 55, who was convicted in August of sexually assaulting two underage sect girls, whom he took as spiritual wives. He's serving a life sentence and won't be eligible for parole until he is 100.

Libyan Capital Sees First Big Firefight in Months

The Libyan capital saw its first major gunbattle since Moammar Gadhafi fled Tripoli more than two months ago, as his supporters traded fire with revolutionary forces Friday after a crowd raised the ousted regime's green flag. Fearing more attacks, revolutionary forces set up checkpoints manned by young, armed men across the metropolis of some 2 million people, snarling traffic. They also rounded up several suspected African mercenaries, pulling them from cars and houses. The violence in Tripoli and fierce resistance on two other fronts set back the new rulers' stated goals of declaring total victory and establishing democracy as Gadhafi, the ruler for nearly 42 years, remains on the run.

U.S. Court Temporarily Blocks Alabama From Checking Immigration Status of Students

A federal appeals court on Friday blocked a key part of Alabama's law that requires schools to check the immigration status of students, temporarily weakening what was considered the toughest immigration law in the nation. The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also blocked a part of the law that allows authorities to charge immigrants who do not carry documents proving their legal status. The three-judge panel let stand a provision that allows police to detain immigrants that are suspected of being in the country illegally. The ruling was only temporary. A final decision on the law won't likely be made for months.

Obama, Lee Pitch Trade Deal in Michigan

BY JIM KUHNHENN

Associated Press

ORION TOWNSHIP, Mich. • President Barack Obama cast himself as a savior of the U.S. auto industry Friday, standing in a once-shuttered Michigan assembly plant with the president of South Korea to boast of a new trade deal and the auto bailout he pushed through Congress. “The investment paid off,” Obama declared.

At his side, South Korea's President Lee Myung-bak donned a Detroit Tigers cap to assure U.S. auto workers that the new U.S.-South Korea trade pact wouldn't steal away American jobs. “This is the pledge that I give you,” said Lee, acknowledging the suspicion with which U.S. labor unions view trade agreements.

In a rare political spectacle of a visiting head of state on a field trip outside Washington with the U.S. president, both sounding boosterish about American industry, Lee said the trade pact “will create more jobs for you and your family. And it is going to protect your jobs.”

The trip took Obama to a state that is key to his re-election hopes and where unemployment is the third highest in the country. Obama has been paying special attention to Michigan; his most recent visit was to deliver a Labor Day speech in Detroit.

But in singling out the auto industry for special attention, Obama and his advisers believe he has a winning issue that stretches beyond Michigan and into other Midwestern states where auto makers have a sizable footprint. At the same time, Obama and his advisers say the trade deal and the bailout were hard-fought victories for the president that portray him as a tough leader.

Obama credited the $80 billion bailout he pushed through Congress two years ago with reviving the once-shuttered plant and keeping General Motors and Chrysler from financial ruin.

“There were a lot of politicians who said it wasn't worth the time and wasn't worth the money. In fact, there are some politicians who still say that,” Obama said in an apparent shot at one of the leading challengers for his job, Republican Mitt Romney. “Well, they should come tell that to the workers here.”

General Motors Co.'s Orion assembly plant, about 30 miles north of Detroit, had been shuttered before the federal government stepped in.

“One of the first decisions that I made as president was to save the U.S. auto industry from collapse,” Obama said.

“An American auto industry that's more profitable and competitive than it's been in years made it worth it.”

The plant makes subcompact Chevrolet Sonics with Korean parts, and in Lee, who once headed Hyundai in South Korea, Obama brought a foreign guest familiar with the industry and head of a country whose exports have battered the U.S. car industry. In 2010, U.S. automakers exported fewer than 14,000 cars to South Korea, while South Korea exported 515,000 cars to the U.S., according to congressional staff.

Obama and Lee said the long-delayed new trade pact would help turn that around. The auto provisions hung up the deal's completion, until negotiators overcame U.S. auto industry complaints that previous efforts at a deal failed to do enough to lift South Korea's barriers to U.S.-made cars.

Top Senators on Defense Committee Open to Changes in Military Health Benefits

BY DONNA CASSATA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The top lawmakers on the Senate's defense panel on Friday recommended that a special committee searching for ways to slash the deficit consider some of President Barack Obama's proposed changes to health and retirement benefits for the military.

In separate letters to the bipartisan panel, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., signaled they were open to cost-saving steps in military benefits, recommendations that have already attracted fierce opposition from powerful groups of retired officers and veterans resistant to change.

The Pentagon's health care costs have skyrocketed from $19 billion in 2001 to $53 billion, but lawmakers and various groups argue that members of the military and their families sacrifice far more than the average American, with a career that includes long and dangerous deployments overseas that overshadow civilian work. Health and retirement benefits help attract service members to the all-volunteer force.

Levin and McCain said they would support establishing an annual enrollment fee for TRICARE for Life, the health care program that has no fee for participation. Obama had proposed an initial annual fee of $200.

“This proposal would be the first such change since Congress established this program in 2001, a period during which national health care costs have risen significantly,” McCain wrote.

Levin said future increases in fees should be tied to the same index used to determine hikes in the TRICARE Prime program, which has the lowest out-of-pocket expenses.

“Whichever benchmark is ultimately agreed upon, annual fee increases for retirees over the age of 65 should be the same as annual fees for working age-retirees,” Levin wrote.

McCain also urged the so-called supercommittee to consider restricting working-age military retirees and their dependents from enrolling in TRICARE Prime, which has the lowest out-of-pocket expenses. The retirees could still enroll in other TRICARE programs. McCain pointed out that the Congressional Budget Office has estimated that such a move would save $111 billion over 10 years.

Active-duty personnel still would be enrolled in the program automatically.

McCain, who was Obama's rival for the presidency in 2008, also said he supported Obama's proposal for a commission to review military retirement benefits that should consider changes to the military compensation system. He said he agreed with Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, who said those currently serving in the military should be “grandfathered” in, so expected benefits aren't reduced.

Levin also backed creation of a commission, but suggested that it look at all elements of military compensation, including basic pay, allowances such as housing, incentive pay and the tax structure for military pay. He said

Israel Moves Ahead on Housing Project on Disputed Land

BY EDMUND SANDERS

Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM • Israel is moving forward with another large housing project on territory it seized during the 1967 Mideast war, unveiling plans to build 2,610 units in what critics say would be the first entirely new development on disputed Jerusalem land in 14 years.

Plans for the project, to be called Givat Hamatos, would expand the footprint of Jewish housing development into new areas, nearly cutting Arab neighborhoods of East Jerusalem off from West Bank communities. If built, the project would make it harder to create a Palestinian state with contiguous borders and a capital in East Jerusalem, opponents say.

“This one is really bad,” said Hagit Ofra of Peace Now, the Israeli anti-settlement group. “This would block the potential of a two-state solution.”

Peace Now said Givat Hamatos would be the first new Israeli development in the Jerusalem area since the creation Har Homa in 1997, which was approved by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu during his first term in office.

The project would isolate the Palestinian communities of Beit Safafa and Shurafat, which are considered to be part of East Jerusalem, from the West Bank city of Bethlehem. It would be built on land that Israel now considers to be part of southern Jerusalem. Palestinians and the international community never recognized the annexation and view the land as occupied West Bank territory.

Government officials stressed that the project was still in the early stages of the approval process.

“This proposal has been around for years and there has been no decision taken yet, either at the municipal level or the national level,” said Israeli government spokesman Mark Reggev.

Plans for Givat Hamatos were originally announced in 2008, but were shelved to allow for revisions. On Oct. 11, Jerusalem authorities quietly resubmitted the plans, starting the clock on a 60-day public comment period.

If approved, groundbreaking would not be expected to take place for two years. Israel has said it needs to build new homes to meet growing demand around Jerusalem.

PERRY SAYS CREATING JOBS AS EASY AS BOOTING OBAMA

BY PHILIP ELLIOTT
Associated Press

WEST MIFFLIN, Pa. • Texas Gov. Rick Perry on Friday said unleashing America's energy resources was the key to curing the economy, promising some 1.2 million new jobs and far scaled-back federal regulations if he is elected president.

The White House contender signaled Congress would have little role in the broad changes he proposed, which include expanding energy production on federal lands such as Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, although he pledged to continue the ban on drilling in Florida's Everglades. Perry said he would overhaul the nation's energy policy through executive orders and, in the process, reduce America's reliance on foreign energy sources.

"We must get America working again and a big part of the solution is right under our feet and right off our coasts," the Texas governor said in a steel mill near Pittsburgh. "Creating jobs in America is as simple as changing presidents and that is the choice facing America."

Perry's speech on a "pro-American, pro-jobs energy policy" was as much a reflection of his governing style as his views on protecting the nation's shores and skies.

Perry has spent years in a bitter tit-for-tat with the Environmental Protection Agency, which he accuses of imposing regulations that are expensive and inefficient, forcing energy companies — from drillers to refineries — to cut jobs in order to comply with the laws.

Perry's speech did not mention that it can be years between when drilling begins for new energy sources and a significant number of jobs can be created.

"When it comes to energy, the president would kill domestic jobs through aggressive regulations while I would unleash 1.2 million American jobs through safe-and-aggressive energy exploration at home," Perry said. "President Obama would keep us more dependent on hostile sources of foreign energy, while my plan would make us more secure by tapping America's true energy potential."

The Obama campaign issued a statement suggesting Perry's plan was old-fashioned.

"Governor Perry's energy policy isn't the way to win the future, it's straight out of the past — doubling down on finite resources with no plan to promote innovation or to transition the nation to a clean energy economy."

Republican rival Michelle Bachmann said the only difference between her energy plan and Perry's was that hers could be implemented "without abusing executive power."

Perry pledged to change the public's view of the nation's abundance of coal.

"America is the Saudi Arabia of coal," he said. "The American economy shouldn't be beaten into the ground when ... lower energy costs lie right under our soil," he said.

With a nod to a capital locked in partisan fights, Perry promised Congress would play only a small part in his plan.

"It can be implemented quicker and free of Washington gridlock because most of it does not require congressional action," Perry said. "Through a series of executive orders and other executive actions we will begin the process of creating jobs soon after the inauguration of a new president."

And, he promised, it would come quickly: within the first hundred days of his administration.

"We're standing on top of the next American economic boom. It's the energy that's under this country."

Defense Attorney: Calif. Salon Shooting Suspect Needs Anti-psychotic Meds

The attorney for the suspect in the Seal Beach, Calif., hair salon massacre has told a judge his client needs anti-psychotic medications and is not getting them in jail.

Defendant Scott Dekraai made his first appearance in Orange County Superior Court on Friday but his arraignment on eight counts of murder and one count of attempted murder was continued to Nov. 29.

Relatives of victims shouted at him before and after the proceeding. One person called him a coward and another screamed "I hate you."

Defense attorney Robert Curtis told the court that Dekraai needs the medications Trazadome and Topamax.

Judge Erick L. Larsh ordered a medical review to determine what medications Dekraai needs.

Syria Risks 'Full-blown Civil War,' Says U.N. Human Rights Chief

BY PATRICK J. MCDONNELL
Los Angeles Times

BEIRUT • The United Nations' top human rights official assailed the Syrian government Friday for a campaign of "ruthless repression and killings," and called for the international community to take steps to prevent the Middle East nation from plunging into civil war.

A statement issued in Geneva by Navi Pillay, U.N. high commissioner for human rights, essentially backed claims by anti-government activists who say Syrian authorities have routinely attacked protesters without provocation. In contrast, the administration of President Bashar Assad has blamed the violence on terrorists armed from abroad seeking to overthrow the government.

Pillay's comments appeared to be the toughest to date from the United Nations, where a resolution condemning Syria's response to more than six months of protests failed to pass the Security Council earlier this month.

The Assad government faces a hardening of attitudes against it on many fronts. European countries and the United States have imposed economic sanctions. Turkey, Syria's longtime ally, has harshly criticized Assad's handling of the unrest and is also planning to impose economic penalties against its neighbor.

"Since the start of the uprising in Syria, the government has consistently used excessive force to crush peaceful protests," Pillay said. "Sniping from rooftops and indiscriminate use of force against peaceful protesters — including the use of live ammunition and the shelling of residential neighborhoods — have become routine occurrences in Syrian cities."

The result has been "a devastatingly remorseless toll of human lives," said Pillay, a South African judge, who also expressed fears that the conflict was becoming increasingly militarized.

"As more members of the military refuse to attack civilians and change sides, the crisis is already showing worrying signs of descending into armed struggle," she said.

The death toll in Syria since anti-government protests erupted in March has now topped 3,000, including at least 187 children, Pillay said, adding that more than 100 people have died in the past 10 days.

current service members should be grandfathered in "to avoid breaking faith with the force."

Veterans groups challenged Obama's proposals last month and quickly mobilized to fight any effort by the supercommittee to adopt the recommendations.

"Some in Washington want to make those who sacrifice and serve the most, sacrifice more," Joe Davis, a spokesman for the Veterans for the 2 million-member Veterans of Foreign Wars, said Friday. "It infuriates us when they talk about military benefit programs as entitlements. They're something you absolutely paid for up front through your service and sacrifice to the country."

Davis said VFW members are being urged to contact their congressmen and senators.

Levin and McCain also told the supercommittee they reject any deeper cuts in overall defense spending beyond the 10-year, $450 billion cuts already set by the administration and Congress.

"I fully support the president's decision not to propose any additional reductions in defense spending limits beyond those he has already called for," he said.

Trade

"Despite all the work that lies ahead, this is a city where a great American industry is coming back to life and the industries of tomorrow are taking root," Obama said, "and a city where people are dreaming up ways to prove all the skeptics wrong and write the next proud chapter in the Motor City's history."

GM began building the Sonic last year following an agreement with the United Autoworkers that allowed the company to pay some workers lower wages that are more competitive with those in GM's foreign plants. The Sonic's predecessor, the Chevrolet Aveo, was built in South Korea.

Obama won Michigan by a 57-41 margin in 2008 but could face difficulties in the state next year, especially if his general election opponent is Romney, whose father was Michigan governor.

In a Republican debate this week, Romney said he disagreed with the Obama administration's handling of the auto rescue. Democrats have pounced on a New York Times opinion piece written by Romney in November 2008, as GM and Chrysler were seeking federal bailouts. Romney, at the time, wrote that the companies needed to restructure themselves and said if they received a federal bailout, "you can kiss the American automotive industry goodbye."

The trip also served as an opportunity for Obama to illustrate his special relationship with the South Korean leader. Inviting Lee to the U.S. heartland was an unusual addition to the itinerary of a high-profile state visit, and once there, both leaders took off their jackets, rolled up their sleeves and, wearing nearly identical steel blue ties, posed for pictures inside a shiny red Sonic. Obama was behind the wheel and Lee in the passenger's seat.

G-20 WRANGLES OVER EUROPE'S CRISIS BILL

PARIS (AP) • Finance chiefs from the Group of 20 rich and developing nations wrangled Friday over whether the eurozone should pick up the whole bill for its escalating debt crisis, or whether the rest of the world should help out more.

The International Monetary Fund — the world's lender of last resort for cash-strapped countries — has until now funded about a third of the cost of the bailouts of Greece, Ireland and Portugal. But while some, including the United States, are arguing that Europe has more than enough money to spend its way out of the crisis, others are pushing for more support as the currency union's debt troubles risk dragging the world economy back into recession.

In recent days, markets have been buoyed by hopes that the 17 countries that use the euro will sort out key aspects of a more aggressive solution to their debt crisis in time for an EU summit Oct. 23 and a Group of 20 meeting in early November.

Any such deal is going to be extremely costly. As well as shoring up Europe's weaker banks, the eurozone has to come up with a strategy to stop large economies like Italy and Spain from joining the bailout club.

To do that, the region's bailout fund, the $608 billion European Financial Stability Facility, is expected to soon start buying their bonds on the open market — the hope is that will support their prices and keep a lid on their borrowing costs to allow them to carry on funding themselves in the markets.

But most economists, and a growing number of European officials, believe that the EFSF is way too small to stabilize both countries and recapitalize banks in other cash-strapped countries.

While the eurozone is working on ways to maximize the impact of its limited resources, there is a growing drive to get the IMF to stump up more cash. However, any attempt to get the IMF to play a more hands-on approach, by possibly joining the EFSF in bond market interventions, is likely to meet with some resistance as well as require changes to the IMF's legal framework.

German finance minister Wolfgang Schaeuble said an increase in the IMF's resources was not necessary.

"The IMF has enough to fulfill its tasks," he told journalists as he arrived at the meeting. He said help and solidarity from the rest of the world was welcome, but stressed that "the Europeans have to take care of the biggest part of the task."

Schaeuble said he expected EU leaders to take the necessary decisions to tackle the crisis at their summit next week.

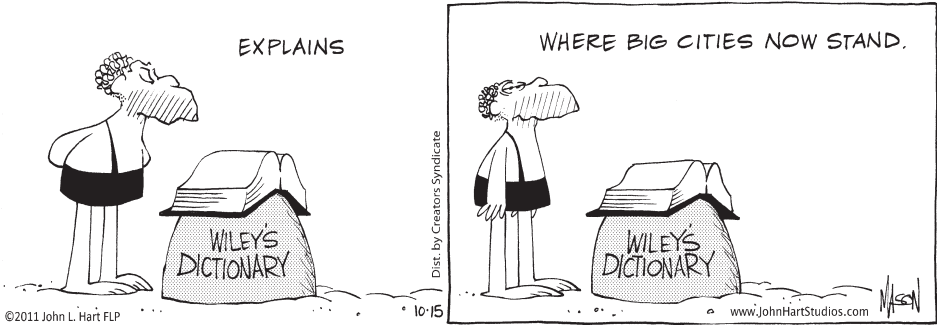

"We are on the way to take clear measures to contain the danger of contagion."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner indicated Friday that he was in favor of maintaining IMF support, but stressed that Europe had enough money to resolve its troubles on its own. He also opposed beefing up the IMF's resources, as might be required if the fund was to take on a more active role.

Low-lying Thai Capital Braces For Weekend Flooding

BY CHRIS BLAKE AND TODD PITMAN

Associated Press

BANGKOK • Workers and volunteers piled sandbags outside buildings in central Bangkok and erected barriers in its subway to ward off possible weekend flooding as high water that devastated parts of central Thailand flowed toward the low-lying metropolis.

While the government sought to reassure Bangkok's 9 million people that the capital would be spared, it also sent sometimes confusing messages that raised anxieties and sent residents on shopping sprees to stockpile food, medicine and other essentials.

The worst floods in a half-century have submerged entire towns across Thailand's central plains, devastating rice crops and halting hundreds of factories. Some 8.2 million people in 61 of Thailand's 77 provinces have been affected by the flooding, which has killed 283 people since July.

Authorities have been warning that water rushing from the north could combine with rain and high tides to flood the capital. Some have said the flow would be so strong that authorities would be left with little choice but to watch the city drown.

The government said much of Bangkok lies behind a sturdy system of flood walls, dams and dikes that have been reinforced recently.

"I insist that the floods will only affect outer Bangkok and will not be widespread in other areas," Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra said Friday.

Yingluck visited a key part of Bangkok's defenses just north of the city in Rangsit. There, military personnel and hundreds of volunteers stacked thousands of white sandbags along a canal gushing with runoff from the central plains to the north.

Volunteer Troy Pannavaj said authorities were trying to pump as much water as possible into the Chao Phraya River — which snakes through the capital and into the sea — before high tides or heavy rains over the weekend slow the outflow. "If these barriers break," Pannavaj said, "this

Wall Street Protesters Thwart Eviction Attempt

BY MEGHAN BARR AND KAREN MATTHEWS

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Anti-Wall Street protesters exulted Friday after beating back a plan to clear them from the park they have occupied for the past month, saying the victory will embolden the movement across the U.S. and beyond.

"We are going to piggy-back off the success of today, and it's going to be bigger than we ever imagined," said protester Daniel Zetah.

The showdown in New York came as tensions were rising in several U.S. cities over the spreading protests, with numerous arrests and scattered clashes between demonstrators and police.

The owners of Zuccotti Park in lower Manhattan had announced plans to temporarily evict the hundreds of protesters at 7 a.m. Friday so that the grounds could be power-washed. But the protesters feared it was a pretext to break up the demonstration, and they vowed to stand their ground, raising the prospect of clashes with police.

Just minutes before the appointed hour, the word came down that the park's owners, Brookfield Office Properties, had postponed the cleanup. A boisterous cheer went up among the demonstrators, whose numbers had swelled to about 2,000 before daybreak in response to a call for help in fending off the police.

In a statement, Brookfield said it decided to delay the cleaning "for a short period of time" at the request of "a number of local political leaders." It gave no details.

Brookfield said it would negotiate with protesters about how the park should be used. But it was unclear when those discussions would occur.

Over the past month, the protest against corporate greed and economic inequality has spread to cities across the U.S. and around the world. Several demonstrations are planned this weekend in the U.S., Canada and Europe, as well as in Asia and Africa.

In Denver, police in riot gear herded hundreds of protesters away from the Colorado state Capitol early Friday, arresting about two dozen people and dismantling their encampment. In Trenton, N.J., protesters were ordered to remove tents near a war memorial.

Organizers in Des Moines, Iowa, warned of a possible

"big conflict" Friday night after the state denied their permit to continue overnight protests at the Capitol. Demonstrators in San Diego formed a human chain around a tent in a downtown plaza and ignored police orders to take it down.

In New York City, police arrested 15 people, including protesters who obstructed traffic by standing or sitting in the street, and others who turned over trash baskets and hurled bottles. A deputy inspector was sprayed in the face with an unknown liquid.

In one case, an observer with the National Lawyers Guild who was marching with the group refused to move off the street for police, and his foot was run over by an officer's scooter. He fell to the ground screaming and writhing and kicked over the scooter before police flipped him over and arrested him.

Though the park is privately owned, it is required to be open to the public 24 hours per day.

Brookfield, a publicly traded real estate firm, had announced plans to power-wash the plaza section by section over 12 hours and then allow the protesters to return. But it said it would begin enforcing the park's rules against tents, tarps and sleeping bags, complaining the grounds had become unsanitary and unsafe.

The New York Police Department had said it would make arrests if Brookfield requested it and laws were broken.

As the morning deadline drew near, some protesters rushed to scrub and sweep the park and pick up trash in hopes of preventing a crackdown.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg, whose girlfriend is on Brookfield's board of directors, said his staff was under strict orders not to pressure the company one way or the other. He noted that Brookfield can still go ahead with the cleanup at some point.

"My understanding is that Brookfield got lots of calls from many elected officials threatening them and saying, ... 'We're going to make your life more difficult,'" he said on his weekly radio show.

In Philadelphia, protester Matt Monk, a freelance writer, was cheered by the news out of New York.

"That means at the very least, the powers-that-be, wherever they are, know that they have to contend with us in a less heavy-handed way," he said.

water will rush through Bangkok very fast."

Resident Somjai Tpiengtong wondered whether the sandbag wall protecting Rangsit and Bangkok would hold.

"If the water comes, I'll have to let it happen. There's no way I can block it. For me, I'll move to an upper floor," she said. "I feel sorry for the people in lower-lying areas."

Getting More from Each Beet

Advances have allowed Amalgamated Sugar to take more advantage of what could be a big year for area sugar beet growers.

BY CINDY SNYDER

For the Times-News

Tight worldwide sugar supplies and the prospect of a reduced U.S. beet crop are making this year's southern Idaho sugar beet harvest more valuable than ever.

Early flooding and late heat conspired to delay both planting and harvest in Minnesota and North Dakota, the nation's leading sugar beet producing states. That's helped the U.S. Department of Agriculture to estimate that U.S. sugar supplies could fall to a 37-year low, keeping national sugar prices about 10 cents per pound higher than their traditional average.

In the Magic Valley, growers hope good harvest weather will help them capitalize on the strong prices. With the exception of last week's rain, Mother Nature has been cooperating.

Leonard Kerbs, agricultural manager for Amalgamated Sugar Co.'s Twin Falls District, said nearly ideal growing conditions in August allowed the Idaho crop to bulk up. He expects growers will harvest 950,000 tons of beets this year from about 31,000 acres.

Thanks to advances in technology and equipment, Amalgamated recovers about 93 percent of the sucrose contained in beets delivered to its factories. A molecule of sucrose may emerge as sugar within 12-18 hours, or it may take a year. One reason

CINDY SNYDER • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

In order to keep Amalgamated Sugar Co.'s Twin Falls plant operating at full capacity, a truck like this one must be unloaded every six minutes. That time frame reduces to 1 1/2 minutes at Amalgamated's Paul plant, the largest beet sugar factory in the U.S.

By the Numbers

Amalgamated Sugar Twin Falls District
$48 million gross farm revenue
$40 million annual payroll
370 full-time employees
16 beet receiving stations
31,000 acres planted
32 tons of beets the average acre yields
300 pounds of sugar produced per ton of beets

Amalgamated can squeeze so much sugar from each beet is that it processes and re-processes beet juice until nothing is left.

We're talking a lot of beet juice from a lot of beets. Amalgamated's Twin Falls plant can slice 7,000 tons of beets per day, making it the smallest of the company's three Magic Valley plants. The Paul plant slices 2 1/2 times more beets each day, making it the nation's largest beet factory.

Once a beet hits the plant, it's sorted from rocks, cleaned, sliced and cut into sections that resemble waffle-cut fries that are then soaked in hot water to extract the sugar.

Beets enter the process containing about 17 percent sugar, but after processing, the slices that leave the diffuser contain about 2.5 percent sugar, said Jorge Devarona, process manager.

The sugar-rich "thin juice" is refined into semi-stable syrup that can be immediately processed into sugar or stored for processing. Once crystallized, the wet sugar goes through a drying process to remove all but 0.025 percent of its moisture before it is conditioned in a silo.

White sugar is produced on the first evaporation, while leftover juice is re-processed to form brown sugar and molasses.

"As long as we produce sugar, we are producing molasses," Devarona said. "We store the excess. When the thick juice runs out, we bring it back to process."

Since more money can be made on sugar than on molasses, Amalgamated Research Inc. developed an ionization process to pull the sugar from molasses. It's an example of the innovations that Amalgamated has pioneered.

In addition to selling table sugar to consumers and dried beet pulp as cattle feed, Amalgamated has also isolated betaine, an amino acid derived from molasses that can be used as an ingredient in livestock rations.

iPhone 4S Launch Turns into Remembrance for Jobs

BY CHIP CUTTER

Associated Press

NEW YORK • It wasn't just the latest iPhone that drew people to Apple stores Friday.

Many consumers waited in lines for hours — sometimes enduring chilly temperatures and overnight thunderstorms — to remember Steve Jobs, Apple's visionary who died last week.

The company's first iPhone release since Jobs' death turned into another tribute. Some customers even joked that the new model 4S stood "for Steve."

Tony Medina, a student from Manhattan, stood outside Apple's flagship store on New York's Fifth Avenue for nine hours, waiting through rain. He had originally planned to order the phone online but decided to join a crowd of about 200 people to honor Jobs.

"For loyalty, I felt I had to do the line," he said. "I had to say thank you."

The new phone, which went on sale Friday in seven countries, is faster than the previous model and comes with better software and an improved camera. Yet the unveiling comes at a time when Apple is finding it difficult to maintain the excitement of previous iPhone introductions.

For starters, the phone is more widely available than in the past. In addition to Apple stores, it's also sold by three wireless carriers: AT&T Inc., Sprint Nextel Corp. and Verizon Wireless. Some Best Buy, Target and Walmart stores also carry the phones, as do authorized resellers.

Buyers were also able to preorder the phone on Apple's website and have it shipped to their homes or offices.

Many diehard Apple fans and investors were disappointed that Apple did not launch a more radically redesigned new model — an iPhone 5. It's been more than a year since Apple's previous model was released.

That also may have contributed to smaller gatherings at some Apple locations.

"People are not as excited about this version as they might have been" if an iPhone 5 came out," said Charles Prosser, a retired teacher and computer technician from Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Even so, hundreds of buyers camped out in front of stores for hours to be among the first to get an iPhone 4S. Steve Wozniak, who created Apple with Jobs in a Sili-con Valley garage in 1976, was first in line at a store in Los Gatos, Calif., having arrived on his Segway the afternoon before.

Wozniak, who typically waits in line for new Apple products, said he barely slept Thursday night as he was busy chatting with Apple fans, taking photos and giving autographs. Wozniak pre-ordered two new iPhones. He bought two more Friday.

"I just want to be part of an important event, so I feel it more deeply," he said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“The golden rule is to help those we love to escape from us; and never try to begin to help people, or influence them till they ask, but wait for them.”

— Friedrich von Huegel

In this deal from the IMP Pairs at the world championships in Philadelphia last year, Steve Hamaoui played three no-trump against the lead of the spade six, to the five, king and ace. Hamaoui cashed the club king and ran the club 10 to East, as West pitched a heart. East took the trick and played the heart king, ducked by Hamaoui, who played the heart jack from dummy, unblocking. East might have done better to switch to the diamond 10, but he persisted in hearts. Hamaoui took the heart 10 and cashed the ace, as West discarded a diamond.

Now Hamaoui played a low diamond from hand, winning the queen in dummy. He played off the club ace, and West was caught. Discarding the diamond jack would have let declarer make an overtrick. But if West discarded a spade, Hamaoui could still cash the spade and play a diamond. West would win the two diamond tricks but would still be endplayed in the spade suit, giving Hamaoui enough spade winners for his contract.

Curiously, the key defensive maneuver was for West to play the diamond jack on the first lead of the suit. If he had done so, declarer would not have been able to come up with the endplay he found. Declarer could not overtake the spade jack without conceding the setting tricks, and if he cashed the spade jack and led a diamond, East’s 10-9 would assure that he would gain the lead sooner or later to cash the setting tricks.

ANSWER: Your partner’s one-spade bid should be constructive but nonforcing in competition. (Had West passed over one heart, the call is most commonly played as forcing by an unpassed hand.) Your lack of spade fit and your decent club guard suggest a bid of one no-trump is the most practical action now.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

IF OCTOBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Taking care of the things and people you care about involves shouldering your fair share of responsibility. Take pride in your managerial skills as you juggle more than one important issue this month. During the next six months, conscientious attention to duty will build character and give you the edge when you strive to attain your ambitions. The experience you gather will eventually lead to confidence and solid accomplishment. A new circle of friends might light up your life in April. Wait until next May to put in motion crucial plans that are close to your heart.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The recent dip in enthusiasm disappears. Tiresome humdrum routine gives way as exciting social matters start popping. Physical exercise will clear out the cobwebs and give you a sense of accomplishment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't mistake the attraction of friendship for true love, as the weekend unfolds. You should watch your p's and q's on the social scene, as others may mistake your friendliness for something more.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good times with a significant other may require a few extra dollars to visit exotic locations. Accept your challenges with good grace and try to keep up with enthusiastic partners who set a fast pace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take care of loose ends. An escape to cloud nine with an amorous partner could be delayed, even though romantic stars are beginning to twinkle. Extra duties and responsibilities could tie up your time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Build up, don't tear down. Rather than being critical and finding fault, set a good example for a special someone to follow. A recent period of somewhat low self-esteem will quickly dissipate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The best things in life are free. Use imagination to find activities that satisfy a need for thrift. You may not want to part with the coins jingling in your pockets or fear they will slip through your fingers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is time for a change of pace. Once you are out of the woods, it is easy to shine light on troublesome matters. As you reflect on the past week, you might realize that you have learned a valuable lesson.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are in seventh heaven when your toy box is full of newfangled gadgets and computer playthings. Make progress by riding high on an advanced learning curve. Stifle the spending urge.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Learning to share your good fortune with others might be the most difficult lesson to learn this weekend. Your attractive powers are at a high point — but you could attract the wrong person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You won't always get what you want, but you can get what you need. Your peacemaking attempts may feel a bit awkward at first, but the ice will melt when you light a fire under someone's desires.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use your friends as sounding boards. You may have a chance to ponder recent events and put them into perspective. Constructive conversations with your peers can bring closure to lingering resentments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try it on for size. It is a good day to display your street smarts in public or show off your romantic prowess in private. You might be enthused about a new romance or about making fresh social connections.

On Oct. 15, 1951, the classic situation comedy ``I Love Lucy'' premiered on CBS with the episode ``The Girls Want to Go to the Nightclub.''

TODAY IN HISTORY

^ On this date:
In 1858, the seventh and final debate between senatorial candidates Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas took place in Alton, Ill.

In 1860, 11-year-old Grace Bedell of Westfield, N.Y., wrote a letter to presidential candidate Abraham Lincoln, suggesting he could improve his appearance by growing a beard.

In 1917, Dutch dancer Mata Hari, convicted of spying for the Germans, was executed by a French firing squad outside Paris.

In 1928, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin landed in Lakehurst, N.J., completing its first commercial flight across the Atlantic.

In 1945, the former premier of Vichy France, Pierre Laval, was executed for treason.

In 1946, Nazi war criminal Hermann Goering fatally poisoned himself hours before he was to have been executed.

In 1964, it was announced that Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev had been removed from office.

In 1969, peace demonstrators staged activities across the country as part of a ``moratorium'' against the Vietnam War.

In 1976, in the first debate of its kind between vice-presidential nominees, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and Republican Bob Dole faced off in Houston.

In 1991, despite sexual harassment allegations by Anita Hill, the Senate narrowly confirmed the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, 52-48.

Ten years ago: Officials announced that a letter sent to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle had tested positive for anthrax, and that the infant son of an ABC News producer in New York had developed skin anthrax. Bethlehem Steel Corp. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Five years ago: A strong earthquake struck the Big Island of Hawaii, damaging buildings and roads. Three members of Duke University's lacrosse team appeared on CBS' ``60 Minutes'' to deny raping a woman who'd been hired to perform as a stripper (Collin Finnerty, Reade Seligmann and David Evans were later exonerated). Pope Benedict XVI named four new saints of the Catholic Church.

One year ago: The Obama administration reported that the federal deficit had hit a near-record $1.3 trillion for the just-completed budget year. Workers hugged, cheered and set off fireworks as a huge drill broke through a last stretch of rock deep in the Swiss Alps for construction of the 35.4-mile Gotthard Base Tunnel.

DEAR ABBY: Our dearest friends' marriage fell apart four years ago. No one had a clue they were having problems, and we were devastated. We were like family and did everything together. Our oldest children grew up as "siblings" and still remain the closest of friends. "Dorothy" remains deeply in love with "Dan."

Dan has just announced he's being remarried. We have remained close to Dorothy (we're still neighbors), but we are also friendly with Dan. Dorothy doesn't know we're on good terms with her ex, nor is she aware that he has invited us to his wedding.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

Dan was never mean to her; he gave her everything in the divorce and continues to be a devoted father to their children. An added note: His children appear to like the new woman in their father's life.

Dorothy just heard about the wedding and doesn't think any of her friends should go. We love them both and feel torn. Dorothy is in counseling and I'm hoping it will help her move on.

I don't want to hurt my friend, but I also want to be supportive of Dan. Do you think we should attend?

— CONFLICTED IN NEW YORK

DEAR CONFLICTED: When Dorothy's children attend their father's wedding, it will be only a short time before Dorothy finds out who was there. While your reason for wanting to attend is perfectly logical, Dorothy isn't thinking rationally and will probably feel abandoned all over again.

If you're willing to put up with the drama that's sure to follow, attend the wedding — and here's how the rest of the scenario will play out: You will continue to be friendly with Dan and his new wife and socialize with them — and Dorothy will cut herself off and feel even more isolated, alone and angry. You have described someone who NEEDS the counseling she's receiving, and I sincerely hope it works for her.

DEAR ABBY: Every weekend when I do laundry — a chore I HATE — my husband has left paper, coins, cigarette lighters, etc. in the pockets of his clothing. Sometimes the items end up getting destroyed in the washing machine. Then he gets upset with me because more than once important papers have been ruined.

He says that since I'm doing the laundry I should check the pockets and remove all items before washing the clothes. I say that because I take the time to do the laundry, he should remove the items himself. Abby, who is right?

— POCKETS FULL OF TROUBLE

DEAR POCKETS: You're both right. He should check his pockets before putting his clothes into the hamper, and you should make sure there's nothing in them before putting them into the machine. And because marriage is a partnership, how about sharing the chore of doing the laundry by alternating each week (or month)?

DEAR ABBY: Could you settle a driving disagreement I'm having with my girlfriend? When you are in traffic behind someone who has stopped and is turning left, should you also put on your turn signal to let the drivers behind you know someone is turning? I say no because you are not the one who is turning. My girlfriend says yes, so people know why the traffic has stopped.

— NOT THE ONE TURNING

DEAR NOT THE ONE: Your girlfriend is well-meaning, but mistaken. You should use your turn indicator when you are making a left turn. It is not up to you — or your girlfriend — to let people know why someone up ahead has stopped, nor are you expected to.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

AP SOURCE: BIG EAST TO INVITE BOISE ST., THREE OTHER TEAMS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The Big East’s plan to save the conference involves heading West.

The embattled league’s leaders have agreed on a plan to invite Boise State, Air Force and Navy as football-only members, and Central Florida to compete in all sports, after they double the exit fee for current members to $10 million.

Houston and SMU are likely next in line as full members as the Big East tries to get to 12 schools.

An official in the Big East, speaking on condition of anonymity because the conference had not authorized anyone to speak publicly about its plans, told The Associated Press invitations could go out as soon as next week.

The official also said Commissioner John Marinatto was in Cincinnati on Friday meeting with UCF’s president and athletic director.

Conferences do not publicly invite new members unless they are confident those invitations will be accepted. But until the invites go out, nothing is a done deal.

After losing a shoe, Twin Falls’ Anthony Archuleta rushes for a touchdown on a kick return as the Bruins take on Canyon Ridge in the Service Bowl Friday night at Twin Falls High School in Twin Falls. Go to Magicvalley.com/gallery to see more photos from Friday night’s game.

Bruins’ Victory Is Twice As Sweet

Twin Falls continues dominance over Canyon Ridge, clinches playoff spot with 18-6 win.

This was the Twin Falls football team some thought would finally lose to Canyon Ridge. It was the one, it so happened, that let Canyon Ridge take a lead for the first time in the three-game rivalry series.

That lead lasted all of 12 seconds and never resurfaced.

Anthony Archuleta took the ensuing kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown to put the Bruins up a point, and the defense then saw the game out for an 18-6 victory at Bruin Stadium on Friday night, a result that both retained the traveling trophy and clinched the home team a berth in the playoffs.

“We knew that was a huge play, because when you flip the momentum like that they’ve got to respond,” said Archuleta, who later added a 4-yard touchdown run. “We just keep pounding, and eventually we knew they were go-

Archuleta’s touchdown was just the first in a run of key moments for the Bruins. In the third quarter, after Archuleta scored his second touchdown, a bad snap on the extra point led to another pivotal moment when Thomas Corr scrambled around and hit Jason Byce in the end zone for a two-point conversion.

That made it a nine-point game, meaning Canyon Ridge’s methodical double-wing offense needed to score twice to retake the lead.

SECOND-HALF SURGE LIFTS KIMBERLY OVER BUHL

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • This was a night Kimberly’s 12 seniors will remember for a long time.

The Bulldogs blew open the second half, scored four unanswered touchdowns and demolished rival Buhl 44-22 on senior night Friday.

“It’s a great memory we’re going to have the rest of our lives. When we’re 40 years old and can’t walk we’ll be able to remember this,” said Kimberly senior lineman Brock Hulsey.

The win puts Kimberly (4-3, 1-0) in position for the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference title, which it can clinch along with a Class 3A playoff berth next week at Filer in the regular-season finale.

Quarterback Seth Champlin rushed for 131 yards and a touchdown, completed 9 of 12 passes for 134 yards and three scores, plus added a back-breaking 82-yard punt return for a TD in the third quarter.

“These are the things you’re going to remem-

Kimberly quarterback Seth Champlin (23) stiff-arms Buhl’s Kellen Gillins during the Bulldogs’ 44-22 win Friday night in Kimberly.

ber 20 years down the road,” said Champlin, who orchestrated the Bulldog offense to 346 total yards. “We’re not the biggest team, so we try misdirection, get people moving, get our play-makers out in space.”

Champlin completed touchdown passes to three different receivers, Chris Chandler, Zack Funk and Jade Wadsworth.

Kimberly led 19-16 at halftime, but it didn’t feel that close as the Bulldogs dominated possession and controlled the line of scrimmage.

“That’s the best we’ve ever blocked this year,” Hulsey said. “We were blowing them back off the ball. It was a great night for the line.”

Added Champlin: “In the first half when they scored it was on big plays. They didn’t move it a whole lot, we just had a couple missed coverages.”

Those missed coverages resulted in a pair of Camden Gillins touchdowns passes – a 35-yarder to Micah Schneidermann and a 65-yarder to Devon Privott.

Besides those throws, Gillins struggled to connect with receivers, completing just 3 of 17.

Excluding Buhl’s irrelevant scoring drive in the game’s final minute, Kimberly’s defense held the Indians to just 17 yards and two first downs in the second half.

HGH Testing: NFL, Union Have Differing Points of View

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Two key congressmen emerged from an hour-long meeting with the NFL and players union and announced a deal to begin blood-testing players for human growth hormone. Minutes later, union officials would commit only to testing when a fair and safe system is in place – what they’ve been saying all along.

After Friday’s high-profile mix of sports and politics, HGH testing in pro football didn’t seem closer to reality.

“We’re not guaranteeing any outcomes except there was an agreement to begin testing immediately,” Rep. Darrell Issa, a Republican and chairman of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, told reporters after the meeting. “The other aspects of what you do with the tests will be resolved over the next many weeks, and we’ve agreed on a bipartisan basis to have the committee play a role if necessary” to bring the sides together again.

Maryland Rep. Elijah Cummings, the top Democrat on the committee, said he felt the two sides benefited from being called in. “Because I think they had their own disputes, and it seemed like they just could not move quite past a certain point,” he said.

He stressed that the lawmakers wanted action now: “Not get there next year – we were clear that the ball has to move down the field immediately.”

But the NFL Players Association didn’t seem inclined to move off its previous position: That it wants questions answered before moving ahead with a blood-testing program.

“We believe that we have to report back to our players, make sure that the protocol and the testing protocols are safe,” union spokesman George Atallah said, standing in the same spot as the lawmakers shortly after their news conference. “Once we feel that way, which we hope will be as soon as possible – obviously the chairman and Congressman Cummings can help us facilitate that – we’ll be in a position to start testing as soon as possible.”

Asked if the union agreed to testing this season, he responded, “We will begin implementing testing as fast as possible.”

Later, he tweeted, “The challenge for us as a league and a sport is to ensure that we have a clean game, but a fair system.”

The latest collective bargaining agreement between the league and its players includes a provision to begin testing players for HGH – contingent on the union agreeing to the testing methods. The NFLPA has asked for more scientific data to prove the most popular test is reliable.

Baltimore Ravens cornerback Domonique Foxworth, who attended the meeting, said the union has a responsibility to players to make sure the test is accurate, so “we can look them in the eye and say this is a safe and fair process.”

Cards Within Win of Pennant, Beating Brew Crew 7-1

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • The bumbling Brewers made four errors that led to three unearned runs, and the St. Louis Cardinals survived a short start by Jaime Garcia to beat Milwaukee 7-1 Friday night and take a 3-2 lead in the NL championship series.

Yadier Molina and Matt Holliday had three hits each for St. Louis, which burst to a 3-0 lead in the second when Molina doubled in a run and third baseman Jerry Hairston Jr. allowed Garcia’s grounder to go through his legs. Holliday capped the scoring with a two-run double in the eighth.

Milwaukee’s infield nearly had a cycle of errors, with second baseman Rickie Weeks and shortstop Yuniesky Betancourt also committing miscues along with reliever Marco Estrada. Weeks had committed the Brewers’ only two errors in the first four games of the series.

The Cardinals have won 14 straight games on getaway days, a run that began on Aug. 7 at Florida. The win gave players another opportunity to chant “Happy Flight! Happy Flight!”

St. Louis can wrap up the best-of-seven series and its 18th NL pennant on Sunday in Milwaukee. Edwin Jackson goes for the Cardinals against Shaun Marcum in a rematch of pitchers from Game 2, won by St. Louis 12-3 as neither starter received a decision.

The NL winner hosts the World Series opener against Detroit or Texas on Wednesday.

Stronger Running Game Key to Vandals' Success

BY JOSH WRIGHT

For the Times-News

MOSCOW • Idaho football fans have scrutinized the volatile play of quarterback Brian Reader in recent weeks, and for obvious reasons. But it's not just the Vandals' passing attack that is languishing. Running the ball has proven even less fruitful for Idaho through the first half of the season.

The Vandals, on a four-game losing skid, are second to last in the nation in rushing heading into today's WAC matchup at New Mexico State (6 p.m., ESPN3.com, 1310 AM). Part of the problem can be traced to a makeshift offensive line that has made quicker strides in pass protection than run blocking.

Still, Idaho players and coaches know a more effective ground game — the Vandals are averaging 69.8 rushing yards per game — will help solve many of the offense's lingering issues.

"I think we just need to get running the ball better right now," said right tackle Tyrone Novikoff, when asked about the offensive woes. "As the O-line every week, we're getting better and better. And the offense just needs to click."

This week might be the Vandals' best opportunity for a breakthrough from their stable of veteran tailbacks. NMSU (2-3, 0-1) has given up 200 rushing yards per game, last in the WAC.

"It doesn't matter who scores the points," said Idaho coach Robb Akey, whose club is 1-5, 0-2 in the WAC. "It matters (that) the points get scored. And right now we definitely need to generate some points and finish. There's no ifs, ands or buts about that."

Akey insisted that Reader is "absolutely" the Vandals' starting quarterback, despite the senior's 47-percent completion rate in five losses to FBS teams this season. But Akey also acknowledged that Reader is pressing.

"And he's putting pressure on himself," the fifth-year coach noted. "Right now we need to back that pressure off of him and help him back that off."

After their bye next week, the Vandals have Hawaii at home before finishing the season with three of four on the road. A victory today for UI, which would be the first since beating North Dakota on Sept. 10, will help put the team in the right frame of mind for the final stretch, Reader said.

"A win this week would do more than great things for us," he said. "It would do great things for our fans, our community and everything. We need this win."

NOTES — Idaho senior receiver Preston Davis has elected to redshirt after breaking his foot before the season. He started practicing a few weeks ago, but never saw game action. ... UI's ground offense could get a lift today with the return of Ryan Bass, who's missed three weeks with an internal injury. ... Defensive tackle Michael Cosgrove (groin) is expected back today after missing last week.

BENGALS HOPING TO REBOUND AT WEBER ST.

BY MARK LIPTAK

For the Times-News

POCATELLO • With the halfway point of the season behind them, head coach Mike Kramer and his Idaho State football team are hoping to get back on track and regain some momentum Saturday when they play at Weber State. It's a location that hasn't been friendly to the Bengals, who haven't won in Ogden since 1981 and where the Wildcats (2-3, 2-1 Big Sky) have won 24 of the last 26 meetings.

To do so they are going to have to rediscover an offense that put up 94 points in back to back wins over Western State and Northern Colorado but has only scored 38 points in the three games since then, all losses.

The Bengals (2-4, 1-3 Big Sky) are going through what Kramer said is a normal situation for a team learning a new system. "If this was year three, we would be worried," he said. "But year one? No. It's the birthing pain of developing an offensive culture. I tried to say it then (when the offense was scoring a lot of points) and I'm trying to say it now. We are going to be fine offensively but it won't necessarily be at any time this season."

Former Wood River star and junior lineman Eric Jacobson was asked his thoughts on the offensive malaise. "Every once in a while one guy will make a mistake. So we just need, as a collective group, all 11, need to be better on every play and as you've seen before we don't have trouble throwing the ball when that's the case."

That being said, Kramer is going to be looking closely at starting quarterback Kevin Yost again. Yost appears to have lost some confidence in the past few weeks. Kramer said ISU receivers have been open but Yost is not throwing the ball downfield to them. Could he make a change in quarterback if the Bengals start slowly on Saturday?

"I think you'll know by the fourth series of the game for us. If we have to make a change we will; we can't get so far behind again."

Idaho State will play the rest of the season without pre season all-American candidate Tavoy Moore. Moore was dismissed from the team by Kramer on Thursday for "conduct unbecoming a member of the program." The news was made available through a press release.

The image of the Big Sky Conference is one of footballs flying through the air but for the fourth straight week, ISU is playing a team that would rather run the football. "Weber runs the ball very well," according to Kramer. "They are a hard-minded team that likes the power game and their quarterback (Mike Hoke) has thrown 12 touchdowns passes with no interceptions this year. They'll get you worn down by running and then hit you with the pass."

Unlike years past when the Wildcats would have a main runner, this year they've been going more with a committee. Three backs are averaging at least 5.2 yards per carry, have at least 37 attempts and have gained at least 215 yards. ISU's defense has played very well the past few weeks in the losses and may have the hold things in check Saturday hoping the offense can get back in the flow again.

Broncos Anticipate First MWC Game

BY ALEX CALINSKY

For the Times-News

At the same time as the leaves turn outside, change for the Boise State football team finally arrived.

The long anticipation of entering a new conference ends Saturday as the Broncos travel to Colorado State (3-2, 1-0) for their first Mountain West game.

"I think everybody's really excited about it, especially playing against a new opponent," running back D.J. Harper said. "It's definitely going to be a challenge for us."

Harper scored two touchdowns in last week's 57-7 win at Fresno State, an old and future conference partner. With the game two weeks ago against another familiar team, Nevada, it didn't seem like this year was different than the previous years in the WAC aside from new logos on the field. Now, Boise State enters truly uncharted territory — this will be the first time the Broncos have ever played Colorado State.

"It's just cool to kind of break the monotony, go against new teams, travel to new places, so we're excited for that," linebacker Aaron Tevis said.

Boise State coach Chris Petersen shares the enjoyment of a fresh batch of teams to prepare for, and realizes that new opponents are all part of the changing landscape of college football at the moment.

"I think (new is) always a good thing. Change is good and I think that's as good as anything," Petersen said.

Despite the unfamiliar surroundings, Petersen's goal for each season remains static: winning the conference championship.

"To me, that's really the best mark of your program," Petersen said. "You can only play who's on your schedule, you can only play the league you're yards, and defensive end Nordly Capi (6-3, 249 lbs.) leads the nation with eight sacks. Capi's relentless pursuit of quarterbacks impressed Petersen and Harper noticed it as well.

"He's definitely a concern for us, we've been watching a lot of tape on him," Harper said. "I think the line's going to do a really good job and I think we'll take care of business."

One of Boise State's great strengths is executing an effective game plan that thwarts their opponent's greatest strengths, such as Georgia's speed, Nevada's pistol offense, and Fresno State's vertical passing game. Ewing-Burton can't wait to play and is completely focused on the game at hand while realizing its larger implications.

"Every game we want to make statements. We want to let the country know what we can do," Ewing-Burton said. "I feel like going in to the Mountain West with a win like that (against Colorado State), we're definitely getting to where we need to be and it will let our Mountain West opponents know that we're pretty serious."

Big East

East would invite Boise State, Air Force, Navy and UCF.

With 12 football schools, the Big East would split into two divisions and could play a championship game.

Boise State and Air Force, which is located in Colorado Springs, along with UCF's Conference USA rivals SMU and Houston, would give the Big East — a league that started as a northeastern basketball conference — four football schools West of the Mississippi River.

Temple, which plays football in the Mid-American Conference and is located in Philadelphia, also has been under consideration.

Big East officials made protecting the league's automatic bid to the Bowl Championship Series their expansion priority. That pushed Boise State, which is in its first season in the Mountain West Conference after a decade in the Western Athletic Conference, to the top of the Big East's most wanted list, along with the service academies.

The Broncos are 71-5 since 2006, finished 10th in the final BCS standings last season and at 5-0 seem on their way to a top-10 finish. Big East officials believe putting Boise State's record on the Big East's ledger when the BCS reviews which leagues should have automatic bids beyond 2013 should allow the conference to make the cut.

The Mountain West Conference does not have an automatic bid to the BCS. Nor does Conference USA.

Later Friday, those two leagues announced they would "consolidate" their football programs by 2013. Right now they are 22 teams in those leagues, 10 in the MWC and 12 in CUSA, but maybe not for long.

MWC Commissioner Craig Thompson said during a conference call Friday he has been notified by the leaders of Boise State and Air Force that they had been in contact with the Big East, but the presidents of those schools also participated in the league's unanimous vote to approve the merger with CUSA.

He said the merged conference creates stability and is a "viable option" for Boise State and Air Force, but he would not speculate on what those schools would do.

Conference USA Commissioner Britton Banowsky said the president of UCF took part in his conference's vote and that he and Marinatto have been in contact about Central Florida.

"I hope UCF will stay," he said. "But if a school feels like it's in a better situation somewhere else that's OK."

Both commissioners said they are having internal discussions with their members about possibly adding other schools.

Right now, the Big East has only six schools committed to play football in the league beyond this season.

Pittsburgh and Syracuse have announced they will move to the Atlantic Coast Conference, though Big East rules require them to stay in the league for the next two seasons and Marinatto has said he will hold the Panthers and Orange to that. However, that's unlikely if the league can grow to 12 teams for next season without them.

TCU was slated to join the Big East in 2012, but the Horned Frogs reneged on that commitment and accepted an invite to the Big 12 last week.

Trying to recruit new members has been tricky for the Big East because its remaining members might also be looking for new conference homes.

Louisville and West Virginia are possible targets for the Big 12 if it needs to replace Missouri, which is pondering a move to the Southeastern Conference, or decides to expand back to 12 teams.

Connecticut has interest in joining the ACC if it expands again, and there has been speculation about Rutgers moving, too.

By raising the exit fee, the Big East is trying to show the schools it has been recruiting that the conference will be stable in the long run. Boise State, Air Force, and Navy, an independent in football, all had reservations about the Big East's long-term health.

SMU and Houston would replace the Texas presence the Big East thought it was going to have with TCU, and help make the move to the Big East more palatable to Boise State.

Boise is nearly 1,900 miles from the closest current Big East member, Louisville. Though the trip to Houston is about as far, having a presence in Texas is alluring to Boise State.

HAGERMAN PIRATES SEND MESSAGE BY SMASHING OAKLEY

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

HAGERMAN • This is just the start.

That's what the Hagerman players boldly said after celebrating their 54-8 beat down of Oakley Friday night.

"We're sending a message out there that Hagerman is the team to beat," said Tyler Martin. "We're not looking for a third-place finish (at state), we're looking for a first."

When Martin wasn't bulldozing people over for 60 yards and a touchdown on the ground, he and the rest of his defensive line terrorized the Hornets' offense, making life miserable for running backs Stephan Ortiz and Eleazar Tellez.

Ortiz came into Hagerman averaging 174 yards rushing the past three games, scoring six touchdowns in that span. The Pirates defense, led by Martin, Johnathon Owsley and Justin Arriaga limited the senior speedster to just 65 yards rushing and one touchdown reception in the first quarter.

"They were pretty hard to stop. They've got pretty good size and speed and everything," said Oakley lineman Jose Contreras. "They're No. 44 (Martin) was really good at the nose tackle."

Said Martin: "Our D-line is probably one of the best you'll see around here. We're just relentless when we crash in, but we're smart at the same time."

Ortiz's 50-yard reception from Jamison Jones tied the game at 8 early in the first quarter, but it was all Hagerman and Kade Kress from there.

After returning the opening kickoff for a touchdown, Kress passed for three touchdowns and ran for two more, the final a 17-yard scamper with 3:26 remaining to end the game on the 45-point mercy rule.

"We have so many offensive plays, I get confused with how many we have," said Kress, who passed for 148 yards and ran for 97. "Our team has a lot of play-makers and we did a great job getting a big win and getting the mercy rule."

The win for Hagerman (7-0, 4-0 Snake River), essentially wraps up the conference title heading into its final two games against Hansen and Raft River. Last season, the Pirates lost to Grace in the Class 1A Division I state playoffs semifinals.

Oakley (5-2, 4-1) drops its first conference game and finishes the regular season against Wells, Nev. and Challis.

"We've got to keep our heads up," Contreras said. "It's disappointing, we had the conference title on our minds tonight. We just have to beat the next two teams and hopefully meet them (Hagerman) in the playoffs."

Bruins

"I just heard 'Fire!' because of a bad snap, and I looked around and saw Thomas scrambling, so I waved my hand and he found me," said Byce, who also had a game-sealing interception with less than three minutes to go. "It wasn't by design, but it ended up being a huge play."

It was on that botched snap-turned-key play that things unraveled for Canyon Ridge.

The Riverhawks fumbled on their next play from scrimmage, allowing Ben Worst to kick a short field goal for the final margin. They ended up turning the ball over four times to just once for Twin Falls, when Corr was intercepted on the opening drive of the game.

"The bottom line to any offense, but particularly this style of offense, is you can't make mistakes and we did," said Canyon Ridge coach Dave Slotten. "I'll tip my hat to our kids, because we aren't real deep and we had some injuries but they sucked it up. They just need to get to that next level."

Slotten's son, Zayne, helped accept the victors' trophies. The normally genial, good-natured senior showed a little emotion before going through the line to shake hands post-game.

He admitted afterward it would be fun to forever have one-up on his dad, but joking aside paid tribute to his team and the road it's traveled since a disappointing loss to Burley early in the season.

"This means a lot to us. We've gotten a lot more balanced between offense and defense so it's not so one-sided (leaning on the defense)," he said. "Now we've got a top two (berth to the playoffs) and we're ready to go try and take No. 1 next week."

Twin Falls travels to Minico, and with a win the Bruins would split the conference championship with the Spartans and take the No. 1 seed from the conference to the playoffs.

Canyon Ridge hosts Wood River, with the winner taking the conference's final playoff berth.

Meanwhile, Kimberly quickly turned its three-point halftime lead into a rout.

After forcing Buhl into a three-and-out to start the second half, Kimberly went 51 yards in seven plays to go up 27-16. Then another Buhl three-and-out produced Champlin's punt return touchdown.

Clay Mathews intercepted Gillins on Buhl's next drive, which led to Mathews' 3-yard TD to put the game out of reach early in the fourth quarter.

Buhl (2-5, 1-1) finishes its regular season at home next week vs. Wendell, while hoping Filer can upset the Bulldogs to force a three-way tie in the SCIC.

"We do not want a Kansas City playoff, those things are stupid," Champlin said. "We're really focused; we just want to get into Filer, kick off, get the game over and get back home. Make it quick."

MINICO OUTSCORES JEROME IN 41-25 VICTORY

TIMES-NEWS

Minico and Jerome combined for nearly 1,000 yards total offense, but Minico forced a pair of red zone turnovers and overcame a hobbled Brady May to defeat the Tigers, 41-25.

Jerome (1-7, 0-4 Great Basin Conference) fumbled on the Minico 1 and also threw an interception in the end zone. Still, the Tigers threw for 468 yards and put a scare into the GBC leaders.

"They were more physical than we were at the line of scrimmage," Jerome coach Gary Krumm said. "Those two turnovers were probably the story late."

Minico (8-0, 4-0) rushed for 471 yards and had 486 yards total offense, while all but 7 of Jerome's 475 yards came through the air. Zach Thibault and Simon Espinoza combined to complete 31 of 51 passes, although the former was knocked out of the game with an injury.

Greg Lindbloom ran for a pair of second-half touchdowns and finished with 201 yards rushing on 23 carries as the Wolverines (5-3 overall, 2-2 Great Basin Conference) won an elimination game of sorts in beating the Bobcats.

"The kids knew it was a must-win to get to the playoffs," Wood River coach Kevin Stilling said, "and we've got another playoff game next week (against Canyon Ridge)."

Despite Burley winning the turnover battle (2-1) and holding a sizable edge in total plays and time of possession, Wood River countered with bigger plays, starting with Ian Keyes' 41-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. He finished with 87 yards on just four carries, and Wood River outrushed Burley 319-204.

Defensively, Drew Barsch had 15 tackles to lead Wood River, while Lindbloom, Chance Larkin and Austin Hefer added 11 takedowns.

Burley (2-6, 1-3) was led by Brayden McCracken with 108 yards on 22 carries.

Jack Cenarrusa caught two passes for 101 yards and two touchdowns, Dillon Cenarrusa had four sacks and quarterback Jordan Dilworth had another big night passing as the Panthers clinched the Sawtooth North by routing the Blue Devils.

Dilworth didn't find the end zone until after halftime, which saw Carey holding a 22-6 lead. But Dilworth fueled a 30-point outburst by tossing for two scores and rushing for another. He threw for 134 yards on 7 of 13 passing. Charlie Rivera ran for 130 yards on 13 carries, and Bailey Barg caught five passes for 92 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Glen Andrews had 10 tackles for Carey, which gave up just 87 yards total offense.

"This was a conference championship game today and our kids rose to the occasion," Carey coach Lane Kirkland said.

Castleford improved to 5-2 overall and 4-0 in the Sawtooth Conference South with the home victory as the Wolves piled up 539 total yards on offense, 333 yards on the ground and 206 through the air.

Mitch Howard was 9-for-11 for 206 yards with scoring tosses of 31 yards to Tanner Allred, 40 yards to Mike Peckham and 27 yards to Cody Hansen. The Castleford defense held the Red Devils to just 110 yards and six first downs and Kendal Kunkel had three picks. Humberto Pacheco had the only Murtaugh score on an 80-yard kickoff return.

Bosma connected with Dylan Van Esch for a 43-yard touchdown and Brad Wall caught a 57-yard pass from Firth. Eli Berndt added a 64-yard punt Forest's Ketchum district office.

"We have accelerated some of that harvesting, he said. "This has helped local timber businesses because we are putting up more timber sales to remove the dead wood."

Rineholt said at one time, he received complaints that the Sawtooth area didn't have enough firewood. Now he receives phone calls from people complaining there is too much.

"We're selling close to 3,000 to 4,000 cords of wood alone from the Sawtooth area," he said.

The plethora of logs helps Zortman keep up with rising demand. When he first opened his business, he sold only 200 cords of wood the first year, for $170 per cord. Now he sells close to 2,500 cords a year for the same price.

With winter approaching, firewood is Zortman's fastest-selling product right now. In the spring, fence posts are his prime sellers. Zortman also sells the sawdust produced by his bark peeler to horse and mink owners.

While business is good, he says he's not looking for more growth. He doesn't advertise aggressively, post a sign outside his house or even hire employees. For the past nine years, he's run the business with only the help of his wife and father.

"We can barely keep up now," he said. "My wife and I split wood daily and I deliver two to three truck loads a day. Sometimes it's hard to stay on top of it all"

Rupert, and later taken to St. Luke's Boise, where he succumbed to his injury.

"This was a horrible tragedy, but with any gun wound or death we have to investigate," Minidoka County Prosecutor Lance Stevenson said.

Stevenson said an adult was present at the time of the shooting, and identified Herrera's parents as Crystal Rogers and Jose Herrera.

The shooting remains under investigation by the Rupert Police Department.

Mini-Cassia: Unlike prior proposals, Minidoka and Cassia counties remain in two different districts in the approved plan. Minidoka County is still paired with Jerome County.

"I'm very pleased and grateful that my district was essentially kept the same," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert. "... It looks like the Magic Valley is treated very well"

Wrapping Minidoka and Cassia counties together would have put Cameron in the same district as his longtime mentor, Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo. Had that happened, Cameron said, he and Darrington would have needed to do some talking before the election.

With the new plan, the influence of Mini-Cassia isn't diluted, Cameron said. In District 27, Cassia County loses Oneida County, but keeps Power County and gains a portion of Twin Falls County.

Twin Falls County: South-central Idaho's most populous county saw the most drastic change. Twin Falls County is split into three different districts in the new plan, one more than it is currently. The city of Twin Falls comprises one of those districts, a first for the region.

Outside of that city, the county west of U.S. Highway 93 is grouped with Elmore and Owyhee counties in another district. To the east, residents join Cassia and Power counties in a district.

The changes will pit incumbents against each other next year if all end up running for re-election. Rep. Stephen Hartgen will be in the same district as fellow Twin Falls Republican Reps. Leon Smith and Sharon Block.

If all three run for the same two seats, one will have to go. Smith said he hasn't decided if he'll run again. Hartgen said he plans to seek re-election.

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, actually lives just southwest of town — putting him in competition with Reps. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry, and Pete Nielsen, R-Mountain Home. Also in that new district, Sens. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, and Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, would have to compete for just one available seat. Brackett said Friday he hasn't decided yet if he'll seek re-election; Corder said he plans to run.

Hartgen and Patrick expressed concern about the split.

"It was gerrymandering in the worst case," Patrick said, adding that he hasn't decided if he'll run. "... We asked not to be destroyed three ways or four ways as a county because it destroys our representation."

The redistricting commission had one member from Twin Falls: Randy Hansen, a Republican. He said the plan offers a good balance of representation for communities of interest — an important factor laid out in state law — including the needs of metropolitan areas and agriculture. With two districts for rural Twin Falls County and the one for the city, there's plenty of chances for representation, he said.

Complicating it, he said, Twin Falls County has grown more than the surrounding regions, meaning the less-populated districts had to expand to include more people.

To the north: The four remaining counties in the region — Blaine, Gooding, Camas and Lincoln — still make up their own district. It's the one legislative district in the region that has leaned Democratic in voting trends, electing lawmakers like Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, and Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum.

establishing a cohesive city council, preparing for growth and coming together as a city.

Craner said now is not the time to pursue funding to build a new public library, adding that people should be allowed to recover from the recession first.

Dennis Dexter, county employee • Dexter said he has seen councilmen ask department heads condescending questions and he doesn't agree with that at all. He said the three top issues are removing the bickering during city meetings, fiscal responsibility and improving city services without overspending.

Dexter said he would support a library bond.

Randall Hawkins, retired banker • Hawkins said several years ago the city hired an administrator, who council questions should filter through. He said redirecting city meetings from the current "perverse form of entertainment," they've become, along with keeping the city's police contract with the county intact and economic growth, tops his list of most important issues.

Hawkins said he "seriously questions" whether a library bond would succeed right now.

Samuel Kuoha, police officer • Kuoha said in the eight months he's attended city meetings, he hasn't observed any condescending questions being asked of department heads. He said economic growth, establishing a future for the city's youth and the unification of Mini-Cassia are his utmost concerns.

Kuoha would support a library bond.

Jay Lenkersdorfer, newspaper publisher • Lenkersdorfer said the issue of condescending questions asked during meetings is a "conjured-up problem in many aspects."

He said his top priorities are replacing aging infrastructure, keeping fees in line and fostering business retention. Lenkersdorfer said he'd support a library bond, and the people should decide whether to fund a new facility.

Russell Mallory, retired from fertilizer and chemical industry • Mallory said it's interesting how two people at the same meeting can interpret things differently. He said keeping Burley a great place to live, bringing new business into the city and keeping the city-county law enforcement contract intact are the most important challenges facing the city.

Mallory said he's supportive of a library bond, but not now.

Joyce Merrill, teacher • Merrill said council members need to respect the people who have been hired by the city for their expertise.

"You have to be careful throwing stones when you're not in the trenches," she said.

Merrill said maintaining effective communication between the citizens and the city, putting more than a one-year bandage on the police contract and leading smart economic growth are her top issues. Merrill said now is the time for a library bond.

Tom Tolness, business owner and property manager for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation • Tolness said all people need to behave in a respectful and professional manner during city meetings. Tolness said keeping the police contract in place, improving the city's infrastructure and improving and maintaining recreational opportunities in the city are his top concerns.

Tolness said a library bond is necessary and now is the time for it.
