WHERE'D THE WEED GO?

A year after finding thousands of marijuana plants growing in area cornfields, local law enforcement have found only a few hundred this year.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Area narcotics officers logged hundreds of man-hours in planes and helicopters, keeping an eye out for marijuana grows this fall.

In the end, they didn't even find a fraction of what they ripped out of area cornfields a year ago.

South-central Idaho officers uncovered few illegal grows this year, with the Jerome County Sheriff's Office nabbing the largest haul of 540 plants in late August. Like in 2010, police haven't made any arrests related to seizures of illicit plants clandestinely placed in area corn fields to suck sun and water from farmers' crops.

But unlike last year, when they tore 10,000 plants from rural Gooding and Jerome counties alone before the plants could be harvested, they haven't upended new grows seemingly every week.

Reasons abound for why the weed went away this year, and officers believe their vigilance in recent years is paying off.

"(Marijuana growers) have caught on to the fact that we'll keep flying," said Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough,

More Stringent Standards Spell End of ISAT

As Idaho public schools move forward in adopting rigorous, uniform math and language standards, the current test used to measure student performance will be phased out by 2014.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

Idaho's public school system will ditch its current standardized test as more rigorous standards make their way into Gem State classrooms over the coming years.

In January, Idaho joined the 44 U.S. states that have now adopted Common Core State Standards, an initiative that will shape what public school students learn each year in English/language arts and math. Carissa Miller, deputy superintendent for the Idaho State Department of Education, said the point of the new standards is to help students be better prepared for college or a career.

"This is just the next step so that we know students will graduate from high school with those skills," she said.

Miller made a presentation about the standards Wednesday during a meeting of the Region IV

Please see ISAT, A2

At a Glance Common Core

What are they?

The standards, developed by a group of states, are more rigorous than what's currently taught in classrooms and are designed to help students be prepared for college or a career.

When will they be implemented?

They'll be taught in Idaho classrooms for the first time during the 2013-14 school year. Students will take a new assessment test, which will replace the Idaho Standards Achievement Test, starting in the 2014-15 school year.

What will test questions look like?

Young Guns Dominate Council Race

A field of four candidates, all younger than 35, seeks election to Twin Falls City Council's Seat 7.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

This is one city council race that will guarantee a win for Twin Falls' young guns.

All four candidates for Seat 7 on the Twin Falls City Council are younger than 35.

None have been elected to office before. Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka, who has served in the council seat since January after she was appointed to fill a vacancy, faces three challengers.

The winner will be elected to a four-year term on the council, a job that pays $13,920 annually.

Here are the details:

Neil Christensen

Age: 31
Occupation: Owner, Neil Christensen Insurance, an Allstate agency
Government experience: None
Three reasons to vote for Christensen:

- Christensen says he wants to make sure the city preserves its fiscally conservative approach.

- He says he wants to make sure the city has good economic development that encourages business growth.

- Christensen says he's in Twin Falls for the long haul and has roots as a business owner.

In his words: "I think the city's been doing OK, given the hard times that we have right now. I just want to make sure we can continue to be a business-friendly environment to attract businesses that can help lift us up."

Kevin Cope

Age: 34
Occupation: Sales representative for Idaho State Lottery
Government experience: Member of the city's planning and zoning commission since 2008, vice chairman for past year.
Three reasons to vote for Cope:
• Cope says the council needs to aggressively pursue opportunities to bring new industry into the city that will bring good-paying jobs with benefits. He says the city needs jobs that provide a better living for families than call centers.
• He says he brings leadership skills gained while in the Army Reserve for six years as a combat engineer and while managing a market research company.
• Cope says his job working with stores selling Idaho State Lottery products gives him a sense of the economic challenges the business community is facing.
In his words: "We need to bring back industry. We've relied on the ag industry so long and we need to keep relying on it, but we also need help with other avenues of industry. I think the city should be focusing heavily not just on your C3's, but jobs that give benefits and good pay that can be used to raise a family."

Rebecca Mills Sojka

Age: 27
Occupation: No other job besides council seat, former social worker who has worked with people with developmental disabilities.
Government experience: Took her city council seat in January after being appointed.
Three reasons to vote for Mills Sojka:
• Mills Sojka says she wants to focus on building communication between local government and residents and be available.
• She says she doesn't have an agenda and wants to represent everyone equally, regardless of their socioeconomic status.
• Mills Sojka says her background working with volunteer organizations — including Meals on Wheels, Interfaith Caregivers, Paint Magic and Johnny Horizon — gave her a desire to serve the community on the council.
In her words: "I want to focus on building communication between the citizens and local government. I want to make sure that people know that I am available as their city council representative to hear them and to hear their thoughts."

Christopher Reid

Age: 30
Occupation: Banker at Zions Bank, specializes in working with businesses
Government experience: None
Three reasons to vote for Reid:
• Reid says he would bring representation to residents who live on the west end of Twin Falls, an area that currently lacks representation. That would bring a stronger awareness of geographic issues like the ongoing impact of Washington Street construction on business, he says.
• He says he would want to speak up, ask questions and voice his opinion.
• Reid says he would bring an independent voice to the council, and one that doesn't owe anything to anyone.
In his words: "The most important thing is making sure when we do have a decrease in property tax and sales tax is making sure we know where that money's being allocated, the best use of that money also. ... I think Twin Falls is a great place — I want to make sure that it stays a great place."

CLARIFICATION

Jerome Sewers, EPA Suit Not Related

An Oct. 7 story about the EPA suing Jerome Cheese Co. for violating the Clean Water Act may have been misleading as to how the suit tied into other wastewater issues in the city of Jerome.
Jerome Cheese has an EPA permit to discharge cleaned-up cooling water into a canal. Though categorized as "wastewater" in the suit, it does not enter the city's sewer system and thus did not play a role in ongoing issues there.

Idaho Power Closer to Plant Upgrade

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Idaho Power Co. is inching closer to starting its Shoshone Falls power plant upgrade.
The project has been pursued since 2001, with work tentatively set to start in 2012 after it received federal approval. However, company officials are still deciding if they are going to invest in the upgrade.
The company plans to replace two small turbines with a much larger and more advanced turbine, swapping two antique machines that produce a total 1 megawatt for a modern turbine with a peak efficiency of 50 MW. The plant is currently capable of producing a total 12.5 MW.
Producing more power would require running much more water through the plant, said Brad Bowlin, spokesman for Idaho Power. That's a major cost concern to the company.

"The availability of water coming from upstream is one of the factors we're looking at," Bowlin said. "We haven't fully decided if we're going to go through with the project."
Bowlin didn't know when his company would make a final decision on the project, but the federal permit mandates that it be completed by 2015.
To locals, the most noticeable change may be to the falls. Idaho Power's current license requires it to spill at least 300 cubic feet of water per second over the falls during daylight hours from April 1 through Labor Day. But by regularly taking more water, the number of days the falls would best the 300 cfs — or have much water at all during the rest of the year — will greatly decline.
The change prompted some objections during the federal approval process, including from the city of Twin Falls, though it later said its concerns were resolved. The falls have been a major attraction to the city, which charges falls visitors during the spring and summer. This year was an extremely high ticket sales year, said Dennis Bowyer, City Parks and Recreation director.

"People come from all over to look at the falls," Bowyer said. "And this year, with the heavy water flows, we broke records with the amount of visitors we had."
Currently, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission is accepting comments on the power company's plan that outlines how it will meet its energy demand. The plan includes how the Shoshone Falls upgrade would improve load demand.
"This is a significant project for us," Bowlin said. "Hydroelectric power is always our first priority. We already have the facility so this project is attractive to us."

Superintendent's Association, which is comprised of public school superintendents from south-central Idaho.
The new standards will be taught in Idaho classrooms for the first time during the 2013-14 school year. One idea behind the standards is that a student studying math in Twin Falls will receive instruction that's similar to what's taught at the same grade level in other parts of Idaho and beyond.
Patti O'Dell, associate superintendent for the Twin Falls School District, said she's excited about the changes.
"I think they're going to bring continuity and consistency to curriculum and assessment in Idaho," she said.
Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said leadership teams from Magic Valley school districts will soon participate in training sessions about the new standards.
The Jerome School District plans to continue to send staff members to Idaho State University's Intermountain Center for Education Effectiveness to learn more, Curriculum Director Clark Muscat said.
As a result of moving forward with Common Core, a new assessment will replace the Idaho Standards Achievement Test.
Idaho is part of the SMARTER Balanced Assessment Consortium, a group of states working to come up with the new test. It's scheduled to be in place by the 2014-15 school year.
The new test will be online, like the ISAT, but will go "deeper and broader" into the content students are expected to know, Miller said.
It will be a form of "adaptive testing," meaning it's based on students' abilities throughout the test.
"It's an online test that would say 'this student answered this many questions (correctly) in a row, so we'll give them a more difficult question,'" McGrath said.
There won't just be multiple choice questions — they'll also be performance items, such as multi-part assignments involving research and essay writing, and constructed response questions where students have to show their work.

who reported finding nothing in his county's cornfields. "We kind of surprised ourselves. We thought we would have found something."
The Blaine County Sheriff's Office found neither indoor nor outdoor grows this year, according to Capt. Jay Davis. And the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office reported finding only 24 plants from a few small indoor grows, but nothing growing outside. Deputy Blas Martinez credited the work of range deputies, who keep an eye out for suspicious activity around the quiet countryside.

"Deputies like Lt. (Darren) Brown and his crew are crucial," Martinez said. "Marijuana is not just in the corn fields."
An extended, wet spring was also cited as a factor in the absence of the illegal grows, as it's believed by some officers that marijuana seedlings weren't able to take root.
Area farmers delayed planting their crops due to soggy conditions early in the growing season, meaning there was less early cover for drug growers to hide their seedlings in. It ended up being a solid growing year for corn — good news for farmers who last year lost acres of crop yield to marijuana planted on their property.

But a lack of grows doesn't equate to a drop in Magic Valley weed. It's probable that people grow their own marijuana in small amounts, but Martinez said most of what is sold here comes from other states like California or from as far away as Mexico.
In Twin Falls County, nine criminal complaints have been filed by prosecutors this year for the manufacturing or trafficking of marijuana, up from five cases last year. In 2009, the number of cases reached 11.

Despite success in finding and uprooting marijuana plants in recent years, police have cited a lack of resources for surveillance as to why few arrests are made. The Jerome County Sheriff's Office watched the land where the 540 plants were found, but Chief Deputy Jack Johnson said little information was gleaned and no arrests were made.
Otherwise, Johnson is one of many officers glad that one method of distributing drugs was curbed this year.
"We're pretty happy with that," he said.

Twin Falls Man Pleads Guilty to Child Exploitation

TIMES-NEWS

Kevin Butikofer, 28, of Twin Falls, pleaded guilty earlier this month to two of 10 felony counts levied against him in Jerome County 5th District Court.

Butikofer entered a plea to sexual exploitation of a child and injury to a child, while other counts were dropped. He was initially charged with five counts of lewd conduct with a child, two counts of sexual abuse of a child, sexual exploitation of a child, injury to a child and destruction of telecommunications equipment in February.

He was accused of having inappropriate contact with a 6-year-old numerous times between December 2010 and February. Sentencing is scheduled for Nov. 28.

T.F. Police Seek Suspect in Abduction Attempt

TIMES-NEWS

Twin Falls police are looking for a 6-foot-tall male in his 40s they say attempted to abduct a girl Tuesday night.

The 16-year-old girl told police that she was walking in the 1500 block of Fourth Avenue East at 9:30 p.m. when the male approached her. Wearing black clothes, a black beanie cap and white shoes, the male reached out to grab her by the wrist.

The girl told police she ran, jumped a fence and hid under a car in the backyard of a nearby residence. At that point, she said, the man entered the backyard and searched it while calling out "I know you are here."

After approximately 20 minutes spent hiding under the car, the girl said she crawled out and ran home.

Twin Falls police ask anyone with information regarding this incident to call Officer Luke Allen at 735-7358, or email lallen@tffd.org.

UI Moves Release Date for Professor's Records

BOISE (AP) • The University of Idaho says records scheduled for release next week will detail the employment history of a professor who police say gunned down a graduate student he had dated and then committed suicide.

The university had aimed to release Ernesto Bustamante's personnel records by Friday, but the date was postponed as officials waded through documents that include some 70,000 emails.

The records stem from Bustamante's 2007 job application through August 2011, when police say Bustamante resigned his position and three days later, shot 22-year-old Katy Benoit multiple times outside her Moscow home.

Police say Bustamante then turned a gun on himself.

A judge ordered Bustamante's records released Oct. 3 after the university and several media outlets petitioned the court to rule they were a matter of public record.

JEROME BANK ROBBER RECEIVES PRISON SENTENCE

TIMES-NEWS

Joseph Jacobs will spend nearly five years in state prison for robbing the Jerome D.L. Evans back earlier this year.

Jacobs, 23, of Jerome, was sentenced Monday to a maximum 10 years imprisonment with the possibility of parole after he serves five. He was credited for nearly six months spent in jail as he awaited the resolution of the case.

Jacobs was arrested on June 10, the same day the bank branch on 980 S. Lincoln Ave. was robbed. Police found Jacobs unarmed and with an undisclosed amount of cash at a residence near the bank.

Jacobs was charged with three felony counts of robbery, grand theft and burglary. He pleaded guilty to robbery in late August, and the remaining charges were dismissed.

Public Can Weigh In on Idaho School Reform Rules

BOISE (AP) • The public has until Oct. 26 to comment on proposed public education rule changes, including some that accompany Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna’s 2011 “Students Come First” reforms.

One of the proposed rules requires district negotiations with personnel to conform to Idaho’s Open Meeting Law. Under Luna’s reforms, such talks have to be conducted publicly.

There’s also a rule clarifying how parents’ comments are to be incorporated into teacher and administrator evaluations under changes that came with “Students Come First.”

Another rule would make it easier for teachers with expired certificates to return to the classroom.

That proposal is meant to help address challenges Idaho faces in filling teacher shortages, especially for specialized subjects like high school math, sciences and special education.

The comment deadline is Oct. 26. To submit comments, visit <http://1.usa.gov/oBXXbu> or fax comments to Gaye Bennett at 334-2228.

Idaho Won’t Compete for Preschool Money

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • The state has decided it will not apply for a multi-million dollar education grant from the federal government aimed at increasing access to early learning programs for low-income and disadvantaged children.

States had a Wednesday deadline to apply for the $500 million federal grant competition to improve preschool education programs during the latest round of the U.S. Department of Education’s “Race to the Top” contest.

The state Department of Education confirmed that Idaho, which could have sought up to $50 million, decided to skip the process.

The agency led by public schools chief Tom Luna recommended last month that Idaho abandon efforts to compete for the money, citing concerns about the state expanding its current public education system with one-time funding.

“Nothing has changed,” said department spokeswoman Melissa McGrath. “Our biggest concern is still the one-time money and what happens after it

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s office notified the U.S. Department of Education in July that the state intended to apply for the Early Learning Challenge. Idaho was among a handful of states that do not fund a statewide prekindergarten program but had still planned to compete for the money.

One of the goals of the grant program was to help states that have traditionally not funded early education programs launch those efforts. But among the top concerns for Idaho’s Department of Education was that state lawmakers have not yet put a prekindergarten policy in place.

The agency also had reservations about taking on a new program while carrying out other initiatives such as Luna’s “Students Come First” plan, which includes a series of substantial changes for public schools that include laptops for high school students while also requiring them to take some online classes.

“Anytime somebody approaches us with a grant opportunity or a new project, we have to decide whether we have the capacity to do the work. And while that was not the greatest concern, it was a concern,” McGrath said.

The U.S. Education Department announced the Early Learning Challenge in May, saying the program aims to do away with an uncoordinated system of preschool programs that often leave the poorest children without options and allow bad schools to go unchecked.

Education advocates said the federal focus on early learning is critical to making quality preschool and prekindergarten to all children. The program also represents the third round of the federal government’s “Race to the Top” competition, which doled out nearly $4 billion to states last year.

Idaho was among states shut out during the first round of the federal grant competition.

Paul says he got a quick pick ticket a few years ago and kept playing the same numbers. He bought his winning ticket at the Fairway Gas and Grocery in Coeur d’Alene.

The Coeur d’Alene Press reports Paul is the DEQ’s air shed coordinator for North Idaho. He says he will use the money to pay bills and invest the rest.

This was Idaho’s second jackpot-winning Wild Card ticket in the past six months.

Wild Card is played in Idaho, Montana and North and South Dakota.

METH BOSS SENTENCED TO 20 YEARS

BOISE (AP) • A woman accused of leading a drug-peddling gang that brought methamphetamine into Idaho by the pound will spend 20 years in a federal prison.

Amanda Smith of Homedale was sentenced Monday in U.S. District Court in Boise.

Prosecutors say the 32-year-old Smith sold 100 percent-pure methamphetamine to Norteno gang members, stashed the proceeds in out-of-state accounts and directed people to cross into Nevada and return to Idaho with their illicit cargo.

Prosecutors say Smith once helped kidnap a drug customer at gunpoint, to make sure a payment for a drug deal was made.

U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson said there's been an alarming spike in high-potency methamphetamine coming from California, Arizona, Nevada and Mexico.

Death Row Inmate Given Execution Date

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A 7th District Judge has scheduled death row inmate Paul Ezra Rhoades to be executed next month. He would be the first person put to death in Idaho since 1994 and the state's second execution since 1957.

Rhoades, who was convicted of killing three people in Idaho Falls and Blackfoot in 1988, is scheduled to be executed by lethal injection on Nov. 18. Seventh District Judge Jon Shindurling issued the death warrants Wednesday.

Rhoades was served at 4:15 p.m. and immediately moved into an isolation cell at the Idaho Maximum Security Institution south of Boise, where he has been incarcerated since March 1988, according to the state Department of Correction.

The inmate executed in 1994, Keith Wells, voluntarily gave up his federal appeals and asked to be put to death.

Rhoades was given two death sentences for the sexual assault and murder of Idaho Falls teacher Susan Michelbacher, 34, whose bullet-ridden body was found in March 1987. He also was given two death sentences for the first-degree murder and kidnapping of Stacy Dawn Baldwin, 24, a Blackfoot convenience store clerk who was shot to death in February 1987.

Rhoades was also sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole after pleading guilty to the March 1987 shooting death of Nolan Haddon, 21, a Blackfoot man who worked at an Idaho Falls convenience store.

The death warrants issued by Shindurling on Wednesday were for the murders of Michelbacher and Baldwin.

Rhoades still has legal avenues to possibly prevent an execution. He has filed a federal lawsuit against the state, saying Idaho's method of lethal injection amounts to cruel and unusual punishment and that problems with the lethal injection system would render his execution unconstitutional. The state has asked the federal court to throw out that lawsuit. The case has been assigned to U.S. Magistrate Judge Ronald Bush.

Bush could decide to issue a stay of execution while the lawsuit works through the court system. If he declines to issue a stay and the lawsuit isn't resolved by Nov. 18, the execution might move forward as planned.

Additionally, Rhoades could ask the Idaho State Parole Commission for clemency. If the parole commission decides to consider his request, it will likely schedule a hearing and publish notice of the hearing for four weeks. Then it would make a recommendation to the governor to either grant or deny clemency, and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter would have 30 days to decide whether to grant the clemency request.

Officials with the Idaho Department of Correction have been working for months to get the execution chamber at the Idaho Maximum Security Institution ready for use. Department Director Brent Reinke told the Board of Correction on Friday that an execution team is in place and the team has been holding regular practices in anticipation of an execution.

Unlike Wells, who was executed in 1994 after asking to be put to death, Rhoades has vigorously fought his convictions in the two decades since he was sent to death row. On Oct.

11, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Rhoades' final appeal — a claim that a lower court should have had an evidentiary hearing when deciding whether his attorneys effectively represented him during sentencing.

Otter's spokesman, Jon Hanian, said that in general, the governor supports the death penalty and believes it is "a solemn, serious responsibility that must be performed with respect, professionalism and integrity."

But Hanian stressed that Otter has not yet considered Rhoades' case.

"He will weigh all the facts in this case when they are presented to him, and he will make his decision at that time," Hanian said.

Rhoades' attorney, Oliver Loewy with the Federal Defender Services of Idaho, did not immediately return a phone call from The Associated Press.

OUR VIEW

Wait Till Time is Right for Rec Center, Then Go Big

In setting up the Twin Falls Recreation Center Committee, City Manager Travis Rothweiler offered a simple benediction: Dream big.

"What it could be, could ultimately sell it," he told the committee in April.

Half a year later, the group has released its initial plan for the community rec center, and, unfortunately, Rothweiler couldn't have been more correct.

The underwhelming floor plans are a tough sell. They contain basketball courts, batting cages, a climbing wall and jogging track, all for $5.5 million. But there's nothing there to spark the imagination or stir excitement from the community.

Some communities our size have developed wonderful rec centers that go beyond a place to play basketball when it's cold. Dublin, Ohio, for instance — a city of 47,000 residents — has a recreation center with athletic courts, too. But their building also contains an auditorium, separate lounges for teens, youth and seniors, multiple gathering places and a computer lab.

We're not looking to the city or its residents to build a facility like that in Twin Falls this year or next. We know better than to push the city to keep up with the Jonesvilles. With the economy as it is now, it's the wrong time to ask taxpayers to cough up more for city services.

But we are asking the rec center committee to dream.

Even in a down economy, we can aspire to greatness, and think about all of the wonderful uses a town the size of Twin Falls could get out of a communal space. When done right, a community recreation center is more than an indoor gym — it's a place for people to gather in the winter to play hard, and study not only fitness but arts as well. It's a place for kids to blow off steam and a place for otherwise isolated seniors to gather over a deck of cards.

The reality, though, is that this is simply a poor time to build big dreams.

But it's a great time to dream big buildings.

Lean times won't last forever. We advise the rec center committee to go back to the drawing board. We'd rather have a top-notch facility we can all back when Twin Falls' economy rebounds, instead of an indoor basketball court with precious few extra community amenities.

Sharpen your pencils, and, for the sake of all of us in Twin Falls, dream big.

Bad Math Hurts Cain's Good Intentions

Ramesh Ponnuru

Bloomberg News

would be much closer to a European-style value-added tax. You already know the rate.

Then comes Stage Three, when Cain would throw away the new income tax and the value added tax he created and institute the Fair Tax. That's a proposal for a retail sales tax of 30 percent that some conservatives have been promoting for years.

At last week's debate, Cain claimed that poor people would come out ahead under his plan (Stage Two of it, that is) because they would pay a 9 percent income tax, but the standard 15.3 percent payroll levy would be eliminated. On this point he is deeply mistaken. The earned-income tax credit currently offsets some of that 15.3 percent, and he would abolish that credit. Poor people would also pay the 9 percent sales tax every time they buy groceries or get a medical bill.

And that's not all. Cain is counting the employer share of the payroll tax in his 15.3 percent on the theory that employers pass that on to workers by cutting their wages. He is right to do so. But a good chunk of his VAT would also be passed on to workers. Today's corporate income tax allows companies to deduct wages. The VAT doesn't: It is designed to be, at least partly, a tax on wages — just one that is collected from companies rather than earners. A portion of the VAT would also be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices.

So, in addition to paying new taxes on their purchases and losing the personal exemption and earned-income tax credit, people at the low end of the income scale would see their wages drop. The reduction in payroll taxes wouldn't come close to making up for these hits.

Cain claims that neither the sales tax nor the VAT will cause prices to increase. His argument is that the cost of the taxes that he would reduce or eliminate is "embedded" in the prices of goods: Reducing that cost and piling on sales taxes would be a wash. It sounds too good to be true, and it is. If taxes are embedded in the prices of goods, they are embedded in the price of labor, too. That means wages would have to fall. And if wages don't fall, firms will fire people to avoid paying wages above the new market level.

The Federal Reserve could prevent mass unemployment by accelerating inflation to aid the transition to the 9-9-9 system, and then inflating again, even more, for the switch to the 30 percent sales tax. But Cain, who has been complaining about the Fed's "printing money out of thin air" in recent years, may not support these steps.

He says the plan would "end the IRS as we know it." But even after the last stage, the federal government would still have to know people's wages to figure out how large their Social Security checks should eventually be. And since benefits could no longer be tied to payroll taxes paid — Cain would have abolished those taxes — people would, for the first time, have an incentive to fool the federal government into thinking they had earned more than they actually did.

The chief problem with the final stage of Cain's plan, meanwhile, is that there's no reason to believe it would work. Enforcing a 30 percent sales tax would be a nightmare, which is why no advanced economy relies on sales taxes to such an extent.

Cain is actually right to want to move toward taxing consumption. But we could do that simply by taxing income and exempting the returns on savings — thus avoiding many of the problems that Cain's plan raises. Wouldn't that be, well, simpler?

QUESTION OF THE DAY

Should french fries be reduced in school cafeterias?

We asked this question to our Facebook fans after a bill arose in the U.S. Senate that would limit the amount of starchy vegetables served in school lunches. An amendment sponsored by Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, and co-sponsored by Idaho Sens Jim Risch and Mike Crapo, was added to the final language of the bill. Some of the responses:

"I'm not sure that there is really a way to serve mass amounts of healthy foods on the budgets the schools have. But I say yes — they should be!"
Brittnee Turner Horting

"I think the changes will lead to more veggies in the garbage. We eat all kinds of veggies at home where I can make the kids eat it but I guarantee it's not going to happen at school. ... Potatoes are very nutritious, inexpensive, and kids LIKE them."

Kristen Nelson

"Would think that there would be way more important things for the Senate to spend their time on.... For the record, obesity is a fairly new trend, potatoes are not."
Kim Carder Leedom

"The Irish lived on pota- atoes every winter for centuries until the potato famine. There are vitamins and protein in them besides the starch. Potatoes need to be prepared in ways other than fried to be healthy for kids."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Looking to the Future

We are heading into the home stretch for the city council seats and it is time to think about the choices you have on Nov. 8.

It's possible that four seats could change. Before you vote, take the time to do some background on what the candidates have to offer. Do we want the same status quo? Or do we want some new ideas? Do we want to try and blend some "real" experience with "energy"?

I have gotten to know Neil Christensen during the past few months and feel comfortable with him. Please realize that, "philosophically" in some areas, we are vastly different and I doubt that will ever change.

However, what I see is a young family man. I see a person who has his own business and has made it successful over the past six years. He is a person who knows what it takes to make a payroll for his employees and provide an adequate living for his family.

Neil has not been handed a job or a position; he has earned it. Neil has some fresh ideas on business development and realizes that "jobs" are the No. 1 issue facing us. He is pro-business, yet he will ensure that prospective industry is compatible with citizenry and protect our way of life. Twin Falls will need to do some drastic improvements in our infrastructure to attract more business. We will also need to face facts that we are looking at large deficits in our future budgets that will not just disappear.

I am reaching out to all voters. Don't be tuned out by supposedly how great things are, incumbents who don't have anything new to offer, nor "canned" letters to the editor that are just lip service from family members.

Step out of your "comfort zone"; do what is best for all of Twin Falls. It's time for all of us to reach out for new ideas. It's time to look seriously at the future, now — it's coming whether we like it or not.

Cope Understands the People of Twin Falls

It's time for new ideas and new faces. Kevin Cope is a new face with a fresh perspective on our city.

Being born and raised in Twin Falls helps Cope understand the needs and wants of all residents. He listens to the needs of every one from small-business owners, the elderly to the middle class, of which I am all of the above.

Cope supports the downtown merchants and wants to help make the downtown successful. He wants to bring in new businesses that can give benefits and a future to the people of Twin Falls. Cope understands that raising prices on utilities is a last resort and only after all other options are exhausted. Cope believes that our elders are the foundation of Twin Falls and wants to make sure they have a voice. Cope believes in family and community, he wants to help Twin Falls grow without taking away the small town feel.

A vote for Cope is a vote for hope!

Growth Brings Challenges

I love Twin Falls and have been a part of this community my whole life. In that time, there have been some changes. I remember when Randy Hansen Chevrolet was clear out of town, when Target was just a row of poplars, and even when O'Leary Junior High was next to the courthouse. Twin Falls has grown from a small town to a small city!

Growth brings many challenges that forever affect the future. I would like to bring a fresh, common sense, business approach to effectively deal with these challenges in a positive way.

After high school, I worked to earn a degree in business administration and marketing from Utah State University. After evaluating employment offers — some far from home — I chose to return to Twin Falls and work in the insurance business. Ten years ago, I had the opportunity to purchase the business which became Starley Leavitt Insurance. We have since successfully protected businesses and individuals throughout our community.

My wife and I have raised four children in Twin Falls and, during the last 21 years, we have been privileged to donate time and resources to various sports organizations, schools, church and community functions. My commitment to hard work and my knowledge of the needs of our community will ensure I will make common sense decisions for Twin Falls. With proper decisions about growth, I believe Twin Falls will always be a great place for my kids to return and live.

I have enjoyed attending the Twin Falls City Council meetings and observing procedures. I know I can serve our community in this capacity. On Nov. 8, I am asking for your vote. I am looking forward to living and serving in Twin Falls for many years to come.

Enlist a Hard-working Advocate for Twin Falls

I feel that Suzanne Hawkins would be a great Twin Falls city councilwoman.

Like many of us women of today, Suzanne wears many hats — a wife, mother, grandmother, friend, successful businesswoman, volunteer and, hopefully, Twin Falls city councilwoman. She is an upstanding citizen with the best of intentions, enriching ideas and the drive to help make Twin a better place to live.

By voting Suzanne Hawkins for Twin Falls City Council Seat 4, the community will have enlisted one very honest and hard-working advocate for the city of Twin.

Thank you.

It's Time for Americans to Put Mitt Romney's Religion Aside

Mainstream Mormonism is no cult, and Mitt Romney is more fit to be president for his work in the church.

Growing up in New York, my family and best friend, John, visited the Mormon Pavilion at the World's Fair in 1965. My mother and John filled out a card to learn more, and before long, missionaries — classically attired in white shirt and tie — arrived at our door steps. My mother and I did not have much interest, but John soon began a journey completed by becoming a Mormon at the age of 17.

Impressed by his sincere faith, I made it my business, while attending a secular college, to learn about Mormonism — not from a missionary looking to score a convert — but through courses about religion in society and research papers.

Mormonism is not something I could accept as a faith — you will never get the Catholic out of me, even if I attend an Episcopal Church in Georgetown.

Mormons believe in the salvation story that makes Christianity a separate faith, not merely a separate sect, from Judaism. However, Mormons also believe mortals possess the potential for divinity — to live a life like God in the hereafter — if they live a truly just life here on earth.

The potential for our own divinity sounds farfetched and cult-like to rigid and inflexible Christians, such as Governor Perry supporter

Rev. Robert Jeffress, but no more so than did the divinity of Christ and the Christian salvation story to First Century Jews or their Roman rulers. What is more important is what Mormons believe and teach to their children about what God expects from each of us in our relationships with our fellow human beings — or what it takes to live a good life.

Mormons believe, like other Christians, each human being is imperfect but capable, through faith and good deeds, of improving — and is fact responsible to his creator to try. They teach hard work, thrift, respect for human life, and tolerance for the beliefs of others. On issues like the sanctity of marriage and abortion, mainstream Mormon's positions may not endear them to libertine intellectuals and progressives, but they are hardly out of step with what many conservative Catholics and Protestants believe.

As much as any faith community, Mormons believe each of us is responsible to assist those less fortunate, fallen or beset by troubles — through real gifts of time and resources — and that such acts of charity improve the condition of the man or woman who extends the helping hand as much as the one who receives the lift.

More importantly, Mormonism has imparted on Mitt Romney an indelible imprint that makes him more fit, not less, to be President.

The son of a Michigan Governor and holder of both an MBA and law degree from Harvard, Mr. Romney grew up in privilege and became wealthy in business as founder of Bain Capital, a private equity company. However, the Mormon Church does not have a professional clergy — full-time ministers in the manner of the Catholic and mainstream Protestant clergy — but rather calls on laymen to lead the worship and counsel fellow congregants and those in need.

As a young man, Mitt Romney served as leader of his congregation and later as Boston Stake President — overseeing a region similar to a Catholic or Episcopal diocese. In those capacities, he made remarkable efforts — some successful and others not — to combat urban gangs, reach out to other faith communities and generally administer his church's welfare system that helps the needy.

He made parish calls, counseled his fellow congregants and worked with those that were troubled — in trials of faith and life. Through these experiences, he saw how the other side lives in a manner that many who devote their lives to business or politics never do or try very hard to leave behind.

Romney has gone to those places in our communities that most of us would prefer to avoid and subcontract to professional clergy, and assuage our guilt by writing checks.

Romney has visited and worked in those places where the human condition is blighted by poverty, poor personal decisions, drug abuse, deceit, and worse. By the accounts of those who know him — not his own bragging — he performed those tasks with energy, enduring commitment and considerable sacrifice of his own time and money.

Mitt Romney is no mother Theresa — but no one can be her and be a good spouse and parent, businessman, governor, and aspire to be president. However, he lives a faith that teaches the dignity of man, tolerance for human diversity, the power of charity to improve the lives of those that give as well as those that receive, and potential for redemption when we fail — which each of us does in some measure.

If that's a cult, then maybe Rev. Jeffress should sign up for some lessons.

Don't Hide Health Care Facts From the Public

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

The entire U.S. health care system needs more transparency to best serve consumers. Until patients have easier access to information about costs and outcomes, important levers for controlling medical expenses will remain frustratingly out of reach.

That's why it is so disturbing that the U.S. Department of Health and Human Service has shut down an online database of vital statistical information on the malpractice and disciplinary histories of doctors.

And it is especially disappointing that Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, a former Kansas governor, signed off on that move. It flies in the face of the Obama administration's goal of increasing patient access to crucial information about health care.

U.S. Sen. Chuck Grassley is asking the right questions about the department's actions.

The agency closed down the public use file of the National Practitioner Data Bank after Kansas City Star reporter Alan Bavley used information there to bolster a story about a Johnson County neurosurgeon who remained in good standing with the Kansas Board of Healing Arts despite a trail of malpractice lawsuits.

In a letter to the Health Research and Services Administration, Grassley, an Iowa Republican, said the intent of the legislation creating the public use file was that the "data be public as long as it does not identify particular health care entities or practitioners."

Physicians in the database are identified by number rather than name. Bavley used information gleaned from other public records, including court documents, to connect the neurosurgeon to his database record.

Prior to the story's publication, a federal official sent Bavley a letter holding out the possibility of financial penalties if The Star used information from the database.

"A journalist's shoe-leather reporting is no justification for such threats or for HRSA to shut down public access to information that Congress intended to be public," Grassley said.

Grassley's letter asked about reported plans to further "de-identify" information in the database, and whether those moves will be in keeping with Congress's intent in establishing the public use file. He requests records of communications between HRSA officials and representatives for Robert Tenney, the neurosurgeon who was the subject of The Star's report. He also wants to know the timeline for getting the public use file up and running.

Journalism organizations and public-interest groups have protested removal of the file, calling it a valuable tool for tracking whether states and the medical profession are doing enough to weed bad doctors from the ranks.

"More transparency serves the public interest," Grassley wrote.

He's exactly right. Sebelius and the Obama administration should not be moving in the opposite direction.

Killing an Unaffordable New Entitlement

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The picture keeps getting darker for the Obama administration's health care reform program. Last Friday, one big part of it got eliminated — not by Congress and not by the courts, but by the Department of Health and Human Services. Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, abandoning a new program to provide long-term care for the elderly, announced, "I do not see a viable path forward."

That may sound like a sensible admission, and it is. But the administration's decision to scrap the effort is still a couple of years late. This is not a problem that emerged only recently, as a consequence of unforeseen developments. On the contrary, it was obvious all along.

The initiative, known as Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS), was supposed to cover services needed to let the elderly live at home, as well as nursing home stays. But it ran up against a harsh reality: Young and healthy people are generally uninterested in buying such coverage, and the people likely to buy it are also likely to take advantage of it.

So the money going out would eventually exceed the money coming in. Or, as one administration official wrote in an internal email in

Poll: Public Still Unsure Who Will Face Obama

BY CHARLES BABINGTON and JENNIFER AGIESTA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Americans have yet to find a Republican they'd clearly prefer over President Barack Obama, although half say the president does not deserve re-election.

Among Republicans, the desire to oust Obama is clear, according to a new AP-GfK poll. But it has not resolved divisions over the choice of a nominee. Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney is reasonably popular, but he has not pulled away from the field.

Former pizza company executive Herman Cain runs close to Romney as the candidate Republicans would most like to see on the ballot, but many Republicans are reluctant to back a man who has never held office. Texas Gov. Rick Perry lags in the poll, which was conducted before Tuesday night's combative debate in Las Vegas.

In that two-hour forum, several candidates sharply criticized Cain's tax proposals, and a newly energized Perry hit Romney hard on immigration.

In the poll, Romney was the choice of 30 percent of Republicans, with Cain about even at 26 percent. Perry was preferred by 13 percent, and Rep. Ron Paul of Texas topped the list of those in single digits.

Among all adults surveyed, half said Obama should not be re-elected, and 46 percent said he should be. That continues his gradual slide since May.

When all adults are asked about hypothetical head-to-head matchups, Obama and Romney run almost even, 48 percent for Obama to 45 percent. Obama holds a narrow edge over Cain, 49 percent to 43 percent. He leads Perry, 51 percent to 42 percent.

Luis Calderon of El Monte, Calif., exemplifies those unhappy with Obama but not ready to dump him.

"Even though I criticize him, I still want him to win," said Calderon, 56, a self-employed handyman who was laid off by an oil company three years ago. Obama "has to get down to business, forget about promises, just do it, create jobs," Calderon said. "But in order to create jobs, he has to be harder on the Republicans."

A Democrat, Calderon said Romney "is the one that may do a little dent on Obama."

Top U.S. Delegation to Enlist Pakistan's Help

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) • CIA chief David Petraeus will be among an army of high-level U.S. officials with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton when she arrives in Islamabad today to ramp up pressure on Pakistan to do more to stop militant infiltration across the border into Afghanistan, several U.S. officials in Washington and the region told The Associated Press.

In a muscular show of diplomatic force, the U.S. dispatched most of its senior national security leaders to Pakistan with what several officials described as a combined message of support and pressure. Petraeus and the nation's top military official, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Martin Dempsey, were joining Clinton in Pakistan on Thursday, several officials in the region and in Washington said. Other U.S. officials en route included the State Department's Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan, Marc Grossman, and Doug Lute of the National Security Council.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not publicly authorized to speak about the sensitive trip.

The huge conference was meant to display unity among the various U.S. agencies with a hand and an interest in Pakistan.

Texas Gov. Rick Perry Calls For a Flat Tax

LAS VEGAS • Working to distinguish himself from rival Mitt Romney, Texas Gov. Rick Perry said Wednesday that he wants to scrap America's current tax laws and impose a flat tax. Perry told the Western Republican Leadership Conference he plans to explain the tax proposal when he unveils his broad economic plan in a speech next week. He called the plan "an economic growth package that will create jobs, create growth and create investor confidence in America again. It starts with scrapping the three million words of the current tax code, and starting over with something much simpler: a flat tax." — Associated Press

Police Shoot to Kill After Park Owner Frees 48 Wild Animals

BY ANDY BROWNFIELD and KANTELE FRANKO

Associated Press

ZANESVILLE, Ohio • Sheriff's deputies shot nearly 50 wild animals — including 18 rare Bengal tigers and 17 lions — in a big-game hunt across the state's countryside Wednesday after the owner of an exotic-animal park threw their cages open and committed suicide in what may have been one last act of spite against his neighbors and police.

As homeowners nervously hid indoors, officers armed with high-powered rifles and shoot-to-kill orders fanned out through fields and woods to hunt down 56 animals that had been turned loose from the Muskingum County Animal Farm by owner Terry Thompson before he shot himself to death Tuesday.

After an all-night hunt that extended into Wednesday afternoon, 48 animals were killed. Six others — three leopards, a grizzly bear and two monkeys — were captured and taken to the Columbus Zoo. A wolf was later found dead, leaving a monkey as the only animal still on the loose.

Those destroyed included six black bears, two grizzlies, a baboon and three mountain lions. Dead animals were being buried on Thompson's farm, officials said.

"It's like Noah's Ark wrecking right here in Zanesville, Ohio," lamented Jack Hanna, TV personality and former director of the Columbus Zoo.

Hanna defended the sheriff's decision to kill the animals but said the deaths of the Bengal tigers were especially tragic. There are only about 1,400 of the endangered cats left in the world, he said.

Archaeologists Find Viking Burial Site in Scotland

LONDON (AP) • Archaeologists said Tuesday they have discovered the remains of a Viking chief buried with his boat, ax, sword and spear on a remote Scottish peninsula — one of the most significant Norse finds ever uncovered in Britain.

The 16-foot-long grave is the first intact site of its kind to have been discovered on mainland Britain and is believed to be more than 1,000 years old. Much of the wooden boat and the Viking bones have rotted away, but scraps of wood and hundreds of metal rivets that held the vessel together remain.

The archeologists also unearthed a shield boss — a circular piece of metal attached to the middle of a shield — and a bronze ring-pin buried with the Viking.

They also found a knife, a whetstone to sharpen tools, and Viking pottery on the site on the Ardnamurchan peninsula on Scotland's west coast.

The boat and its contents were discovered by a team of archeologists from Manchester and Leicester universities working with the cultural heritage organization Archaeology Scotland and consultants CFA Archaeology.

Hannah Cobb, co-director of the project, said the discovery had exceeded expectations.

"A Viking boat burial is an incredible discovery, but in addition to that the artifacts and preservation make this one of the most important Norse graves ever excavated in Britain," she said.

The team of archeologists had been digging on the Ardnamurchan peninsula to learn more about social change in the area.

Medicare Costs to Reduce Social Security Increase

BY STEPHEN OHLEMACHER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • That didn't last long. About 55 million Social Security recipients will get their first increase in benefits next year since 2009 — a 3.6 percent raise. But higher Medicare premiums could erase part of it.

For some, higher Medicare Part B premiums could wipe out as much as a fourth of their raise from Social Security, according to projections by the trustees who oversee the programs.

Medicare is expected to announce 2012 Part B premiums as early as next week. The premiums, which cover doctor visits, are deducted automatically from monthly Social Security payments.

The Social Security Administration announced the pay increase Wednesday, offering a measure of comfort to millions of retirees and disabled people, many who have seen their retirement accounts dwindle, home values drop and out-of-pocket medical costs rise in the years since their last raise.

Starting in January, 55 million Social Security recipients will get increases averaging $39 a month, or just over $467 for the year. In December, more than 8 million people who receive Supplemental Security Income, the disability program for the poor, will get increases averaging $18 a month, or about $216 for the year.

Greece: Youths Riot as Austerity Steps Get 1st Approval

BY ELENA BECATOROS
Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece • Hundreds of youths smashed and looted stores in central Athens and clashed with riot police during a massive anti-government rally against painful new austerity measures that won initial parliamentary approval in a vote Wednesday night.

The rioting came on the first day of a 48-hour nationwide general strike that brought services in much of Greece to a standstill, grounding flights for hours, leaving ferries tied up in port and shutting down customs offices, stores and banks.

More than 100,000 people took to the streets of the Greek capital to demonstrate against the austerity bill, which includes new tax hikes, further pension and salary cuts, the suspension on reduced pay of 30,000 public servants and the suspension of collective labor contracts.

Creditors have demanded the measures before they give Greece more funds from a $152.11 billion package of bailout loans from other eurozone countries and the International Monetary Fund. Greece says it will run out of money in mid-November without the $11 billion installment.

But Greek citizens said they already are reeling from more than one-and-a-half years of austerity measures.

“We just can’t take it any more. There is desperation, anger and bitterness,” said Nikos Anastasopoulos, head of a workers’ union for an Athens municipality, as he joined the demonstration early in the day.

The bill won initial approval in the 300-member Parliament late Wednesday, with 154 deputies voting in favor on principle and 141 against. A second vote, on the bill’s articles, is due Thursday. Only after that procedure will the bill have passed.

A communist party-backed union has vowed to encircle Parliament Thursday in an attempt to prevent deputies from entering the building for the procedure.

The new measures have even prompted some lawmakers from the governing Socialists to threaten not vote for at least some of the articles in the bill. But Finance Minister Evangelos Venizelos insisted there was no choice but to accept the hardship.

“We have to explain to all these indignant people who see their lives changing that what the country is experiencing is not the worst stage of the crisis,” he said in Parliament.

“It is an anguished and necessary effort to avoid the ultimate, deepest and harshest level of the crisis. The difference between a difficult situation and a catastrophe is immense.”

Hours before Wednesday’s vote, one of Athens’ largest demonstrations in years degenerated into violence as masked and hooded youths pelted riot police outside Parliament with gasoline bombs and chunks of marble smashed from buildings, metro stops and sidewalks.

Animals

and widely spaced homes 55 miles east of Columbus.

Parents were warned to keep children and pets indoors. And flashing signs along highways told motorists, “Caution exotic animals” and “Stay in vehicle.”

Officers were ordered to kill the animals instead of trying to bring them down with tranquilizers for fear that those hit with darts would escape in the darkness before they dropped and would later regain consciousness.

“These animals were on the move, they were showing aggressive behavior,” Sheriff Matt Lutz said. “Once the nightfall hit, our biggest concern was having these animals roaming.”

The sheriff would not speculate why Thompson killed himself and why he left open the cages and fences at his 73-acre preserve, dooming the animals he seemed to love so much.

Thompson, 62, had had repeated run-ins with the law and his neighbors. Lutz said that the sheriff’s office had received numerous complaints since 2004 about animals escaping onto neighbors’ property. The sheriff’s office also said that Thompson had been charged over the years with animal cruelty, animal neglect and allowing animals to roam.

He had gotten out of federal prison just last month after serving a year for possessing unregistered guns.

John Ellenberger, a neighbor, speculated that Thompson freed the animals to get back at neighbors and police. “Nobody much cared for him,” Ellenberger said.

Angie McElfresh, who lives in an apartment near the farm and hunkered down with her family in fear, said “it could have been an ‘f-you’ to everybody around him.”

Thompson had rescued some of the animals at his preserve and purchased many others, said Columbus Zoo spokeswoman Patty Peters.

It was not immediately clear how Thompson managed to support the preserve, since it was not open to the public. But Thompson had appeared on the “Rachael Ray Show” in 2008 as an animal handler for a zoologist guest, said show spokeswoman Lauren Nowell.

The sheriff’s office started getting calls Tuesday evening that wild animals were loose just west of Zanesville. Deputies went to the animal preserve and found Thompson dead and all the cages open. Several aggressive animals were near his body and had to be shot, the sheriff said.

Sheriff’s Deputy Jonathan Merry was among the first to respond Tuesday. He said he shot a number of animals, including a gray wolf and a black bear. He said the bear charged him and he fired his pistol, killing it with one shot when it was about 7 feet away.

“All these animals have the ability to take a human out in the length of a second,” said Merry, who called himself an animal lover but said he knew he was protecting the community.

“What a tragedy,” said Barb Wolfe, a veterinarian with The Wilds, a nearby zoo-sponsored wild animal preserve. She said she managed to hit a tiger with a tranquilizer dart, but the animal charged toward her and then turned and began to flee before the drug could take effect, and deputies shot the big cat.

get a raise from the cost-of-living adjustment, or COLA.

Advocates for seniors say the raise is welcome and overdue.

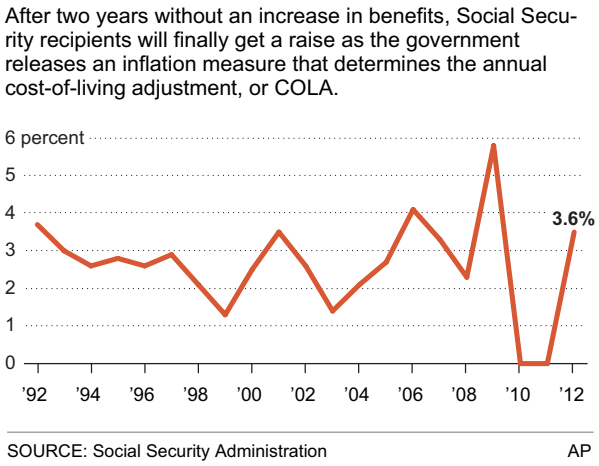

“It may be cold comfort, however, once they see just how high next year’s Medicare premiums will go,” said Max Richtman, president and CEO of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare.

The annual cost-of-living adjustment is tied to an inflation measure released Wednesday. The measure, which was adopted in the 1970s, produced no COLA in 2010 or 2011 because inflation was too low. Those were the first two years without a COLA since automatic increases were enacted in 1975.

Monthly Social Security payments average $1,082, or about $13,000 a year.

Medicare Part B premiums must be set each year to cover 25 percent of program costs. By law, they have been frozen at 2009 levels for about 75 percent of beneficiaries because there has been no increase in Social Security payments.

Social Security raise next year

That means the entire premium hike has been borne by the remaining 25 percent, which includes new enrollees, high-income families and low-income beneficiaries who have their premiums paid by Medicaid, the federal-state health care program for the poor.

The 2009 premium levels are $96.40 a month. Most of those who enrolled in the program in 2010 pay $110.50 a month and most of those who enrolled in 2011 pay $115.40.

In May, the Medicare trustees said they expected the Part B premium to be $106.60 a month in 2012, a figure that could change when the actual premium is set. At that rate, about a quarter of Medicare beneficiaries would see their premiums go down. The rest would pay $10.20 more each month, erasing about a fourth of Social Security COLA for the average recipient.

An Obama administration official suggested the Part B premium could be lower than the projection, but did not reveal the amount.

Observers Split Over Romney's Message With 'Shoulder Touch'

BY ROBIN ABCARIAN
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • If the Shoulder Touch on the Strip had occurred in a Las Vegas bar, it might have had a different, perhaps bloodier, outcome.

But while Mitt Romney's reach-and-grab of Rick Perry sparked no fisticuffs, it served as a visual metaphor for an unusually feisty Republican presidential debate.

It also had observers split Wednesday over what former Massachusetts Gov. Romney, whose wingspan is impressive, was really trying to communicate — both to his Texas rival and to the 5.5 million viewers who watched the CNN debate.

About 42 minutes into Tuesday's debate at the Venetian in Las Vegas, in the midst of a heated exchange, Romney placed his hand on Texas Gov. Perry's shoulder, seemingly trying to calm him down. Or at least stop him from interrupting.

It was an incursion into a political rival's personal space — a move lasting a long couple of seconds that some observers thought dripped with condescension and intimidation, and others saw as benign.

The boundary violation is not unprecedented. Last month, in a gesture of consolation, Perry patted Romney on the back after debate moderator Wolf Blitzer asked Romney to tell Perry he deserved credit for the high job creation rate in Texas.

But Romney's gesture was different. For some, it recalled the decisive moment in September 2000 when Republican U.S. Senate candidate Rick Lazio tried to intimidate rival Hillary Rodham Clinton in a debate by shoving a campaign pledge at her and demanding she sign it, or the moment the following month when then-Vice President Al Gore walked over to Texas Gov. George W. Bush's podium and Bush cut him down with a curt nod.

Matt Towery, an Atlanta-based nonpartisan pollster and onetime debate champion, thought Romney's gesture amounted to physical intimidation, intended to put an overly aggressive rival in his place.

"Perry came across as being too rough," said Towery, who has seen opponents shove each other, rip paper out of each other's hands and stick fingers in faces. But he still thought Romney erred.

"If any of my students had done that, I would have taken them to the woodshed," he said.

Others, like Stanley Renshon, a prolific author of books on politics and psychology, thought Romney's gesture was avuncular. "It's Romney, the elder statesman, putting his hand on a hothead's shoulder and saying, 'Son, calm down,'" Renshon said.

It's hard to know whether the gesture was rehearsed or spontaneous. It's possible that the cast members of the country's most consequential reality show — the Real Candidates of the GOP — are simply getting tired. With the first contest, in Iowa, only 76 days away, they could also be feeling a bit desperate.

Most seem to be looking for a game-changer.

Unexpected front-runner Herman Cain, a former business executive, touts his "9-9-9" tax plan. Former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum has begun chiding his rivals for failing to talk about family values. Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich has heightened his criticism of politicians as "stupid." Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann is suddenly appealing to "moms all across America." And former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman Jr. boycotted the debate, holding a town hall meeting in New Hampshire instead. His tweeting daughters chided Perry and Romney: "This is what happens when the adult is no longer in the room!"

Police Comb Kansas City Home of Missing Baby

BY MARIA SUDEKUM FISHER
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • One of the most aggressive police searches yet of the home where a Kansas City infant went missing more than two weeks ago drew officers Wednesday armed with shovels, rakes and other tools who hauled off bags that appeared to be full of potential evidence.

Police refused to say what they found inside or outside the home belonging to Jeremy Irwin and Deborah Bradley, who say an intruder snatched their baby daughter, Lisa, from her crib in the middle of the night as the mother and two other boys slept.

From shortly after sunrise through late afternoon, FBI agents and police officers joined in the search that began after a judge issued a warrant that prevented the parents from returning to the house while it was under way.

Officers headed to the back of the home with shovels, rakes and a ladder and could be seen digging behind a shed in the yard.

Out front, investigators left the house carrying brown paper bags and clear plastic bags and took them to vehicles parked outside.

Police also brought in a bomb and arson truck to assist the search, though spokesman Capt. Steve Young said there were no indications of explosives in the house. Some bomb detection devices use X-ray technology to scan solid objects to reveal items concealed within. An AP reporter saw investigators carrying at least a dozen thin, black rectangular sheets away from the home during the afternoon.

Lisa Irwin was 10 months old on Oct. 4 when her parents reported her missing.

GOP Primary Contest Is Getting Nasty, Personal

BY KASIE HUNT and PHILIP ELLIOTT
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • Talk about nasty.

The bitter, face-to-face sniping at this week's Republican debate was just a prelude to the coming weeks as Mitt Romney's rivals seek to tear him down before the leadoff Iowa caucuses.

Increasingly on the defensive, Romney is being hammered on old issues — like an accusation of hiring illegal immigrants to work on his yard — and is creating new openings for everyone from Rick Perry to President Barack Obama.

"You won't hear a lot of shape-shifting nuance from me," Perry told Republicans gathered in Las Vegas on Wednesday, hitting Romney anew the day after the two sparred onstage during a debate. "I'm going to give the American people a huge, big old helping of unbridled truth."

The target was Romney, who over the years has reversed his positions on a series of issues that conservatives champion. And the sharper, more personal tone seems sure to shape the campaign in the next month as Perry looks to undercut the former Massachusetts governor's standing at the head of the pack.

Obama's team, too, wasted little time in going after Romney in personal terms.

"The core principle driving Mitt Romney? Getting elected," Obama campaign manager Jim Messina told reporters in a conference call.

Appearing unruffled at the attacks, Romney kept his focus on Obama and the economy on Wednesday, saying: "He should be less concerned about keeping his own job and spend more time helping the millions who are unemployed."

But more criticism against Romney is certain to come from fellow Republicans as the race for the GOP nomination enters a new phase and the 2012 general election inches closer.

For now, Romney tops state surveys and national polls, including the latest Associated Press-GfK survey, in the GOP campaign. Perry's and Romney's other rivals have mere weeks to change that dynamic before the Iowa caucuses on Jan. 3.

After five debates since Labor Day, the candidates won't meet again in that setting until mid-November. So they'll be mixing it up mostly from afar — on the campaign trail, on the Internet and, soon, in television advertising by the candidates themselves as well as by Super PACs that are working on their behalf and can spend as much money as they raise.

The candidates will cross paths at a dinner in Iowa this weekend where they will try to court cultural conservatives who haven't yet rallied behind a single contender. It's a prime setting for candidates like Perry, Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann, businessman Herman Cain and others looking to emerge as the alternative to Romney. Iowa conservatives have long viewed Romney skeptically for his reversals on abortion rights and gay rights, and they have viewed his Mormon faith warily.

Perry also will give an economic speech on Tuesday in South Carolina. Romney contends his business background makes him the strongest Republican in the field able to take on Obama on the economy, and Perry needs to counter that. The Texan will point to his state's job growth during his tenure as governor, and, in a bid to win over fiscal conservatives, he plans to call for tax changes that would apply the same rate to all citizens, regardless of income level.

Previewing the proposal, Perry said Wednesday that jumpstarting the economy "starts with scrapping the 3 million words of the current tax code and starting over with something much simpler: a flat tax. I want to make the tax code so simple that even Timothy Geithner can file his taxes on time." It was a reference to Obama's Treasury secretary.

Behind the scenes, the candidates with the most money — Perry and Romney — and their allied groups are gearing up for the inevitable TV ad war. Each campaign is sitting on roughly $15 million and counting, and there are less than 75 days before the Iowa caucuses.

There's no doubt that the personal attacks that played out on stage Tuesday — and that had been simmering behind the scenes for weeks between the Romney and Perry camps — will now continue out in the open.

As GOP strategist Alex Castellanos said in a Twitter message after the most acrimonious debate of the year: "All the GOP candidates have lost their virginity now. Everybody attacks everybody from now on."

After the debate and again on Wednesday, the candidates' respective aides made that clear.

Romney adviser Ron Kaufman called Perry "a petulant little boy" and said that Romney "put him in his place."

FDA Blames Dirty Equipment for Listeria Outbreak

BY MARY CLARE
JALONICK

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Pools of water on the floor and old, hard-to-clean equipment at a Colorado farm's cantaloupe-packing facility were probably to blame for the deadliest outbreak of foodborne illness in 25 years, the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday.

Government investigators found positive samples of listeria bacteria on equipment in the Jensen Farms packing facility and on fruit that had been held there.

In a six-page assessment of the conditions at the farm based on investigators' visits in September, the FDA said Jensen Farms had recently purchased used equipment that was corroded, dirty and hard to clean. The packing facility floors were also constructed so they were hard to clean, so pools of water potentially harboring the bacteria formed close to the packing equipment.

The dirty equipment — purchased in July, the same month the outbreak started — was previously used to wash and dry potatoes, the agency said, and the listeria "could have been introduced as a result of past use of the equipment," according to the report.

FDA officials said that they are not concerned about similar listeria contamination in the potatoes that were previously processed on the equipment because those vegetables are rarely eaten raw. Cooking can kill the bacteria.

A warning letter from the agency to Jensen Farms said that a third of 39 swabs taken throughout the facility tested positive for listeria.

"This significant percentage of swabs that tested positive for outbreak strains of (listeria) demonstrates widespread contamination throughout your facility and indicates poor sanitary practices in the facility," the letter said.

Though the agency said the contamination likely happened in the packing house, the way the cantaloupes were cooled after being picked may have exacerbated the listeria growth. The farm did not use a process called "pre-cooling" that is designed to remove some condensation, thus creating moist conditions on the cantaloupe rind that are ideal for listeria bacteria growth. Listeria grows in cool environments, unlike most pathogens.

FDA said that samples of cantaloupes in Jensen Farms' fields were negative for listeria, but bacteria coming off the field may have initially introduced the pathogen into the open-air packing house, where it then spread. Listeria contamination often comes from animal feces or decaying vegetation.

Another possible source of contamination was a truck that frequently hauled cantaloupe to a cattle operation and was parked near the packing house. Contamination could have come from the cattle operation and then tracked into the house by people or equipment, the report said.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says 123 people have been sickened in the outbreak, including the 25 who died. It is the deadliest known outbreak of foodborne illness in the U.S. since an outbreak of listeria in Mexican-style cheese in 1985.

DEMS: WEST BECOMING MORE URBAN, DIVERSE

BY CRISTINA SILVA
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • Western states are becoming more urban and diverse, with an influx of Hispanic, Asian and young voters who tend to vote against Republican candidates, according to political strategists who spoke Monday at a Democratic conference.

"The trend is worrisome if you are a Republican," Robert Lang, a sociology professor at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, said during the event.

The battle to win the West is being planned in Las Vegas this week, with Republican and Democratic political consultants holding dueling strategy meetings.

On Sunday and Monday, roughly 400 Democratic leaders from across the West attended the Project New West conference in downtown Las Vegas.

Metropolitan areas are becoming the dominant residential centers in the once rural West, with Phoenix and Las Vegas making up 65 and 72 percent of the Arizona and Nevada populations, respectively, said Lang, co-director of the Brookings Mountain West think tank.

That could hamper the GOP because city dwellers tend to be more diverse and liberal than their rural counterparts, a trend that favors Democrats, Lang said.

Census data shows Nevada was the fastest-growing state in the nation during the past decade, followed by Arizona and Utah.

Booming Hispanic neighborhoods are also transforming western states, but some candidates don't understand how to reach those voters, said Maria Echaveste, a former adviser to President Bill Clinton. Running campaign ads on Spanish-language TV can seem inclusive, but the majority of Hispanics speak English, not Spanish, said Echaveste.

Hispanics accounted for nearly 50 percent or more of the population gains among children under 18 in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming from 2000 to 2010, according to Census data. In Arizona, Hispanics accounted for roughly half of the state's overall population increase since 2000.

The explosion of Hispanic voters, who tend to lean Democratic, doesn't mean the GOP cannot win elections in the West. Unaffiliated voters make up more than a third of the electorate in Arizona and Colorado and 19 percent in New Mexico, according to data compiled by those states.

Those independent voters ensure that the West will remain a competitive battleground, said Jill Hanauer, president of Project New West, a Denver-based research group organizing western Democrats.

"Neither party can take this region for granted," Hanauer said. "People make up their mind independently, not just based on party labels. It's about who is getting things done now?"

Fla. Store Clerk Shoots, Kills Robber

BY MITCH STACY
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. • A convenience store manager grabbed a gun from under the counter and shot a would-be robber in the knee before the man scooped up the clerk's infant daughter and tried to flee, sheriff's deputies said Wednesday.

Daniel Ramont Hernandez, 32, died at hospital after the Tuesday afternoon shooting at Del's 24-Hour Food Store in Naples, according to the Collier County Sheriff's Office. The child wasn't hurt.

Hernandez came in store acting erratically, causing 22-year-old manager Elizabeth Easterly to be worried for her safety, according to the sheriff's office. When Hernandez came around to her side of the counter, she grabbed a gun and shot him once in the leg.

When she ran outside to alert a school crossing guard, Hernandez grabbed the stroller with Easterly's child and carried it toward the door. He put the stroller down, ran outside and was tackled by another man who was coming to work, the report said.

The shooting is still under investigation.

Employees Rank J-U-B Among Top Places to Work

A nationwide survey of engineering employees ranks J-U-B Engineers among the top firms to work for.

The CE News survey ranked J-U-B second among firms with 300 or more employees and 12th overall. The survey asked employees to rate a variety of aspects of their firm's culture.

"We work together, we play together, and we succeed together," J-U-B President Lee E. Cammack said in a written release. "Our employees take pride and care in their work — that results in great teamwork and that has sustained us, even in a challenging economic climate."

J-U-B employs more than 325 people in 14 offices, including one in Twin Falls. It provides a range of engineering, mapping, surveying and planning services.

CITIGROUP PAYING $285M TO SETTLE SEC FRAUD CHARGES

BY MARCY GORDON AND DANIEL WAGNER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Citigroup has agreed to pay $285 million to settle civil fraud charges that it misled buyers of a complex mortgage investment just as the housing market was starting to collapse.

The Securities and Exchange Commission said Wednesday that the big Wall Street bank bet against the investment in 2007 and made $160 million in fees and profits. Investors lost millions. Citigroup neither admitted nor denied the SEC's allegations in the settlement.

"We are pleased to put this matter behind us and are focused on contributing to the economic recovery, serving our clients and growing responsibly," Citigroup said in a statement.

The penalty is the biggest involving a Wall Street firm accused of misleading investors before the financial crisis since Goldman Sachs & Co. paid $550 million to settle similar charges last year. JPMorgan Chase & Co. resolved similar charges in June and paid $153.6 million.

All the cases have involved complex investments called collateralized debt obligations. Those are securities that are backed by pools of other assets, such as mortgages.

Citigroup's payment includes the fees and profit it earned, plus $30 million in interest and a $95 million penalty. The money will be returned to the investors, the SEC said.

Idaho Sugar Beet Growers Back U.S. Trade Policy

While candy producers decry U.S. sugar tariffs in the face of high prices, growers defend a program that has roots in the nation's early years.

BY CINDY SNYDER

For the Times-News

High domestic sugar prices have soured confectioners' profit outlooks heading into the busy Halloween-to-Easter candy sales period, but sugar growers argue that U.S. import quotas on the commodity are working.

Production woes, both foreign and domestic, have depleted worldwide sugar stocks to the lowest level in 37 years and pushed sugar prices up as a result. While that's expected to cut into how much candy makers earn for each Peep and candy cane produced, sugar growers point to federal data that shows candy production has climbed 9 percent since 2004.

According to the U.S. Economic Research Service, the nation's wholesale refined beet sugar price was 57 cents per pound in the third quarter, virtually equal to last year's price at the same time but up nearly 20 cents compared to 2009.

Mark Duffin, executive director of the Idaho Sugarbeet Growers Association, said critics of U.S. sugar import tariffs would like to see the policy bagged so they could bring in cheaper foreign sugar. The world sugar futures contract is trading at about 27 cents per pound, compared to 38 cents per pound for the domestic futures contract.

National Confectioners Association spokeswoman Susan Smith told Bloomberg News that "supplies have been tight" for her association's members, which include Kraft Foods and Hershey Co.

"The price that our companies are paying is higher than it would be on the world market," she said.

While several bills introduced in Congress would eliminate the quotas, Duffin said that one of the first acts of the Continental Congress was to impose a sugar tariff.

"We have been dealing with a sugar policy ever since," he said.

Sugar from either cane or beets is produced in 130 countries. Current policy requires the U.S. to import 1.4 million metric tons of sugar annually from 48 different countries, most of them developing nations.

Domestic production must equal 85 percent of the U.S. market share, although USDA can adjust the quota to allow more imported sugar if U.S. production is lacking.

USDA raised the quota twice in the last marketing year because of frost damage to the Florida cane crop and concerns about the late planted beet crop in North Dakota and Minnesota.

"There is not a free market in sugar," Duffin said. "We are moving that way and we support that move, but in order to keep our domestic industry alive and well we need the sugar program."

Growers argue that even with current prices, there are only about 2 cents worth of sugar in a candy bar that sells for $1, and 40 cents of sugar in a 12-pack of Pepsi Throwback, sweetened with sugar produced by Amalgamated Sugar Co.

American Airlines parent reports loss in third quarter • AMR Corp., parent of the nation's third-largest airline, reported that revenue per available seat mile rose 8.1 percent for the quarter. But airline executives said the higher revenues were eclipsed by a $653 million, or 41 percent, increase in fuel costs from the same period last year — the last time the company reported a profit.

AMR's stock price dropped 21 cents, or 7.45 percent, on Wednesday to $2.61. But that was an improvement from Oct. 3, when bankruptcy speculation sent the stock price plummeting 98 cents to $1.98.

Free Necklaces and Shipping for Holiday Shoppers?

BY ANNE D'INNOCENZIO

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Retailers are so desperate this holiday season that they're willing to lose money to get you to spend yours.

Take online jeweler Stauer. It's offering a $249 amethyst necklace for free — provided customers pay the $24.95 it costs to ship it. Stauer will lose money on the deal, but it hopes to reel in new customers who will buy other jewelry.

"In this economy, you have to be outrageous in your offers," said Michael Bisceglia, the president of Stauer who found that more than a third of customers who took advantage of a similar deal on a $179 pearl necklace in 2009 bought additional items. "You have to shake up the world a bit."

Not every retailer will go as far as giving away merchandise during the holidays, but many will offer profit-busting incentives. It's a critical time of year for merchants, which can make up to 40 percent of their annual revenue in November and December. And they're so worried that Americans are spooked by the weak economy that they're willing to sacrifice profit for sales.

Nordstrom, for instance, is one of the first retailers to offer free shipping on most orders, no matter how small, even though it could wind up paying $3 to ship a $7 pair of socks. Furniture chain Raymour & Flanigan is allowing customers to go four years without paying interest on their purchases — the longest period it has ever offered — even though it will have to help cover a chunk of those charges itself. And Sears is not only offering to match the cheapest prices customers find online, but the department store chain is giving them an additional 10 percent off the difference.

"You may be making a $1 profit instead of a $3 profit," Fiona Dias, chief strategy officer of members-only shopping service ShopRunner.com, said about retailers. "But you're not losing a sale."

Retailers are nervous about holiday sales because many Americans are cutting back on spending as they grow increasingly concerned about the stubbornly high unemployment rate, stock market turmoil and an overall fragile U.S. economy. In fact, a recent Gallup poll found that eight of 10 Americans think the country is in a second recession.

"Retailers are now scared because some believe they're in a second recession," said C. Britt Beemer, chairman of America's Research Group. "And the second recession is hitting them in the biggest shopping season of the year."

Despite the challenging environment, revenue in November and December is expected to be up about 3 percent. The increase — below last year's 5.2 percent spike — is above the 2.6 percent average gain over the last 10 years.

But Americans are expected to do more online comparison shopping and spend less time in stores. ShopperTrak, a Chicago research firm that tracks how many customers come in at more than 25,000 stores, expects foot traffic to drop 2.2 percent during the holiday season compared with a year ago. So far this year, consumers have gone to an average of three stores during a mall trip, down from an average of five stores in 2006.

To get people to spend more money once they're in stores, retailers are offering incentives that could shrink their profits.

ICE Officer Arrested in Pot Smuggling

BY AMANDA LEE MYERS
Associated Press

PHOENIX • A deportation officer with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement led Arizona state police and federal agents on a high-speed desert chase in his government vehicle, throwing bundles of marijuana out of the window as he fled, the Department of Public Safety said Wednesday.

The deportation officer, identified as Jason Alistair Lowery, 34, had been under surveillance for more than month after a known smuggler who had been arrested gave authorities a tip about the officer in an effort to get lenient treatment, Department of Public Safety Officer Carrick Cook told The Associated Press.

DPS and federal agents tried to pull Lowery over Tuesday after he picked up a load of marijuana in the desert with his unmarked ICE pickup truck, Cook said. The officer fled, leading agents on a 45-minute chase at speeds of up to 110 mph as he threw 10 of the 14 bundles of pot that he had in the truck out of the window, he said.

"He got pretty desperate," Cook said.

The chase began in the Vekol Valley about 45 miles south of Phoenix and ended just south of Sacaton, about 20 miles as the crow flies northwest from where the chase began. It ended when Lowery's truck rolled over and he gave himself up.

Lowery, who lives in the Phoenix suburb of Chandler, appeared in federal court in downtown Phoenix on Wednesday but did not address the court. He sat quietly awaiting the hearing and at one point looked up at the ceiling and repeatedly shook his head.

Prosecutor John Lopez argued that Lowery should be detained as his court case proceeds, saying that he poses a risk to the community and could flee the state. He also said that Lowery had a non-government-issued gun on him when he was arrested.

Federal Magistrate Michelle Burns set a hearing in the matter for Tuesday.

2 MORE TEENS UNDER PROTECTION IN PENNSYLVANIA BASEMENT CASE

BY MARYCLAIRE DALE and PATRICK WALTERS
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA • Police took two more children into protective custody Wednesday, another step in an intense investigation of four people accused of locking disabled adults in a squalid basement as part of a Social Security fraud scheme.

The case could be among the first of its kind prosecuted as a federal hate crime, according to a law-enforcement official who was not authorized to discuss the case publicly and spoke to The AP on condition of anonymity.

The 2009 Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act is named for two victims of notorious hate-based killings and expands earlier federal hate crimes law to include sexual orientation or disability, among other things.

The law has been used sparingly since its passage. The first to go to trial was the case of Frankie Mayberry, of Green Forest, Ark., who was convicted in May of attacking a car last year with five Hispanic men inside it.

Meanwhile, police in Virginia confirmed they investigated the 2008 death of a woman living with Linda Ann Weston, who's accused of being the ringleader in the Philadelphia basement case and who cleared out of the Norfolk home hours after calling police about the death.

A Virginia death certificate said 39-year-old Maxine Lee died of meningitis but also suffered from a wasting disease.

In Philadelphia, police told reporters that a malnourished teenage niece living with Weston had marks suggesting she was burned with a hot spoon and had pellet gun wounds.

"I've never seen anything like this before in a living person. It is just remarkable that she is alive," police Commissioner Charles Ramsey said of Beatrice Weston. "There is no penalty, and I repeat, no penalty that is too harsh for the people who did this."

Hike a mile and a half to see the South Hills’ best-kept secret: the surprisingly tall Phantom Falls.

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

OAKLEY • The brush-covered hills southwest of Oakley hide a little-known spot of startling beauty. Phantom Falls, the highest waterfall in the South Hills, is still lovely months after spring’s spectacular flows become a memory. Hikers arrive suddenly in a rugged amphitheater where Fall Creek plunges over the top, into an airy free fall and onto a rock bed something like 65 feet below. Moisture-loving plants cling to the rocks, and breezes shift the falls’ base and its lingering mist. It’s no thundering spectacle of Snake River proportions, but it’s a mountain stream at its best. To see it, you’ll have to leave your ATV and motor-cycle behind. The Sawtooth National Forest in 2008 designated the Phantom Falls trail as one of the few nonmotorized trails in the South Hills, reserving it for hikers, horseback riders and mountain bikers. The result is a particularly serene trail. “I don’t think it gets a lot of use,” Minidoka District ranger Scott Nannenga said. “It is kind of tucked in there out of the way.” All the better for that thrill of the unexpected. “It was such a nice, easy trail to walk. And then all of a sudden to have that big water there was just amazing,” said Lisa Mothershead of Kimberly, who visited the falls in May a few years ago while arrowleaf balsamroot was blooming. Please see FALLS, O2

Phantom Falls Trail

The trail basics: From the trailhead to Phantom Falls, you’ll hike 1 1/2 miles on a narrow dirt track that climbs gently but steadily. Nonmotorized use only. U.S. Forest Service maintains the trail. Who will love it: While this trail won’t satisfy a hiker who wants a limit-pushing workout, it’s great for anyone who relishes exploring the southern Idaho landscape. “That’s one of the neat places that you can find, if you look for it,” said John Fisher of Twin Falls. “It’s not a real strenuous hike, but it’s worth the trip just to see.” Find the trailhead: Drive a mile west out of Oakley, then take Goose Creek Road south. Skirt the north side of Goose Creek Reservoir, and the road will become Trapper Creek Road (forest road 533). About 20 miles after leaving Oakley, you’ll arrive at a fork. Turn left and look for the Phantom Falls Trail sign. Two notes of caution: The evidence of cows is plentiful along this trail, so watch your step. And when you reach the falls, stay out of the stinging nettle near its base. See it now: After early November, access will be questionable, district ranger Scott Nannenga said. So do the hike now — before winter weather complicates dirt-road travel. This is hunting season in the South Hills, so wear a bright color. See it later: In about early May, the water and vapor of Phantom Falls form a huge ice sculpture at the base of the falls, perhaps 20-30 feet across and just as tall, Nannenga said. “And that’s even more impressive than the falls itself.”

Mark Hutchins, the author’s husband, looks for a geocache near the base of Phantom Falls in early October. Lacking both the cache coordinates and a GPS unit that day, he was unsuccessful.

The event was part of the second annual Doug Bridges Memorial Hunts, which Buhl resident Monte Bruhn started in 2010 as a way to give back to wounded warriors. I Want Your Ideas Before the Year’s Over

I drove my family to the South Hills recently and noticed something I didn’t see the last time I was there: leaves the color of ember. I kept asking myself: Where did the summer go? Later, I looked at the newspaper’s archives and recalled the stories I’ve written this year: a hike at Balanced Rock, a rock-crawling event, pond fishing, visiting waterfalls, archery ... and many others. It’s interesting when my memories — and sometimes my very existence — seem marked by the datelines and bylines of newspaper stories. That’s how I’ve been feeling lately, ever since I made that trip to the hills. It really hit me that day: The year’s almost over. A couple more months, say goodbye to 2011.

Which brings me to the real topic of this week’s column: How do I want to finish out the year, story-wise? Here’s where I’d like your help. If there’s an outdoors story that you haven’t seen in the paper, something you suggest I look into, please let me know. This is your section as much as it is mine. There are still a couple more months left in the year — enough time for me to get some of your ideas into the paper. Email me at aweeks@magicvalley.com. And if you haven’t yet made it to the hills to see the autumn leaves, you’d better hurry. Or you might be too late.

Newest Warren Miller Film Features Footage of Sun Valley Skier

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • Lynsey Dyer felt a chill come over her as 10 camouflaged men driving by in an armored vehicle suddenly slammed on their brakes and began climbing out of the roof of the vehicle, guns in hand.

Sure she was in trouble, she began putting her camera away. “Turned out, they just wanted a picture,” Dyer said. That moment may have been a little more than the 1999 Wood River High School graduate bargained. Please see SKIER, O2 for when she and fellow skier Lel Tone agreed to take part in the latest Warren Miller winter film. But it was also part of the reason she was in India, skiing in the Kashmir region of northwestern India.

"I had an opportunity to go there four years ago and people said it was too dangerous for a woman. So I got fired up," she said. "Americans are taught to be afraid of the Kashmir people. But they were very sweet and excited to have us," said Dyer, who at 27 has been Power Magazine's Female Skier of the Year and won every big mountain competition she's entered.

Dyer will be in Sun Valley to introduce Warren Miller's 62nd winter film, "...Like There's No Tomorrow," when it shows Oct. 28-29 at Sun Valley Opera House.

Warren Miller's films, which have long been edited by Ketchum filmmaker Kim Schneider, have long gotten skiers and snowboarders salivating for the coming snow, said Rod Tatsuno, a Sun Valley ski instructor whose son Chris has emceed the films for the past few years.

"They're awesome," said Ed Hinkle, manager of Claude Sports in Twin Falls. "I like the extreme skiing, the scenery. They make you feel like you're where the skiers are and actually experiencing the terrain and the snow that they're skiing."

This year's film transports viewers to Tuckerman Ravine in New Hampshire, where Chris Davenport uses ice picks to climb Mount Washington so he can ski a steep, icy pitch scoured by hurricane-force winds. It shows Andy Mahre and Tyler Cecanti poofing their way down towering marshmallow pillows of snow in British Columbia's Monashees.

It sports snow-covered rooftops and jungle gyms transformed into the ultimate jibber paradise, along with Daron Rahlves' Banzai Downhill. It depicts a skier jumping out of a helicopter into a swimming pool in Portillo, Chile. And it features Seth Wescott, Tim Durtschi and Kip Garre — who lost his life last spring in a ski accident — challenging gravity on endless spines of Chugach mountains in Cordova, Alaska.

Dyer said Kashmir's mountains — where she skied across the disputed border of Pakistan and India as she made first descents through steep chutes and couloirs — are comparable to Alaska but so much bigger.

"We realized how high we were when the helicopter pilot put on an oxygen mask," she said.

Dyer said this is her favorite of the five Warren Miller movies she has been in.

"It's always a little nerve-racking to do these movies because you work really hard and hope you get good stuff and then you sit back and wait to see how it came out," she said. "I think this segment is really beautiful. And it's a huge honor to me to be in the opening."

across the hillsides. "I thought it was absolutely beautiful."

The 1 1/2-mile dirt trail climbs beside Fall Creek and its strip of lush growth, but generally stays in the brush on open hillsides. It's a scene of gentle hills with occasional outcroppings of rock. In October, brilliant blue clusters of elderberries hang from their shrubs, and you might spot a herder on horseback on a distant hillside.

Expect to see wildlife tracks, too. The Phantom Falls area is populated by mule deer, coyotes and a lot of turkeys.

"When I've been in there I've seen a lot of sage grouse and ruffed grouse, because there's chokecherry and there's sagebrush and a lot of other forbs that they eat," Nannenga said.

To start this hike, you'll drive about 20 miles from Oakley. You can also reach the Phantom Falls trailhead from Rock Creek Road — if you're armed with a good map of the South Hills' tangle of forest roads.

"There's a lot more forks in the road that way," said John Fisher, a Twin Falls warehouse safety director who learned of the Phantom from a Times-News article about 15 years ago. He first tried to find the trail from Rock Creek Road and failed, then tried again from the Oakley side and found the trailhead and the waterfall.

"It's a lot taller than I thought it would be," Fisher said.

The misty column of water hidden in the sagebrush hills appears out of nowhere, like a phantom should.

SKI Magazine Ranks Resort in Sun Valley

Sun Valley just became more popular.

SKI Magazine's Resort Guide Reader Resort Survey has pushed Sun Valley Resort up to fifth position, four rankings above last winter's ratings, according to information provided by the resort.

In the West's Top Tens, the resort ranked No. 1 for lifts; No. 2 for grooming, service, on-mountain food and character; No. 3 for lodging, dining, off-hill activities; No. 5 for family programs; No. 6 for overall satisfaction; No. 7 for apres ski and nightlife, and No. 10 for scenery.

Readers comments about their experiences at the resort touched on quality of skiing to attention to detail and service.

"A grand destination with outstanding skiing. The last special ski resort," reads SKI's 2012 Resort Guide.

Searching for Game at Wildlife Management Areas

Since my return to Idaho from the wilds of Wyoming, the opening mornings of the pheasant seasons have found my older brother, Bob, and I trudging through the overgrown ditch banks, hedge rows, and shelterbelts of his son-in-law's place outside of Blackfoot.

Mother Nature intervened this year, however, and put the brakes on our budding hunting tradition. The cold, wet spring and early summer weather resulted in poor nesting success and we flushed few birds during our pre-season walkabouts.

That means that this year we primarily will be hunting the savvy roosters that had eluded last year's hunters and this year's foxes, coyotes, owls, feral cats and tractors.

Experience has taught us that these veteran cock birds are best approached when the snow and cold of the November storms concentrate them into a couple of honey holes that we've discovered on the property. This hunt would have to wait until then.

So where should we go hunting on opening day? An coworker of Bob's mentioned that he usually had pretty good success hunting the state's Wildlife Management Areas along the northwest shore of American Falls Reservoir.

We decided to give the WMAs a try. Though we didn't each fill our limits, we were truly impressed by the quality of the habitat, the condition of the parking and access points, and the helpfulness of the game and fish personnel we met.

We spent opening day hunting two of the three plots of land comprising the Sterling WMA east of Aberdeen. Developed with the cooperation of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation and the Bureau of Land Management, the WMAs throughout the state maintain and enhance a wide diversity of wildlife habitats for the benefit of both non-game and

Learn About Mexico Tarpon Fishing at Twin Falls Meeting

If you love to fish, you'll like attending today's Magic Valley Fly Fishers meeting.

Chad Chorney will be the guest speaker at the 7 p.m. meeting at Rock Creek restaurant, 200 Addison Ave. W., Twin Falls. Chorney will give a presentation on fly fishing for tarpon in Mexico. This past May, he traveled to Mexico for his first encounter with the "Silver King" and has vowed that it won't be his last.

At the meeting, Chorney will talk about fly fishing for baby tarpon on the northern Yucatan Peninsula near Campeche, Mexico. The presentation will cover the outfitter used, fly fishing tips and techniques, tackle and flies, and traveling in Mexico.

Chorney previously worked for the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality as a water quality analyst, and recently accepted a position with Trout Unlimited as the new Southern Idaho Project Manager, where he'll focus on stream restoration projects in southern Idaho. He's also an Idaho licensed fishing guide, working for Ketchum On The Fly in the Wood River Valley, guiding clients on Silver Creek, the Big Wood River, the Big Lost River and Salmon rivers.

ducks, geese, coots, cormorants and marsh birds of every description. We even pushed two nice little basket-rack whitetails bucks out of their beds in the shoulder tall sage.

Teal, geese and local mallards swept overhead all morning as we pushed through the cattails. As a waterfowler, I was particularly impressed by the Disabled Accessible waterfowl blind overlooking the ponds at the Johnson segment.

I believe that Idaho Fish and Game officials should be applauded for their efforts toward creating and providing hunting, fishing and wildlife viewing opportunities for its citizens and licensed non-residents through its WMA program. Give them a try this hunting season — you won't be disappointed.

Good hunting!

most precious memories erased. A blast injured his head and back while he was stationed in Iraq during his first tour of duty in 2004. During his third tour, he was sent home because he had not healed properly.

“They said my back will only get worse,” he said. “I have a lot of pain.”

Participating in the hunt is important to him, Gauthier said, because he’ll have the chance to associate with other wounded vets — people who better understand the challenges he faces daily.

The memorial hunts are named after Army Cpl. Doug Bridges, 22, of Buhl who was killed in action Nov. 4, 2006, in Baghdad.

Bruhn did not serve in the military but said the program is a way for him to serve those who have.

“A lot of people approached me for this, that or the other after Doug was killed,” said Doug’s father, Matt Bridges. “But not any of it ever felt right. It wasn’t Doug.”

Then Bruhn pitched the idea to host hunts for wounded veterans in Doug’s name. That was more like his son, Bridges said.

“Doug was the kind of guy that always had a fishing pole in his hands. ... He was the kind of guy that would walk into a room and say, ‘Why all the long faces? Let’s go do something. Let’s go, let’s go, let’s go, let’s go.’”

The memorial hunts take wounded warriors from Idaho and beyond into the mountains to hunt and fish. The program started with five hunters and two outings last year but has grown to include 13 hunters and three planned hunts this year, including an archery hunt that was held in September. The next outing will be in early November. The volunteer program is funded primarily through donations. The group raised $11,000 last year before Bruhn approached the state Legislature and successfully lobbied for wounded veterans to pay resident — or reduced — fees for hunting and fishing in Idaho.

The current group of six wounded vets and three volunteer leaders left Oct. 14 — after a barbecue dinner the night before — to spend seven days in the wilderness near Salmon. Some will hunt, others will fish. All will share camaraderie with fellow veterans and outdoorsmen.

Bobby Ehrig, 38, of San Antonio, Texas, came to Idaho with his 15-year-old son, Tyler, and his dad, Ron Ehrig. It’s the first time all three will hunt together. That, Ehrig said, is more important to him than bagging game.

“I’m trying to build new memories, since I missed out on a lot the first 10 years of my son’s life,” he said.

Ehrig served for 17 years in the Army before he was injured in 2006 in Iraq. A suicide bomber detonated a propane truck that Ehrig had tried to stop, he said. The explosion burned about 40 percent of his body, including his arms.

Because of his injuries, Ehrig doesn’t spend a lot of time outdoors in Texas heat. He was looking forward to Idaho’s cooler mountain temperatures.

“It’ll be good for my arms,” he said.

Seeing the wounded veterans participate in the hunt is a special moment for Pat Branch, veteran director of the hunts.

“It’s a ministry to me,” Branch said. “When people think about going to war they think about what it’ll cost up front. But they don’t think about what it’s going to cost on the back side. ... These guys are all volunteers. I want them to be treated a lot better than they have been.”

Gauthier said he appreciates that. He said he doesn’t feel normal, like something is missing. He often feels out of place, noting that his injuries weren’t the last of his challenges.

Before moving back to Buhl where he was raised, Gauthier lived in Fort Jerome, N.Y., with his wife and kids. But the couple lost a child before the move, he said, and once the family arrived in Idaho his wife left him. He receives a disabilities paycheck but said he uses it to make sure his ex-wife and kids have a place to live. He lives with his parents.

Gauthier often feels alone in the area because he can’t remember people from his past. And it sometimes is difficult for him to get out of bed because of back pain. But the prospect of hunting with other veterans was worth the effort.

“I thought I’d give it a try,” he said. “This means a lot to me, truthfully.”

Whose Elk Is It?

Question: “I was involved in an altercation with another hunter over an elk. I stalked and made the first shot on a large bull elk. As I followed the blood trail I heard a second shot and came onto another hunter field dressing ‘my elk,’ claiming it as his. Whose elk is it, mine or the other hunter?”

Answer: This has been a dilemma since the first two cave men threw rocks and spears at woolly mammoths. In most hunter-gatherer societies, including American Indians, members earned special status based on their courage and hunting prowess. Recognition for the best hunter was important for many early societies because it was directly related to their survival.

While no longer related to survival, the drive for recognition as the “best hunter” is still alive and well. “Big buck” or “big bull” contests still motivate a group called “trophy hunters” to seek out the largest specimens to win a competition. The winners can earn large financial awards, sporting goods and recognition for their hunting prowess. The intense competition generated by these contests has resulted in numerous violations as hunters do what it takes to win. Scarce populations and large numbers of hunters can also create an intense competitive atmosphere.

I’ve heard of numerous wrestling matches or fist fights on the mountain, the winner taking possession of the elk. In Montana, a hunter pulled a gun in a dispute over a big horn sheep. He later was arrested and convicted of aggravated assault. In most cases, these conflicts result in a somewhat amicable settlement.

Historically, hunter ethics governed how a dilemma such as yours was resolved. Back in the day,

Ask the Officer

game was plentiful and hunters operated under a more gentlemanly code of conduct. In those days, a rule of “first blood” was commonly used to settle disputes of who a game animal belonged. Under “first blood” the hunter that drew first blood laid claim to the animal. It was considered the unwritten “duty” of other hunters and hunting companions alike to assist the person recovering an injured animal. If someone encountered an animal previously injured by another hunter they killed and surrendered it to the person that drew “first blood.”

Unfortunately, those days seem to be largely gone. More recent hunting behavior is guided less by hunting ethics and more by the letter of the law and Commission rules. In your example, the hunter that put the anchoring shot into the elk is the one generally that lays undisputed claim to the elk.

“As soon as any person kills any wildlife for which a tag is required, said tag, belonging to him, must be validated and attached to said wildlife in a manner provided by commission rule,” according to Idaho Code 36-409(d).

I’ve heard of two hunters coming to an agreement to split an animal. The department does not specifically favor one person over the other to tag the animal as long as both possess the appropriate licenses, tags and permits required to lawfully hunt and harvest the game animal.

Study: Living in Poor Area Can Affect Your Health

BY MIKE STOBBE
Associated Press

ATLANTA • Back in the 1990s, the federal government tried an unusual social experiment: It offered thousands of poor women in big-city public housing a chance to live in more affluent neighborhoods.

A decade later, the women who relocated had lower rates of diabetes and extreme obesity – differences that are being hailed as compelling evidence that where you live can determine your health.

The experiment was initially aimed at researching whether moving impoverished families to more prosperous areas could improve employment or schooling. But according to a study released Wednesday, the most interesting effect may have been on the women's physical condition.

About 16 percent of the women who moved had diabetes, compared with about 20 percent of women who stayed in public housing. And about 14 percent of those who left the projects were extremely obese, compared with nearly 18 percent of the other women.

The small-but-significant differences offered some of the strongest support yet for the idea that where you live can significantly affect your overall health, especially if your home is in a low-income area with few safe places to exercise, limited food options and meager medical services.

"This study proves that concentrated poverty is not only bad policy, it's bad for your health," Shaun Donovan, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

But no one believes the deficit-plagued federal government is going to expand the program and start moving low-income women to better neighborhoods en masse.

"It's not enough to simply move families in to different neighborhoods," Donovan said. Instead, new ways must be found to help families "break the cycle of poverty that can quite literally make them sick." He did not mention specific proposals.

Public health experts have long thought that living in poor neighborhoods could ruin a person's health, but this study put the idea to a rigorous test.

Here's how it worked: Women believed to be about the same in most respects were randomly assigned to one group or another and then followed through time, in a model customarily seen in pharmaceutical studies. That makes it more scientifically rigorous than most research linking health problems to a social environment.

The study's good design "provides a basis to infer cause and effect" between poverty and bad health, said Dr. Robert Califf, a noted Duke University cardiologist who is leading a massive study on neighborhoods and health outcomes.

The research was led by Jens Ludwig, a University of Chicago professor of public policy. It was published in Wednesday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The experiment started as a $70 million HUD project in Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and New York. It morphed into a health study after a variety of other government agencies and private foundations pitched in with an additional $17 million more.

Pakistani Poor Hurt Most by Decision to Spurn U.S. Aid

BY SEBASTIAN ABBOT
Associated Press

LAHORE, Pakistan • U.S. aid could have transformed Pakistan's largest maternity hospital, where rats run through the halls, patients sleep three to a bed, women who require C-sections aren't getting them because only one operating room is functioning, and premature babies risk death because of a shortage of incubators.

But the government of Pakistan's most populous province, Punjab, turned down an American offer of $127 million for health care, education and municipal services following the U.S. raid that killed Osama bin Laden. Sixteen million dollars was earmarked for Lady Willingdon Hospital in the provincial capital of Lahore.

The government's decision was thought to be an attempt to win votes by capitalizing on pervasive anti-American sentiment in a province with a significantly larger population than France and a bigger land area than Greece. Pakistan's federal government and other provinces did not follow suit, but they may also find themselves with less U.S. assistance soon.

Pressure is growing in the U.S. Congress to reduce the billions of dollars in annual military and civilian aid because of the government's alleged ties to Islamist militants. The money has failed to persuade Pakistan to target militants using its territory to attack U.S. troops in Afghanistan.

The experience in Punjab shows that the impact of an aid cut in this poverty stricken country would be felt most acutely by the poorest citizens, not the army generals allegedly gambling with militant proxies in Afghanistan or wealthy politicians hoping to win votes with their anti-American gestures.

Pakistan's elite does benefit from U.S. assistance, either through lucrative contracts for NGOs or by allegedly skimming off money funneled through the government. The loss of these funds may crimp their lifestyle, but it is unlikely to affect whether their families get adequate medical treatment or their children a decent education.

"The decision of the Punjab government to turn down U.S. money was not in the best interests of poor people in Punjab," said Mohammed Sharif, a senior administrator at Lady Willingdon Hospital. "It was a high-level decision, and we are suffering for it."

Like many government-run hospitals in Pakistan, Lady Willingdon struggles to provide even basic care. The hospital, built by the British in the 1930s before Pakistan's independence, was meant to house 80 patients. The country's population has since boomed, forcing officials to cram 235 patients into a facility that is now run-down. Paint peels off the concrete walls and black mold covers the ceilings.

Patients are forced to share beds, and sometimes women who are close to giving birth have to sit on the floor for lack of space, said nurse Kanneez Akhtar.

The hospital also faces a shortage of critical medical equipment. There is only one functioning operating room, leaving women lined up to receive cesarean sections, said a senior doctor.

"We lose a lot of babies because of that," said the doctor, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the issue.

There are only three working infant incubators, which were donated by NGOs, said Mohammed Athar, the doctor who runs the nursery for premature babies. The hospital is forced to use overhead warmers for other infants, leaving them more exposed to disease, he said.

“Without incubators, it’s useless,” said Athar.

The $16 million offered by the U.S. would have been used to purchase 10 incubators, build a new 100-bed ward and expand the nursery and emergency facilities, said Sharif, the hospital administrator.

The U.S. has financed similar efforts to transform

OBITUARIES

Helen Arena VanHoof

Oct. 22, 1925-Oct. 18, 2011

BUHL • Helen Arena VanHoof, age 85, of Buhl, passed away peacefully with her daughters at her side Tuesday, Oct. 18, 2011, at Woodland Assisted Living in Buhl, Idaho.

Helen was born Oct. 22, 1925, to Levi Alva and Vertie Larado Morgan in Byers, Colo. She moved to Hamilton, Wash., at an early age and graduated from Hamilton High School in 1942 at the age of 16. It was in 1943 that Helen married James Fred Henry. The couple moved to Sedro Woolley, Wash., where four of her five children were born. She was a homemaker until she went to work at Northern State Hospital as a nurse's aid. She then held various jobs until moving to Enumclaw, Wash., where her fifth child was born.

Helen continued her education and obtained her licensed practical nurse degree at Green River Community Technical Institute in Auburn, Wash., in 1965. She was an LPN at the Enumclaw Memorial Hospital for 25 years. After retirement, she moved to Buhl, where she continued her love of fishing with her family, going to her grandkids' ball games, taking care of her roses (fushia baskets in Washington), going to church and being with friends and family. Helen married Daniel VanHoof in 1968, sharing 28 years of marriage.

Survivors include her three daughters, Maria Borgen of Enumclaw, Wash., Frede Brown of Bonney Lake, Wash., and Leasa (Tom) Speck of Buhl; 11 grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; one great-great-granddaughter; and two brothers, Ken (Cleo) Morgan and Lloyd (Jan) Morgan, both of Washington. Helen was preceded in death by her parents; daughter, Peggy Ainsworth; son, Steve Henry; and two sons-in-law.

The family wishes to thank the staff at the Promise of Hope Hospice Care and the staff at Woodland Assisted Living for all their care and support of Mom during her time of need.

Our Mom was a kind and generous person, and she will be greatly missed by her friends, family, loved ones and daughters.

A memorial service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 22, at the Buhl United Methodist Church with a meal to follow.

Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl is in charge of arrangements.

William 'Bill' Manford Peterson

Feb. 16, 1935-Oct. 18, 2011

William "Bill" Manford Peterson, 76, went home to be with his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ on Tuesday, Oct. 18, 2011, after a courageous battle with pancreatic cancer.

Bill was born Feb. 16, 1935, in Sioux Falls, S.D., to Carl and Bernadine (Fairfield) Peterson. Bill was the oldest of the two Peterson boys. He grew up in Beresford, S.D., graduating from Beresford High School in 1954. Through high school, he participated in football, basketball, baseball, pool and bowling. He was croquet champion of Beresford for several years. His interest in sports continued throughout his entire life.

After high school graduation, he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps, serving in Korea. While in the Corps, he became interested in Judo and earned a black belt while in Korea. In 1958, he enlisted in the U.S. Air Force serving again in Korea and the United States, coming to Mountain Home in 1961.

Bill met Natalie Anderson

while visiting in Buhl and, on Dec. 20, 1961, they were married. To this union were born two sons, Lyle and Lance. Bill attended the College of Southern Idaho and the University of Idaho, graduating from U of I in 1974 with a bachelor's degree in agronomy. Bill and Natalie established their custodial business and he continued working for CSI until retiring in 1999.

Bill is survived by his wife, Natalie; sons, Lyle (Rosalin-da) and Lance (Alicia); brother, Robert (Kathy); grandchildren, Stephanie, Kendall, Andrew, Jessica, Daniel, Jordan and Brendan; and great-granddaughter, Amelia Rose. He was preceded in death by his parents, Carl Peterson and Bernadine Booth.

A viewing will be from 4 to 6 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 23, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl. A funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 24, at the Calvary Assembly of God Church in Buhl. Interment will be at Buhl's West End Cemetery with military honors.

Dennis Wayne Futrell

June 12, 1943-Oct. 14, 2011

VANCOUVER, Wash. • Dennis Wayne Futrell, 68, of Vancouver, Wash., died Friday, Oct. 14, 2011, at the VA Hospital in Portland, Ore.

He was born June 12, 1943, in Buhl, Twin Falls County, Idaho, the son of Conrad Roy Futrell and Nola Ramsay Futrell. Dennis graduated from Buhl High School in 1961. He served with the Idaho National Guard based in Buhl as a member of the 116th Armored Cavalry. Dennis and Louise were married Nov. 1, 1969, in Buhl. He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He worked in heavy construction for many years as a member of the carpenters union. In the course of his work, he helped in the building of the Hansen Bridge in Twin Falls. He enjoyed the out of doors by camping, looking for unique rocks, hunting and target practicing. One of the several hobbies Dennis enjoyed was doing leather work, making beautiful hand-tooled leather products for family and friends.

He was preceded in death by his mother, Nola Ramsay Futrell; his father, Conrad Roy Futrell; a brother, David Dean Futrell; and a sister, Arlene Lois Futrell. He is survived by his wife, Louise Ruth Clifford Futrell; brother, Conrad Ray Futrell and wife, Donna of Libby, Mont.; sister, Audrie Lee Whitt of Norfolk, Va.; sister-in-law, Nancy Futrell of Weiser, Idaho; brother, Derryl Lynn Futrell and wife, Anita of Fil-er, Idaho; brother, Michael Bruce Futrell of Twin Falls; sister, Shirley Jean Brown and husband, Bob of Troy, Mont.; five "grandchildren"; and numerous nieces and nephews.

A funeral will be conducted by the veterans with full military honors at the Evergreen Staples Funeral Home in Vancouver, Wash.

Radio Giant Corwin Dies in Calif. at 101

LOS ANGELES (AP) • During a career that spanned more than 70 years, Norman Corwin wrote, produced and directed for radio, television, film and the stage.

His insightful writing earned Emmy and Golden Globe awards. He received an Academy Award nomination for his script for the 1956 film "Lust for Life," the biography of Vincent van Gogh starring Kirk Douglas.

But radio was Corwin's true passion.

"I find it difficult to turn down an offer to be heard," he said in a 2001 interview on public radio. "Whether it's an anniversary, whether it's on the ending of a war, whatever the subject, I am ham enough to enjoy communicating to people, to an audience."

Corwin, a creative giant of the Golden Age of Radio whose programs chronicling World War II are milestones in broadcasting, died Tuesday at his Los Angeles home of natural causes, according to the USC Annenberg School for Communication & Journalism where Corwin remained a writer in residence until his death. He was 101.

Actor William Shatner, who narrated several of Corwin's later radio programs, called him a legend and his hero. He is "the poetic soul of discretion and a monument to artistry in America," Shatner once said.

Throughout the 1940s, Corwin was well known to millions of Americans who depended on radio for their link to the world. His work during that so-called Golden Age of Radio ran the gamut of creative offerings, from variety shows to dramas, comedies to documentaries.

Some of his most acclaimed programs dealt with World War II and provided perspective about a war being fought thousands of miles away. His writing brought the country together, inspiring patriotism, hope and optimism.

Veteran AP Photojournalist Ed Reinke Dies in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) • Ed Reinke didn't think of his job so much as taking photos, but rather as creating them. When the award-winning Associated Press photographer grabbed his camera and headed out to an assignment, he would tell his colleagues, "I am going to make a picture."

Whether it was Kentucky Derby horses training on a chilly spring morning, a bumblebee hovering near a flower on his beloved farm or a quarterback celebrating a Super Bowl touchdown, the AP photojournalist viewed the world as a series of pictures. His profession was journalism; his gift was telling a story in one frame.

"I saw a picture and went and got my camera," Reinke would often say.

grapher for Kentucky, who traveled the world shooting news and sports images, died late Tuesday, his family said. He had been hospitalized since Oct. 2, when he fell and suffered a head injury while covering the IndyCar race at Kentucky Speedway in Sparta.

In the weeks that followed, dozens of Reinke's colleagues rallied around him via a Facebook page where they shared photos and stories of the man remembered universally for his warm smile and twinkling eyes. The page, "To Ed Reinke," was started several years ago, an online place where far-flung photographers shared photos of themselves toasting a man who had been a colleague, friend and mentor to many since he started his photojournalism career in 1972.

July 9, 1928-Oct. 17, 2011

On Monday, Oct. 17, 2011, our beautiful, wonderful mother, Fern S. Coates, ended her journey on this earth.

It began July 9, 1928, in Great Falls, Mont. She was born to Robert and Cora Sweat. She joined seven other siblings on her mother's side and three other siblings on her father's side. She struggled with her health even as a child and battled pneumonia and anemia in her very young years. Her mother's concern over the harsh Montana winters caused the family to return to Idaho, and she grew up in Richfield on the family farm. She met Nelson J. Coates from Carey, Idaho, and they were married in 1944. They had a daughter, Sandy; and a son, Randy. They were later divorced but remained lifelong friends.

The family moved to Twin Falls in 1950 and for a while, Fern was a waitress at the Turf Club until she was able to join the Mountain Bell Telephone Company in 1952. She made it her lifetime career, retiring in 1981. She became a supervisor and was awarded recognition for 16 years of perfect attendance. Fern was stricken shortly after her retirement with rheumatoid arthritis and battled the effects of that disease for the rest of her life. She did so with dignity and grace. She was dedicated to her children and her family and was nicknamed the mailbox as she tried to keep everyone up to date on matters of importance.

She was preceded in death by Nelson; her parents; brothers, Rollo, Ray, Elden, Milford and Milton; and sisters, Ella, Meda, Blanche and Ellen. She is survived by one sister, Ruth Swainston of Richfield; her daughter, Sandy White (Rick); and her son, Randy (Bobette); two grandchildren, Marcie Towle (Dan) and their two children, Nicholas and Grace, and Rick (Donell) and his three children, Any Brewzski (Jason) and their two children, Althea and Gabriel, Janell Williams (Simon) and Derek; and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family wishes to express special thanks to her primary physician, Dr. Brian Fortuin, and his nurses, Jessica and Tracy, who helped so much with Mother's needs the last few years; Cenoma House Assisted Living, Linda Bivain and the caregivers at Cenoma House, Debra, Judy, Diana, Holly, Tammy and Anita; to Hospice Visions, Tami Slater and her team of very special caregivers, nurse Cindy Anton, physical therapist Andrea Jones, Kathy Harmon, LaDonne, Sue Votrobek, Sandi, Carol Layne and the many others who cared for our mother.

She is to be cremated and there will be no service at her request. There will be a private family inurnment at a later date.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to the Rheumatoid Arthritis Foundation, Hospice Visions or the charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary and Crematory "Chapel by the Park." Friends and family may leave condolences by going to www.WhiteMortuary.com.

Q. My wife and I have always thought we were too busy to volunteer—with work and raising our family. Now that we are older and have a little more time, we would like to help others. Any thoughts about this?

A. You and your wife are definitely on to something! The really good news is that by helping others, you also help yourself—to better health. Researchers have confirmed that volunteering improves both physical and mental health. Volunteers live longer, enjoy a higher functioning ability, have lower rates of depression, and experience less heart disease. For older adults and people who can volunteer 100 hours a year (that is only 2 hours per week) the health benefits are truly significant. A major study of adults age 65 and older found that the positive effects of volunteering on physical and mental health is due to the personal sense of accomplishment an individual gains from his or her volunteer activities. Remember, just two hours of volunteering a week can bring meaningful benefits to a person's body and mind. Next week we will talk more about how you can help others, and yourself, by becoming a volunteer.

Cards win World Series Opener

BY BEN WALKER
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS • Nobody plays a hunch like Tony La Russa. Not this October, anyway.

The St. Louis manager once again looked like a genius, especially when Allen Craig pinch-hit for ace Chris Carpenter and delivered a go-ahead single that sent the Cardinals past the Texas Rangers 3-2 on Wednesday night in the World Series opener.

Craig's slicing hit in the sixth inning fell inches in front of sliding right fielder Nelson Cruz. Game 1 was just that tight throughout a cold, damp evening.

"Man, he's tough," Craig said of hard-throwing reliever Alexi Ogando. "He came right at me with fast-balls, and I missed the first two. Then that last one I was trying to get the barrel on it, make the defense make a play. Fortunate, kept it fair, and Cruz made a great at-tempt on that. It was a great play all-around."

It was a game perfectly suited for the National League style — lots of bunts, intentional walks and pitching changes. And in a post-season in which he's made all the right moves, the 67-year-old La Russa was at the top of his game.

After pulling Carpenter, La Russa coaxed three scoreless innings from his deep bullpen. Five relievers did the job, with Jason Motte closing for his fifth save of the postseason.

With no seniors of the roster, the Twin Falls girls soccer team had no choice but to turn to a trio of freshmen to help lead the Bruins to their third straight Class 4A state tournament appearance.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

When it comes to freshmen playing varsity high school sports, there are two schools of thought. Either varsity is something that's reserved for juniors or seniors, or you're old enough to play varsity as soon as you're good enough.

Twin Falls girls soccer coach Katie Kauffman resides firmly in the latter camp, though this year she didn't really have much choice.

The 2011 Bruins have no seniors on their team, and that's part of the reason they start three freshmen — Peyton Karl and twins Kylie and Hannah Greenawald. And while the youngest of the "Baby Bruins" don't get the attention of some older teammates, they've had an impact as the team won its first district championship last week.

That's just the way Kauffman expects it.

"I'm not one for coddling people," the veteran coach said. "Obviously we need to bring them up to speed on the way we do things and the kind of soccer we play, but once they have that down I expect the same out of them as I do anyone else."

This is a group that didn't grow up watching Twin Falls struggle at the Class 5A level of soccer. Instead it's a bunch that saw the Bruins go to state for the first time in 2008, and watched them follow it up with back-to-back appearances the last two seasons at the 4A level.

Now that they have their chances, they've taken like ducks to water. Or maybe Brazilians to a soccer pitch.

"There are a lot more challenges, harder players and quicker passing than we were used to," said Karl, the Bruins' left defender. "But I don't try to impress anyone out there, I just go out and do what I do well."

Karl helps marshal the left side of defense, while Hannah Greenawald plays on the right flank. Kylie Greenawald is a winger, patrolling either side of the opponents' rearguard.

Naturally, the twins are right at

Boise State Lineman Back After Suspension

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

NCAA officials have reinstated a Boise State player who served a six-game suspension for taking improper benefits worth $13,600 before and after he enrolled at the university.

Sophomore defensive tackle Ricky Tjong-A-Tjoe returned to the No. 5 Broncos (6-0, 1-0) Wednesday and is eligible to play in Saturday's conference home opener against Air Force.

Tjong-A-Tjoe is one of three Broncos who were suspended at the start of the season pending an investigation into possible recruiting infractions.

Senior safety Cedric Febis was suspended for one game, the season opener against Georgia, while sophomore receiver Geraldo Boldewijn was held out of four games.

All three are from Amsterdam and moved to Boise, stayed with host families and enrolled in local high schools to play prep football in hopes of winning college scholarships.

In Tjong-A-Tjoe's case, NCAA investigators said he received benefits from a host family, which included Boise State boosters. The benefits ranged from meals and housing to school supplies, travel expenses and vacation money.

"The student-athlete must arrange for the repayment of these benefits," NCAA officials said in a statement released Wednesday. "The university withheld Tjong-A-Tjoe from competition for six games as a condition for him to be eligible to compete again."

Lauda Leads Indians to 3A Volleyball Title

BY DIANE PHILBIN
dphilbin@magicvalley.com

BUHL • There was no doubt that both the Kimberly Bulldogs and Buhl Indians came ready to play for their showdown in the District IV Class 3A Tournament championship.

The momentum bounced early in the match between the two teams, neither appearing to be the dominant team, as each took one of the first two sets. Buhl, however, reached back and focused more on defense to close out the match in four sets, winning, 25-21, 11-25, 25-16, 25-15.

"Our girls weren't going to let anybody stand in their way," said Buhl coach Denny Moretto. "Hand it to Kimberly, they came ready to play!"

Moretto gave the Buhl defense credit for the first set win and also a case of nerves.

"After the first set, the girls kind of relaxed and lost it in the second set," said Moretto.

Buhl junior Annie Lauda paved the way for the offense as she hammered a match-high 17 kills and recorded four blocks. Morgan Pearson was also potent as well, belting 13 kills and Kendyl Hamilton matched her nine kills with nine digs. Senior setter Cassidee Kippes directed the offense with 33 assists and 11 digs.

"In the early matches, the defenses always keyed on Annie," said Moretto. "She came back in this match. For her a good day is 10 kills and 10 blocks."

Lauda gave credit to her teammates for the solid defense and passing in the win.

"We understood we had to step up our game to show just what we can do and we did," said Lauda. "We are all so ready for state."

For the Bulldogs, the championship match appeared to sum up their season.

"We just played up and down the whole match just like we did all year," said Kimberly coach Lawrence Pfefferle. "The Buhl defense is good and their setter kept the ball in play."

Katy Robinson led the Bulldogs' offensive attack with a team-high nine kills. For the defense, Erica Williams and Kaitlyn Goetz each had four blocks.

Bobcats Snag First District Title Since '06

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

Burley head coach Kevin Green has had a good feeling about this group of cross country runners for a long time.

His intuition came to fruition Wednesday at Twin Falls Golf Club as the talented quintet of Parley Pickett, Ethan Judd, Jade Mendenhall, Braylan Bean and Nate Brown led the Bobcats to the Class 4A District IV cross country title, their first since 2006.

"Back in '08, looking ahead, I knew this group had a lot of talent and it was just a matter of them putting in the work," said Green, who became the Bobcats' head coach in 2008, coming over from Oakley. "I am really proud of these guys, they ran great today"

Pickett finished third behind Twin Falls' Erik Harris, who won the meet in a time of 15 minutes 29 seconds, and Wood River's Ben Stout. Ethan Judd finished fifth, but it was the work of Mendenhall, Bean and Brown that handed the Bobcats the title with 39 points.

The three runners finished seventh, 11th and 13th, beating the Twin Falls' fourth and fifth runners.

"Wow, that's amazing. That's pretty hard to beat when you have five in the top 13," said Pickett, who ran a 16:50. "This is exactly what we've been working for all year. I remember in the middle of the season, we knew we had to step it up and start pushing it so we can take districts."

The Bobcats squeaked into state last season, finishing third at districts, but finished a disappointing 12th at state. That experience, though, Green said,

Tonight's CSI Match a Warm-Up for North Idaho

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

This is the week that could make or break the Golden Eagles' season.

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team has its Region 18 Tournament destiny back in its own hands, knowing if it can win out, the tournament will be on its home floor.

But the Golden Eagles, ranked No. 8 in Wednesday's JUCO poll, enter their final home stretch of the regular season with a stern test, as fifth-ranked North Idaho College comes to town on Saturday after CSI steps out of conference play tonight.

The two teams played a classic in Coeur d'Alene earlier in the season, with North Idaho rallying from within two points of a straight-set defeat to stun the Golden Eagles in five sets.

That loss started a tough stretch against top teams for CSI as the Golden Eagles lost their next two matches to ranked opposition, No. 3 Western Wyoming

Community College and No. 7 Salt Lake Community College. But it's forced the team to cope with its new identity: a team equally capable of amazingly high and shockingly poor performances.

"Everything we're doing is to minimize our errors," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "(Wednesday) was a great day of practice, and we've been able to focus on finding ways to score in and out of our system, and doing what's smart rather than what's easy."

The ramifications of Saturday's match with North Idaho are of such magnitude that CSI could be forgiven for treating tonight's nonconference tilt with Blue Mountain (Ore.) Community College as little more than a warm-up act.

But the Golden Eagles know with the way the last few weeks have gone, nothing can be taken for granted.

"The goal is a good clean win, and being able to implement what we want to implement," Cartisser said.

Declo Wins 2A District Title

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

GOODING • It took two matches, but Declo finally proved it didn't want any part of the state play-in route this time around.

After dropping the first championship match Wednesday in the Class 2A District IV volleyball tournament, the Hornets rebound to brush aside Gooding 25-18, 27-25, 25-17 in the winner-take-all decider, clinching the district's only automatic bid to next week's state tournament in Rathdrum.

Last season they fell in a state play-in to state semifinalist Ririe.

Bailey Wilson led the Hornets with 15 kills in the victory, including two consecutive kills to bring the team to match point, which it won on her serve.

intensity. ... I think we got a little cocky after beating them in the first match and being up like that (in the second set). It was a big letdown."

Gooding lost to Declo on its home floor for the second time in as many nights, sandwiched around a knockout win over Valley on Tuesday and a 25-18, 25-20, 25-23 dispatching of Declo in the first championship match.

Laramie Turner had 16 kills to lead the Senators in a match that saw Declo's offense become predictable due to poor passing and, as a result, less than ideal sets. In the second match the Hornets did a better job of including the middles to set up the outside attacks, allowing Kelsie Carpenter to pile up 59 total assists.

"We just needed to relax and play. We were tight in the first one," said Declo senior Keva Robinson, who had 14 kills and 26 digs in the decisive match. "We got some awesome serving in the second match, and winning that second-set really fired us up."

Declo opens state tournament play next Friday afternoon against the District VI runner-up. Gooding plays the District V runner-up on Saturday in American Falls for a trip to Rathdrum.

"We don't really know much about the teams we could face, and we're really not worried about it," said Erickson. "We're just worrying about ourselves and we'll take it as it comes."

And, of course, there's the stereotypical "twins ESP" relationship too.

"It helps a little bit because you don't get upset and yell at them," Hannah said. "But I really think it just comes from playing together so long."

Said Kylie: "It's been really fun. We're always there to keep an option open for the other person."

The trio is played to its collective strength, not just because freshmen don't usually crop up in the central spine of a soccer team. But there might come a time when they're called upon to play different positions.

When the time comes, there's little doubt they'll be ready.

The 2010 state champions, Wood River, won't be defending its title next Saturday at Eagle Island Park as the Wolverines finished fourth. Twin Falls, led by Harris, Matthew Schenk and Jeremy Stark, finished second with 51 points and Jerome (65 points) ran down the final state berth.

The Jerome girls continued their dominance in the district, winning the title with 32 points. Mikesell Clegg won the race in a time of 19:18 and teammate Jasmine Nesbitt finished second at 19:27.

Strong Finishing Kick Spurs Declo's Anderson to District Title

Gooding's Audrey Youren won the Class 2A District IV qualifier race as the Senators won the team title. Halie Wilsey and Wesley Kelly of Kimberly both won individual titles as the Bulldogs' girls won the team championship. Buhl won the boy's team title.

GOODING • Trevor Anderson had never been pushed like this.

The Declo senior was used to winning cross country races comfortably this season, but in Wednesday's Class 2A District IV state qualifier at Gooding Country Club, Anderson was hounded by one of the home racers.

Freshman Eliseo Garcia kept hanging around right on Anderson's heels, and as the two surged down the final hill toward the finish line, they relied on whatever motivation they could drum up to try and get there first.

"I told myself about the girls I'll impress by winning, and thought about the Buggles (snack food) waiting for me on the bus," said Anderson, who outkicked Garcia to win in a season-best 16 minutes, 58 seconds. "That was the closest race I've had all season. He really pushed me."

Afterward Anderson

greeted the runner-up, praising him, saying "way to be a beast."

There were no such dramas for Gooding's Rachel Youren on her home course — not this time at least.

The sophomore let Richfield's Sasha Kent set the pace for the first mile, then dropped the hammer and cruised home in a time of 19:53.

It was a little different from the last time Youren ran at the country club.

"They changed the course this year, and last time I ran it I got lost on the second lap," she said. "This time I made sure to remember the changes. Sasha went out hard and I got a little worried, but after the first mile I was able to catch her."

Youren will take her teammates with her to the state meet as the Senators won the team title with 21 points. The Valley girls finished second at 34.

The Declo boys won the district championship, placing five in the top 15 to score 33 points and edge out Gooding (38). Oakley placed third with 90 points and all three will travel to state.

The Class 3A qualifiers didn't have the same drama, as Halie Wilsey and Wesley Kelly made it a Kimberly sweep.

Kelly quashed the hype of a matchup with Filer's Gage Moore, outkicking his rival on the second lap to win comfortably in a time of 17:03.

"I just mentally decided I was going to win, and I wasn't going to let him pass me no matter what," said Kelly, who said he wants to add to his gold medal stash he started at the 2011 state track championships.

His effort wasn't enough to win the team title for the Bulldogs, though, as Buhl took third to eighth place to win the points title comfortably.

Wilsey built a decent gap on the field, leading Kimberly to the girls team title.

"Our team is young, and I was curious to see how we'd do now that the pressure was really on and this meet matters," said Wilsey. "Next week as long as we do better than we did this week (time-wise) I'll be happy. You can't control what other teams do."

State qualifiers varied for each classification. For 3A boys and girls, the top two teams and anyone in the top seven finishers that didn't qualify with a team advanced to state. In 2A boys it was the top three teams and top 16 finishers, while in 2A girls it was the top team and top 10 overall.

The state meet is next Saturday at Eagle Island State Park.

After the loss, Kimberly freshman setter, Kyra Palmer, knows that her team played until the end.

"This was a big journey for us but it's sad that it has to come to an end," said Palmer. "My main expectation this year was to be consistent first and to come together with my team. My coach thinks I have a gift and that I have come a long way."

For Moretto, this was her first district title.

"Words can't describe it," said Moretto. "These girls did everything I asked of them. I think I just ended up with the right team at the right time."

Dario Franchitti, of Scotland, returns to pit row following tribute laps in honor of Dan Wheldon, a two-time Indianapolis 500 winner who was killed earlier in a crash during the IndyCar Series' Las Vegas Indy 300 auto race Sunday in Las Vegas.

Wheldon's Death Clouds Franchitti's IndyCar Title

LAS VEGAS (AP) • Walking hand-in-hand with his wife, actress Ashley Judd, Dario Franchitti appeared to be in a daze, tears streaming down his face as he passed through the pit stalls at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. The Scotsman had just secured a place among IndyCar's all-time greats with his third straight series title and fourth overall, yet glory had taken a back seat to shock following the death of Dan Wheldon. His title? That didn't even register until after he was asked about it following a five-lap tribute to Wheldon, who was killed when his car became entangled in a fiery 15-car wreck on the 11th lap of Sunday's Las Vegas Indy 300. "I'm thinking about Susie and the boys," Franchitti said of Wheldon's wife and two small sons. "When I think about them, I'm struggling to hold it together." Unable to avoid melee unfolding in front of him, Wheldon drove right into the spinning and flying cars. His No. 77 car went sailing over one of the other vehicles, did a mid-air roll and landed cockpit-first into a catch fence on turn 2. Wheldon was airlifted to University Medical Center. Nearly two hours later, IndyCar officials announced he had died. IndyCar decided the cancel the race and instead drivers, tears streaming down their faces, did a five-lap tribute to Wheldon. As they prepared to return to the track many drivers broke down. Tony Kanaan, a close friend of Wheldon's, wept almost uncontrollably and had to be comforted by owner and former driver Jimmy Vasser. Franchitti and Danica Patrick, among others, were seen crying in their cars before leaving the pits. After driving around the track three-wide during the tribute, the drivers pulled in to their pits and shared hugs with crew members and family. Franchitti's face was covered in tears as he took his helmet off and shared a long hug with Judd. They walked down pit road, stopping to hug members of other teams before heading up to the media center with owner Chip Ganassi. "It's sad. It's really, really sad," Franchitti said. "It's just the ugly side of our sport." The days following Wheldon's death, naturally, have been filled with questions: are the speeds too high at LVMS, should that many cars be allowed on the track at the same time, what changes should be made to make the sport safer and should the sport return to LVMS? Sam Schmidt, who runs the team for which Wheldon ran his final two races, wasn't so quick to point fingers at LVMS, which had been repaved and reconfigured in 2006 to add "progressive banking" designed to increase side-by-side racing. A Las Vegas resident who pushed hard to get the race, Schmidt said Wheldon's death was an unfortunate accident that could have happened almost anywhere. "There's obviously been a lot of changes to the track since we were here last time, and I don't think I can criticize the track," he said. "It's similar to what we do at Texas — with a little more speed a few more cars — but I don't think the track's to blame." Still, there are questions about whether IndyCar will ever return to Las Vegas. Not only will it forever carry a stigma as the place where Wheldon died, it's where IndyCar's grand plans for a spectacular season finale were destroyed with the fiery crash that also injured three other drivers. The series took a gamble to move its season-ending race to Las Vegas, essentially renting the track from owner Bruton Smith and forking over its own money to run the race. Instead of a triumphant finale, the series and its drivers were left with nothing but shock and grief. The week got off to a rousing start with a trip down The Strip by all 34 cars and a tight race for the championship between Franchitti and Will Power. Franchitti entered the race 18 points ahead of Power, whom he had passed on the final race last season for his third title. When Power was caught up in the wreck that killed Wheldon and Franchitti avoided it, the title went to the Scotsman, putting him in elite company. Franchitti became just the third driver to claim three straight season championships, with Sebastien Bourdais (2004-07) and Ted Horn (1946-48). And he joined A.J. Foyt, Mario Andretti, Rick Mears and Bourdais with four in their careers. It's an accomplishment Franchitti will never celebrate after losing a friend and former teammate. "We put so much pressure on ourselves to win races and championships, and that's what we love to do, what we live for," Franchitti said Sunday after Wheldon's death. "Days like today, it doesn't really matter."

Senators Challenge Sports Equipment Safety Claims

BY FREDERIC J. FROMMER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Senators and medical witnesses Wednesday criticized some sports equipment makers for touting products as reducing concussions, saying they were misleading consumers because the claims are not justified by scientific evidence. "Now that athletes, coaches and parents have a better understanding of concussions, some sports equipment makers appear to be a taking advantage," Sen. Tom Udall, a New Mexico Democrat, said at a Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee hearing. "There are a number of so-called, quote, anti-concussion and concussion-reducing devices on the market. ... We need to make sure advertisers play by the rules." He singled out several companies, including Riddell, which claims its Revolution helmet helps reduce concussions, and Brain-Pad, which blares on packaging blown up for the hearing, "Reduces Risk of CONCUSSIONS!" from lower jaw impacts. The packaging says its equipment creates "BRAIN SAFETY SPACE!" Dr. Ann McKee, a professor of neurology and pathology at Boston University, said that there's no evidence that mouthguards reduce the rate or severity of concussions. "So I would have great objection to this claim," she said. Dr. Jeffrey Kutcher, an assistant professor of neurology at the University of Michigan and director of Michigan Neurosport, a clinic that diagnoses and treats concussions for athletes, testified that no piece of equipment can significantly prevent concussions. "The potential harm that I see being caused by products that claim to prevent concussion when they do not is far more than simply the financial harm of paying more for something that isn't likely to work as claimed," he said. "It is the harm that comes from having a false sense of security, from not understanding how the injury occurs and what can actually be done to prevent it." Udall has asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate what he calls "misleading safety claims and deceptive practices" in the marketing of football helmets. He has also introduced legislation giving the industry nine months to come up with new standards that address concussion risks and the specific needs of young players. The bill would make it a crime to sell any sporting equipment that makes false or misleading claims about safety benefits. In a statement Wednesday night, Riddell said that advances in technology have improved the ability of football helmets to reduce the incidence of concussions, although no helmet available today can claim to prevent concussions. But the company did point to a University of Pittsburgh Medical Center which found that Riddell Revolution reduced concussion risk by 31 percent. "We are confident that this research data is reliable and accurate," Riddell said. However, a co-author of the study, the UPMC neurosurgeon Joe Maroon, told The New York Times this year that he disagreed with Riddell's marketing that figure without acknowledging the study's limitations.

NBA Talks Resume after 16-Hour Session

BY BRIAN MAHONEY
Associated Press

NEW YORK • NBA owners postponed their planning committee meeting Wednesday afternoon so they could continue a second straight day of talks with players. It has turned into another marathon day. After a 16-hour session with a federal mediator that lasted until after 2 a.m. Wednesday morning, the sides resumed negotiations aimed at ending the lockout about 10 a.m., meeting for more than seven hours. That marked 23 hours of negotiations in a 31-hour span, easily a record for these talks. No bargaining had been expected Wednesday or Thursday because the owners had board meetings scheduled. But the labor relations committee instead returned for further discussions with the players' association executive committee. The owners' planning committee was scheduled to discuss revenue sharing with all the owners, but NBA spokesman Mike Bass said that meeting was pushed back to the evening to allow more time for negotiations. Commissioner David Stern has said owners will have an expanded revenue sharing package among teams once the collective bargaining agreement with the players has been completed. Stern had wanted to bring a deal to his owners this week, otherwise he warned more games might be canceled. Already the first two weeks of the season — exactly 100 games — have been lost. The sides have been divided mostly by two issues, the division of revenues and the structure of the salary cap system. Players believe owners' attempts to make the luxury tax more punitive and limit the use of spending exceptions will effectively create a hard salary cap, which they say they will refuse to accept. Also, each side has formally proposed receiving 53 percent of basketball-related income after players were guaranteed 57 percent under the previous collective bargaining agreement. With the sides unable to make any real headway in recent weeks on those two divisive issues, they welcomed the presence of mediator George Cohen, who also spent 16 days trying to resolve the NFL's labor dispute in February and March.

Disney Offers Competition From Top to Bottom

BY DOUG FERGUSON

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. • Kevin Chappell was on the Magnolia Course practice range at Disney, his only concern getting in nine holes of practice under gathering clouds and trying to remember which golf cart was his. It's a relaxing week at the Children's Miracle Network Classic, but not for everyone. So when Chappell saw a familiar face behind him, he asked, "Are you paying attention to the top or the bottom?" For a town geared toward amusement, stress is running high across from the Magic Kingdom. At the top is Webb Simpson and Luke Donald, who are No. 1 and No. 2 on the PGA Tour money list, both believing that to win the money title would also make them heavy favorites to win player of the year. At the bottom are players who are struggling to finish in the top 125 to keep full-time jobs for next year. "I'm here to win the money title, and I'm probably going to need to win to do that," said Donald, who is $363,029 behind Simpson. "So it feels a little bit like the FedEx Cup and the Tour Championship. Third place isn't going to get it done."

Webb Simpson tees off from the 10th tee during the final round of the McGladrey Classic golf tournament at the Sea Island Golf Club on St. Simons Island, Ga., Sunday.

Donald finished in a three-way tie for third at the Tour Championship, and thus wound up third in the FedEx Cup. But a final birdie at East Lake gave him a small lead on the money list — until Simpson decided to play Sea Island last week, lost in a playoff and picked up $432,000 to move well ahead. Simpson feels as though he has nothing to lose regardless of what happens. A year ago, he was No. 207 in the world and had just secured his PGA Tour card. Now he is golf's only $6 million man, a two-time winner who is No. 12 in the world. "Talking to my wife yesterday, we just said, 'If we don't win the money title or player of the year, in no way will we be disappointed,'" Simpson said. "We obviously want to do those things, but this year has been a success all throughout. Whatever happens, we're going to be happy. But we do want to finish strong and try to have a clean sweep. It would be awesome." The stress is far greater toward the bottom. The PGA Tour decided to put Simpson and Donald in the same group the opening two rounds, which surprised no one. They will have amateur partners on the Palm and Magnolia courses before the cut is made after Friday, and then the amateurs leave and everyone plays the final two rounds on the longer, stronger Magnolia course. # LSU, Alabama Take Last Steps Before Mega-matchup

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
Associated Press

The only thing standing in the way of the most anticipated SEC game of the year is a couple of huge underdogs with quarterback issues.

Before No. 1 LSU and No. 2 Alabama square off on Nov. 5 in a game that could decide one of the BCS championship game participants, the Tigers and Crimson Tide have business to take care of Saturday.

LSU is a 22-point favorite against No. 19 Auburn at Tiger Stadium. Alabama, favored by four touchdowns, plays Tennessee at Bryant-Denny.

After that the Tide and Tigers each have a week off to prepare for that monster matchup in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

No need to worry about either team looking past Saturday, though. Not with big rivals coming to town.

The Alabama-Tennessee rivalry is no longer an annual Third Saturday in October ritual. That tradition is a casualty of the Southeastern Conference's last expansion in 1992.

The programs have been passing ships for much of the last 15 years. Usually when one has been up, the other has been down.

This will be the fourth year in a row that Alabama has been ranked coming into the game and Tennessee has not. The two previous years, the Volunteers were ranked and the Tide wasn't.

Three times since 1997 (99, 2002 and '05) both have been ranked for the game.

The two storied programs have also never met in the SEC title game.

The rivalry does have a history of one side dominating the other. The Tide won 11 straight from 1971-81 and went nine games without losing from 1986-94.

The Vols snapped that streak in 1995 and went on to win seven in a row.

Alabama comes in having won four straight, outscoring the Vols 123-46.

Another blowout will be hard for the Volunteers to avoid, especially with quarterback Tyler Bray on the shelf with a broken thumb.

Last week against LSU, new starter Matt Simms was 6 of 20 for 128 yards and two interceptions — and that was at home.

As for the Tiger tussle in Baton Rouge, for much of the past decade LSU-Auburn has been about as good as it gets in the SEC.

Since 2000, LSU has won four West titles, tops in the division, and Auburn three. This will be the ninth meeting since then in which both sets of Tigers have been ranked and the games always seem to be close. Six of the last seven have been decided by a touchdown or less.

It might be difficult for Auburn to stay in this one, though, even with LSU taking the field without three suspended players, including star defensive back Tyrann Mathieu and leading rusher Spencer Ware.

Coach Gene Chizik's defense has played better of late, but now the offense is sputtering and the quarterback spot is unsettled.

Barrett Trotter started the first six games for, but Clint Moseley took over in the second half of a 17-6 victory against Florida.

"We always anticipate the change opponents make is for the best," LSU coach Les Miles said.

No spoilers here.

Not quite a Super Rematch

BY BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

As Super Bowl rematches go, this one isn't quite so super.

The Steelers edged the Cardinals 27-23 in 2009 in one of the more memorable NFL championships, with Santonio Holmes' tightrope-walking act in the back corner of the end zone giving Pittsburgh the winning score and its record sixth Super Bowl crown. That catch ended Arizona's stunning and sensational run to its first shot at a league title since 1948 — when the Cardinals lived in Chicago and were blanked 7-0 by Philadelphia in the championship game.

Neither team has resembled a threat for the crown thus far. Although Pittsburgh is 4-2, it hasn't been particularly impressive on either side of the ball. Yes, the Steelers are first in overall defense and against the pass, but they have been sloppy and injury prone on D despite those yardage rankings.

The offense has scored 29 points fewer than division rival Baltimore, and the Ravens have played one fewer game.

Still, Pittsburgh is a 3½ point favorite at Arizona, which is 1-4, has 11 giveaways and comes off a bye that followed a distressing 34-10 flop against previously winless Minnesota.

Making the Steelers a favorite on the road is dangerous business. They are 1-2 away from Heinz Field, and the victory was a close one at weakening Indianapolis. "It's very obvious we've performed to a winning level at home, we haven't done so on the road," coach Mike Tomlin said. "We've got to perform better on the road than we have."

Arizona has lost four straight overall since an opening win against Carolina. Here comes No. 5. STEELERS, 26-20

Baltimore (minus 7½) at Jacksonville, Monday night: Ravens have looked like the AFC's best team so far. Jacksonville isn't its worst, but is close to the bottom.

BEST BET: RAVENS, 23-6

Denver (plus 3) at Miami: The stands will be packed at Sun Life Stadium, with fans shouting T-E-B-O-W, T-E-

UPSET SPECIAL: BRONCOS 16-13
Chicago (minus 1) vs. Tampa Bay at London: Bucs headed to London early in week, Bears don't arrive until later. Shorter trip will be more fruitful. BEARS, 20-17

Kansas City (plus 3½) at Oakland: Carson Palmer to the rescue with Jason Campbell injured. Funny feeling Palmer won't help this week. CHIEFS, 23-21

Atlanta (plus 3½) at Detroit: Wonder if Mike Smith's handshake/back slap will offend Jim Schwartz. Won't matter because Lions will win. LIONS, 24-22

San Diego (minus 2) at New York Jets: Jets need to play much better than they have for last month. Chargers haven't been great either. CHARGERS, 23-17

Green Bay (minus 8) at Minnesota: Vikings throwing Christian (Ponder) to the Packers. PACKERS, 31-9

Tebow Helps Dolphins' Sagging Ticket Sales

MIAMI (AP) • Tim Tebow is giving the winless Miami Dolphins a welcome boost in ticket sales.

Tebow will make his first start of the season Sunday when the Denver Broncos play at Miami, and Dolphins CEO Mike Dee said he's optimistic the game will be sellout.

More than 10,000 tickets have been sold since Tebow was promoted to the starting job last week, Dee said Wednesday.

"The demand and interest in the game certainly has picked up since the announcement," Dee said. "Clearly this matchup and the buzz that's out there have helped with tickets."

The Dolphins have an 0-5 record this year and have lost 11 of their past 12 home games, fueling fan apathy.

Because of Tebow's popularity, much of the crowd Sunday might be rooting for the visitors. A sizeable turnout of Florida Gators fans is likely because of a long-planned halftime tribute to Tebow and the rest of the 2008 Gators national championship team.

"This has never been Tim Tebow Day," Dee said. "It has always been about a celebration of the 2008 Gators team. There will be more than 20 players from that team represented."

The planned salute to the Gators angered fans of the Miami Hurricanes. The ceremony will take place on the field where the Hurricanes play.

"I bet that they're not honoring the University of Miami in Gainesville," Hurricanes quarterback Jacory Harris tweeted. "I'm just saying!"

Dee said the Dolphins support both the Hurricanes and the Gators and must be aggressive in attracting new fans.

Tebow laughed when asked about the Dolphins' decision to honor the Gators.

"Oh, man. Good question," he said. "I think it's something that's very nice for them to do. It's extremely humbling and honoring."

Denver Broncos quarterback Tim Tebow talks with the media after NFL football practice last week in Englewood, Colo.

Suspension

Last season, Tjong-A-Tjoe played in 12 games and recorded 24 tackles and 2.5 sacks, and this year he was considered one of the key backups who could rotate in for the starters.

Although the Bronco line has anchored a defense that has dominated opponents so far this season, Tjong-A-Tjoe's return comes at an opportune time. Air Force and it's triple option offense has been hard to stop this season, and the Falcons (3-3, 0-2 Mountain West) rank third in the nation in rushing and 10th in total offense, averaging 506.3 yards per game.

"It will be as big of a challenge, without question, as we've seen this year," said Broncos coach Chris Petersen.

The case against the three Dutch players began on Aug. 23 when the NCAA called Boise State and informed officials of alleged violations. Boise State conducted the investigation.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“It is not enough to have a good mind. The main thing is to use it well.”

— Rene Descartes

In today’s deal West’s two-no-trump overcall showed at least 5-5 in the minors. North’s jump to six hearts is the kind of bid I approve of — a fair shot on a hand where it would be impossible to find out scientifically whether slam, or even a grand, would be a good proposition. Plan the play on the lead of the club king.

There are two possible lines of play: one is a complete crossruff. For that to work, you will need both the spade ace and king to live, but West may well have started with a singleton spade. A better line is simply to play for West to have at least one of the outstanding diamond honors, surely nearly 100% on the bidding.

Win the club ace and cash the ace of trump. If West shows out, you can change tack and go for the complete crossruff line, starting by cashing the spade ace and king, then ruffing clubs in hand and diamonds in dummy.

However, if both opponents followed suit on the trump ace, play a heart to your jack and run the diamond queen, pitching a spade from the dummy. Ruff East’s club return and play the diamond jack, probably covered by West. Ruff in the dummy, come back to hand with a club ruff, and cash the diamond 10, discarding another spade from dummy. Now a spade to the king, a spade to the ace and a spade ruff in the dummy bring your trick total to 12.

ANSWER: It is important for a partnership to agree if this hand is good enough for a two-spade call in competition (most would say no, but would bid two spades if the spade queen were the king). If not, which is weaker, double or pass? One can play it either way, but I believe more play double as a double negative, with pass showing moderate values. This hand would therefore qualify for a pass.

Equal Opportunity Provider

DEAR ABBY: “Unsure Out West” (July 26) felt inadequate because she had no upbeat messages to send to her friends on Facebook. Please tell her she’s not alone.

I attended a prestigious college, but 35 years later I also find myself with no job, in debt, battling depression and dealing with a host of phobias. I read the school’s quarterly magazine and see my peers have great jobs, travel extensively and are happily married. I once sent in “news” that not everyone is so lucky and that I am neither successful nor wealthy. Needless to say, it wasn’t published.

When my FB friends ask how I am, I reply that it’s a difficult question to answer. I then ask about THEM and let them know I’m glad they’re doing well. And when times get bad, I know I can deactivate my Facebook account until I feel better.

— UNDERSTANDING “FRIEND” IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR “FRIEND”: Thank you for writing to support “Unsure.” Many people identified with her feelings. My newspaper readers comment:

DEAR ABBY: As a recovering survivor of severe childhood trauma, I can relate to “Unsure’s” situation. I have college degrees, am married to a wonderful man and have two grown children. All my energy went into recovering from what happened to me.

For years I felt ashamed that I hadn’t lived up to my potential, but it takes courage to recover from abuse or addiction. People who understand this view individuals like “Unsure” and me as SUCCESES in the things that really matter.

She should be honest, and as discreet as she wishes. When I have opened up, others have learned the realities of recovery and seen me as proof that it’s possible. Too many suffer in silence. They need to know others have sought help and are healing.

Reconnected with a popular, successful high school friend over the Internet and discovered that her adult path was similar to mine. We have been a source of support and encouragement to each other ever since.

— WENDY IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: While everyone brags about their kids, careers and wonderful lives, don’t forget that they too have put a “spin” on things. Nobody’s life is perfect. We’ve all had our share of hardships.

I have been in “Unsure’s” shoes for several years (minus the great hubby), but Facebook has given me confidence and enabled me to meet people who share my interests. Accept yourself for who you are. You don’t have to hide the truth. Problems with alcohol or depression do not define you.

—AMANDA IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY: “Unsure” should get rid of her Facebook page. If she doesn’t, she’ll continue reading about the lives of her old acquaintances and feel bad about hers.

I’m 19 – never had a FB page and never will. Friends have fought over rumors spread there, and I’ve seen their self-esteem suffer because of the entries and comments of others. Since she has a history of depression, it would be healthier to focus on the positives in her life and eliminate something that makes her feel negatively.

Today is Thursday, Oct. 20, the 293rd day of 2011. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 20, 1944, during World War II, Gen. Douglas MacArthur stepped ashore at Leyte in the Philippines, 2½ years after saying, "I shall return."

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1740, Maria Theresa became ruler of Austria, Hungary and Bohemia upon the death of her father, Holy Roman Emperor Charles VI.

In 1803, the U.S. Senate ratified the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1936, Helen Keller's teacher, Anne Sullivan Macy, died in Forest Hills, N.Y., at age 70.

In 1947, the House Un-American Activities Committee opened hearings into alleged Communist influence and infiltration in the U.S. motion picture industry.

In 1964, the 31st president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, died in New York at age 90.

In 1967, seven men were convicted in Meridian, Miss., of violating the civil rights of three slain civil rights workers.

In 1968, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

In 1973, in the so-called "Saturday Night Massacre," special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was dismissed and Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William B. Ruckelshaus resigned.

In 1981, a bungled armored truck robbery carried out by members of radical groups in Nanuet, N.Y., left a guard and two police officers dead.

In 1986, the government of Nicaragua formally charged captured American mercenary Eugene Hasenfus with several crimes, including terrorism. (Although convicted and sentenced to prison, Hasenfus was pardoned and released by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.)

Ten years ago: During a visit to Shanghai, China, President George W. Bush challenged Asian leaders to help "save the civilized world" by joining his war against terrorism. Officials announced that anthrax had been discovered in a House postal facility on Capitol Hill.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush conceded in an Associated Press interview that "right now, it's tough" for American forces in Iraq, but the White House said he would not change U.S. strategy in the face of pre-election polls indicating voters were upset. Actress Jane Wyatt, perhaps best remembered as Margaret Anderson on "Father Knows Best," died in Los Angeles at age 96.

One year ago: Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and visiting Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez hailed what they called their strong strategic relationship, saying they were united in efforts to establish a "new world order" that would eliminate Western dominance over global affairs. NPR fired news analyst Juan Williams after he talked about feeling nervous on airline flights with people in Muslim attire during an interview on Fox News Channel. Bob Guccione, 79, founder of Penthouse magazine, died in Plano, Texas.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Looking to the Future

We are heading into the home stretch for the city council seats and it is time to think about the choices you have on Nov. 8.

It's possible that four seats could change. Before you vote, take the time to do some background on what the candidates have to offer. Do we want the same status quo? Or do we want some new ideas? Do we want to try and blend some "real" experience with "energy"?

I have gotten to know Neil Christensen during the past few months and feel comfortable with him. Please realize that, "philosophically" in some areas, we are vastly different and I doubt that will ever change.

However, what I see is a young family man. I see a person who has his own business and has made it successful over the past six years. He is a person who knows what it takes to make a payroll for his employees and provide an adequate living for his family.

Neil has not been handed a job or a position; he has earned it. Neil has some fresh ideas on business development and realizes that "jobs" are the No. 1 issue facing us. He is pro-business, yet he will ensure that prospective industry is compatible with citizenry and protect our way of life. Twin Falls will need to do some drastic improvements in our infrastructure to attract more business. We will also need to face facts that we are looking at large deficits in our future budgets that will not just disappear.

I am reaching out to all voters. Don't be tuned out by supposedly how great things are, incumbents who don't have anything new to offer, nor "canned" letters to the editor that are just lip service from family members.

Step out of your "comfort zone"; do what is best for all of Twin Falls. It's time for all of us to reach out for new ideas. It's time to look seriously at the future, now — it's coming whether we like it or not.

KEVIN C. DANE
Twin Falls

Cope Understands the People of Twin Falls

It's time for new ideas and new faces. Kevin Cope is a new face with a fresh perspective on our city.

Being born and raised in Twin Falls helps Cope understand the needs and wants of all residents. He listens to the needs of every one from small-business owners, the elderly to the middle class, of which I am all of the above.

Cope supports the downtown merchants and wants to help make the downtown successful. He wants to bring in new businesses that can give benefits and a future to the people of Twin Falls. Cope understands that raising prices on utilities is a last resort and only after all other options are exhausted. Cope believes that our elders are the foundation of Twin Falls and wants to make sure they have a voice. Cope believes in family and community, he wants to help Twin Falls grow without taking away the small town feel.

A vote for Cope is a vote for hope!

Enlist a Hard-working Advocate for Twin Falls

I feel that Suzanne Hawkins would be a great Twin Falls city councilwoman.

Like many of us women of today, Suzanne wears many hats — a wife, mother, grandmother, friend, successful businesswoman, volunteer and, hopefully, Twin Falls city councilwoman. She is an upstanding citizen with the best of intentions, enriching ideas and the drive to help make Twin a better place to live.

By voting Suzanne Hawkins for Twin Falls City Council Seat 4, the community will have enlisted one very honest and hard-working advocate for the city of Twin.

Thank you.
CARRIE JOHNSTON

Growth Brings Challenges

I love Twin Falls and have been a part of this community my whole life. In that time, there have been some changes. I remember when Randy Hansen Chevrolet was clear out of town, when Target was just a row of poplars, and even when O'Leary Junior High was next to the courthouse. Twin Falls has grown from a small town to a small city!

Growth brings many challenges that forever affect the future. I would like to bring a fresh, common sense, business approach to effectively deal with these challenges in a positive way.

After high school, I worked to earn a degree in business administration and marketing from Utah State University. After evaluating employment offers — some far from home — I chose to return to Twin Falls and work in the insurance business. Ten years ago, I had the opportunity to purchase the business which became Starley Leavitt Insurance. We have since successfully protected businesses and individuals throughout our community.

My wife and I have raised four children in Twin Falls and, during the last 21 years, we have been privileged to donate time and resources to various sports organizations, schools, church and community functions. My commitment to hard work and my knowledge of the needs of our community will ensure I will make common sense decisions for Twin Falls. With proper decisions about growth, I believe Twin Falls will always be a great place for my kids to return and live.

I have enjoyed attending the Twin Falls City Council meetings and observing procedures. I know I can serve our community in this capacity. On Nov. 8, I am asking for your vote. I am looking forward to living and serving in Twin Falls for many years to come.

It's Time for Americans to Put Mitt Romney's Religion Aside

Mainstream Mormonism is no cult, and Mitt Romney is more fit to be president for his work in the church.

Growing up in New York, my family and best friend, John, visited the Mormon Pavilion at the World's Fair in 1965. My mother and John filled out a card to learn more, and before long, missionaries — classically attired in white shirt and tie — arrived at our door steps. My mother and I did not have much interest, but John soon began a journey completed by becoming a Mormon at the age of 17.

Impressed by his sincere faith, I made it my business, while attending a secular college, to learn about Mormonism — not from a missionary looking to score a convert — but through courses about religion in society and research papers.

Mormonism is not something I could accept as a faith — you will never get the Catholic out of me, even if I attend an Episcopal Church in Georgetown.

Mormons believe in the salvation story that makes Christianity a separate faith, not merely a separate sect, from Judaism. However, Mormons also believe mortals possess the potential for divinity — to live a life like God in the hereafter — if they live a truly just life here on earth.

The potential for our own divinity sounds farfetched and cult-like to rigid and inflexible Christians, such as Governor Perry supporter Rev. Robert Jeffress, but no more so than did the divinity of Christ and the Christian salvation story to First Century Jews or their Roman rulers. What is more important is what Mormons believe and teach to their children about what God expects from each of us in our relationships with our fellow human beings — or what it takes to live a good life.

Mormons believe, like other Christians, each human being is imperfect but capable, through faith and good deeds, of improving — and is fact responsible to his creator to try. They teach hard work, thrift, respect for human life, and tolerance for the beliefs of others. On issues like the sanctity of marriage and abortion, mainstream Mormon's positions may not endear them to libertine intellectuals and progressives, but they are hardly out of step with what many conservative Catholics and Protestants believe.

As much as any faith community, Mormons believe each of us is responsible to assist those less fortunate, fallen or beset by troubles — through real gifts of time and resources — and that such acts of charity improve the condition of the man or woman who extends the helping hand as much as the one who receives the lift.

More importantly, Mormonism has imparted on Mitt Romney an indelible imprint that makes him more fit, not less, to be President.

The son of a Michigan Governor and holder of both an MBA and law degree from Harvard, Mr. Romney grew up in privilege and became wealthy in business as founder of Bain Capital, a private equity company. However, the Mormon Church does not have a professional clergy — full-time ministers in the manner of the Catholic and mainstream Protestant clergy — but rather calls on laymen to lead the worship and counsel fellow congregants and those in need.

As a young man, Mitt Romney served as leader of his congregation and later as Boston Stake President — overseeing a region similar to a Catholic or Episcopal diocese. In those capacities, he made remarkable efforts — some successful and others not — to combat urban gangs, reach out to other faith communities and generally administer his church's welfare system that helps the needy.

He made parish calls, counseled his fellow congregants and worked with those that were troubled — in trials of faith and life. Through these experiences, he saw how the other side lives in a manner that many who devote their lives to business or politics never do or try very hard to leave behind.

Romney has gone to those places in our communities that most of us would prefer to avoid and subcontract to professional clergy, and assuage our guilt by writing checks.

Romney has visited and worked in those places where the human condition is blighted by poverty, poor personal decisions, drug abuse, deceit, and worse. By the accounts of those who know him — not his own bragging — he performed those tasks with energy, enduring commitment and considerable sacrifice of his own time and money.

Mitt Romney is no mother Theresa — but no one can be her and be a good spouse and parent, businessman, governor, and aspire to be president. However, he lives a faith that teaches the dignity of man, tolerance for human diversity, the power of charity to improve the lives of those that give as well as those that receive, and potential for redemption when we fail — which each of us does in some measure.

If that's a cult, then maybe Rev. Jeffress should sign up for some lessons.
