SPUDS IN SCHOOLS

TIMES-NEWS ILLUSTRATION

As popular as ever, the potato — a basic staple to some, a fried menace to others — again finds itself in the center of controversy.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

No matter how you slice them, potatoes are popular. From the crop to the store to the home, potatoes are easily available, cheap and fairly simple to prepare. Yet recent threats to limit the amount of starchy foods in school lunches sparked increased scrutiny of the spud's nutritional merits from health advocates and lawmakers. Idaho Republican Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch have co-sponsored an amendment that would prevent the U.S. Department of Agriculture from limiting the amount of vegetables — including potatoes — served in school lunches. The funding bill it's attached to has to pass through Congress for it to hold. As a potato farmer in Oakley and a member of the National Potato Council, Randy Hardy says banning a vegetable isn't the solution. He suggests monitoring how vegetables are served instead.

Still Evolving, Idaho Energy Jobs Take a Strong Hold

About 7 percent of Idaho jobs are in the energy sector, making the Gem State 14th nationally in energy job concentration.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Like wind, water and fire, energy jobs come in many forms. And according to the Idaho Department of Labor, they're here to stay, even if they're changing.

According to a recent Labor report, about 7 percent of Idaho work is energy-related, ranking the state 14th nationally in concentration of energy jobs.

The report also shows that Idaho will continue to have a sizeable energy sector, although the types of jobs that will be in demand are changing. Electrician and electrical engineer jobs are estimated to drop the most in the next seven years while team assemblers will see the biggest increase.

Gary Phillips, owner of Phillips Electric in Wendell, said Idaho energy jobs may be plentiful, but he's not sure how accessible they are. His business has been slow over the years

Police Puzzled by Shoshone Man Found Dead near Gooding

Body shows no signs of foul play as man's SUV is found in Jerome.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Passing motorists found the body of a 25-year-old Shoshone man Friday morning in Gooding County, according to Sheriff Shaun Gough. Juan Carlos Perez-Garcia was identified as the deceased man, whose body was found near 1500 East and 2100 South, approximately four miles southwest of Gooding. Law enforcement received the call at 10:16 a.m. Gough said the cause of death remains unknown until an autopsy can be performed.

"We have no idea," Gough said. "There isn't a mark on the body." Perez-Garcia was last seen by family at approximately 9 p.m. Thursday, driving a green 1993 Chevrolet Blazer. Investigators found the SUV in Jerome after receiving a call from a woman who spotted the vehicle after reading a Times-News report. The sheriff's office took possession of the vehicle to begin the search for forensic evidence or other clues as to what happened to Perez-Garcia.

Anyone with information on this case should contact the Gooding County Sheriff's Office at 934-4421.

New Signal to Provide Safer Walks to Jerome Schools

A second HAWK beacon on Jerome's busiest street will provide more safety for walkers near Summit Elementary and Jerome

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Jerome school crossing guard Diana McCaughey has seen how unsafe some students' walk to school can be.

She spends weekday mornings in the middle of the busy intersection of North Lincoln and 10th avenues, holding a stop sign so students can safely cross. That's not always enough to prevent motorists from blowing through, though.

"At least three cars have gone through while I was standing in the middle of the road," she said.

Thanks to a $50,000 change, Mc-

Caughey's job will now be a little easier.

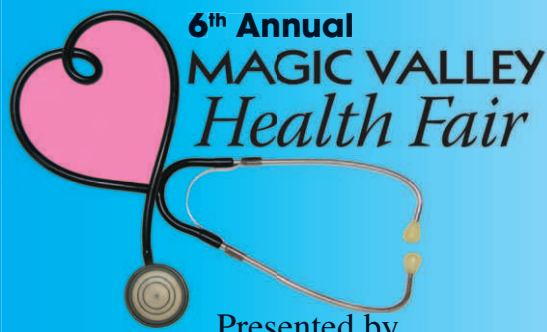

The city of Jerome and Jerome School District jointly funded a project to put a HAWK beacon system at the intersection. The traffic control device looks similar to a traffic light, but only stops traffic when a pedestrian pushes the button to cross.

Installing the beacon at the intersection near Summit Elementary and Jerome Middle schools cost about $50,000 and took one year to complete.

"Funds are short for everyone these days, so it was a great time to work together," Jerome schools chief Dale Layne said during a Friday ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Jerome Public Works Director Walt Appell said the related expense and results of an engineering study didn't justify installing a traffic light at the intersection.

AFib: A Common Disorder, which Comes with Other Problems

Over the past few weeks my heart feels like it is racing and I feel weak all the time. Could it be atrial fibrillation?

— Melvin, Eden

Answered by Dr. Dan Brown, St. Luke’s Clinic, Cardiology:

If you are experiencing irregular heartbeats and constantly feel weak, it is very important that you contact your health care provider. You could be suffering from a disorder known as atrial fibrillation. AFib is a very common disorder of cardiac rhythm. It is easy to diagnose with an electrocardiogram (an ultrasound of the heart). There will be a few cases where AFib comes and goes, but most cases have persistent AFib.

Half of those who are diagnosed with AFib also experience sleep apnea. Sleep apnea is a sleep disorder, characterized by abnormal pauses in breathing or instances of abnormally low breathing during sleep.

The main concern with AFib is the potential for stroke. The low pressure chambers of the heart, the atrium, quiver in AFib. In the left atrium, there is a place where the blood stagnates, increasing the likelihood of clot formation. If a clot occurs, it can migrate to the brain, causing a stroke.

The goal in treatment of AFib is to alter the heart’s electrical system with medications, cardioversion (an electric shock that can return the heart rhythm to normal) catheter ablations, or advanced surgical options. If a person is also diagnosed with sleep apnea, a CPAP machine can also aid in the treatment of this disorder.

Jerome Sheriff Reports Rash of Vehicle Burglaries

TIMES-NEWS

The Jerome County Sheriff’s Office is reminding residents to lock their cars and garages, as a dozen burglaries have been reported in the county over the last 10 days.

Chief Deputy Jack Johnson said vehicles and garages left unlocked have been hit by thieves looking for personal property to pilfer, mostly at residences just south of Jerome city limits. The burglaries are thought to have taken place at night. The sheriff’s office encourages people to lock up and leave lights on at night.

Local Sales Tax Power Could Go to Voters

BY JOSH AWTRY

jawtry@magicvalley.com

In 2008, Idaho’s Legislature wrangled over a local option sales tax — a proposal that would give communities the ability to vote on adding local sales tax to pay for specific needs.

If an informal group of current and former mayors gets its way, the local option debate will come back in a big way this year — without legislators’ help.

Lance Clow presented the group’s case before the Public Policy Committee of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Friday. Clow hopes to use Idaho’s citizen initiative process to empower cities to enact their own sales tax. If enough signatures are gathered by the April 30 deadline, the law doesn’t need legislative approval — it would go directly to voters on the 2012 ballot.

“Leave the word ‘tax’ off the plate for a second,” Clow told Chamber at a meeting

Friday morning. “This is about local authority.”

Clow said the Legislature has bestowed little power on cities to solve local financing issues.

He also noted that the current law on Idaho’s books is unequal. “It already exists,” Clow said of the ability for cities to control their own sales tax. Resort communities like Sun Valley and Stanley can ask voters for permission to raise taxes, but most of Idaho cannot.

Shawn Barigar, president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, said that the organization supported the issue when it last came up, but only with specific criteria attached. “It needed to be for a specific project,” Barigar said. “It had to have a sunset, and there needed to be property tax relief as a result.”

The topic of easing property tax rates as a tradeoff for a local option sales tax was a popular thread at Friday’s meeting.

“It’s a regressive tax,” said Brent Jussel, senior vice president of Business Lending Solutions in Twin Falls, regarding the sales tax. “It affects poorer households. If you’re just a renter, all you’re going to see is an increase in taxes.”

Jussel suggested that, if the local option tax were to pass, citizens would need to see a reduction in other fees like water and sewer.

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, is opposed to the measure.

“I’m not sure people would vote for an initiative that would raise their own taxes,” he said. Besides, Hartgen continued, “What we’re saying is, ‘We want to be able to tax others to pay for our needs.’”

Hartgen is concerned that varying tax rates on the local level would create a confusing patchwork, and it would ultimately drive retail business away from cities that enact the tax.

Despite contention over

What Would it Do?

The local option sales tax would give communities throughout Idaho the authority to ask residents to vote on a sales tax not to exceed 1 percent. The law currently exists for resort communities in the state such as Sun Valley, Sandpoint, Riggins, Driggs and Donnelly.

How Would it Pass?

If the Legislature doesn’t pass the bill, it could go to voters via the citizen initiative process. Organizers would have to gather at least 47,432 signatures of registered voters by April 30, 2012. If that happens, the initiative would appear on the ballot for voters in 2012.

the law, Bill Knopp, executive director of United Way of South Central Idaho, says the option should be up to locals in the end.

“It should be up to the individuals in the community,” he said.

Clow agrees. “We’re not saying we want to increase taxes. We want to allow communities to have some control over their own destiny.”

Energy

and he hasn’t needed as many employees. But with Idaho home to several proposed wind projects, he expected his employees to find work easily.

“I’ve had several employees attempt to apply as an electrician for wind projects in American Falls, but they don’t get a call back,” he said. “Instead, these companies bring their own electricians and don’t need to hire anyone in the state.”

Starting up an electrical contractor business was popular before the recession, Phillips said. Now, demand for those jobs has slowed as once-explosive wind farm development has tapered off.

“There’s been a decline,” he said. “Some areas are doing well if you’re specialized, but everyone has taken a hit.”

Bill Grinstein, who helps run Electric Power Systems in Hailey, says the electrical service company’s main clientele is in Alaska.

Grinstein works remotely from Hailey on power systems in Alaska and seldom travels north. He says he moved to Idaho to get more sunshine and still be able to do the same work.

“I rarely have customers from Idaho,” he said.

The continual fluctuations in the state’s energy sector will require potential workers to have a more adaptable skill set, said Todd Schwarz, instructional dean at the College of Southern Idaho.

“There’s no question that the energy sector is something we’re paying attention to,” he said. “We look at a variety of sources to help determine what programs we should offer. When it appears something is emerging, we’ll talk to industry folks and see what the local impact might be.”

CSI offers an industrial mechanic program that combines a variety of energy, environmental and mechanical classes. The school has recently added a wind technology program.

“It’s pretty silly to be in a training program that only focuses on one specialized thing,” Schwarz said. “The marketplace is much more competitive.”

It’s the second time a HAWK beacon system has been installed near Jerome schools. The first was at the intersection of South Lincoln and Avenue I, the site of two fatal accidents involving pedestrians in recent years.

Jerome Mayor John Shine said the latest project will improve student safety while they’re walking to and from school.

“Getting them across the street has been a challenge,” he said.

A small group of fourth- and fifth-graders at Summit Elementary tried out the new traffic control device Friday, escorted by McCaughey.

The system won’t replace her, Appell said, due to the high number of students who cross at the intersection. McCaughey just won’t have to stand in the middle of the road anymore.

“I think it will probably be a little safer,” she said.

Potato

“From a potato-growing standpoint, we’re always fighting some sort of nutritional uphill battle,” he said. “A lot of it stems from misinformation and diet fads.”
He says the fight against obesity shouldn’t be grounds to encourage people to believe that potatoes are unhealthy. Schools have been a major focus for those seeking stricter menu guidelines because childhood obesity and chronic disease rates continue to climb throughout the nation, said Susan Henderson, food services supervisor for the Twin Falls School District.
In her district, elementary school cafeterias dole out 750 pounds of potatoes every time they are listed on the menu, Henderson said.

“I only serve potatoes once a week in the high schools and maybe twice a month in the elementary schools,” she said. “They help keep costs down and at the same time I’m meeting the federal guidelines.”
According to the National Potato Commission, potatoes contain higher amounts of potassium than bananas and contain 8 percent of a person’s daily fiber.
Yet common uses of potatoes involve frying or piling on condiments that are high in fat, said Marion Wallace, a registered nurse and nutrition counselor in Twin Falls.
For example, the average baked potato starts with 110 calories. A combination of butter, sour cream, cheddar cheese and bacon bits can quickly add up to 550 calories and 36 grams of fat.

“When people think of potatoes, they usually lump all potatoes as french fries,” she said. “But the potato is so much more than just a fried food.”
Food assistance programs encourage the consumption of potatoes but not all cover the costs. Idaho’s Women, Infants and Children program, overseen by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, provides assistance for foods like milk, eggs, cereal, fruits and vegetables — but not potatoes.
“We’re not trying to pick on the potato,” said Tammy Walters, WIC coordinator and nutritionist for the South

Central Public Health District. “It’s already so well liked and commonly used that we just wanted to give people the opportunity to buy something they wouldn’t normally purchase.”
In the meantime, the fight over how much and where to serve potatoes is far from over, Hardy said.

“We watch for something new to pop up every day and we’re prepared for whatever that will be thrown at us,” he said. “But we’re in a good position. We have a lot of people working in Washington.”

Congress OKs Bill That May Help Ski Resorts

IDAHO STATESMAN

Idaho ski areas could get a boost from a bill co-sponsored by Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho, and passed by both houses of Congress.

The Ski Area Recreational Opportunity Act of 2011 allows the U.S. Forest Service to grant permits to ski resorts on a year-round instead of seasonal basis. It also expands the definition of allowable recreation activities to include sledging, tubing, zip lines, mountain biking, Friskie golf and high-ropes courses.

The act wouldn't change anything soon for Bogus Basin or Brundage ski resorts in Idaho, but it would let them expand activities in the future, said representatives of both resorts.

"This is going to be a big plus in opening up ... opportunities for summer recreation and also more employment during the off season," said April Russell, a spokeswoman for Brundage Mountain Resort, which runs a 1,500-acre ski area in the Payette National Forest near Mc-

Call. "It removes some of the red tape and makes it easier for the forests to make decisions about those permits."

The Lookout Ski Resort in north Idaho was the first to ask Risch to take on the issue. His staff checked with other resorts, which were supportive, said Brad Hoaglund, a spokesman for Risch.

Most Idaho ski resorts use Forest Service permits for ski operations, some more than others depending on how much private land they lease or have, Hoaglund said.

Body Found in Swan Falls Reservoir Identified as Missing Paraglider

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • On Thursday, Boise police asked if anyone had seen Andrew E. Schepp, a 40-year-old paragliding enthusiast who had been missing since last Friday.

By 8 p.m., they had their answer when Ada County Sheriff's deputies removed the body of Schepp from the cliffside on the east side of the Swan Falls Reservoir.

Some fishermen found the body Thursday afternoon and told an Idaho Power employee, who called Ada County dispatchers to report that a body was seen in a remote part of the reservoir area about 3:30 p.m. Thursday. By the time deputies removed it, they were pretty sure it was Schepp.

An autopsy performed Friday confirmed his identity, according to Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg. Shepp died from blunt force trauma — in multiple places — according to coroner's reports. The manner of death is listed as pending.

Ada County Sheriff's detectives say the injuries are consistent with a significant fall from above.

The body was not in the water but sheriff's deputies had to use a boat to get to it, according to reports.

Sheriff's deputies found Schepp's vehicle — a gold BMW SUV — Friday morning on the top of the cliff near where others have jumped off to go paragliding in the past, according to reports.

In addition, a member of the public found paragliding gear near the bottom of the canyon and called Crime Stoppers Thursday morning. It is unclear exactly when that equipment was found.

Schepp did not have a paragliding harness on when he was found. Detectives are still trying to figure out what happened but say there is no evidence of any foul play.

Family members reported Schepp missing Tuesday. He hadn't been seen by anybody since Oct. 14 and police officials said Thursday they suspected he went paragliding last weekend.

Boise Wins Federal Grant for Transit System Study

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • The city of Boise has gotten a $375,000 grant to look at the best alternatives for a Downtown transit system.

The U.S. Department of Transportation money will pay to investigate the best routes for a system that would connect Boise's Downtown core with surrounding neighborhoods; the best kind of transportation to use; and how a system could best serve the Boise State campus.

"This is the piece we were missing in 2008 when we first proposed a streetcar project," Mayor Dave Bieter said in a press release. "The city is committed to doing its part to create a comprehensive transportation system for the Boise Valley, including commuter rail, improved bus service and a Downtown circulator. This alternatives analysis will get us one step closer to that goal."

Having a good public transportation system in place is a key component for Boise's economy, Boise Metro Chamber of Commerce President Bill Connors said in the release. "The cities that have failed to do so have paid a high economic price as they struggle to build transportation infrastructure long after it becomes needed."

The grant is part of $928.5 million in federal funds that went to 300 public transportation projects across the country. The grants are will go toward replacing or refurbishing aging buses; building or improving bus terminals, garages, and other transit facilities; installing bus-related equipment; and conducting studies to help communities select the best transit options to meet future transportation needs.

The grant process was competitive. The Federal Transit Administration reviewed 839 applications representing $4.9 billion. The Boise study will be supervised by the City's Public Works Department and performed by an engineering firm selected through competitive bids. Valley Regional Transit, COMPASS and the Capital City Development Commission will participate in the study.

BBB Warns Scams Are on Rise

POST REGISTER

IDAHO FALLS • A weak economy signals opportunity for scam artists.

Dale Dixon advised businesses and individuals to be cautious when giving out financial information.

Dixon is president and CEO of the Better Business Bureau in the Snake River Region.

He said that because wages tend to be higher in the Idaho Falls area than in other regions in the state, people here often are targeted for scams.

And those targets aren't necessarily whom you typically might suspect.

Specifically, scam artists are more likely to target younger people than senior citizens.

"When you look at the demographics, according to the (Consumer) Sentinel study from the Federal Trade Commission, people between the ages of 20 and 59 account for 84 percent of the victims of fraud and identity theft," Dixon said. "They are mobile, they have money and they are busy. And oftentimes they are looking to earn more money, and the scam artist knows that."

Dixon said that because of a familiarity with technology, younger scam targets are accustomed to responding to requests in text messages and emails. He said it is easy for individuals to follow the instructions of a text message and suddenly "that credit card number is in the hands of a thief."

A Variety of Approaches

Scammers use a variety of approaches — everything from knocking on doors to sending out phishing emails directing targets to fake, official-looking websites. But many scams originate with a phone call.

Jill Schurman of Ammon said that in the past month, two scam artists have contacted her attempting to gather personal information.

Schurman said the first call was from someone claiming to be with Publisher's Clearing House, saying she had won $950,000.

"Even my adrenaline went up when they said I won $950,000 before I realized it was a scam," Schurman said. "It's easy for that to happen to people, and especially in these (financial) times. There are a lot of these scams going on."

Schurman said she believes the elderly are very susceptible to being scammed and called it a "big problem," even in Idaho Falls. When she received the deceiving call, she first reported it to police and then the Better Business Bureau.

Dixon said it's wise to be wary.

"When we were kids, we learned 'stop, drop and roll' in the case of fire," Dixon said. "When it comes to scams, I say 'delete, hang up and shred' to keep from getting burned."

If an unsolicited email or phone call asks for any kind of personal information, delete it or hang up. Dixon said to not respond or click on the links in the emails.

Personal information includes addresses, Social Security numbers, credit card numbers, banking account information or date of birth.

"Don't try to play (scam artists). So many times people say they knew it was a scam and decided to play around with them," Dixon said. "These are highly skilled individuals that operate at a global level. They are trained and skilled, and their full-time job is to steal money."

Frequent scams include the use of stolen credit card numbers and checks, false lotteries or false business transactions. In the BBB service area, Dixon said "a slow month" would be $200,000 a month in scams. A "fast month with a lot going on" would be $450,000 a month.

Scammers also target unsuspecting businesses, particularly as the holidays approach.

Chris Hall, Walmart market asset protection manager for the eastern Idaho market, said he thinks the economy has played a part in scam artists continuing their efforts.

"In October and November, we normally see a spike (in scam numbers), and that may be in part because of the Christmas season and increased traffic and merchandise (in the store)," Hall said. "There are some crime groups that specialize just in Christmas season crime."

Hall did not think this year has seen significantly more scams than years prior.

Even so, he also urged caution as the best approach.

"The best thing (businesses) can do is just be cautious of transactions that are abnormal," Hall said. "Just be aware of it, and don't be afraid to slow down and ask questions and make sure it's legitimate."

Holy Algorithm!

Software finds multiple biblical authors, according to Israeli researchers.

BY NANCY SZOKAN

The Washington Post

In both Jewish and Christian traditions, Moses is believed to have written the Torah — the first five books of the Bible, also known as the Pentateuch.

But for many years, scholars have presented evidence that these books, as well as much of the rest of the Bible, were the work of many unknown authors.

Now Israeli researchers have come up with a computer algorithm that they say can recognize linguistic cues and separate, if not identify, writers who contributed to various parts of the Bible.

Nachum Dershowitz of Tel Aviv University's Blavatnik School of Computer Science said the new software searches for and compares details that might be as simple as one author's preference for the word "said" instead of "spoke."

To test the algorithm, the researchers put together a text that combined randomly mixed passages from the books of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, two books whose authorship is generally not challenged. The computer program categorized chapters by the author's preference for certain synonyms and assessed the usage of common words. It identified which passage had come from which book with 99 percent accuracy, the researchers said.

The algorithm cannot identify the number of probable authors involved, Dershowitz said, but it can help identify transition points where the source of the text changes.

Cd'A Student's Family Confronts Aftermath of Crash

BY ALECIA WARREN
Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE • Jodie Nichols still vividly recalls her son crossing the stage this June to grasp his high school diploma. Endless opportunities stretched ahead, she knew, with Brenden's glittering resume. He had nailed every AP class Coeur d'Alene High School had to offer, and had completed a marathon at 15. Accepted at Carroll College in Helena, Mont., he intended to become a neurosurgeon. "I knew there were no limits for him," Jodie said.

Now, after sitting at her son's side for several harrowing days in St. Patrick Hospital in Missoula, Jodie is depending on Brenden's perseverance to clear an entirely different obstacle.

"You have to be (strong), when you have a child going through this," the Coeur d'Alene mother said firmly, talking over the phone from the hospital on Thursday.

Brenden, who turned 18 this August, is still lingering in a coma after a severe car accident last weekend. His parents, Jodie and Ken, are optimistic now that he has made it through the first wavering 72 hours, when doctors warned they couldn't be certain if he would ever wake up.

Now they are confident he will, though it could take several months.

After that, extensive rehabilitation awaits to address his broken neck, broken ribs, collapsed lung and severe brain trauma.

But Jodie has no doubt, Brenden will still achieve everything he had planned.

Becoming a surgeon. Finishing Ironman.

"I'm thinking, 'This is a kid who's going to do anything, regardless of what he has to get through,'" she said. "Because I have to."

Brenden had made the trip before, from Carroll College to Kooskia, where he had been driving late Saturday night to meet his father and 16-year-old brother for a hunting trip.

State troopers believe he must have swerved to avoid hitting an animal, causing the car to roll. His seat belt saved his life, allowing him to breathe as he hung upside down.

A trucker and his wife eventually discovered the wreck, and drove to an emergency phone to call for help. Brenden was removed from the crushed vehicle with special cutting tools, and was hastened to the Missoula hospital.

"As a mom, it's like the worst nightmare you can ever have," Jodie said. "When you get that call, they don't tell you if your son's alive. They tell you he was breathing when he left in the ambulance."

No drugs or alcohol were involved in the accident, she added.

The family has been inundated with concerns from friends, she said, more than she knew he had.

But it's no surprise, given Brenden's endless community endeavors. He just earned his Eagle Scout title this summer, and had been a youth leader for several years at Lake City Community Church.

He participated in local theater productions, and had been on his high school's cross country and swim teams, as well as a member of the chamber choir.

Around his pre-med course load at college, he was tutoring friends and training for Ironman.

Laura Little, close family friend who followed Jodie on the drive to the hospital, added that several friends from Carroll College have already visited Brenden.

"Anytime we're in the room, it's only positive talk," Little said. "We talk to him just like everybody's always talked to him."

Jodie, a self-taught artist, said her husband, Ken, a civil engineer, just started with a new company. They have health insurance, she said.

Folks who want to show support can make donations at any Wells Fargo Bank, with checks written to Brenden's Angels. Contributions can also be mailed to Wells Fargo at 204 West Hayden Ave., Hayden, ID, 83835.

The family is also posting updates about Brenden's condition at www.caringbridge.org/visit/brendennichols, and on a Facebook page.

"Thank you for everyone's well wishes and prayers," Jodie said.

Brenden's younger brother Morgan is struggling without his big brother for advice, she added.

"He's been listening to Brenden's phone message, to listen to his voice," she said.

The family has been coaching Brenden through this like he's fighting through an Ironman competition, Jodie said.

The first 72 hours was like the swim portion, she said. Now he's on to a long, winding bike ride.

He'll make it, she said. And his family will be waiting for him at the finish line.

"He's likely to get flat tires, but slow and steady wins the race," Jodie said.

I.F. Space Center's Director Eyes Manned Mars Mission

BY SVEN BERG
Post Register

IDAHO FALLS • The people who work in the Center for Space Nuclear Research in Idaho Falls aren't shy about sharing their very lofty goal.

They want to go to Mars.

And it's not just a bunch of remote-controlled, sample-seeking missions they want to see, though that kind of voyage is part of what they do. In fact, one of the group's main projects is developing a "hopper" that would exploit the heat produced by plutonium to leap around Mars' surface, gathering samples.

Down the road, however, the center's researchers want to land humans on the surface of the red planet.

If that goal has a science-fiction sound to it, it's probably a reflection of the thinking of the center's director, Steven Howe. Wild-sounding theories and far-reaching ideas are all in a day's work for Howe, said Bill Rogers, director of the Center for Advanced Energy Studies, where Howe's group is headquartered.

"He's out there on the edge," Rogers said. "You just never know when one of these things is going to hit and revolutionize the way things are done."

The center's researchers

"Are we going to relinquish space to the Chinese and (India), or are we going to still try to compete?"

Steven Howe, director of the Center for Space Nuclear Research in Idaho Falls believe the key to their Mars aspirations may well lie in the past — nearly 50 years in the past, in fact.

Howe said designs for nuclear-powered rockets that were drawn up in the heat of the space race could be tweaked enough for a manned mission to Mars.

The concept for making the rockets work is fairly simple. A tank holding perhaps 400 tons of liquid hydrogen sits atop the rocket. To move the rocket, a pump pushes the hydrogen downward into a pressure vessel, where it shifts from a liquid to a gas. That gas is then pushed down through the channels of a small nuclear reactor, where it absorbs a tremendous amount of heat.

The heat causes the hydrogen to pick up speed. A nozzle at the bottom of the rocket channels the chaotically moving hydrogen in one direction: out the back of the rocket, creating the thrust to move the vessel.

"There's no oxygen here to explode," Howe said. "And so it's fundamentally safer than the engines on the (space shuttle)."

Operating a nuclear reactor onboard the vessel will raise concerns about the safety of its human occupants, because nuclear fission produces dangerous "fission products" that can lead to serious injury and illness.

It's a riddle the rocket scientists of the 1960s never solved, Howe said. But he believes a reactor core built from tungsten will trap those fission products, even if the reactor malfunctions or is damaged in some kind of mishap.

INL contractor Battelle Energy Alliance created the Center for Space Nuclear Research in 2005. Its mission is to develop and research ways to apply nuclear concepts to space exploration. The Universities Space Research Association operates the center.

As recognition of his work at the center, Howe has been named one of five finalists for an international technology award. He'll find out Wednesday whether he won.

In a best-case scenario,

Howe said, the hopper could land on Mars in five to six years. A vehicle that would collect the hopper's gathered samples could return them to Earth in perhaps a decade. The Holy Grail of space exploration — putting a human on Mars — could be done by 2030, if everything went just right, Howe said.

In fact, the first phases of building and testing the rocket technology could begin much sooner, he said.

"We do think we can build the fuel. We can build the engine, and we can test in the current environment safely," Howe said. "If you really wanted to, we could get the nuclear rocket up and tested in a five- to six-year time frame."

The most uncertain ingredient in the mission is political will, he said. As the nation's budget priorities shift with political winds, ensuring a stable, long-term supply of money to develop space-exploration programs is next to impossible.

Howe believes that uncertainty jeopardizes the United States' standing in a field in which the country has long been a world leader.

"Are we going to relinquish space to the Chinese and (India)," he said, "or are we going to still try to compete?"

Bujak Responds to Idaho State Bar Charges of Professional Misconduct

BY KRISTIN RODINE
Idaho Statesman

Former Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak's legal woes expanded Friday when the Idaho State Bar filed a complaint that could lead to a suspension of his license to practice law in this state.

Bujak said he could not discuss the merits of the pending case, but "the timing of the complaint is very suspicious to me" since the alleged actions took place years ago but the complaints weren't filed until after he said he was considering running for Canyon prosecutor again next year.

"Since I need to be licensed to practice law to run for prosecutor, suspending my license to practice law is an easy way to take me out of the race," he said, speculating that "political pressure" might be involved in the timing.

The complaint, filed with the State Bar's professional conduct board, focuses on Bujak's handling of two clients before he became county prosecutor in January 2009. The first charge alleges Bujak wrongfully took $3,780 in payments for the estate of a former client in 2008 before he took office rather than passing the money on to the estate or its new attorney.

The second charge alleges Bujak violated professional standards when he prepared a will for an elderly woman in 2006 that bequeathed the woman's estate to Bujak and his assistant, Mary Ann Hanks. He also drew up documents for a trust that included the woman's home and other assets and was assigned to Hanks, with Bujak also listed as a beneficiary.

In 2011, the client hired a new attorney to review the will and trust, and that attorney successfully pursued revocation of those documents in 3rd District Court. The court action nullified the will and trust but made no findings of fault. Bujak admitted no wrongdoing.

The Idaho Bar Association contends Bujak violated the IBA rule against soliciting a substantial gift from a client.

The complaint asks that Bujak, who is now doing contract work for area lawyers, be suspended from practicing law and be ordered to pay unspecified restitution and the costs incurred in the investigation.

Bujak was elected Canyon County Prosecutor in November 2008 and resigned Sept. 30, 2010 amid allegations that he failed to pay the county some $300,000 the city of Nampa paid directly to Bujak for using county resources to handle city misdemeanor cases. Bujak contends he doesn't owe the money, and he and county leaders have each indicated lawsuits are on the horizon.

The county will go to court next month to try to keep Bujak's bankruptcy trustee from claiming more money from the Nampa contract as assets that can be distributed among all of Bujak's many creditors. Earlier this month, Bujak waived discharge of his debts, which means his Chapter 7 case will not protect him from his paying off his debts.

A yearlong investigation into whether any criminal charges should be filed against Bujak has not been completed.

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, for belatedly figuring out the definition of “lifetime.”

The department unknowingly issued hunting tags to a man whose lifetime privileges were revoked not once, but three times.

In a press release dated Oct. 17, Matt O’Connell, a state conservation officer, noted that John Hoffman may well be hanging up his gun for good — at least in Idaho. Hoffman pleaded guilty to numerous charges for repeatedly obtaining hunting licenses while under a lifetime ban.

His reasoning? The machine let him get a license.

According to O’Connell, the program has now been revised to prevent “persons serving one (or more) lifetime license suspensions from purchasing a license.”

You’d think that bit of logic would have been included the first time.

CHEERS to Jennifer Miller, a teacher at Magic Valley High School, for not just keeping the arts alive, but helping them thrive.

At a time when schools are being forced to pare down arts, music and drama, it’s heartening to see a strong drama program at an alternative high school for at-risk students.

Miller was recently recognized as the Idaho Drama Teacher of the Year for her efforts. It’s a nice honor, to be sure, but we feel she deserves extra praise for helping to prove the strong connection between the arts and academics.

The engaging drama program helps students not only academically succeed, but offers them a way to feel involved, be part of a team and — if they perform well — bow in front of a sea of applause.

If you’re looking for a real-life “Glee” success story, look no further than the work Miller has done with the program at Magic Valley High.

JEERS to Blaine County Commissioner Larry Schoen for increasing the friction in an already tense situation over Friedman Memorial Airport.

In a memo to airport Manager Rick Baird, Commissioner Larry Schoen wrote of his willingness to use “eminent domain and acquisition by condemnation of any lands that could be determined to be necessary for expansion of Friedman Memorial Airport.”

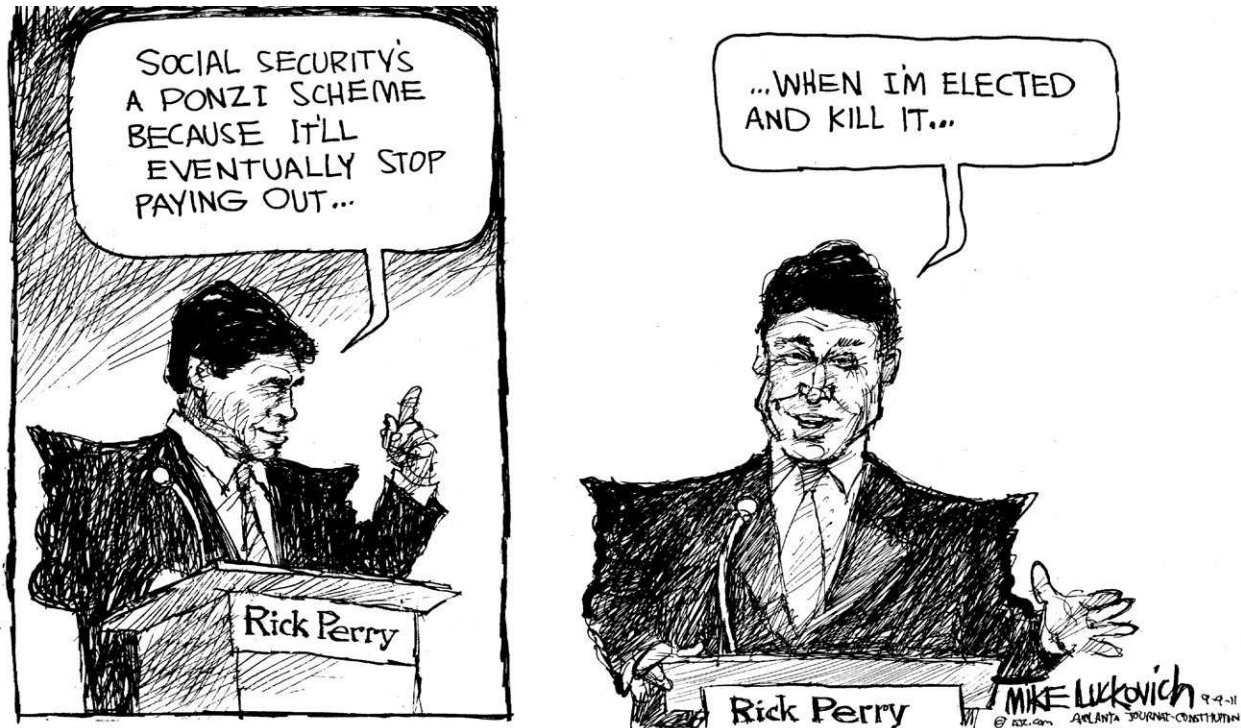

The memo didn’t represent the county or the airport board, but it highlighted the desperation involved in seeking a quick and functional solution to a big problem.

The FAA says the airport should be moved — it’s landlocked location amid mountains and residential areas are a problem. A new site located to the south carried a $300 million price tag the area can’t afford on its own.

Blaine County faces some tough decisions over the future of air service to keep their tourism industry thriving. Tensions are bound to warm up in the coming months, but the threat of eminent domain and condemnation of properties turns the heat up from a simmer to a boil.

“This will signal the death of the idea that Arab leaders are invincible. Mubarak is in a cage, Ben Ali ran away, and now Gadhafi killed. ... All this will bring down the red line that we can't get these guys.”

Four Iron-clad Demands for Occupy Wall Street

Michael Kinsley

Bloomberg News

So I sat down to write up some demands for Occupy Wall Street, Occupy Washington and the related groups that have sprung up to terrify the political and financial establishments.

Not everyone thinks demands are a good idea. Could this disparate collection of malcontents actually agree on a platform?

Conservatives who believe that raising taxes is futile and self-defeating may skip the rest of this sermon. Liberals who believe we can run up deficits indefinitely with no harm done may also stop reading.

Anyway (drumroll, please), here are my four demands.

First, a really humongous jobs bill. Big enough to shut up even Paul Krugman.

It could take the form of an infrastructure construction program like the WPA during the Great Depression. But if it were up to me, all the money would go to a reduction in the FICA Social Security tax. FICA is a direct tax — now about 15 percent — on every job in the country, with payment split between workers and employers. Reducing it would increase the demand for labor. It applies only to income from working, not from investments. Very low income people — who don’t even make enough to pay the regular income tax — must still pay FICA from dollar those accusations will be true. But how could Republicans object to a huge tax cut?

Second, abolish capital gains. (That’s shortened for easy use on a placard. I mean: Abolish the special tax break for capital gains. Dividends, too, for that matter.)

While profits on investments are currently taxed at a maximum of 15 percent, the tax on wages is a minimum of 15 percent (including Social Security). That’s why Warren Buffett pays less of his earnings in taxes than his secretary. It’s why hedge fund managers, whose income takes the form of capital gains, enjoy a break.

Defenders of special treatment for capital gains justify it by arguing that income from small businesses and other corporations is taxed twice: first at the corporate level, then again when an individual shareholder sells the stock or gets a dividend. But no one is required to do business as a corporation. Business owners can always choose not to incorporate and to pay ordinary income taxes on their respective shares of the profits. If they choose not to, it’s probably because there is a tax advantage to incorporation, not a disadvantage.

Third, end the Bush tax cuts — for everyone.

In 2001, George W. Bush devilishly put through a large tax cut that would expire shortly after he left office. Obama would like to make the tax cut permanent for couples with incomes of less than $250,000, but not for those making more. This would, in essence, be the tax increase on the affluent that Obama wants. Republicans would make the cuts permanent for everybody. This is backward: The Bush tax cuts should be allowed to expire for everybody, rich and middle class. This would return tax rates to the level of the Clinton years.

Fourth, expand the estate tax.

That same Bush 2001 tax cut included a gradual elimination of what Republicans brilliantly repositioned as the “death tax.” But if we must generate more revenue, which we must, why not get a bit of it from people who are in no condition to feel the pain?

For now, estates worth more than $5 million are taxed. Any expanded estate tax will undoubtedly have generous exemptions so that people can help their children. And anyone who doesn’t want the government to get any of his or her money can bequeath it instead to one of thousands of tax-deductible organizations, and pay no taxes on the amount donated. Anyone who can’t find some tax-deductible charitable cause that suits his or her prejudices is a nasty old coot.

LETTERS OF THANKS

The Turf Club Continues to Amaze

I recently attended a wedding at the Turf Club on Falls Avenue in Twin Falls. I am 24 years old and I’ve always loved the place since I was a little girl. I have very fond memories of events I have attended and dinners my family has catered there.

Once again I was blown away! The classic decor is breathtaking — the vast openness of the place! The drinks are extremely affordable and made with premium liquor.

Soran Food Services left me happy in my seat. I’m still thinking of the buffet days later. And, of course, the dance floor is the best spot to get your groove on with friends and family.

I want to thank Turf Club for being around for so many years and pray that it can continue to serve the community for years to come!

Smoke Jumper Extraordinaire

After 39 years as a wildland firefighter, including 33 years as a smoke jumper, Walt ‘Wally’ Wasser is retiring.

BY PATRICK ORR
McClatchy Newspapers

BOISE • For someone who spent almost four decades working every summer in the wilderness of the western United States, Walt “Wally” Wasser hasn’t seen much of the forest.

“One of the things when you fight fires in summertime is that you don’t have a summer life,” Wasser said.

Wasser will finally have the chance, retiring this fall after 39 years as a wildland firefighter, including 33 years as a smoke jumper.

While some wildland firefighters opt to stay on as temp workers during bad fire seasons after they retire, Wasser says he is done. No more firefighting. He doesn’t want to jump into the forest. He wants to walk in. At his leisure.

“I’m looking forward to retirement,” he said. “Really just want to travel through the West, going camping and backpacking and stuff like that.” He’s going to do stuff like play golf, hike California’s John Muir Trail and train for his next Ironman race.

Bureau of Land Management spokesman Don Smurthwaite says Wasser’s 395 smoke jumps are the most ever.

“Wally — the living legend,” said Jerry Drazinski, who has been smoke jumping with Wasser for 20 years. “He’s a natural athlete. Some guys look like Hercules, and they seem to be the ones who get hurt. It’s the tall, lanky guys like Wally that keep going.”

Drazinski also lauded Wasser’s toughness.

“He broke a femur one year (in the 1990s), and he came back and kept going,” Drazinski said.

“A lot of the young (jumpers) look up to him. Wally is proof that if you are young at heart, and keep working out and take care of yourself, you can keep doing it.”

So why is Wasser quitting? Mandatory retirement for smoke jumpers and all active federally employed full-time wildland firefighters is 57. Wally turned 57 in September. That being said, he is ready to stop.

“It’s good they have an age limit ... fighting fire is a tough job,” Wasser said. “I don’t do it like the guys who are 30 and 35 years old. They can hike up a hill a lot faster than I can.”

While he won’t necessarily miss the work, he will miss his fellow smoke jumpers — people who think it’s fun to jump out of planes and into forest fires — and then do backbreaking physical labor in incredibly dangerous conditions.

“That’s what I’ll miss. The people you work with are top-notch. You can trust a smoke jumper with anything,” Wasser said. “It doesn’t matter who they are or who they trained with.”

Wasser began fighting fires in 1973 in California, moving on to join engine and hot shot crews in the Sierra National Forest before joining the McCall smoke jumpers in 1979. He moved to the Boise NIFC crew in 1987 and worked there until September of this year.

Wasser decided to become a wildland firefighter after watching a Walt Disney special on the subject when he was a child in the 1960s. And once he started, he never left.

“Every time I was tempted to move on, I would ask the question, ‘Would I be happier doing something else?’ The answer was always no,” Wasser said.

Smoke jumpers parachute into remote areas to be able to provide a quick response to freshly started fires, trying to stop them before they can grow. It’s a dangerous, difficult job that requires excellent physical fitness and an ability to think clearly in dangerous situations. Firefighting tools, food and water are dropped by parachute to jumpers after they land near the fire, making them self-sufficient for the first 48 hours.

Wasser said his favorite jump was at Grand Gulch in eastern Utah, where the fire site was near ancient cliff dwellings and petroglyphs. His worst jump was in Oregon’s Mount Jefferson Wilderness area. That’s where he broke his leg.

His most interesting assignment was when he spent seven weeks in Russia in 1997 as part of an exchange program, jumping and rappelling into blazes in Siberia.

Boise State Peeks into its Past With ‘66 Time Capsule

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Boise State University popped the lid Friday on a 44-year-old time capsule placed in the then-new student union building to discover pictures of the football stadium with wooden bleachers and rules for parking fines.

The school was called Boise College at the time and its football coach Lyle Smith had a record of 144 wins, 20 losses and six ties through 1966.

The time capsule also had an old student handbook, a student newspaper — then called the Boise College Roundup — and a course catalog.

Rules for parking warned students that a parking fine would cost them 50 cents. Today it is $15.

The time capsule was discovered last year during renovation and expansion of the student union building.

A new capsule is being prepared for installation of the east side of the building in a few weeks, with instructions to open it in Oct. 21, 2061.

Among the contents: Bobbleheads of three former Boise State players, Austin Pettis, Titus Young and Ryan Winterswyk; a set of headphones; and a patch of the school’s famous blue turf.

The items were chosen after hearing ideas from students.

Man Found Dead in Canal Identified as Transient

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Ada County Coroner’s officials said Friday it appears Roy Claude Fosness likely died from drowning but are still waiting for toxicology tests to determine exactly how he died.

Fosness’ body was found in the New York Canal around 10:20 a.m. at the Hubbard Road Bridge, just east of Cloverdale Road, according to coroner’s reports.

An autopsy on the body has been completed and preliminary findings are consistent with fresh water drowning, Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg said Thursday. Investigators said there were no signs of trauma on the body, which appeared to have been in the water for at least several days, possibly longer.

A final determination on cause and manner of death won’t be made until toxicology tests have been completed, and that could take several weeks, Sonnenberg said.

The 56-year-old Fosness was a Boise resident but had no fixed address, according to coroner’s reports.

Investigators are still trying to figure out where Fosness fell into the canal.

Montana Couple Told to Pay Shelter in Animal Cruelty Case

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) • A north-west Montana couple with previous animal cruelty convictions in Idaho has been ordered to pay more than $14,000 in restitution to an animal shelter that cared for 116 cats seized from them.

Edwin and Cheryl Criswell were convicted of aggravated cruelty to animals after the dehydrated and emaciated cats were found living in filthy, snowbound trailers near Marion last December.

District Judge David Ortley gave Cheryl Criswell a two-year sentence deferred over a period of six years. Edwin Criswell got a two-year suspended sentence, the Daily Inter Lake reported Friday.

Cheryl Criswell also is required to continue mental health assessments and treatments at her own cost.

"I don't doubt for a minute, Mrs. Criswell, that you, at all times were operating under the best of intentions," Ortley said during Thursday's sentencing. "But I have no doubt that you were operating in a fog and had no appreciation for what the animals under your care went through."

The Criswells moved to Montana last year and told residents they were running a nonprofit cat sanctuary. But by late last year they were running out of food and the animals were seized, authorities said.

The restitution order was much less than the $400,000 in boarding fees the Flathead County Animal Shelter sought based on its boarding fee of $25 per day per cat.

Both defendants were ordered to complete 200 hours of community service and Ortley left open the option to do that work at an agency that involves the care of animals, if they can find one to accept them.

They were allowed to keep an elderly dog and are each allowed one companion animal that must be spayed or neutered as long as they can prove they have the ability to house and care for them.

Ortley rejected their request to keep four of the cats that had been seized.

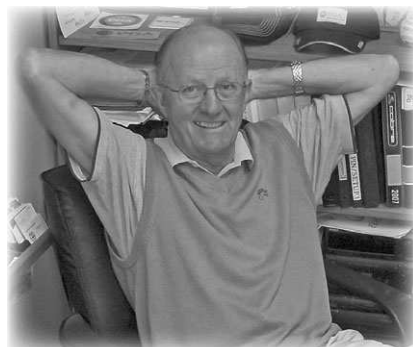

"These cats have suffered enough at the hands of the Criswells," Ortley said. "They need to go to new homes."

In September 2006, the Criswells entered Alford pleas to 10 counts of misdemeanor animal cruelty in northern Idaho in what officials then called the largest animal hoarding case in state history. The Humane Society of the United States rescued more than 430 animals from squalid conditions at the couple's Camelot animal sanctuary.

They were each fined $1,000 and put on unsupervised probation for two years.

In an Alford plea, the defendant does not admit guilt but acknowledges that prosecutors have enough evidence to gain a conviction at trial.

Poll: 37% of Public Back Wall Street Protests

Most protest supporters are Democrats, but the poll indicates the anger about politics in general is much more widespread.

BY LAURIE KELLMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • More than one-third of the country supports the Wall Street protests, and even more — 58 percent — say they are furious about America’s politics.

The number of angry people is growing as deep reservoirs of resentment grip the country, according to the latest Associated Press-GfK poll.

Some 37 percent of people back the protests that have spread from New York to cities across the country and abroad, one of the first snapshots of how the public views the “Occupy Wall Street” movement. A majority of those protest supporters are Democrats, but the anger about politics in general is much more widespread, the poll indicates.

“They’ve got reasons to be upset, they’ve got reasons to protest, but they’re protesting against the wrong people,” Jan Jarrell, 54, a retired school custodian from Leesville, S.C., says of the New York demonstrators. “They need to go to Washington, to Congress and the White House. They’re the ones coming up with all the rules.”

“Occupy Wall Street” has been called the liberal counterpoint to conservative-libertarian tea party, which injected a huge dose of enthusiasm into the Republican Party and helped it win the House and make gains in the Senate last fall.

While the troubled economy is at the root of anger at both government and business leaders, there’s a key difference. Tea party activists generally argue that government is the problem, and they advocate for free markets. The Wall Street protesters generally say that government can provide some solutions and the free market has run amok.

Of the Americans who support the Wall Street protests, 64 percent in the poll are Democrats, while 22 percent are independents and just 14 percent are Republicans. The protest backers are more likely to approve of President Barack Obama and more likely to disapprove of Congress than are people who don’t support the demonstrations.

Iraq War Over, U.S. Troops Coming Home, Obama Says

Staying behind will be some 150-200 U.S. troops as part of embassy security, the defense attache’s office and the office of security cooperation.

BY BEN FELLER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • America’s long and deeply unpopular war in Iraq will be over by year’s end and all U.S. troops “will definitely be home for the holidays,” President Barack Obama declared Friday.

Stretching more than eight years, the war cost the United States heavily: More than 4,400 members of the military have been killed, and more than 32,000 have been wounded.

The final exit date was sealed after months of intensive talks between Washington and Baghdad failed to reach agreement on conditions for leaving several thousand U.S. troops in Iraq as a training force. The U.S. also had been interested in keeping a small force to help the Iraqis deal with possible Iranian meddling.

The task now is to speed the pullout of the remaining U.S. forces, nearly 40,000 in number.

Staying behind in Iraq, where bombings and other violence still occur, will be some 150-200 U.S. military troops as part of embassy security, the defense attache’s office and the office of security cooperation. That’s common practice but still a danger to American forces.

office, nevertheless praised the efforts of U.S. troops in Iraq. He said American soldiers would leave “with their heads held high, proud of their success.”

For Obama, Friday’s announcement capped a remarkable two days of national security successes, though there’s no indication how much they will matter to re-election voters more concerned with economic woes at home.

Gadhafi’s Body Put on Display in Shopping Center Freezer

Nearly every aspect of Thursday’s killing of Gadhafi is mired in confusion, a sign of the difficulties ahead for Libya.

BY KIM GAMEL
and RAMI AL-SHAHEIBI
Associated Press

MISRATA, Libya • Moammar Gadhafi’s blood-streaked body was on display in a commercial freezer at a shopping center Friday as Libyan authorities argued about what to do with his remains and questions deepened over official accounts of the longtime dictator’s death. New video emerged of his violent, chaotic last moments, showing fighters beating him as they drag him away.

Nearly every aspect of Thursday’s killing of Gadhafi was mired in confusion, a sign of the difficulties ahead for Libya. Its new rulers are disorganized, its people embittered and divided. But the ruling National Transitional Council said it would declare the country’s liberation on Saturday, the starting point for a timetable that calls for a new interim government within a month and elections within eight months.

The top U.N. rights chief raised concerns that Gadhafi may have been shot to death after being captured alive. The fate of his body seemed tied up in squabbles among Libya’s factions, as fighters from Misrata — a city brutally besieged by Gadhafi’s forces during the civil war — seemed to claim ownership of it, forcing the delay of a planned burial Friday.

Also muddled was the fate of Seif al-Islam Gadhafi, the only Gadhafi son who stayed in Libya and reportedly survived after his father’s Aug. 21 ouster. It appeared Friday that he was still at large: some government ministers had said he was wounded and in custody in a hospital in the city of Zlitan, but a military official at the hospital, Hakim al-Kisher, denied he was there.

In Misrata, residents crowded into long lines to get a chance to view the body of Gadhafi, which was laid out on a mattress on the floor of an emptied-out vegetable and onions freezer at a local shopping center. The body had apparently been stowed in the freezer in an attempt to keep it out of the public eye, but once the location was known, that intention was swept away

UN Starts Talks to Lift Libya’s No-fly Zone

ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS • Russia is proposing that the U.N. Security Council lift the no-fly zone it imposed on Libya and end its authorization of military action to protect civilians now that Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi has been killed.

Russian Ambassador Vitaly Churkin told reporters after closed council consultations Friday evening that he had circulated a draft resolution on the matter among the group’s 15 members.

Although NATO earlier Friday said it would start winding down its operation in Libya, Churkin said it was up to the council to end the legal authorization for the international military action it passed earlier this year.

NATO made a preliminary decision to end its seven-month bombing campaign on Oct. 31 and will make the formal decision next week, Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen said after a meeting of the alliance’s governing body, the North Atlantic Council.

Sources: Bachmann Staff in New Hampshire Quits

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EXETER, N.H. • Republican presidential candidate Michele Bachmann is losing her New Hampshire staff.

As many as five staffers formally left Bachmann’s campaign this week, two people with direct knowledge of the situation said Friday. They requested anonymity because they were not authorized to disclose internal workings of the campaign.

Bachmann spokeswoman Alice Stewart disputed reports of a staff shakeup, saying: “We have a great team in New Hampshire. We haven’t been notified that anyone’s left the campaign.”

Still, Stewart said that she hadn’t been able to reach the top New Hampshire staff to confirm they were still on board. She said she had reached some junior staffers who didn’t say they were leaving.

Campaign finance reports show that Bachmann, who has fallen in polls and struggled to raise money, had five paid staff in New Hampshire as recently as late September.

The Republican presidential contender has largely ignored the first-in-the-nation primary state in recent months. She has been focused on Iowa and South Carolina, where her social conservative message has more appeal.

Cain Tweaks 9-9-9 Tax Plan to Allow Exemptions

DETROIT (AP) • Republican presidential hopeful Herman Cain on Friday redefined his tax plan to exclude the poorest Americans and to allow some deductions, abandoning the zero-exemption feature of his "9-9-9" proposal that helped win headlines but would have meant a tax increase for 4 out of 5 Americans.

After sharp criticism over his one-size-fits-all plan from Republicans and Democrats alike, Cain proposed no income taxes for Americans living at or below the poverty line. He also proposed exemptions for businesses investing in "opportunity zones" as a way to give an economic jolt to rundown neighborhoods such as the one he visited in hard-hit Detroit.

Standing in front of a massive abandoned train depot with broken windows and barbed wire, Cain blamed regulation for the crumbling of the nation's cities.

"When I look at this building behind me, I see opportunity — if we get capital gains out of the way," Cain told reporters after a campaign speech.

Social Security Raise Welcomed in Tough Economy

BY MATT SEDENSKY

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. • For some, the just-announced increase in Social Security checks amounts to an extra meal out, a little more cash for clothes or a new pair of shoes, some added comfort in retirement. For Elizabeth Davis, it's a crucial boost to the only thing keeping her afloat.

The 71-year-old Miami woman grew up picking cotton on her family's South Carolina farm, raised four children and has worked all her life, even now at a preschool. She is divorced, and her small 401k account

"went down the drain," she said. So she counts the days to the third Wednesday of each month, when her $668 Social Security check arrives, and she is able to pay her bills.

"I could live a little better," she said of the 3.6 percent raise announced this week, the first in two years. "I don't have anything to look forward to until that check every month."

The reaction the cost-of-living adjustment has garnered illuminates the divide between the rich and poor among America's oldest residents. Social Security represents a staggering share of income for lower- and middle-class seniors — made evident just this week in a new government report — and for whom any increase can make a world of difference. For upper-income seniors, it's simply a nice plus.

Starting in January, 55 million Social Security recipients will get increases averaging $39 a month, or about $467 a year. In December, more than 8 million people who receive Supplemental Security Income, the disability program for the poor, will get increases averaging $18 a month, or about $216 a year.

Davis felt the effects of no raise the past two years. Her only other income is a small stipend for her work that averages about $232 a month. She's been using her credit card more and building debt. She's already trimmed as much as she can — from cutting her cable plan to limiting her phone usage to keeping the air conditioning off. She owns her home, but taxes, insurance, utilities and groceries eat up nearly all her income. As those costs rise, there was no wiggle room.

In Seattle, Joseph C. Visintainer, 63, lives alone with his cat in a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development complex, where rent is kept affordable. The retired restaurant worker said he keeps his expenses low in part by taking the bus instead of driving, and eating TV dinners instead of buying meat.

Iraq

On Thursday, the president heralded the death of Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi and a day later the end to one of the most divisive conflicts in U.S. history.

The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan have cost the U.S. more than $1.3 trillion.

Obama did not declare victory.

He did speak, though, about the string of wins on his watch — none bigger than the killing of Osama bin Laden, the al-Qaida leader behind the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. The Afghanistan war still rages, but there, too, Obama has moved to end the combat mission by the end of 2014.

This was, in essence, the third time Obama had pronounced an end to the war, allowing him to remind the nation he had opposed it all along — a stance that helped his White House bid in 2008.

Shortly after taking office, Obama declared in February 2009 that the combat mission in Iraq would end by Aug. 31, 2010. And when that milestone arrived, he said it was "time to turn the page" on Iraq and put the focus back on building up the United States. On Friday, he said: "After nearly nine years, America's war in Iraq will be over."

The U.S.-led invasion of Iraq was launched in March of 2003 after reports, later discredited, that the country was developing weapons of mass destruction. By early April, American Marines were helping Iraqis pull down a statue of Saddam Hussein in Baghdad. Saddam was captured in December of that year and executed in 2006, but the war dragged on.

The ending was set in motion before Obama took office. In 2008, President George W. Bush approved a deal calling for all U.S. forces to withdraw by Dec. 31, 2011.

At issue was whether that deal would be renegotiated to keep thousands of U.S. forces in Iraq. The Obama administration and Iraqi government spent months debating whether the United States would keep troops to maintain a training force, to provide added stability in a country where spectacular attacks still occur, and to serve as a hedge against Iran.

Throughout the talks, Iraqi leaders refused to give U.S. troops immunity from prosecution in Iraqi courts, and the Americans refused to stay without that guarantee.

Obama never mentioned that issue on Friday.

He said that after speaking with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, both were in agreement on how to move forward.

As 'Arab Spring' moves into Fall

The death of Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi is yet another chapter in the ongoing turmoil in the Middle East, where some are seeking to replace repressive governments with freer, more democratic ones. A look at the status of the conflicts:

TUNISIA

The birthplace of the "Arab Spring" will hold its first post-revolution elections Oct. 23, selecting an assembly to draft a constitution and form an interim government; Islamist parties are expected to do well

LIBYA

Moammar Gadhafi's death in effect ends NATO's military operation and allows the ruling Transitional National Council to form a government and proceed with elections; leaders now must contend with scores of armed militias

Moammar Gadhafi

EGYPT

A military council continues to rule; elections are scheduled for Nov. 28 to choose a parliament that will write a new constitution; but the forces that led the revolution have split, with secular leaders worried about the rising power of Islamist political groups

SYRIA

President Bashar Assad's regime continues its crack down on protests that the U.N. estimates has killed 3,000 people so far; there are signs that demonstrators, who were mostly peaceful, have opted to meet the government's violence with force of their own in the overwhelming desire of residents to see the man they so deeply despised.

Men, women and children filed in to take their picture with the body. The site's guards had even organized separate visiting hours for families and single men.

"We want to see the dog," some chanted.

Gadhafi's 69-year-old body was stripped to the waist, his torso and arms streaked with dried blood. Bullet wounds in the chest, abdomen and left side of the head were visible.

The bloody siege of Misrata over the summer instilled a particularly virulent hatred of Gadhafi there — a hatred now mixed with pride because he was captured and killed by fighters from the city.

New video posted on Facebook showed revolutionary fighters dragging a confused-looking Gadhafi up the hill to their vehicles after his capture and less than an hour before he was killed. The young men scream "Moammar, you dog!" as their former leader wipes at blood covering the left side of his head, neck and left shoulder.

Gadhafi gestures to the young men to be patient, and says "What's going on?" as he wipes fresh blood from his temple and glances at his palm. A young fighter later is shown carrying a boot and screaming, "This is Moammar's shoe! This is Moammar's shoe! Victory! Victory!"

In Tripoli, joy over Gadhafi's end spilled into a second day as thousands converged on central Martyrs' Square for Friday prayers and celebrations. Men danced and hoisted the country's new red-green-and-black flag.

"It's the start of a new era that everybody hopes will bring security and freedom," said Tarek Othman, a computer specialist. "I hope democracy is the path we take so all of these Libyans who have sacrificed will really feel free."

He stood with his wife — who wore a cap in the revolution's colors over her all-encompassing black niqab — in the square, which was formerly known as Green Square and was used by Gadhafi to stage rallies against the uprising.

Khaled Almslaty, a clothing vendor, said he wished Gadhafi had not been killed after being captured.

"But I believe he got what he deserved because if we prosecuted him for the smallest of his crimes, he would be punished by death," he said. "Now we hope the NTC will accelerate the formation of a new government and ... won't waste time on irrelevant conflicts and competing for authority and positions."

Protesters

More generally, many more Americans — 58 percent — say they are furious about the country's politics than did in January, when 49 percent said they felt that way. What's more, nearly nine in 10 say they are frustrated with politics and nearly the same say they are disappointed, findings that suggest people are deeply resentful of the political bickering over such basic government responsibilities as passing a federal budget and raising the nation's debt limit.

This wrath spreads across political lines, with about six in 10 Democrats, Republicans and independents saying politics makes them angry.

Fewer are hopeful about politics than when the year began, 47 percent down from 60 percent. Only 17 percent of respondents say they feel proud or inspired.

Since January, Congress and the White House have engaged in repeated standoffs over federal spending and the size of government as the economy has struggled to recover from recession.

In the past month, fury over all that has spilled in to New York's financial district, and groups of mostly young people have camped out in a park.

The protesters cite the economic crisis as a key reason for their unhappiness. The unemployment rate hovers around 9 percent nationally. Many homeowners owe more than their homes are worth. Foreclosures are rampant. And many young people — the key demographic of the protesters — can't find jobs or live on their own.

Mexican Truck Is First in Delayed NAFTA Program

BY CHRISTOPHER SHERMAN

Associated Press

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico • For the first time under the North American Free Trade Agreement, a Mexican truck crossed into the U.S. on Friday bound for the country's interior, beginning a program that was stalled for years by concerns it could put highway safety and American jobs at risk.

The tractor-trailer hauling a large steel drilling structure crossed the border at Laredo nearly two decades after passage of NAFTA, which was supposed to improve cargo transportation between the two countries.

At a ceremony before the truck set off for a Dallas suburb, the owner of the Transportes Olympic trucking company said he considers his fleet's access to the U.S. interior like being invited to a friend's house.

"We have to be extra orderly and very respectful," Fernando Paez told dignitaries of both countries and a crowd of 300 people. "We will demonstrate that we can operate safely and efficiently."

The driver of the Freightliner truck was Josue Cruz, who waved from the cab, flashed a thumbs-up and thundered toward the bridge over the Rio Grande. He was expected to unload in Garland on Saturday or possibly Monday if the business couldn't receive the cargo immediately.

Trucks have crossed into the interior before but only as part of a short-lived pilot program that began in 2007 with a limited number of vehicles. President Barack Obama's administration canceled it in 2009, and Mexico retaliated by placing tariffs on a wide range of American goods.

Hours before Friday's ceremony in the border city of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico announced it was suspending the tariffs. But the Mexican government warned that they could be reinstated if the U.S. does not honor the accord.

The $2 billion worth of tariffs were imposed on 99 U.S. products, including Christmas trees, onions, oranges, apples, juice concentrates, toothpaste, deodorant, sunglasses, among others. Mexico reduced the tariffs after signing the trucking agreement with the U.S. in July and then removed them completely Friday.

"With this program, we're initiating a new stage of competition, of prosperity, of regional integration," said Bruno Ferrari, Mexican secretary of the economy.

NAFTA, signed in 1994, had called for Mexican trucks to have unrestricted access to highways in border states by 1995 and full access to all U.S. highways by January 2000. Canadian trucks have no limits on where they can go.

But until now, Mexican trucks have seldom been allowed farther than a buffer zone on the U.S. side of the border, where their cargo was typically transferred to American vehicles.

The public debate surrounding the accord had mostly focused on the safety of Mexican trucks. But labor unions and other groups were strongly opposed to the agreement, saying it would cost Americans trucking and other jobs.

The U.S. Department of Transportation says the safety concerns have been resolved. Electronic monitoring systems will track how many hours the trucks are in service. Drivers will also have to pass safety reviews, drug tests and assessments of their English skills. Mexico has the authority to demand similar measures from American drivers.

The impact of the program will be limited at first. Only 10 other Mexican trucking companies are going through the certification process right now.

Juan Carlos Munoz, president of Mexico's largest trucking trade group, known by its Spanish initials as CANACAR, noted that opposition remains in Mexico. Some Mexican trucking companies doubt that the U.S. will treat them the same as American drivers.

"But we can't cry before they hit us, as we say here in Mexico," Munoz said. He called Friday's activity the "first step on a long climb."

U.S. Ambassador Anthony Wayne said governments "have to support the businesses in their efforts to reduce costs and accelerate trade."

Idaho Unemployment Dips Below National Average

The state's 9 percent rate represents the first time in 11 months that Idaho unemployment has dipped below the national mark.

TIMES-NEWS

Idaho unemployment dipped below the national rate for the first time in 11 months in September, as the ranks of jobless Gem State workers reached their lowest mark since February 2010.

The state's 9 percent unemployment rate slipped under the national rate of 9.1 percent last month after dropping two-tenths of a percent from August.

Since the same time last year, Idaho employment has grown by 4,500 people, which has knocked down the state's unemployment rate by half a percentage point.

Good news, right?

Yes, actually. Recent dips in the state's unemployment rate had been tempered by increases in jobless benefits claims and the number of Idahoans who have exhausted all their benefits without finding jobs.

But $22.9 million in jobless benefits were awarded in September — $2.6 million less than in August and a nearly $6 million drop from June.

While some Idahoans are still exhausting all their jobless benefits without finding work, their numbers aren't increasing like they did in the summer. An average of 500 workers exhausted all their benefits each month between May and August, but that figure dropped to 300 last month.

The Idaho Department of Labor says jobseekers still face stiff competition, as business think tank The Conference Board estimates there were nearly four unemployed Idaho workers for every September job posting.

How are things here?

Five of the eight south-central Idaho counties saw their unemployment rates drop or hold steady between August and September. Those that saw increases — Blaine, Jerome and Twin Falls counties — saw bumps of less than half a percent.

At a Glance September Unemployment

Seasonal employment likely helped rural Camas County drop its unemployment rate from 16.7 percent in August to 11.8 percent in September. Many county residents work in Blaine County, where business is gearing up for the winter recreation season.

Unemployment is up in the Twin Falls micropolitan area, where an extra 109 people joined the ranks of the jobless in September.

Overall, unemployment rose in only 14 of 44 Idaho counties in September.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"Ah! the clock is always slow;
It is later than you think."*

— Robert Service

In today's deal from a rubber bridge game, South was a valiant performer, but had a weak heart. When his partner jumped to six spades, he turned so pale that North insisted on getting him a glass of water before letting him play the hand.

But South's mood was improved when nobody doubled the slam, and his complexion recovered a little on the sight of dummy, as he realized that the contract actually had some play.

West led the heart king, and declarer made his first good play when he ruffed with dummy's spade ace. The objective on the deal was to come to six spade tricks, five clubs, and one diamond, but just in case clubs were not breaking, South decided to take out a little insurance.

As West was likely to have at least two diamonds just to make up his point count for the opening bid, South found the excellent play of ducking a diamond at trick two. He won West's trump return (the best play) in hand with the spade 10, ruffed another heart high, then cashed the diamond ace, overtook dummy's spade jack with his queen, and played the spade 10-9, discarding diamonds from the table.

The clubs failed to break, as South had foreseen, but his secondary chance came in when East was now squeezed in the minors, and so the contract came home.

ANSWER: It seems that you must raise spades now, but you do have a choice between bidding three-spades and raising to four, or producing a splinter-jump to four clubs. With such bad spades, it feels wrong to take any action at the four-level. The simple raise to three spades keeps open the option of playing in some other strain. (Even a 6-1 heart fit could be right, for example.)

IF OCTOBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Work on attaining your most important hopes and dreams in the year ahead. The next two weeks are an excellent time to set up a game plan because it is easy for you to exercise good judgment and enjoy enhanced vision of the future. Relationships that are firmly rooted blossom between now and the first of the year. Avoid making important commitments or adding extra responsibilities to your schedule in January or July when you could be saddled with something tiresome or your ambitions could outweigh common sense. Opportunities for advancement may appear in March and brighten your future for a long time to come.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wait for the fog to clear. Banish the sneaking feeling that you have been gullible and just wait it out. In the next few days, relationships will get back on track. What seems confusing now will be clarified.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): All's fair in love and you can probably ignore war today. Chance encounters might bring luck. Agreements will be marked by evenhandedness. Seek common ground with others today and romance tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do a little dance, make a little love, get down tonight. The sunshine of kindness and joy prevails this evening, so gather at the local watering hole with friends or just relish being spoiled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The most important thing is being kind and generous to others. You shine in public and wherever you are called upon to interact with others. Indulge your sweet tooth or relax in a hot tub tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might imagine that a relationship can turn into friendship with benefits. Someone might be flattered by your attention, even if that won't work out. Don't let your fantasy world outweigh common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Insecurity might be replaced by a desire for genuine harmony. Frank and honest discussions put commitments and plans back on the right track. Some frivolous pampering will bring a smile to a lover's face.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The Titanic would not have sunk if you had been at the helm. Send out an SOS and you'll be thrown a lifesaver. Cupid's arrows might hit their mark tonight, too, so make up with a loved one or seek a new romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The genie of generosity is at your command to grant wishes. You are more persuasive than usual and can get your way if there is an event you wish to attend or some special treat you want to have.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Subtle changes in key partnerships may enrich your life. Listen to the meaning between the lines and pay attention to body language to learn something beneficial. Go ahead; act on a whim.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You don't need ice cream to be known as the good-humor person. An impish sparkle in your eye attracts plenty of attention from admirers. Be more interested in fostering teamwork than in competition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pay attention to valuable ideas offered by a partner. Trustworthy intuitions help you choose dependable furniture or major appliance. Compliments and sincere flattery will boost everyone's spirits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lead the way at group occasions. Show others how to be congenial, even when business matters are on tap. Your talent for putting everyone at ease will make you the belle of the ball or center of attention.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my early 20s. I have an uncle in his late 30s who keeps asking me invasive questions about my relationship status. Every time I see "Uncle Roger" at family gatherings he asks if I have a boyfriend yet, why I'm not seeing anyone or what I'm doing single. He assumes it's because I don't want to put up with the boyfriend drama.

Uncle Roger makes me feel bad about not being interested in a relationship or dating at the moment. I have told him to back off, without success. He just laughs it off and then the questions continue. Yet, this man has never been in any stable relationship himself.

Is there something wrong with me because I haven't met the right person? Am I supposed to force relationships to happen? What can I say to Uncle Roger to make him stop?

— BEYOND ANNOYED IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BEYOND ANNOYED: Uncle Roger may think he's being funny by relentlessly asking why you're not involved with anyone. Because you have asked him to stop and he presses on, you have two choices: Avoid and ignore him, or turn the tables.

When he asks you about your love life, instead of becoming defensive, answer his question with a question: "Why aren't YOU involved with anyone, Uncle Roger? Why are you still single at your age? Can't you find anyone who'll say yes?" And be sure to laugh right back at him. As long as you let him know he's getting to you, he will continue. Sometimes the best defense is a strong offense.

DEAR ABBY: My dad died recently. He and Mom were married 60 years. Apparently, Mom hid her anger at him well, because she now says she couldn't stand him.

None of us kids can bring up any stories or memories about Dad because Mom will say things like, "He was a narcissist," or "He was no fun," etc. We remember him as a great provider and a decent, beloved person.

Do you have any suggestions on how we can approach the subject with my mother? It's so hurtful that we can't talk about our father anymore now that she feels "free" and happy.

— MISSING OUR DAD

DEAR MISSING: Yes. Tell your mother that you and your siblings prefer to remember your father as the decent, beloved, great provider he was to all of you. Tell her that you're glad she's "free" and "happy," but the comments she's making are unwelcome. And if she continues to make them, walk away or share your loving memories of your father when she's not present.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 27-year-old single woman. I have been hanging out with a guy ("Connor") for a few months. I enjoy his company, but I don't have more than platonic feelings for him.

I'm reading a book that says women my age are too picky and need to compromise. My question is, how long should I wait until I feel something more or that compromising just won't work with this one?

Am I too picky or do I need to realize I won't be feeling anything more?

— SINGLE AND CONFUSED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR CONFUSED: If you have nothing more than platonic feelings for Connor after seeing him for a few months, those feelings are not likely to change because the chemistry just isn't there. What you need to do is be more selective about the authors whose books you choose, because someone who would advise women sight unseen that they're "too picky" is speaking in dangerous generalities. Caveat emptor.

Filer's Rally Comes Up Short

BY ALEX CALINSKY
For the Times-News

CALDWELL • Teton's scorching start to the 3A boys soccer state semifinals proved just enough to survive a Filer rally and advance to the finals, 5-3. Deep in a 4-0 hole quickly in the first half, even optimists knew the Wildcats' chances of advancing were bleak. "(Teton) played very, very fast right away. They're strong on offense. They broke our defense apart," Filer coach Greg Clark said. The Wildcats steadied themselves and began chipping away at the lead. Isaac Kreft netted the first goal for Filer halfway through the first half, then Zach Clark's penalty kick just two minutes later charged some life into the Wildcats, who cut the Teton lead to 4-2 at half. "We're at state and pretty much our whole team is seniors, and even though we were down 4-0, we knew we could come back," said senior midfielder Zach Clark. Ociel Diaz nudged Ryan Karel's cross into the net in the 49th minute, and all of a sudden, Teton's insurmountable lead was in striking range at 4-3. Most of the second half occurred in Teton's defensive half, but the Wildcats struggled to maintain possession for great amounts of time. In the 71st minute, Filer earned a free kick from just outside the Teton box. It seemed as if the Wildcats were

Minico Wins GBC Title

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Beat up with a heavily wrapped ankle, sporting a noticeable limp and relegated to short-yardage situations, Minico running back Brady May anxiously waited for his number to be called in the closing seconds of Minico's Great Basin Conference clash with Twin Falls. Tugging on the shirt of assistant coach Steve Barnes along the sideline, May got his chance with 10 seconds remaining as he powered in from four yards out for the winning touchdown in the Spartans' 12-6 victory over Twin Falls to retain the conference championship and give them their second undefeated regular season (9-0) in school history.

"There isn't anyone else I would want running the ball in that situation," said Minico coach Tim Perrigot. "He's pretty hurt right now, but that's the kind of kid Brady is. He wants to be out there on the field and tonight is all about what he's done for this team his entire career."

May started the game at running back on his ginger ankle, which he hurt in last week's win over Jerome, but it was quickly apparent that this was not the same Brady May who had rumbled for 1,476 yards and 25 touchdowns coming into Friday's contest. He was used sparingly, rushing the ball only nine times, but scored both of the Spartans' touchdowns — the first coming in the third quarter on a 3-yard pass from Shay Chandler to tie the game at 6.

"I of course would have rather been out there the whole game competing for my team, but this is an awesome feeling," May said. "We're a beat up team right now and winning the district title in a close game like this, against a good Twin Falls team, I think we needed this. We haven't been tested like we were tonight."

Tested they were. Twin Falls (5-3, 3-2 GBC) smacked Minico in the mouth, displaying a physical defensive effort spearheaded by defensive lineman Chase Crandall, linebackers Marcus Ko and Jason Byce and defensive back Michael McClure. The Bruins held Minico to just 276 yards of total offense and the 12 points scored is the first time all season the Spartans have failed to score at least 34. It is also the least amount scored by Minico since a 21-7 playoff loss to Shelley last season. Twin Falls forced a fumble on Chandler in the end zone in the first quarter and came up with huge stops throughout the game. Ko and Crandall each had sacks, Crandall's coming with less than four minutes remaining to end Minico's drive at its own 18. Twin Falls took over at its 49, picking up one first down before

BOISE STATE, AIR FORCE TUNE OUT CONFERENCE SHUFFLE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Despite all the speculation and chaos swirling around conference realignment, coaches and players for Boise State and Air Force can at least agree on one thing: Just focus on football. "I'll start worrying about that at the end of the season, but right now all I care about is getting ready to play football," said Boise State linebacker J.C. Percy. "Right now, it doesn't matter where we play next season." The No. 5 Broncos (6-0, 1-0 Mountain West) host Air Force on Saturday in a game that months ago was generating buzz as Boise State's first home game as a member of the MWC. For Broncos fans, the Falcons' presence would cement Boise State's split from the Western Athletic Conference and signal the next step in the program's quest for national respect. Maybe the first-ever meeting between the Broncos and Falcons, a team with a winning tradition and four straight bowl appearances, could touch off a new Rocky Mountain rivalry?

NASCAR REMEMBERS WHELDON AS IT PREPARES TO RACE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. • Tony Stewart competes in NASCAR. His heart, though, belongs to open-wheel racing, and he spent the first 25 years of his life trying to get to Indianapolis Motor Speedway. When he did, in 1996, he and teammate Scott Brayton qualified first and second. Six days later, Brayton was killed during a practice run. Stewart, a rookie that year, continued on every day at Indianapolis, started his first 500 nine days later and led 44 laps until his engine blew — finally bringing an end to what was supposed to be a celebration of him fulfilling his lifelong dream. But that's what racers do. They race, and they'll race this weekend at Talladega Superspeedway, where NASCAR becomes the first major series to run since Dan Wheldon died Sunday in the IndyCar season finale. "It doesn't affect us, getting back in the car," Stewart said Friday at Talladega. "We all know that can happen every week. It's been a part of racing forever."

Declo Takes Fourth Straight Canyon Title

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

DECLO • Just in time. The Declo football team that lacked consistency all season finally put a full game together and earned its fourth straight Canyon Conference championship Friday night with an 18-6 win over Gooding. "I definitely think it was our best game all year," said Declo junior Kai Garner. "We decided we had to start somewhere, and it might as well be this game. We've got to get rolling before state, and we decided to start it right now." Prior to Friday's game, a noticeably concerned Kelly Kidd said the Hornets hadn't come close to playing their best game, but were running out of time. The Declo head coach finally got the effort he had been looking for. "Some kids who I've been a little disappointed in their effort played superb tonight. They all did. Every kid out there played a great game," Kidd said. Declo (7-1 overall, 4-0 Canyon) earned District IV's No. 1 seed and will host Ririe next week in the first round of the Class 2A state playoffs.

Declo running back Jaxon Wrigley cuts upfield as teammate Kyle Darrington blocks Gooding's Anthony Arkoosh Friday in Declo.

Gooding (4-4, 3-1) must go on the road for its first-round playoff game against the second-place team from District III, either Marsing or Cole Valley Christian.

For the past month Declo had just barely gotten by, while Gooding had dominated its Canyon Conference schedule, beating league opponents 42-3 on average, giving up just two touchdowns in four games. But Friday night Declo rose to the challenge, especially defensively, where guys like Kage Osterhout, Calum Webb, Troy Adams and Stirland Zollinger made big plays. "We've always had a big rivalry with Gooding and there's been some talk back and forth, so we got it in our heads and used the talk to fire us up and play as a team and work hard," said Webb. Garner was sensational on both sides of the ball for Declo. At quarterback he completed 9 of 16 passes for 116 yards, plus added 68 yards on the ground. At defensive back he intercepted Gooding quarterback Josh Faulkner three times in the second half. "Our team came together and made great plays all around," Garner said. "We fought hard, our defense stepped up huge and our offense marched the ball down the field." Early on it appeared Gooding's league dominance would continue, as the Senators forced

Idaho State Faces Strong BYU Squad

BY MARK LIPTAK
For the Times-News

POCATELLO • It's a fact of life today in college athletics, the "money" game, usually done by smaller school football and basketball teams against larger ones. The purpose is to earn enough funds from what is usually a bad loss, to keep athletic departments and non revenue producing sports going.

Saturday afternoon ISU finds itself in that position when it takes on Brigham Young University in Provo. It's the first time in 60 years the two have met in football.

With the Bengals (2-5) riding a four game losing streak, some fans have started to lower their expectations and some have even gone so far as to think this is more of the same from the three previous seasons. Mike Kramer, head football coach, doesn't share that opinion; in fact, he was prepared for just this situation when he took the job last winter.

"This program has been in the ditch so long that maybe all of us anticipated a little more success than we're really capable of achieving. Right now it's too early to expect that we would have a long run of success," Kramer said. "In terms of long-term success, this program needs a lot of building. We're not so concerned about the wins and losses early in our tenure here as a coaching staff. We just aren't proficient enough to play like a championship caliber team right now."

The Cougars (5-2) meanwhile are headed in the opposite direction. They've won four in a row and since inserting quarterback Riley Nelson into the lineup a few games ago have been firing on all cylinders.

"You can throw out the tape from their first five games and just watch what they did at Oregon State last week," Kramer said. "They are moving the ball really well behind a big offensive line. They are 300 pounds across both the offensive and defensive fronts, they are just massive. They've got a ferocious running game."

Regardless of what Idaho State does or doesn't do, it doesn't have much of a chance in the game but Kramer is using small steps to gage overall progress for a program that has been among the worst in the nation, regardless of division the past few years.

"If we can go to BYU and come out with say 10-two man tackles in the third quarter, we have to consider that progress," he said. "That is an example of the micro-success we look for inside every series inside every play. It's just one small part of that. Another factor would be, can we return the kickoffs back to the 30-yard line like Danny McSurdy did last week more times. That's a huge success given the fact that the week before we didn't know if we were going to catch it, fumble it, stumble it or thumb it out of bounds."

"So we're making quantum success inside our program. It's not going to show up on the scoreboard for weeks, maybe years to come, but it will come."

On the injury front, offensive lineman and former Burley high school standout Braeden Clayson's wrist injury will allow him to return early in November for the final few games. He's been playing sparingly with his hand in a cast the past few weeks.

"Braeden thinks he's ready to go today," according to Kramer, "but we want to make sure the wrist injury doesn't go any further. So he isn't playing until he's really completely healed. I want him to be able to play golf or pick up his kids years from now."

But some of the excitement and significance may have waned amid speculation both schools could be playing in the Big East or some other conference next year.

None of that matters now, however, for players and coaches.

"All they know right now is we're getting ready to play Boise State," Air Force coach Troy Calhoun said. "Anything else is a side item, as it should be."

For the Falcons (3-3, 0-2), Saturday marks a chance to turn things around. The Falcons have been beaten badly in the last two games, a 59-33 blowout at Notre Dame and 41-27 loss at home last week to San Diego State. Air Force is 0-2 in conference play for the first time since 1994, when it was a member of the WAC.

The problem hasn't been on offense.

The Falcons' triple option, led by senior quarterback Tim Jefferson, is unique in the college football landscape and presents a preparation challenge each week for teams that have never faced it before — such as Boise State.

Air Force is averaging 506 total yards per game, 10th best nationally, and Jefferson accounts for about 180 yards of that rushing and passing. With an effective zone blocking scheme, the Falcons also boast the nation's third-best rushing attack, averaging a whopping 336 yards, and head into Bronco Stadium scoring more than 35 points a game.

"It will be as big of a challenge, without question, as we've seen this year," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said. "We haven't seen any team that uses cut blocking quite like them. It's difficult to prepare for."

"They are going to get their yards. The strategy for us is to score as many points as possible," Petersen said.

And there lies the challenge for Air Force. Stopping Kellen Moore & Co. is a test for any defense, particularly one that has given up 122 points in the last nine quarters and been hit hard by injuries along the front line.

Calhoun points to execution breakdowns and mental lapses that have led to big plays. As a unit, the Falcons are allowing 229 rushing yards and an average of 35.5 points, both among the worst in the country.

Players acknowledge chronic problems with tackling have wilted the confidence of the defense.

"Our defense is probably where morale is the lowest right now," said linebacker Alex Means. "All of us are disappointed with how we are playing. We're a .500 team right now, but we're better than that."

Cards' Pujols is Center of Attention at World Series

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas • Albert Pujols yelled across the Cardinals clubhouse with a semi-serious message to his teammates after Friday's workout.

"Make sure you don't leave!" he said. "Talk to the media first!"

Even more attention than usual was focused on the star first baseman after St. Louis blew a ninth-inning lead Thursday night and lost Game 2 to the Texas Rangers 2-1, leaving the World Series tied at a game apiece.

Pujols made an error when he failed to cut off center fielder Jon Jay's throw in the ninth, allowing Elvis Andrus to advance to second with the potential go-ahead run. Andrus later came home on Michael Young's sacrifice fly. Pujols left Busch Stadium quickly, without speaking with reporters. A day later after arriving in Texas, Pujols and Cardinals manager Tony La Russa maintained it was all a misunderstanding.

"It's getaway day. We're leaving earlier because we had an early workout," La Russa said. "They wanted to pack for their families. If anybody had said, 'We need to talk to Albert,' he would have stayed. ... I heard the criticism, and it offends me."

Latin Americans Separated by the Same Language

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUADALAJARA, Mexico • The United States and England are often described as two countries separated by a common language. So imagine the potential for confusion, curiosity and laughs around the Pan American Games, where Spanish — in all its variations — is the official language of about half the 42 competing nations.

"There are lots of different words, but the first ones we want to learn are the vulgarities that others use," Colombian water polo player Carlos Toro said.

Modesto Aguero, a sports commentator on Cuban television, recalls making his first visit to Mexico 35 years ago, a 20-something looking forward to a night out. He was stumped when he understood his Mexican friend to suggest the following.

"Let's go jump on a semi-trailer truck, go to town and find a couple of older women."

Semitrailer truck? Old women?

"Hey, I didn't come to Mexico to go out with old women and to ride around in an 18-wheeler. Let's go find a car and some young women," Aguero remembered saying.

It was all in Spanish, but the meanings differed quite a bit.

"Viejas," the usual word in Spanish for "older women," can be used colloquially in Mexico to also mean young women. But not in Cuba, where it carries only the usual meaning.

The word "camion" in Spanish usually refers to an 18-wheeler, but in Mexico it means "bus."

"These were words or ways of speaking that I didn't know," Aguero recalled.

The list of differences approaches infinite. Innocent verbs or nouns in one country can be supercharged words in another, often referring to something sexual. The names for fruits and vegetables, kinds of fish, cuts of meat invariably cause confusion. Then add the varied pronunciations to the brew.

In a shopping mall near the Pan American Games venues, several banners welcome Spanish speakers, each one tailored to the slang of Argentina, Colombia or Venezuela.

Even the word "padre," which every beginning Span-

Syracuse Again Stuns Ranked W.Va.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. • Ryan Nassib threw three touchdown passes to tight end Nick Provo, Dorian Graham returned a kickoff 98 yards for another score, and Syracuse stunned No. 11 West Virginia 49-23 on Friday night with a spirited effort on both sides of the ball.

Syracuse (5-2, 1-1 Big East) hadn't beaten West Virginia (5-2, 1-1) in the Carrier Dome in a decade, and the Orange played a near flawless game to break the streak just as they did last year in a 19-14 upset of the Mountaineers in Morgantown. That victory stopped an eight-game losing streak to West Virginia, and this one was even more impressive.

Syracuse hadn't scored that many points in the series since a 45-0 win in 1960, and a Carrier Dome crowd of 45,265, the largest in three years, roared its approval with thunderous cheers as third-year head coach Doug Marrone enjoyed the most significant win of his brief tenure.

The high-powered West Virginia offense led by Geno Smith was kept in check most of the game, only shining in fits and spurts.

CUTTHROATS LOSE IN 3A SEMIS

TIMES-NEWS

CALDWELL • Kylie Hoogendyk's goal in the 53rd minute was enough to advance McCall-Donnelly past Community School 1-0 in the 3A girls soccer state semifinals at Vallivue High School.

"It was really even, we're kind of mirror images of each other, both predominantly young teams," Cutthroat coach Kelly Feldman said. "We just couldn't finish today."

Community School created plenty of chances, but struggled to beat the Vandals' keeper, Kathryn Egnew. "Finishing under pressure has been a struggle for us, so we knew coming in to the game that was going to be an issue," Feldman said.

After a deadlocked first half, Victoria Cossairt found Hoogendyk for the game winner. Both teams searched for an edge throughout the match, but only the Vandals could find a break.

"The girls battled, I'm really proud of how they played their hearts out, just didn't get lucky," Feldman said.

Community School takes on Teton today at 1 p.m. at Vallivue High for third place.

Class 4A semifinals

SANDPOINT 3, TWIN FALLS 2
CALDWELL • It doesn't seem like the end of the season for the Twin Falls girls soccer team. But it is the end of their pursuit of a state championship.

At least for this year. Sandpoint broke a 1-1 halftime tie with a pair of second-half goals and survived one final push by the Bruins to advance to the championship game.

With no seniors to say goodbye to, Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman was able to quickly look forward to next year and put the loss behind her.

"I'm proud of how the girls played," Kauffman said. "When they got down they didn't quit and they pushed hard. With a little more experience, next season is a

Wolverines, Lindbloom Stomp Riverhawks

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Wood River coach Kevin Stilling wanted to get work-horse running back Greg Lindbloom into the school's record book. But he needed to make sure his Wolverines won the game first.

Turns out you can in fact have it all.

Lindbloom picked up 153 yards and four touchdowns as Wood River pasted Canyon Ridge 42-9 on Friday night, ensuring the Wolverines' dream season would continue for at least another week.

"The line was opening up huge holes for me, and our wingbacks and tight ends were doing a great job blocking downfield. I couldn't have done anything without them," said Lindbloom, who set new single-season rushing and scoring records with 1,358 yards and 20 touchdowns. He also broke the school's career mark with 1,795 yards.

"We knew it was going to be a physical game," Lindbloom added. "Canyon Ridge is better than they've been in the past, but our guys answered the call. We kept pushing and never gave up."

Wood River (6-3) assured itself a winning season for the first time since 2000 with the victory. The Wolverines will visit Blackfoot, the division's top-ranked team, next week.

While the day belonged to Lindbloom and the Wood River run game, it was made possible by a pair of unlikely heroes.

Kicker Trevor Brand not only went a perfect 6-for-6 on extra points, he made two critical tackles on kickoff returns to prevent Canyon Ridge touchdowns.

"I've had a chance to make a few tackles this season, and I haven't made them. Those were pretty much my first two full tackles of the season," said Brand. "I was sweating bullets all day about making kicks because I was one of the key matchups in the paper today, but it worked out great."

The Wood River defense also stiffened when it mattered most, particularly in the first quarter.

Canyon Ridge (4-5) had three possessions in the first period, and all three started on the Wolverine side of midfield. On those three possessions, the Riverhawks mustered 10 plays, minus-9 yards, and zero points.

"We just responded to the situation," said senior defensive back Chance Larkin. "We kept fighting, kept the intensity up, and made some plays."

While the Wolverines celebrated moving on to the postseason, a somber Riverhawk locker room slowly emptied as the team was left to reflect on what might have been — they started 4-2 but lost three straight games to end the season.

"Wood River came and took it to us. They executed and we didn't. They didn't do one thing differently than we prepared for," said Canyon Ridge coach Dave Slotten. "The status of our team is one that just needs to learn how to win. It's not any different than Wood River was a few years ago, and (Stilling) has done a great job up there."

"I tip my hat to our seniors. This class has come a long way, and this program is in better shape than when they came into it. But we've got a way to go still."

stalling. The Bruins lined up to punt with over a two minutes remaining, but an apparent mix-up between long snapper Damon Jones and punter Cody McBride caused the ball to be snapped to protector Jason Byce, who was tackled after gaining a yard.

Minico took over and six plays later, May rumbled in for his game-winning touchdown after a 12-yard gain by Jordan Browning.

"It was a tough game. We came ready to fight," said McClure. "We hit them back and played tough defense. We thought we could beat them and be conference champs, but we're ready for state and we feel we can go all the way."

The Bruins will play the District V runner-up in next week's first round of the 4A playoffs, while Minico hosts Hillcrest, the third-place team from District VI.

"We have a lot of guys out right now with injuries, but we stepped up and had new guys in new places and we got the job done tonight," said Minico linebacker Skye Dansie. "We think we're the best team in 4A right now. If we play to our potential, we can beat anybody."

Declo

Declo into a quick three-and-out. They then easily marched down the field for the game's first touchdown, a 1-yard plunge by Kyle Rison, who finished with 170 yards on 24 carries.

But Declo answered with a score early in the second quarter after going 87 yards in 11 plays, aided by Gooding jumping offsides on a fourth-and-3. Jaxon Wrigley punched in the tying TD.

On its first drive of the third quarter, Gooding chose to go for it on fourth-and-25 at the Declo 40-yard line, but Garner picked off the pass. That set up Declo's go-ahead scoring drive, which was aided by two 15-yard personal foul penalties by the Senators and capped by Kyle Darrington's nifty cutback on his eight-yard TD run.

Leading 12-6, Declo got the ball back with 8:20 remaining in the game. The Hornets grinded out a 13-play drive that bled all but 52 seconds from the clock and they sealed the victory on Garner's 1-yard QB keeper.

Gooding failed to convert on three red zone opportunities throughout the game.

"They buckled down in the red zone and we didn't execute. We've got to execute better next week," said Gooding coach Cameron Andersen. "A lot of it has to do with a really good team on the other side of the ball. I've seen every film Declo has played, and this was the best game they've played all season."

PREP FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

TIMES-NEWS

For a week, Castleford looked... different.

It was still enough to pick up a victory against North Gem, 32-14.

Mitch Howard passed for 245 yards and four touchdowns to as many receivers on 10 of 16 passing to offset a ground game largely shut down by North Gem, and Mike Peckham returned a punt 65 yards for a score.

Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore couldn't remember the last time the Pirates won a game without a rushing touchdown.

"It's been a long time," Vulgamore said. "(North Gem) did a good job on us shutting down the run. They had us scouted good on that."

Ty Zimmers ran 15 times for 73 yards, but reached the end zone on an 18-yard pass with 10 seconds left in the half for a 20-6 lead. That joy was short-lived, however, as in attempting to burn the clock and get to halftime with a squib kick, North Gem picked up the ball and raced 50 yards for a touchdown as the horn sounded.

"It's a good thing we didn't check my blood pressure at halftime," Vulgamore said.

No matter. The Pirates improved to 6-2 heading into the regular season finale against Rockland.

Humberto Pacheco ran for 228 yards and four touchdowns on 12 carries, while reserve Humberto Chavez rushed for 63 yards and two more scores on four carries to lift the Red Devils to the right side of .500 with a mercy-rule victory.

Peter Munoz added a sack and a fumble recovery for Murtaugh.

Smoke Jumper Extraordinaire

After 39 years as a wildland firefighter, including 33 years as a smoke jumper, Walt 'Wally' Wasser is retiring.

BY PATRICK ORR
McClatchy Newspapers

BOISE • For someone who spent almost four decades working every summer in the wilderness of the western United States, Walt "Wally" Wasser hasn't seen much of the forest.

"One of the things when you fight fires in summertime is that you don't have a summer life," Wasser said.

Wasser will finally have the chance, retiring this fall after 39 years as a wildland firefighter, including 33 years as a smoke jumper.

While some wildland firefighters opt to stay on as temp workers during bad fire seasons after they retire, Wasser says he is done. No more firefighting. He doesn't want to jump into the forest. He wants to walk in. At his leisure.

"I'm looking forward to retirement," he said. "Really just want to travel through the West, going camping and backpacking and stuff like that." He's going to do stuff like play golf, hike California's John Muir Trail and train for his next Ironman race.

Bureau of Land Management spokesman Don Smurthwaite says Wasser's 395 smoke jumps are the most ever.

"Wally — the living legend," said Jerry Drazinski, who has been smoke jumping with Wasser for 20 years. "He's a natural athlete. Some guys look like Hercules, and they seem to be the ones who get hurt. It's the tall, lanky guys like Wally that keep going."

Drazinski also lauded Wasser's toughness.

"He broke a femur one year (in the 1990s), and he came back and kept going," Drazinski said.

"A lot of the young (jumpers) look up to him. Wally is proof that if you are young at heart, and keep working out and take care of yourself, you can keep doing it."

So why is Wasser quitting? Mandatory retirement for smoke jumpers and all active federally employed full-time wildland firefighters is 57. Wally turned 57 in September. That being said, he is ready to stop.

"It's good they have an age limit ... fighting fire is a tough job," Wasser said. "I don't do it like the guys who are 30 and 35 years old. They can hike up a hill a lot faster than I can."

While he won't necessarily miss the work, he will miss his fellow smoke jumpers — people who think it's fun to jump out of planes and into forest fires — and then do backbreaking physical labor in incredibly dangerous conditions.

"That's what I'll miss. The people you work with are top-notch. You can trust a smoke jumper with anything," Wasser said. "It doesn't matter who they are or who they trained with."

Wasser began fighting fires in 1973 in California, moving on to join engine and hot shot crews in the Sierra National Forest before joining the McCall smoke jumpers in 1979. He moved to the Boise NIFC crew in 1987 and worked there until September of this year.

Wasser decided to become a wildland firefighter after watching a Walt Disney special on the subject when he was a child in the 1960s. And once he started, he never left.

"Every time I was tempted to move on, I would ask the question, 'Would I be happier doing something else?'" The answer was always no," Wasser said.

Smoke jumpers parachute into remote areas to be able to provide a quick response to freshly started fires, trying to stop them before they can grow. It's a dangerous, difficult job that requires excellent physical fitness and an ability to think clearly in dangerous situations. Firefighting tools, food and water are dropped by parachute to jumpers after they land near the fire, making them self-sufficient for the first 48 hours.

Wasser said his favorite jump was at Grand Gulch in eastern Utah, where the fire site was near ancient cliff dwellings and petroglyphs. His worst jump was in Oregon's Mount Jefferson Wilderness area. That's where he broke his leg.

His most interesting assignment was when he spent seven weeks in Russia in 1997 as part of an exchange program, jumping and rappelling into blazes in Siberia.
