Did Twin Falls' political clout get sliced up in the redistricting process? Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs thinks so.

Twin Falls County Plans to Challenge Redistricting Plan

BY BEN BOTKIN

State legislators may have to wait awhile longer before they know exactly where to put their campaign signs — or what legislative district they'll run in for the 2012 primaries.

Twin Falls County plans to file a legal challenge that contests the state's new redistricting plan, which carves up the county into three legislative districts,

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs told the Times-News Tuesday.

The redistricting plan, which realigned the state's 35 legislative districts based on population changes in the 2010 census, was recently unanimously approved by a bipartisan six-member commission.

For some Twin Falls County officials and legislators, its outcome has been a sore spot. The new plan puts the city of Twin Falls into its own district and splits the rural part of the county into two others — half joining Elmore and Owyhee counties, the remainder attached to Cassia and Power counties.

"We haven't filed it yet," Loebs said of the lawsuit. "We are working on it. We're looking carefully at what they did and what the law is."

The revision, Loebs said, groups the bulk of the county with districts dominated

New Grant Will Help Teens Prep for College

BY JULIE WOOTTON

The hallways at Robert Stuart Middle School have a variety of posters on display, encouraging students to be kind to each other and develop good character traits.

One sign over a classroom door promotes the College of Southern Idaho, even though it will be years before students apply for college.

In the past, the middle school has taken students to visit the CSI campus and University of Idaho to pique their interest.

"A lot of kids have never seen a university," Robert Stuart Principal Kasey Teske said.

The school also holds "college days" when students can dress up in gear from their favorite college or university.

Getting students interested in higher education early on is the focus of the Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate Program, designed to encourage and prepare students to go to college.

The Idaho State Department of Education recently received a seven-year, $23 million federal grant for GEAR UP, which targets students beginning in seventh grade and follows them through their senior year of high school.

Schools selected for the money have a high population of low-income students who qualify for free or reduced-price meals. Robert Stuart has participated in the program since the state first received GEAR UP

'Roadless' Ruling Redefines State Lawsuit

Though it has no direct effect on a challenge in Idaho, a recent ruling regarding roadless areas of federal land does change what Idaho could have to adopt.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

A recent federal appeals court decision on a national "roadless rule" won't affect Idaho directly, but it could influence the outcome of a separate lawsuit against the state.

Last week, federal judges decided to uphold President Bill Clinton's rule that prohibited roads on 50 million acres of national forest land. Idaho was the only state not to be affected by the court's decision because it implemented its own roadless rule under the Bush administration in 2006.

Environmental and conservation groups have challenged the state's rule since 2009. Now, that challenge is moving to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. If the court rules in the groups' favor, Idaho would be forced to use the Clinton rule from 2001.

The lawsuit is part of a long series of struggles to preserve Idaho land while also keeping it open for recreational and business uses.

"Our original claim still stands. Our ultimate goal is to return back to the 2001 ruling and now we have more federal backing for us," said

The Wave Experiment

When I was little, my dad waved at everyone we drove by in our Meridian neighborhood.

It wasn't a frantic, super-stoked-to-see-you wave that you might see from a hyper 4-year-old. Dad's waves were never more than a subtle hand lift from the steering wheel. Sometimes people waved back, sometimes they didn't, but he never stopped initiating the greeting.

I remember asking whether he knew them. "Nope," he said. "Why do you wave, then?" I asked. "Because," he answered, and that was it. My dad is a man of few words.

I thought of him while driving on the county roads outside Buhl a couple of weeks ago. I didn't see many other vehicles, but when I did, the driver almost always waved. Especially people in trucks.

After a while, I started counting: Of the five vehicles I passed, I got four waves. (I also got the greeting in rural Cassia County when I went a week later, though the wave-ratio was much lower. I offer no analysis on this observation.)

Then I tried waving at strangers while walking my dogs in my Twin Falls neighborhood.

The results: People hanging out on their porches waved back every time.

People in cars looked confused, like they were trying to figure out where they knew me from. The only driver who waved back was a Twin Falls police officer, and I'm pretty sure he just thought my dogs were cool.

What's the deal, Twin Falls? Are there too many people in our sprawling metropolis to acknowledge, or do we just not like each other very much?

I called Twin Falls County Commissioner Terry Kramer of Castleford to get the lowdown on the wave.

"It's kind of a Castleford thing. We all wave at everyone," he said. And there are different kinds: the two-finger wave, where you don't even lift your hand off the steering wheel, and the over-the-steering-wheel horizontal wave, for the really ambitious.

Castleford folks are a friendly bunch, but failing to return the greeting is a faux pas in that town, according to Kramer's son.

"If you don't wave, he's really mad at you," Kramer said.

I'm glad my dad taught me well.

Redistricting

by population centers elsewhere. That lessens Twin Falls County's influence and bring up concerns with redistricting law, he said.

The Idaho Constitution's requirement that counties be kept whole when possible is likely to be a key part of the debate. Twin Falls County, with its population of 77,230, posed a challenge for the state's redistricting commissioners.

Its population is too large for just one district, but also too small for two districts.

Jonathan Parker, executive director of the Idaho Republican Party, said the state party won't be filing any challenges. Regardless of any outcome, Parker said, he's confident that Idaho's GOP can continue its winning streak in the 2012 elections.

Larry Grant, chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party, attributed politics to the pending suit, noting that Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, would be forced to run in a different district.

Currently — without the new plan — Hartgen's district encompasses part of the city of Twin Falls and goes west through Owyhee County to the Oregon border. The new plan puts Hartgen in a district that encompasses the city instead.

"I think Mr. Hartgen is the crybaby here and he doesn't want to run in the city of Twin Falls," Grant said. "He thinks he's going to lose. I think that's the motivation behind it because it doesn't affect county politics."

Hartgen, for his part, dis-counted that. He said the issue isn't about him, but about the county getting fair representation rather than be parceled out to larger areas and losing its voice.

"If the Democrats feel that they're competitive in Twin Falls, let them bring a candidate in," Hartgen said.

Hartgen said Twin Falls County — no matter how the lines are drawn — has a history of supporting Republican candidates.

Deborah Silver, chairwoman of the Twin Falls Democratic Party, said the state's second redistricting panel did a good job of drawing boundaries. Even with the changes, though, a Democratic candidate would still face an imposing challenge running in Twin Falls, she said.

Any challenge filed by the county will go directly to the Idaho Supreme Court. Loebbs said he's not sure yet when the challenge will be filed, or if the county will join other parties.

On Monday night, the Twin Falls City Council discussed redistricting as well. City officials are in an information-gathering mode and will meet in closed session on Nov. 7 to talk about options, which include supporting any county action that's filed.

Tim Hurst, chief deputy with the Idaho Secretary of State, said an extended lawsuit could cause logistical problems for election clerks across the state.

The filing deadline for candidates is March 9, but clerks also need to change voter registration systems so voters are assigned the correct district.

"Tell your folks at Twin Falls if you're going to (sue), file quickly so we can get it resolved," he said.

grant funding in 2006.

The first cohort of Robert Stuart students to participate are now seniors at Canyon Ridge High School, and their grant funding followed them on the move. Now that students aren't currently participating in GEAR UP at Robert Stuart, the school has applied to receive a chunk of the latest grant funding.

"We're excited about the prospect of this grant," Teske said.

In total, Robert Stuart and Canyon Ridge have received $295,563 in funding for the GEAR UP program since the 2007-08 school year.

Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said school districts and charter schools around the state have applied to receive GEAR UP funding and should hear back in early November.

In addition to Canyon Ridge, several other Magic Valley schools currently receive money through GEAR UP, including Buhl High School, Raft River High School in Malta and Burley High School.

McGrath said the current grant is being used to help high school sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Informational seminars will include the following topics: planning for college athletics (5:30-6 p.m. in Room G-4), first to go to college/low income (6-6:30 p.m. in G-1), searching for scholarships (6:30-7 p.m. in G-4), and financial aid — what's the deal? (7-8 p.m. in G-1).

When • 5-8 p.m. Nov. 3
Where • New gym at Twin Falls High School

Every year, school districts with a participating school must submit a plan outlining efforts to help students become better prepared for college.

Many of the high schools have similar plans for this year, such as having students complete community service projects as part of their advisory class, arranging college visits, requiring students to take the ACT college entrance exam, and organizing financial aid and college application information nights.

• He says the city's wastewater treatment plant issues need to be resolved, adding that it affects everyone, not just local industry.

In his words: "The issue that people have brought to me already is that they feel that they need a voice, and that's what I want to be for people, is someone that they can come to and I can represent that opinion for them. That's how it's supposed to operate and that's what I want to be for them."

Dale Ross

Age: 48
Occupation: Master cheesemaker at Jerome Cheese
Government experience: Member of Jerome City Planning and Zoning Commission since January 2010.
Three reasons to vote for Ross:
• Ross says he could open up lines of communication better between the council and residents and offer a strong presence in the community.

• Ross says his prior experience managing a cheese plant in New Mexico that had wastewater issues would be beneficial, given the city's wastewater challenges.
• Ross says the city needs to hold off on bringing in any more dairy processing facilities until the wastewater issues are sorted out. But he's in favor of attracting more businesses that support the dairy industry, like feed and equipment companies.
In his words: "The citizens, they really need to feel that government is accountable and responsive, and I think I can open up that line of communication a little bit more."

Dawn Soto

Age: 43
Occupation: Branch manager/loan officer, First Federal Bank in Jerome Government experience: Appointed to Jerome City Council in January 2010.
Three reasons to vote for Soto:
• Soto says her background in finance gives her a good sense of how city policies and decisions impact residents' pocketbooks, especially in the down economy.

• She says downtown revitalization is crucial and wants to see the area become spruced up and vital.
• Soto says getting the city's wastewater plant improved must be a priority.
In her words: "In my business with the bank, I certainly see what the economy has done for people. I'm able to look at people with empathy and make the best decisions for the city, as well as the citizens individually, and find a balance."

Marjorie Schmidt

Age: 58
Occupation: Business solutions specialist at Idaho Department of Labor, and co-owner/manager of Schmidt Electric.
Government experience: Member of the Jerome City Council since 1998.
Three reasons to vote for Schmidt:
• Schmidt says she's passionate about economic development, including recruiting industries that don't require massive water usage.

• Schmidt says that getting the wastewater treatment plant's challenges resolved will be a key priority. She says it will be important to ensure the plant's the right size and not too large and inefficient.
• A resident of Jerome for more than 40 years, Schmidt says she brings a good historical perspective of the city to the council.
In her words: "I've always been very interested in public service. I've been in public service for many years. To me, it's a payback to a wonderful city that's been very good to me, so it's all about service."

Hailey Voters to Decide Fate of Ban on Plastic Bags

Area high school students pushed for the ban, which has drawn opposition from some retailers and bag company Hilex Poly.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • Paper, not plastic, will be the bag choice at Hailey grocers and retailers if voters pass a ban on plastic bags during the Nov. 8 election.

While an industrious group of Wood River High School students put the ban on the ballot, opposition to the proposal has turned into more than a schoolboy squabble. Some Hailey retailers have argued that the ban's passage would cost them business, while plastic bag manufacturer and recycler Hilex Poly said it could harm the 125 employees at its Jerome plant.

The proposal follows in the footsteps of similar bans passed by cities such as San Francisco and Telluride, Colo., and is intended to reduce waste and encourage more shoppers to use reusable shopping bags or the recycled paper bags Hailey stores already offer.

That might sound like a good idea to the town's environment-conscious residents. But Hailey mayor candidate Geoffrey Moore said it could punish tourists who come to the resort town without bags of their own and are forced to potentially pay for paper.

"I don't like the idea of anything being banned," he said. "Instead, we should do something that creates an incentive."

Hilex Poly doesn't like the ban, either. It launched a voter education campaign against the ban, claiming it won't produce a significant environmental benefit and could negatively affect Hilex Poly's recycling efforts in Jerome.

About the Ban

What it is: An ordinance that would ban Hailey retailers and grocers from using plastic bags to sack items their customers buy.

What's at stake: Some area businesses and plastic bag company Hilex Poly say such a ban could cost them business. If passed, retailers using plastic bags in Hailey could be fined $50 per day.

What it needs to pass: More than 50 percent voter approval.

What they said: Hailey Mayor Rick Davis said he's happy to let voters decide if they want the ban, and praised the Wood River High School students who pushed for the proposed ordinance. "You have to give the kids a lot of credit. They're the future stewards of our environment and they followed procedures to get the ban on the ballot."

"We want to not only continue but also expand this recycling effort because it is good for the environment, the Idaho economy and is the right thing to do," Plant Manager Mike Schutz said in a written release.

If the ban is passed, stores that continue to issue plastic bags would be subject to a $50 daily fine. Chip Atkinson, owner of Atkinsons' Market, said his Hailey grocery has seen a 27 percent reduction in plastic bag use following an education campaign, saving him nearly $7,000 over a year. Atkinson said he'd likely lose money if the ban passes, because he pays nine cents more for each paper bag than he does per plastic bag.

Jerome Voters to Decide on New Home for City Police

bguire@magicvalley.com

Voters in the city of Jerome will face a $500,000 bond proposal on Nov. 8, which would allow the police department to make what official say is a much-needed move to a better facility.

The Jerome City Council in July decided to include the 20-year bond proposal on the ballot and put down a refundable $20,000 deposit for the former Idaho Department of Fish and Game building, located on the 800 block of East Main Street.

"Obviously, the need is there," Mayor John Shine said. "It's been demonstrated repeatedly, given results of tours given and the feedback we received from the citizen's committee."

The building, city officials hope, would house city police and alleviate problems the force currently faces with its South Lincoln Avenue facility. The current police station was constructed back in the 1920s and formerly used as a telephone exchange. The partially underground building has leaky walls and a flat roof that drips, even with repairs.

The building price is $355,000. Another $145,000

About the Measure

What it is: A bond to purchase the old Idaho Department of Fish and Game building to use as the new Jerome police headquarters.

What it costs: $500,000 across 20 years.

What it needs to pass: 66.7 percent supermajority.

is budgeted for necessary upgrades, such as beefing up security for an evidence room and re-wiring the building so police have network access to city servers.

Capt. Tim Green said if the bond passes, a move wouldn't happen for nearly another year.

The bond needs a supermajority of voters to pass. To cover the cost, property taxes would rise based on a property's assessed value. For example, a property with a $100,000 assessed value after the homeowner's exemption would pay another $5.10 each year.

The city may have an easier time of convincing voters to pass the bond, as Jerome County officials decided to hold off on a fourth attempt to seek funding for a new county jail. County commissioners initially wanted the jail measure on the ballot this fall, but have decided to pursue it in 2012.

Sun Valley Voters to Judge Three Races

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • Sun Valley City Council President Dewayne Briscoe hopes to shake up city leadership by challenging Mayor Wayne Willich for his seat.

The two septuagenarians' battle to be Sun Valley's mayor or come Jan. 1 will leave Briscoe's council seat open for election. Incumbent Joan Lamb's seat is also open, meaning the top two vote-getters among a four-candidate field in the Nov. 8 election will be seated in 2012. Here are the details:

Mayoral candidates Dewayne Briscoe

Age: 77
Occupation: Retired maxillofacial surgeon and University of Washington faculty member Government experience: Four years on Sun Valley City Council, two as president; previously served on the Washington Board of Health
Three reasons to vote for Briscoe:
• Briscoe says he has a different managerial style — a conciliatory, negotiable style — than the current mayor.
• He says he has brought a very diverse council together on issues and led the council in not raising taxes.
• Briscoe says he would run council meetings with more efficiency so they don't stretch to 10 hours.
In his words: "I would like to see us address changes to our comprehensive plan sooner than scheduled so we don't have to address proposed changes to open land policy by Sun Valley Co. and others in piecemeal fashion."

Briscoe

Wayne Willich

Age: 72
Occupation: Engineer for Boeing for 36 years
Government experience: Four years as Sun Valley mayor
Three reasons to vote for Willich:
• Willich says he learned as an engineer to plan five years in the future and he continues to look ahead to figure out where to go and what to do.
• He says he brings management ability and leadership to the position and is not afraid to take risks.

Ask The Plant Lady

Question: Dear Plant Lady, My houseplants have a lot of dust and water spots on them. How can I make them pretty and shiny like the ones I see around town that you take care of? Signed "spotty"

Answer: Dear Spotty, If it is still above freezing outside, take your plants outside for a shower with a hose-be gentle-or haul to the indoor shower. Let air dry and then apply a leaf-shine product like "Pokon" to the leaves. Apply in a sunless area to all foliage plants except those with fragile or hairy leaves and let dry before moving to a sunny spot. This can be done monthly. "Pokon" 20% off with this ad in our store.

ous restaurants, putting Sun Valley's best foot forward.
In his words: "We're right at the point where we can do some good long-term things and I don't want to stop right at this moment. I want to do a good job for Sun Valley so it ends up being an excellent, cool place to be."

City Council candidates Michelle Griffith

Age: 49
Occupation: Director of the nonprofit affordable housing developer ARCH Housing Trust; former oil derivatives trader
Government experience: None outside of ARCH collaboration with local governments
Three reasons to vote for Griffith:
• Griffith says her experience with ARCH is relevant to land use issues.
• She says she has broad business experience and is a "generally reasonable person who recognizes that almost always the best solution is the result of collaboration."
• As a former part-timer who moved to Sun Valley permanently three years ago, she understands how both full-time and part-time residents view issues facing Sun Valley.
In her words: "Sun Valley has a number of issues coming up that I think are going to be critical, particularly with respect to land use issues. Our declining or stagnant local option tax is also an issue I would like to address."

Griffith

Joan Lamb

Age: 59
Occupation: Senior executive in investment banking and corporate finance, working as a manager for such firms as Merrill Lynch.
Government experience: Four years on the Sun Valley City Council and Sun Valley Planning and Zoning Commission, chairing the latter.
Three reasons to vote for Lamb:
• Lamb says so much of what the council does is about economics and she has the background, including a master of business administration in economics, to understand what's at stake financially.
• She considers herself a financial conservative.
• Lamb touts her planning and zoning background, which gives her experience with development and land issues, along with an understanding of the constraints the city works within.
In her words: "If the bond

passes, the city will have to issue the bond and negotiate the underwriter, and I have the experience to do that. I would also like to see the comprehensive plan updated during the next four years."

Stephen Poindexter

Age: 33
Occupation: Night desk clerk at Sun Valley Lodge
Government experience: None
Three reasons to vote for Poindexter:
• He says he has worked for 15 years in the hotel industry in Florida, Yellowstone National Park and now Sun Valley and would bring that perspective to a council that must be mindful of its existence in a resort community.
• As a worker bee who rides the bus regularly, he says he would press for a 1 percent sales tax increase on hotel rooms only to help fund Mountain Rides bus service, which recently saw the money it gets from the city cut.

• As someone in the customer service industry, he says he would demand the local cable company improve its service or bring someone else in, rather than decide to hire an outside firm to negotiate with the company as the city recently did.
In his words: "It's not that things need changing that much, but it's always good to have fresh ideas. One of the things I'd like to change is make sure there's a representative from both the city of Sun Valley and Sun Valley Co. on the airport board as Sun Valley has the most to gain or lose from any decisions regarding the replacement or expansion of Friedman Memorial Airport."

Franz Suhadolnik

Age: He answered, "Knew Thomas Jefferson." Online records say he's 80.
Occupation: Retired dentist, stockbroker and financial advisor.
Government experience: Former school board member Three reasons to vote for Suhadolnik:

Suhadolnik

• As a small business owner for 30 years, he says he would be very careful with taxpayers' money compared to present council members, whom he believes are "a little too free giving money to their favorite charities and interest groups."
• Suhadolnik says he was married here in 1973 at the red courthouse in Hailey and got the chance to come back after working hard for 25 years. He'd like to preserve the quality of life that makes Sun Valley a special place.
• His experience as a former school board member overseeing a $50 million budget and serving 22,000 constituents would serve him well given Sun Valley's smaller constituency and $5 million budget.
In his words: "I'd like to maintain the sovereignty of Sun Valley. I don't want it to be consolidated with Ketchum. Each has its own unique problems and Ketchum is large enough it could always outvote Sun Valley two to one."

IDAHO BRIEFS

Idaho Looks for Balance in New Energy Plan

BOISE • Idaho officials are in the process of rewriting the state's five-year energy plan in a way that balances the needs of consumers, utilities and businesses.

Idaho's first energy plan was written in 2007 and was used to guide policy on renewable energy, efficiency and serve as a basis for a moratorium on coal-fired power plants.

Now, an interim legislative committee is working on an update. The Idaho Statesman reports the panel has started with a draft developed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's advisory group, the Strategic Energy Alliance.

The committee will also take testimony next week at public hearings.

Consumer groups are looking for an energy advocate, while utilities hope the state can focus on helping them supply power. Business groups want the policy to encourage economic development.

Idaho Utility Regulator OKs Solar Deal

BOISE • Idaho's public utility regulators approved a 25-year electricity sales pact between a solar energy developer and Idaho Power Co., despite staff objections it's too expensive for customers.

Idaho Public Utilities Commission staff recommended rejecting the deal between Interconnect Solar and Idaho's biggest utility, suggesting the electricity price should be based on new standards for solar power that are subject to ongoing regulatory discussions. But all three commissioners concluded the Idaho Power-Interconnect agreement was appropriate because the price is based on past practices and regulators' directives and shouldn't be held to some standard that remains undecided.

Idaho Power will pay Interconnect $97.47 per megawatt hour for electricity from its 20-megawatt project near Murphy in Owyhee County. It's among Idaho's first big solar installations and is due to be operational next July.

Court Date Set for Nampa Man on Kidnapping Charges

BOISE • A high school janitor is due in court next month on allegations that he attacked a female pedestrian in downtown Boise and tried to drag her into his vehicle.

Court records show 57-year-old James Kopp of Nampa faces felony charges of second-degree kidnapping and aggravated battery after his arrest early Saturday. A preliminary hearing the case has been scheduled for Nov. 7.

Police say a woman reported she had just crossed the street when a man she didn't know got out of his car and punched her in the head, knocking her to the ground. Witnesses say the man, later identified as Kopp, fled in his vehicle.

Kopp is an evening janitor at Nampa Christian High School and has been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of his case.

OPINION

“I’m here to say that we can’t wait for an increasingly dysfunctional Congress to do its job. Where they won’t act, I will.”

President Barack Obama after offering mortgage relief to hundreds of thousands of Americans

OUR VIEW

To Make Better Grads, Start at the Beginning

Last week, Idaho passed on the opportunity to apply for $50 million in “free” early education money. This was a disappointment to proponents of early education — an area in which Idaho lags behind the rest of the nation.

To those who were saddened by the state passing on the grant: it’s not as simple as filling out paperwork in exchange for free money. We’re glad the State Department of Education didn’t apply, but the reason we didn’t needs to be addressed.

Had Idaho applied for the money as things stand now, chances are it wouldn’t have gotten it. Funds were doled out based on factors like the success of an existing state system and making sure early education programs were tracked for accountability.

Our early education system isn’t just non-accountable, it’s virtually nonexistent. We have the dubious honor of being in the bottom bracket of several measures:

- Idaho is one of only 10 states that don’t fund pre-K programs.
- Idaho is in the bottom 5 states for enrollment of 4-year-olds into preschool.
- Idaho is 49th in enrolling 3-year-olds into early education.

Some kids can attend preschool through federally funded Head Start programs, but the demand outweighs the supply — there’s a waiting list to get into the program.

Idaho Superintendent of Schools Tom Luna has repeatedly demonstrated through ad campaigns and funding that improving the high school graduation rate is important to him. He announced yesterday that his department had applied for — and received — a $23 million grant to help teens be prepared for college.

We commend Luna’s push to get funding for older kids, but the problem of a lagging education system needs to be addressed at both ends.

It’s time we joined the growing number of states who have learned that helping kids at the beginning of their education will impact their outlook at the end of their education. More than just improving test scores, early literacy improves social skills and confidence.

Should the state have applied for that $50 million? No, and we’re glad they didn’t. But our lack of early education preparedness should serve as a wake-up call.

In 2010, Alaska and Rhode Island left the coalition of states holding out on funding early education, leaving a small group including the Intermountain West and Mississippi. This isn’t about red and blue lines — it’s about the growing sense that, if we can begin to put kids first when they’re young, we can improve our graduation rates, college attendance, and later earning power in the workplace.

Soroptimists Help Women

What is a Soroptimist? This is a question heard often at the scone booth at the Cassia County Fair. The official answer is Soroptimist is an international organization for business and professional women who work to improve the lives of women and girls in local communities and throughout the world.

Soroptimist is a non-governmental organization which works with the United Nations in an advisory position as well as working on the local level to help women in our community better their lives. Because of the knowledge of conditions at the grass roots level, Soroptimists can communicate the needs of women worldwide.

The projects we have supported in the Mini-Cassia communities are wide and varied. Our clubs recognize exceptional women in our community as well as outstanding youth volunteerism and academic excellence at our Women Celebrating Women Banquet in the spring. We provide scholarships, help with supplies and services for senior citizens and the Domestic Violence Shelter, contribute to the drug detection canine program for the Cassia sheriff and provide opportunities for disadvantaged youth.

Soroptimist is currently seeking applicants for our signature program Women’s Opportunity Award. The Women’s Opportunity Award program was established in 1972 to assist women with primary financial responsibility for their families to obtain the skills-training and education necessary to improve their employment status and standard of living for themselves and their family. Each year, $1.5 million in club, region and federation funds are awarded to more than 1,500 women in Soroptimist International of the America’s 19 member countries and territories. The women receiving these financial awards may use them for any costs associated with their educational efforts, including tuition, books, child care and transportation.

Women who band together can do so much more than only one person. You can help to expand horizons for women and girls by joining Soroptimist International of Minico or Soroptimist International of Burley. Please call for additional information regarding membership or scholarships.

Time to Pay for What We Get

It is time to question government help. Too much has been taken for granted and expected. Now is the time for all to step up to the plate and start paying for what we get in whatever form that is — Meals on Wheels, which covers many miles to get to the homes of the elderly — and as the cost of food goes up, it is bleeding our senior centers.

Now is also the time to stop overusing Medicaid and Medicare. Nothing is free! Someone has to pay for it. Let’s take care of our children and the elderly, but let’s do it right. Let’s do what we can and not overburden the U.S. government when we can do it ourselves. In today’s economy, let us not take government help for granted.

Scout Praises Scouting Program

My name is Dallin Peters,

I’m 14 years old, and I am from Jerome, Idaho. I am working on my communications merit badge in Scouting, and that is why I’m writing you this email.

I think you should write a paragraph in the paper about Scouting. Boy Scouts has changed my life for the better. I love going on camps with my troop because you get to learn how to survive in the wild, like making fires when you basically don’t have anything to make the fire with and how to read a compass in case you get lost.

If you get your Eagle Scout Award, it helps in job interviews and your boss has a better impression of you. If you’re in the military and have an Eagle Scout Award, it helps with your advancements and helps you have a better attitude and greater amount of determination.

I am actually really close to my earning my Eagle Scout Award! I have completed my project and the other requirements except for two merit badges: this one (communications) and physical fitness.

So, I think you need to write about Scouting in the paper so more boys know about it and can join this great Scouting program. Thank you for taking your time to listen to me.

Christensen Praised for Exactness

Neil Christensen is definitely a person with the qualities to make Twin Falls an even better place to live.

Besides running his insurance business, Neil is also a licensed pyrotechnician. I have worked with Neil for the past year on his pyrotechnic crew. We have lit fireworks for a number of local events, including the 2011 Twin Falls July 4 firework show. Because we are working with highly flammable, technical and dangerous material, tensions can run a little high. No matter the situation, Neil always remains calm and eases the tension. He does this with his confident manner and communication skills. Every member of the crew trusts Neil’s leadership because we know he understands and has planned down to the last detail exactly what everyone’s role is and how the explosives will respond.

I know if Neil Christensen is this confident and precise in his hobby, he will definitely carry these skills to the city council.

JORDAN PEHRSON

Munn will Move Twin Falls Forward

Jim Munn will be a welcome addition to the city council. He was born here, grew up here and knows Twin Falls in and out and from top to bottom.

Being the son of a law enforcement officer who later served as county sheriff, is it any wonder that Jim took an interest in that field and joined the city police department as a kid in his late teens? Jim took his duties as an officer very seriously, took the requisite courses to advance and eventually wound up as chief of police with a force of officers who respected and willingly followed him as a leader.

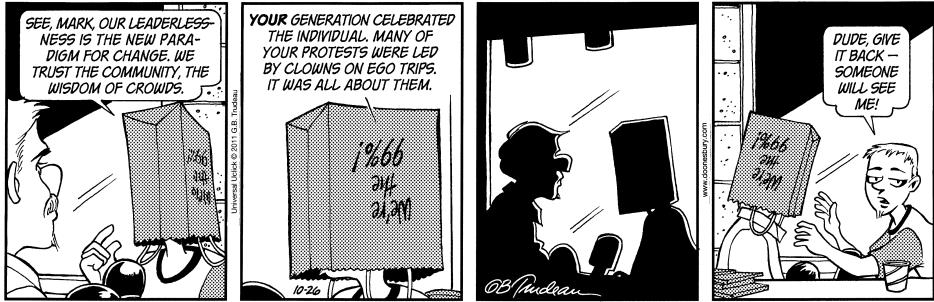

Jim is still a kid at 50 (even if he has retired as chief) and is eager to expand his horizons as a Realtor, private investigator and now as a city councilman, where he can be an important part of the decision making for the good of his beloved Twin Falls.

A vote for Jim will be a vote for moving our city forward, and he will find a cheaper and better way to do it. Want Old Towne revitalized? Jim can get it there.

Please cast your vote for Jim Munn for city councilman.

Judge Grants Second Extension for Death Penalty Deadline

TIMES-NEWS

Judge G. Richard Bevan has granted Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb a second capital punishment deadline extension. Loeb now has until Nov. 4 to file intent to seek the death penalty for Clark Cleveland, who is charged with first-degree murder and 11 other felonies. Cleveland, 26, of Spring Creek, Nev., is accused of fatally shooting Tracy Ivie, a 43-year-old Utah man, and taking a hostage at the Twin Falls

Cleveland

Hampton Inn on July 15. State law says a prosecutor has 60 days from the day of a defendant's arraignment to file notice to seek the death penalty. Loeb was granted an extension in late September, as he prepared to argue the Thomas Trevino Jr. murder trial. That case ended with a plea agreement. Loeb has said seeking an extension is not an indication of his decision, and that he and Cleveland's defense counsel are still seeking information on the case.

Forgery Suspect Charged with 5 More Felonies

TIMES-NEWS

Alfredo Lua may have trouble posting bail, as police keep accusing him of counterfeiting money and passing phony checks.

The 34-year-old Twin Falls man was recently arrested again and faces more felony charges along with a $75,000 bond to get out of jail. Prosecutors levied three counts of forgery against Lua in August, and they've added five more this week.

Lua was arrested in Jerome County recently on outstanding warrants, as Twin Falls police continued to investigate recent counterfeiting schemes. In August, Lua was busted for supposedly passing funny money at a McDonald's drive-thru and later trying to cash a $200 check at WinCo. He was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court but released on his own recognizance.

During that time, police say, he wrote more counterfeit checks. The criminal complaint alleges that Lua wrote $3,495 worth of checks in amounts of $650 to $700 each throughout September. The checks were allegedly forged to look like payroll checks from a local dairy and were cashed at payday check-cashing businesses.

Lua is scheduled to enter his plea on the first set of charges on Nov. 7. For his newer charges, a preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 4.

State: Not Enough Evidence in T.F. Rape Case

TIMES-NEWS

Charges were dropped earlier this month against a homeless man accused of raping a Twin Falls woman.

According to the court file, the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office filed to dismiss the charges against Paul Loyd, as investigators do not have enough evidence to prove the case before a jury, should it have gone to trial.

Loyd, 46, was arrested in September after a woman reported being raped a knife-point by Loyd, who allegedly bragged he wouldn't be caught as he is a transient. The case was dismissed at his preliminary hearing on Oct. 14.

The case was dismissed without prejudice, meaning the state could re-file the rape charge should more evidence come to light.

Man Accused of Assault During Repo Pleads to Lesser Charges

TIMES-NEWS

A Twin Falls man has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges more than a year after he was accused of assaulting a man during an attempted repossession. Erik Jonsson, 37, pleaded to possession of a deadly weapon with the intent to assault and exhibition of a deadly weapon recently in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. He was initially charged with felony aggravated assault and attempted grand theft, stemming from an incident in June 2010. According to a police report, Jonsson pulled a gun on Twin Falls resident Robert Depew, as Jonsson was trying to repossess a riding lawn mower. The men got into a fight as Jonsson rode away from Depew's home on the mower, and Jonsson allegedly flashed a gun during the scrape. Jonsson originally pleaded not guilty and was scheduled for an October trial, but a plea agreement was recently reached. The agreement calls for a two-year probation in lieu of one year in county jail. Jonsson's case will return to the magistrate division, and he is scheduled for a Dec. 6 sentencing.

Gadhafi Buried at Secret Site in Desert

BY KARIN LAUB
and RAMI AL-SHAHEIBI
Associated Press

MISRATA, Libya • Flamboyant and grandiose in life, Moammar Gadhafi was buried in secrecy and anonymity, laid to rest in an unmarked grave before dawn in the Libyan desert that was home to his Bedouin tribal ancestors.

The burial ended the gruesome spectacle of Gadhafi's decaying corpse on public display in a cold storage locker at a Misrata warehouse for four days after he was killed in his hometown of Sirte on Oct. 20.

The location of the brutal dictator's grave site was not disclosed by the interim government for fear of vandalism by his foes and veneration by his die-hard supporters.

Gadhafi, 69, was buried Tuesday along with his son Muatassim and former Defense Minister Abu Bakr Yunis after the military council in the city of Misrata ordered a reluctant Muslim cleric to say the required prayers.

Libya's new leaders hope the funeral will allow the country to turn the page on the four-decade Gadhafi era and the bloody eight-month rebellion against him. Still, the book cannot be closed completely, with unanswered questions remaining about his slaying, and his son and one-time heir apparent, Seif al-Islam, still at large.

Under international pressure to investigate the circumstances of Gadhafi's death, the interim leaders of the National Transitional Council issued a statement late Tuesday saying they "disapprove" of any prisoner being hurt, let alone killed. It was the first time the new leadership spoke out against Gadhafi's killing.

"Regardless of the hatred that Libyans held for Moammar Gadhafi and his regime because of the suffering he inflicted, and how he soiled their reputation for four decades, we did not want to end this tyrant's life before he was brought to court, and before he answered questions that have deprived Libyans from sleep and tormented them for years," the statement said.

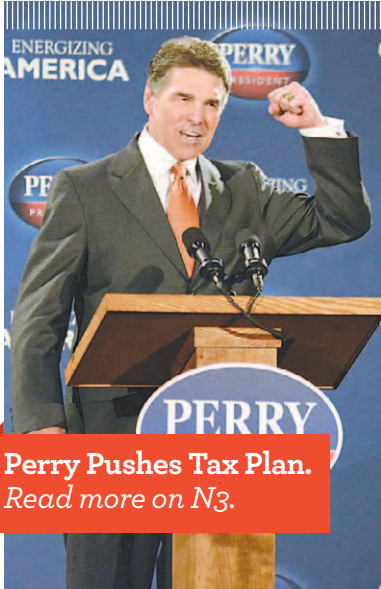

The three bodies were moved under cover of darkness late Monday by the city's military council. They were taken from the warehouse area to a school in Misrata where suspected regime loyalists are being held, said Mohammed al-Madani, a Muslim cleric and one of the detainees.

About 1:30 a.m. Tuesday, al-Madani and another detained cleric were ordered to pray over the bodies, which had been wrapped in shrouds, with their faces covered. Al-Madani told The AP that he initially refused, but felt he had no choice and quickly said the required Muslim prayers.

‘Joe the Plumber’ Throws Hat into Ring for Congress

TOLEDO, Ohio • Joe the Plumber is plunging into politics because he thinks it's about time America had a few mechanics, bricklayers and, yes, plumbers in Congress. Samuel "Joe" Wurzelbacher was thrust into the political spotlight after questioning Barack Obama about his economic policies during the 2008 presidential campaign. He officially launched his campaign for Congress in Ohio on Tuesday night. Wurzelbacher said he's running as a Republican in Ohio's 9th U.S. House district, a seat now held by Marcy Kaptur, the longest-serving Democratic woman in the House.

Miracle Baby Emerges from Rubble in Turkish Quake

Jubilation is tempered by many more discoveries of bodies by thousands of aid workers in the worst-hit city of Ercis and other communities in eastern Turkey devastated by Sunday's quake.

ERCIS, Turkey • After 48 hours, a miracle emerged from the rubble: a 2-week-old baby girl brought out half-naked but alive from the wreckage of an apartment building toppled by Turkey's devastating earthquake.

Rescue workers erupted in cheers and applause Tuesday at sight of the infant — and again hours later when her mother and grandmother were pulled out, their survival a ray of joy on an otherwise grim day.

The death toll from Sunday's 7.2-magnitude quake climbed to at least 459 as desperate survivors fought over aid and blocked aid shipments. A powerful aftershock ignited widespread panic that turned into a prison riot in a nearby provincial city.

With thousands of quake survivors facing a third night out in the open in near-freezing temperatures, Turkey set aside its national pride and said it would accept international aid offers, even from Israel, with which it has had strained relations.

Tuesday's dramatic rescue of three generations of one family was all the more remarkable because the infant, Azra Karaduman, was declared healthy after being flown to a hospital in Ankara, the Turkish capital.

Television footage showed rescuer Kadir Direk in an orange jumpsuit wriggling into a narrow slit in the pile of concrete and metal, then sliding back out with Azra, clad only in a T-shirt.

"Praise be!" someone shouted. "Get out of the way!" another yelled as the aid team and bystanders cleared a path to a waiting ambulance.

"Bringing them out is such happiness. I wouldn't be happier if they gave me tons of money," said rescuer Oytun Gulpinar.

The pockets of jubilation were tempered by many more discoveries of bodies by thousands of aid workers in the worst-hit city of Ercis and other communities in eastern Turkey devastated by the earthquake.

Even rescues were tinged with sadness: 10-year-old Serhat Gur was pulled alive from the rubble of a building after being trapped for 54 hours, only to die a short time later at a hospital, state-run TRT television reported.

Some 2,000 buildings collapsed, but the fact that the quake hit in daytime,

Death Highlights Women's Role in Special Ops Teams

LOLITA C. BALDOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Army 1st Lt. Ashley White died on the front lines in southern Afghanistan last weekend, the first casualty in what the Army says is a new and vital wartime attempt to gain the trust of Afghan women.

White, like other female soldiers working with special operations teams, was brought in to do things that would be awkward or impossible for her male teammates. Frisking burqa-clad women, for example.

Her death, in a bomb explosion in the Taliban heartland of Kandahar, underscores the risks of placing women with elite U.S. special operations teams working in remote villages.

Military leaders and other female soldiers in the program say its rewards are great, even as it fuels debate over the roles of women in combat.

"We could do things that the males cannot do, and they are starting to realize that," says Sgt. Christine Baldwin, who like White was among the first groups of women deployed to Afghanistan this year as specially trained "cultural support" troops.

Male soldiers often cannot even speak to an Afghan woman because of the strict cultural norms that separate the sexes and the tradition of women remaining behind closed doors most of the time. Forcing the issue has yielded only resentment, military officials say, and has jeopardized the trust and cooperation of villagers. From the start of the war 10 years ago, Afghans have especially resented the practice of "night raids" in which male foreign soldiers enter and search homes, the traditional sanctuary of women.

Panel: Boys Should Get HPV Vaccine Given to Girls

Recommendation by government panel is being framed as important new measure against cancer in males.

BY MIKE STOBBE

ATLANTA • A vaccine against cervical cancer hasn't been all that popular for girls. It may be even a harder sell for boys now that it's been recommended for them too.

A government advisory panel on Tuesday decided that the vaccine should also be given to boys, in part to help prevent the cancer-causing virus through sex.

Public health officials have tried since 2006 to get parents to have their daughters vaccinated against the human papillomavirus, or HPV, which causes most of the cervical cancer in women.

They have had limited success, hitting a number of hurdles. Some parents distrust the safety of vaccines,

NORTHERN LIGHTS SHINE DOWN SOUTH

A baffling solar storm pulled colorful northern lights unusually far south, surprising space weather experts and treating skywatchers to a rare and spectacular treat. A storm-chasing photographer captured the strange sky show in Arkansas on Monday night. People in Kentucky and Georgia reported their sightings to local television stations. A special automated NASA camera that takes a picture of the sky every minute in Huntsville, Ala., captured 20 minutes of the vibrant red and green aurora borealis. In Arkansas, Brian Emfinger called the view "extremely vivid, the most vivid I have ever seen. There was just 15 to 20 minutes where it really went crazy." Emfinger, a storm chaser, captured the vibrant nighttime images on camera in Ozark, Ark. This is only the second northern lights in a decade that he has seen this far south.

BIGGEST U.S. NUKE SCRAPPED IN TEXAS

The last of the nation's biggest nuclear bombs, a Cold War relic 600 times more powerful than the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima, was dismantled Tuesday in what one energy official called a milestone in President Barack Obama's mission to rid the world of nuclear weapons. Workers in Texas separated the roughly 300 pounds of high explosives inside from the uranium — known as the pit.

when many people were out of their homes, averted an even worse disaster.

Close to 500 aftershocks have rattled the area, according to Turkey's Kandilli seismology center. A strong one on Tuesday sent residents rushing into the streets in panic while sparking a riot by prisoners in the city of Van, 55 miles (90 kilometers) south of Erzurum. The U.S. Geological Survey put that tremor at a magnitude of 5.7.

Some prisoners demanded to be let out while others set bedding on fire as the revolt spread inside the 1,000-bed prison, the Dogan news agency reported. Security forces surrounded the facility to try to prevent escapes, while military vehicles fired water cannon at crowds gathered outside.

There was still no power or running water in the region, and desperate people stopped trucks even before they entered Erzurum, grabbing tents and other supplies. Kanal D television showed people fighting over tents and blankets.

Aid workers said they were able to find emergency housing for only about half the thousands of people who needed it.

Turkey decided to accept offers of assistance after its emergency management authorities decided that thousands of survivors would need prefabricated homes to get through the winter in the mountainous region, said a Turkish Foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity in line with ministry rules.

Israel offered assistance despite a rift between the two countries over last year's Israeli raid on a Gaza-bound flotilla.

At least 1,352 people were injured in the quake, TRT television said. Nine people were rescued Tuesday, although many more bodies were discovered.

The mother of the rescued baby, Semiha Karaduman, and the child's grandmother, Gulsadet, were huddled together with the infant held tight against her mother's shoulder when rescuers found them, Direk told The AP.

Hours after the infant was freed, the two adults were pulled from the half-flat-topped building and rushed to ambulances as onlookers clapped and cheered.

Special Ops

"We could search the female, find out the other half of the information," Baldwin said in an interview. "If you're missing half of the lay of the land, how effective are you in engaging the populace?"

That question was eight years in the making. It arose from the frustration of U.S. commanders who realized two years ago that as they tried to apply the principles of counterinsurgency — protect civilians and enlist them to reject insurgents and provide intelligence — they weren't reaching the majority of the Afghan population.

Now, the first female soldiers are serving in commando units. They are trained to ferret out critical information not available to their male team members, to identify insurgents disguised as women and figure out when Afghan women are being used to hide weapons.

U.S. women have been on the front lines in Afghanistan since the war began, and over time they have been used to reach out to the Afghan population through health care initiatives and other programs. They have traveled with Army soldiers and Marines throughout the warfront, often to assist in development projects or as part of psychological operations — what are now called MISO, or military information support operations.

But as elite special operations teams fanned out across the country doing counterinsurgency "stability operations" in the small villages, they complained to their superiors that they weren't reaching the women and children who make up as much as 71 percent of the population.

"We waited too long to get to this," says Command Sgt. Maj. Ledford Stigall. "We had a lot of people focused on the kill and capture, and it really took someone to say, hey it's not about kill, capture, it's about developing a country that can take care of itself."

"Women have a voice," he said. "They can influence the men in their society."

In 2009, under pressure from Gen. Stanley McChrystal, then the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan, and Gen. David Petraeus, then the top U.S. commander in the Middle East, the Army began to develop Cultural Support Teams.

Last November, the first group of women went through a grueling five-day assessment that tested their physical and military skills, their problem-solving and writing abilities and their psychological and mental fitness. Those that passed moved on to a six-week training program.

And in January, the first group of 28 women deployed to Afghanistan with Army Rangers and Special Forces teams.

They went in two-woman teams as part of larger special operations units — usually numbering about a dozen. And they were designed to go out on patrols and into the villages with the special operators to help build relations with the communities by engaging with the Afghan women.

In the process, they could also glean valuable intelligence about the people in the region, information they might not be able to get from the men.

especially newer products. Others don't want to think about their daughters having sex one day, or worry that the vaccine essentially promotes promiscuous behavior.

Tuesday's vote by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices' was the first to strongly recommend routine vaccination for boys since the vaccine was first approved for them two years ago. Officials acknowledged the low rate in girls encouraged them to take a new, hard look.

Experts say a key benefit of routinely vaccinating boys could be preventing the spread of the virus to others through sex — making up somewhat for the disappointing vaccination rate in girls. But the recommendation is being framed as an important new measure against cancer in males.

"Today is another milestone in the nation's battle against cancer," said Dr. Anne Schuchat, a U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention administrator who oversees the agency's immunization programs.

Federal health officials usually adopt the panel's recommendations and ask doctors and patients to follow them.

The vaccine has been advised for girls since 2006. Just 49 percent of adolescent girls have gotten at least the first of the three HPV shots. Only a third had gotten all three doses by last year.

"Pretty terrible," Schuchat said.

Schuchat attributed the low rates for girls to confusion or misunderstanding by parents that they can wait until their daughter becomes sexually active. It works best if the shots are given before a girl or boy begins having sex.

Some conservatives argue the vaccine could promote promiscuous behavior.

Rick Perry Urges Deep Tax Cuts, Spending Changes

BY KASIE HUNT and CHARLES BABINGTON
Associated Press

GRAY COURT, S.C. • Republican presidential candidate Rick Perry proposed dramatic tax and spending changes Tuesday, saying he would let

Perry

Americans choose between a 20 percent flat tax and the current system, allow private Social Security accounts and slash government spending and regulation.

Perry, seeking to regain the momentum he enjoyed in late August, said his plan would significantly spur economic growth. But analysts ages for the left and right said he would need draconian federal budget cuts to avoid massive deficits.

In a pitch to conservatives, the Texas governor said his “Cut, Balance and Grow” plan was bolder than what his Republican rivals or President Barack Obama would do. His proposal calls for gradually increasing eligibility ages for Social Security and Medicare and for amending the Constitution to require balanced budgets.

“America is under a crushing burden of debt, and the president simply offers larger deficits and the politics of class division,” Perry said in South Carolina, whose primary will follow early voting in Iowa and New Hampshire. “Others simply offer microwaved plans with warmed-over reforms based on current ingredients.”

After weeks of calling Social Security a “Ponzi scheme,” Perry proposed major changes to the program’s funding and payouts. Benefits would not change for current and soon-to-be retirees. Eventually, however, the eligibility age would rise, and wealthier people would see reduced benefits.

Younger workers could steer some of their Social Security payroll taxes to private investment accounts, an idea President George W. Bush tried and failed to enact in 2005.

The heart of Perry’s plan would reduce or eliminate an array of taxes. He would end taxes on Social Security benefits, estates, dividends and capital gains, which would most help upper-income people. He would lower the corporate income tax rate as well as the personal income tax rate for those who choose his 20 percent flat rate.

The top marginal tax rate on individual income is now 35 percent. It was 70 percent in the 1970s.

Perry’s plan would let people exempt $12,500 of their income, plus $12,500 for each dependent, from taxation. He would keep popular deductions, such as those for mortgage interest, state taxes and charity gifts, for families making less than $500,000 a year.

By design, Perry’s plan “must lose revenue” for the government, said Kevin Hassett, director of economic policy studies at the right-of-center American Enterprise Institute. To avoid higher deficits, Hassett said, the government would have to slash spending in ways not seen since the steep military drawdown after World War II.

College Prices Rise as State Budgets Cut

The cost of a full credit load has passed $8,000, an all-time high, according to two annual reports on college costs and student aid published today.

BY JUSTIN POPE
Associated Press

It’s a kick in the gut even for students and families hardened to bad financial news: Average in-state tuition and fees at four-year public colleges rose an additional $631 this fall, or 8.3 percent, compared with a year ago.

Nationally, the cost of a full credit load has passed $8,000, an all-time high. Throw in room and board, and the average list price for a state school now runs more than $17,000 a year, according to the twin annual reports on college costs and student aid published Wednesday by the College Board.

Helping drive the national numbers were huge tuition increases at public universities in California, which enrolls 10 percent of public four-year college students and whose 21 percent tuition increase this year was the largest of any state.

But even without California, prices would have increased 7 percent on average nationally — an exceptional burden at a time of high unemployment and stagnant family incomes.

The large increase in federal grants and tax credits for students, on top of stimulus dollars that prevented greater state cuts, helped keep the average tuition-and-fees that families actually pay much lower: about $2,490, or just $170 more than five years ago. But the days of states and families relying on budget relief from Washington appear numbered. And some argue that while Washington’s largesse may have helped some students, it did little to hold down prices.

“The states cut budgets, the price goes up, and the (federal) money goes to that,” said Patrick Callan, president of the National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education. “For 25 years we’ve been putting more and more money into financial aid, and tuition keeps going up. We’re on a national treadmill.”

Terry Hartle, senior vice president at the American Council on Education, which represents colleges in Washington, said the cause of the price increases for the 80 percent of college students who attend public institutions is clear. State appropriations to higher education declined 18 percent per student over the last three years, the College Board found, the sharpest fall on record.

“To see increases of 20 percent, as we saw in California, to see gains of 15 percent in other states, is simply unprecedented,” Hartle said. “Tuition is simply being used as a revenue substitute in many states.”

The latest report comes with concerns about student debt front and center among many of the Occupy Wall Street protesters.

Meanwhile, President Barack Obama planned to announce a new measure Wednesday to help borrowers of student loans. The administration plans to accelerate from 2014 to 2012 a new income-based repayment option that will bring monthly payment caps down from 15 percent of discretionary income to 10 percent. It also plans to allow 5.8 million borrowers who are paying back two kinds of government loans — federal direct loans and loans from the old Federal Family Education Loan Program — to consolidate them, which could lower monthly payments.

The College Board reports roughly 56 percent of 2009-2010 bachelor’s degree recipients at public four-years graduated with debt, averaging about $22,000. At private nonprofit universities, the figures were higher — 65 percent and around $28,000.

“Psychologically, practically, it’s a big number, and it will inform important choices, like when and whether you buy a home, start a family, save for retirement or take the risk of starting a new business,” said Lauren Asher, president of The Institute for College Access and Success.

This year, for the first time, total outstanding student loan debt has passed $1 trillion, and it now exceeds outstanding credit card debt, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Still, private borrowing — usually more dangerous than government loans — has been falling. And Asher and other experts emphasize that the types of loans students take out can be as important as the amount. In general, a college degree remains a good investment.

Other slivers of what passes for good news: While several states had double-digit percentage increases, there were wide variations, and Connecticut and South Carolina held under 3 percent. Roughly half of students are enrolled in nonprofit colleges attend institutions charging under $10,000, and fewer than 1 in 10 attend institutions listing prices over $36,000.

Meanwhile, both community colleges and private four-year colleges reported lower tuition inflation than public universities.

At nonprofit private four-year colleges, tuition and fees were up 4.5 percent to $28,500. Factoring in aid, the average total net cost, including room and board, was about $22,970 — lower than five years ago. At community colleges, where list prices rose 8.7 percent nationally to just under $3,000, net costs are also lower than five years ago, and aid generally covers the whole price.

Tuition and fees continue to go up

Average tuition and fees at four-year public colleges rose 8.3 percent compared to 2010, with a full credit load costing students and parents more than $8,000 per year.

Average college tuition and fees in constant 2011 dollars

Still, while net costs are important to note, they don’t tell the whole story. They don’t cover living costs, which for many students are a higher obstacle than tuition, especially if they can’t work as much while enrolled.

And the aid dollars that that help lower the average net price don’t always go to the neediest students.

Colleges award merit scholarships. Federal Pell Grants do support the neediest, and spending on them has nearly doubled in the last two years to around $35 billion (9.1 million students got grants averaging $3,828).

But the latest College Board figures highlight a rapid recent increase in indirect government support through tuition and other tax credits, which have reached almost $15 billion. Around 12 million people are now taking advantage of tax benefits averaging more than $1,200. And while recent changes make low-income families better able to take advantage of those credits, a growing proportion of the benefit goes to families earning more than $100,000.

The tax credit program, dramatically expanded in 2009, “really changes the story of how the federal government subsidizes students,” said Sandy Baum, the economist who directs the College Board’s reports.

The credit is “not so much a middle-income benefit as we’re used to thinking about it.”

Some states are not only cutting their appropriations but not even paying what they’ve promised. Illinois is late on bills worth $500 million to nine campuses this year, where on some campuses tuition and fees are up thousands of dollars.

The percentage increases in California, once widely considered to have the best-value public universities in the world, are so high in part because the base prices of past years were low. Prices there still aren’t high by national standards, but this year for the first time, California’s tuition and fee rates were above the national average. That in 2011 California’s public universities would be cost more than the national average would have been unimaginable to most experts a decade ago.

Hartle and others say this year’s sharp increases came despite the last chunks of stimulus dollars from Washington used to plug holes in education spending. Looking forward, state budgets remain broken and there’s little indication Washington will come riding to the rescue.

“I’m not exactly sure where higher education in the United States is going,” he said. “But I have a feeling California is going to get there first.”

Cold Weather Hits Turnout at Occupy Spokane

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS

Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. • Spokane's version of the Occupy Wall Street protest has dwindled to only a handful of demonstrators, just a few weeks after a march through downtown drew some 300 people.

While the protests have drawn big crowds and led to mass arrests in some cities, no more than a dozen activists at a time have occupied a small downtown traffic island in Spokane since early October. The group's numbers shrank to just one or two people during early morning hours this week as colder weather moved in to the area.

Also present on the traffic island — a large statue of Spanish-American war hero John R. Monaghan, which protesters have been using to prop up their signs.

Significantly, Occupy Spokane is set up on city land in front of the posh Spokane Club, which for decades has been a gathering place for the city's movers and shakers. The proximity to the red-brick club was intentional, said Cole Cummings, 40, who has shown up regularly for the past month to hold a sign on the corner of Monroe and Riverside. "This is where the wealthy come to work out in the mornings," Cummings said last week, his breath visible in the cold air.

Terry Hill, 57, a retired Spokane Transit Authority bus driver, said he is participating in Occupy Spokane mainly to highlight the nation's economic disparity. The middle class has had stagnating incomes for three decades while the rich have gotten richer, he said.

"Everything flows in their direction," Hill said of the rich. "There is just something wrong here."

There have been no problems with police, although Occupy Spokane did have to secure a permit to run a modest kitchen and was required to provide a portable restroom. And there have been no conflicts with members of the Spokane Club — in fact, someone from the club gives coffee to the protesters every morning, Cummings said.

Family Struggles to Move On After Attack

If there is a silver lining, it's the love and support they've received from a tiny N. Idaho community on the edge of Lake Pend Oreille.

BY ALISON BOGGS
The Spokesman-Review

BAYVIEW • A family is watching TV on a cold Sunday afternoon when a man bursts in, calls them an obscene name and attacks with a hammer, aiming for their heads. One woman is killed. Another suffers a severe head injury that steals pieces of her memory and speech. Two other family members are beaten but escape with minor injuries.

It sounds like something straight out of a horror movie, but that's what Yvonne Wallis, her son, daughter-in-law and grandson experienced last Dec. 19 in Bayview. Their next-door neighbor, Larry Cragun, was arrested and charged with murder and attempted murder, and is in jail awaiting trial in January. His bail is set at $1 million.

Ten months later, the survivors are struggling to move on.

Patty Heath, wife of Wallis' son, Michael Heath, died the day after the attack. Wallis has had three surgeries on her skull and is awaiting a fourth. She is visited daily by nurses and therapists, along with her son, who is paid by a Coeur d'Alene nonprofit organization to be his mother's caretaker.

Heath lives in his RV in the woods nearby. He said his nightmares aren't as bad as his good dreams, in which his wife visits him.

"You wake up and you realize that's not your life anymore," said Heath, who was married to Patty for almost 22 years. Their son, Jedidiah Heath, 22, declined to comment for this story, but suffered numerous blows and needed stitches in his head, his father said.

If there is a silver lining, it's the love and support they've received from the tiny community of about 300 people that sits in picturesque beauty at the edge of Lake Pend Oreille. Community members have held fundraisers and brought casseroles, and visit Wallis daily to help with medical care. Neighbors who never were friends before have become like soul mates. "Everybody here has been touched that something like this happened so close to us. It could have been any one of us," said Genette Gabica, who manages the nearby Bitter End Marina and does everything she can for Wallis, from taking her shopping to cleaning her small trailer. "I cried tears for her from the beginning, not knowing her. I just want her to see, people do care. I think it does help lighten the pain."

Three Surgeries

On the left side of her head, Wallis has a "hammer-shaped" space that's soft to the touch. The 59-year-old woman has undergone three surgeries — first to clean out bone fragments, then to insert a plate in her skull, then to remove the plate when it became infected.

"It's just skin over my brain, and any little puncture could be severe damage to my brain," Wallis said recently, in halting speech. "Just fluke things, like leaving a cupboard door open, could be deadly."

Neighbor Judy Gullidge, who never knew Wallis before, now visits daily to help her with the intravenous antibiotic drip that's helping clear the infection. Eventually, Wallis will return to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle to have a new plate inserted. But for now, she wears a helmet to protect the vulnerable spot.

"I'd like to be able to do normal things," Wallis said. "I'm hoping my life can be a little more normal. Right now, I'm just an invalid."

Before the attack, she said, she was personable and chatted easily with people. A former bartender and hairdresser, she had a lot of friends. Now she struggles to find simple words and gets dizzy just looking up.

Still, she said the speech and occupational therapists she works with regularly have told her she's made significant progress. Panhandle Health District declined to allow her therapists to discuss Wallis' condition, citing federal privacy laws.

Despite support from Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security disability and the state Crime Victims Compensation Fund, Wallis barely gets by financially once she pays rent and utilities on her small trailer.

Local churches and neighbors have helped pay for gas and motel rooms when she has traveled to Seattle for surgeries and follow-up care.

"We made our food to bring with us because we didn't have money for food," she said.

Days after the attack, the blood-stained couch where Patty Heath was sitting when she was attacked was still in Wallis' living room.

"They were putting a blanket over it," Gullidge said. "It makes me cry. I'm sorry, I can hardly talk about it," she said, her voice catching with emotion. "We got a new couch for her and whatever we could do."

Whatever they could do was a lot. In the weeks and months after the attack, several neighbors befriended Wallis and Heath, helping with everything from housecleaning to raising money.

"I feel we've covered the evil with enough good, if that makes sense," Gullidge said.

Next-door neighbor Herb Huseland only knew Wallis to wave and say hi, but drove her to Seattle and stayed with friends for 10 days, waiting to take her back home after her surgery. Huseland, who once wrote a column for The Spokesman-Review, put out a call for donations on his blog and collected hundreds of dollars.

He continues to advocate for her, emailing her Harborview Medical Center doctor and patient care coordinator for the documentation necessary for reimbursement from the state Crime Victims fund.

Shortly after the attack, Gullidge and her friend Robin McKellar organized a fundraiser at a nearby bed-and-breakfast, raising a considerable sum for Wallis and Heath. Gullidge said her actions are motivated by the love she received when she had cancer.

"The neighborhood rallied around me. When I saw there was this opportunity to be that for somebody else, that's what I wanted to be," Gullidge said. "It's a beautiful little community, that's for sure. I want her to feel that God-love from all of us. And I think she is."

Coping With Loss

Despite the financial difficulties, the larger challenge Wallis and her family confront daily is the loss of Patty Heath, the petite, dark-haired woman who Wallis said was "just full of love."

Michael Heath said he and his wife enjoyed sea kayaking and camping and she loved to collect rocks on the beach.

"I'm pretty much having to learn life all over again," said the tall, gruff man, looking suddenly lost.

Gabica, the Bitter End Marina manager, said the attack stunned the Bayview community. Many people saw Cragun that day, as he allegedly ran from business to business downtown telling people he'd just killed four people. Some heard the screams emanating from the trailer on the hill. One visitor to town that day said he's still haunted by it. Many people saw the sheriff's cars rolling through town.

Gabica met Wallis at the fundraiser and offered to help.

"My heart just kind of broke open for her," she said of her new friend.

Cragun is scheduled to stand trial on Jan. 3 in Kootenai County 1st District Court.

In May, a judge postponed the case because a psychologist determined the 32-year-old was unfit to stand trial. Following treatment, Cragun was found to be competent to stand trial and assist in his defense, said county Prosecutor Barry McHugh.

McHugh said his office does not intend to seek the death penalty.

In the weeks leading up to the attack, some Bayview residents said, Cragun had posted fliers around town suggesting an umbrella submerged in Lake Pend Oreille allowed the government to read people's minds.

When Cragun was apprehended by police that Sunday, he told a deputy "they" had raped his wife and daughter. The deputy said in his report he understood "they" to mean the victims. Cragun's ex-wife told the news media that was a lie.

Deputies had been called to Cragun's home several times to investigate claims they later found to be false, including an allegation that the Heaths' son had poisoned Cragun, police reports show.

Michael Heath told deputies that Cragun had been angry over the previous few weeks and had thrown snowballs at Wallis' trailer and yelled profanities at the family, a police report said. Wallis' and Cragun's trailers are about 50 feet apart.

Bison roam out of the entrance to Yellowstone National Park in Gardiner, Mont., on March 17.

Future of Mont. Bison Migrations Headed to Trial

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Montana's newfound tolerance toward wild bison is heading to trial as cattle ranchers and county officials seek to prevent a repeat of last year's mass migration of hundreds of the animals out of Yellowstone National Park.

State District Judge Wayne Phillips has been asked to settle a fundamental question: Are bison in Montana free-roaming wildlife, or should they be kept in the park to protect private property and public safety?

Deep snows last winter prompted an estimated 1,400 bison to spill out of the park in search of food at lower elevations in Montana. Many were captured and released in the spring, but hundreds of the animals, also known as buffalo, for a time roamed at will in the 75,000-acre Gardiner Basin.

That appeared to mark an end to the state's long-standing practice of shooting or slaughtering bison that leave the park, which claimed almost 4,000 of the animals over the last decade. But now Park County and the Park County Stockgrowers Association want to revive restrictions on bison movement.

"I'm not anti-wildlife," said Joe Sperano, a 69-year-old member of the stockgrowers' group who lives north of Gardiner and runs a small number of horses and cattle. "The buffalo are a different deal. There was never any problem with one or two. When we've got 30 or 40 coming through my place at one time, they want to go through the fences, rub on my house, destroy my irrigation pipes."

Sperano said he suffered $2,000 in damages to irrigation pipes that were crushed by bison and additional damage to his house and an electrified fence.

Lawsuits filed by Park County and the stockgrowers would overturn an agreement signed in April by federal and state agencies and several Indian groups that allowed bison into the Gardiner Basin during winter.

Although some bison previously were permitted in limited areas outside the park, the agreement allowed them into areas where bison had been barred for decades.

The suits contend free-roaming bison destroy private property, threaten the safety of county residents, and increase the chances that a disease carried by the animals, brucellosis, could be transmitted to cattle.

An initial hearing is scheduled for Wednesday in Livingston.

Attorneys for Gov. Brian Schweitzer and two state agencies are seeking to disqualify one of the stockgrowers' attorneys, John Bloomquist, because he represented the state in past lawsuits over the animals. Hearings on more substantive issues were postponed pending the disqualification hearing.

Even if Phillips sides in favor of the state on the larger question of allowing bison into Montana, Park County Attorney Brett Linneweber pledged in an interview with The Associated Press that last year's migration would not be repeated.

"The county's not going to roll over and say there's nothing we can do about it. People have a right to be safe," he said. "There are steps we can take outside the legal arena, but we would prefer not to."

Linneweber declined further explanation.

Last spring, a Park County resident who claimed his dog was being threatened by bison shot and killed two of the animals and wounded several others. No charges were filed.

Experts say tens of millions of bison once roamed across most of North America. At the turn of the last century, when the species had been nearly driven to extinction by overhunting, Yellowstone offered one of the last refuges for the iconic animal.

The park's 3,500 bison today make up one of the largest wild concentrations of the animals in the world.

While they're clearly wild in the park — where careless visitors are occasionally gored by the animals — the stockgrowers' lawsuit challenges that status for any bison stepping into Montana. The group contends they should be managed differently than other wildlife.

Officials with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks dispute the group's assertion, saying state law has classified bison as wildlife at least since 1995.

"They are, in the end, wild animals," said agency attorney Rebecca Jakes Dockter. "Sometimes you can predict what their behavior will be and sometimes you can't ... That's what you have to take along with the privilege of living with wildlife on our landscape."

Since the April agreement allowing bison into the Gardiner Basin, Dockter's agency has agreed to further study the issue before deciding what actions to take this coming winter. That will include an opportunity for public comment — something not sought before the agreement was reached.

To address concerns over private property damage, state officials working with several conservation groups have installed an estimated 1,500 feet of fencing to keep bison away from Gardiner Basin landowners who don't want them.

CONNECTICUT MAN CONVICTED OF KIDNAPPING EX-WIFE, ARSON

BY DAVE COLLINS
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. • A former advertising executive is facing the possibility of spending the rest of his life in prison after being convicted Tuesday of kidnapping his ex-wife, holding her hostage for nearly 12 hours and burning down the Connecticut home they used to share.

Richard Shenkman, 62, showed no visible emotion as the six-person jury in Hartford rejected his insanity defense and convicted him of all 10 charges, including kidnapping, arson, assault, threatening and violating a protective order. His ex-wife, who escaped without serious injury, testified that Shenkman fired a handgun near her head, prepared a noose for her and claimed to have rigged the house with explosives.

The standoff in 2009 ended when Shenkman came out of the burning home and pointed the gun at his head. Police subdued him with rubber bullets and stun guns and took him into custody. Two psychiatrists testified that Shenkman was psychotic at the time, but the prosecutor argued that he was just acting mentally ill to avoid prison.

Shenkman, who didn't testify, has been detained since his arrest. He is set to be sentenced Jan. 4. The 10 charges carry up to about 90 years in prison.

He also awaits trial for allegedly burning down his and ex-wife Nancy Tyler's former beachfront home in East Lyme in 2007.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Markets Close With Steep Losses

NEW YORK (AP) • The Dow fell 207 points, or 1.7 percent, to close at 11,706.62. 3M fell 6.3 percent, the largest drop among the 30 stocks that make up the Dow average. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 25.14, or 2 percent, to 1,229.05. The Nasdaq dropped 61.02, or 2.3 percent, to 2,638.42. The losses turned the Nasdaq negative for the year once again. A rally Monday left the index up 1.8 percent for 2011. Small company stocks fell far more than the broader market, a sign that investors were shunning assets perceived as being risky.

Local, Organic Foods Not Always Safer

WASHINGTON (AP)• Foods produced at smaller farms or labeled “local,” “organic” or “natural” may appear safer to shoppers nervous about foodborne illness. But a small outbreak of salmonella in organic eggs from Minnesota shows that no food is immune to contamination. The government has traditionally focused on safety at large food operations because they reach the most people. Recent outbreaks in cantaloupe, ground turkey, eggs and peanuts have started at large farms or plants and sickened thousands of people across the country. But as sales for foods produced at smaller operations have grown, a new set of food safety challenges has emerged. Small farms have been exempted from food safety laws as conservatives, farmers and food-lovers have worried about too much government intervention and regulators have struggled with tight budgets.

In Time for the Holidays, a Bad Economic Mood

NEW YORK (AP) • Americans say they feel worse about the economy than they have since the depths of the Great Recession. And it's a bad time for a bad mood because households are starting to make their holiday budgets. It might not be all doom and gloom, though. Sometimes what people say about the economy and how they behave are two different things. Consumer confidence fell in October to the lowest since March 2009, reflecting the big hit that the stock market took this summer and frustration with an economic recovery that doesn't really feel like one. The Conference Board, a private research group, said its index of consumer sentiment came in at 39.8, down about six points from September and seven shy of what economists were expecting. The reading is still well above where the index stood two and a half years ago, at 26.9. But it's not even within shouting distance of 90, what it takes to signal that the economy is on solid footing. Economists watch consumer confidence closely because consumer spending accounts for about 70 percent of U.S. economic activity. The index measures how shoppers feel about business conditions, the job market and the next six months. It came exactly two months before Christmas, with retailers preparing for the holiday shopping season, their busiest. Almost twice as many people now expect a pay cut over the next six months as expect a raise.

A woman and child leave a mall with purchases in Culver City, Calif., on Sept. 29. Consumers' confidence in the economy fell in October to the lowest it's been since 2009 when the U.S. was in the middle of a deep recession, according to a report released Tuesday.

Economists point out that consumer confidence is not as simple as a single number, though. The feelings people express about the economy do not always track how they actually spend money. In September, for example, despite feeling bad about the economy, people increased their spending on retail goods by the most since March. More people bought new cars, a purchase people typically make when they are confident in their finances. The percentage of Americans who plan to buy a major appliance in the next six months, such as a television or washing machine, rose to 46 percent, up from 41 percent. Exactly half plan to take a vacation in the next six months, up from 47 percent.

Diners Will Get More Details to Digest

BY TIFFANY HSU

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • Wendy's has a gluten-free menu. Dunkin' Donuts offers kosher meals at dozens of eateries. Chipotle Mexican Grill is letting customers know that it uses bacon in preparing its pinto beans.

Americans are craving more information about the food they are served, and fast-food companies, as well as casual restaurants, are increasingly obliging, many going well beyond legally mandated calorie counts. They are updating their signs and menus for diet-conscious customers, and they also are highlighting potential problems for those with food allergies or other dietary restrictions.

Although responding to demand, quick-service restaurants also see that providing the additional information can help them stand out in the highly competitive marketplace.

“If you can demonstrate to families that you can offer them a safe meal, you establish a tremendous sense of loyalty and create repeat customers,” said Chris Weiss, a vice president at the non-profit Food Allergy & Anaphylaxis Network. “As we look to the future, we’ll definitely see more restaurants doing this.”

Healthful eating is already at the forefront of the food industry. California and New York City require large chains to disclose calorie counts for each meal, and similar federal rules are coming next year. Adding another layer of information is a natural progression, industry experts said, especially for restaurants eager to woo the growing number of customers who aren't eating beef burgers or can't eat food cooked in peanut oil. Non-meat eaters rose to 8 percent of American adults in 2009 from 6.7 percent in 2006, according to the latest figures from nonprofit education organization the Vegetarian Resource Group. Moreover, food allergy cases increased 18 percent from 1997 to 2007, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Some diners are now carrying special cards listing which foods they must avoid. But following those instructions has been difficult at fast-food and fast-casual establishments, where the ingredients are often a mystery. French fries, tortilla chips and even veggie burgers are sometimes cooked in lard or the same vats of oil used to prepare meat items. Knives used on animal products are sometimes reused for onions, peppers and other produce. Beef flavoring or animal-derived gelatin shows up on vegetarian side dishes and salads. “If you're going to a fast-food place, it can definitely be hit or miss,” said vegetarian and quick-service fan David Chung, 27, of West Los Angeles. “There's something in the back of your mind that knows you're probably going to compromise a little bit.” It's rarely a case of intentional misinformation, said Jeanne Yacoubou, research director for the Vegetarian Resource Group. “Should we expect restaurant staff to bend over backwards?” she said. “That's expecting a bit too much. Diners have to go a little step further to find out for sure.” Many customers, shaken by recent disclosures about food preparation, are clamoring for more specific information on signs and menus. After non-pork eaters complained this summer, for instance, Chipotle started redesigning its menu boards to say that bacon is used in its pinto beans. Panda Express, accused in a lawsuit of using chicken powder in meat-free dishes, now has posters in all its stores explaining that none of its offerings are vegetarian. Analysts said consumers over the next year will probably see a spurt in diet-sensitive menus and signs as companies try to attract vegetarians and others with diet limitations — a population often perceived as having more discretionary income to spend.

Dining Tidbits

South for the Winter

River Boat Restaurant (171 State St., Hagerman) co-owner and chef Vicki Patterson makes it easy for people to dine on duck without harvesting the waterfowl themselves. “I like to change the menu up a lot, especially around the seasons when ingredients are fresh,” Patterson said. New items include duck scaloppini, breaded duck topped in capers and drizzled with a tomato-mushroom sauce; and duck Wellington, with a white wine cheese sauce. Patterson is proud of her sausage-, apple- and pecan-stuffed duck roll. “I topped it with a beautiful, red wine Burgundy pan sauce.”

Chilled? Take Comfort

On Nov. 1, the daily lunch and dinner specials will change at Stampede Burger (701 Main Ave., Gooding). Manager Torreska Kast said cooler temperatures have customers yearning for warm comfort foods. “It’s that time of the year.” Each day Stampede Burger will feature a different plate. Customer favorites include the meat loaf, to be served Wednesdays. It’s prepared with rolled oats and tomato sauce and finely chopped carrots, onions and bell peppers. “The yummy, old-fashioned pot roast with carrots and potatoes ... it’s a favorite, too,” Kast said. Catch that one on Thursdays.

Bring the Beef

Within a week, Buhl residents will have another dining option when El Cazador (113 Broadway Ave. S.) adds a line of grilled steaks to the menu. Owner Arcadio Navarro had thought about the addition for a while. “I just don’t think there is anywhere in Buhl to get a good steak,” Navarro said. “I hear all the time about people leaving town to order it, so why not give them what they want?” Navarro said T-bone and New York strip will definitely be on the menu, but he hadn’t yet narrowed down the last two steak choices. If customers have a suggestion, he’ll take it.

Discover a Chili

During the summer, Rowdy’s (227 Main St., Gooding) may be known for its bull-riding exhibitions and live music. But this fall, get to know this restaurant for something different: its lineup of homemade soups, chili and Basque bread, just now popping up on the menu. Owner Stacey Parks said one of the standout recipes is the Basque garbanzo soup, a traditional dish with pepperoni, cabbage and tomato. “Everything is homemade, from scratch and fresh, including the bread,” Parks said. “Another dish that makes a great lunch is the chili, everyone loves the chili.”

“As anyone who starts down the rabbit hole of homebrewing learns, the hobby can get a bit complex. “Maybe you need a better system for tracking recipes. Perhaps you’re trying tweaks to narrow down that perfect beer. Or, you could just be an extract brewer who found the perfect recipe — but it’s all-grain! “This is where brewing software comes in.”

A New Breakfast Option

A Twin Falls man is preparing to open a bake shop in downtown. His specialty: artisan breads and muffins.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

Aaron Adams is ardent about baked goods — breads, cookies, muffins. “It’s my passion,” the Twin Falls man said. “I love to bake. It makes me happy.” Come early to mid-November, he’ll open his own bake shop in downtown Twin Falls. High Country Bakehouse — or simply Bakehouse — will open in the old Crowley’s Soda Fountain location at 144 Main Ave. S. It’s the perfect setting for his business endeavor, Adams said: The glass front will show off some of his specialties. Once inside, customers will encounter the aroma of the freshly baked breads and muffins. Opening his own bake shop is a dream come true for Adams, a psychology graduate. “I never went to culinary school,” he said, “but I’ve been baking my whole life.”

Tricks and (Safe) Treats

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

Brendan Eccles is severely allergic to peanuts, milk and eggs, but his parents aren’t going to let that stop the Twin Falls 6-year-old from enjoying Halloween. Brendan’s parents, Derek and Tami Eccles, take him door to door on Halloween, even though they know he can’t eat much of the candy he gets. Why keep an allergic child home on Monday night?

Tips for Parents

- Buy allergen-free candy ahead of time, then trade out the harmful stuff that shows up in the trick-or-treat bag. Brendan can eat Dum Dums, Smarties, Twizzlers and Skittles, but has to pass on almost everything else. “We just stock up on those candies and we just trade them out,” Derek said. Another option: Replace the no-go candy for coins.
- Bring the allergen-free candy with you while trick-or-treating, Tami said. That way, your kid can enjoy snacking while going house to house.
- Take wet wipes with you. That way, if any wrapping on dangerous candies has been compromised, your child won’t accidentally ingest allergens, Tami said.
- If you’re heading to a Halloween party, talk to the hosts. Most parents Tami talks to can accommodate her son’s allergies. If they can’t, “I find out what they’re serving and I try to make something as similar as possible so he doesn’t feel left out with that,” she said.
- Always read labels. According to the Food Allergy and Anaphylaxis Network, bite-size Halloween candies often have different ingredients than their full-size counterparts.

Brendan Eccles, 6, has severe allergies but can eat Dum Dums without an allergic reaction.

Allergic to just about everything? Your child doesn’t have to sit home on Halloween.

With a little planning ahead, even kids with extreme food allergies and sensitivities can enjoy trick-or-treating. Common allergens found in candy include peanuts, tree nuts, dairy, soy, eggs, chocolate, wheat and gluten.

Tips for Hosts

- If you’re hosting a get-together, ask parents if there are any food sensitivities or allergies in the group. If you make treats, be mindful of cross-contamination. Slight traces of egg, dairy or other allergens can cause a reaction in extremely sensitive children.
- Pay special attention to younger kids. Older children can typically steer away from allergens, said Dr. Gregory Wickern of Asthma and Allergy of Idaho, but younger children aren’t always aware of everything they need to avoid.
- When in doubt, don’t serve it. If a candy doesn’t have an ingredient list, assume it’s not safe, Wickern said.
- For trick-or-treaters, consider handing out candies that are allergen-friendly, like Smarties and suckers. (The tricky part: Candies that are safe for children with peanut allergies aren’t always safe for those allergic to dairy or wheat, and vice versa. Hey, can’t win ‘em all.)
- Want to make your house’s Halloween offerings friendly for all kids? Consider handing out toys or coins instead of candy.

Everyone Has Time to Bake a Batch of Quick Bread

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

The appeal of quick breads isn't merely the ease. Though you have to love any baked good that is no more complicated than mixing a bunch of things together, then baking. But it also is the adaptability and flexibility of these recipes that have earned them such a coveted place in the home kitchen. They can be flavored with nearly any combination of ingredients, from sweet all the way to savory and spicy. They also can be baked in numerous styles — loaves large or small, as muffins, even simply as muffin tops (if you have the right pan). To help get you baking this fall, we created two basic quick bread base recipes, one savory and one sweet. Each recipe includes suggested flavorings, easy ways to take a basic bread and make it so much more. And of course, these recipes are so versatile, feel free to play.

Savory Quick Bread

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes (15 minutes active). Makes 1 loaf or 12 muffins.

2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 cup cornmeal

2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons melted butter
2 eggs
1 cup cooked, mashed potato (unseasoned)
Mix-ins (see below)

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat a loaf or muffin pan with cooking spray. In a large bowl, whisk together the flour, cornmeal, baking powder, salt and sugar. In another bowl, mix together the sour cream, butter, eggs, mashed potato and the mix-ins of your choice. Add the potato-sour cream mixture to the flour mixture and mix just until combined. For a loaf, spread the batter (it will be thick) into the prepared pan. Cook until a wooden skewer inserted at the center comes out clean, about 50 to 60 minutes. For muffins, spoon the batter into the prepared tins and bake for 18 to 20 minutes. Allow to cool for 10 minutes in the pan, then turn out onto a cooling rack. Allow the loaf to cool fully before cutting. Flavors: • Southwestern: 1/2 cup diced cooked bacon, 1/4 cup cooked diced green pepper, 1/2 cup cooked diced onion, 1 tablespoon diced jalapeno. • Olive-herb: 3/4 cup chopped olives, 1/2 cup grated Parmesan, 2 tablespoons chopped capers, 1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme, 1 tablespoon chopped fresh rosemary. • Blue cheese walnut: 1/4 cup diced roasted red pepper, 1/2 cup toasted chopped walnuts, 1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese, 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper.

Sweet Quick Bread

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes (15 minutes active). Makes 1 loaf or 12 muffins.

1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 1/4 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 cup applesauce (or see cinnamon-pumpkin note in mix-ins below)
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
Mix-ins (see below)

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat a loaf or muffin pan with cooking spray. In a large bowl, whisk together the oil, sugar, eggs, applesauce, water and vanilla. In another bowl, whisk together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and the mix-ins of your choice. Gently stir the flour mixture into the applesauce mixture just until combined. For a loaf, spread the batter into the prepared pan. Cook until a wooden skewer inserted at the center comes out clean, about 50 to 60 minutes. For muffins, spoon the batter into the prepared tins and bake for 18 to 20 minutes. Allow to cool for 10 minutes in the pan, then turn out onto a cooling rack. Allow the loaf to cool fully before cutting. Flavors: • Cinnamon-pumpkin: Substitute pumpkin puree for the applesauce. Add 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/2 cup crushed toffee chips and 1/2 cup chopped toasted pecans. • Lemon-blueberry: zest and juice of 2 lemons and 1 cup frozen wild blueberries. • Chocolate cherry orange: zest of 2 oranges, 1/2 cup mini chocolate chips, 3/4 cup dried cherries.

Be Careful Freeing Pomegranate Seeds

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: I received four pomegranates as a gift. How can I tell if they're ripe — and what can I do with them?

Answer: If they were bought in a store, they should be ripe already. If the sides are sunken, the pomegranate is getting overripe and should be used soon. Pomegranate seeds look like bright, red jewels, with a crispy texture and tart juice. You can eat them whole, sprinkling them on a salad, for instance. However, pomegranates will stain, so there is a trick to getting the seeds: Make a few cuts in the leathery skin, trying not to pierce the seeds. Fill a sink or a large bowl with cold water. Holding the fruit under water, pull it apart in chunks. Use your fingers to free the seeds. The seeds will sink and the pith will float. Skim it off and discard it, then use a strainer or slotted spoon to get the seeds.

Adams has worked in several kitchens as a cook and baker. Most recently he was a buyer for Positive Action, a Twin Falls publishing company, before deciding to open a bakery.

The 42-year-old is a simple man. So will be his business. The shop will open for breakfast and lunch Monday through Friday. Breakfast will be muffins and coffee; lunch, soup and sandwiches.

"I don't plan to have a set menu," Adams said Friday inside the 2,000-square-foot shop, which he still was preparing. An oven sat unhooked, waiting to be installed.

Soup and sandwich offerings will change daily, he said, though he'll probably always have roast beef, turkey and plenty of cheeses for sandwiches. And because the stove and oven are just behind the counter, in open view to the public, customers can watch him prepare their meals.

"I like that. I call it in-your-face fresh," he said, noting that he has a difficult time calling something homemade if it comes from a package.

He wants to support Idaho farmers by securing local product. "If someone says that's a good tomato, where'd you get that, I'll say I got it from this farmer down the road."

His offering of organic coffee — he won't be serving designer blends — comes from Full Circle Exchange out of Eagle.

In the flower beds outside his shop, Adams wants to plant herbs for the restaurant's kitchen.

To make it easy for customers, they can call ahead or use social media to order. Eventually, he'd like to offer delivery.

"People can tweet me their order," he said, noting that he plans to have WiFi for customers, a comfy sofa and about 12 tables. And if you like model trains, you can visit Simon Rodriguez's Aaron Adams' honey wheat bread. His new bakery will use his breads to make sandwiches as well as selling them as loaves.

Twin Falls Train Shop & Hobbies, already operating on the shop's mezzanine.

But it's selling baked goods that Adams is most excited about: rustic artisan breads and specialty muffins. For example, his Italian Pugliese bread, which has a hard crust but is soft on the inside, and his pumpkin muffins.

Two employees will help Adams run the bake shop. One of them, Sarah Pollett, will decorate the cookies and other goodies.

"I'm the artist," Pollett said.

Most of Adams' recipes are his own creations or have been passed down from family, he said. He wouldn't share any of his secrets Friday, opting instead to demonstrate to the Times-News a humorous twist to his passion: no-bake cookies.

"I thought that would be fun," he said, adding that on Friday he was still waiting for his oven to be hooked up. But no-bake cookies are something easy that people can do for the holidays, he said. You can decorate them for Halloween, for instance, by covering them with orange frosting and candy.

Adams said he plans to open by mid-November — and to stay open for a long time to come. Instead of a dour economy dragging him down, he said, it lifted him up to do something positive.

"You have to be passionate about what you do. If you don't love what you're doing, it's time to shut the door."

No-Bake Cookies

- 2 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips
- 1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 cups oatmeal

This is an easy recipe for the busy holiday season. The slight challenge to this recipe is not scorching the chocolate when melting it. Use either a microwave or double boiler.

If using the microwave, heat chocolate for 20-second intervals, stirring well between each interval. When the chocolate just starts to melt, add the peanut butter. You are better off letting the mixture melt as much as possible while stirring rather than using the microwave too much. The only trick to using a double boiler is making sure the water is just barely bubbling. When the mixture is smooth, let cool for 3 minutes and then add the butter. Mix well and add the oatmeal. Spoon out on a cookie sheet and keep the kids away while you add your favorite decorations for the holiday. Cool 1-2 hours in the refrigerator. Recipe courtesy of Aaron Adams.

Pumpkin Soup

- 1 30-ounce can pumpkin
- 32 ounces broth (chicken or veggie)

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

A few of Aaron Adams' wares: blueberry muffins, chocolate chip cookies, right, and peanut butter cookies.

- 1 onion, diced
- Olive oil
- 3 mushrooms, finely minced (small portobello or shiitake, for example)
- 4 cloves garlic, diced
- 1/2 to 1 cup sherry or marsala wine
- 1 green bell pepper, minced
- 1 red bell pepper, minced
- Dash or more of dried cayenne or red pepper
- Salt and black pepper to taste

In a soup kettle, combine pumpkin and broth and let simmer while preparing veggies.

Saute onion in olive oil over medium heat until it starts to brown. Add mushrooms and about 1/4 teaspoon salt. When the mushrooms begin to lose some of their liquid, add garlic. Once the aroma of the garlic is blooming (about 2-3 minutes), add the wine and turn the heat up to medium-high. Let the wine infuse into the vegetable mixture for about 5 minutes. You may need to add a bit more wine if the mixture dries out too much. Add the bell peppers and continue to saute for 1-2 minutes.

Add vegetable mix to soup. Add cayenne and black pepper to taste. Simmer 30-45 minutes. The longer you simmer the soup after adding the cayenne, the spicier it will become.

Variations: No sherry? Just use any leftover wine. Try adding a few sweet Italian peppers. Minced carrots add color and sweetness. Garnish with fresh parsley, sour cream or Greek yogurt. This soup is also easy in a crockpot; let simmer 5-6 hours on low. For that extra Bakehouse flavor, use real pumpkin and freshly made broth; remove pumpkin seeds and skin, and chop into small cubes. Depending on the soup consistency you like, you may want to puree the pumpkin. Recipe courtesy of Aaron Adams.

The McRib makes a McComeback

BY CHRISTINA REXRODE

Associated Press

NEW YORK • The McRib, the elusive sandwich that has inspired a cult-like following, is back.

McDonald's Corp. announced this week that the boneless barbecue pork sandwich, usually available in only a few stores at a time, will be sold at all U.S. locations through Nov. 14.

Most of the time, it's up to local franchises to determine when and if they want to sell the McRib — except in Germany, the only place where it's available perennially. But McDonald's said the response was so great last November when it made the McRib available nationally for about three weeks that it decided to bring it back this year. The company, which previously hadn't sold the McRib nationally since 1994, declined to give specific sales numbers.

The sandwich, which is dressed with onions, pickle slices and barbecue sauce, was introduced nationally in 1982. With 500 calories and 26 grams of fat, it's slightly trimmer than the Big Mac, which has 540 calories and 29 grams of fat. And just like the Big Mac, the McRib has become a popular McDonald's offering.

There are Facebook groups like "Bring Back the McRib!!!" There are Twitter tags, where posts range from "Lucky me, the McRib is back" to "If you eat McRib, you need to re-evaluate what it is you actually want in life." Last year, the guy who won McDonald's $1 million Monopoly grand prize was ordering — you guessed it — a McRib. Earlier this month, former Playmate Jenny McCarthy contacted the McRib Locator website for help finding a McRib in southern California: She got one in Fountain Valley.

The website's creator, Alan Klein, said he suspected something was up when traffic exploded from about 150 hits a day to about 4,000 in the past week or so, as more fans reported sightings. People are sending him photos of their McRib variations: the McRib with lettuce and tomato, the McRib with bacon, three McRib, stacked on top of each other.

If the McRib is so popular, why not just offer it all the time? McDonald's likes to stoke the enthusiasm with an aura of transcendence.

"Bringing it back every so often adds to the excitement," said Marta Fearon, McDonald's U.S. marketing director, who added that she's not sure if the McRib will reappear in stores every fall.

Simply the Best Apple Pie You Will Try This Season

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

There are plenty of fancy variations of apple pie, but sometimes you just need an all-American classic. And so we created this simple, and simply delicious recipe.

The method is basic, but the results are anything but. The key is to slightly cook the apples before spooning them into the unbaked crust. This prevents them from deflating during cooking, which inevitably leaves you with a domed (and disappointingly empty) shell of a top crust.

We also loved the look of the traditional lattice top. It's easier than it looks. But if you're not up for that, simply roll out the top crust and set it whole over the pie. It still will be beautiful and just as delicious.

Classic Lattice Apple Pie
Start to finish: 1 hour 45 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 8.

For the crust:
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, cold, cut in chunks
1/3 cup water
1 egg, separated
2 tablespoons rolled oats
1 tablespoon milk

For the apples:
8 baking apples (such as Granny Smith or Golden Delicious), peeled, cored and sliced (about 8 cups)
3/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons cornstarch

To make the crust, in the bowl of a food processor, pulse together the flour, salt and 1 tablespoon of the sugar. Add the butter and pulse until the mixture forms chunks the size of peas. Pulse in the water 1 tablespoon at a time just until the mixture forms a dough. Wrap in plastic and refrigerate for 30 minutes. Reserve the eggs, oats and milk for later.

Meanwhile, make the filling. In a large deep skillet, combine the apples with the sugar, vinegar, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring and turning gently until the apples are just tender, about 5 minutes. Stir together the water and cornstarch, then add to the apples. Continue to cook until the juices thicken, about 1 minute. Set aside to cool.

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Place a pizza stone in the oven, if available.

Divide the dough into 2 pieces, one slightly larger than the other. On a floured surface, roll the larger piece out to a 12-inch circle. Fold the dough in half to make it easier to move, then transfer it to a 9-inch pie plate, unfolding it and allowing it to settle into the bottom. The crust should overhang the edge slightly.

In a small bowl, beat the egg white until slightly frothy. Brush it over the surface of the crust. Sprinkle the oats over the bottom of the crust, then spoon the apple filling into the crust.

On a floured surface, roll the smaller piece of dough to a 10-inch square. Using a pizza cutter or a paring knife, cut the dough into 1-inch strips. Weave the strips in a lattice across the top of the apple filling. Alternatively, roll the dough into a 10-inch circle and simply transfer to the top of the pie for a full crust. Fold the overhang of the crust under the bottom crust, gently tucking them into the pie dish, then crimp the edge. Beat the egg yolk in a small bowl with the milk and brush over the surface of the pie crust. Sprinkle with the remaining tablespoon of sugar.

Bake on the pizza stone or on a baking sheet set on the rack in the lowest position of the oven until the crust is golden brown, about 45 minutes. Cool before cutting.

Hers & His Cocktails

BY LAUREN VIERA
Chicago Tribune

We're still trying to decide if we're offended by the title of Michelin 3-star chef Daniel Boulud's new book, "Cocktails & Amuse-Bouches For Her & For Him" (Assouline). After all, we've long believed that booze, if nothing else, is gender-neutral, and Boulud's numerous menus, on which many of these drinks have starred, don't specify masculine from feminine.

Most of the drinks in this new diptych of a recipe book (published in two volumes) would be just as welcome served at a bridal luncheon as an upscale bachelor pad. They're all decadent.

Along with the 40 total cocktails (20 in each volume) are half that many amuse-bouches, many of which might strike drinkers as more trouble than they're worth. Among the more complicated: panisse with piquillo ketchup, sweetbreads a la diable, black olive grissini.

FAMILY DISH: COLD NOODLE SALAD STANDS THE TEST

BY DOMENICA MARCHETTI
Special to The Washington Post

I like to know where my recipes come from and when they have entered my life. According to a note scrawled on the back of a spattered index card, my recipe for cold sesame noodle came from two sources: the February 1993 issue of Gourmet and Mollie Katzen's book "The Enchanted Broccoli Forest" (Ten Speed Press, 1995), which I've owned forever.

In February 1993, I had been married all of three months. Perhaps my new husband and I had enjoyed a bowl of sesame noodles on our honeymoon in Hawaii — I have no recollection. Or maybe the recipe caught my eye as I flipped through the issue of Gourmet, which, hoarder that I am, probably still resides in a box somewhere in my basement or a pile up in my guest room.

At some point, I guess, I must have compared the Gourmet recipe to the version in "The Enchanted Broccoli Forest" and come up with my own hybrid. I have tweaked it over time so that now, nearly 18 years later, it is just about where I want it to be. I say "just about" because, like great potato salad, cold sesame noodle is one of those recipes that can always be improved and, in my opinion, will almost always fall short of the "ideal" version.

Still, the one I'm sharing here is very, very good. It combines tahini (sesame paste) and peanut butter for a pronounced nutty flavor. It's stood the test of time in our house.

Like any good cold sesame noodle recipe, this one benefits from time spent in the fridge after assembly, so that the flavors have a chance to mingle; and then time out of the fridge (20 to 30 minutes) before serving, so that it is not too cold to enjoy those flavors.

Cold Sesame Noodles With Shredded Chicken

6 servings.

- 1/2 cup tahini (sesame paste)
- 1/4 cup regular or low-sodium creamy peanut butter

- 3 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
- 3 tablespoons rice vinegar or apple cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon minced or finely grated fresh ginger root
- 2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
- 1/4 teaspoon sambal oelek (chili paste)
- 1/2 to 3/4 cup water
- Salt (for the cooking water)
- 1 pound dried spaghetti or spaghetti
- 1 large cucumber, peeled, cut in half, seeded and cut into half-moon slices
- 1 cup thinly sliced scallions (white and light-green parts)
- 1 large carrot, trimmed, peeled and shredded
- 8 ounces cooked skinless chicken breast, shredded

Combine the tahini, peanut butter, soy sauce, vinegar, sugar, garlic, ginger, sesame oil and sambal oelek in the bowl of a food processor. Process to form a thick paste. With the motor running, slowly add the water (as needed) through the feed tube and process to form a thick dressing. Transfer to a bowl or container with a pour spout, and cover. Bring a large pot of salted water to a rolling boil over high heat. Add the noodles and cook according to the "al dente" package directions. Drain and rinse with cold water, then transfer the drained noodles to a large bowl and pour about one-third of the dressing over them; toss to coat thoroughly. Add the cucumber, scallions, carrot and cooked chicken, then pour another one-third of the dressing on top. Toss gently but thoroughly until everything is well coated. Add the remaining dressing if needed; the noodles and other ingredients should be well coated, but not drowning, in the dressing. Cover and refrigerate for at least 2 hours, until the noodles are thoroughly chilled. Let sit at room temperature for about 10 minutes before serving.

Roasted Potatoes Don't Have To Be Dull

RICKY CARIOTTI • WASHINGTON POST

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

I think potatoes get a bum rap as a food to avoid. Often it's the preparation — heavy on cream or butter — that's at fault. I like to roast them, but a simple approach doesn't have to be dull.

Here, potatoes' natural, subtle sweetness is complemented by sweet onion and mild curry powder. A final shower of chopped cilantro provides a fresh and flavorful balance.

Don't obsess about the size of the potato chunks; anything 3/4 inch to 1 1/2 inch will work fine. The main thing is to get the chunks all about the same size so they cook evenly.

Pair these potatoes with a lemon-herb-rubbed roast chicken and steamed spinach.

Roasted Curried Potatoes With Sweet Onion

6 to 8 servings.

- 2 3/4 pounds all-purpose potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch chunks (2 pounds after peeling)
- 1 large sweet onion, such as Mayan, Maui or Vidalia, cut into 1-inch chunks
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon mild curry powder, or to taste
- Salt
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh cilantro leaves

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Combine the potatoes, onion and oil in a large roasting pan; toss to coat evenly. Sprinkle the curry powder and salt to taste over the potatoes and onions, and toss again. Roast for 20 minutes, then turn/toss the mixture so the potatoes will be nicely browned all over; roast for 10 to 20 minutes, until the potatoes and onion are tender (a total of 30 to 40 minutes). Scatter the cilantro evenly over the potatoes; toss to

Let Miso Flavor Your Eggplant

WASHINGTON POST

In Ferran Adria's new family meal cookbook, this dish is part of a staff meal of sausages with tomato sauce and a Catalan version of creme brulee. The miso dressing also goes well with other roasted vegetables, such as zucchini or potatoes.

Adapted from "The Family Meal: Home Cooking With Ferran Adria"

Roasted Eggplant With Miso Dressing

2 to 4 servings.

- 2 small-to-medium whole eggplants (1 1/2 pounds total)
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 teaspoons dashi powder
- 1/2 teaspoon red miso paste
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon toasted sesame oil
- 2 tablespoons sunflower oil
- 2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds (see note)

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Place the whole eggplants on the baking sheet. Roast for 45 minutes, turning them over halfway through. Cool on the baking sheet. Meanwhile, combine the water, dashi powder, miso paste, soy sauce, toasted sesame oil and sunflower oil in a tall jar or pitcher. Use an immersion (stick) blender to puree until emulsified and thickened. (Alternatively, combine the ingredients in a jar with a tight-fitting lid. Seal and shake until emulsified.) Peel the roasted eggplants and discard the skin. Cut the flesh into long, 1/2-inch-wide strips, then arrange the strips in a serving dish. If necessary, use the immersion blender to re-emulsify the dressing. Spoon the dressing evenly over the eggplant. Sprinkle with the toasted sesame seeds. Note: Toasted sesame seeds are available at Asian food markets, or you can toast the raw seeds in a small, dry skillet over low heat for 5 minutes. Per serving (based on 4): 140 calories, 3 g protein, 11 g carbohydrates, 11 g fat, 2 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 640 mg sodium, 6 g dietary fiber, 4 g sugar.

Chill Dough So Cookies Won't Spread

BY SUSAN M. SELASKY
Detroit Free Press

Question: I made a batch of cookies, and they spread too much. What makes this happen?

Answer: There are several reasons. One reason is not resting and chilling the cookie dough after mixing. Doing so, according to "Chewy Goopy Crispy Crunchy Melt-In-Your-Mouth Cookies" by Alice Medrich (Artisan, $25.95), gives the gluten a chance to relax and allows moisture in the dough to be absorbed by the dry ingredients. It's best to chill the dough for about an hour before baking.

Properly mixing ingredients also is important for texture and so cookies hold their shape.

If the recipe calls for creaming the butter (or other fat) and sugar together, be sure not to overdo it or use ingredients that are too warm. Creaming butter and sugar aerates the mixture and increases volume.

To properly cream butter and sugar, the butter needs to be at room temperature, about 70 degrees. (Eggs should be, too.) Butter is the right temperature when you can easily make an indentation in it. Microwaving is not a good practice for softening butter because it can melt some of it.

Beat the butter for about 1 minute on low to medium speed and then gradually add the sugar, increasing the speed to medium. Set a timer for 3 minutes. The mixture should become a pale yellow or cream color. After some practice, you will be able judge without using a timer.

Cookies also spread if the dough sits out and becomes too warm or the baking sheets are not cooled between batches.

Wayne Alvin Easterday

Nov. 25, 1925-Oct. 23, 2011

"Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord Forever" (Psalms 23:6).

On Sunday, Oct. 23, in the year of our Lord, two thousand and eleven, Wayne Alvin Easterday went home to be with his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Born in Eustis, Neb., on Nov. 25, 1925, to Harmon and Vera Easterday, Wayne was the second child of four siblings. At the age of 14, Wayne and his family left Eustis, Neb., and moved to their new family farm southeast of Castleford, Idaho. Upon leaving Castleford High School, Wayne enlisted in the U.S. Army, where he served with the 1st Cavalry in the South Pacific during World War II from 1945 until 1946.

In September of 1946 after directly arriving home in Idaho from the war, Wayne met the love of his life, Irene Tipton, while she was waitressing at the Peter Pan Cafe in Twin Falls, Idaho. Shortly afterward on Jan. 11, 1947, Wayne and Irene were joined in marriage, where they faithfully remained for nearly 65 years. Their marriage produced six sons, Gerry, Rick, Lynn, Dave, Denny and Doug.

His parents; a brother and sister; and two sons Gerry and Lynn, preceded him in death. Wayne is survived by his wife, Irene; sister, Clarice (Chick Webb) of Albuquerque, N.M.; sons, Rick (Dena) of Castleford, Dave (Laurie) of Castleford, Denny (Barbara) of Buhl and Doug (Tracie) of Lovelock, Nev.; 16 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and four step great-grandchildren.

Wayne was loved by all and will be missed deeply. Eventually we will be reunited in the loving graces of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To all the guys at the watering hole, I will see you later.

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28, at the West End Cemetery in Buhl. Military rites will be provided by the Idaho Honor Guard and the Magic Valley Area Veterans. The family suggests memorials be given to the Castleford Baptist Church or the Castleford QRU.

Services are under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home. Family and friends are encouraged to share their memories of Wayne at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

UMS – It just got a lot warmer for lucky Idahoans.

That’s because U.S. based Heat Surge has just announced that they are releasing brand new high performance zone heaters that drastically slash heat bills to residents of the state of Idaho.

Company spokesman, David Brokaw, says, “We only have 6,049 new heaters to hand over right now, so residents of the state of Idaho who find their county listed in today’s paper need to call the Idaho Distribution Hotline immediately to get theirs.”

This is all happening to announce the Heat Surge high performance zone heater with new Complete-Heat™ technology that can make heat bills so cheap you may never have to pay high heat bills again.

“Most people don’t even realize that their furnace continuously runs and runs to heat areas of their home that they’re not even using, costing them hundreds if not thousands of dollars every year. But the Heat Surge high performance zone heater heats both you and the air around you in just minutes to save you money on heat bills,” said Brokaw.

Complete-Heat is a revolutionary breakthrough in home heat technology that incredibly uses only nine cents an hour of electricity to produce a warm, healthy heat that practically eliminates high heat bills.

Everyone is calling to get one because they cost just pennies an hour to operate and easily go from room-to-room so you can turn down your thermostat and never be cold again. They even come fully assembled so all you do is plug them in.

Idahoans are being urged to immediately call the Toll Free distribution hotlines at 1-888-414-2415 because only the first 6,049 readers who beat the 48-hour deadline are getting the high performance heaters delivered directly to their door.

And here’s the best part. Residents of the counties listed in today’s paper are actually getting their Heat Surge high performance heater with new Complete-Heat technology encased in a real wood fireplace mantle that is built to last forever. The mantles are being hand-made right here in the U.S.A. where they are beautifully hand-rubbed, stained and varnished.

That’s why for just three hundred ninety-eight dollars it’s a real steal because these high performance zone heaters have sold for as much as six hundred forty dollars delivered. “It just makes good sense to get one now because with all of the money you save on your heat bills, these high performance zone heaters actually pay for themselves in just a matter of weeks. After that, they just keep on putting cash in your pocket month after month,” Brokaw said.

“We’re trying to make sure no one gets left out, but we only have 6,049 high performance heaters to hand over and when they’re gone, they’re gone so residents of the counties listed in today’s paper need to call right now. Those who do will be the really smart ones because we’re letting residents have two heaters per household until we run out just as long as they call before the deadline ends,” confirms Brokaw.

“We’re bracing ourselves for all the calls because with the amount of money these high performance zone heaters save people on heat bills everyone wants one,” said Brokaw.

“So if the lines are busy keep trying. We promise to answer every call. Then we’ll have a delivery truck out to you in no time at all so you can start saving money immediately,” Brokaw said.

“That way you’ll never have to be cold and miserable again,” he said. ■

■ MAKES HEAT BILLS CHEAP: The new Heat Surge high performance zone heater makes heat bills so cheap you may never have to pay high heat bills again. That’s because it only uses 9¢ an hour of electricity on the standard setting to blast out an instant heat wave in any room.

■ SAFE: The Fireless Flame looks so real it fools everyone but there is no real fire. So you don’t have to worry because the flame window is safe to the touch. It’s where the kids will play and the cat and dog will sleep.

■ DELIVERED FULLY ASSEMBLED: Every Heat Surge Roll-n-Glow portable heater comes fully assembled by American workers and is delivered right to your door. All you do is roll it out of the box, plug it in and relax in front of the Fireless Flame.

■ EASILY ROLLS ANYWHERE: This is the new Roll-n-Glow high performance zone heater that easily rolls from room-to-room. Everyone loves them because they save you money and keep you warm without any flames, fumes, ashes or mess.

Occupy the BCS! Could This be the Season?

Shenanigans are nothing new with the Bowl Championships Series. It's the reason the cartel was created in the first place, to make sure the stars align in the postseason exactly the way the major conference commissioners and their pals at the big bowl committees and TV networks desire. Or at the very least, as analyst Bill James put it a short while ago, "to create some gobbledygook math to endorse" their version of that universe. Either way, there's more than the usual reasons for optimism this could be the season that brings the BCS house of cards crashing down.

It's only week 2 of the BCS poll, but there are already signs the computers are overheating. There's no arguing with the teams on the top two lines, No. 1 LSU and No. 2 Alabama. All three human polls — the USA Today coaches and Harris Interactive, which each account for one-third of the BCS formula, as well as The Associated Press poll — have them ordered the same way. Then the fun begins.

The computers, the final third of the BCS formula, aren't impressed by the Pac-12 or Big Ten so far, even though the humans are. Both the Harris and AP polls have Stanford at No. 3, while the coaches have the Cardinal at No. 4. But Stanford checks in at No. 6 in this week's BCS rankings because the computers have the Cardinal at No. 9, making some people wonder whether the machines, too, have a tough time staying up late to catch games on the West Coast. The real answer is simpler, and for those who want a playoff ASAP, hopeful.

There are eight undefeated teams in the Top 25 at the moment, 10 more with just one loss, and just eight weeks' worth of data for the computers to sort them out. Strength of schedule, to cite just one component, isn't nearly as a reliable an indicator as it will be later in the year. And, because of a ruckus at the end of the 2001 season that left a deserving Oregon team out of the national championship game, the BCS told computer operators the next year to drop

College Athletes Press NCAA Reform

More than 300 major college football and men's basketball players are telling the NCAA and college presidents they want a cut of ever-increasing TV sports revenue to fatten scholarships and cover all the costs of getting a degree, with athletes picking up still more grant money when they graduate.

The players from Arizona, Georgia Tech, Kentucky, Purdue and UCLA have signed a petition asking the NCAA to "realize its mission to educate and protect us with integrity." The National College Players Association, an athletes' advocacy group, provided The Associated Press with copies of the document for release Monday. Players started sending the petition to the NCAA last week.

The document urges the NCAA and college presidents to set aside an unspecified amount of money from what it estimates is $775 million in recently acquired TV revenues in an "educational lock box" for football and men's basketball players. Players could tap those funds to help cover educational costs if they exhaust their athletic eligibility before they graduate. And they could receive what's left of the money allocated to them with no strings attached upon graduating — a step that would undoubtedly be seen by some as professionalizing college sports.

The issue of whether to pay college athletes has been getting increased attention at a time when athletic programs from Miami to Ohio State have endured a series of scandals involving impermissible benefits to players. At the same time, athletic conferences have made lucrative, new television deals.

The NCAA opposes paying athletes, but players whose talents enable colleges and coaches to reap millions have been largely silent in the debate until now.

"I really want to voice my opinions," said Georgia Tech

Wolverines running back Greg Lindbloom and coach Kevin Stilling have been key in the resurgence of the Wood River football program. Wood River opens the Class 4A playoffs Friday with a game at Blackfoot.

KAREN BOSSICK • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Once Choppy, Wood River's Future is Calm and Bright

The last half-century hasn't been kind to Wood River High School prep football teams.

Only once from 1969-2010 had the Wood River football team won as many as four games in a row. Prior to 2011, the last time the Wolverines had a winning season was back-to-back 5-4 finishes in 1999-2000.

It's a place where coaches, even a state championship coach like Mike Glenn, couldn't post as many tallies in the win column as would suit most programs. Flirting with .500, while unacceptable at some schools, was success enough for the two-time title winner at Eagle, considering how woebegone the program was when he got there.

But this season, the third for current head coach Kevin Stilling, just feels different. Wood River sits at 6-3 entering this week's Great Eight playoff game against top-ranked Blackfoot, but it doesn't have the same sense of gratefulness to advance out of the Great Basin Conference.

Coaches from around the conference have expressed praise, privately and publicly, for the job Stilling's

St. Louis manager Tony La Russa speaks at a news conference Tuesday. The conversation was dominated by La Russa's miscommunication with his bullpen via the dugout phone.

Hold The Phone? Cards Wish They Didn't Have To

ST. LOUIS • Bobby Valentine thought about the bizarre events he had seen in Game 5 of the World Series, when 19th-century technology fouled up Tony La Russa and the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It's kind of stupid, isn't it?" said Valentine, who's managed more than 2,000 major league ballgames.

In the age of email, texting, iChat and Skype, baseball remains tied to the traditions established in the Civil War era of flannel uniforms. La Russa conveyed his decisions to the bullpen with a device born the same year as the National League: the telephone.

And when the instructions didn't get through to bullpen coach Derek Lilliquist — twice! — baseball lore was made with the Cardinals' 4-2 loss to the Texas Rangers on Monday night, a game that will be forever known as the "Phone Foulup."

Now St. Louis is trailing 3-2 in the Series and must win two in a row for the title.

"It's amazing," said baseball historian Keith Olbermann, a commentator on Current TV. "With all this technology

RUNNING GAMES BACK ON TRACK IN NFL

NEW YORK • Run, baby, run.

All those runners who seemed to be ignored while passing numbers flew off the charts earlier this season are resurfacing — in a big way. Joining the always reliable Adrian Peterson and the resurgent Arian Foster this weekend were the likes of DeMarco Murray, Matt Forte, and Shonn Greene. With injuries hitting a bunch of starters, some new names could join them as the ground game has even more impact in the NFL.

The emergence of Murray was the most notable and spectacular development. His first touch was for a 91-yard touchdown, and he built on it through the Cowboys' rout of the Rams, finishing with a team record 253 yards rushing. Yes, Murray outdid even the best production for one game by Emmitt Smith and Tony Dorsett.

"I never thought in a million years that I'd ever have a day like this," Murray said. "This is what I've been working hard for since my Pop Warner days."

Book ‘3 and Out’ Takes Look at Rich Rodriguez Era

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. • John Bacon didn’t make any new friends and might’ve lost some old ones with his book, “Three and Out,” that looks at the Rich Rodriguez era in Michigan football.

“The main figures have made their displeasure with the book and author clear,” Bacon said.

In the book, which came out Tuesday, he writes that former coach Lloyd Carr was the initial person connected to Michigan to call Rich Rodriguez in December 2007, and that Carr was the first to encourage then-athletic director Bill Martin to consider hiring Rodriguez from West Virginia.

Bacon claims Carr later told his players he would sign the forms allowing them to transfer in what they interpreted as “a vote of no confidence” in Rodriguez.

Carr did not respond to Bacon’s interview requests for the book. Messages were left by The Associated Press with Carr and Rodriguez. Through a CBS Sports Network spokesman, Rodriguez declined to comment about the book. Martin and current athletic director Dave Brandon also declined comment.

Bacon’s behind-the-scenes access started during the 2008 season, Rodriguez’s first of three, with the intent of writing a few magazine pieces. Those articles were never written, but three years of access and reporting gave Bacon enough material to write a book he’s proud of even if he has burned bridges in Ann Arbor and within the athletic department.

He had carved out a niche as Michigan sports historian of sorts, co-writing “Bo Lasting Lessons” with the late Bo Schembechler. After a book tour this fall, he is scheduled to be a lecturer on campus in January for a class focusing on the history of college athletics.

“Will the book cost me? It already has and probably will in ways I’m not anticipating,” said Bacon, declining to give specifics. “But my options in 2011, when I had the facts I did, was to turn into a PR man or be a journalist. My job was clear. It was not fun, but it was clear. Whatever it costs me will not outweigh how much I would’ve been disgusted with myself if in five or 10 years I looked back and didn’t report the truth.”

Rodriguez was fired in January with a 15-22 record over three seasons and problems with the NCAA, and was replaced with Brady Hoke. Rodriguez moved his family out of the area and is working as an analyst for the CBS Sports.

Bacon writes that before Rodriguez was hired in 2007, LSU’s Les Miles had two conference calls with Michigan President Mary Sue Coleman at his alma mater. Miles, according to the book, told Coleman he wouldn’t meet in person with her until after coaching the Tigers in the national championship game.

“I would never say no to Michigan,” the book quotes Miles as saying to Coleman in both conference calls. LSU spokesman Michael Bonnette said Miles has been made aware of what was written about him in the book and declined comment on Monday.

defensive end Denzel McCoy, a redshirt freshman. “The things we go through, the hours we put in, what our bodies go through, we deserve some sort of (results). College football is a billion dollar industry.”

McCoy was one of 55 Yellow Jackets who signed the NCPA petition for “education, integrity and basic protections.” He had little difficulty convincing the other players to take a public stance.

“They signed it with ease,” McCoy said.

At UCLA, Bruins kicker and NFL prospect Jeff Locke enlisted 70 football players and 17 men’s basketball players — the entire roster — to sign the petition.

Locke, who like McCoy is a member of an NCPA council of active players that advises the group, emphasized that he does not see the locked box idea as paying players — the money would only go to players after their collegiate athletic careers were over; there would be no salary. The players did not put a dollar figure on what they want for the locked-box grants.

The idea is opposed by NCAA President Mark Emmert and others who cite the amateurism ideal as the backbone of college sports. Locke, however, is adamant that players must also benefit from the skyrocketing profits schools now see from renegotiated television deals, noting the Pac-12’s joint 12-year agreement with ESPN and Fox is worth $3 billion, the richest in college sports.

should benefit similarly from a strength-of-schedule bump as the season progresses. But the Ducks are currently behind one-loss Arkansas and Oklahoma teams in the computers (12th), so even winning out may not be enough.

Big Ten flag-bearer Michigan State might be in the same boat. After upsetting Wisconsin, the conference’s previous best BCS hope, the one-loss Spartans checked in at No. 11 in the latest BCS rankings, but were only 15th in the computer rankings. Like Stanford, Michigan State could win the rest of its games and wind up in the Rose Bowl — not a bad consolation prize, but not the BCS Championship, either, which this year is set for the Sugar Bowl.

The BCS counts on the regular season to winnow down the number of legitimate contenders, but in the early going, this looks like one of those seasons that won’t cooperate.

THE IDAHO STATESMAN

Previously unbeaten Oklahoma and Wisconsin lost over the weekend, giving Boise State’s hopes of playing in the BCS National Championship Game a boost. Despite their No. 4 spot in this week’s BCS standings, the Broncos still need quite a bit of help to play for the title on Jan. 9 in New Orleans. Here’s what you should be rooting for if you want to see Boise State defy the odds and play for the biggest of all prizes in college football.

5 THINGS THAT MUST HAPPEN

1. The 7-0 Broncos must finish undefeated — and win impressively. Boise State will need every benefit of the doubt and voters will be looking at every score closely.

2. An Oklahoma State loss. The Cowboys are No. 3 in the BCS standings (and No. 1 in the computers). But Oklahoma State has a tough schedule left — vs. No. 8 Kansas State, at No. 20 Texas Tech and vs. No. 9 Oklahoma (all BCS rankings).

3. A Stanford loss. The best-case scenario for Boise State would be No. 6 Stanford and Heisman Trophy front-runner Andrew Luck beating Pac-12 rival Oregon, but losing to USC and/or Notre Dame.

4. A Clemson loss. The No. 5 Tigers are rolling behind QB Tajh Boyd and WR Sammy Watkins. Clemson must get past Georgia Tech on Saturday and South Carolina in the regular-season finale. Plus, the ACC title game and a potential rematch with Virginia Tech looms.

5. A Kansas State loss. The surprising Wildcats are undefeated and No. 8 in the BCS. Kansas State’s schedule is backloaded however, with games against Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Texas A&M and Texas in a row.

If all that took place, it would likely leave the SEC champion and Boise State as the top-rated unbeaten. Houston could also go undefeated, but the Cougars won’t be a factor.

Still being one of two unbeaten would assure the Broncos of being in the title game. Here more help:

5 THINGS THAT WOULD HELP

1. A blowout in the LSU-Alabama game. If the Nov. 5 contest is close, there will be more sentiment for a rematch, so root for a big victory.

2. Georgia reaching — and winning — the SEC Championship Game. If the Bulldogs (4-1 in SEC play) make it to the title game, it would help BSU’s strength of schedule. A victory would create major upheaval (there’d be no undefeated SEC champ) and really help BSU.

3. A second loss for Oregon, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Michigan State. All four are in the top 11 of the BCS standings and, with just one loss, might be able to push past the Broncos for a spot in the title game.

4. TCU and San Diego State to win the rest of their non-Boise State games. The Horned Frogs are receiving votes in the AP, Coaches’ and Harris polls. Another game against a top-25 foe could help the Broncos, who face TCU on Nov. 12 in Boise.

5. Conference titles for nonconference opponents Nevada, Tulsa and Toledo. The Broncos’ five nonconference opponents are 15-2 in league play. Nevada, Tulsa and Toledo are undefeated in conference play.

Every little bit helps, right?

UCLA’S NEUHEISEL KNOWS HIS SEAT IS HEATING UP

ASSOCIATED PRESS

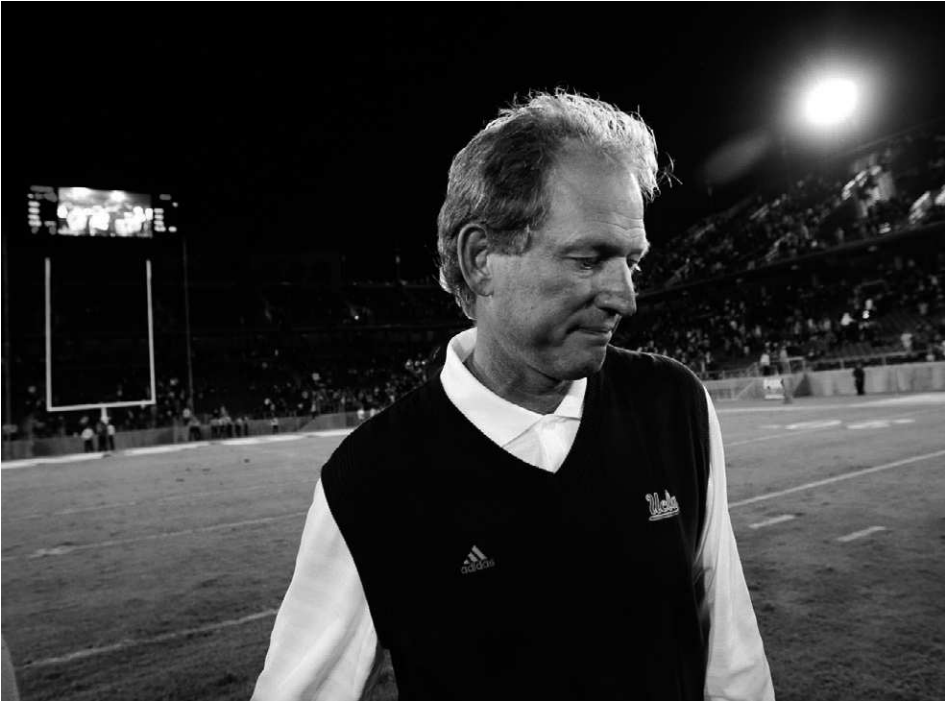

LOS ANGELES • For better and worse, not much is slick about Rick Neuheisel these days.

The UCLA coach is no longer the flashy young offensive mastermind who engineered big victories and endured messy departures from his previous top jobs at Colorado and Washington. Neuheisel is now a profoundly earnest 50-year-old man in an old-fashioned sweater vest with a small Bruins helmet embroidered on the breast, looking very much like a direct coaching descendant of John Wooden, one of his idols.

Slick Rick, the nickname once slapped on him by envious opponents and supporters alike, no longer fits a coach who has strived to do everything by the book at UCLA.

“I don’t think that this is the end by any stretch of the imagination,” Neuheisel said Monday while the Bruins (3-4, 2-2 Pac-12) began preparations for California. “As a matter of fact, I look at it as a beginning, and look at it as a fantastic challenge that we should embrace. Adversity is nothing more than an opportunity camouflaged.”

Neuheisel began his fourth season by acknowledging he’s on a hot seat, and his Bruins haven’t done

ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA head coach Rick Neuheisel acknowledged he was on the hot seat even before his fourth season at UCLA began and he’s done little to turn down the temperature after a 3-4 start.

much to cool it down in the last three months. After an embarrassing 36-point loss at Arizona last week punctuated by a brawl and six suspensions, Neuheisel might be nearly out of time to show enough progress to keep his dream job.

Yet Neuheisel’s optimism is indefatigable. Even with four of his top receivers and two key linemen suspended, he spent the long weekend figuring out how to beat the Golden Bears on Saturday.

“I’ve made it clear to everybody I work for, I’m not going to give up,” Neuheisel said. “There is absolutely zero in the way of a throw-up-your-hands-type mentality if you’re asking about me and anybody that works for me. I am committed. I am still as positive as ever. This is nothing more than camouflaged opportunity, and we are going to find a way to get this thing done right.”

Neuheisel knows his 18-26 record at UCLA has alienated many fans and alumni who were confident the local boy would make good. Even his biggest detractors acknowledge Neuheisel has been a remarkable advocate for his school, running a largely clean program and landing three elite recruiting classes with his heartfelt sales pitches about the wonders of Westwood.

‘Wish’ Recipient and Boise State Football Fan Continues Cancer Fight

THE IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Stephen Kinsey, the San Antonio, Texas, boy who was a coach for a day last season through the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Idaho, told his parents and doctors a couple of weeks ago that he didn’t want to endure chemotherapy again.

He has non-Hodgkin lymphoma and a blood cancer. The tumor in his neck recently returned while doctors stopped his chemo to deal with a blood clot. That forced them to start over with the treatments.

“He sat down on the hospital floor and said, ‘I’m not going to do it. I’ll die,’ ” his mother, Betsy, said.

She posted on Stephen’s Facebook page that he needed a lift and messages of support poured in from Boise. Coincidentally, Broncos coach Chris Petersen called him about that time, too.

Stephen decided to continue with his chemotherapy and is feeling much better.

“We had hundreds and hundreds of responses — cards and emails and letters — from Bronco Nation,” Betsy said. “... And it made all the difference.”

The Kinseys returned to Boise last week. They attended Saturday’s game against Air Force, but the purpose of this trip is for Betsy to speak Monday night at the annual Serving Up Wishes fundraiser, an event where Broncos athletes provide the entertainment.

Betsy’s speech will focus on “hands.”

“Some of the things I’ve held my kids’ hands through, some of the things we’ve gotten to do because of Make-A-Wish that I’ve gotten to hold their hands through and now how Bronco Nation is holding their hands,” she said.

Make-A-Wish invited Betsy to speak almost immediately after last year’s trip. The family has looked forward to the trip ever since. Stephen’s younger siblings, Bethany and Jonathan, are here, too.

“Being here has really helped (Stephen) a lot,” his dad, Bryan, said. “All the kids were excited to come back up. We had been looking forward to it all year long. They’ve actually used it as kind of a motivation the last few weeks: ‘If we can get through this, we can go to Boise!’ ”

Stephen watched Saturday’s game from the stands, but Petersen invited the family to Friday’s walk-through practice. He didn’t tell the team that “Coach Kinsey” was coming.

“They were excited to see him,” Petersen said.

Stephen broke the team huddle, as he did last year. His message: “You better win.”

“They laughed,” Stephen said.

The Broncos have kept in contact with Stephen throughout the past year. They mailed him a birthday video — the players sang “Happy Birthday” — and Petersen has talked to him several times.

“A lot of people in Boise have (kept in contact),” Petersen said. “It’s great. He’s got a hard road, every week and every day it’s something that’s in their lives. So anything we can do to distract them and give them something to pay attention to is the least we can do. ... People in Boise are just special in terms of how they reach back out.”

The family has had a difficult year. Bethany and Jonathan have medical challenges, too, and combined the family has endured 250 doctor visits, four surgeries, four hospital stays and two emergency-room visits since Jan. 1.

At times, the Kinseys weren’t sure if Stephen would be up for the trip to Boise.

INDYCAR CEO REVISITS “HORRIFIC” WEEK

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS • Randy Bernard knows there are people who blame him for Dan Wheldon’s death, who say the IndyCar CEO pushed the series over the edge.

“The last week was probably the most horrific week of my life,” Bernard told The Associated Press in an exclusive interview.

It’s been open season on Bernard since the accident, and his silence all last week only intensified the scrutiny on his leadership of the open-wheel series.

Now, nine days later, Bernard is able to publicly talk about Wheldon and the day all his work toward building a spectacular finale went terribly wrong minutes into the race. He still becomes emotional about it, taking a deep breath in his office at IndyCar headquarters as he recalls the controversial decision to cancel the race.

Bernard is focused on moving forward and helping IndyCar through this dark period.

For all the high-tech scoreboards in each ballpark and computers in each clubhouse that track every pitch, decisions on which relievers to warm up are passed along on Alexander Graham Bell’s invention of 1876. While there were 328 million wireless devices in the U.S. as of June, according to CTIA-The Wireless Association, baseball sticks with land lines, of which there are 114 million.

And because of that, the World Series rings fans were talking about Tuesday had nothing to do with the shiny ones on players’ fingers, but rather the old-fashioned-sounding bells that sound off on bullpen phones.

After the game, with Rangers Ballpark nearly empty, the bullpen phone 400 or so feet away could be heard ringing when the narrow black handset with the gray pushbuttons was picked up in the visitors dugout on the third-base side. But with a crowd of 51,459 a few hours earlier, an unbelievable meltdown occurred.

Rangers’ Message to Pujols: ‘Take Your Base’

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • Cardinals manager Tony La Russa has been around baseball long enough to know that there are two ways to make sure a feared slugger doesn’t beat you by himself.

“You pitch him very carefully, never give in,” La Russa said, “or you intentionally walk him.”

Texas is choosing the latter with Albert Pujols.

The Cardinals’ star first baseman was put on base intentionally three times in the Rangers’ 4-2 win Monday night, which gave Texas a 3-2 lead as the World Series shifts back to St. Louis. Game 6 is scheduled for Wednesday night.

Pujols drew the first intentional walk in Series history with no runners on base, STATS LLC.

“That’s one of the best hitters in the game, and his importance in that lineup is to drive in their runs,” Texas manager Ron Washington said Tuesday afternoon at Busch Stadium. “I just don’t think any manager, when the games are whittling down, will allow Albert to swing the bat to beat them.”

Even with Matt Holliday and Lance Berkman batting right behind him?

“That’s not to take anything away from Holliday of Berkman, because we know what they’re capable of doing,” Washington said. “We’re just not going to let Albert do it.”

The Atlanta Braves and Florida Marlins led the majors in intentional walks this season, though that’s to be expected in the National League, where teams often walk position players to get to weak-hitting pitchers. In the American League, where the designated hitter removes much of that strategy, the White Sox led the way by issuing 50 free passes this season.

It’s worked out pretty well for Texas.

Holliday hit into an inning-ending double play after Pujols was walked in the fourth inning Monday night, and he grounded out after Pujols walked in the fifth.

Pujols was put on base again in the seventh with two outs and none on. Holliday singled that time, but Berkman was given a free pass and David Freese flied out to end the inning without any runs scoring.

Holliday also grounded into a double play when Pujols was intentionally walked in Game 1.

“That’s the flow of the game, and that’s what the game is,” Washington said. “I do a lot by my gut. I do a lot by the way the game is flowing, who’s doing what, how he’s doing during the course of a game when I make a decision on who I want to move, who I want to bring in. It’s just the flow.”

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY: The weather on Tuesday afternoon at Busch Stadium was unseasonably warm — about 80 degrees with the sun shining, though there was a brisk wind.

It sure won’t be like that for Game 6 on Wednesday night.

The forecast is for temperatures in the 40s, with a 50 percent chance of showers. That’s actually an improvement over initial forecasts that called for an 80 percent chance of rain.

Cowboys RB Murray Savors Record Rushing Day

ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas • Cowboys rookie DeMarco Murray ran himself into the record books and into an appointment with Tony Dorsett on Tuesday.

His 253-yard performance against the Rams on Sunday drew a series of tweets — and a phone call — from Emmitt Smith, plus so many more calls and texts that more than 24 hours later Murray hadn't even checked them all.

"It's crazy," he said Monday afternoon, stepping out of a running backs meeting and into a series of media obligations.

Murray had the kind of breakout game every player dreams of and few ever get to savor.

In his sixth NFL game, and the first he was expected to have a big role, the third-round pick from Oklahoma ran 91 yards for a touchdown on his first carry of the afternoon.

It was his first career touchdown and the second-longest in franchise history. He cracked 200 yards and passed Dorsett's best day on his 22nd carry, then a few handoffs later outran the best day by Smith, the leading rusher in NFL history, and any other Dallas player.

His total was ninth-best in NFL history, behind a list of greats such as Walter Payton and O.J. Simpson, and current stars such as Adrian Peterson and Jamaal Charles. He also replaced Jim Brown for the most yards ever gained against the Rams, erasing a mark that had stood since 1957.

When he got home, Murray didn't even watch it, preferring to stick with the replay in his head. After watching the game film Monday, he emerged with this review: "There were some good runs, but there are definitely a lot of things I need to clean up."

The asterisk to Murray's performance is that it came against the Rams, who already were ranked last in the NFL at stopping the run. Many of the holes he ran through were so big that Dorsett or Smith might've racked up more than 100 yards even at their current age and physical condition.

So the challenge for Murray is having another strong performance, even "just" 100 yards, against a better defense. And then there's the real hallmark of the careers of Dorsett and Smith — doing it again and again, month after month, season after season.

Smith alluded to as much in this tweet Monday: "In order to be the best, you must be consistent for a long time. Hopefully this is the start of things to come."

Cowboys coach Jason Garrett hit on the same theme in his day-after review.

"I think he ran hard," Garrett said. "He certainly made some good cuts. His vision was good and he was able to stick his foot in the ground and run through some tackles. The other thing with a guy who hasn't carried the ball that much to carry it 25 times in a game for that many yards, to have the endurance that he had throughout the ball game. ... It's just a sign of hopefully things to come. That's not to suggest that he's going to have these kinds of days. But the first opportunity he got to get the ball like he got it in college, he took advantage of it. Now he's just got to keep taking the next step week to week."

Dallas has two other offensive players who were unheralded until having breakout performances, and have been able to keep it up: Tony Romo and Miles Austin. They were both undrafted guys from small schools. Murray has a head start by being an early round pick from a major power.

His progression from college star to NFL notable was slowed by a hamstring injury that landed him on the non-football injury list when he reported to training camp. He got into the final two preseason games, but was still the third-stringer when the season began, backing up starter Felix Jones and third-down back Tashard Choice.

Turner has rushed down this road before and is an established star. Forte, in a bitter contract impasse with the Bears, needs to be special because the quarterbacking and receiving are unpredictable. And, of course, they play in Chicago, where Soldier Field is anything but a passer's paradise late in the season.

Greene, who went for 112 yards in New York's 27-21 win over San Diego and was particularly effective in the second half when the Jets rallied, is a key to the team's "ground and pound" philosophy. If the offensive line gets its act together, it is one of the more formidable blocking units around. Greene needs to capitalize on their work.

"Now this, it came together for the most part," Jets guard Brandon Moore said of the running game. "We're just kind of streaming along, staying with that physical attack and style on offense, getting downhill runs . and moving people off the ball."

Some of the guys who will be toting the ball came into the season as backups or backups to the backups. Tim Hightower's left knee buckled in Washington's loss to Carolina and rookie Roy Helu takes over with Hightower gone for the season. Darren McFadden, the league's leading rusher, went down against Kansas City and his sub in Oakland, Michael Bush, isn't an every-down back, meaning speedy rookie Taiwan Jones could see some time.

PACKERS GO INTO BYE 7-0, BIG PLAYS REMAIN A PAIN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREEN BAY, Wis. • The Green Bay Packers are 7-0, and coach Mike McCarthy sees plenty of room for the defending Super Bowl champions to grow.

With most Packers players leaving Green Bay for some time off during the team's bye week, McCarthy will get his assistant coaches together Tuesday morning for self-scouting sessions intended to identify areas for improvement.

And while McCarthy says his players generally are playing above average, according to coaches' grades, that doesn't mean they're above being critiqued.

"I think that's very exciting, because we feel strongly as a football team our best football is in front of us," McCarthy said Monday. "So my sense of accomplishment is we're 7-0 but we have a lot of room for improvement. And it's clearly evident when we go through the grades and corrections week in and week out. So that's where I'm at."

It's difficult to identify a glaring weakness on the NFL's last remaining undefeated team, but the reigning champs acknowledge they're giving up too many big plays.

"That's really going to be the conversation (Tuesday) as a coaching staff when we go through our self-scouting meetings," McCarthy said. "A lot of it's going to be review. It's more going to be about the direction we're going to go. We're not going to make big changes. We're in tune with what needs to be done. Defensively, we're giving up too many big plays,

Green Bay center Scott Wells gets ready to snap the ball against Minnesota in the Packers' victory on Sunday.

Tebow's Moxie Takes Over Late in Game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. • Although Tim Tebow's mechanics are far from polished and his passes far from pretty, his moxie appears to be in perfect working order.

When the game's on the line, the Denver Broncos' charismatic quarterback finds a way to rally his team, happy feet in the pocket and all.

Tebow, in his first start of the season, pulled off an improbable comeback Sunday, bringing the Broncos back from a 15-0 deficit in the waning minutes of regulation for an 18-15 overtime win over winless Miami.

With this implausible victory, the popularity of Tebow is only going to skyrocket — as if it weren't sky high already.

Many fans have long wanted Tebow as their starter, even going so far as to put up billboards begging coach John Fox to insert the former Heisman Trophy winner from Florida.

They got their wish against San Diego two weeks ago when Fox yanked Kyle Orton in favor of Tebow, who almost rallied the Broncos to a win in the fourth quarter.

This time, Tebow succeeded.

And with a comeback for the ages, too.

The Broncos said it's the largest deficit overcome in a win with less than 3 minutes since the 1970 NFL merger, citing the Elias Sports Bureau.

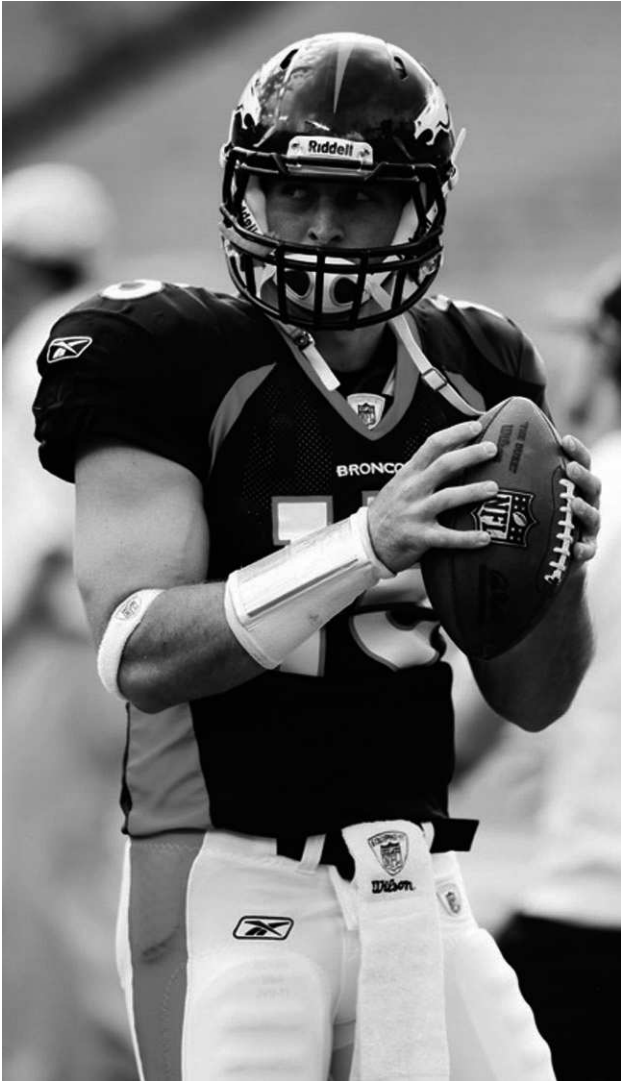

"He's a guy who's going to continue to fight, continue to scrap and use his arm, his legs or whatever to get the job done," safety Brian Dawkins said after the game.

That's the thing about Tebow: He may not always look pretty and perfect, but he can find a way to get the job done. It's a quality that just may be his strongest.

He's been scrutinized and chastised by skeptics since he was drafted by the Broncos with the 25th pick in 2010. Not because of his work ethic — that's never questioned — but because of his unorthodox style.

But what he lacks in smoothness he tries to make up for in leadership.

"There's one thing you can say about this team is that we have a lot of heart. We have a lot of courage. We're going to fight until the end and continue to believe," Tebow said. "It's my fault that we were in that position in the first place. I just have to play better in the first three quarters so we don't have to make that comeback in the fourth."

Denver quarterback Tim Tebow warms up prior to his team's game Sunday against Miami.

Runners

more, never will resurface in the NFL. Pro football is a passing game, and the record-setting stats early in the 2011 schedule prove that.

But running backs are undergoing a revival and Sunday underscored it.

We've come to expect big showings from Peterson, who despite playing behind a rookie quarterback making his first start, Christian Ponder, and facing the defending Super Bowl champs, had 175 yards and a touchdown in a 33-27 loss to Green Bay. Foster led the league in rushing in his breakout 2010 season and, after battling injuries this year had a huge game in a 41-7 romp past Houston: 115 yards rushing and two scores, 119 receiving and another TD.

Supporting Foster was Ben Tate with 104 yards on the ground. Like Foster the previous year, Tate is making up for a lost season. A second-round draft pick in 2010, he broke his right ankle in the preseason and didn't play again. Foster wasn't used much in his rookie season of 2009, appearing in only six games and gaining 257 yards rushing.

With the re-emphasis on running, three players who surpassed 100 yards on the ground Sunday will take on added importance for their teams: Atlanta's Michael Turner, Chicago's Forte and the Jets' Greene.

Sparano Worried About Job Security

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAVIE, Fla. • Miami Dolphins coach Tony Sparano could sense a seemingly insurmountable lead slipping away, and after calling a timeout, he implored two officials to review a touchdown just scored by the Denver Broncos.

"If I don't call a timeout, I'm (sunk) and now I'm getting fired, OK?" he screamed while pointing toward the team owner's skybox.

The desperation in Sparano's demeanor was understandable, but his plea for sympathy went unheeded. The touchdown was upheld on review, accelerating the Broncos' astounding comeback for an 18-15 overtime victory Sunday.

Miami's collapse after being up 15-0 was epic in scale. The defeat left the Dolphins 0-6, which is why their coach is worried about his job security.

A nine-game losing streak, the NFL's longest, has transformed Sparano into a virtual lame duck who seems certain to be fired at season's end, if not before. Owner Stephen Ross courted Jim Harbaugh last January before sticking with Sparano, and there's speculation Ross will pursue another big name.

Or former Florida Gators coach Urban Meyer. The wild final minutes of Sunday's game included the odd spectacle of Ross standing on the sideline laughing and chatting with Meyer, who was in attendance because of the Dolphins' wildly unpopular decision to honor the Gators' 2008 national championship team.

Thirty minutes after Denver's Matt Prater kicked the winning field goal, Ross was airborne in his private jet and bound for business in Seattle, leaving behind a season in tatters and a coach trying to hang on.

"Coach is a great guy," defensive end Jared Odrick said Monday. "I love him, and the rest of this team does. His will to win is as strong as anybody I've ever met, and it's hard on everybody when you don't win games you should."

The Dolphins had hoped to challenge for a postseason berth, but instead they lead the race for next year's No. 1 draft pick and Stanford quarterback Andrew Luck. If and that's the bottom line."

Those defensive difficulties continued in Sunday's victory at Minnesota. Despite making a switch to rookie quarterback Christian Ponder, the Vikings made enough big plays to stay in the game until the end.

"It felt kind of weird around here today," Packers linebacker Desmond Bishop said Monday. "I mean, we're 7-0, but it didn't quite feel like that. I think it'll never be right. We could be 16-0. The defense, if we don't play up to our capabilities, we're never satisfied."

According to STATS LLC, the Packers have given up 36 plays of 20-plus yards — second-most in the NFL, trailing only New England's 40. The Packers are missing Pro Bowl safety Nick Collins, who is out for the season because of a neck injury, but they aren't using that as an excuse.

"I do think we can play a lot better," defensive coordinator Dom Capers said. "That's an encouraging thing to me. We're 7-0. We're doing some things well but we aren't as consistent as we need to be. There are segments when you'll see us play for a couple quarters, and we'll play like we want to look, and then we'll have a quarter in there where you don't want to give up the big plays that we've had."

Injury Forces Tizway Out of Breeders' Cup Classic

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Tizway won't run in the upcoming Breeders' Cup Classic because of a leg injury that will force him to be retired to stud. Trainer Jim Bond said

Tuesday that Tizway did well in his morning gallop, but his leg later showed signs of swelling and heat. Veterinarians found a bruise and an ultrasound revealed a suspensory injury in his left front leg. The $5 million BC Classic on Nov. 5 was scheduled to be Tizway's final race, so the injury merely hastened the 6-year-old horse's retirement. Bond says he wasn't going to take a chance with Tizway's stud career still ahead of him. Tizway will be retired to Spendthrift Farm in Kentucky. Tizway won two Grade 1 races this year — the Metropolitan and the Whitney handicaps. He had seven wins in 20 career starts and earnings of $1.3 million.

FILLY HAVRE DE GRACE WORKS OUT
Havre de Grace worked out at Keeneland in preparation for the Breeders' Cup Classic at Churchill Downs, with jockey Gabriel Saez guiding the 4-year-old filly over five furlongs in 58:60 seconds. Havre de Grace is expected to run against the boys on Nov. 5 in a bid to become the second female to win the Classic, following Zenyatta in 2009. However, owner Rick Porter of Fox Hill Farm has said she will be cross-entered in the Ladies' Classic. "It was good, what we needed," trainer Larry Jones said. "We're ready; I would have liked to have run last Saturday. She couldn't get any better."

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 26, the 299th day of 2011. There are 66 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 26, 1861, the legendary Pony Express officially ceased operations, giving way to the transcontinental telegraph. (The last run of the Pony Express was completed the following month.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1774, the First Continental Congress adjourned in Philadelphia.
In 1825, the Erie Canal opened in upstate New York, connecting Lake Erie and the Hudson River.
In 1881, the "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" took place in Tombstone, Ariz.

In 1911, "The Queen of Gospel," singer and civil rights activist Mahalia Jackson, was born in New Orleans.

In 1942, Japanese planes badly damaged the aircraft carrier USS Hornet in the Battle of Santa Cruz Islands during World War II. (The Hornet sank early the next morning.)

In 1958, Pan American Airways flew its first Boeing 707 jetliner from New York to Paris in 8 hours and 41 minutes.

In 1972, national security adviser Henry Kissinger declared, "Peace is at hand" in Vietnam.

In 1979, South Korean President Park Chung-hee was shot to death during a dinner party along with his chief bodyguard by the head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Jae-kyu, who was later executed.

In 1980, Israeli President Yitzhak Navon became the first Israeli head of state to visit Egypt.

In 1994, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel and Prime Minister Abdel Salam Majali of Jordan signed a peace treaty during a ceremony at the Israeli-Jordanian border attended by President Bill Clinton.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush signed the USA PATRIOT Act, giving authorities unprecedented ability to search, seize, detain or eavesdrop in their pursuit of possible terrorists. Former nurse's aide Chante Mallard struck a homeless man, Gregory Biggs, with her car on a Fort Worth, Texas, highway; Biggs, who became lodged in the windshield, died after Mallard refused to seek assistance for him and instead enlisted the help of a friend and his cousin to dispose of his body after he died. (Mallard was later convicted of murder and sentenced to 50 years in prison.)

Five years ago: A wildfire in Southern California killed five firefighters (investigators later determined the cause of the blaze was arson). President George W. Bush signed a measure authorizing 700 miles of new fencing along the U.S.-Mexico border. The St. Louis Cardinals beat the Detroit Tigers 5-4 to take a 3-1 lead in the World Series.

One year ago: Saddam Hussein's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, was sentenced to death for persecuting members of Shiite religious parties under the former regime. (The sentence has yet to be carried out.) Iran began loading fuel into the core of its first nuclear power plant. A day after an earthquake sparked a deadly tsunami, Indonesia saw another natural disaster as Mount Merapi (meh-RAH'-pee) began erupting, resulting in hundreds of deaths in the weeks that followed.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning."

— William Shakespeare

Sending unambiguous signals is an obvious advantage to defenders. However, you may be unable to do so without your partner's cooperation.

In today's deal, West led his fourth-highest heart (the three) against the spade game.

On winning with the ace, East then switched to his singleton club. Declarer won in hand and played a trump to dummy's jack, West following and East taking the ace.

Because West's initial heart lead could have concealed the king, East returned a heart. Declarer pounced with the king, drew trump, and ended with 11 tricks, the losing diamond and heart in hand going on dummy's long clubs.

You can see the difference if East holds off on the first trump lead, but then plays the ace on the second instead. West is unlikely to have more than one quick entry, so no more than one club ruff can be expected.

South's two-spade rebid promised six cards in the suit; therefore, West will have an opportunity to signal his entry, but not until the second trump lead. Then, the diamond 10 from West provides an unequivocal road-map to the successful defense. A diamond to the ace followed by a club ruff leaves declarer with just nine tricks.

Two more thoughts (for experts only): should West's club play at trick two be suit preference?
In this context, I'd say yes. And should West be able to signal suit preference in trumps? Again I'd say yes — but this sophisticated agreement requires partnership discussion.

ANSWER: Your partner's bidding suggests a strong hand with 4-5-1-3 pattern. Although you may feel tempted to temporize with three diamonds, then bid three no-trump at your next turn, I believe it is best to retreat to three no-trump at once because of the wasted values in diamonds. You want your partner to look for slam only if he has real extras.

Twin Falls

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently asked how I would feel about him buying a plane ticket for his brother “Jake” to visit us and his parents over the holidays. I told him I wouldn’t like it — not because my husband would be paying for the ticket, but because Jake is a registered sex offender.

My husband is now upset with me, saying Jake “served his time.” I understand that, but the underage girl he messed around with was his niece. My daughter is 10 and starting to develop. She’s also affectionate with family. I don’t want her hugging Uncle Jake.

My husband and I are now not speaking. He told me that if his family isn’t welcome in our house, he will start treating MY family badly. Am I wrong for not wanting Jake sleeping under the same roof as my daughter?

— PROTECTIVE MOM IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR PROTECTIVE MOM: No, you’re not wrong. That your husband would try to blackmail you into allowing a registered sex offender to sleep in the same house as your adolescent daughter is deplorable. Your daughter is old enough to be told that Uncle Jake has a problem with young girls, and that if he ever makes a move on her, you want to know immediately.

It isn’t like Jake did time for bank robbery. Sex offenders are usually prohibited from having contact with minors. The man has a sexual impulse disorder that shouldn’t be ignored, and your husband should not allow any risk that your daughter might be molested.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My son accidentally hit my neighbor’s car with his bike. We immediately went over, told him to get an estimate, and I said I would gladly pay the cost of repair. Three days later, our neighbor came over with the estimate and I wrote him a check.

As time went on, I noticed the car wasn’t fixed, so one day when I saw him outside I asked him about it. He told me his wife needed some things, so he gave her the money I had given him. He said he wasn’t really that concerned about the car.

Since I gave him the money to fix the car, shouldn’t he have used it for that purpose? My husband says once I gave our neighbor the money, it was his to do with as he liked. I feel I did the right thing and he took the money knowing he was never going to fix the dent. What do you think?

— TOO GOOD A NEIGHBOR IN OHIO

DEAR TOO GOOD: I don’t think a person can ever be “too good” a neighbor, and I agree with your husband.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of two years, “Cash,” can’t fall asleep or stay asleep unless the TV is on — any show, any channel, even infomercials. I am the opposite. The noise keeps me awake, and I have heard it’s not good to have a TV in the bedroom.

We compromised by getting a remote with a timer. I can give up the 60 or 90 minutes he needs to fall asleep. But he frequently wakes up in the middle of the night and turns the TV back on, or moves to the couch to watch the TV there.

I asked Cash if he’d remove the TV from our bedroom. His response was, “Well, I guess I’ll be sleeping on the couch a lot.” I’d love to keep my husband in bed, but I’d also like to get some rest. Advice, Abby?

— SLEEP-DEPRIVED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR SLEEP-DEPRIVED: Yes. There must be a reason for your husband’s irregular sleep habits. He should discuss with his doctor the fact that he can’t sleep through the night. He may have a physical problem or a sleep disorder. In order for BOTH of you to function in your waking lives, it’s important that you are well-rested.

IF OCTOBER 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: "Make hay while the sun shines" should be your motto for the year ahead. During the next few weeks, your fantasies seem important. Anyone who comes into your life might trigger your romantic inclinations, but wait until the end of the year to make a commitment or firm decision. An opportunity to make a beneficial change or to improve your circumstances may appear in December or January. You are everyone's sweetheart and may bask in the warm glow of unsurpassed popularity. Be sure to take advantage of these celestial conditions by asking for a raise you deserve, applying for the job of your dreams, or going for the gold in a romantic commitment.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wish upon a star that never fails to twinkle. If you really want something, you are bound to receive it through persistence. Shake off the little irritations of life; concentrate on what brings joy and happiness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Learn to be loving and kind. Concentrate on the points that you and a partner have in common instead of the differences. The new moon might briefly magnify disparities between you and loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Become a quick-change artist. Surprises could catch you off guard so be prepared to shift gears at the drop of a hat. The ability to adapt to new situations and rethink your position is your best asset.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The new moon opens the door to creative genius. Your ability to expand your horizons and add zest to your life through crafts, entertainment or hobbies may be highlighted during the next few weeks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Today's new moon may illuminate key business relationship issues. Don't feel obligated to hang out with old contacts that bore you to tears, when new networks fill you with enthusiasm and excitement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Handle emerging situations with elegance. It is a simple matter to remain poised to adjust to unexpected changes. Put important financial concepts into motion by taking care of small problems first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push hard to launch important matters while celestial conditions are still favorable. You can make progress with matters of the heart or build towards escalating financial success through a few smart moves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The new moon falls in your sign this month. As a heavenly signal of new beginnings, it might encourage you to take extra notice of your appearance. A new haircut or wardrobe might be in the stars.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): To be successful, you must be passionate about success. Set financial plans into motion during the next few days or at least formulate a fresh course of action. Education could be the key to profits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stretch a little, gain a lot. Exercise both the mind and the body. Don't be afraid to dream of major success when you put your long-term plans into motion. New information improves your outlook.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you know what's good for you, you'll do it. Listen to the counsel of the heart and you can't make a mistake. Don't be put off by minor squabbles with a partner. Everything will work out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The key to success lies in paying attention to the opinions of others. Please someone else and make it to the big time. You can find the enthusiasm to make permanent improvements a reality.
