Is Yogurt in Twin Falls' Future?

Greek yogurt producer Chobani could bring hundreds of jobs to a selected site in the West, and Twin Falls is in the running.

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls is one of a handful of cities in Idaho and Nevada being considered as a site for a Greek yogurt production plant.

Chobani, a New York-based manufacturer of Greek yogurt, has visited Twin Falls as well as Carson City, Nev., in recent months in its efforts to find a spot for a facility near the West Coast. If it becomes a reality, a Chobani facility would bring a needed boost to the economy of Twin Falls, which has seen little large-scale growth in recent years aside from the C3 call center opening in 2010.

A Western facility would allow Chobani to be more flexible in its distribution of its products, said Nicki Briggs, a spokeswoman for Agro Farma, Chobani's parent company.

"We have spoken with the folks at Twin Falls," she said, adding that several locations are under consideration and no decision has been made.

Briggs said the company has visited potential sites in the last few months and declined to name other places under consideration.

FIRE SEASON WRAPS UP WHILE RETARDANT REGULATIONS TIGHTEN

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

With fewer wildfires to put out, Idaho isn't feeling any heat from tighter regulation of flame retardant.

Wildfires consumed close to 381,000 acres this year in the state, much less than in years past. Fire officials predicted flames to be low this year and speculate that next year should be the same.

But as Idaho firefighters take a break from fighting flames, some of them will be under stricter guidelines on how they use fire retardants to do so next year.

The U.S. Forest Service recently released an updated plan on how it will use fire retardants on 193 million acres of land throughout 44 states. A 2010 court order forced the agency to evaluate how to use retardants without harming environmentally sensitive land, water and endangered species.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management, which bases firefighting aircraft out of the Twin Falls airport, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are still deciding whether to adopt the Forest Service's new approach.

The use of retardants has been debated over the years because they can cause unintentional environmental consequences. Retardants are made up of water and fertilizers that suck

For the past few weeks, Canyon Ridge High School Principal Brady Dickinson unknowingly planned his own awards ceremony.

After hearing Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna was coming to Twin Falls and wanted to have a patriotic ceremony in advance of Veterans Day, Dickinson coordinated with student groups and made sure things were ready to go.

But during the Wednesday assembly, Dickinson was caught off guard when he was named the 2011 Milken Educator of the Year in Idaho, an honor that comes with an unrestricted $25,000 award.

"I had no idea it was coming," he said after the assembly.

Dickinson was honored for his vi-

Locals' Secret: Vineyard Lake

The longtime locals would like to keep Vineyard Lake to themselves. It's a fantastic but hidden bit of wilderness just minutes from Twin Falls, and generations of Magic Valley explorers and swimmers have considered it their exclusive spot. The U.S. Bureau of Land Management allows, but doesn't promote, recreation there, and the easiest route of access depends on a private landowner's goodwill. Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler and Melinda Anderson, the city's economic development director, both declined comment on the company. Jan Rogers, executive director of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, also wouldn't speak on the subject, citing the organization's policy of not commenting until a company makes a decision.

Larry Werner, city manager for Carson City, said his community is in the running for the yogurt plant as well, and is still waiting to hear back from Chobani.

"We thought it was going to Twin Falls, but we've not been told 'no' or 'yes,'" he said.

Werner said, under the scenarios he was told about, the potential plant's employee count would begin at about 400 or 500 workers and gradually grow to about 1,500.

Carson City provided the company information about city infrastructure like transportation and water drainage systems, he said.

Werner said Chobani representatives mentioned Twin Falls to him, adding that the company was professional and didn't try to use a potential deal with Twin Falls as leverage.

"They were not pitting us like: 'Twin Falls can do this. What can you do?'"

Werner said.

Chobani also has visited with Fallon, Nev., a region with a strong dairy and agricultural presence. Fallon City Engineer Jim Souba said the company has visited a potential site and had preliminary discussions in recent months, adding that he's uncertain of what decision the company will make.

Despite the recession, Chobani has been growing. The company announced in 2010 plans to expand its manufacturing facility and production hub in New York.

If the company follows the same business practice it has used for its New York facility, it could also be a boon for the region's dairy economy. Agro Farma used an estimated 25 million pounds of milk each week at its South Edmeston, N.Y., facility, with an economic impact of $300 million annually for that state's farming community, according to the company.

Danny Campos, director of investor relations with the Northern Nevada Development Authority, is working with Carson City and Chobani.

He said his guess is that there will be a decision made within 30 days, though he declined to comment further.

"Most of it's confidential," Campos said. "We don't even have the authorization to announce anything about it publicly."

City Issues, Newspaper Spat Mark Burley Forum

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • After a contentious start to Tuesday's Burley City Council candidates forum, the crowd of candidates fielded questions on city issues in front of a packed house at the Burley Public Library.

Write-in candidate Mike Ramsey joined Tom Tolness, Joyce Merrill, Russ Mallory, incumbent Jay Lenkersdorfer, Sam Kuoha, Randy Hawkins, Dennis Dexter and John Craner for a discussion on the issues. But when Ramsey directed his comments specifically toward Lenkersdorfer, his efforts were thwarted by forum moderator Rick Bollar, a 5th Judicial District magistrate judge.

Ramsey said his political campaign was based on trying to bring awareness to the conflicts of interest presented when the owner of a newspaper is also a city councilman. Lenkersdorfer owns a Burley-based weekly newspaper which regularly reports on the council's actions, while Ramsey operates a rival Burley weekly.

Bollar interrupted Ramsey several times at the beginning of the forum, reminding the young write-in candidate to focus on city issues, adding that veiled references to a specific individual were not acceptable.

"I don't need to mention names," Ramsey said. "If you've all lived here and watched it, you all know."

Lenkersdorfer, who had ample opportunity later in the forum, refrained from addressing Ramsey's claims that his position on the council has been harmful to the community. Before the forum ended, Ramsey announced his withdrawal from the election.

When asked to list what they believe are the top issues the city faces by Bollar, the candidates answered with a variety of responses. Many said that thoughtfully guiding economic development and preserving the joint law enforcement agreement with Cassia County were among the city's top priorities. Many also addressed concerns of professionalism and animosity regarding the council and its meetings.

Craner said fixing the city's far-reaching negative reputation will be important, while Hawkins, Dexter and Merrill also touched on topics regarding the council's relationship with the community.

Tolness suggested providing more youth activities, including making the city's current airport into a teen hangout after a new airport can be built. Dexter said working with other governmental bodies to unify Mini-Cassia will be key, a sentiment Kuoha also touched upon.

Lenkersdorfer said aging infrastructure is a top city issue, and although upgrading the streets is a pressing need, aging sewer lines are also a concern. He added that how the city will keep fees low as the costs of services rise will be an issue.

Mallory said maintenance of city streets is also a major concern.

In summing up their candidacies, most candidates noted their time to devote to representing the city and their backgrounds in public service. Voters will elect three council members during the Nov. 8 election. The four-year terms will start in January.

ISP Offers Free Defensive Driving Class for Young Adults

TIMES-NEWS

The Idaho State Police will offer a free safety course for young drivers on Saturday.

The defensive driving course, "Alive at 25," will be held for drivers ages 15 to 24 from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Idaho State Police Region 4 Headquarters, 218 West Yakima in Jerome. It is open to residents throughout the Magic Valley.

The training is free, but participants must preregister at www.idsafedriver.org.

"We are excited to offer this extraordinary training opportunity to our young drivers," said Cpl. Andrew Hitt, ISP trooper.

The 4 1/2-hour course is taught by law enforcement officers. It will help young drivers learn and adopt safe driving practices, while taking responsibility for personal behavior in different driving circumstances, according to a press release issued by ISP.

There will be group discussions, roleplaying, short lectures and workbook exercises.

Driver under the age of 25 are four times more likely to be involved in a serious vehicle crash than older drivers due to lack of awareness of the consequences of risk-taking behavior, inexperience, peers riding with the driver, impaired driving or speeding.

About Chobani

• THE YOGURT: Chobani's Greek yogurt is billed as all-natural and without preservatives or artificial flavors. Its yogurt comes from the milk of cows not treated with rBST, a bovine growth hormone. The yogurt contains real fruit and twice the protein of traditional non-Greek yogurts.

• THE HISTORY: Agro Farma, Chobani's parent company, was founded in 2005 and is based in New York. Hamdi Ulukaya, a native of Turkey and third-generation producer of Mediterranean foods, started the company. Chobani was launched in 2007.

Idaho Power to Hold Public Meeting on Growth Plan

TIMES-NEWS

Idaho Power is inviting the public to learn more about its latest growth plan at an open house.

The 2011 Integrated Resource Plan explains the company's business plan, growth predictions, and proposed short and long-term projects it hopes to begin in the next 20 years. The IRP is updated every two years.

This year's plan also includes a solar demonstration project that would produce 500 kilowatts to one megawatt of energy.

Attendees will be able to talk to company representatives, submit comments and watch an educational video with more details about the IRP.

The meeting will start at 7 p.m. Nov. 3 at the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Twin Falls.

For those interested, the IRP is available online at www.idahopower.com/2011IRP.

Before the surprise presentation, the school gym was buzzing with activity as students sat down in the bleachers for what was supposed to be a patriotic assembly.

Luna, who's visiting Magic Valley schools this week, encouraged students to "dream big" for their future. He also talked about the history of the "Star Spangled Banner" and recognized those in attendance who served in the armed forces.

Thomas Boysen from the Milken Family Foundation said that when the foundation was formed, "they thought about what it would take to keep this country great" and that's education.

The foundation seeks out educators for the award and there isn't an application process. Over the past 25 years, more than 2,500 people have received it.

"We're trying to call attention to the importance of educators," Boysen said.

Luna kept the crowd in suspense as he described what the award recipient would get. The announcement had the feel of an awards show, as Luna pulled a piece of paper out of an envelope and announced Dickinson's name. Dickinson told the crowd that he feels a sense of pride in Canyon Ridge High School.

"You're only as good as your staff and you're only as good as your students," he said.

After the assembly, Dickinson said it's a bit too early to tell how he'll use the $25,000. Most likely, though, it will go toward paying for a college education for his two children.

the oxygen out of flames. But if the chemicals reach streams or rivers, it can result in dead wildlife and plants.

In 2010, air tankers made nine accidental drops in Idaho. The drops didn't do immediate harm to the environment, but they did contaminate some water in critical salmon habitat.

Firefighters use retardants because they help deter wildfire growth and can cover a large area of land at once, said Glen Stein, who led the Forest Service retardant use update team.

"We can spread retardant out ahead of the fire and it will still be effective, even if it's out in the open for awhile," Stein said. "Unlike suppressants, like water or foam, they have to be applied directly and immediately on the fire."

In Idaho, air tankers based in Boise have used close to 170,000 gallons of retardant each year since 2000, he said. The use has dropped over the past two years because the demand has lessened.

Heavy, wet springs and less lightning during the summer has helped reduce wildfire incidents, said Jennifer Jones, spokeswoman for the National Interagency Fire Center based in Boise.

"There needs to be warm, dry conditions and a lot of dry lightning for really big fire years," Jones said. "Weather patterns in the Northwest are looking to be similar for next year."

Sun Valley Turns to Voters for Road and Fire Funding

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

Three bonds set to sunset may give Sun Valley hope that voters will let a fourth begin.

Sun Valley residents will be asked to approve a $14.15 million general obligation bond during the Nov. 8 election.

About 85 percent of the money will pay for road and path reconstruction. The remaining $600,000 would go to fire department equipment, including half the bill for the aerial tower truck the Sun Valley Fire Department shares with the Ketchum Fire Department. Sun Valley would also buy new radio equipment and new air packs for firefighters, each of which cost $175,000.

City officials argue that conditions are right at the moment to minimize the projects' costs. Mayor Wayne Willich said road reconstruction will cost substantially more if the roads are allowed to deteriorate further. In addition, the city's aerial tower truck is 23 years old. When such trucks turn 25, insurance rating

About the Bond

What it is: Money for road and path reconstruction, and fire department equipment in Sun Valley.

What it costs: $14.15 million across 15 or 20 years; the final arrangement and costs will depend on what rates are like in February.

What it needs to pass:
66.7 percent supermajority agencies discount their rating to zero, degrading the city's fire rating system.

The final details of the bond aren't quite finished — if it's approved, the council will decide whether to pursue a 15- or 20-year term based on what the rates are in February. That will provide some flexibility, and the project may come in cheaper if the city can minimize interest and pay it off in fewer years.

But Councilwoman Joan Lamb points out that three bonds Sun Valley residents are currently paying – the Blaine County Manor bond, Sun Valley's 1997 bond, and the Land, Water and Wildlife bond — will be complete by the time payments would begin on the new bond. Residents paying about $488 in taxes per $1 million of assessed property value would continue to pay about the same amount after the transition, according to the city.

What's more, residents likely wouldn't have to begin making payments on the bond until December 2012 or even sometime in 2013, Willich said.

Bond interest rates and bids for road construction are low right now, so the council thinks it can save taxpayers money by bidding out the work now, said Councilman Nils Ribi.

Willich said Sun Valley would construct new roads and paths with concrete asphalt, grinding up the current asphalt on the spot and mixing it with concrete. Not only will this procedure give the new paths and road longer life than the current surface material, but workers won't have to bring in a new base material or haul away the old.

BICYCLIST INJURED IN MORNING CRASH

TIMES-NEWS

A Twin Falls man sustained head injuries Wednesday morning after he collided with a vehicle while riding his bicycle, but he was later released from the hospital.

Stephan Featherston, 40, was riding around the 1700 block of Addison Avenue East when he was hit by Orren Hodges, 78, at about 8:50 a.m., according to Twin Falls Police Staff Sgt. Dennis Pullin. Featherston and Hodges were both heading east, with Featherston in the right lane and Hodges, driving a 2011 Chevrolet Equinox crossover, in the left lane.

Pullin said Featherston crossed the road in front of Hodges, who braked and swerved to avoid a collision. Featherston, who was not wearing a helmet, was not run over but he was hit by the Chevrolet.

Featherston was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, where he was treated and released by midday.

Police said Featherston was at fault for the collision, so Hodges was not cited.

Two Busy City Council Races This Fall in Hailey

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

In Hailey, one political race this fall has altered another.

Incumbent Mayor Rick Davis faces three challengers in his bid to remain Hailey's mayor after the Nov. 8 election.

One of those challengers is current Councilman Fritz Haemmerle. His decision to leave his current seat to contest the mayorship leaves the field wide open for three candidates vying to succeed him.

Incumbent Carol Brown is running unopposed for reelection to another council seat.

Here are the details:

Mayoral candidates Mark Johnston

Age: 58
Occupation: Writer, photographer and artist.
Government experience: Worked for the city of Los Angeles for 10 years in city government. Served as vice-chairman of the Hailey Planning and Zoning Commission for two years and has volunteered in various capacities with government, including the Hailey Arts Commission.

Why voters should vote for Johnston:

- Johnston says he's a consensus builder.
  - Johnston says he listens to people, and he would listen to city employees as mayor.
  - Johnston, who first began vacationing in the Sun Valley area in the early 1980s, would like to help preserve the quality of life that eventually convinced him to move there.
- In his own words: "I believe there are a lot of important issues on the table right now, including the airport issues and annexations. And I would like to see these resolved in the best possible way."

Geoffrey Moore

Age: 55
Occupation: Retired builder and carpenter and Hailey firefighter for 11 years from 1994 to 2006.
Government experience: Has served two terms with the Hailey Planning and Zoning Commission, which he currently chairs. Member of the Impact Development Fee Committee and four ad-hoc committees.
Three reasons voters should vote for Moore:

- He wants to help voters feel their voices are being heard, and to spur participation in local government through such things as workshops on how meetings function so residents feel more comfortable attending hearings.

- He believes in fiscal responsibility and citizen involvement, wanting to let voters know what bonds and other decisions really cost.
- He says he will not be swayed by lobbyists since he has no association with any special interests.

In his own words: "I think people get angry because things get to a point of no return before they read about it in the newspaper. We need to keep residents informed about what's happening all along the way."

Fritz Haemmerle

Age: 52
Occupation: Attorney
Government experience: Served four years on the Hailey City Council, the last two years as president. Was Blaine County prosecuting attorney from 1991 to 1995. Served on the Snake River Basin Water Adjudication Committee from 1995 to 1999.

Why voters should vote for Haemmerle:

- He would ensure that no annexation occurs unless it benefits the people of Hailey. At the same time, he believes each annexation request should be considered so the city doesn't fence itself in because it always said "no."
- He says he would try to improve traffic flow so it's more friendly for all users and would provide better upkeep of the streets, including the alleyways.
- He says he has always promoted all kinds of recreation and, in fact, helped start the Fourth of July bicycle criterium.

In his own words: "I ran for city council because I was born and raised in the Wood River Valley and didn't want to see a lot of what made life good here go away as it has in Ketchum. I didn't want Hailey's downtown to become an avenue of banks nor did I want to lose important icons like the rodeo grounds. I believe right now we need a leader who can take a stand on issues and be up front with the people."

Rick Davis

Age: 62
Occupation: Marketing director for Sun Valley Title
Government experience: Four years as Hailey mayor and 16 years on the Hailey City Council.
Why voters should vote for Davis:

- He says he's experienced, dedicated and a proven leader, having served at the helm through one of the worst economic times in Hailey's history.
- He says he's come in under budget each year despite the poor economy.

Davis

- He says he's streamlined City Hall to make it more customer-friendly, partnered with the Chamber to promote economic development, helped Hailey lead the way in the valley as an energy-efficient city and secured grants.

In his own words: "There are still some things I'd like to accomplish along economic development lines. I would, for instance, like to bring in high-tech clean industries that pay good wages. In addition, we haven't marketed Hailey in a national way and we need to step up to the plate and do that."

City Council candidates Patrick Cooley

Age: 53
Occupation: Supervisor of Ketchum's water department.
Government experience: Has served on the Hailey Planning and Zoning Commission for five years and on citizen ad hoc committees dealing with water and impact issues.

Three reasons to vote for Cooley:

- He has government experience.
- He has lived in Hailey for 22 years, having moved there after serving in the U.S. Navy.
- He says he was able to bring balance to the Planning and Zoning Commission as the commission dealt with difficult issues like growth.

In his own words: "There are a lot of issues coming up that are really important to Hailey. In the past we were concerned with monitoring growth. Now, we're striving to maintain and improve our quality of life as we deal with issues like the airport and annexations."

Cooley

- He says he's learned resourcefulness and creativity as a self-employed businessman that give him a different perspective than those who have worked in the public sector.

- He says he would like to repeal development impact fees that he says have stifled new commercial development.

In his own words: "I decided to run over my disgust with ordinances requiring developers to provide affordable housing. Such ordinances violate the Constitution of the United States and when I took my oath as an Army officer I swore to defend the Constitution. I am also upset over how the city did not have money in hand from its anonymous donor before proceeding to build the Hailey Ice Rink."

Peter Lobb

Age: 57
Occupation: Landscaper, former project manager for oil fields in Prudhoe Bay and teacher in refugee camps in Uganda and Kenya, along with Korea.

Government experience: Began attending city council meetings five years ago to offer input on proposed zoning changes. Chaired community oversight committee developed to deal with Hailey's marijuana initiative and has served on mayor's advisory committee.

Three reasons voters should vote for Lobb:

- He says he understands how city government works, thanks to the many meetings he's attended in the past five years.
- He says he would try to make government more open and accessible to the public and find a way to explain decisions so public can better understand what the council did and why.
- He would like to attract more small businesses by targeting the wealthy businessmen who frequently visit the Sun Valley area.

In his own words: "I started going to meetings five years ago and eventually began going to all of them — no Monday night football for me. After all these years, I decided I've had enough experience to move from the audience to the other side of the table and tackle issues like Quigley annexation, which I believe would prove more of a financial burden than an asset to the city at this point in time."

Holiday Pudding Orders Due Soon

TIMES-NEWS

Ascension Episcopal Church is currently taking orders for holiday puddings.

The deadline to order steamed plum and carrot puddings is noon on Nov. 4.

Puddings serve six to eight people each and cost $8. They arrive ready to give as gifts or save for a holiday dinner — decorated, wrapped and including recipes for sauces.

Proceeds from the puddings will benefit Neighbors in Need, a community outreach fund.

To order, call the church, at 733-1248 between 9 a.m. and noon on weekdays. Puddings will be ready to pick up at the church in mid-November.

Coming Sunday

As the holidays near, so do charitable Christmas sales and opportunities to volunteer at festivals across the valley. Read Sunday's Community section for more details on upcoming needs and events.

Meridian Man Sentenced for Stabbing His Mother

BOISE (AP) • A Meridian man convicted of killing of his mother and kidnapping his wife earlier this year was sentenced Wednesday to life in prison.

Fourth District Judge Patrick Owen ordered 25-year-old Michael James Lee to serve at least 32 years, which would make him at least 57 before he becomes eligible for parole.

Authorities were called to the scene of the Jan. 4 stabbing after Lee's wife, bound in chains, escaped from the car trunk and ran for help.

Lee later acknowledged kidnapping his wife and putting her in the trunk of his car before driving to his mother's home in Eagle. He ate dinner with his mother, 46-year-old Lynn Marie Blake, before stabbing her 22 times in front of his infant daughter, who was unharmed, detectives said.

Lee pleaded guilty in May to first-degree murder, second-degree kidnapping, and felony battery in connection with Blake's death. Five other charges including rape and aggravated assault were dropped as part of a plea deal, though Lee acknowledged he raped his wife and battered his mother's roommate.

Prosecutors say Blake's roommate, who suffered torn eye muscles during the attack, continues to heal from her injuries

On Wednesday, Lee's now ex-wife told Owen that she was torn by the prospect of a long sentence for her former husband, because it means their young child will grow up without a father.

UI Releases Timeline in Prof Murder-suicide

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • A psychology professor who gunned down a graduate student he had dated and then took his own life two months ago had disclosed his bipolar disorder shortly after he was hired in 2007, according to a timeline released Wednesday.

University of Idaho President Duane Nellis discussed the release of personnel records for Ernesto Bustamante, 31, at a news conference.

Bustamante was found dead in his hotel room Aug. 23 with six guns and medications for bipolar disorder and severe anxiety. Moscow police a day earlier had found the body of 22-year-old Katy Benoit, who was shot nearly a dozen times outside her Moscow home.

Bustamante disclosed to the psychology department that he managed his mental illness with medication after starting his employment on Aug. 12, 2007, the university said in the timeline.

"We, as an institution when we hire people, we're not allowed to ask for medical conditions, or anything like that," Nellis said at the news conference on the Moscow campus. "Bipolar is something that's certainly treatable."

As early as the fall of his first semester, three or four students went to psychology department chair Ken Locke to express concerns about Bustamante's behavior, saying he was "flirtatious" and showed favoritism to students.

Bustamante, who is originally from Venezuela, was confronted about the complaints and told Locke that his interactions with a student who was also Hispanic had been misunderstood, the university said.

Benoit had met Bustamante last fall when she took a psychology course he was teaching, and by the end of the semester they were dating.

In December 2010, Bustamante met with administrators to discuss a complaint that an anonymous caller put into a university hotline, saying Bustamante was having sexual relationships with students and had been abusive toward one of them. The student at the center of the abuse allegations was not Benoit and denied that Bustamante had exhibited improper behavior, refusing to file a complaint against him.

Bustamante denied any violations of university policy.

Benoit's relationship with Bustamante ended in May, after he put a gun to her head and told her how he would use it to kill her. She told others he had threatened her with a gun twice before. That month, he informed Locke that was experiencing withdrawal symptoms due to a change in his medication.

Bustamante had been known to alternately refer to himself as a "psychopathic killer" and "the beast," according to police. After the couple split, Benoit alerted school officials that she was becoming increasingly concerned for her safety and filed a sexual harassment complaint with the university on June 12.

Bustamante denied the allegations and filed his own complaint against her on July 8, claiming defamation of character. Bustamante resigned his position as assistant professor Aug. 19, and police say he was in the process of moving to New Jersey for another job.

The quickest way for the university to remove Bustamante from campus was for him to sign a separation agreement.

"I'm not sure the university had knowledge about his employment anywhere else," said Nellis, who was also unsure if administrators in the psychology department had been contacted by the New Jersey employer.

School officials had contact with Benoit more than a dozen times to discuss the situation and urge her to take safety precautions. The final meeting came Aug. 22, the first day of the fall 2011 semester and the same day police said Bustamante shot Benoit 11 times with a .45-caliber handgun outside her home.

Nellis announced Wednesday that the university would take action to bolster its consensual relationship policy and expand sexual harassment training.

"We've come together in the wake of an unthinkable tragedy," Nellis said. "Going forward we'll be stronger and wiser."

Media outlets were expected to receive Bustamante's personnel documents today. A judge ordered the documents released Oct. 3 after the university and several media outlets petitioned the court to rule they were a matter of public record.

The Patriot Act's War on Free Speech

Special to The Washington Post

Sometime in 2012, I will begin the ninth year of my life under an FBI gag order, which began when I received what is known as a national security letter at the small Internet service provider I owned. On that day in 2004 (the exact date is redacted from court papers, so I can't reveal it), an FBI agent came to my office and handed me a letter. It demanded that I turn over information about one of my clients and forbade me from telling "any person" that the government had approached me.

National security letters are issued by the FBI, not a judge, to obtain phone, computer, and banking information. Instead of complying, I spoke with a lawyer at the American Civil Liberties Union and filed a constitutional challenge against the NSL provision of the Patriot Act, which was signed into law 10 years ago Wednesday.

A decade later, much of the government's surveillance policy remains shrouded in secrecy, making it impossible for the American public to engage in a meaningful debate on the effectiveness or wisdom of various practices. The government has used NSLs to collect private information on hundreds of thousands of people. I am the only person from the telecommunications industry who received one to ever challenge in court the legality of the warrantless NSL searches and the associated gag order and to be subsequently (partially) un-gagged.

In 2004, it wasn't at all clear whether the FBI would charge me with a crime for telling the ACLU about the letter, or for telling the court clerk about it when I filed my lawsuit as "John Doe." I was unable to tell my family, friends, colleagues or my company's clients, and I had to lie about where I was going when I visited my attorneys.

For years, the government implausibly claimed that if I were able to identify myself as the plaintiff in the case, irreparable damage to national security would result. But I did not believe then, nor do I believe now, that the FBI's gag order was motivated by legitimate national security concerns. It was motivated by a desire to insulate the FBI from public criticism and oversight.

In 2007, The Washington Post made an exception to its policy against anonymous op-eds and published a piece I wrote about my predicament. In August 2010, the government agreed to a settlement, and I was finally allowed to reveal my name to the public in connection with my case, but I am still prevented — under the threat of imprisonment — from discussing any fact that was redacted in the thousands of pages of court documents.

I don't believe that it's right for Americans' free speech rights to be bound by perpetual gag orders that can't be meaningfully challenged in a court of law. The courts agreed, but the NSLs and the gag orders live on. Now the FBI is supposed to notify NSL recipients that they can challenge a gag order — but the government refuses to say how the court's ruling has been put into practice, or how many gag orders have been issued, challenged or reversed.

During the recent debate to reauthorize sections of the Patriot Act, two members of the Senate Intelligence Committee — Mark Udall, D-Colo., and Ron Wyden, D-Ore. — warned that the government is interpreting the law to conduct surveillance that does not follow from a plain reading of the text. "When the American people find out how their government has secretly interpreted the Patriot Act, they will be stunned and they will be angry," Wyden said.

As someone who had to keep silent and live a lie for the better part of a decade, in the false name of "national security," I know he's right.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Rise in Fees

It is election time in Jerome and now, with our extravagant city manager gone, remember who voted to raise our water and sewer fees very high at one rate hike.

Irrigation fees seem to go up every year for non-existent water that's running down streets into street drains and back into the canal system when it could be used to green up lawns and beautiful our town.

So this election year, remember these people and next time the mayor and try someone new. If it doesn't work this time, do it again next time and keep doing it until we get people who will listen to the people of Jerome.

It's your only voice. Going to city hall does not help.

Remember to vote.

The Need for Better Representation

I applaud the Tea Party's efforts to return the governments of these United States, as I include the local and state governments, back to the citizens of this country and away from the special interest groups who now absolutely control it. However, I believe that, from what I understand about their tactics, there is a better way to achieve your objectives other than the way that you are proceeding.

It appears to me that the Tea Party is attacking individuals who have occupied representative positions for long periods of time. These individuals are out of touch with the people, listening primarily to lobbyists and political action groups who are their primary source of campaign funding, remaining unaware of the true needs of their constituents. They are "professional politicians" and, in order to advance their careers, they need to be on the campaign trail at all times which gives these special interest groups their power over them.

As the economic, technical and social make up of their constituents change, the professional politicians do not. They cannot truly be representatives of the majority of the people. The Tea Party's efforts to dislodge the individual representatives from their seats are commendable; however, they are inefficient. They must act in every election.

A onetime solution to the problem is needed. We must change the political picture completely and permanently or else the new politicians become professional politicians as well. The answer lies in a constitutional amendment which establishes term limits, outlines financial benefits and limits campaign funding only to individuals and not to groups of individuals. Such an amendment would help ensure that the people that we send to represent us in our government will respond to the needs of their constituents.

I would be fully behind such an effort and I believe that many other concerned citizens would also be supportive.

Turning Words into Actions

I highly recommend Rebecca Sojka for our city council.

We have had the honor of meeting and getting to know her through Optimist Club here in Twin Falls. While at a membership picnic for our club, we sat at Rebecca's table and were very impressed with the fact that she really wanted to stay involved in our community.

We learned that she was chosen from among many well-qualified people to fill a vacated seat on the council. She was amazed that she was chosen because she said that there were other people probably more qualified than her but that she was very happy to have been appointed.

She may be young but it has been refreshing to listen to her on issues and know that she not only takes advice on issues but takes the time to research them and come up with her own opinion. What she says she will do, she does. She is a young woman of integrity, honesty and genuine interest in Twin Falls. We were leaving a meeting on Friday and watched Rebecca move another candidate's sign away from a bush that was hiding their name — now that is integrity!

A Vote for Loyalty

Randy Hawkins and his wife Kathleen have been my next-door neighbors for 20 years. They have consistently been good neighbors — kind, thoughtful, helpful and supportive.

I have observed Randy consistently going to work a few hours early each morning with loyalty to his employer to build great business relationships with his clients which are mutually profitable.

Over the years, we have had productive discussions about political events and business practices. Always, his views have been shared thoughtfully, with understanding and have always been informative and helpful. I am always impressed positively with his understanding grasp of situations and thoughtful analysis of possible solutions to problems facing our community and nation.

Editor's note

All election-related letters must be received by the Times-News by 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 1. This ensures that the letters can be verified before publication. The last day the Times-News will publish letters to the editor related to the election will be Monday, Nov. 7. The paper does not run letters to the editor endorsing candidates the day of voting.

I am confident that as we elect Randy Hawkins as Burley City councilman, he will serve energetically, consistently, with understanding and loyalty, to make ours an even better community.

Talkington Will be Too Productive

I can think of at least three reasons not to vote for my husband, Chris Talkington, for Twin Falls City Council, Seat 4:

First, I won't see him Monday evenings, given the hours spent deliberating city issues of monumental importance. He seldom misses a meeting.

Second, dinner could be unusually boring when the main topics of conversation include how often to seal coat a street or the dynamics of sewer plants.

Lastly, we won't use caller ID because he will insist on answering the public's phone calls.

I know his experience providing economic growth to Twin Falls and not raising property taxes may sound exciting to some of you. And yes, he is thoughtful, a good listener and all that. And the lawn still needs mowed and the garbage taken out.

JUVENILE JUSTICE CHALLENGES

The following editorial appeared in Wednesday's Washington Post:

For decades, Washington has been an indispensable partner to state and local governments in dealing with juvenile justice challenges. But that partnership will be endangered if Congress gets its way.

The federal government awards grants to states and localities that adopt policies proven effective in preventing juvenile delinquency or in dealing with youths who run into trouble with the law.

The amounts in question are a pittance when compared to the overall federal budget, but they are critical to maintaining policies.

House lawmakers would eliminate funding altogether for the delinquency-prevention component and cut the latter program by roughly one-third. The Senate approach cuts 27 percent and 38 percent, respectively. The Obama administration is asking for an $18 million increase for the first program and an $8 million boost for the latter.

When Pumpkins Fly: Cannon Builders Craft Contraptions for Cause

IDAHO PRESS-TRIBUNE

NAMPA • Three amateur artillery teams took aim at targets in a field Sunday afternoon to benefit Canyon County Habitat for Humanity, their air-powered cannons lobbing pumpkins thousands of feet and reducing wooden doors to splinters.

It was a perfect day for the fourth annual Great Pumpkin Launch, hosted by the Whistle family on their Nampa farm. Clear blue skies and temperatures in the high 60s greeted onlookers as gourds flew through the air like cannonballs. A horn blast warned onlookers before each powerful burst of air, followed by the audible whistle of a pumpkin speeding away at near-supersonic velocities.

Sunday's event was just for fun, and to raise money for the needy in Canyon County. But competitive pumpkin launching is serious business, culminating in the annual World Champion Punkin Chunkin event in Delaware.

So just how far can these home-build howitzers launch a gourd?

"I have shot 3,900 feet," pumpkin cannoneer Justin Harrison said of his trailer-mounted contraption. "I've shot a slug of ice over a mile. ... This is a top cannon in the world for distance. If you go to the World Champion Punkin Chunkin, and you look at how far everybody shot, anything within 4,000 feet is top six."

Harrison's machine can throw a pumpkin so far, in fact, that it's nearly impossible to track its path — they tend to disappear from view near the peak of their arc. And they can do serious damage to anything that gets in their way.

"I can literally put a pumpkin through a car," Harrison said. "I don't care what part — not the engine, but anywhere in the body — without breaking the pumpkin. Through sheet metal, both sides."

Wayne Richey, another local cannon builder, had perhaps the most unique design — his device was made to look like a giant double-barreled shotgun. And, he said, it takes a certain caliber of person to participate in this activity.

"Fairly sharp people build these. These are real guns," Richey said with a laugh. "The people that do this aren't rednecks, they're fairly competent people. Very capable and intelligent."

In addition to pumpkin launching, Sunday's event also featured a small farmers' market, live music from the High Desert Band, and games for the kids. All proceeds benefit the Canyon County chapter of Habitat for Humanity, which builds homes for those in need throughout the community.

"We just finished building a home in Caldwell. It's going to close by Thanksgiving probably," executive director Marcia Davis said. "And we just started another house in Nampa. We're building that one in conjunction with Nampa School Districts."

And, Davis continued, Habitat always needs help. Anyone who can swing a hammer or work in their building materials thrift store is invited to volunteer. Of course, cash donations are always welcome.

"It's expensive to build a house," she said with a laugh.

Community Garden Helps N. Idaho Student Grow

BY BRIAN WALKER
Coeur d'Alene Press

POST FALLS • A community garden has helped Kylie Hancock grow out of her shell and help those in need.

"I was kind of a shy person because I didn't grow up around a lot of people," the senior at New Vision High said.

Mark Jones, the garden's organizer, said the power of the garden isn't just assisting area seniors and others who could use fresh fruits and vegetables. It's making a difference in the lives of students such as Hancock.

"Kylie has really come into her own," Jones said. "She was one of the inaugural students involved in the layout of the garden three years ago. She was a bashful kid to start with, but after a couple years of participating in the garden, she's grown a life of her own."

Hancock has been instrumental in diversifying the garden's activities.

Last year she led an apple juice project in which 2,000 pounds of apples were made into juice after a processor was borrowed from an area farmer. Students made their own labels and did the bottling themselves at the senior center.

She's also assisted with a "farm to schools" project in which produce from the garden made its way to five schools for students.

Hancock worked with the school district's former food services director Annie Mader to make the program a reality.

"Gardening has always been a passion of mine; I'm a nature type of person," Hancock said. "I helped out my grandma a lot."

Hancock said she also enjoyed reupholstering chairs at the senior center with fellow students last year after the facility was flooded by water from a broken pipe.

This year Hancock is active in promoting the garden's activities. She has compiled a PowerPoint presentation featuring photos of the garden and presented it to groups at the senior center and local garden club.

Hancock said a few years ago she would have never thought about speaking in front of groups.

"New Vision and the garden have helped me be myself and more comfortable around everybody else," she said.

Hancock said she also started a pumpkin patch of her own this year. She plans to incorporate the gourds into school projects or wherever they're needed and wanted.

In her spare time, Hancock enjoys reading, drawing, picking mushrooms and listening to music.

Her mother Sharon said Kylie has always been a good kid, has done well in school and enjoys giving to others. But it's Kylie's leadership that has impressed Sharon the most lately.

"My kids grew up a lot different than most kids,"

"(Kylie) was a bashful kid to start with, but after a couple years of participating in the garden, she's grown a life of her own."

Mark Jones, organizer of the Post Falls community garden

Sharon said. "We lived in the mountains a couple years and they were home-schooled a lot. They weren't into a lot of kids' stuff. New Vision has allowed them to go more at their own pace."

WRITER

South-central Idaho's best and largest news provider seeks a talented writer to dig deep into the intersection of people and policy to consistently bring our readers the stories they'll keep talking about.

The assignment covers an eight-county area from which the right candidate will seek the most compelling stories from both rural and urban settings. Tasks will range from rooting out the reasons behind utility increases that hit thousands of pocketbooks to profiling a thinning group of Pearl Harbor attack survivors who call the area home.

The reporter's primary responsibility will be to find and develop six snappy enterprise stories per week and pitch in on other beats when needed, such as when our government reporter is covering the annual state legislative session in Boise.

Kootenai County Reports Spike in Home Burglaries

POST FALLS (AP) • Authorities in northern Idaho's Kootenai County suspect lagging unemployment in the region could be a reason behind a dramatic increase in home burglaries, including break-ins that are happening in broad daylight.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's department has received 91 reports of home burglaries over the past two months, more than four times the 21 burglaries reported during the same period last year.

The agency has received reports of suspicious people checking out residences by knocking on doors during the daytime hours and pretending to sell firewood or offer dog-walking services, said police department spokesman Maj. Ben Wolfinger.

Wolfinger said the poor economy and illegal drugs are likely the reasons for the increased break-ins.

"We expected some increases in theft and burglaries as the unemployment has drug on," Wolfinger told the Spokesman-Review. "That's certainly an issue. It's hard to say. Historically, where you've got a burglar, you've got a drug user. So we don't know if there's a new influx of addicts in the area."

The homes that have been targeted are blocked from the view of neighbors possibly by a long driveway or trees or shrubs. Sheriff's deputies have leads, but have not made any arrests in connection with the break-ins, Wolfinger said Monday.

Police Arrest Scores of Protesters in Atlanta

Protesters link arms across Peachtree Street in Atlanta early Tuesday as police move in to make arrests after Mayor Kasim Reed revoked his executive order allowing the protesters to camp in Woodruff Park.

OAKLAND, Calif. • The display of police force in Oakland, Calif., and Atlanta has unnerved some anti-Wall Street protesters.

While demonstrators in other cities have built a working relationship with police and city leaders, they wondered on Wednesday how long the good spirit would last and whether they could be next. Will they have to face riot gear-clad officers and tear gas that their counterparts in Oakland, Calif., faced Tuesday? Or will they be handcuffed and hauled away in the middle of the night like protesters in Atlanta? “Yes, we’re afraid. Is this the night they’re going to sneak in?” said activist William Buster of Occupy Wall Street, where the movement began last month to protest what they see as corporate greed. “Is this the night they might use unreasonable force?” he asked. An Iraq War veteran marching with demonstrators suffered a cracked skull in the chaos between officers and protesters in Oakland, further raising concern among some in the movement. Scott Olsen, a 24-year-old Marine veteran, was in critical condition Wednesday after he had been struck, said a spokesman for Highland Hospital in Oakland. It was not clear exactly what type of object hit the veteran or who might have thrown it, though Guy’s group said it was lobbed by officers. Police Chief Howard Jordan said at a news conference that the events leading up to Olsen’s injury would be investigated as vigorously as a fatal police shooting. The message, meanwhile, from officials in cities where other encampments have sprung up was simple: We’ll keep working with

Longevity’s Secrets Sought in DNA of 100-year-olds

BY MALCOLM RITTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK • George Eberhardt turned 107 last month, and scientists would love to know how he and other older folks like him made it that far. So he’s going to hand over some of his DNA. He’s one of 100 centenarians taking part in a project announced Wednesday that will examine some of the oldest citizens with one of the newest scientific tools: whole-genome sequencing, the deciphering of a person’s complete collection of DNA. Scientists think DNA from very old healthy people could offer clues to how they lived so long. And that could one day lead to medicines to help the rest of us stay disease-free longer. By the time you reach, say, 105, “it’s very hard to get there without some genetic advantages,” says Dr. Thomas Perls, a geriatrics expert at Boston University. Perls is helping find centenarians for the Archon Genomics X Prize competition. The X Prize Foundation, best known for a spaceflight competition, is offering $10 million

Obama Announces Help for Student Loan Borrowers

He said plan will help not just individuals, but the nation, because graduates will have more money to spend on things like buying homes.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • President Barack Obama recalled his struggles with student loan debt as he unveiled a plan Wednesday that could give millions of young people some relief on their payments. Speaking at the University of Colorado Denver, Obama said that he and his wife, Michelle, together owed more than $120,000 in law school debt that took nearly a decade to pay off. He said that sometimes he’d have to make monthly payments to multiple lenders, and the debt meant they were not only paying for their own degrees but saving for their daughters’ college funds simultaneously. “I’ve been in your shoes. We did not come from a wealthy family,” Obama said to cheers. Obama said it’s never been more important to get a college education, but it’s also never been more expensive. Obama said his plan will help not just individuals, but the nation, because graduates will have more money to spend on things like buying homes. “Our economy needs it right now and your future could use a boost right now,” Obama said. Obama’s plan will accelerate a measure passed by Congress that reduces the maximum required payment on student loans from 15 percent of discretionary income annually to 10 percent. He will put it into effect in 2012, instead of 2014. In addition, the White House says the remaining debt would be forgiven after 20 years, instead of 25. About 1.6 million borrowers could be affected. He will also allow borrowers who have a loan from the Federal Family Education Loan Program and a direct loan from the government to consolidate them into one. The consolidated loan would carry an interest rate of up to a half percentage point less than before. This could affect 5.8 million borrowers. Student loans are the No. 2 source of household debt. The president’s announcement came on the same day as a new report on tuition costs from the College Board. It showed that average in-state tuition and fees at four-year public colleges rose $631 this fall, or 8.3 percent, compared with a year ago. Nationally, the cost of a full credit load has passed $8,000, an all-time high. Student loan debt is a common concern voiced by Occupy Wall Street protesters. Obama’s plan could help him shore up re-election support among young voters, an important voting bloc in his 2008 election.

Europe Reaches Key Deal to Help Greece

BRUSSELS (AP) • European leaders agreed Thursday morning on a crucial plan to reduce Greece’s debts and provide it with more rescue loans so that the faltering country can eventually dig out from under its debt burden. After a marathon summit, EU President Herman Van Rompuy said that the deal will reduce Greece’s debt to 120 percent of its GDP in 2020. Under current conditions, it would have grown to 180 percent. That will require banks to take on 50 percent losses on their Greek bond holdings — a hard-fought deal that negotiators will now have to sell to individual bondholders. Van Rompuy also said the eurozone and International Monetary Fund — which have both been propping the country up with loans since May of 2010 — will give the country another 100 billion euros ($140 billion). That’s slightly less than the amount agreed in July, presumably because the banks will now pick up more of the slack.

Republican Candidates’ Tax Plans Would Benefit Wealthy Americans

BY STEVEN THOMMA
McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON • The Republican Party is catching flat-tax fever, setting up an election-year fight with Democrats over whether wealthier Americans should pay more taxes or get tax cuts. Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney became the latest to punch the tax button Wednesday, telling a Virginia audience that he’ll soon update his economic proposal to spell out how to flatten the tax code. A day earlier, rival Rick Perry proposed an optional flat 20 percent tax on income. Both followed Herman Cain’s pitch for a flat 9 percent income tax as part of his 9-9-9 plan, which helped him jump to the top tier of candidates for their party’s 2012 nomination. Newt Gingrich and Michele Bachmann also support a flat tax. A flat tax — so called because it would set one tax rate for all income groups while taking away many or all deductions — would simplify taxes. It also would almost certainly give big tax cuts to wealthy Americans.

REMBRANDT'S 'NIGHT WATCH' SHINES UNDER NEW LIGHTING

AMSTERDAM • Rembrandt's "Night Watch" may need a different nickname after the painting was put under new lighting on Wednesday that makes it look like a day scene. The change at the national Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam is startling, as characters once barely visible or relegated to the background now stand out in vivid color. The 1642 painting was commissioned for one of Amsterdam's citizen militias.

CORONER: WINEHOUSE DIED FROM ALCOHOL

LONDON • Amy Winehouse drank herself to death. That was the ruling of a coroner's inquest into the death of the Grammy-winning soul singer, who died with empty vodka bottles in her room and lethal amounts of alcohol in her blood — more than five times the British drunk driving limit. Coroner Suzanne Greenaway gave a verdict of "death by misadventure," saying Wednesday the singer suffered accidental alcohol poisoning when she resumed drinking after weeks of abstinence.

in prize money to researchers who decipher the complete DNA code from 100 people older than 100. The contest will be judged on accuracy, completeness and the speed and cost of sequencing.

The contest is a relaunch of an older competition with a new focus on centenarians, and it's the second sequencing project involving the elderly to be announced this month.

Genome pioneer J. Craig Venter says the centenarian project is just a first step in revealing the genetic secrets of a long and healthy life.

"We need 10,000 genomes, not 100, to start to understand the link between genetics, disease and wellness," said Venter, who is co-chairing the X Prize contest.

The 107-year-old Eberhardt of Chester, N.J., played and taught tennis until he was 94. He said he's participating in the X Prize project because he's interested in science and technology. It's not clear his genes will reveal much. Nobody else in his extended family reached 100, and he thinks only a couple reached 90, he said in a telephone interview.

So why does he think he lived so long? He credits 70 years of marriage to his wife, Marie. She in turn cites his "intense interest in so many things" over a lifetime, from building radios as a child to pursuing a career in electronics research.

But scientists believe there's more to it, and they want to use genome sequencing to investigate. Dr. Richard Cawthon of the University of Utah, who is seeking longevity genes by other means, says it may turn up genetic features that protect against multiple diseases or that slow the process of aging in general.

Protective features of a centenarian's DNA can even overcome less-than-ideal lifestyles, says Dr. Nir Barzilai of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. His own study of how centenarians live found that "as a group, they haven't done the right things."

Many in the group he studied were obese or overweight. Many were smokers, and few exercised or followed a vegetarian diet. His oldest participant, who died this month just short of her 110th birthday, smoked for 95 years.

"She had genes that protected her against the environment," Barzilai said. One of her sisters died at 102, and one of her brothers is 105 and still manages a hedge fund.

Earlier this month, Scripps Health of San Diego announced a different genome project involving the elderly. The Scripps Wellbeing Study will receive the complete genomes of 1,000 people age 80 and older from a sequencing company.

you. Just respect your neighbors and keep the camps clean and safe.

Business owners and residents have complained in recent weeks about assaults, drunken fights and sanitation problems. Officials are trying to balance their rights and uphold the law while honoring protesters' free speech rights.

"I understand the frustration the protesters feel ... about inequity in our country as well as Wall Street greed," Baltimore Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake said. "I support their right to free speech but we also have rules and laws."

Some cities, such as Providence, R.I., are moving ahead with plans to evict activists. But from Tampa, Fla., to Boston, police and city leaders say they will continue to try to work with protesters to address problems in the camps.

In Oakland, officials initially supported the protests, with Mayor Jean Quan saying that sometimes "democracy is messy."

But tensions reached a boiling point after a sexual assault, a severe beating and a fire were reported and paramedics were denied access to the camp, according to city officials. They also cited concerns about rats, fire hazards and public urination.

Demonstrators disputed the city's claims, saying that volunteers collect garbage and recycling every six hours, that water is boiled before being used to wash dishes and that rats have long infested the park.

When riot gear-clad police moved in early Tuesday, they were pelted with rocks, bottles and utensils from people in the camp's kitchen area. They emptied the camp near city hall of people, and barricaded the plaza.

Protesters were taken away in plastic handcuffs, most of them arrested on suspicion of illegal lodging.

Demonstrators returned later in the day to march and retake the plaza. They were met by police officers in riot gear. Several small skirmishes broke out and officers cleared the area by firing tear gas.

The scene repeated itself several times just a few blocks away in front of the plaza.

Tensions would build as protesters edged ever closer to the police line and reach a breaking point with a demonstrator hurling a bottle or rock, prompting police to respond with another round of gas.

The chemical haze hung in the air for hours, new blasts clouding the air before the previous fog could dissipate.

The number of protesters diminished with each round of tear gas. Police estimated that there were roughly 1,000 demonstrators at the first clash following the march. About 100 were arrested.

On Wednesday, Oakland officials allowed protesters back into the plaza where their 15-day-old encampment had been raided but said people would be prohibiting from spending the night, potentially bringing another clash with police.

In Atlanta, police in riot gear and SWAT teams arrested 53 people in Woodruff Park, many of whom had camped out there for weeks as part of a widespread movement that is protesting the wealth disparity between the rich and everyone else.

Flat Tax

Republicans say cutting taxes, especially on the wealthy, helps spur investment, economic growth and hiring.

At the same time, most of the Republican candidates propose other changes that also would mean big tax cuts for high-income Americans, such as eliminating taxes on dividend income or capital gains, and eliminating the estate tax, which Republicans call the "death tax."

Their push comes at the same time that Democratic President Barack Obama is pushing to raise taxes on higher-income Americans. He has proposed raising taxes on those making more than $200,000 and has endorsed a push by Senate Democrats to raise taxes on income above $1 million.

The debate comes as new data show that the wealthiest Americans have greatly increased their share of U.S. income in recent decades. The richest 1 percent had 17 percent of American income in 2007, more than double their 8 percent share in 1979, according to a report this week from the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office. Protest over growing income inequality is also among the issues driving Occupy Wall Street and similar protests around the country.

There's little doubt that the Republican presidential candidates' proposals would cut taxes on the wealthy.

Most would eliminate taxes on all or some profits on investments. Most such taxes now are paid by wealthier Americans.

Most also would eliminate the estate tax, which applies to estates of $7 million or more and is paid by about 3,270 families year, according to the nonpartisan Tax Policy Center, a joint project of the Brookings Institution and the Urban Institute,

"These are really wealthy families," said Robertson Williams, an analyst at the Tax Policy Center.

A flat tax on income would take away some deductions but lower the rate. Perry, for example, would cut it to 20 percent. Gingrich would cut it to 15 percent. The wealthiest Americans now pay a 35 percent marginal rate on income above $379,950. A detailed analysis by the Tax Policy Center found that the Cain plan would mean an average tax cut of $455,000 for those with incomes above $1 million.

Tracey Richter Roberts confers with Karmen Anderson, one of her attorneys, during a motions hearing Sept. 22 in Fort Dodge, Iowa. The Iowa mother is charged with first-degree murder in the death of a 20-year-old neighbor shot to death in the woman's bedroom in 2001.

Prosecutor: Woman Shot Neighbor to Keep Him Quiet

BY RYAN J. FOLEY
 Associated Press

FORT DODGE, Iowa • Iowa prosecutors tried Wednesday to debunk a woman's long-held claim that she was the victim of a home invasion when she shot a 20-year-old neighbor in 2001 and started building their case that she killed him as part of a bizarre plot to frame her ex-husband.

Prosecutor Douglas Hammerand said in an opening statement that Tracey Richter committed first-degree murder in the Dec. 13, 2001, death of Dustin Wehde at her home in Early, a small town in northwest Iowa. He said Richter had Wehde write a diary saying he had been hired by her ex-husband to kill her, but then she killed Wehde hours later after they were interrupted and she worried he would tell others about what he had done.

Richter, 45, appeared to fight back tears as defense attorney Scott Bandstra repeated her version of events in his opening statement: Richter was home with her three children when Wehde and another man broke in and strangled her with pantyhose before she was able to break free, secure her children in a bedroom, unlock the gun safe in her bedroom, grab two guns and shoot Wehde nine times. Bandstra said the alleged second intruder fled. At one point, the attorney even took his tie off and put it around Richter's neck to illustrate how she was allegedly choked.

But one prosecution witness, an emergency responder who treated Richter, said the red mark on the front of her neck was not consistent with strangulation. The deputy who arrived first on the scene said Richter told him that two intruders, not one, had fled the house. And a friend who planned to spend the night at Richter's home that evening said she was surprised when Richter cancelled their plans hours before the shooting.

The prosecution is expected to continue its case

Thursday in Fort Dodge. The jury of six men and six women listened intently to testimony and studied pictures of Wehde's dead body, Richter's bruised neck and the two-story Victorian home where the shooting happened.

Richter blew a kiss at her fiancé, who sat in the front row, as she entered court.

Hammerand told jurors the prosecution's case centers on a pink spiral notebook that investigators found in Wehde's car after the shooting. The diary appears to be in Wehde's handwriting and claims Richter's ex-husband John Pitman hired him to kill her and their 11-year-old son, Bert, and make it look like a murder-suicide. Hammerand said investigators decided to keep the notebook a secret because they knew anyone with knowledge of it was involved in the death. Richter told a friend a few months after the shooting that it had been found and would lead to Pitman's arrest.

Pitman, who divorced Richter in 1996, was seeking custody of Bert at the time, and a court hearing was scheduled in two months. Richter worried she would lose her child and Pitman's $1,000-per-month child support if Wehde told police he had created the diary, Hammerand said. The notebook contains details few people knew, such as the name of Pitman's divorce attorney, he said.

Hammerand said Wehde's writing in the notebook was interrupted mid-sentence when Richter's friend, Marie Friedman, showed up at her door, planning to spend the night. Friedman testified that no one answered the door for several minutes, but Richter came out as Wehde was leaving.

Friedman said she was surprised when Richter told her she could not stay over because she had to pick up Bert from basketball practice. They had planned a stay-over because her husband worked at Richter's husband's computer business and the men were away on business. She said she left after they had tea and talked for an hour.

Hammerand said Richter then had Wehde come over again, and she killed him in her bedroom, firing nine shots, including 3 to the back of the head that would have been instantly fatal.

Bandstra, the defense attorney, portrayed Wehde as an anti-social loner who had a history of mental health issues and aggressive behavior. He said prosecutors will not be able to prove that he had permission to be in Richter's home that night or that she had him write the diary.

Testimony from Friedman and her husband, Ray, backed up his description. Ray Friedman said he had played paintball with Wehde, thought he was deeply troubled and told his wife and Richter's then-husband, Michael Roberts, to stay away from him. Roberts was friendly with Wehde.

"Biblically speaking, he was not saved. I felt like he needed a savior," Ray Friedman testified. "I just feel like maybe he felt hopeless at the time."

Marie Friedman said Richter told her Wehde was at her home asking for work at the computer business, and she was glad when he left because he made her feel uncomfortable.

Both Friedmans, who now live in Florida, said they saw Richter at the hospital and she was distraught over the alleged home invasion and had red marks on her neck.

Weeks of Debt Talks Fail to Close Gap

BY DAVID ESPO
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Republicans on Congress' deficit-reduction super-committee outlined a plan Wednesday that includes spending cuts but none of the increases in tax revenue sought by Democrats, completing an initial exchange of offers that left the two sides far apart despite weeks of secret talks.

Officials also said the Democratic proposal on Tuesday and the GOP counter-proposal 24 hours later both included a provision to slow the inflationary increase in future Social Security benefits, suggesting it could become part of any compromise that might emerge.

The Republican offer calls for somewhat more than $2 trillion in deficit savings over a decade, according to officials in both parties. Less than half of that amount would come from increases in items such as Medicare premiums, the sale of public lands and airport fees — measures that increase government revenue without changing personal or corporate taxes.

Spending cuts include about $500 billion from Medicare over a decade and another $185 billion from Medicaid, these officials said.

By contrast, Democrats want $1.3 trillion in higher tax revenue, a similar amount in spending cuts and enough other savings elsewhere in the budget to finance a $450 billion jobs bill along the lines that President Barack Obama is recommending.

The officials who described the rival approaches did so on condition of anonymity, saying they were not authorized to provide details of the committee's confidential discussions. In private, each side also disparaged the other, providing yet another indication that the panel's deliberations have not shown significant progress.

Still, the exchange marked a quickening in the pace of activity by the committee after dozens of hours of closed-door meetings, and senior leaders in both parties are becoming more involved.

The panel of six Republicans and six Democrats has until Nov. 23 to recommend deficit savings of $1.2 trillion. But in fact, most if not all of the decisions must be made by early next month to give the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office time to render precise estimates on their costs and impact on future deficits.

Whatever the committee recommends must be approved by both houses of Congress in December if lawmakers want to avoid automatic spending cuts of $1.2 trillion across a range of federal programs.

There were signs of Democratic dissension one day after Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., outlined a proposal on behalf of his party's negotiators.

According to several officials, he called for $1.3 trillion in increased tax revenue over a decade, and $1.3 trillion in spending cuts. Another $1 trillion in savings would come from the presumed reduction of Pentagon costs in Iraq and Afghanistan and $500 billion more from a reduction in interest costs resulting from declining deficits.

Those savings would be on top of cuts that Congress approved earlier in the year of nearly $1 trillion.

PERRY SAYS 'NO DOUBT' OBAMA IS A CITIZEN

WASHINGTON (AP) • Republican presidential candidate Rick Perry said Wednesday that he has "no doubt" that President Barack Obama is an American citizen, staking out a definitive position on the matter after spending several days stoking widely debunked claims that the Democrat was born overseas.

Perry

Perry's comments come as he's struggling to right his troubled campaign, and as some Republicans question whether he's done irreparable damage to his run by dabbling in the so-called "birther" controversy in recent days.

Some Republicans privately worry that his comments about Obama's birth certificate may have endeared him to the party's conservative wing that questions the legitimacy of Obama's presidency but also may have started to marginalize the Texas governor from the larger electorate. That could put the general election at risk should Perry win the GOP nomination.

His comments certainly irked several GOP luminaries, like former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, who in recent days have urged Republican presidential candidates to stop raising the issue. Others, like Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour and campaign rival Jon Huntsman say it's bad for the GOP.

"If we take our eye off the ball called debt, if we take our eye off the ball called our position in the world — continue going with you know, two wars simultaneously — of course we can lose it," Utah's former governor said, speaking on ABC news' political webcast "Top Line" on Wednesday. "And if we kind of begin wasting time on the nonsensical and the silly issues like birtherism."

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

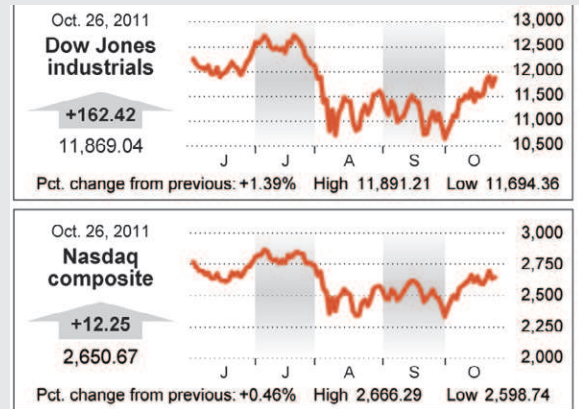

How the Major Stock Indexes Fared Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) • Stock indexes finished higher Wednesday following reports that China will come to the aid of Europe by investing in a financial rescue fund. Agence France-Presse reported that China has agreed to invest in Europe's financial rescue fund, which will be used to support struggling countries and banks in the European Union. The Dow Jones industrial average jumped more than 100 points after the report came out in the early afternoon.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 162.42, or 1.4 percent, to 11,869.04.

The S&P 500 rose 12.95, or 1.1 percent, to 1,242.

The Nasdaq composite rose 12.25, or 0.5 percent, to 2,650.67.

Writer Isaacson on Steve Jobs: 'I Just Listened'

Steve Jobs told Walter Isaacson he wanted him to write his biography because he's good at getting people to talk. "I just listened," said Isaacson, whose book, "Steve Jobs" (Simon & Schuster) went on sale Monday. Jobs, was a man full of deep contradictions, a product of 1960s counterculture who went on to found Apple Inc.

In an interview with the Associated Press yesterday, Isaacson said Jobs was a compelling storyteller with "fascinating stories." Sometimes, Jobs told tales two or three times, often with slight variations. But through more than 40 conversations with Jobs, as well as interviews with his family, close friends, co-workers and rivals, Isaacson painted a rich portrait of a complex figure.

THE 787 TAKES FLIGHT AND LIVES UP TO ITS PROMISE

BY SCOTT MAYEROWITZ
Associated Press

ABOARD ALL NIPPON AIRWAYS FLIGHT 7871 • It's the plane that is supposed to change the experience of flying.

No more stuffy noses, dry throats or severe fatigue. Larger windows to provide a stronger connection to the world outside. And mood lighting that can either ease jet lag or turn the plane into a nightclub at 40,000 feet.

And for the most part, Boeing's 787 succeeds. Flying it is more enjoyable. But it's still flying. Just because the plane is new doesn't mean the food will taste better or you won't be stuck in front of a kicking kid.

There has been plenty of hype surrounding the 787, a long-range plane marketed as The Dreamliner that carried its first passengers Wednesday on a four-hour flight from Tokyo to Hong Kong. It has been called "revolutionary" and "a game-changer."

And, indeed, a sleek design makes the plane stand out the moment you step on board. A higher ceiling — at least the perception of one — reduces claustrophobia. And natural light pours in, creating a welcoming feeling.

Maybe that 10-hour flight won't be so bad after all. Maybe.

The biggest benefit should come from features that fight jet lag. Those couldn't really be experienced by the 240 reporters and aviation enthusiasts who made the relatively short inaugural flight.

ITSUO INOUE • ASSOCIATED PRESS

All Nippon Airways Boeing 787 takes off for the new airplane's inaugural commercial flight to Hong Kong at Narita International Airport in Narita, east of Tokyo, Wednesday.

They include a doubling of the humidity, to 16 percent, and bringing the cabin's pressure closer to what it feels like on the ground. Planes are normally pressurized to 8,000 feet, higher than any point on the East Coast. Air inside the 787 is made to feel the equivalent of 6,000, slightly higher than Denver. The pressure and humidity changes should lead to fewer headaches and leave passengers with more energy after long trips.

Voice-activated iPhone Could Snarl Laws on Drivers' Texting

BY MAGGIE CLARK
Stateline.org

WASHINGTON • Apple's iPhone 4S is one of several new devices that make it possible to send text messages with both hands on the wheel. As drivers begin to use these new technologies, states may have to decide what they will and won't allow on the road.

When Apple introduced its new iPhone 4S earlier this month, tech analysts raved about the phone's voice-activated personal assistant, nicknamed "Siri." One thing they loved was how Siri can be used to dictate text messages without typing — or read incoming texts aloud — a convenience that seemed perfect for life behind a steering wheel. "Big news for drivers," declared The New York Times' David Pogue. The Wall Street Journal's Walt Mossberg noted that he'd had success using Siri to dictate emails and text messages in the car.

There's just one problem. Texting while driving is illegal in dozens of states. And while some states have written their laws to allow for hands-free use of emerging voice-activated texting technologies, many others haven't.

For instance, laws in Maine and Michigan disallow reading text messages while driving — something that iPhone 4S users may be compelled to do if they want to spell-check Siri's dictation before sending a text. Connecticut and Maryland prohibit text messaging from handheld devices, a possible pitfall since Siri users must push the iPhone's home button to activate the system. Vermont's statute bans the sending of electronic communications, making no allowance for hands-free texting.

Siri is not the only voice-activated application available to drivers. Similar applications, including Vlingo and Sensory, can be downloaded to cell phones. Carmakers are in on the action, too. Ford and BMW have designed speech-to-text systems for some of their newest vehicles, allowing drivers to hear messages as they are received and dictate messages that the car's systems will send.

Locals' Secret

A private landowner's goodwill is your ticket to Vineyard Lake, a fantastic but hidden bit of wilderness just minutes from Twin Falls.

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

EDEN • The locals would like to keep Vineyard Lake to themselves.

Beloved by generations of Magic Valley explorers and swimmers, this clear jewel of a lake hidden away in the Snake River Canyon is little known in wider circles. You won't find signs or tidy trails leading to the spring-fed Vineyard Lake, and that's just fine with nearby residents.

"They love it, and they prefer that these things be kept local knowledge and not common knowledge," said Jenny Everton of Twin Falls. "Those little secret spots, people like to believe they're the only ones that know."

There's good reason for reticence.

The lake and the springs that feed it are on public land. But hikers' most practical route down to the lake is not, and any disrespectful use could close it off.

Jane Ehlers' husband, David, owns the rim land on the east side of Vineyard Lake and allows hikers to cross the couple's cow pasture, she said.

"It's one of those things you can't avoid, because of the attraction there," Jane Ehlers said. "We don't mind if they cross, if they don't do any damage."

Hunting on the Ehlerses' land is by permission only, but hikers don't have to ask before setting off for the lake, she said. "We're trying to trust."

That could change if her husband finds property damage, she added. "If people really tear things up, he might close off the access."

A Sweet Spot

It's worth behaving yourself here.

Vineyard Lake is a refreshing oasis in a desert landscape — a quiet bit of wilderness where you can watch wildlife or ponder the fantastic shapes within the Snake River Canyon's walls. Follow the lake's inlet for a couple of hundred yards and you'll find something even more surprising:

Please see SECRET, O3

Getting to Vineyard Lake

The attraction: This small, clear lake nestled inside a Snake River Canyon bowl is fed by springs in the canyon wall.

The lake and springs are on U.S. Bureau of Land Management land; the BLM allows but doesn't promote recreation there. The private owner of canyon-rim land east of the lake allows hikers to access Vineyard Lake through a pasture.

It's a short but rough hike into the canyon — not one for children, inferior shoes or a careless attitude.

Find the trail: Start at the Garden of Eden truck stop on Idaho Highway 50, north of the Hansen Bridge. (Hint: Many locals still call the truck stop "Traveler's Oasis.") Turn west onto 1010 South. After a few curves, the road will become 1000 South. Then it will turn 90 degrees to the right and become 1000 East. Immediately before reaching an overpass, turn left (west) onto 900 South. The paved road will curve a few times before ending at the T formed by a farmer's dirt road.

Turn left onto the dirt road. After four-tenths of a mile, you'll spot a wide gap between two fence posts on the right side of the road. A third fence post offset between them allows hikers into a cow pasture while keeping cows from escaping. You're entering private property; be respectful.

Where to hike: Walk directly west from that cow-pasture entrance, following another fenceline. After a couple of jogs in the fence, the path will veer to your right. When you see a cluster of trees on your left, it's time to leave the cow path and start down into the canyon on your left.

The BLM doesn't maintain a trail to Vineyard Lake, but frequent use has made it fairly easy to find. It's a short hike down to the lake, but expect to scramble over big rocks in a number of places.

THE FIVE BEST PLACES FOR FALL HORSEBACK RIDING

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

There's more than one way to see the outdoors. Suzie Richardson's favorite is on horseback, whether close to home or on trails farther away.

That's the neat thing about south-central Idaho, the Twin Falls woman said — its plentiful places for good riding.

What makes a place perfect for an outing with horses? Terrain that's easy on their hooves, pretty scenery and not a lot of people, she said.

If you own a horse, here are five places to consider for your fall rides:

Niagara Springs

On a recent Sunday, Richardson met up with friend Joann Cary to ride trails at Niagara Springs in Wendell.

Richardson was on her palomino, Wishy, while Cary rode Rio.

"I just started riding there in the spring when I found out about it," Richardson said. "There's sand. It's easy on the horses' feet."

The scenery is mixed, she said. There's desert and places where there's more foliage.

Fall is a great time to ride because of the colored leaves. On some parts of the trail you can even catch glimpses of the Snake River, she said. "It's really pretty."

From Jerome, take Bob Barton Road west to the Rex Leland Highway (1950 East). Follow it south until it turns into Niagara Springs Road, which enters Niagara Springs State Park.

Big Smoky

The farther north you go, the more mountainous and wooded scenery you'll see.

One of Cary's favorite places to ride is near the Big Smoky Guard Station near the South Fork of the Boise River in Fairfield. Terrain is dirt paths with lots of hills and stretches of open fields.

"There are nice big mountains there that have some sequence," she said. "But there's nice big valleys to ride in."

Her favorite thing about the area: "You're in God's country. I really enjoy God's creations, nature and the mountains. Horseback riding is the most peaceful, stressless thing you can do."

To get there from Fairfield, travel 18 miles north on Forest Road 094 and one mile west on FR 337.

Devil's Corral

Richardson likes to ride in desert terrain. One of the best places for that is Devil's Corral, north of the Perrine Bridge in Jerome.

The area offers a lot of up-and-down trails, she said, and there usually aren't a lot of people around. The people who do use the area, however, often are ATVers and dirt bikers. But Richardson said the users she has encountered have always been considerate.

"Most of the people I run into are good about slowing down when they see you on horseback," she said. "It's been a great area to ride."

Storing Your Bike for Old Man Winter

Don't let this happen to you: Open the garage to start your motorcycle, only to find that the bike's battery is dead, the sparkplug is caked with gunk, and there's likely something else going on with the engine.

A couple of hundred dollars later, the bike is back in your garage. You've learned a tough — and rather expensive — lesson, but you're ready to ride.

This all happened to me earlier this year because I had not properly stored my motorcycle during the cold months that it sat in my garage, unused.

Andrew Weeks

Trails and Tales

I don't want you to go through the same thing. So here's what you should do to your motorcycle or off-road machine before Old Man Winter arrives. It might save you some frustration and money come spring.

• Remove the battery and store it in a dry, warm place, said Rob Glodowski, vice president of Action Cycles 'n Sleds in Twin Falls. A battery starts to drain if it sits unused for a couple of weeks; cold temperatures also lessen battery life. If you have $50, you might consider buying a self-metering charger that keeps the battery freshly charged all year long. Simply hook it up to the battery and plug it into an electrical outlet.

• Draining fuel from your bike is a good idea, Glodowski said, because condensation can show up inside the tank. Or you can use a stabilizer in the fuel that will help keep it from varnishing.

• Drain water and check antifreeze levels of liquid-cooled machines. This is especially important for watercraft. Otherwise, ice can form in radiators and lead to hefty repair costs.

• Leave the sparkplug intact. Removing plugs leaves holes in the engine block, allowing dust particles and/or moisture can get into the engine.

I was going to take my bike for one last ride before I prep it for winter. But I had a change of mind when I woke up this morning: It's already getting cold out there.

Oregon Has New Wolf Pack in Snake River Country

BY JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

Oregon has a new wolf pack in the Hells Canyon area along the Idaho border, and two members of the state's original pack have split off to roam new territory in the central part of the state — developments that move the state closer to taking wolves off the state endangered species list.

State wolf coordinator Russ Morgan said Tuesday that tracks show at least five wolves in the Snake River unit, near the northern end of the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area on the Idaho border. Photos show at least one pup. Morgan emphasized that they have only been able to document five, and there could well be more.

Morgan said biologists have picked up scat samples and sent them off for genetic analysis to see where the new pack's members have come from — Idaho or an existing Oregon pack.

This is the fourth pack to establish in Oregon since wolves introduced in Idaho started moving west in the 1990s. Once four packs produce two pups a year for three years running, the species can be taken off the state endangered species list, though protections would remain in place.

Meanwhile, radio collar tracking data shows two young males from the Imnaha pack in northeastern Oregon have gone west into Central Oregon. Two others went east to Idaho. The Imnaha pack was the first to produce pups and has become the most notorious because it is the only one to have preyed on livestock.

Two of the four remaining members are under a kill order from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. The Oregon Court of Appeals has put a temporary stay on the order while it considers a challenge from the conservation group Oregon Wild.

"Generally it's good news for wolf recovery in Oregon if ODFW or poachers don't shoot them," said Rob

Klavins, of Oregon Wild. "This should provide the state an opportunity to refocus on conservation rather than killing wolves at the request of people who think the only good wolf is a dead wolf."

Oregon Cattlemen's Association President Bill Hoyt and northeastern Oregon rancher Todd Nash did not immediately return telephone calls for comment.

Morgan said there have been no reports of livestock attacks linked to the new Snake River pack or the two young wolves roaming Central Oregon.

The 3-year-old wolf known as OR-3 left the Imnaha pack in May. A tracking flight picked up his collar in July in Wheeler County and the Ochoco Mountains at the end of September.

The wolf known as OR-7 left the Imnaha pack Sept. 10 and has gone through six counties — Baker, Grant, Harney, Crook, Deschutes and, most recently, Lake.

"Every time he shows up somewhere, within a week or two he is somewhere else," said Morgan. "There is no way to tell where he ends up. For all we know he may end up in California."

Things You Should Know About Elk Tags

Question: "I purchased a sportsman's package and was getting ready to redeem my elk tag receipt for a Sawtooth B elk tag when I was told the quota had already been reached. I have been elk hunting this unit for a number of years and now I can't get a tag for my regular area. What's up with that?"

Answer: There are two issues affecting this situation. First, when you purchase a sportsmen's package you prepay for a hunting license and an array of big game tags and permits, including an elk tag. The specific tag you choose is not determined until you actually obtain the tag at a license vendor.

When the sportsmen's package is issued, the vendor issues you an elk tag receipt redeemable at a later time at any license vendor for the actual tag you select. So, while you have paid for a tag, you have not selected and/or been issued the tag for the specific zone.

Many hunters wait until their hunting plans are firmed up before they redeem their receipts for a specific elk tag. The key is to not wait too long.

Second, some elk zones have experienced down turns in population. Rather than implement controlled hunts in those units, general A and/or B elk tags have been capped to restrict hunter numbers. Tags for these "capped" zones are sold over the counter on a first-come, first-served basis.

Gary Hompland
Ask the Officer

When hunters decide they want tags from a capped elk zone they should not wait to redeem their receipts or purchase their tags. These capped zones never used to sell out but this year sales quotas have been reached in over half of the elk zones with general tags quotas.

Waiting until the last minute exposes the hunter to the risk of not getting a tag in the desired area when the quota is filled.

The department works hard to maximize hunter's options and hunting opportunity as biologists strive to balance population goals with various social limitations, sportsmen desires, and habitat restrictions.

There still are many general hunt elk zones with tags available. At this point your only option is to select a zone with unlimited tags or a zone where the cap has not yet been reached. Your local vendor or your regional Fish and Game office will have a list of elk zones with tags available.

Gary Hompland, regional conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, may be reached at 324-4350.

Trip Down Big Piney River Long on Scenery and Hard-fighting Fish

BY BRENT FRAZEE
The Kansas City Star

LICKING, Mo. • Rich Wade pulled his johnboat up to a gravel bar in the shadows of a bluff on the Big Piney River, and paused to pay his respects to a special place in his life.

"This is where I scattered the ashes of a good friend who just loved being on this river," said Wade, 69, a longtime guide on the scenic float stream. "He had hired my dad and me for 35 years to take him float fishing here."

"He told me long ago that he wanted part of his ashes scattered here, the other part at a place where he went trout fishing. There are a lot of people who get attached to this ol' river."

Count Wade as one of them. He has lived most of his life on the beautiful river that cuts through the southeast Missouri Ozarks.

He inherited his dad's love for fishing and guiding on the river, and for the most part, that's all he's ever done for a living.

Several days a week, he takes customers into a beautiful and secluded world that few get a chance to experience.

He paddles through gurgling riffles, past towering bluffs, through narrow valleys and over clear pools where fish scatter as the johnboat approaches.

Wildlife often outnumber humans in this world. In fact, Wade said, "There are many floats when we won't see another person."

That's just the way Wade likes it.

"I wouldn't even have to catch a fish to enjoy myself on the Big Piney," he said. "It's just so peaceful and relaxing being out here."

"It's a great place to work, I'll tell you that."

But there are many days when Wade is so busy catching fish he doesn't get a chance to totally soak in his beautiful surroundings. The Big Piney is chock-full with hard-fighting smallmouth bass, lurking behind the rocks and boulders that can be seen below the clear water. And Wade is a master at catching them.

"When I was 7 or 8, I watched my dad catch a 6-pound smallmouth on a canepole and a minnow, and I thought, 'This is for me,'"

Wade said with a laugh. "I remember how I'd paddle my brother and a friend down river and we'd always catch fish — sometimes limits of smallmouths 2 to 3 pounds."

Wade started guiding when he was 12, helping his dad with some his longtime customers. From the first trip, Wade didn't disappoint. "We caught limits and I got a nice tip," he said. "We had a lot of smallmouths back in those days."

And the Big Piney still does. Wade doesn't have to reminisce about the "good old days" when he talks about the Big Piney's glory days.

In many ways, these are the good old days. The beautiful stream still is home to a thriving population of smallmouths.

On the right day, The Big Piney still provides a glimpse of its greatness.

Days like a recent Sunday.

As Wade and I prepared to launch at Teeter's Eddy for a six-mile float to Slabtown, he looked at the gray, threatening sky and smiled.

"It's going to be a good day," said Wade, who lives in Licking, Mo. "These smallmouths love it when it's gray like this. They'll hit all day."

Moments into the float, Wade's prediction started to come through. He tossed a Gulp plastic minnow to the edge of large rock and felt a jolting strike before the bait had even settled to the bottom.

He set the hook and watched a bronze rocket burst out of the water, signaling it was ready to fight. The 13-inch fish struggled for a minute, but it wasn't long before it was in the boat.

"They're fighters, aren't they?" Wade said as he released the fish.

That fish was the first of many. As we floated through some of the Ozarks' finest scenery, we caught fish after fish on a variety of lures. The most productive lures were a series of baits made by Z-Man — the ZinkerZ, the Rain MinnowZ and the Finesse ShadZ. We also caught fish on Swimming Minnows, Gulp baits and topwater plugs.

By the time we were done, we had caught and released 77 smallmouth bass — six of them 15 inches or longer — and 43 goggle-eyes, some of which Wade estimated at more than a pound.

Wade readily admitted that fishing trips like that don't come along every day. But he's learned to never underestimate the beautiful river.

"I'm on this river year-round," he said. "When I'm not fishing, I'm hunting everything from deer and turkeys to hog and squirrels."

"It's just a great place to live."

The Convoluted History Behind the Most Embarrassing Planet Name

In 1783, English astronomer Sir William Herschel acknowledged that his serendipitous telescopic discovery two years earlier was, indeed, the first planet beyond the five known since antiquity. The next problem: What to call it?

In a transparent bit of sycophancy toward his patron, King George III, Herschel suggested calling the new planet “Georgium Sidus” (“George’s Star”). But

Chris Anderson
Skywatch

Herschel’s astronomical peers wouldn’t hear of it. The features of the classical (naked eye) planets matched their Roman god namesakes: The fastest planet, Mercury, was named for the wing-footed messenger god. The brightest planet, Venus, was paired with the luminous goddess of love. Bloody, red Mars was the war god. Jupiter moved at a stately pace and shone brilliantly, appropriate for the king of the gods. Saturn, venerable father of Jupiter, shone less brightly and moved more slowly, as though diminished with age. Following the pattern of parentage established by Jupiter and Saturn, the German astronomer, Johann Bode, suggested that the “new” planet, the dimmest and slowest yet, should be named after Saturn’s father, the timeworn god of the sky. But instead of Caelus — the name of the Roman sky god — Bode proposed Uranus, the Latinized version of the Greek sky god Ouranos, father of Cronus (the Greek equivalent of Saturn) and grandfather of Zeus (the Greek Jupiter). Had Bode chosen Caelus (pronounced “SEE-loose”) there may have been confusion over the pronunciation, but little embarrassment. Uranus has produced more juvenile giggling than any other name in science; both of its accepted pronunciations (“YUR-in-us” and “yur-AY-nus”) sound scatological. But ironically, both are incorrect: According to the rules of Latin pronunciation, the correct way to say the sixth planet’s name is “OO-rah-noose.” But try telling that to a snickering fifth grader.

Secret

Springs gush from the walls in a hidden corner of the canyon to fill the lush, fantastically clear pool that drains into Vineyard Lake.

“You can be out there and not get the feeling that Twin Falls is, what, 20 minutes away,” said Max Yingst, recreation planner for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management’s Jarbidge Field Office.

“It’s private. It’s cold, clean water. And it’s a fun little spot that you feel like is kind of exclusive,” said Jennifer Moss of Twin Falls.

Moss used to hang out there all afternoon with her Jerome High School friends, and she was back this June to get a suntan while her friends jumped off cliffs into the water. Ron Mothershead of Kimberly remembers January scuba diving in Vineyard Lake in the ’80s, looking at trout and crayfish. Heather Abrams of Hansen gathered crayfish for her high school biology class years ago and became a regular visitor.

“Definitely my favorite place to hike,” Abrams said. “It’s not something you would expect. You go through this kind of treacherous hike down there, then it’s almost like stepping into another world. It’s so beautiful.”

Not Managed for Recreation

On that hike, you can expect to scramble over a lot of rocks after you leave the Ehlerses’ pasture and begin descending into the canyon. It’s a rough terrain dotted with poison ivy and stinging nettle, and it’s best to wear clothing that covers your legs and arms.

Why no proper trail leading to Vineyard Lake?

The BLM in 1986 designated the lake as an area of critical environmental concern — or ACEC — because of its geology, scenic values and several rare species.

Vineyard Creek — the lake’s outlet — is the only known spawning habitat of redband trout, a unique cut-throat-rainbow hybrid, said David Freiberg, outdoor recreation planner for the BLM’s Shoshone Field Office. And a rare plant called chatterbox orchid grows around the springs, said Ruth Miller, the office’s field manager, so don’t collect plants or trample around

The ACEC designation means the BLM allows recreation at the lake but doesn’t develop or promote the area for recreation. The agency doesn’t build or maintain trails there, though BLM employees do visit Vineyard Lake regularly to take stock of the area’s special resources.

So they know it’s a popular swimming hole in the summertime.

“We’ve seen upwards of 50 or more people there at a single time when it’s hot outside,” Freiberg said.

Reasons for Caution

Before you swim in such a remote spot, remember that rescuers will have a hard time reaching you. Logan Souza, 18, of Jerome drowned while swimming in the cold water of Vineyard Lake in May 2006, and a memorial cross still stands at the water’s edge.

At cooler times of year, you’re likely to have Vineyard Lake to yourself.

But to reach it, you’ll have to navigate various dangers: Potholes in the Ehlerses’ dirt road. Electric fences around their cow pasture (stick to the three-post access point described in the box accompanying this story, and you’ll be fine). That plentiful poison ivy and stinging nettle in the canyon. Rattlesnakes. High cliffs.

“You really have to think of it kind of like a wilderness,” Jane Ehlers said.

Be a Respectful Visitor

Yes, there are other ways to reach Vineyard Lake.

For instance, kayakers on the Snake River upstream from Twin Falls (the falls, not the city) can reach the lake by paddling partway up Vineyard Creek before beginning to hike. They’ll remain on public land, but they face a stiff climb to the lake and must cross a narrow board wedged into the rocks high above the water.

So for most explorers, the cow-pasture route is the best.

Here’s how to be considerate on private land:

- Park single-file on the edge of the Ehlerses’ dirt road. If another vehicle is already there, park your own on the same side of the road. Don’t block any gates, and don’t block the turnaround at the end of the dirt road. Don’t park on the neighbor’s private airstrip.
- Don’t drive into a field or pasture. Don’t damage or move fence posts. Inconsiderate visitors who wouldn’t leave their vehicles at the side of the road have damaged irrigation equipment and caused flooding.
- Don’t bring your bicycle, ATV or motorcycle onto the trail, Jane Ehlers said. She and her husband allow access through their property to pedestrians only.
- Restrain your dogs, and don’t spook the cows. Vineyard Lake visitors once scared one of the Ehlerses’ calves over the edge of the canyon rim, and getting the calf back onto level ground was a dangerous operation for both the animal and its rescuers.

Ehlers wants visitors to know that her family’s cows are well cared for, and her husband checks on them twice a day. But if you see something that makes you concerned about an animal, leave a note at their house (it’s on the same dirt road as the lake access point).

- Don’t leave trash in the pasture, on the canyon trail or at the lake. In fact, consider taking along a sack to pick up anyone else’s litter you might find.
- Leave before dark. Also, report any strange activity to the police. “That would be really helpful to us,” Ehlers said.

Terrain is dirt and sand, she said — easy for horses. Be mindful, however: People also target shoot in the area.

Access the area by turning east on the first sportsmen’s road north of the Perrine Bridge in Jerome, opposite the access point to Golf Course Road.

Indian Spring

The South Hills are one of Richardson’s favorite places to ride. One option there is Indian Spring Road south of Kimberly.

Much like the Devil’s Corral, the wide-open area is home to sagebrush, dirt roads and nearby cow pastures. It also is a popular place for mountain bikers because of the hard dirt terrain and loose gravel. A number of trails veer from the main dirt road, taking users to more scenic country over the hillsides.

From Twin Falls, take

Blue Lakes Boulevard south to 2800 North Road (which becomes 2900 North). Watch for the Indian Spring Road sign on your right.

Third Fork

If you want an adventurous ride with varied landscapes, try Third Fork in the South Hills.

The Third Fork trail is accessed from a campground across from North Rim Trail. The large parking area is great for parking trailers and unloading horses. The trail begins at the far west end of the dirt-and-gravel parking lot.

The babble of a nearby creek keeps you company for at least part of the 13-mile loop. Scenery starts with open fields of sage, but within a couple of miles you enter the thicker foliage of trees.

From Hansen, drive about 20 miles south on Rock Creek Road toward Magic Mountain Ski Resort. Watch for signs on your left to access the Third Fork area.

Question: Bob asked: “I have lived with my girlfriend for 5 years and we have kids together. We both work and pay our bills together, although all the bills are mine. Can I file an individual bankruptcy?”

Answer: Yes you can, although there are pitfalls. The new bankruptcy law requires that you report ALL household income, so your girlfriend’s income will have to be considered in determining whether you qualify to file a traditional Chapter 7 bankruptcy as opposed to repaying some of your debts in a Chapter 13 bankruptcy. Also, if you have purchased anything jointly (like a car or house) your individual exemptions provided by state law may not be sufficient to protect all your property, because as a non-debtor, your girlfriend may not claim any exemptions in your bankruptcy. As an example, if your name is on the title of your girlfriend’s car, you may not be able to protect it in bankruptcy. The trustee could seize it. This is a situation where you definitely need the advice of a professional bankruptcy attorney. There are probably multiple solutions to your problem, including marriage.

States Talk Immigration Economics at Utah Summit

BY JOSH LOFTIN
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • As more states consider stronger immigration laws, political, business and religious leaders from throughout the West examined the economic impact of enforcement measures and guest-worker programs during a one-day summit Wednesday in Salt Lake City.

Participants generally opposed the strict enforcement laws passed in Alabama and Arizona. Instead, they pointed to a package of bills passed in Utah that included an enforcement law modeled on Arizona's but balanced by a program that will allow illegal immigrants to work and pay taxes in Utah if they register with the state.

The law does not protect them from federal prosecution; the state is looking for a federal solution before the law goes into effect in 2013.

The Utah guest worker program was a key component of the Utah Compact, an initiative pushed as a more compassionate way to handle immigration.

"The success of the Utah Compact has put the spotlight on Utah," Attorney General Mark Shurtleff said. "Now we have an opportunity to affect the national immigration debate in a really positive way."

In Idaho, lawmakers have backed away from passing their own immigration laws, in part because of the potential impact on the state's agricultural businesses. That is preferable to passing laws that are not "well thought out," said Brent Olmstead, a lobbyist for the Idaho Business Coalition on Immigration Reform.

"We'd like to see at minimum a guest worker program where the supply of that labor meets the demand, and addresses in some way the workers who are already here," Olmstead said.

The impact of new laws has been immediately evident in Georgia, where the agricultural industry estimates it has lost at least $300 million and as much as $1 billion since laws targeting illegal immigrants were passed earlier this year.

A federal judge has put parts of Georgia's law on hold, including provisions allowing police to check the immigration status of people without proper identification. But other aspects of the law went into effect this summer, such as making it a felony in Georgia to use false information or documentation when applying for a job.

Migrant workers have rapidly disappeared in the state, said Paul Bridges, the mayor of Uvalde in the southern part of Georgia. When the state laws are coupled with federal immigration programs such as Secure Communities that have increased the number of deportations, legal and illegal immigrants are reluctant to work.

Technology and Legislation Reshaping E. Idaho's Secondary School Experience

POST REGISTER

Ron Tolman did what no other superintendent in Jefferson Joint School District 251 had done before when he oversaw the design of the district's new high school.

It was an exercise in preparing for an unpredictable future, he said.

The new Rigby High School, which is under construction, will see its students through decades of change as eastern Idaho education adapts to the 21st century.

"The things our students need from their school building are different and are going to be different," Tolman said. "So we needed to build a school that could cope with that."

Tolman said his district largely accomplished that by opting for more open space that could be used for things besides sitting students in a row of desks.

Throw a dart into any group of educational professionals and you'll hit someone who is planning for the same reality: The school system today's parents went through can't prepare students for tomorrow's world.

Wendy Horman, a board member for Bonneville Joint School District 93, is part of a task force charged with putting the technology requirements of the Students Come First education reforms into practice. She also serves on the boards of several education foundations.

Horman said she's discussed some aspect of the shifts at every one of her recent meetings.

"It's in the air everywhere," she said. "We have a new normal. And the new normal is that there is no normal because we're changing to make up for all those years we didn't change."

Those changes aren't limited to the brick-and-mortar aspects of a school system, and they're cropping up throughout eastern Idaho.

Chad Williams has been the principal at Ririe High School for two years.

When he arrived at the school, he said there were no opportunities for students to receive college credit for their high school classes.

Dual-credit classes, or high school classes for which students can receive college credit, have gained prominence all over the country but are far from universal.

They've taken off at Ririe, however.

This trimester alone, Ririe High students will receive 335 college credits.

Williams said he began pushing the program when he came to Ririe as part of an effort to prepare his students for the world they face when they graduate.

Wendy Horman, a board member of Bonneville Joint School District 93

"Post-secondary preparedness is a big part of what these students need from us," he said.

Preparing for life after public school is a theme woven throughout most of the ways education reform is playing out in eastern Idaho.

In Erin Becker's sixth-grade classroom at Edgemont Gardens Elementary School, students who have completed their lessons are told to work together on Becker's iPad.

There's an app for almost everything she wants to do in her classroom, Becker said.

Becker can record her students reading and play it back to them. She can assign them a computer presentation and they can use a program similar to PowerPoint to work on it.

She can put her students to work on math skills under the guise of allowing them to play a game.

Becker has a master's degree in educational technology, making her one of Idaho Falls School District 91's "go-to" women when it comes to bringing technology into classrooms.

"It engages them in a way that me standing at the board talking to them just can't," Becker said. "They want to use it, so they want to learn."

What's more, she said, being technologically literate and learning to use technology in creative ways is a skill set students must have later in life.

Matt Dyorich, a history teacher at Hillcrest High School, goes a step further with the real-world applications of his class.

"I think about what things I want (my students) to learn, and then I work backwards and design a project around that," he said.

The catch is, those "things" aren't the traditional names-and-dates history, Dyorich said. They are things such as critical thinking, teamwork, communication and creativity.

Dyorich's students learn about an ancient battle between Alexander the Great of Macedonia and Darius of Persia by designing a battle plan.

They are given the details and told they have Alexander's resources. Then they must draw up a plan to defeat Darius.

Once they've submitted their plans, Dyorich lays out how Alexander did win.

"They do learn a lot of history, but I try as much as possible to bring things back to their lives and teach them life skills," he said. "That's just the only way it's ever made sense to me."

Dyorich's strategy actually has a name — project-based learning — and is considered one of the linchpins of a modern classroom.

Idaho Falls School District 91 is exploring the idea of establishing a project-based magnet high school using a model designed by Napa, Calif.-based New Tech Networks.

In that model, students are assigned projects with a series of goals to accomplish. When the projects are complete, students must present them to a group of community members.

New Tech schools also include access to technology — the model builds in a one-to-one student-to-computer ratio — and allows every teacher in a district to access a database of lesson plans.

When Michael Stanton, principal of Nex+Gen Academy in Albuquerque, N.M., first heard about the New Tech model, he said it appealed to him because it used so many of the same strategies he'd been pushing for a decade in his district.

Stanton holds a doctorate in organizational learning and instructional technology. He said his expertise is in high school reform.

"(Our students are) learning and actually putting into place those 21st-century skills," he said. "It's a model I feel very comfortable with."

Opened in 2009, Nex+Gen Academy is the only New Tech school Stanton knows of that was built to be a New Tech school. The proposed school in District 91, for example, would be in the building that today houses Clair E. Gale Junior High School.

At Nex+Gen, the classrooms have no doors and the architects were liberal with windows. There are plenty of open, common spaces rather than narrow hallways and alcoves.

"It's not the most important thing about our school, but it is important," Stanton said. "It's part of what's different about our school."

A traditionally designed school is set up for students to sit in one spot in a closed-off classroom and listen to a teacher talk, a model that is fast falling by the wayside, he said.

District 93 is in the midst of planning for a new high school because of runaway growth in the district. Members of the district's facilities planning committee are asking for advice left and right, including from Rigby High's Tolman.

They already are wondering how to design the school as a flexible place.

"We have to remember that whatever we do with this school has to last through a lot of changes," Superintendent Chuck Shackett said at a Sept. 21 committee meeting. "That includes a lot of changes we can't predict right now."

Denver Gets Season's First Snowfall as Obama Visits

DENVER (AP) • A fall storm has brought the season's first snow to Colorado, knocking out power to thousands of people but exciting skiers.

About 5 inches of snow fell in Denver Wednesday, with more falling in areas to the north.

Tree limbs, many still with leaves, got weighed down by the snow and snapped, breaking power lines.

The taste of winter came as President Barack Obama made his second visit to Denver in less than a month. The last time he visited some people passed out from the heat.

The same storm also brought snow to Utah and Wyoming, where it temporarily shut down a portion of Interstate 80 between Laramie and Cheyenne.

Colorado's mountains also got snow earlier this month and three resorts are already open for the season.

Rammell Battery Case Dismissed

LEWISTON (AP) • A misdemeanor battery charge against former Republican gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell has been dismissed.

The Lewiston Tribune reports prosecutors in Idaho County dropped the charge against Rammell during a court hearing Tuesday and did not return a phone call from the newspaper seeking comment on why the case was dismissed.

Rammell was accused of grabbing the throat of another man, William Shira, during a Sept. 8 confrontation.

Rammell told police Shira's son previously lived on his property but was asked to leave. Rammell told police he later spotted both men on his property and they got into an argument. Police said Rammell followed the two men and was trying to place them under citizen's arrest when he was taken into custody.

Rammell says he's thankful the case has been dismissed.

Widow of Man Killed by Research Bear Sues

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • The widow of a man killed by a grizzly bear hours after the animal awoke from tranquilizers in the wild country near Yellowstone National Park has filed a $5 million wrongful death lawsuit against the federal government.

The lawsuit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Cheyenne says researchers were negligent in trapping a bear along a trail and close to cabins, and by prematurely taking down signs that warned passers-by of their work in the area.

The 430-pound male grizzly mauled Erwin Evert of Park Ridge, Ill., on June 17, 2010. Evert had been hiking about a mile from a cabin where Evert and his wife, Yolanda, lived during the summer. The cabin is about six miles outside the Yellowstone East Entrance.

"The family is very interested in ensuring an unbiased report of the events of his death comes out," Yolanda Evert's attorney, Emily Rankin, said Wednesday. "That's what the purpose of this lawsuit will be."

The government didn't take advantage of many opportunities to prevent the mauling, said the Everts' daughter, Mara Domingue.

"The family is very interested in ensuring an unbiased report of the events of his death comes out." Emily Rankin, Yolanda Evert's attorney

"They could have talked to him, they could have posted a notice on his door, they could have posted signs at the trailhead, and of course, left the signs up in the area where the bear was recovering," Domingue said in a statement through Rankin. "Had they done even one of these things, my dad would still be alive today."

Officials with the Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team, a federal agency under the U.S. Geological Survey that monitors grizzly bears in the Yellowstone ecosystem, did not immediately return a message Wednesday seeking comment.

The lawsuit names the United States of America as the sole defendant.

The attack occurred on the same day two study team scientists had snared and tranquilized the bear in the Kitty Creek drainage. The scientists were leaving the backcountry when they came across Yolanda Evert, who told them her husband was overdue from his hike.

One of the researchers rode a horse back to the trap and learn more about what they were doing. Evert was attacked about a third of a mile off the main trail, well away from his usual hiking route, the report said.

The lawsuit says the researchers took down their warning signs three days too early because the signs said the area would be closed from June 11, 2010 to June 20, 2010. Also, the researchers saw Erwin at his cabin at least twice but never warned him about their work, the suit claims.

Study team guidelines state that bear researchers must always warn the public about any traps or when there is potential for a confrontation, the lawsuit says.

"Mr. Evert was unfairly blamed for contributing to his own death," Rankin said.

The researchers baited the snare with deer meat. They tranquilized the snared bear so they could take samples, give it antibiotics and fit it with a radio collar, then left the animal to go check on another snare site. The lawsuit claims the scientists left the bear before it was fully awake in violation of study team policy.

Evert was a botanist who had recently published a book, "Vascular Plants of the Greater Yellowstone Area: Annotated Catalog and Atlas."

Hormones Feed Hunger After Weight Loss, Researchers Find

BY MELISSA HEALY
Los Angeles Times

As if people needed a reminder that losing weight is hard and maintaining weight loss is even harder, a study has found that for at least a year, subjects who shed weight on a low-calorie diet were hungrier than when they started and had higher levels of hormones that tell the body to eat more, conserve energy and store away fuel as fat.

The report, published Wednesday in the New England Journal of Medicine, helps explain why roughly 80 percent of dieters regain lost pounds within a year or two of losing them — and, sometimes, regain more.

After weight loss, "multiple compensatory mechanisms" spring to life, the study shows, and work together to ensure that weight loss is reversed quickly and efficiently.

The researchers, led by Joseph Proietto of the University of Melbourne's Department of Medicine, write that more than one solution to obesity will likely be necessary: "a combination of medications" that will have to be safe for long-term use.

In almost all cases, regulators cited the drugs' marginal effectiveness and concerns about their safety if used over long periods.

The Australian study paints a "very comprehensive" and "really discouraging" picture of the breadth of the body's response to weight loss, said Dr. Daniel Bessesen, an endocrinologist and obesity researcher at University of Colorado's Denver Health Medical Center. It captures just how many resources the body musters to ensure that weight is restored — a long list of hormones that regulate appetite, feelings of fullness after eating and how calories are used.

The study enrolled 50 obese men and women without major health problems, and put them on a strict low-calorie diet for eight weeks. Within two weeks after that diet, and again a year later, researchers measured subjects' blood levels of nine distinct hormones that affect appetite and metabolism, and asked subjects about feelings of hunger after meals, between meals and as mealtimes approached.

The challenges of weight control quickly became evident. Thirty-four of 50 enrolled subjects made it to the one-year mark. Four withdrew during the eight-week period of dieting — a rigorous 550-calorie per day regimen. Seven failed to lose 10 percent of their body mass, which had been set as a condition of continued participation.

And five withdrew during the yearlong "weight maintenance" phase, when subjects got regular counseling on a diet-and-exercise plan to help them hold steady at the new weight.

Of those who remained, the average weight loss at 10 weeks, when hormone levels were first measured, was just short of 30 pounds.

One year out, those subjects had gained back an average of just over 12 pounds. But after and between meals, their appetites — and the hormones that influence hunger — rebounded even more robustly.

The hormones — including leptin, ghrelin, amylin, cholecystokinin and insulin — vary widely. Some are secreted from the gut, others by the pancreas or fat cells themselves. Some increase appetite, some tell the brain that enough food has been eaten, and others help regulate how calories are used.

Body of Missing Canadian Skydiver Found in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • The body of a renowned skydiver missing since June has been found in the mountains of southern Utah, his family said Wednesday.

David Roy Brown, 37, originally from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, had been living in the United States for about a decade. He moved to Utah about two months ago to teach at Skydive Moab.

Authorities said he was last seen June 29 and had left behind most of his belongings, including his driver's license, Canadian passport, credit cards, clothing and cash.

An early search of the area around Moab turned up no clues. Friends, family and fellow skydivers later performed additional searches, some sifting over the red rock desert region using motorized paragliders, but again turned up nothing.

Brown's family said a hiker found his remains Sunday in the nearby mountains. It wasn't immediately clear how he died, but authorities didn't suspect foul play. An autopsy will be performed.

Moab Police Chief Mike Navarre was unavailable for comment Wednesday afternoon.

"We are devastated by our loss of such a gifted young man," Brown's sister, Wendi TeKamp, said in a statement Wednesday. "We will miss Dave's smile and sense of adventure."

TeKamp also thanked authorities and volunteers for their exhaustive searches.

Family members said Brown was a world record-holding national champion skydiver with more than 13,000 jumps.

OBITUARIES

William R. Jones Jr.

June 14, 1922-Oct. 23, 2011

JEROME • William Ralph “Bill” Jones Jr., 89, of Jerome, passed peacefully late Sunday evening, Oct. 23, 2011, at his home in Jerome.

Bill was born June 14, 1922, in Malad, Idaho, the second of six children born to William Ralph Jones and Pearl Jones. He spent his early years with his family living in southern Idaho and northern Utah. His family finally settled in Preston, Idaho, where Bill graduated from high school in 1941.

In 1941, Bill was drafted into the U.S. Army. During this time, Bill exchanged letters with a young lady from Kansas named Loretta Myrtle Jones. They were married June 21, 1943, in Hayes, Kan. They were later divorced. Bill moved back to Preston and drove truck and hauled gravel with his father. It was during that time that he met and married the love of his life, Karma Gregory. They were married June 14, 1946.

Bill worked at several jobs during his life. He worked as a salesman, cook, carpenter, cement finisher, roofer, tractor driver, milk hauler, truck driver, Realtor, construction worker and potato plant worker; he also worked in a bean warehouse and later was a homesteader and owned his own farm. He enjoyed a good, hard day’s work. Bill was a loving and dedicated husband and father. In his spare time, Bill enjoyed constructing fishing poles, tying flies and, of course, fishing.

After the passing of his beloved wife of 44 years, Bill dedicated his life to serving others. He served and cared for his daughter through a long and difficult recovery. He served his brother who became disabled after suffering a stroke. His daughter, Maxine, recalls the wonderful service rendered when she called her dad and asked if he would care for her six children while she tended to her child while he was undergoing brain surgery.

Bill owned a small home in Eden that he would often rent to unfortunate families with small children, knowing that they would not be able to pay. While in Eden, Bill purchased a large building which he used as a carpentry shop where he enjoyed tinkering with tools and building small items for others. He also used this building to provide housing for his nephew while helping out his sister.

Bill enjoyed living in Eden for many years but eventually moved to Jerome to be closer to family. In Jerome, Bill enjoyed gardening, playing cards with his family and giving the great-grandchildren a ride on his mobility cart. He loved to spoil the great-grandchildren; when they would come to visit, he would hurry to the fridge to get them a Twinkie and M&M’s. His love was his family and spending time with them, especially his grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Bill had a great sense of humor and enjoyed telling jokes that he had first heard up to 50 years earlier.

The family would like to thank Idaho Health and Hospice for the compassionate service they provided for us and for our beloved father.

Bill is survived by his six children, William Jones III of Missouri, Diane (Lee) Harmon of Twin Falls, Glen Jones of Boise, Maxine (Lloyd) Young of Jerome, Melvin (Janet) Jones and Karl (Cindy) Jones, all of Salmon; as well as 22 grandchildren; 34 great-grandchildren; and nine great-great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents; two brothers; three sisters; and one grandson, Kevin Harmon.

A celebration of Bill’s life will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 29, at the Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel, 629 Third Ave. E. in Jerome, with Bishop Ed King of the Jerome LDS 10th Ward conducting. Military honors will be provided by the Idaho National Guard. Burial will take place at the Hazelton Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome.

Ray Priest

Oct. 7, 1938-Oct. 24, 2011

IDAHO FALLS • Charles Ray Priest left this earth to be united with his family and his beloved dog Chance on Monday, Oct. 24, 2011, due to a lingering illness.

Ray was born Oct. 7, 1938, to James “Buster” Priest and Lavon “Toots” Whitman Priest in Idaho Falls, Idaho. As a young boy, he attended Taylor Elementary school. He loved living on the family farm where he claimed to have worked many more hours than his siblings. Ray had a very soft spot for all animals and was known to have spent many a night in the barn when one was sick. He was a member of the Future Farmers of America Club while attending Shelley High School.

He moved with his family to Declo, Idaho, where he went to high school his sophomore and junior years. It was at this time that Ray decided he was smarter than his teachers and chose to leave high school and join the United States Navy on the “buddy system.” However, when he and his buddies had their physicals, he was the only one to pass and left for boot camp by himself in 1956. During his time in the Navy, Ray enjoyed being in the V-2 Division where he supported the maintenance of aircraft systems and equipment of the USS Pine Island (AV-12).

Upon returning home from his honorable military discharge, he lived in Burley, Idaho, and drove semi-trucks for Bill Barnhill. It was at this time that he met the love of his life, Sibyl Muriel Turney, on July 4, 1960. After a very short, one-month courtship, Ray decided she was the girl for him and they were married in Elko, Nev., on Aug. 4. They spent an amazing 51 years together and celebrated in Hawaii with their very dear friends.

Ray and Sibyl spent a short time in Shelley, where Ray drove a milk truck. He was then offered a position with Massey Ferguson as parts manager in Burley, where they lived for 1½ years until he was transferred to the Idaho Falls location. He spent the remainder of his life in Idaho Falls, where he and Sibyl raised their children, Rick, Machele and Mike. For the next three years, Ray proudly drove the blue Edwards Brothers trucks. He commented more than once that this was his favorite job, but it was not Sibyl’s because it took him away from home and his family. Therefore, on April 1, 1966, Ray began a 29-year career with INEL Bus Operations. He spent 19 years as a driver, 10 years in management and drove 1,124,000 miles without a preventable accident and became a member of the National Safety Council’s Million Mile Club. Ray became known affectionately to his family and friends as “Safety Man Ray.” He retired on Jan. 31, 1995. Ray returned to the road and drove the “big blue trucks” for Edwards Brothers for seven more years. He only drove part time however, because even though it was near and dear to his heart, Sibyl preferred that he was home.

In his spare time, Ray worked for the state of Idaho where he gave CDL and driver’s license tests to many area teenagers. He retired fully in 2005. He was famously known for writing and submitting many letters to the editor in the Post Register, which became his platform for stating his views.

Ray loved sports of all kinds, especially coaching baseball and Grid Kid Football when his sons were younger. He always tried to enrich the lives of young men and women through athletics. He served as vice president and president of the Idaho Falls High School Booster Club and, in 1978, was voted as Booster of the Year.

Ray loved the outdoors, golfing, reading and traveling with his wife and friends to Arizona for the winter. Above all, Ray was a devoted husband, father, grandfather and friend. His biggest joy were his grandchildren, Zachary, Tyrell, Addie, Tanner, James, Maddie, Brennan, Baylee, Kelsey, Heather and Devan. He was loved greatly, respected by many and will be so dearly missed.

Papa, we look forward to seeing you and Chance on the Rainbow Bridge.

Ray is survived by his wife, Sibyl of Idaho Falls; his sons, Rick (Pam) Priest of Kuna, Idaho, and Mike (Lori) Priest of Idaho Falls; his only daughter, Machele (Brent) Bergeman of Idaho Falls; 11 grandchildren; his brother, Jim Priest of Idaho Falls; his four sisters, Carol (Marvin) Smith, Maurine Ruane and Betty Anderson, all of Rupert, Idaho, and Marjorie Jensen of Heyburn, Idaho; and a sister-in-law, Shirlee Priest of Rupert. Ray was preceded in death by his parents, James Priest and Lavon Whitman Priest; his brother, Max Priest; and his twin sisters, Sandra and Linda.

The funeral will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 29, at Wood East Side, 963 S. Ammon Road in Idaho Falls. The family will visit with friends from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Friday and one hour prior to the service, both at Wood East Side. Interment will be in Taylor Cemetery, where military rites will be performed by the Bonneville County Memorial Veterans Team and the Idaho Honor Guard.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to the Ray Priest Memorial, in care of Lighthouse Rescue Mission, P.O. Box 1467; Nampa, ID 83653, or to the Bonneville Humane Society, P.O. Box 2763, Idaho Falls, ID 83403. Condolences may be sent to the family online at www.woodfuneralhome.com.

Patty Deane Hudson

Feb. 3, 1933-Oct. 23, 2011

FILER • Patty Deane Hudson, of Filer and formerly of Buhl, passed away Sunday, Oct. 23, 2011, surrounded by her family. She was 78.

Patty, born Feb. 3, 1933, in Buhl, Idaho, was the only child of Lyle and Hazel Winans. She attended school at Lucerne through eighth grade and graduated from Buhl High School in 1951. She married Dell Hudson on April 18, 1952, and they had four children. Patty and Dell raised their family in Buhl except for a brief, one-year move to Bellevue, Idaho. Patty worked at various places, including the Buhl Animal Clinic, and was a school bus driver for many years. Most of all, Patty enjoyed being a homemaker and was Dell’s right-hand man on the farm.

Patty loved having her kids, grandkids and great-grandkids around her whenever possible, especially during the holidays. Christmas Eve at Grammy and Papa’s was a special time for the entire family. Patty enjoyed gardening, lawn work, music and attending her kids’ and grandkids’ sporting events. After Dell died in 1997, Patty moved to Filer, where she resided until her own death.

In addition to her husband, Dell, Patty was preceded in death by her parents. Patty is survived by her children, Tim (Janie) Hudson, Luann Keen, Kim Hudson and Jeff Hudson; her grandchildren, Nate Nihill, Nick Nihill, Logan (Stephanie) Hudson, Beau Hudson, Lindsey (Chris) Westburg, Amanda (Josh) Wells and Austin Hudson; and by nine great-grandchildren. She will also be missed by many other relatives and close friends.

There will be no service or funeral per Patty’s request, but friends and family are welcome to come visit Patty’s family from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 27, at 1507 Erin Way in Filer.

Father of Artificial Intelligence Dies in Calif.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) • John McCarthy, a pioneer in artificial intelligence technology and creator of the computer programming language often used in that field, has died. He was 84.

Stanford University, where McCarthy was a professor for four decades, announced McCarthy’s death Monday. The school said he died at his Palo Alto home but did not provide a cause.

Tributes to McCarthy flooded into Twitter, where people mourned the loss of another Silicon Valley technology innovator. Apple Inc. co-founder Steve Jobs and C programming creator and UNIX co-developer Dennis Ritchie died earlier this month.

McCarthy was a leader in the artificial intelligence field, coining the term in a 1955 research proposal. He said “every aspect of learning or any other feature of intelligence can in principle be so precisely described that a machine can be made to simulate it.”

He went on to create the MIT Artificial Intelligence Lab and the Stanford Artificial Intelligence Lab, serving as its director from 1965 to 1980.

In 1958, McCarthy invented the programming language Lisp, which paved the way for voice recognition technology, including Siri, the personal assistant application on the newest iPhone.

McCarthy also developed the concept of computer time-sharing, which allowed multiple users to interact with a single computer. That lay the foundation for cloud computing today.

Born in Boston on Sept. 4, 1927, McCarthy moved west to pursue a degree in math at the California Institute of Technology. He received a doctorate in math from Princeton in 1951, and then became a professor at Princeton until 1953. He did turns at MIT and Dartmouth before settling at Stanford in 1962 until his retirement at the end of 2000.

“He could be blunt, but John was always kind and generous with his time, especially with students, and he was sharp until the end,” said Ed Feigenbaum, professor emeritus of computer science at Stanford and a colleague recruited by McCarthy in the 1960s. “He was always focused on the future. Always inventing, inventing, inventing.”

CSI Honored for Efforts to Fight Pollution

The College of Southern Idaho today will receive one of four Pollution Prevention Champions awards being presented to Idaho businesses and agencies by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

The awards are part of DEQ's Pollution Prevention Month observance. Each year, businesses that have put pollution prevention measures in place and documented effective results compete for the awards.

CSI's award will be presented at 11 a.m. at the CSI Health Sciences and Human Services building on North College Road. According to a press release, the school is being recognized for successfully preventing pollution through three key strategies: minimizing waste, using environmentally preferable purchasing practices, and conserving energy and water.

Gooding's Tough Schedule Pays Off With 2A Playoffs

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

As the early-season losses mounted — all by double-digits — Cameron Andersen never lost control of his locker room.

His players remained upbeat, reminding themselves that their ultimate goal of a conference championship was still well within reach.

That goal was a Canyon Conference championship. And although Gooding fell short of that goal by losing its regular-season finale to Declo, 18-6, the turnaround engineered by the Senators is a testament to keeping focus on the big picture, rather than living in the here-and-now.

Having made the Class 2A playoffs, where it travels to Marsing on Friday for its first-round game, Gooding can refocus. But the excitement is clear in Andersen’s voice as he recalls the growth his team made this season.

“Of course you want to win them,” said Andersen of his team’s difficult non-conference slate, “but our kids knew that there were more important

MINICO AIMS TO TAKE THE NEXT STEP IN 4A PLAYOFFS

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Now we find out how good this Minico team really is.

Despite its sixth Great Basin Conference title in seven years, despite its perfect 9-0 record, and despite going into the Class 4A playoffs with home-field advantage as District IV’s top seed, Minico is widely considered the underdog this week against Hillcrest (6-3), the third-place team from District VI.

Critics say Minico’s record is inflated due to a weak schedule. While head coach Tim Perrigot concedes District IV isn’t the gauntlet that District VI is, he disagrees with the notion Minico hasn’t played anybody.

“I honestly think we have played some good teams. Maybe they don’t have winning records, but we’ve played some good, physical teams,” Perrigot said. “Our league is better than it’s been in the past and I think

NBA Sides Meet in Hopes of Ending Lockout

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • NBA owners and players were engaged in another marathon session Wednesday, meeting for more than 10 hours in talks aimed at ending the lockout.

The two sides got back to the table with a small group meeting less than a week after three intense days of mediation didn’t produce a new labor deal.

Negotiations broke down last Thursday when players said owners insisted they agree to a 50-50 split of revenues as a condition to further discuss the salary cap system.

The first two weeks of the season already have been canceled, and there’s little time left to save any basketball in November. Commissioner David Stern has said he feared even games through Christmas would be in jeopardy if there wasn’t a deal last week.

Stern rejoined the talks Wednesday after missing last Thursday’s session with the flu. He was joined by Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver, owners Peter Holt of San Antonio, Glen Taylor of Minnesota and James Dolan of New York, and a pair of league office attorneys.

The union was represented by executive director Billy Hunter, president Derek Fisher of the Lakers and vice president Maurice Evans of the Wizards, attorney Ron Klempner and economist Kevin Murphy.

The players have lowered their proposal to 52.5 percent of basketball-related income, leaving the sides about $100 million apart annually, based on last season’s revenues. Players were guaranteed 57 percent of BRI under the previous collective bargaining agreement.

Ordeal Brings Shaw Back to Second Home

DIETRICH • With a ball in his hand and a crowd of tall basketball players circled around him at midcourt, Acey Shaw looked at home.

He looked at peace and looked happy to be in his element watching the sport he so loves to coach.

It was a fitting ending to an excitement-packed night at Dietrich High School.

The College of Southern Idaho men’s basketball team wowed about 1,500 people in the small gym with no-look passes, 3-pointers and two-handed slams.

The fun started with 6-8 freshman forward Greg Sequele throwing down a powerful tomahawk jam in a slam-dunk contest before the men’s scrimmage. He and teammate Dennis Mikelonis left the crowd on its feet shouting “CSI! CSI!”

Sequele did his best Vince Carter impression finishing a one-handed slam with his elbow inside the rim and Mikelonis jumped over teammates Kevin Attila and Sebastian Michineau for a thunderous two-handed slam.

Area Teams Set Sights on Biggest Prize

BY DAVID BASHORE

Members of the Twin Falls volleyball team popped into practice this week their bubbly, excited selves. They had just won their third straight District IV championship and as a result were heading for their third successive Class 4A state tournament this week in Post Falls.

Soon as they got to practice, they were reminded that as long as there was practice to be had, work still remained.

Message received. The Bruins are dialed in ahead of Friday’s tournament opener against District III champ Skyview, as they try to better last year’s fourth-place showing.

“I think if we do what we can do, we have a shot. It depends on what they want and how mentally they go into it. I hope they’re ready and hope they have fun, but we’re going up there for one reason and I hope they can pull that off,” said Twin Falls coach B.J. Price. “Skyview’s not going to hurt themselves. We’re going to have to force them into errors, and hopefully with the tempo at which we do things, we can force them into more errors.”

If Twin Falls had its dream scenario, it would be getting to the title match and beating Century for the trophy. The Diamondbacks routed the Bruins in the first meeting of the season, while Twin Falls squandered opportunities in the second matchup.

But that’s a long way down the road, if it even happens.

“We got ahead of ourselves last year and it didn’t work,” Price said. “The girls are focused, and they understand it’s got to be one at a time.

“It just comes down to who gets hot. Hopefully we’ve done what we can to peak at the right time. I think we saw a little glimpse of it first set against Canyon Ridge right before districts, but I don’t think we’ve gotten to the pinnacle yet of what these kids can do.”

While the Bruins aim to improve on their showing from the 2010 tournament, Camas County looks to remain atop the 1A Division II perch for a third straight season and send standout Katelyn Peterson out a champion.

The Mushers haven’t lost this season, and they intend to keep it that way. But that doesn’t mean they expect to coast to a third straight title. Especially not with Garden Valley, which was a thorn in their sides the

Game 6 of World Series Postponed by Rain

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • Colby Lewis and his Texas teammates casually tossed a ball in left field, trying to avoid the tarp and any anxiety about being so close to the World Series championship.

On this day, the only winner was the weather.

Game 6 was postponed Wednesday because of an accurate wet forecast, delaying the Rangers' bid to clinch their first championship. Ahead 3-2, they can close out the St. Louis Cardinals on Thursday night. It's likely to be clear with temperatures in the low 50s at Busch Stadium.

"We're not getting antsy, we're not getting ahead of ourselves. We just have to wait," Texas manager Ron Washington said.

Lewis is set to start against Jaime Garcia. If there's a Game 7 Friday night, it'll be Matt Harrison for Texas against, well, no telling. St. Louis manager Tony La Russa playfully mentioned the great Bob Gibson, but ace Chris Carpenter on three days' rest looms as a possibility.

"It's already been asked about Carp," La Russa said. "I was told by Carp that he would be ready to go."

The postponement came after a travel day for the teams. This two-day gap is the longest at the World Series since 1989, when the Bay Area earthquake left the Athletics and Giants idle for 11 days.

"It's just a rainout, that's it," Texas star Michael Young said. "I don't know if people think we're going to sit in our hotel rooms all night biting our nails. We're going to get something to eat, get some rest and be ready to go."

After a damp season and postseason, Major League Baseball announced the decision about 4½ hours before the scheduled first pitch. At the time, no drops had fallen at the ballpark.

"I'm not even sure why they canceled it," Cardinals outfielder Lance Berkman said. "This is better than the weather for Game 1. I guess

Panthers Receiver Steve Smith Happy He Returned

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • When Carolina Panthers coach Ron Rivera met with Steve Smith back in April all he asked of the star receiver was a chance.

A chance to prove that Smith would love playing for the Panthers once he got to see the team's new offensive scheme. A chance to prove the team would find ways to use his tremendous athletic skills. A chance to prove the organization was committed to finding a franchise quarterback to get him the ball.

Smith took that chance and both sides are thrilled he did.

Rivera has a star receiver who has been a huge help to rookie Cam Newton while Smith is enjoying a renaiss-sance of sorts at 32, leading the NFL with 818 yards receiving.

"I've been sitting on the shelf for about two years, just collecting that dust," Smith said. "Get the cobwebs off, throw on a little WD-40 and let me go to work."

The excitement is back in Smith's voice, and for good reason.

He's on pace to shatter Jerry Rice's single-season record of 1,848 yards set in 1995. Smith has four games with at least 140 yards receiving and is averaging 21 yards per catch. He's averaging 116.8 yards receiving per game, second only to New England's Wes Welker.

That's fairly remarkable considering as recently as July, Smith still wasn't sure he wanted to come back to Carolina.

Smith, who has two years left on his current contract, didn't publicly demand a trade in the offseason, but it was pretty clear he was open to such a move.

"We talked about (his future) and it was a great conversation," said Rivera, hired in January to replace Fox after a 2-14 season. "He really voiced his opinion and concerns about us and about what he had gone through the last couple of years. I just told him to give us a chance and let things unfold."

Smith was frustrated over the way he was used the past two seasons and it's hard to blame him. After posting a 1,421-yard season in 2008, Smith's numbers dropped dramatically the last two seasons as he became more of a decoy in Fox's run-first offense. After four straight 1,000-yard seasons, Smith had 982 yards receiving in 2009 and only 554 in 2010.

Gooding

with those guys."

And up until Declo, Gooding did indeed toy with the teams that made up the middle of its schedule, beating Glenns Ferry, Valley and Wendell by a 127-12 aggregate. Mixed in was a 42-0 beating of Filer. The four straight victories got Gooding above .500 for the first time all year.

Even in Gooding's 0-3 start, with losses to Butte County, Salmon and Wood River, there were signs that the Senators would turn things around quickly in Canyon Conference play. Butte County is regularly a solid Class 2A team, but Salmon is the top seed in Class 3A, and Class 4A Wood River enjoyed its best season in years and is another playoff participant.

"We hung with all of them," Andersen said.

Only against Butte County did the final score indicate a blowout, but two interceptions returned for touchdowns made the Pirates' 40-13 victory appear more lopsided than it really was. Salmon's 23-6 victory marked a season-low for points for the Savages. The same almost holds true for Wood River, which scored just 20 points in beating the Senators. Only Twin Falls and Minico, just seconds apart from being co-Great Basin Conference champions, held the Wolverines to fewer points than Gooding.

Two moments this season stood out for Andersen. First, there was the team's decision to ditch the individual approach in announcing the starting lineups. Only the entire team would be introduced.

More importantly, was the reaction Andersen saw from his players as they exploded to a 28-0 lead against Glenns Ferry in the Senators' league opener.

"You should've seen the looks on the guys' faces," Andersen said. "They're like, 'OK, now I get it. Now I see how (the tough schedule) improves us!'"

Tough opposition will make any team better, but for impressionable high school kids, seeing some results on the scoreboard is vital.

"If we didn't have those results, we would've lost a lot of kids, in the weight room and in fundamentals," Andersen said. "They had to see the results."

Andersen points to guys like Kyle Rison, Alec Basterchea, Josh Faulkner and Cole McGinnis as players who bought into the tough-scheduling love this season, and the coaching staff's demands of being dedicated to the weight room in the offseason.

"This program owes itself to the kids," Andersen said. "Not to anything else."

Marsing is led by sophomore quarterback Austin Williams, a dual-threat quarterback who presents unique problems for most defenses.

"They love to throw the ball," Andersen said. "Two things they do well, is they throw the deep ball and the quarterback is mobile. I'm sure their gameplan is to try to pass the ball up the seams and deep on us."

last two seasons at state, awaiting in the first round.

"They do want to continue to keep (the undefeated season), but it's more of a fun goal they have rather than being pressured by that number," said Camas County coach Shelli Schroeder. "They're a very self-motivated team, and we haven't had to talk to them about what it is to respect their opponent and the game. They're very grounded and very well-aware of that. They appreciate what they've done, their wins and how hard they've had to work to get that."

Buhl returns to the 3A tournament for the first time since 2006, when the Indians finished fourth. They square off against perennial state participant Bear Lake in the first round on Friday afternoon, but they'll have plenty of time beforehand to get settled.

The Indians actually left at midnight, hoping to arrive to Coeur d'Alene late this morning or early this afternoon ahead of an afternoon practice session. It should get the travel kinks out well ahead of Friday's play.

If our girls play their game, like the way they've been all year, they should be fine. We just need to focus on what needs to be done," said Buhl coach Denny Moretto. "I just want them to go out there and be proud of how they play. We've had games where we won and we didn't play well, and those don't feel like wins, but we've also had games where we played well but lost to a better team. The kids know deep down whether they put it out there or not, and they don't feel like they've accomplished anything unless they gave a whole effort."

The 2A tournament has two District IV contestants this season, Declo and Gooding. Declo claimed the district title, while Gooding survived a cross-district play-in match to reach the tournament. Declo opens with Ririe, the runner-up out of a traditionally tough District VI, while Gooding starts play with District III champ Nampa Christian.

Both District IV teams are optimistic about their chances, but it'll be a tough ask. Districts III and VI have produced the last 11 champions in the 2A tournament, and the last District IV team to win it all was Filer in 1997, which was also the last time any district team outside of the 1A ranks won a volleyball title.

Hagerman, a three-time champion and winner of the last combined 1A title, opens up 1A Division I tournament play against District II champion Troy.

school history, scoring 39.6 points and gaining 408.7 yards per game. In comparison, the 2008 Minico team that reached the Class 4A semifinals averaged 33.5 points and 335.8 yards.

However, the Spartans had a serious setback two weeks ago when leading rusher Brady May suffered an ankle injury. After averaging 184.5 yards per game this season, he was limited to just 30 yards on nine carries last week against Twin Falls. May is expected to play Friday, but it's uncertain how effective he'll be.

What's more, Tanner Stallings, who was leading the Spartans with 12 tackles per game, is out with a knee injury.

"Unfortunately we're decimated by injuries, but the whole point was to have a system in place that we could plug different guys in there and we could still attack," Perrigot said. "Plus I like the fact that we're versatile and Shay (Chandler) can throw the ball if we need him to. If we do what we're supposed to, I like our chances."

Hillcrest, which is just three seasons removed from winning the state championship, finished the regular season with back-to-back losses to Shelley and Blackfoot.

The Knights rush for 321.2 yards per game in their double-wing offense, led by junior running back Caden Neuerburg, who has rushed for 1,412 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Minico's saving grace may be its solid run defense, which has limited opponents to around 120 yards per game. Along with the offensive changes, Perrigot said the Spartans also made some defensive tweaks, with the ultimate goal to "train the kids to take that next step."

We'll soon find out if it worked.

JUICY MATCHUP IN STEEL CITY

ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the Patriots are the NFL's team of the last decade, the Steelers are a close runner-up.

Indeed, Pittsburgh has won two Super Bowls since the Patriots last grabbed the title. Since 2005, the Steel Curtain owns three AFC crowns to one for New England.

But the Patriots (5-1) have won three of the last four meetings and Tom Brady nearly always outplays Ben Roethlisberger when they face off. New England is 6-1 against Pittsburgh when Brady starts, and he is averaging 286 yards passing a game with 14 touchdowns against three interceptions versus the Steelers.

Even when the Steelers have been strong on the turnover charts, it hasn't helped much against Brady and Co. Now, Pittsburgh (5-2) is at the bottom of the conference with a minus-9 differential and has a measly three takeaways. That must change Sunday at Heinz Field when the 3-point favorite Patriots visit.

"I've been here for most of those losses, (Brady) has had our number," linebacker Larry Foote said. "We have to try and correct that this Sunday."

It is no easy chore, particularly with AFC East leader New England coming off a bye. Still, the Patriots are struggling on defense, Brady has been sacked 11 times and thrown eight picks. Pittsburgh has 17 sacks and has won three straight to take the AFC North lead.

"They don't dance around. They're not finesse whatsoever," Patriots defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth said. "Everybody runs hard. They don't mind hitting. They like to hit. It's a very physical team. More physical than we have seen this year."

And New England is more potent offensively than anyone the Steelers have seen, ranked first in yards passing and overall offense and averaging just under 31 points a game.

"They are doing what they usually do," Pittsburgh coach Mike Tomlin said.

Which means beating the Steelers.

No Beer Here At Pan-Am Games

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUADALAJARA, Mexico • The Bolerama Tapatio is rocking with fans chanting “ME-HI-CO, ME-HI-CO, ME-HI-CO,” drowning out the thunder of falling pins.

The bleachers are set up where the ball racks would be, and no one is wearing rental shoes with the sizes embossed in big numbers on the back.

And finally, none of the competitors are swilling beer.

This isn’t just any old bowling alley, this is the Pan American Games.

“There are a lot of people who bowl, but not a lot who do it at this level,” said Chris Barnes, who won gold for the United States in men’s doubles. “The same with soccer. There are a lot of people who can kick the ball. That does not make them soccer players.”

Bowling has an image problem, and top officials know it. The sport has a low profile, it draws few fans and little media attention, and big-time sponsors are scarce.

Kevin Dornberger, the president of the sports governing body, the FIQ, said plans are afoot for a televised world tour in 2013.

“That will go a long way toward curing our visibility problem,” said Dornberger, adding that people need to distinguish between “beer and fun” bowling and the elite variety.

The tournament in Guadalajara is another step in that direction.

The Pan American Games is about as close as many of the world’s best bowlers can get to the Olympics. Like squash, cricket, roller-skating and sumo wrestling, bowling is recognized by the International Olympic Committee but not part of the Olympic program.

“I think we deserve to be in the Olympics,” said Neil Stremmel, the vice president of the United States Bowling Congress. “You can see somebody at your local bowling center smoking and drinking, and who has a big gut. They might bowl a good game here or there. But those aren’t the people you see on TV, or the people you see here.”

Bowlers want more respect, and they get it at the Pan American Games.

At the 42-lane Bolerama Tapatio, Barnes and teammate Bill O’Neill mingle with fans, cheerfully signing autographs and making small talk. Two of the world’s top-ranked bowlers, they teamed for gold in doubles and one is likely to earn another title in singles on Thursday.

Antonio Franco Munoz paid $20 for a souvenir bowling pin, walked right up to the two Americans and asked them to sign it.

“Here is was very easy to get the autograph,” Munoz said. “I can’t imagine trying this at a football stadium where Chicharito is playing. Impossible.”

Chicharito is the nickname of Javier Hernandez, a native of Guadalajara who plays for Manchester United and could be Mexico’s most famous athlete.

Bill O'Neill, from the United States, competes during the men's bowling doubles final at the Pan American Games in Guadalajara, Mexico, on Tuesday. O'Neill and Chris Barnes won the gold medal.

You can see somebody at your local bowling center smoking and drinking, and who has a big gut. ... But those aren't the people you see on TV, or the people you see here.

Neil Stremmel, U.S. Bowling Congress vice president

Far below Chicharito in the psyche of many sport fans in Mexico are Sandra Gongora and Aseret Zetter, who won silver in women’s doubles. Gongora graduated from Wichita State in 2010, which is to bowling what Duke is to college basketball.

“Bowling has the same excitement as other sports,” said local fan Pedro Manjarrez, drinking a beer from a foam cup and cheering on

Hoops Focus Still There for Summitt

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. • Pat Summitt has handled the talk about her dementia diagnosis the same way she manages Tennessee basketball and her life: with control and determination.

The Hall of Fame coach dictated how news of her condition was revealed in August and has made it clear since that she wants the focus to be on the Lady Volunteers basketball program and not her.

“That’s the reason for when I came out with dementia and Alzheimer’s,” Summitt said. “I knew I had to do it, and I did it. I’ve got a good game plan. I feel good about it, and I think it motivated this team.”

She’s stuck to that plan, speaking reluctantly at practices about her diagnosis while steering conversations to Tennessee’s strengths, weaknesses and chances for a ninth national championship.

On Thursday, she’ll face more questions about dementia and Alzheimer’s disease when she makes her first major public appearance for the annual Southeastern Conference media day in Birmingham, Ala.

“I don’t want it to be all about me. I want to be able to help other people know you can live your life with dementia,” Summitt said.

She’s got plenty of basketball to talk about, with the Lady Vols unanimously picked by the media this week to defend their SEC title and senior forward Shekinna Stricklen tabbed as the league’s preseason player of the year.

Assistant coach Dean Lockwood doesn’t think Summitt or anyone on the team will be distracted by talk of Summitt’s condition.

“Once you’ve accepted something, it becomes part of your daily existence. That’s part of us now,” Lockwood said. “They’ll answer questions, but after a while it’s going to become ‘ho hum.’ (The players are) very focused on doing well. I think maybe this has given them an incentive to do it even more for a coach they love and respect.”

Summitt made it clear to Pat Summitt insisted nothing would change — she was still the coach and she still expected them to win a national championship — and so far they’re on track.

the Lady Vols that nothing would change after she told them in August she’d been diagnosed with early onset Alzheimer’s. She was still their coach, and the plan to win a national championship this season hadn’t changed.

What has changed for Summitt is her daily routine.

While drinking her morning coffee she’ll play brain-bender games on her iPad or work on math skills to help keep her mind sharp. She adds coconut oil to her daily protein shakes. Son Tyler Summitt writes out her to-do lists to keep her organized, and Summitt occasionally will take a few extra breaks outside of her daily naps that she claims have been a key to her ongoing success.

She still has her friends and staff over for dinner from time to time, and she has no problem joking with her assistants, like she did after a 6 a.m. Monday practice last week.

“She walked in and said, ‘Who called this practice? I thought I was the head coach. I wouldn’t be calling a practice this early,’” said associate head coach Holly Warlick, the offending party.

Summitt has long relied on her assistants to scout opponents and develop players. Warlick, Lockwood and assistant coach Mickie DeMoss have been more involved in running practice drills this month, but Sum-

- Evaluate current solids handling issues and prepare for the future.
- Identification of problem areas.
- Assessment of existing equipment and operations.
- Anticipated design life without upgrades.
- Evaluate the Plant Capital Improvement Plan.
- Phase I report shall be completed within 6 weeks of award.

Phase II: (Phase II shall be delivered within 16 weeks of award)

1) Please factor in

i. "If pretreatment facility is not implemented" or

ii. If pretreatment plant is implemented

- Anticipated improvements needed for a twenty year design.
- Establish a timeline for needed upgrades.
- A detailed milestone summary representing what must be upgraded in order to be in compliance with the permit for twenty years.
- Resolve, with both biological and chemical solutions plant phosphorus issues.
- Possible improvements to allow adequate nitrification/denitrification.
- Engineer an Emergency Backup Plan
- Fiscal analysis identifying possible funding sources for implementation of plant upgrades as identified.

SUBMITTALS:

Submittals are to include the following information: Firm name, address, phone & fax number, and Name of Principal-in-Charge together with the name of the Project Manager and Organizational Structure assembled to accomplish the project goals. Submittals will be evaluated and ranked based on the following criteria:

- Key personnel
- Firm experience with DEQ and EPA requirements
- Firm experience with environmental and wastewater treatment plant engineering
- Ability to provide product in a timely manner
- Approach to project
- Familiarity with relevant codes and standards
- Past performance/references

Each Proposal shall be no more than ten 8 x 11 single sided pages in length not counting the introduction letter submitted and labeled "Jerome WWTP RFQ". Six copies of the proposal shall be delivered to Jerome City Clerk, 152 East Ave A, Jerome, Idaho. Submittals are due November 28, 2011 at the above address no later than 5 P.M. No submittals will be accepted after that time and date. Both phases of the project shall be submitted as described in the above requirements no later than 5:00 PM on stated dates above. Any questions should be directed to Shonna Fraser, City Clerk (208) 324-8189.

City of Jerome is an equal opportunity employer.

The best qualified firm or team, all factors considered, will be selected for agreement discussions. The City has a budget of $50,000.00 for the project but will negotiate an agreement based upon fair and reasonable compensation for the services proposed and agreed upon. The City reserves the right to retain the Consultant for design and construction services to implement the results of the study. The City also reserves the right to reject any or all responses to this RFQ. No fees or expenses will be paid or provided for costs associated with the preparation of any response. Information and/or material received in response to this RFQ will not be returned.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
On February 21, 2012 at the hour of 10:30 AM, of said day, in the office of Alliance Title & Escrow Corp. TVP located at 1411 Falls Avenue East, Suite 1315 Twin Falls, ID 83301.
Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, cashiers check, certified check or tellers check, (from a bank which has a branch in the community at the site of the sale), money order, State of Idaho check or local government check, or cash equivalent in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the same time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to wit:
Lot 4 in Block 1 of Golden Spur Subdivision # 11, Twin Falls County, Idaho
THE TRUSTEE HAS NO KNOWLEDGE OF A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED REAL PROPERTY, BUT FOR PURPOSES OF COMPLIANCE WITH IDAHO CODE, SECTION 60-113, THE TRUSTEE HAS BEEN INFORMED THAT THE STREET ADDRESS OF: 1009 Jacklyne Filer, ID 83328, MAY SOMETIMES BE ASSOCIATED WITH SAID REAL PROPERTY.
If the successful bidder cannot provide the bid price by means of one of the above means of payment, the sale will be postponed for 10 minutes only to allow the high bidder to obtain payment in a form prescribed herein above. If the high bidder is unsuccessful in obtaining payment as directed within 10 minutes, the sale will be re-held immediately and any bid by the high bidder from the previous sale, will be rejected, all in accordance with Idaho Code 45-1502 et. Sec.
Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by Jeffrey Scott Posey a single man, as Grantor to Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of United States of America acting through the Rural Housing Service, or successor agency, United States Department of Agriculture (formerly Farmers Home Administration or Rural Economic & Community Development) as Beneficiary, recorded July 10, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-016932, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.
The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to: Make principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note, as amended. The original loan amount was $102,250.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 5.7500% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated July 6, 2007. Payments are in default for the months of March 2011 through and including September 2011 in the amount of $735.55 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reinstatement. The balance now due is $102,924.79 in Principal; Interest is $3,064.49, subsidy granted is $0 and fees currently assessed are $382.76 computed through September 22, 2011 with interest accruing thereafter at the daily rate of $16.2625. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.
The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $102,924.79, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, I placed my daughter for adoption. The circumstances that led me to make the decision were compelling. After 18 years, I was surprised and elated to hear from her. She's 23, has a child of her own and is engaged to be married. I tried to maintain communication, but she stopped corresponding.

After a period of not wanting to talk, she is now trying to get back in touch with me and her siblings. We're unsure what to think about this and questioning her motives. Does she truly want us to be involved with her and her daughter? Or is this a way to get gifts for her child and her upcoming wedding?

I would like to discuss this with her, but I'm hesitant for fear of losing her again. I always wanted a relationship with my daughter. I'm confused and afraid of being hurt again. What can I do?

— BIRTHMOM
IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BIRTH MOM: By all means have a discussion with your daughter, but do it in reference to the fact that you were puzzled and hurt when she suddenly ceased communication with you. Let her explain what led to it. She may have been dealing with mixed emotions, which seems logical to me.

Because you want a relationship with her, you may have to accept that it will proceed in fits and starts — and may not blossom the way you might wish it to. You'll know more as you get to know her better.

DEAR ABBY: My mom goes overboard with gifts for my two sons when she goes on vacation or when she shops for birthdays and Christmas. I have asked her to scale back and not buy them each a box full of stuff. I tried to be tactful, but she said they "expect" Grandma to give them stuff.

The problem is she gives them random things that hold no interest for them. My sons are always kind and thank her, but their rooms are packed full of toys, many never opened, because they have too much stuff.

When I asked Mom to just give the boys a book about the next place she visits, she became defensive. I don't know how to tell her in a way she'll understand that she's wasting her hard-earned money on gifts my children won't use or have no interest in. Can you help me?

— TOO MUCH STUFF IN IOWA

DEAR TOO MUCH: Try something like this: "Mom, you are a generous sweetheart, but you are giving them too much stuff. They're INUNDATED! There are toys in their rooms that have never been opened because they have outgrown them. That's why this year we are donating the unopened ones to a homeless shelter. It hurts me to see you spend money on items the boys don't use — so please, cut back on the number of gifts, and before spending your hard-earned money, ask me what they can use."

DEAR ABBY: I have become close friends with an elderly lady, "Adele." Unfortunately, I don't know her family. I care for Adele and would like to be contacted if anything ever happened to her or if she was not able to call me herself. Would it be appropriate to ask her to have her family call me if she ever has an emergency?

— SOMEONE WHO CARES, ANDOVER, MINN.

DEAR SOMEONE: Yes, it would, and I'm sure Adele would be touched if you suggested it.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

“There are occasions when it is undoubtedly better to incur loss than to make gain.” — Plautus

Let's see how imaginative you are. Look at all four hands in the diagrammed deal and try to figure out how South went down in three no-trump. Bear in mind that South was an expert player and was unlikely to do anything absurd.

On West's low heart lead against three no-trump, East played the queen and South had to win the king. South decided to live or die by the diamond finesse and not mess with the spades. Going for five tricks in spades, necessary if hearts were not 4-4, would require West to have both spade honors.

Accordingly, South cashed the two top clubs, then crossed to the spade ace to take the diamond finesse. But a funny thing happened on the way to that finesse, East dropped the spade king under the ace!

Now who can blame South for thinking that it would be safer to play West for the spade jack than East for the diamond king? After all, if South can score five spade tricks, he doesn't need the diamond finesse. South crossed to the diamond ace and ran the spade nine. Shock! East won the jack, returned a heart, and six tricks later (the opponents were able to cash five more hearts and the diamond king, plus the spade jack), South wound up down three!

East had visualized declarer's problem and gave him a losing option. South swallowed the bait.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bil Keane

10-27

© 2011 Bil Keane, Inc.
Dist. by King Features Synd.
www.familycircus.com

“At what age do my calves turn into cows?”

Today is Thursday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 2011. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 27, 1811, inventor Isaac Merritt Singer, founder of the sewing machine company that bears his name, was born in Pittstown, N.Y.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1787, the first of the Federalist Papers, a series of essays calling for ratification of the United States Constitution, was published.

In 1858, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

In 1880, Theodore Roosevelt married his first wife, Alice Lee.

In 1886, the musical fantasy “A Night on Bald Mountain,” written by Modest Mussorgsky and revised after his death by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, was performed in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1922, the first annual celebration of Navy Day took place.

In 1938, Du Pont announced a name for its new synthetic yarn: “nylon.”

In 1947, “You Bet Your Life,” starring Groucho Marx, premiered on ABC Radio. (It later became a television show on NBC.)

In 1971, the Democratic Republic of Congo was renamed the Republic of Zaire (but it went back to its previous name in 1997).

In 1978, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were named winners of the Nobel Peace Prize for their progress toward achieving a Middle East accord.

In 1995, a sniper killed one soldier and wounded 18 others at Fort Bragg, N.C. (Paratrooper William J. Kreutzer was convicted in the shootings, and condemned to death; however, the sentence was later commuted to life in prison.)

Ten years ago: In Washington, the search for deadly anthrax widened to thousands of businesses and 30 mail distribution centers. The Arizona Diamondbacks defeated the New York Yankees in Game 1 of the World Series, 9-1.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush said the United States did not torture prisoners, trying to calm a controversy created when Vice President Dick Cheney embraced the suggestion that a “dunk in water” might be useful to get terrorist suspects to talk. The St. Louis Cardinals beat the Detroit Tigers 4-2 in Game 5 to wrap up their first World Series title in nearly a quarter-century and 10th overall.

One year ago: Dozens of Jewish extremists hoisting Israeli flags defiantly marched through the Arab-Israeli town of Umm el-Fahm, chanting “death to terrorists” and touching off clashes between rock-hurling residents and police. Former Argentine President Nestor Kirchner died at age 60. The San Francisco Giants won the first game of the World Series, defeating the Texas Rangers 11-7.

IF OCTOBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might dream the impossible dream this month — but since you are at a zenith of personal ambition, you can accomplish much through visionary planning. In January and early February, people in general will admire you and view you through rose-colored glasses. If you are single, a soul mate may cross your path. If you hope to improve your career prospects through a promotion or job search, that is the very best time for interviewing or meeting the public. Next March, enjoy the fruits of your labors and look for helpful lucky breaks that will relieve you of onerous responsibilities.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mild flirtations can grow into true romance under these stars. Work hard to achieve success and things will all fall into place. Long-term peace and security is possible with anything started this week.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): “Absolutely fabulous, darling” That is what people will say about your appearance, your performance or your ideas in the next few days. This is a good time to flaunt your talents and abilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You’re not always going to get what you want. Getting what you need is more likely.. Count on lucky stars to answer your prayers while keeping the Big Bad Wolf away from your door.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cooperation is in the air. The time is ripe to ask for a commitment or to put the fire under plans on the back burner. You can safely put money to work for you in major investments such as a home or car.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Prepare to endure pressure to perform at top speed. You can reach a worthy goal in record-breaking time if you begin a project or launch a new enterprise now. Making your moves now ensures success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Increase your net worth. Take advantage of excellent celestial conditions to sign agreements and seal deals. If affection is at the top of your to-do list, this is the time to ask for a solid commitment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cupid is making his rounds. Don’t be surprised if a chance meeting sets off amorous sparks or a coworker begins to take interest. Set long-range plans for your financial security into motion now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A busy beaver gets the best results. If you look for love, you may find someone special. The people you meet now seem to have your best interests in mind, so cultivate new friendships and form bonds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You’re charismatic under these stars. Do your best to win friends and influence others. Singles might find the soul mate of their dreams; business matters started now will flourish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be ensnared by an obsession that fills every waking moment. You can accomplish great things if you apply your passions to worthy objectives and concentrate on building a solid future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Propel yourself to prosperity. Lock in fruitful conditions for future affluence by taking the essential first steps now. Long-term plans will blossom and bear fruit, so go ahead and follow your instincts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Angels are looking out for your welfare. Make crucial decisions and ask for commitments. Beneficial relationships should experience peace and tranquility; bad influences fade to the background.

When Pumpkins Fly: Cannon Builders Craft Contraptions for Cause

IDAHO PRESS-TRIBUNE

NAMPA • Three amateur artillery teams took aim at targets in a field Sunday afternoon to benefit Canyon County Habitat for Humanity, their air-powered cannons lobbing pumpkins thousands of feet and reducing wooden doors to splinters.

It was a perfect day for the fourth annual Great Pumpkin Launch, hosted by the Whistle family on their Nampa farm. Clear blue skies and temperatures in the high 60s greeted onlookers as gourds flew through the air like cannonballs. A horn blast warned onlookers before each powerful burst of air, followed by the audible whistle of a pumpkin speeding away at near-supersonic velocities.

Sunday's event was just for fun, and to raise money for the needy in Canyon County. But competitive pumpkin launching is a serious business, culminating in the annual World Champion Punkin Chunkin event in Delaware.

So just how far can these home-build howitzers launch a gourd?

"I have shot 3,900 feet," pumpkin cannoneer Justin Harrison said of his trailer-mounted contraption. "I've shot a slug of ice over a mile. ... This is a top cannon in the world for distance. If you go to the World Champion Punkin Chunkin, and you look at how far everybody shot, anything within 4,000 feet is top six."

Harrison's machine can throw a pumpkin so far, in fact, that it's nearly impossible to track its path — they tend to disappear from view near the peak of their arc.

And they can do serious damage to anything that gets in their way.

"I can literally put a pumpkin through a car," Harrison said. "I don't care what part — not the engine, but anywhere in the body — without breaking the pumpkin. Through sheet metal, both sides."

Wayne Richey, another local cannon builder, had perhaps the most unique design — his device was made to look like a giant double-barreled shotgun. And, he said, it takes a certain caliber of person to participate in this activity.

"Fairly sharp people build these. These are real guns," Richey said with a laugh. "The people that do this aren't rednecks, they're fairly competent people. Very capable and intelligent."

In addition to pumpkin launching, Sunday's event also featured a small farmers' market, live music from the High Desert Band, and games for the kids. All proceeds benefit the Canyon County chapter of Habitat for Humanity, which builds homes for those in need throughout the community.

"We just finished building a home in Caldwell. It's going to close by Thanksgiving probably," executive director Marcia Davis said. "And we just started another house in Nampa. We're building that one in conjunction with Nampa School Districts."

And, Davis continued, Habitat always needs help. Anyone who can swing a hammer or work in their building materials thrift store is invited to volunteer. Of course, cash donations are always welcome.

"It's expensive to build a house," she said with a laugh.

Community Garden Helps N. Idaho Student Grow

BY BRIAN WALKER
Coeur d'Alene Press

POST FALLS • A community garden has helped Kylie Hancock grow out of her shell and help those in need.

"I was kind of a shy person because I didn't grow up around a lot of people," the senior at New Vision High said.

Mark Jones, the garden's organizer, said the power of the garden isn't just assisting area seniors and others who could use fresh fruits and vegetables.

It's making a difference in the lives of students such as Hancock.

"Kylie has really come into her own," Jones said. "She was one of the inaugural students involved in the layout of the garden three years ago. She was a bashful kid to start with, but after a couple years of participating in the garden, she's grown a life of her own."

Hancock has been instrumental in diversifying the garden's activities.

Last year she led an apple juice project in which 2,000 pounds of apples were made into juice after a processor was borrowed from an area farmer. Students made their own labels and did the bottling themselves at the senior center.

She's also assisted with a "farm to schools" project in which produce from the garden made its way to five schools for students.

Hancock worked with the school district's former food services director Annie Mader to make the program a reality.

"Gardening has always been a passion of mine; I'm a nature type of person," Hancock said. "I helped out my grandma a lot."

Hancock said she also enjoyed reupholstering chairs at the senior center with fellow students last year after the facility was flooded by water from a broken pipe.

WRITER

South-central Idaho's best and largest news provider seeks a talented writer to dig deep into the intersection of people and policy to consistently bring our readers the stories they'll keep talking about.

The assignment covers an eight-county area from which the right candidate will seek the most compelling stories from both rural and urban settings. Tasks will range from rooting out the reasons behind utility increases that hit thousands of pocketbooks to profiling a thinning group of Pearl Harbor attack survivors who call the area home.

The reporter's primary responsibility will be to find and develop six snappy enterprise stories per week and pitch in on other beats when needed, such as when our government reporter is covering the annual state legislative session in Boise.

Kootenai County Reports Spike in Home Burglaries

POST FALLS (AP) • Authorities in northern Idaho's Kootenai County suspect lagging unemployment in the region could be a reason behind a dramatic increase in home burglaries, including break-ins that are happening in broad daylight.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's department has received 91 reports of home burglaries over the past two months, more than four times the 21 burglaries reported during the same period last year.

The agency has received reports of suspicious people checking out residences by knocking on doors during the daytime hours and pretending to sell firewood or offer dog-walking services, said police department spokesman Maj. Ben Wolfinger.

Wolfinger said the poor economy and illegal drugs are likely the reasons for the increased break-ins.

"We expected some increases in theft and burglaries as the unemployment has drug on," Wolfinger told the Spokesman-Review. "That's certainly an issue. It's hard to say. Historically, where you've got a burglar, you've got a drug user. So we don't know if there's a new influx of addicts in the area."

The homes that have been targeted are blocked from the view of neighbors possibly by a long driveway or trees or shrubs. Sheriff's deputies have leads, but have not made any arrests in connection with the break-ins, Wolfinger said Monday.
