★★ SPECIAL ELECTION DAY COVERAGE ★★

TWIN FALLS CITY COUNCIL

Not all Incumbents, but Familiar Faces

Twin Falls voters turned to trusted, familiar faces to send to the city council on Tuesday. • Four seats were up for election and contested to one degree or another, with two incumbents not seeking re-election. But voters went with experience, not fresh faces. The end result will be a council with two members that have served in the past — Shawn Barigar and Chris Talkington. • Retired Twin Falls Police Chief Jim Munn will be on board too. And Rebecca Mills Sojka, on the council since January, impressed voters enough to eke out a strong win in a four-way race.

BURLEY CITY COUNCIL

Burley City Council Race Goes Down to the Wire

With six of 11 precincts counted late Tuesday, three Burley City Council newcomers were in the lead to be seated in January.

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

Russell Mallory

Burley City Council newcomer Russell Mallory led all candidates with 430 votes received.

"This proves the city was ready for a change," said Mallory, 64.

He added that "I think we should have fun on the city council. It's serious business, but there's no reason we can't have some fun."

Incumbents Jay Lenkersdorfer and Vaughn Egan likely fell short of re-election, as they trailed late Tuesday.

John Craner

Craner, a 56-year-old regional banking administrator, tallied 412 votes from the six precincts, placing him firmly in second place among vote recipients.

"I'm happy with the way things are shaping up," he said. "I'm pleased it's working like I thought it should."

Craner said that the candidates leading in the race should not be criticized as "Yes men," but seen as people who will work together.

Randy Hawkins

Randy Hawkins, a 60-year-old retired banker, garnered 312 votes from the six precincts.

"We won't always agree on everything, but we will always discuss it," he said of the three leading vote recipients. "I think this is what we anticipated."

Joyce Merrill and Dennis Dexter received 221 and 218 votes, respectively, putting them nearly 100 votes outside of Hawkins' grasp of the third council seat.

Burley Street Levy Dumped by Voters

Voters didn't give the city an extra $200,000 annually to repair streets, with early returns showing the bond issue falling short of required 66.7 percent approval.

Seat 2 • Munn

Voters went with a familiar face, but one that's new to the council. Retired Twin Falls Police Chief Jim Munn was easily elected to his first council term.

Robert Hinkle, who advocated for decriminalizing marijuana use, ran as a write-in candidate against Munn.

"Being given the privilege by voters to work on the council is really a big deal for me," Munn said.

Seat 3 • Barigar

Shawn Barigar is returning to the council. It will be his second term — he was out of the game since 2007, after losing a bid for another term.

"I'm very happy," he said. "I appreciate the support that I received from the voters and the people who helped me."

Barigar beat out Councilman Trip Craig, who angled for a fourth term, and Allen Starley.

Seat 4 • Talkington

City Hall won't be new to Chris Talkington, who has 20 years of experience on the council, including a stint as mayor in the 1980s.

"It will be good to be back in the saddle again," said Talkington, who was last on the council in 2005.

He narrowly beat Suzanne Hawkins in a four-way race that included Wayne Bohrn and Jim Schouten.

Seat 7 • Mills Sojka

It was a four-way race, but Rebecca Mills Sojka still managed to get more than half of the votes.

"I look forward to continuing what I've been doing for the past 10 months — just serving," she said.

She's been in the seat since January after her appointment to fill a vacancy. Sojka, 27, beat a crop of three other candidates all younger than 35: Neil Christensen, Christopher Reid, and Kevin Cope.

KIMBERLY MAYOR

Armstrong Wins Kimberly Mayoral Race

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Tracy Armstrong has unseated incumbent David Overacre as Kimberly mayor.

The 39-year-old received approximately 57 percent of the vote, with Overacre taking about 25 percent. Jerry Morton earned nearly 13 percent, while write-in candidate Eric Carter took roughly 5 percent. Nearly 700 residents cast their vote on Tuesday.

"I'm a little speechless," Armstrong said. "It's exciting. I'm looking forward to serving the city of Kimberly and the people. The title doesn't mean as much to me as the ability to serve the people."

Armstrong ran on a campaign of reuniting the city, as residents have balked on numerous issues through the past few years, including steep utility increases.

Beyond the Wri'en Word: Figuring out the Idaho Accent

After interviewing dozens of Bhutanese refugees over the past year, I've learned something: Even the ones fluent in English have no idea what I'm saying if I speak like I normally do.

So I've adopted an affected accent for these interviews. I say words more slowly and deliberately, and actually pronounce my consonants.

It's a big shift for this Idaho native. I paid attention to how I talk compared with friends from back East. My speech is a bit slower, and there isn't much enunciation.

I'm not alone. My dad, who also grew up in Idaho, has a distinct drawl.

I found a couple of online mentions of Idaho and Western accents. Apparently, we natives swallow our t's.

Try saying "kitten" aloud. Did you hear a t? If you grew up in Idaho or Utah, the word probably sounded more like "kih'en."

Our vowels are also muddled. Say "steering wheel." There is a good chance that second word sounded like "will."

But I couldn't find much else on Google. I called a friend who studied anthropology and took linguistics classes.

There's a reason I barely found anything, she said. No one wastes their time studying the Western accent.

"People don't think we're interesting because we're so close to standard," she said. That's standard American English — think the neutral, accent-less way news anchors speak.

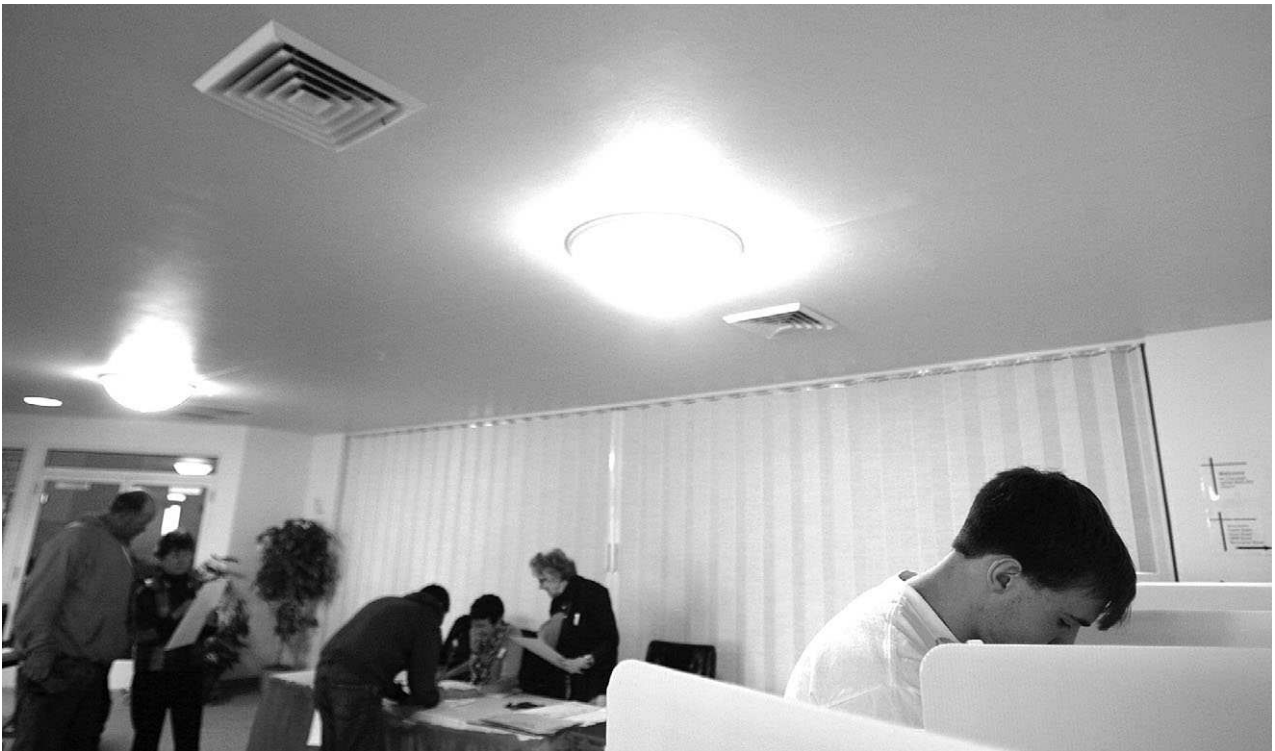

But I knew I wasn't imagining the drawl. I called Twin Falls historian Jim Gentry to see what he thought. He couldn't speak specifically about linguistics, but he had a theory.

"There were a lot of individuals who moved into this region from the South — from Arkansas, certainly Oklahoma — during the Dust Bowl," Gentry said. "So undoubtedly, that impacted the drawl and so forth." My dad definitely sounds more like a Southerner than he does Ted Koppel or Brian Williams.

As for me, I've figured out how to make my Idahoan speech slightly more understandable for the refugees. My handwriting, however, might be a lost cause.

"They want progress, but they want it in moderation," Armstrong said of Kimberly residents. "My primary focus out of the gate is to readdress the utilities and see if we can less then burden on the people."

Overacre became a polarizing figure in city government just a few years into his term. He became mayor in 2008, and some citizens attempted a recall petition two years later. He served on the city council from 1993 to 2005.

Armstrong will be seated as mayor in January.

Kimberly Voters Pick Sowka, Eisenhower for Council

Constance Renae Sowka and James Eisenhower earned seats on the Kimberly City Council, with Sowka receiving 25 percent of the vote and Eisenhower nearly 21 percent. In the field of six, the top two vote-getters received seats. Marshall Bishop came up just short with 17 percent. Incumbent councilwoman Lee McKinlay took 16 percent and will be unseated, while Jon Boyer and George Plew only earned 10 percent each. Nearly 1,300 votes were cast for council spots.

Fife Faces Grand Theft, Burglary Charges

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Getting shot hasn't stopped Lee Fife from getting in trouble with the law.

The 40-year-old Twin Falls man is back in jail on new charges, even as he awaits a trial for allegedly assaulting officers earlier this year. Fife is now accused of grand theft and two counts of burglary, as investigators say he and Jerry Hance, 28, of Buhl, broke into manufactured homes owned by Clayton Homes and stole TVs and Blu-ray players.

According to reports from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, the men allegedly burglarized multiple locations together on Sunday morning. However, Hance and Fife are charged in separate cases.

Hance was arrested early Sunday morning, following a foot chase with deputies investigating a suspicious vehicle parked on a county road less than a mile west of Filer. Deputies found a woman in the vehicle who claimed she and Hance had run out of gas, but they determined she was a lookout. Hance was found by other deputies within a quarter-mile of the vehicle and detained him after a foot chase.

Hance was allegedly trying to take a Ford Ranger from SeaPac of Idaho, a fish hatchery with an office located near Filer, and steal items from a pump house on the property. He is charged with felony grand theft and two counts of burglary. Held on $50,000 bond, he is scheduled for a Nov. 18 preliminary hearing.

Fife was not with Hance during this incident, but investigators claim Hance was working with Fife on the Clayton Homes burglaries based on an interview with Hance. Hance is not charged for those alleged thefts.

Hance told deputies on Monday he helped Fife steal speakers from a vehicle parked at Gordon Paving Co., and later steal the electronics from the unoccupied manufactured homes. The report notes Hance had to kick in a door because Fife said he was physically unable — Twin Falls officers shot Fife on April 5 after he allegedly rammed police cars with his own. He was charged with felony aggravated assault, aggravated battery and eluding an officer.

Fife was out on bail for his assault case, which is set for a February jury trial.

Fife was interviewed on Monday, and investigators executed a search warrant later that day, finding a log book from Gordon Paving, numerous tools and tool boxes, speakers and a television.

Deputies on Tuesday again interviewed Fife, who said he was never in those locations, and arrested him. He is now held on $100,000 bond for the new criminal complaint. A preliminary hearing is slated for Nov. 18.

TFPD Reports 86 Vehicle Vandalism Incidents in 1 Night

TIMES-NEWS

Dozens of Twin Falls residents awoke Tuesday morning to find their vehicles smashed and trashed.

Twin Falls police say they received 86 reports of vandalism across the city, with no one section of town hit more than another. Officer Luke Allen said the department takes on average just 50 reports of vandalism per month.

There were no reports of theft, only vandalism in the form of busted windows in cars, trucks and campers parked outside. The first calls came at 1:22 a.m., and Allen said it appears the suspects moved south to north and then west to east. Police do not know if they are dealing with an individual or multiple suspects.

"Right now, we are not ruling anything out," he said. "This is a huge incident."

Police are asking anyone with information on the crime spree to call the department at 735-4357 or Crime Stoppers at 732-5387. Also, any individual or business with a video surveillance system is asked to check footage from early Tuesday morning and report any suspicious findings.

JUDGE GRANTS 3RD DEATH PENALTY EXTENSION FOR CLEVELAND CASE

TIMES-NEWS

Cleveland

District Judge G. Richard Bevan allowed a third capital punishment deadline extension last week in the case of accused murderer Clark Cleveland.

The new deadline is Nov. 14 for filing intent to seek the death penalty for Clark Cleveland, who is charged with first-degree murder and 11 other felonies. Cleveland, 26, of Spring Creek, Nev., is accused of fatally shooting Tracy Ivie, a 43-year-old Utah man, and taking a hostage at the Twin Falls Hampton Inn on July 15.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs on Tuesday said Cleveland's public defenders have requested the extensions as they gather more facts on the case, and he has agreed to file for the extension each time.

Loebs has said in the past that seeking an extension is not an indication of his decision to pursue the death penalty as a punishment for Cleveland's alleged crimes.

The order was signed last Wednesday.

State law says a prosecutor has 60 days from the day of a defendant's arraignment to file notice to seek the death penalty. Bevan granted a first extension in late September, then another in late October. Cleveland's jury trial is scheduled for Jan. 17.

ISP Patrol Nabs Drugs, Stolen Vehicle

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • Idaho State Police, with the assistance of a K-9 officer from the Cassia County Sheriff's Office, conducted an emphasis patrol on Interstate 84 last Friday that led to the recovery of a stolen vehicle.

The ISP Criminal Interdiction Team conducted the special patrol on I-84 between the Kasota Road exit to the I-84/86 junction. ISP Trooper Steven Otto located a stolen vehicle out of the Seattle area. Driver Staci Ridgeway, 24, and her passenger, Brian Hawkins, 35, were arrested for felony possession of cocaine and methamphetamine and misdemeanor possession of marijuana. They were taken to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in Burley.

In total the team made 31 traffic stops that also resulted in 11 speeding tickets, two suspended driver citations and three uninsured motorists charges.

HAILEY BAGS PLASTIC BAN

TIMES-NEWS

Plastic bags will not be cast out from Hailey, as voters rejected a ban which would have docked retailers daily for not using paper or reusable bags.

The measure failed as it did not reach a 50 percent majority. Of the 1,484 votes cast, 864 were against the ban.

A group of Wood River High School students got the measure on the ballot. It was intended to reduce waste and encourage more shoppers to use reusable shopping bags or the recycled paper bags Hailey stores already offer.

Some town retailers and Jerome-based bag manufacturer Hilex Poly were firmly against the measure. Retailers say paper costs more and that not everyone has caught on to bringing their own reusable, fabric bags. Hilex Poly reps said the ban would have cost workers their jobs and launched an ad campaign against the measure.

Had the ban passed, retailers could have lost $50 a day in fines if they continued to use plastic.

KETCHUM WON'T CHANGE GOVT. FORMAT

TIMES-NEWS

Ketchum residents decided not to change their form of city government, but only by a narrow margin.

Nearly 57 percent of the 1,022 votes cast were against the format shuffle, meaning results for Tuesday's Ketchum City Council election are void.

Voters had to decide whether to stick with a mayor/council government or move to a manager/council. Since the council's format won't change, a new council won't be seated in January.

Now, the city will schedule a special election for May in which only two seats will be up for grabs, and those are currently held by incumbent Councilmen Larry Helzel and Curtis Kemp. In the null council election from Tuesday, 13 candidates vied for five spots on the new council. Incumbent Nina Jones led the field with 706 votes, followed by incumbent Baird Gourlay with 525, incumbent Randy Hall 421, Kemp 420, and Bob Kesting 388.

JEROME POLICE NOT MOVING ANYTIME SOON

TIMES-NEWS

Jerome police will have to stay in their current location for now.

The department asked voters to approve a $500,000 bond to fund moving police headquarters to a new building, but it fell short of the required 66 percent supermajority. The bond failed as only 63.6 percent of residents supported the move. The measure needed 506 votes but received only 482.

The Jerome City Council in July decided to include the 20-year bond proposal on the ballot and put down a refundable $20,000 deposit for the former Idaho Department of Fish and Game building, located on the 800 block of East Main Street.

The building, city officials hoped, would house city police and alleviate problems the force currently faces with its South Lincoln Avenue facility. The current police station was constructed back in the 1920s and formerly used as a telephone exchange. The partially underground building has leaky walls and a flat roof that drips, even with repairs.

KIMBERLY, JEROME REJECT RECYCLING PROGRAMS

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Kimberly voters said "no" Tuesday to adding recycling to city services.

The measure failed, as only 33 percent of residents supported giving city leaders the ability to create a single-stream recycling program. Mayor-elect Tracy

Armstrong doesn't blame voters for turning the measure down.

"I can attribute that to a lack of confidence the people had in the information passed on to them," Armstrong said on Tuesday night. "They're reluctant to move forward with a lot of things right now. It's probably a wise decision at this time."

Polly Hulsey, city administrator for Kimberly, told the Times-News last month the recycling program could have potentially cut city costs by lowering landfill fees. If passed and created, the program could have added $3.50 to residents' bills.

Jerome city leaders wanted an opinion on a recycling program, and voters rejected the idea, but not by much.

Tuesday's vote would not have led city leaders to take immediate action — rather, it was to gauge how people felt about adding single-stream recycling. Of the 738 votes cast in the matter, it failed 378 to 360, just 18 votes shy.

The city has received a few proposals from companies for a possible recycling service. Residents would likely pay an additional $3.50 per month for each household on top of regular sanitation fees.

Successor to T.F. Learning Center Scrapped

Southern Idaho Learning Center officials say funding issues will prevent them from forming a new organization when SILC closes in December.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

The planned successor to a Twin Falls learning center for struggling students has been scrapped due to a lack of funding.

Earlier this year, the Southern Idaho Learning Center announced it would close its doors at the end of the year due to dwindling funds. SILC Executive Director Dori Madsen said the organization is in the process of closing down and figuring out what to do with its remaining assets.

"It's been really hard," Madsen said, adding that she's been receiving phone calls from parents asking what their children are going to do without the services.

The organization, which was created about 20 years ago, will close Dec. 31.

Madsen said she had hoped to continue offering similar services under a new non-profit organization — the Southern Idaho STAR Center. But organizers now say they won't be able make their goal of raising $100,000 by Dec. 1.

"We just didn't get enough support," she said.

The current center is located in a rent-free Twin Falls County-owned building on Shoup Avenue. The county is planning to close down the building by the end of the year to potentially sell it in the future.

The center's parent organization, The Scottish Rite Foundation, used to provide about 4 percent of the SILC budget. However, Madsen said the center stopped receiving that money on a regular basis. As a result, the Southern Idaho Learning Foundation was formed in 2008 to provide a more sustainable funding source. However, Madsen said the foundation wasn't providing enough money for operating costs.

Earlier this year, SILC board members decided to close the organization under its current name and break ties with the foundation. Foundation leaders have announced that they will carry on their support of local education efforts by focusing on a wider range of organizations, including Wings Charter School and the Boys and Girls Club of Magic Valley.

SILC provides services to school-aged children who suffer from learning disabilities or fall behind in other educational settings. Last year, more than 1,200 students came through the center's doors.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said the center has provided additional help to many Twin Falls students.

"That's a resource that we've relied upon that will no longer be there," he said.

Dobbs said the center's afterschool options allow students to receive help with what they've learned during the school day.

"Sometimes, that just clicks for kids," he said.

In order to fill the gaps, a team of school district employees is preparing to apply for a federal 21st Century Community Learning Centers grant in order to offer more afterschool programs at schools with a high percentage of students living in poverty.

The district has received the grant in the past and currently provides programs at Lincoln and Perrine elementary schools.

VETERANS EVENTS SCHEDULED IN GOODING

TIMES-NEWS

Several events to honor veterans are scheduled for Thursday in Gooding.

The Gooding School District would like to invite veterans and community members to a Veterans Day program at Gooding High School.

The event will take place at 2 p.m. in the gymnasium and will honor veterans past and present. All veterans are also invited to a free luncheon at 1 p.m. at the high school.

Those planning to attend the lunch should call 934-4831 to RSVP.

The Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind will have a veterans program at 1:20 p.m. the same day. Students will honor each Idaho soldier who has died in recent wars.

The school is located at 1450 Main St. in Gooding.

17 INL Workers Exposed to Radiation

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • At least 17 Idaho National Laboratory workers were undergoing full-body scans after being exposed to low-level radiation from plutonium while doing clean up at the nuclear research site on Tuesday afternoon, officials said.

There was no evidence that radiation was released outside the facility, and there is no risk to the public or the environment, the laboratory said in a statement. The workers underwent initial decontamination procedures at their worksite and were taken to the laboratory's medical center for evaluation.

Investigators were at the site, trying to determine what went wrong.

The laboratory has designed and constructed 52 reactors since its founding in 1949. There's still active research at the facility, but hundreds of workers are also involved cleaning up radioactive waste that's left over from more than 60 years of activities, including at the Zero Power Physics Reactor.

The employees were working inside the reactor Tuesday when a container holding plutonium was opened.

Before the reactor was decommissioned in 1992, researchers used it to build and test nuclear reactors more cheaply than constructing an entire power plant.

Schools Chief Lauds Effort to Reform Federal Education Law

BOISE (AP) • State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna is commending efforts in Congress to reform the federal No Child Left Behind law to measure student academic growth from year to year.

Luna is president-elect of the Council of Chief State School Officers and testified Tuesday before a U.S. Senate panel, saying he supports efforts to overhaul the nation's governing education law.

Idaho was among three states that vowed to ignore the latest requirements under No Child Left Behind, saying the education program sets unrealistic benchmarks for schools while failing to accurately measure student growth. Idaho and other states are implementing new statewide accountability systems.

Idaho Treasurer Ron Crane is shown Tuesday in his office at the state Capitol in Boise.

Treasurer: Family Who Hike NYC Trip Costs Should Pay

Ron Crane says taking officials by limousine to meetings in Manhattan with Standard and Poor's and Moody's Investors Services remains an effective use of taxpayer money.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Relatives who accompany Idaho government officials on business trips to New York City should repay the state if their presence adds to ground transportation cost, Treasurer Ron Crane said Tuesday.

Last week, The AP reported that records it obtained showed Crane's office spent nearly $10,000 since 2009 on stretch limousines and executive sedans to transport state employees and their families while in New York as part of meetings with ratings agencies to discuss Idaho's credit-worthiness. Taxis, in some instances, would have been cheaper.

In an interview Tuesday at his Capitol office, Crane said transporting officials by limousine in Manhattan to meetings with Standard and Poor's and Moody's Investors Services remains an effective use of taxpayer money. It allows them to travel together without risk of getting split up, he said.

But Crane noted instances where relatives added to costs, including for extra cars carrying their luggage from the airport to their hotel near Central Park, were inappropriate. If spouses or children increase the bill, they should pay for it, he said.

"If we're forcing additional car usage because of spouse attendance, that needs to be something we address as far as reimbursement," Crane said. "But if it happened in the past, it was an oversight."

Crane also plans to put a stop to officials riding alone in a stretch limousine, which happened on several occasions.

A limousine from New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport to Manhattan cost Idaho about $250, according to state records obtained by the AP. Meanwhile, a taxi from JFK to Manhattan costs about $50, according to the New York City Taxi & Limousine Commission.

Idaho's Legislative Services audits division is conducting a review of Crane's office management for the past three years, including transportation expenses in New York City. Audits division manager Don Berg has said the review is unfinished and he won't comment until it's released.

The treasurer's trips every June are popular. In 2009, for example, at least six family members including Crane's wife accompanied the eight official members of the delegation.

Family members cover their own flights, meals and Broadway shows, but they haven't generally reimbursed Idaho for ground transportation — even when their numbers necessitated more vehicles. In 2010, two vehicles loaded with only suitcases cost more than $500.

Crane, in his fourth term, said this debate over stretch limousines distracts from important work Idaho officials do in New York helping secure for Idaho the best bond rating possible.

Earlier this year, Standard and Poor's upgraded Idaho's rating, and Crane believes information provided by Idaho officials including economists, legislators, private financial advisers and underwriters during the New York trips played a role. Investment grade ratings reduce interest costs not only for state government but for Idaho school districts and other units of local governments, he said.

Crane said Idaho has injected $20 million in interest revenue into the state general fund over the last decade, because its stellar rating allows it to reap about $500 million annually from short-term debt securities sales at interest rates of less than 1 percent. It then reinvests the proceeds at higher interest rates until the money is needed.

"I have tried repeatedly to get reporters to come in and talk about the (NYC) trip and the value that it has to this state and the $20 million we have made that have gone to the general fund over the last 10 years," Crane said. "What they're interested in is, 'What hotel did you stay in? Where did you have dinner at? How did you get from point A to point B?' That is a frustration to me, as a public official. ... And the other thing that I would point out to you, I haven't done anything different from my predecessors."

Crane, a former state lawmaker from Nampa, did say he's reduced the trips' costs since taking office in 1999.

Idaho's entourage now stays in a "centrally located hotel," The London NYC, allowing its members to walk to restaurants rather than hiring an extra car. And the trips have been trimmed to five days, down from six, he said.

“This is a case about a sexual predator who used his position within the university and community to repeatedly prey on young boys.”

Pennsylvania Attorney General Linda Kelly after former Penn State defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky, once considered Joe Paterno's heir apparent, was charged with sexually assaulting eight boys over a 15-year period.

OUR VIEW

Warmed-Over Policy Gimmick

At last there may be a job-creation idea everyone in Washington can vote for. Too bad it's an idea that has been amply proven not to work.

The subject is tax breaks for hiring veterans. President Obama included two such provisions in his American Jobs Act. The Returning Heroes Tax Credit gives employers up to $4,800 for hiring unemployed vets, and the Wounded Warrior Tax Credit would double an existing break for hiring disabled veterans from a maximum of $4,800 to $9,600. The two-year cost of the programs: $120 million.

The president has been touting his plan every chance he gets. He did it again Monday, in a Rose Garden appearance at which he was accompanied by leaders of the nation's largest veterans' organizations.

Not wanting to appear anything less than 100 percent pro-veteran, many Republicans appear set to support the proposals, perhaps this week, which could make veterans' job tax credits the first piece of the Obama package to pass Congress.

Clearly, the credits are good politics. They seem like good policy, too: 12.1 percent of the 2 million men and women in the labor force who served in the military since Sept. 11, 2001, are unemployed. "There's no good reason to oppose this bill," the president said Monday. "Not one."

Actually, I can think of several. First, the Returning Heroes credit would apply to unemployed veterans from all eras, not just those from the post 9-11 period. But why? The average unemployment rate for all veterans is 7.7 percent — much lower than the 9 percent rate for the labor force as a whole.

More to the point, government has a long history of trying to create jobs with tax credits for hiring particular categories of workers. It never works, neither for the targeted groups nor for the broader economy.

Economist Sarah Hamersma of the University of Florida surveyed the research on targeted tax credits for the Urban Institute Brookings Tax Policy Center in 2005. She found "no meaningful job creation as a result of these programs."

Charles Lane

One of the programs was a $2,400 tax credit, available from 1978 through 1994, for employers who hired economically disadvantaged people, including Vietnam vets. But a 1992 Labor Department Inspector General's audit found that it "was not an effective or economical means of helping target group members obtain jobs."

Time and again, the costs of targeted tax credits exceeded benefits for most businesses. Those who do take part use the tax credit mainly to subsidize hires that would have happened anyway.

In a sense, this is a counterintuitive finding. Surely, if employers find it harder, for whatever reason, to employ members of certain social categories, then you could pay them to do it.

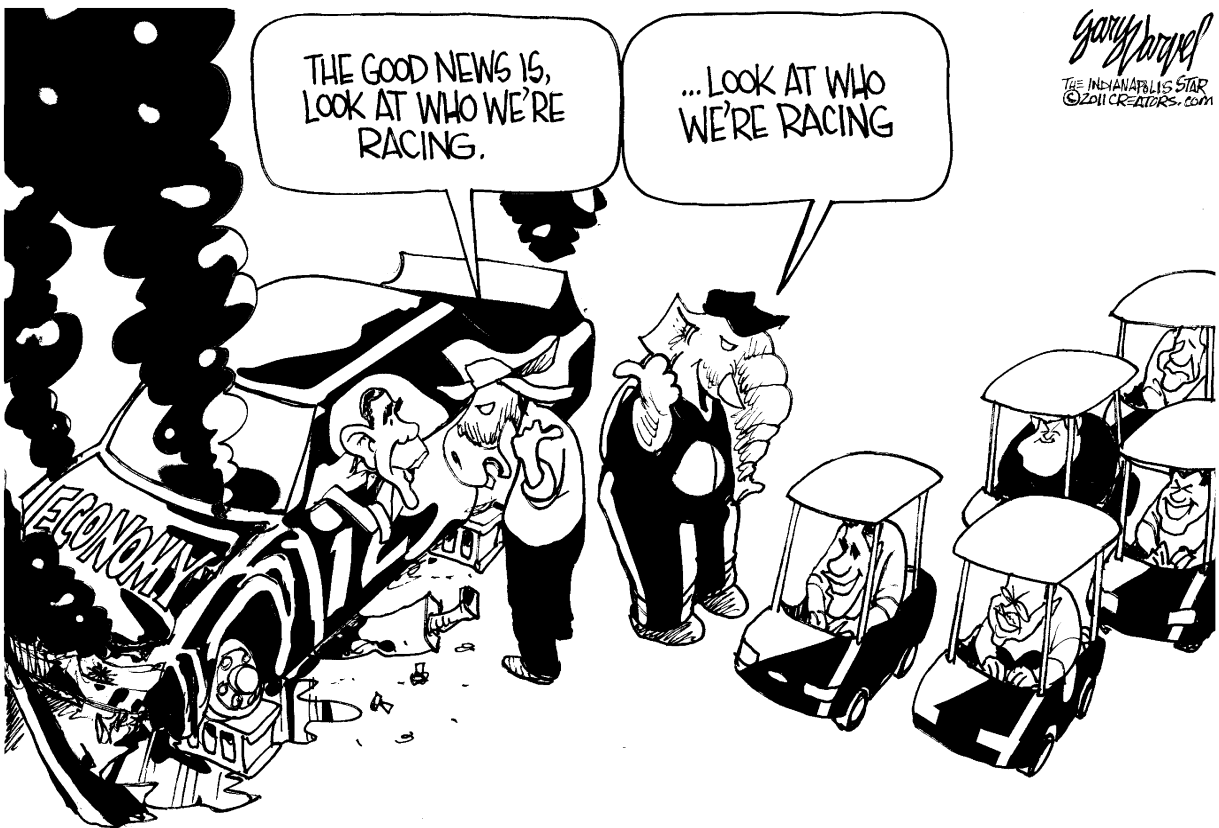

But employers — especially small businesses, for whom one bad hire can be the difference between survival and bankruptcy — look at much more than just the foreseeable financial cost of a new hire. They also want to know that a given worker has the experience, skills and aptitude for the job. And they generally don't want to deal with the IRS any more than absolutely necessary.

Historically, the heaviest users of targeted tax credits were large, low-wage employers such as fast-food chains, who could handle the paperwork and absorb the pain of a few bad hires.

In 2002, the Government Accountability Office reported that two-thirds of a recent year's $135 million in tax credits went to corporations with more than $1 billion in annual sales.

But those companies were not expanding and creating new jobs because of the credit. They were just distributing the same number of jobs among a different mix of people.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Food Safety

We are writing this letter in response to a recipe published in the Times-News on Nov. 2, in the food section: Grandpa Ratto's Spaghetti Sauce.

The spaghetti sauce was simmered for two to four hours, and then the directions said to turn off the stove and let the pot sit overnight. The next morning, turn the heat back on and add ingredients, etc.

Leaving the sauce in the pot all night is a dangerous situation. Bacteria grow very rapidly at room temperature, doubling in amount every 30 minutes that food is stored at room temperature. Clostridium perfringens is a bacterium causing intense abdominal cramps and diarrhea. The sauce should have been put into small, shallow containers and refrigerated overnight. If put in the refrigerator in this large (10 gallon) pot, it would have also been a dangerous situation due to the fact it would have not cooled properly.

USDA guidelines for food safety state: Perishable food should never be left in the "Danger Zone" (between 40 and 140 degrees F.) for more than two hours. This includes both hot food and cold food. If it's been more than two hours (or one hour in temperatures above 90 degrees F.), discard the food.

It is easy to avoid the "Danger Zone": just keep hot food hot and cold food cold.

If you need further information on food safety, please contact Grace Wittman, University of Idaho Extension Educator in Cassia County at 208-878-9461 or email: gwittman@uidaho.edu or Rhea Lanting, University of Idaho Extension Educator in Twin Falls County at 208-734-9590 ext. 21 or rhlanting@uidaho.edu.

A Unique Date for our Veterans

Does anyone realize that Veterans Day falls on 11-11-11 and is the only time in our modern history that this will happen?

It is the same forward and backward and all the same numbers. How ironic is this.

Keep it as is

As many of you may have heard, the Minidoka Wildlife Refuge is in the process of putting together and implementing a Comprehensive Conservation Plan for Lake Walcott on the Snake River in Minidoka and Cassia counties. For many of us, Lake Walcott has been a boating haven where we can fish, water ski or just go on a pleasure cruise and enjoy nature.

In 1997, the National Wildlife Refuge System Improvement Act was implemented to evaluate appropriate refuge uses and develop a CCP plan for running of the refuges across the country. I was able to attend a public comment meeting on Oct. 26 at the Burley Inn and was able to ask a few questions. As of right now, Tracey Castleman, regional refuge director, said that no plans have been made yet and they are taking comments until Nov. 30, 2011. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife is supposed to have a plan drawn up in late 2012 and put in to effect by October 2012.

If you want to keep Lake Walcott as a recreational boating use reservoir, please send all comments to the Minidoka National Wildlife Refuge, 961 E. Minidoka Dam Road, Rupert, ID 83350-9471; or e-mail FWIPlanningComments@fws.gov. Please include "Minidoka NWR CCP" in the subject line. Honoring the 442nd

On Nov. 2, Congress finally recognized the 442nd Combat Unit for their actions in World War II. Many may not know that the 442nd was completely made up of second-generation Japanese-Americans. In our town of Twin Falls, we have one of these men among us. I am sure that Roy Gigiu could direct you to others from the 442nd, but I would like to take the time to tell you about this amazing man.

Roy's parents were farmers and were lucky enough to continue doing their work while other Japanese-Americans were interned close by. Roy could have stayed on the farm and worked but joined and was part of the 442nd history.

I know Roy from golf. We have a group of players that have an 11 a.m. tee-time at the Twin Falls Golf Club. Roy's memories can take you back to the day when it was the "Muni" and was only nine holes. As a lad, Roy used to caddy and learn the game. Roy is a quiet man, 91 years old, and still gets out to golf four to five times a week. His swing is classic, and one can tell that he must have won many club championships but does not talk about them.

As I mentioned, Roy is 91. My dad is the same age. They both fought for their country, and I am proud that the "Nissei," a name the 442nd called themselves, are finally recognized. As for Roy, he will accept the recognition but is really hoping the sun shines tomorrow, so he can golf. He is the man!

Honoring Veterans

Veterans Day is rapidly approaching where we honor those brave men and women who put on the military uniform of our country and stand silently all over the world and say "not on my watch!"

However, the time has come when each patriotic American must ask the question on this war in Iraq, "Did we win, lose or draw?" Was the effort worth the trillions of dollars spent, more than 4,000 lives lost and many families' lives disrupted. Our commander in chief says we will be out of that country by year's end. So if we won, just what was it we won? If we did not win, to what end was the cost worth it? If it was a draw, where is the sanity or madness of the effort? American leaders must in the future determine who our enemy is and go in with total force, win the war and then get out, not let it drag out over far too long a time frame.

Gen. John M. Keane was quoted last week as saying that with the drawdown of some 50,000 soldiers by yearend and cutting 22 percent of our brigade combat teams in the future, that once again the United States is losing.

Currently, the United States is providing a great economic advantage to China, including a trade surplus and ownership of nearly 30 percent of our debt. China is not using that advantage to improve the standard of living of its citizens. Instead it is taking its economic advantage to build up the 21st century battlefield.

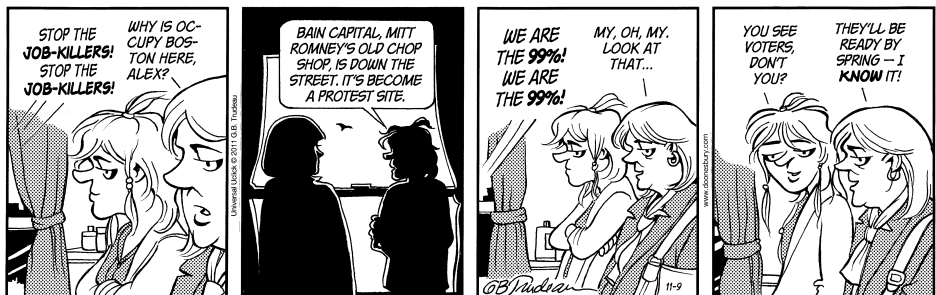

Beyond identifying the enemy and defining our objective in battle, we must also understand and recognize the truly non kinetic conflicts of the future wars. One need only review the collapse of the Soviet Union to understand that great nations can be toppled economically as well as militarily. In fact, one country paid particularly close attention to the fall of the Soviets, China.

If we miss this opportunity to recognize the 21st century battlefield for what it truly is, to understand the threats and to have a strategic vision for a short, fast, victory, we will lose the opportunity to ensure that we protect America for the future, for our children and for generations to come.

How do we understand the complexities of this global conflagration in which we are engaged, and how do we make the necessary changes? First and foremost, we must correctly identify our enemy. Have we not yet learned the lesson of Vietnam? Is the American military force tasked to nation building and humanitarian effort? The answer is no. It is for the protection of the United States of America. God bless our men and women of the full voluntary military force of America. We owe them so much!

Advocates Seek to Stop Idaho, Montana Wolf Hunts

The National Rifle Association and other sporting groups have intervened in the case on the side of the federal government.

BY NOAKI SCHWARTZ and MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. • Wildlife advocates appeared in federal court Tuesday seeking to stop gray wolf hunts that are already well under way in the Northern Rockies, arguing that Congress overstepped its authority in stripping federal protections from the canines.

Federal biologists say the wolf population is healthy enough to support the hunts in Idaho and Montana. The two states want to drive down the predators' numbers to curb their attacks on livestock and big game herds.

But wildlife advocates say too many wolves are being shot too quickly, threatening to unravel the species' decades-long recovery and killing animals closely followed by wolf watchers.

Almost 170 wolves have been shot since hunting began in late August.

"The longer the hunting season goes on, the more risk to the population in total," said James "Jay" Tutchton, an attorney who spoke on behalf of WildEarth Guardians, one of the groups that sued Interior Secretary Ken Salazar after wolves lost their federal protections.

The hunts were allowed after Congress last spring took the unprecedented step of stripping endangered species protections from more than 1,300 wolves. That prompted a lawsuit from wildlife advocates who say Congress effectively reversed prior court rulings that favored protections for the animals.

Tuesday's hearing was before a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Pasadena, Calif.

The 9th Circuit agreed to hear the case on an expedited basis. But several groups involved in the lawsuit requested an injunction to stop the killing of wolves while the case is pending. It is not clear when a decision will be issued, though two previous requests for injunctions were denied.

Anna M. Seidman, with Safari Club International, said hunters are being careful and do not want to see wolves returned to the endangered species list. Seidman's group, along with the National Rifle Association and other sporting groups, have intervened in the case on the side of the federal government.

"Hunters are conservationists," she said. "The whole idea behind hunting is sustainable use to make sure they're here now and remain there for many generations."

Tuesday's hearing marks the latest in two decades of courtroom battles over wolves. Gray wolf advocates, including members of Shadowland Foundation, stood outside the courthouse carrying signs saying "We love wolves" and even brought two pet wolves.

Prior lawsuits resulted first in the animals' reintroduction to the region and then later kept them on the endangered list for a decade after the species had reached the government's original recovery goal.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is monitoring the hunts, but agency officials said they have no plans to intervene because wolves have recovered in the region and the states have promised to manage them responsibly.

Montana's quota aims to reduce wolf numbers by 25 percent compared with last year, to 425 animals. Bob Lane, chief legal counsel for the state, said wildlife officials "fully intend to manage them as a viable species."

Idaho officials have said only that they plan to maintain at least 150 wolves, out of a current population of at least 700 animals.

So far this year, wolves in Montana and Idaho have killed 152 cattle and calves, 108 sheep, 12 dogs and three horses, according to confirmed kill tallies provided by state and federal officials.

Even without hunting, wolves are shot regularly in the region in response to livestock attacks. At least 103 of the predators had been killed this year by government wildlife agents and ranchers.

Federal officials have pledged to step in to restore endangered species protections if wolf numbers drop below 100 animals in either state.

Attorneys for the federal government said that safety valve undercuts the plaintiffs' contention that the hunts could cause irreparable harm.

In documents filed with the court in advance of Tuesday's hearing, the government attorneys wrote that an injunction would be an extraordinary step for the court to take and that the plaintiffs "come nowhere close to meeting the test."

Prosecutors Seek 50 Years in Murder-for-Hire Plot

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • Federal prosecutors are asking that a north Idaho attorney convicted of hiring a hit man to kill his wife and mother-in-law be sentenced to 50 years in prison for the failed plot.

Edgar J. Steele of Sagle is scheduled to be sentenced Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Coeur d'Alene. He was convicted in May.

The government's sentencing memorandum says Steele's plans for murder were "chillingly calculated."

"To plan the murder of an innocent spouse is unthinkable heartless. To manipulate a financially desperate neighbor to commit the murder with a violent car-bomb explosion is depraved," prosecutors wrote in the court document.

Informant Larry Fairfax confessed to attaching a pipe bomb to Cyndi Steele's vehicle, but said he rigged it so it wouldn't go off. It was discovered when she stopped for an oil change shortly after her husband's arrest. An explosives expert said it could have detonated.

Steele paid Fairfax, 50, also of Sagle, $10,000 in silver for the hit, authorities said. Fairfax testified during Steele's trial that though he was desperate for money and accepted the silver, he didn't intend to follow the plot all the way to the end.

Fairfax went to the FBI about the plot and agreed to carry a hidden recording device to capture conversations about the plot between the two men at Steele's home. Steele was arrested June 11, 2010 — the day prosecutors said he believed the hit on his wife would be carried out.

In their memo to the court, prosecutors included some quotes taken from the recorded conversations. They said Steele felt trapped by his wife and the ranch they owned in Sagle, and he fantasized about mail-order Russian brides.

In one recorded conversation, Steele told Fairfax he was upset with his wife, "but I don't want her to suffer and I don't want her to realize as the lights are going out what's happened."

Steele added, "I'd like it to be a mystery or a surprise, or better yet, happen so fast ... that she's not even aware of what's going on."

Prosecutors said Steele thought he could get away with murder because he believed his clean record and long career as an attorney would allow him to escape suspicion.

Ask The Plant Lady

Question:
Dear Plant Lady,
My Christmas cactus has gotten so big this year! What should I be doing now to assure it will bloom this Christmas?
Signed,
Greenthumb Grannie

Answer: Dear "Greenthumb Grannie,"
"Zygo" cactus is not a true cactus but an epiphyte native to Central and South America. They prefer to be pot bound to bloom well, need to be kept in a cool room around 50-55 degrees and where there is no artificial light, especially at night. They need 12-15 hours of darkness each day to set their buds. Also water sparingly and make sure they are not near an area where they receive cold or warm drafts. Consistency in light, temperature and water are the keys to gorgeous holiday blooms. Also think ahead now for Amaryllis bulbs (7-10 weeks to bloom) and Paperwhites (4-6 weeks to bloom),

Police: Woman Arrested After In-flight Fight

BOISE (AP) • Police say a woman on a flight from Seattle to Boise was arrested after throwing a plastic cup at a flight attendant's head.

The Idaho Statesman reports that 37-year-old Dortha C. Seidenglanz faces misdemeanor charges of battery and interference with a flight crew after her arrest Friday at the Boise airport.

Seidenglanz has a Nov. 11 court date.

The crew told police

she refused to turn off her phone during takeoff and while in flight, she was verbally abusive to the attendant and threw her cup at the woman.

Seidenglanz says it was a misunderstanding and she became upset after the flight attendant refused her a second glass of wine. Seidenglanz says the flight attendant was rude and she flipped her empty cup toward the garbage, not the woman's head.

Woman Faces Charges in Three-vehicle Crash

BOISE (AP) • Ada County deputies have arrested a 70-year-old Eagle woman that officials believe intentionally drove into incoming traffic in a suicide attempt that critically injured the driver of one of the vehicles she struck.

Zandra Sue Steck faces two counts of felony aggravated battery and a felony charge of malicious injury to property. She was arrested Monday after she was released from a Boise hospital.

She was jailed on $1 million bond and was expected to make an initial court appearance Tuesday.

Officials say Steck acknowledged driving her car into incoming traffic twice last Wednesday morning, the second time causing a crash that injured a 64-year-old Eagle man. He remains hospitalized with serious injuries.

Her car struck another pickup whose driver suffered minor injuries.

U.N. Reports Iran Work ‘Specific’ to Nuke Arms

BY GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press

VIENNA • The U.N. atomic agency said for the first time Tuesday that Iran is suspected of conducting secret experiments whose sole purpose is the development of nuclear arms, an assessment that draws on 1,000 pages of intelligence and nearly a decade of research.

The report by the International Atomic Energy Agency is its most unequivocal yet suggesting that Iran is using the cover of a peaceful nuclear program to produce atomic weaponry. Based on years of trying to probe Tehran's secretive activities, its release will stoke debate on whether it's time to jettison failed diplomatic efforts to end Iran's nuclear defiance and replace them with force.

The 13-page annex to the IAEA's regularly scheduled report on Iran included evidence that suggests the Islamic republic is working on the clandestine procurement of equipment and designs to make nuclear arms.

"While some of the activities identified in the annex have civilian as well as military applications, others are specific to nuclear weapons," the report said.

Among these were indications that Iran has conducted high explosives testing and detonator development to set off a nuclear charge, as well as computer modeling of a core of a nuclear warhead. The report also cited preparatory work for a nuclear weapons test, and development of a nuclear payload for Iran's Shahab 3 intermediate range missile — a weapon that can reach Israel.

In Washington, officials said the report confirms U.S. suspicions about the military nature of Iran's program, and the Obama administration was readying a range of sanctions and other measures against Iran should the Islamic republic fail to answer questions raised about its nuclear ambitions.

Israeli government spokesman Mark Regev said the government declined to comment until Israel has studied the findings in depth.

GOP Makes New Offer on Taxes, Medicare Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) • With a Thanksgiving deadline fast approaching, the GOP members of a deficit-reduction supercommittee are pressing a plan to cut the deficit by about $1.5 trillion over the coming decade, showing flexibility on tax revenue increases for the first time while pressing curbs on Medicare spending and a less generous cost-of-living increase for Social Security beneficiaries.

The plan floated by Republicans, including tea party favorite Sen. Pat Toomey of Pennsylvania, would place sharp limits on the total amount of tax deductions and credits that a person could claim, in exchange for significantly lower income tax rates. Also, Republicans are willing to accept a net increase in individual income tax revenues of about $300 billion over the coming decade.

The proposal, described by aides in both parties, also would cut spending by about $700 billion, mixing a less generous cost-of-living adjustment for Social Security beneficiaries with further cuts to agency operating budgets and curbs to the booming growth of Medicare and Medicaid.

Berlusconi to Resign Amid Italy Debt Woes

ROME • Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi conceded Tuesday he no longer had the support to govern and announced he would resign like his Greek counterpart, becoming the biggest political casualty yet of the European debt crisis. Berlusconi promised to leave office after Parliament passes economic reforms demanded by the European Union to keep Italy from sinking into Europe's debt mess. He came to the decision hours after a vote on a routine piece of legislation made it clear he no longer commanded a majority in the lower Chamber of Deputies. A vote on the reforms is planned for next week.

Defiant Cain Says He Won't Drop Out of GOP Race

One of two original accusers gives an interview and is identified publicly as Karen Kraushaar, a spokeswoman in the Treasury Department.

BY SHANNON MCCAFFREY and AMANDA LEE MYERS
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. • Under rising pressure from fellow Republicans, presidential hopeful Herman Cain sought to muddy the reputation of one accuser, forcefully denied any and all allegations of sexual impropriety and vowed Tuesday the growing controversy would not drive him from the race for the White House.

"Ain't gonna happen," he declared.

Cain flashed defiance one day after a woman publicly accused the candidate of groping her more than a decade ago, adding her voice to three other accusers with allegations that presidential rival Mitt Romney called "particularly disturbing."

Speaking at a news conference, Cain vowed, "we'll get through this," as he sought to steady a campaign that has made him the leader in an unofficial race to emerge as Romney's principal conservative rival.

At one point he said he would be willing to take a lie detector test, but then appeared to hedge his answer seconds later.

The Georgia businessman was in the midst of his second week trying to curtail the furor surrounding his unorthodox campaign. There were signs his political trouble was far from over less than two months before the lead-off contests of the GOP nomination fight.

Romney joined other GOP opponents in urging Cain to answer the allegations. Prominent Republicans pressed for a full accounting. And there were growing indications of unease in conservative circles.

"If there is a pattern then it's a part of his character and then, yes, it is going to matter," Tony Perkins, head of the conservative Family Research Center, said in an interview.

Another name confronted Cain, as well, when one of his two original accusers gave an interview to The New York Times and was identified publicly by news organizations including The Associated Press as Karen Kraushaar, now a spokeswoman in the Treasury Department's office of inspector general for tax administration.

When asked about Kraushaar, Cain said he recalled her accusation of sexual harassment but insisted "it was found to be baseless."

Kraushaar and her lawyer, Joel Bennett, did not respond to questions from The AP. But Bennett has told other news organizations that he hopes to arrange a news conference in which all of Cain's accusers will appear.

Appeals Court Upholds Health Care Law

Writing for the majority, Senior Judge Laurence Silberman found that the insurance mandate fell within Congress's authority to regulate interstate commerce.

BY N.C. AIZENMAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • A federal appeals court upheld the constitutionality of the 2010 health care law on Tuesday, granting the Obama Administration its fourth win at the appellate level as it seeks ultimate affirmation of the law from the Supreme Court.

In a 2-to-1 decision, a panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit agreed with a lower court judge's finding that Congress had the authority to enact the law's requirement that virtually all Americans obtain health insurance or pay a penalty.

The suit was brought by four individuals represented by the American Center for Law and Justice, a conservative litigation organization. They argued that the insurance mandate exceeded the limits of congressional power and impeded their free exercise of religion.

Writing for the majority, Senior Judge Laurence Silberman — an appointee of President Ronald Reagan — found that the insurance mandate fell within Congress's authority to regulate interstate commerce.

Senior Judge Harry Edwards, who was named to the bench by President Jimmy Carter, concurred. Judge Brett Kavanaugh, who was appointed by President George W. Bush, dissented, saying that the challenge should be dismissed as premature.

The ruling is the second appellate decision to affirm the law's constitutionality. A three-judge panel of the 4th Circuit dismissed two other challenges to the law — including one brought by the state of Virginia — on the grounds that the plaintiffs lacked standing to sue.

Only one circuit court has ruled against the law: In a suit brought by the Republican attorney generals and governors of 26 states, a divided three-judge panel of the 11th Circuit struck down the insurance mandate, although it overturned a lower court judge's finding that the rest of the law should also be invalidated as a result.

The administration has appealed that decision to the Supreme Court. The plaintiffs in the three other cases have also petitioned the high court.

Ohio Voters Reject Republican-backed Union Limits

BY JULIE CARR SMYTH
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio • The state's new collective bargaining law was defeated Tuesday after an expensive union-backed campaign that pitted firefighters, police officers and teachers against the Republican establishment.

In a political blow to GOP Gov. John Kasich, voters handily rejected the law, which would have limited the bargaining abilities of 350,000 unionized public workers.

Labor and business interests poured more than $30 million into the nationally watched campaign, and turnout was high for an off-year election.

The law hadn't taken effect yet. Tuesday's result means the state's current union rules will stand, at least until the GOP-controlled Legislature determines its next move. Republican House Speaker William Batchelder predicted last week that the more palatable elements of the collective bargaining bill — such as higher minimum contributions on worker health insurance and pensions — are likely to be revisited after the dust settles.

Earlier this year, thousands of people swarmed the Statehouse in protest when the bill was being heard. The bill still allowed bargaining on wages, working conditions and some equipment but banned strikes, scrapped binding arbitration and dropped promotions based solely on seniority, among other provisions.

Kasich and fellow supporters promoted the law as a means for local governments to save money and keep workers. Their effort was supported by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, the National Federation of Independent Business-Ohio, farmers and others.

We Are Ohio, the largely union-funded opponent coalition, painted the issue as a threat to public safety and middle-class workers, spending millions of dollars on TV ads filled with images of firefighters, police officers, teachers and nurses.

Celebrities came out on both sides of the campaign, with former vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin and singer Pat Boone urging voters to retain the law and former astronaut and U.S. Sen. John Glenn and the Rev. Jesse Jackson urging them to scrap it.

Labor and business interests poured more than $30 million into the nationally watched campaign, with the law's opponents far outspending and outnumbering its defenders.

Opponents reported raising $24 million as of mid-October, compared to about $8 million raised by the committee supporting the law, Building a Better Ohio.

Tuesday's result in the closely divided swing state was expected to resonate from statehouses to the White House ahead of the 2012 presidential election.

OBITUARIES

Roland Marshall Fullmer

Aug. 10, 1938-Nov. 5, 2011

JEROME • Roland Marshall Fullmer, 73, of Jerome, died Saturday, Nov. 5, 2011, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Preceding him in death are his parents, Dick C. Fullmer and Arline M. Barnhouse Fullmer; brothers and sister, James R. Fullmer, Robert E. Fullmer and Shirley I. Fullmer Downer; one son, David R. Fullmer; and ex-wife, Sandra L. Hover Fullmer. He is survived by one brother, William A. Fullmer; and one sister, Janice A. Fullmer McWilliams; two daughters, Kathy L. Fullmer Sparks and Christine E. Fullmer Scheffler. He is also survived by five grandchildren, one great-grandson, many cousins, nieces, nephews, two ex-wives and his beloved dog, Heidi.

While a young man, Roland served his country as a fighter pilot in the U.S. Air Force. He was a member of the BPO Elks and a self-employed business man for many years at Fullmer Furniture of Burley and Rolmar of Twin Falls. Roland was always happiest when hunting and fishing. In his later years, he fought his ailing heart to be able to do so. Every spring, he could hardly wait to be cat-fishing at Steck Park and every fall, tag permitting, elk hunting in the desert.

A memorial service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome. Refreshments will be served afterward. Please join us in celebration of Roland's life.

Joshua Martin Pierce

Nov. 14, 1985-Nov. 5, 2011

BURLEY • Joshua Martin Pierce, 25-year-old Burley resident, passed away Saturday, Nov. 5, 2011.

Born Nov. 14, 1985, in Jerome, he was the second of two children. His first four years were spent in Wendell, Idaho. In January 1990, his family moved to Burley, Idaho, where his father took a job at Bonanza Motors. Joshua attended public kindergarten at Springdale School. He attended Calvary Christian School from first grade until eighth grade, at which point he began public school at Burley High School. He wanted at that time to go to a military academy and needed some language and extra schooling not available from the private school. He graduated BHS in 2004 with a high GPA, which made his parents very proud.

After stretching his wings to Oregon State University, he decided not to go to the military; instead, he came home to Burley for a breather. He later decided to go to North Idaho College and pursue a welding degree. He has lived in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, for the past four years working for Lone Wolf Construction and MoCo in the welding fabrication field. He was well loved and appreciated at both places. He was a good, thorough and precise worker, never doing anything halfway.

Josh made friends wherever he went; he didn't think so, but everyone liked Josh. He was just a likeable fella. Joshua always missed the Burley area because of the great hunting and hiking areas. In one direction, there is miles and miles of desert; oh, the things he could find in the desert. And the other direction was the mountains that housed the big mule deer he always longed to get. Josh loved the great outdoors, always taking numerous pictures. We don't know what he shot more — his guns or his camera.

Josh was involved in Scouting in his younger years. After seeing a newscast about the Civil Air Patrol, he was on a mission to join. He made his mother call to get details and learned he had to wait a year to be old enough to join. I think that was the longest year of his life. He loved CAP and learned a lot. His most memorable times were when he went up in the plane with Dr. Brown and getting to run the controls; also when he went to Colorado to the Air Force Base for a weeklong encampment. He loved every minute of it (well, maybe not ironing his uniform).

He is survived by his parents, Tim and Brenda Pierce of Burley; sister, Brandie of Rupert; four very special nieces, Michelle, Becca, Charlee and Dezie. Josh is preceded in death by grandma, Hazel Pierce; Grandma Royce; four cousins, Viola Kinnamon and Davin Gossett, and Suzie and Kelley Parish; and his uncle, Michael William Royce. We will miss you, Joshua Martin Pierce. You were a GREAT son, brother and friend.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, at the Calvary Baptist Church, 515 W. 27th St. in Burley, with Pastor John Ramey officiating. Cremation services are under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home and Crematory in Rupert.

OBITUARIES

Richard Leon ‘Dick’ Paoli

Sept. 9, 1926-Nov. 5, 2011

RUPERT • Richard Leon “Dick” Paoli, age 85, of Rupert, died Saturday, Nov. 5, 2011, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

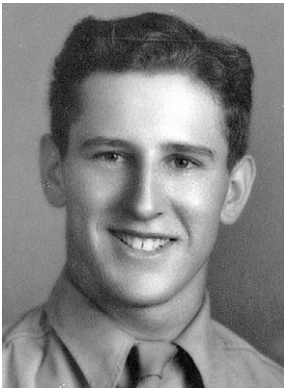

He was born Sept. 9, 1926, to Olindo Paoli and Inez Catherine Dallocio Paoli at Rupert, Idaho, and had been a lifelong resident. He attended school at Rupert and was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He married his one and only love, Shirley Berniece Hunsaker, on Sept. 13, 1946, at the Heyburn LDS Church. The marriage was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on May 3, 1960. To this union were born three children, Gayle Annette, Ricky Von and Shir-lene Paoli.

He was inducted into the Armed Forces on Dec. 26, 1944, at Fort Douglas, Utah, and received his honorable discharge on July 23, 1946, at Fort Lewis, Wash., after serving during World War II. He took his basic training at Camp Roberts, Calif. He attained the rank of corporal and received the Marksmanship Medal, the Army of Occupation Medal (Japan), the Asiatic Pacific Service Medal, Good Conduct Medal and the Marksmanship Rifle Medal. He served with the 98th and 25th Decision Quartermaster Company in Hawaii and Osaka, Japan. He had the honor of opening the limousine door for President Dwight Eisenhower when leaving the parade ground.

He held the office of high priest in the LDS Church at the time of his death and had served in the capacities of Scout leader, Sunday school president and counselor, ward dance director with his wife, home teacher, security chairman, prayer designator and extraction coordinator. In December 1997, Richard and Shirley were called to serve a temple mission at the Boise Idaho Temple. They also served as ward historians and as the stake baptism directors in 2005.

He lived in Rupert all of his life (except for his service time). Dick and Shirley built their home and took great pride in keeping both the inside and outside in immaculate condition. He loved flowers and trees. You would often see them both working outside together. Dick worked for the Union Pacific Railroad for 38 years, retiring with a medical hearing disability on May 31, 1985. He was a foreman at Minidoka, Paul, Kimama, Rupert and was also a track inspector on a temporary basis. He had the job of building a test track east of Minidoka for the Streamliner to run at 100 mph. He was a member of the Old Timer’s and Junior Old Timer’s. He was an avid fisherman, hunter and outdoors man. He loved to ride his dirt bike with his son and son-in-law, Mike. He and Shirley loved to tour on their Hondas 1200 and 1300. He also loved camping in their trailer in the Sawtooth Mountains with his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Dick met his wife, Shirley, at the Y-Dell Ballroom in Burley. At that time, everyone gathered on Saturday with the local band and all the big bands that came to Burley. The two of them loved to dance and their favorite was the Jitter Bug. At the Idaho Centennial Celebration at the Burley Inn, they took first place for the Jitter Bug and picked up the Overall Dancers of the night. After retiring, he started making log furniture from the dead trees when in the mountains.

He dearly loved his wife, Shirley, and went to great lengths to see that she was well cared for and deeply loved all his grandchildren and great-grandchildren and was dearly loved by all of them and will be greatly missed by all.

He is survived by his loving wife, Shirley of Rupert; his daughter, Gayle Annette (Mike) Williams of Burley; one son, Ricky Von (Penny) Paoli of Blackfoot; five grandchildren, Tani Rae (Arlin) Smith and Mikael Dawn (Michael) Teply of Meridian, Richard Kim Paoli of Heyburn, Trevor Von Paoli of Burley and Desirae Lester of Twin Falls; eight great-grandchildren, Kayleigh (Kyle) Beebe, Ryleigh Jo Smith, Landrie Smith, Kyra Dawn Teply, Braxton Lester, Keana Lester, Halle Lester and Skyler Von Paoli. He is also survived by one brother, Paul (Helen) Paoli of Gooding; daughter-in-law, Connie Paoli of Heyburn; and numerous nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his daughter, Shirlene; his parents; one brother, Lindo L. Paoli; and his sisters, Ada Marie Pope, Dora C. Perotto and Darlene Inez Zampedri.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, at the Rupert LDS West Stake Center, 26 S. 100. W. in Rupert, with Bishop Brad J. Wilson officiating. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 11, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

James Arthur McGill

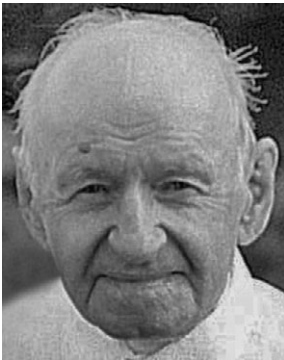

Feb. 8, 1922-Nov. 7, 2011

HEYBURN • James Arthur McGill, an 89-year-old longtime resident of Heyburn, died Monday, Nov. 7, 2011.

He was born Feb. 8, 1922, to Luther and Ada Maude Betts McGill in Twigg Township, Dale, Ill. He moved with his parents, brother and two sisters from Illinois circa-1929 to Paul, Idaho. Art attended schools in Rupert, not graduating from high school but going to work and studying in the school of hard knocks. Art was drafted into the U.S. Army in 1942, serving in the Signal Corps. He was one of the 10,000 troops who built the Al-Can (Alaska-Canada) Highway. He served in Ardennes, Rhineland and Central Europe. He was honorably discharged in 1946. He made one of the historic cruises on the Queen Mary from Europe when it was used as a troop carrier.

On Nov. 16, 1943, he married Rachel Kraus in Twin Falls, Idaho. Art and Rachel were married for 56 years. They lived in Unity, Sublett and Burley before moving to Heyburn in 1955. In the early years he worked as a farm laborer for Raymond Bean and the Curtis and Craig Company. He drove truck for Mayflower Moving Van Lines. He and his brother, Luther “Jr.,” custom hauled hay. He worked for the J.R. Simplot Company in the potato cellars, as a wet-line foreman and as a mechanic in the processing plant.

Art joined the crew at the city of Heyburn in 1963 and retired as the city superintendent on Dec. 31, 1988. He served on the Heyburn Volunteer Fire Department for 24 years and, before the city of Heyburn had a full-time police officer, he along with Lloyd Wilson, served as part-time Heyburn Police officers, patrolling for many hours in addition to their full-time jobs. He served a term on the Heyburn City Council after his retirement.

He is survived by three daughters, Larraine (Ronald) Kluzik of Heyburn, Jana McGill of Butte, Mont., and Deborah (Stanley) Dick of Great Falls, Mont.; three granddaughters, Rhonda, Kourtney and Tara; one great-grandson, Kelton; one brother, Luther (Mayna) McGill of Burley; and many nieces and nephews. Art was preceded in death by his wife, Rachel; two sons, Michael Arthur and Lynn Andrew; a grandson, Chad Michael Dick; his parents; two brothers, Inman Edward McGill and William Wayne McGill; and two sisters, Doris Jensen and Lois Kowitz.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 11, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Friday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home.

The family asks that in lieu of flowers, please donate to the Salvation Army, Special Olympics, American Cancer Society or your charity of choice.

Dad fought the battle, long and hard, may he rest in peace.

H. Wade Schorzman

March 24, 1958-Nov. 5, 2011

CASTLEFORD • Herman Wade Schorzman, 53, of Castleford, passed on Saturday, Nov. 5, 2011, at the North Canyon Medical Center from a severe allergic reaction after the tremendous rescue efforts of the Hagerman Fire Department, QRU and ambulance personnel.

Wade was born in Twin Falls on March 24, 1958, to Bill and Bonnie (Mitton) Schorzman, to join sister, Sharon House; and brothers, Dennis (Susan) and LeWayne (Kathleen). He was raised in Rosesworth. Wade graduated from Castleford High School in 1976 and worked for Curt Duggan Custom Farming until moving back to Rosesworth to farm with his father and brothers. From 2002 to the present, he worked for Magic Valley Growers.

On Nov. 8, 1980, Wade married the love of his life, Janice Porter, and had three beautiful daughters, Bobbie (Rick Malvini), Jorie (Nick Duncan) and Billie (fiance, Josh Laird). Wade was blessed with four grandsons, Tristin, Gavin, and Dylan Malvini, and Grady Duncan. Wade had a great impact on the community as a hunter’s education instructor for 14 years and a resource to family and friends who look to him for answers regarding history, mechanics, farming, hunting, guns and many other favorite topics of his. Wade knew no stranger and had the biggest heart; it is amazing it fit in his chest.

Wade is survived by his wife, daughters, grandsons, siblings (named above) and many other family and friends. He was preceded in death by his parents; nephew, Andrew Schorzman; and many aunts, uncles, cousins, friends.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Friday, Nov 11, at the Buhl First Christian Church. A viewing will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl.

Memorial suggestions: QRU of Hagerman, Castleford or one of your choice. Wade was a proud supporter of the military and NRA.

Kenneth Keith MacKenzie

Nov. 25, 1921-Nov. 5, 2011

Kenneth Keith MacKenzie was born Nov. 25, 1921, to Percy John and Nora Luella (Wendell) MacKenzie, the second of eight children. He married Frances Josephine Fenton of Rupert, Idaho, on July 19, 1947.

Keith served in the U.S. Army from 1943 until 1946. For many years, Keith drilled water wells in southern Idaho. He was known for being honest and trustworthy. Fishing, hunting, spending time in the mountains, enjoying a cup of coffee with friends and soaking in the Oakley Hot Springs were Keith’s favorite pastimes. Keith and Jo lived in Rupert until, in 2003 due to poor health, they moved to Clackamas, Ore., to live with their oldest daughter and son-in-law.

He is survived by his daughters and sons-in-law, Janet (MacKenzie) and Don

Smith of Clackamas, Ore., and Debbie (MacKenzie) and Merlin Crumpacker of Kenai, Alaska; and a daughter-in-law, Lori (Hord)

MacKenzie of Burley, Idaho. He has six grandchildren, five step-grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He also leaves behind five sisters, Betty Hunter of Albion, Idaho, Ruth Plunkett of Lakewood, Calif., Carol Nelson of Fort Gibson, Okla., Noreen Haynes of Kent, Wash., and JoAnne Kelley of Albion, Idaho. He was predeceased in death by his brother, Bill MacKenzie; his sister, Wanda Fackle; his son, Tom MacKenzie; and his wife, Josephine (Fenton) MacKenzie.

The family invites anyone interested to join in a celebration of the lives of Keith and Jo at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20, at Grace Community Church, 100 N. Meridian in Rupert, Idaho.

Neva Karen Vauk

May 25, 1944-Nov. 6, 2011

Neva Karen Vauk, 67, of Twin Falls, passed away at her home Sunday, Nov. 6, 2011.

Neva was born May 25, 1944, in Orem, Utah, to Clyde and Virginia (Rowley) Morgan. The family moved to Twin Falls, where Neva attended schools. In 1961, she married Ross McNurlin and, to this union, one son was born, Rick McNurlin. They later divorced and, on May 2, 1971, she married Leonard Vauk. Neva worked as a waitress until she and Leonard moved to Boise, where they owned and operated Safeco Roofing Company. In 1977, they moved back to Kimberly, where they started a business in Twin Falls called The Clubhouse. Neva went on to work at Wendy’s until she was unable to work any longer. Neva loved golf, spending time with her family especially her grandchildren, and she also enjoyed going to Jackpot.

Neva is survived by her son, Rick (Elva) McNurlin of Hansen; three stepchildren, Ed (Cheryl) Vauk, Janece Vauk and Karen Vauk; two grandchildren, Kelly (Torey) Clark and Alex McNurlin; to this union, one son was born, Rick McNurlin. THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

How the Major Stock Indexes Fared Tuesday

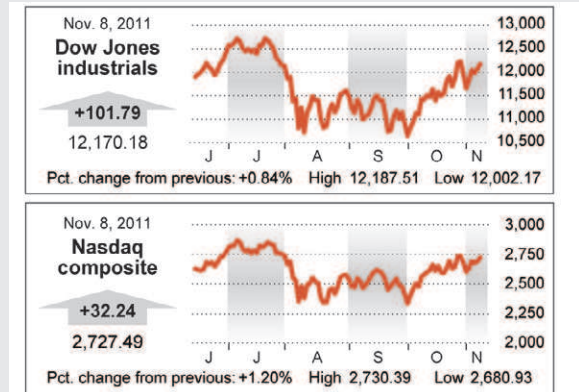

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks turned higher Tuesday once investors got the news they had been hoping for: Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi promised to resign once a new budget was passed.

Italy became a key focus for investors this week after doubts emerged that the country would go through with a tough package of austerity measures. Many investors saw Berlusconi as an obstacle to sweeping economic reforms needed to help Italy avoid sinking into a debt crisis.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 101.79 points, or 0.8 percent, to close at 12,170.18.

The S&P 500 rose 14.80, or 1.2 percent, to 1,275.92.

The Nasdaq composite rose 32.24, or 1.2 percent, to 2,727.49.

Obama to Expand Drilling off Alaska, in Gulf

The Obama administration cautiously offered up more areas in the Gulf of Mexico and off Alaska's coast to oil and gas drilling Tuesday but didn't go far enough to satisfy Republicans pushing to greatly expand drilling as a way to create jobs and wean the country off foreign oil.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar unveiled a proposal to hold 15 lease sales for areas in the Gulf of Mexico, including two in the eastern Gulf, and three off Alaska's coast in the time frame from 2012 to 2017. They would be held late in the five-year time frame to allow for scientific evaluations in the Chukchi and Beaufort Seas. And they would be targeted to avoid areas with cultural and environmental sensitivities, officials said.

Oil Soars but Motorists Don't Need to Worry Yet

BY CHRIS KAHN
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK • Oil prices are soaring again, but motorists don't need to worry — yet.

The price of crude has jumped 22 percent since the beginning of October and is nearing $100 a barrel. For most of the summer, oil prices drifted lower on fears that the U.S. was headed toward another recession. But those concerns have started to wane as the economy stabilizes. Political tensions in the Middle East, which produces 29 percent of the world's oil, also have helped drive up crude prices at the fastest clip since February.

So far, the big jump hasn't translated into a surge in prices at the gasoline pump. Gasoline has crept up less than 1 percent, or 3.1 cents, to $3.41 per gallon, over the same period.

That's partly because people drive less once vacations wind down after Labor Day. This year, Americans have also bought less gasoline because of the weaker economy. That lackluster demand has kept prices in check, even as oil soars. If crude continues to rise, however, gasoline eventually will be forced to follow.

"Enjoy it while you can," said Ben Brockwell, pricing director at the Oil Price Information Service. "We may be in for a spike" in the spring. Brockwell expects gasoline prices — which peaked at $3.98 per barrel on May 5 — to flirt with $4 per gallon early next year.

As signs emerge that the U.S. isn't headed for another recession, the price of oil has risen. When economies improve, demand for oil goes up.

At the same time, some of the world's biggest sources of oil appear to be increasingly at risk. Iran, the world's fourth-largest oil exporter, is suspected of developing nuclear weapons, according to a United Nations report released Tuesday. Its nuclear program could lead to international trade sanctions, and Israel has threatened military action.

And in Nigeria, one of the top five oil exporters to the U.S., production continues to be hampered by spills, sabotage and thefts of its crude.

Meanwhile, the world's thirst for oil continues to grow. Developing nations in Asia and the Middle East have been importing more barrels as they build factories and their people buy more cars. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Tuesday that global oil demand should rise to a record 92.9 million barrels per day by 2015. That's up 1.9 million barrels per day from the previous forecast.

OPEC said it was making the change to reflect a "swifter than expected" recovery in energy demand since the recession.

Oil prices have climbed from $79.20 a barrel at the beginning of October to $96.80 Tuesday. The last time they rose that swiftly was in the spring, when rebels in Libya started to clash with forces loyal to Moammar Gadhafi. Oil shot up 25 percent to $105 from February to March as the rebellion cut off Libya's exports, increasing pressure on already-tight world supplies.

Despite Spending Uptick, U.S. Seafood Consumption Drops

BY CINDY SNYDER
For the Times-News

Americans are paying more to eat fewer fish.

U.S. consumers spent $80.2 billion on seafood in 2010 — nearly $5 billion more than they spent in the previous year. But that spending spike comes in the face of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration data that shows U.S. seafood consumption at its lowest level since 2002.

A combination of changing eating habits, the souring economy and shifting medical warnings about mercury levels in seafood has taken fish off most U.S. dinner plates over the last half-decade. Americans, on average, ate 15.8 pounds of seafood in 2010 as consumption continued its steady decline from 16.5 pounds per person in 2006.

"Everyone was excited then," said Gary Fornshell, University of Idaho aquaculture specialist. "We thought we'd just go up and up from there."

But that wasn't the case. The 2008 economic downturn cut into seafood sales, including those of trout grown in the Magic Valley. More to blame, Fornshell says, is a health advisory intended to limit consumption of tuna, king mackerel, shark and tile fish because of mercury concerns.

"Consumers interpreted that health advisory as a warning and quit eating all seafood," he said.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration advisory came as contradictory to advice many physicians and nutritionists gave their patients to eat more seafood because of associated heart and health benefits. Although consumption of the highest predator fish should still be limited, the latest federal dietary guidelines recommend the general public to eat at least 8 ounces of seafood weekly.

A person who met that weekly mark would eat 26 pounds of seafood per year — more than 10 pounds greater than the 2010 average.

But surveys have shown that 65 percent of U.S. parents who feed their children seafood less than twice a year rarely or never ate seafood growing up. Those who don't grow up eating seafood — even fish sticks — generally aren't picking it up later in life, as consumers are generally less confident in how to prepare seafood when compared to steak or chicken.

While America is the second-largest seafood importer in the world, Fornshell said, "We're just not a seafood-eating nation."

Farm Fresh in Winter

You got a steal on just-picked potatoes from a farmer’s stand this fall. But you can’t eat 50 pounds of tubers in two weeks, and you don’t have a root cellar. Do you store them like squash? Or apples? No need to wonder. For tips on storing common autumn produce, reporter Melissa Davlin asked farmers market vendors and consulted the University of Idaho’s publication “Storing Food for Safety and Quality.” You’ll be eating local well into winter.

	Squash	Onions	Potatoes	Carrots	Apples
How to store them	Squash like warm and dry, said Jo Ann Robbins of University of Idaho’s Jerome Extension Office. Condition them by storing at 60 degrees for a week. When their skins turn hard, store in a warm-ish garage at about 55 degrees.	Put them in old nylon stockings and tie a knot between each bulb, then hang in a cool, dry place, said grower Carl Hatfield of Buhl. Cardboard boxes or paper bags are also good — but there’s a higher risk of one bad onion affecting others.	Don’t wash them. Keep them in a perforated plastic bag in a cool, dark place like a basement or garage — not in the refrigerator or under a sink.	Carrots need to stay cold and moist, said Carol Rast of Fairfield’s Prairie Sun Farm. Cut off tops, put carrots in a plastic shopping bag and store them in the crisper. Or if you have big quantities, store them in damp sand in a cold garage or basement.	Apples do well in cold, dry storage, Jo Ann Robbins said. Keep them in the fridge or in a cold garage, and store them alone. Apples give off gas that can accelerate rotting in other fruits and veggies.
How to tell if they’re bad	Wrinkly skin or rotted spots are bad signs.	They’ll be mushy, slimy or rotten.	If they freeze or turn mushy, game over. Too much green is bad, too.	If they’re rubbery, they’re too dry — but still safe.	You can trim away small spots of spoilage, but mushy apples are no good.
How to prepare them if they’re past prime	There’s no salvaging a bad squash, Robbins said. Instead, use them while they’re still pretty for stuffed acorn squash or butternut soup.	Peel back the layers to see if any are salvageable, Jo Ann Robbins said. (But don’t be surprised if you’re left with a marble-sized onion.) From there, cook as you normally would.	If the potatoes start sprouting, cut out the sprouts and prepare the spuds as normal. Same goes for small amounts of green.	Rubbery carrots are OK cooked if you catch them quickly enough, Rast said. Also, if they start to sprout, cut off the growth immediately to save them.	If apples are no longer crisp, they’re not necessarily bad, Robbins said — just dehydrated. Put them in cobbler or pie, where flavor is more important than texture.

Dining Tidbits

BY DAVE WILKINS
For the Times-News

Thanksgiving All Month

Spinners Grill in Rupert (802 S. Oneida) opened in early 2010 and that November offered a Thanksgiving dinner on Thursday nights. The seasonal special is back. Diners can get the smoked turkey breast, mashed potatoes and gravy, vegetable side dish, roll and homemade cranberry sauce on Thursday nights (except Thanksgiving) throughout November. “It’s a good primer for Thanksgiving,” said Bart Hanson, one of the restaurant’s owners. “We’ve had people start asking for it again.”

Another recent addition to the menu: a bacon-wrapped pork tenderloin.

Flatbread Philly

The list of November specials at the Traveler’s Oasis Cafe (1017 S. 1150 E.), just off Interstate 84 near Eden, includes a couple of new offerings, both traceable to Pennsylvania. The new flatbread Philly is grilled in a little garlic butter before it’s piled with roast beef, onions and peppers and topped with melted cheese. “Our regular Philly did well, so we decided to do it up on flatbread and see how it would do,” said assistant manager J.B. Shirk. “It’s been going like crazy. People seem to like it.”

The other new dish is beer-battered haddock and chips — made with Yuengling beer, from America’s oldest brewery near Philadelphia.

Texas-style Brisket

At Angela’s Mexican Restaurant in Burley (1198 E. Main), owner Ted Garcia has been shaking up the menu. Recent additions: a Texas-style barbecued beef brisket and a trout fillet from Idaho. “We wanted to add a few things to change things up from the traditional Tex-Mex menu that we have,” Garcia said. A dry rub developed by Garcia’s wife goes on the brisket before it’s slow-roasted for about four hours. The boneless trout fillet from Idaho Trout Co. is grilled with a blend of spices and served with a little ranchero sauce. Both new dishes come with a choice of rice-and-beans, salad or fries.

Bed and Brunch

Sunday brunch is a recent addition at the Drift Inn restaurant on Rupert’s historic square (545 F St.). The spread includes bacon-and-tomato frittatas, breakfast quesadillas, made-to-order omelettes and French toast. Lunch items include a stacked ham and cheese sandwich. The addition of Sunday brunch was prompted by this summer’s completion of a renovation project. Six upstairs rooms are now open for overnight guests. Two have kitchenettes, jetted tubs and king-size beds. Guests can enjoy a weekday continental breakfast, but owners Charlie and Lori Creason wanted something extra for those staying Saturday night. With few restaurants open in Rupert on Sunday, Lori Creason said, “we felt we needed something for people to eat here.”

Make Your Holiday Wine Selections with Confidence

Sommelier Jon Melone will teach a pair of wine classes in Twin Falls — “Choosing the Perfect Holiday Wines for Thanksgiving” and “Choosing the Perfect Holiday Wines for Christmas” — for the College of Southern Idaho’s Community Education Center. Melone aims to take the intimidation out of buying a glass or bottle of wine. After the teaching session, Melone will have a number of wines for students to sample. The Thanksgiving class is 7-9 p.m. Nov. 17, and the Christmas class is 7-9 p.m. Dec. 15; both are in the Perrine Room at Elevation 486, 195 River Vista Place. Cost for either course is $15, plus a $5 supply fee. Register: 732-6442 or communityed.csi.edu.

Craft Your Pies from Scratch

Here’s your chance to learn pie making from the woman who took all those best-of-class ribbons at recent Twin Falls County Fairs. Dr. Laura Fall-Sutton of Buhl will teach a “Heavenly Holiday Pies” cooking class from 7 to 9 p.m. Nov. 15 at Rudy’s — A Cook’s Paradise, 147 Main Ave. W. in Twin Falls. Cost is $40.

Fall-Sutton

You’ll learn the fundamentals of pie making with emphasis on making the perfect crust from scratch. The class menu: caramel apple pie, pumpkin ginger pie with gingersnap streusel, cranberry custard meringue pie and mint grasshopper pie with chocolate crispy rice crust. They include one- and two-crust pies and a gluten-free pie. Sign up: 733-5477.

In Ketchum This Weekend: Brand New Beer

Sawtooth Brewery will hold its soft opening Friday, opening the doors on the region’s latest craft beer venture.

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

Months of work at Ketchum’s new Sawtooth Brewery come down this weekend to a simple plan: “This is just our soft opening, so pretty much, we’re just going to open our doors and sell beer,” head brewer Paul Holle said Monday.

The fledgling brewpub’s grand opening isn’t until Dec. 2. But at 5 p.m. Friday, you can sashay (or stroll, or just walk) down to 600 N. Main St. #A-120 in Ketchum and get yourself a pint in Sawtooth’s new taproom.

You should have plenty of choices. Holle said he aims to get the brewery’s five regular beers all on tap this month. By the grand opening, they may be joined by a seasonal, Out

Cold Winter Ale. Other previously advertised features include “beer fusion ice creams,” stout floats and a specialty coffee roast from Hailey Coffee Co.

The taproom has been a labor of love for the past couple of weeks. Two weekends ago, about 12 volunteers — paid in pizza and beer — helped paint and prep the space. The work has continued up to this week, with bar tops, televisions and other furnishings finding their places.

Shots of construction posted on Sawtooth’s Facebook page hint at the style of the place — and reveal welcome surprises. One of them: The brewery will have a tap for cask-condition beer. That’s rare in south-central Idaho.

Production is ramping up to match construction. Holle said installing two more fermenters in about a week will nudge his output to 40 gallons per week. By January, he aims to reach 60 gallons per week.

How to Find Nutritional Bargains

DAILY PRESS
(NEWPORT NEWS, VA.)

You can get the same healthy proteins, carbohydrates and fats for less money. “The strategy is to buy inexpensive foods that still provide the nutrients that support good health,” says Dr. Mickey Harpaz, a nutritionist and exercise physiologist with offices in New York and Connecticut. Some tips:

Stop buying junk. Processed entrees, snacks, soda and juices often are expensive and do nothing for your body.

Look beyond meat. Beans, lentils, chickpeas and eggs are generally cheap and rich in protein. If you buy canned beans, rinse them to cut down on salt.

Take advantage of chicken ... Dollar for pound, it’s often a bargain compared with other meats. To save even more, buy chicken whole and separate it into parts for meals, soups and sandwiches. Chicken liver also is low-priced for the protein and iron it provides.

... and canned fish. Tuna in water (not oil) is a good alternative to fresh fish; rinse before use. Frozen seafood is often expensive, but the fresh catch-of-the-day may not be — ask the seafood department.

Go for frozen produce. Fruits and vegetables are pricey out of season, but frozen options tend to be nutrient-rich thanks to “flash freezing” done just after picking. You also can load up on cheap in-season produce, especially at farmers markets, and freeze it.

Buy nuts in bulk. A handful a day is an excellent protein source, but small containers at grocery stores are too costly. Get nuts from wholesale stores and keep them in air-tight containers.

Choose “whole” foods whenever possible. Buy a full cabbage and shred it yourself, for example, rather than a pre-packaged bag.

Shop smart. Write weekly menus, follow grocery lists and take advantage of coupons, store brands and bulk items. Don’t shop when you’re hungry and more likely to make impulse buys.

Salmon Dinner in 40 Minutes

THE WASHINGTON POST

Here's a novel way to cook salmon that, although orb-making is involved, does not involve the word "croquette." Mixed with scallions, herbs, panko and a judicious amount of mustard and mayonnaise, the salmon stays moist even after an intense session on the grill.

If you have a meatball grill basket, the heated portion of this recipe will be easier. But not to worry; a metal vegetable basket for the grill (with holes or perforations) or even an aluminum grill screen will work fine.

Serve with wedges of crisp iceberg lettuce and halved cherry tomatoes, or stuffed inside pita pockets with your favorite greens. Adapted from "I Love Meatballs!" by Rick Rodgers (Andrews McMeel, 2011).

Grilled Salmon Meatballs With Green Goddess Sauce

4 servings.

- 2 scallions
- 1/2 lemon
- Leaves from 4 stems flat-leaf parsley
- Leaves from 1 or 2 stems tarragon
- 1 pound skinless salmon fillets, preferably American wild-caught
- 3/4 cup panko (Japanese bread crumbs)
- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons low-fat mayonnaise (do not use nonfat)
- 2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
- 3/4 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus more to taste
- 1/2 teaspoon anchovy paste

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, pre-heat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for about 4 or 5 seconds. Have ready a spray water bottle for taming any flames.

Meanwhile, trim off and discard the root ends and dark-green parts of the scallions, then finely chop the remaining scallions to yield 1/4 cup. Squeeze the juice of the lemon into a measuring cup to yield 1 tablespoon. Finely chop the parsley and tarragon (together is okay) to yield 2 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons; those can go into a cup with the lemon juice.

Cut the salmon into chunks and place in a food processor. Pulse until coarsely chopped. Add half of the scallions, plus the panko, 2 tablespoons of the mayonnaise, the mustard, salt and pepper; pulse to incorporate. Refrigerate (in the covered food processor bowl, minus the blade) for 15 minutes.

While the meatball mixture is chilling, make the sauce: Whisk together the lemon juice and anchovy paste in a medium bowl until the anchovy paste has dissolved, then whisk in the remaining 1 cup of mayonnaise, the remaining scallion, and the parsley and tarragon (if the herbs were not already combined with the lemon juice). Season with pepper to taste. Cover and refrigerate until ready to use.

When ready to grill, use nonstick cooking oil spray to grease the inside of the meatball grill basket or vegetable basket for the grill, or an aluminum screen made for grilling.

Use clean, dampened hands to form 12 meatballs of equal size, placing them in the basket or on the screen as you work. Place the basket or grill screen on the grill grate; close the grill lid and cook for 3 minutes, so the undersides of the salmon meatballs brown lightly in spots. Then turn over the meatball basket or use 2 forks to turn over the meatballs in the vegetable basket or on the grill screen. Cook for 3 minutes; the salmon will be opaque and just cooked through. Transfer to a platter. Serve with the sauce on the side.

Cookin' with Pumpkin Raises Questions

BY BILL DALEY
Chicago Tribune

Question: Are all pumpkins edible? I have this wonderful pumpkin soup in a pumpkin recipe from Saveur magazine. It calls for a 7-inch Cinderella pumpkin, but if I cannot find that, I want to know if I would be safe with any other pumpkin.

Answer: "A pumpkin is always, and by definition, round-fruited and edible," says Amy P. Goldman, author of "The Compleat Squash: A Passionate Grower's Guide to Pumpkins, Squashes and Gourds."

Goldman says a pumpkin doesn't have to be orange; it can be white, blue or burnt sienna.

"We've got blinders on if all we use in cookery are the common field and pie pumpkins," she writes in an email.

"I would not recommend using a jack-o'-lantern (aka, field pumpkin) in cookery. They're coarse and fibrous and lack the soluble solids (starch and sugar) that make squashes delicious. Some of the pie pumpkins are fine and sweeter. My favorite pie pumpkin is Winter Luxury Pie."

You could try a squash. "Far better to set a table (and bake a pie or make soup) with the starchy, dry, thick, flaky, floury, melting, nutty and fine-textured winter squashes (mature fruits) of Cucurbita maxima and Cucurbita moschata and some of the better Cucurbita pepos," she writes.

These include Buttercup,

Hubbard (golden, blue or green), Delicious, Sibley, any Australian Blues, Kabocha (my personal fave), Musquee de Provence, Canada Crookneck, St. Petersburg and Butternut. "For gnocchi, the best squash is Marina di Chioggia," she says.

No Need to Guess! Leave the Turkey Day Math to Us

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quick! How many people does a 12-pound turkey feed? How many servings in a can of cranberry sauce? How long should you brine the bird?

Don't worry, we're lousy at Thanksgiving trivia, too. That's why we assembled this Turkey Day cheat sheet. This way you can focus on your family, friends and good eats without having to worry your way through culinary equations.

All serving estimates are generous to allow for plenty of seconds and leftovers.

How Big?

For turkeys under 16 pounds, estimate 1 pound per serving (this accounts for bone weight). For larger birds, a bit less is fine; they have a higher meat-to-bone ratio. But if your goal is to have ample leftovers, aim for 1 1/2 pounds per person whatever the turkey's size.

- For 8 people, buy a 12-pound turkey
- For 10 people, buy a 15-pound turkey
- For 12 people, buy an 18-pound turkey
- For 14 people, buy a 20-pound turkey

The Big Thaw

The safest way to thaw a frozen turkey is in the refrigerator. You'll need about 24 hours per 4 to 5 pounds of turkey. You also can put the turkey in a sink of cold water. Change the water every 30 minutes, and plan for about 30 minutes per pound.

The Brine

Never brine a turkey for more than about 8 to 10 hours. Much longer and the meat will be too salty. Always keep the bird refrigerated during brining. If the turkey is too big, an ice-filled cooler stored outside works, too.

The Roast

Roasting temperatures

vary widely by recipe. Some go at a slow and steady 325 degrees. Others crank the heat to 400 degrees or 425 degrees for the first hour, then drop it down for the rest of the time.

However you roast, use an instant thermometer inserted at the innermost part of the thigh (without touching bone) to determine when your turkey is done. The meat needs to hit 165 degrees for safe eating, though some people say thigh meat tastes better at 170 degrees.

The following roasting time estimates are based on a stuffed turkey cooked at 325 degrees. Reduce cooking time by 20 to 40 minutes for turkeys that are not stuffed. And remember, a crowded oven cooks more slowly, so plan ahead if your bird needs to share the space.

- 12-pound turkey: 3 to 4 hours at 325 degrees
- 15-pound turkey: 4 to 4 1/2 hours at 325 degrees

- 18-pound turkey: 4 1/2 to 5 hours at 325 degrees
- 20-pound turkey: 5 to 6 hours at 325 degrees

The Rest

The turkey should never go directly from the oven to the table. Like most meat, it needs to rest at least 20 minutes before serving for the juices to redistribute.

The Sides

- Carrots: a 1-pound bag makes 4 to 5 servings
- Cranberry sauce: a 12-ounce package of fresh cranberries makes about 2 1/4 cups of sauce; a 16-ounce can has 6 servings
- Gravy: plan for 1/3 cup of gravy per person
- Green beans: 1 1/2 pounds of beans makes 6 to 8 servings
- Mashed potatoes: a 5-pound bag of potatoes makes 10 to 12 servings
- Stuffing: a 14-ounce bag of stuffing makes about 11 servings

Eating Light: A Weeknight Pasta Dish

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Escarole is a lettuce that can lend a slightly bitter element to a salad of mixed greens, but its distinctive flavor and body also make it great for cooking.

A classic Italian pairing is escarole with white beans. I like to add blanched escarole to stuffings and pastas as well. Here, the interplay of the slightly bitter green, the unsmoked Italian bacon called pancetta and slow-cooked garlic bring lots of flavor to a weeknight pasta dish.

At the store, look for packages of diced pancetta near the deli section and packages of pre-cut escarole near the boxed leaf lettuces.

For a slightly richer dish, drizzle about a teaspoon of extra-virgin olive oil over each portion just before serving.

RICKY CARIOTI • WASHINGTON POST

Fusilli With Escarole, Pancetta and Garlic

6 servings.

- 12 ounces dried fusilli (corkscrew-shaped) pasta
- Salt
- 1 large head escarole, washed, trimmed and cut or torn as for salad, (2- to 3-inch pieces, about 15 ounces total after trimming)

2 teaspoons olive oil
4 ounces finely diced pancetta
3 medium cloves garlic, finely chopped (1 1/2 to 2 tablespoons)
Freshly ground black pepper
Grated Parmesan cheese, for serving (optional)

Prepare the pasta according to the package directions. Drain. Meanwhile, bring a large pot of salted water to a boil over high heat. Add the escarole and cook/ Blanch for no more than 30 seconds (just to wilt the leaves). Drain, and press out any excess water. Spread out on a clean towel or paper towels. Heat the oil in a large saute pan over medium-high heat. Add the pancetta, and reduce the heat to medium; cook for 3 to 4 minutes, until the pancetta just starts to brown and loses its raw look. Reduce the heat to medium-low; add the garlic. Cook for 4 to 5 minutes, until the garlic is soft, adjusting the heat so the garlic cooks but doesn't brown. Increase the heat to medium; add the escarole and pepper to taste, using tongs to incorporate the ingredients. Cook for 2 to 3 minutes, mixing occasionally, so the escarole warms through. Add the cooked pasta to the pan, or transfer the escarole mixture to a serving bowl and combine with the pasta. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Serve warm; pass grated Parmesan cheese at the table, if desired. Per serving: 260 calories, 14 g protein, 45 g carbohydrates, 4 g fat, 1 g saturated fat, 15 mg cholesterol, 180 mg sodium, 4 g dietary fiber, 1 g sugar.

Bread You Can Break over Days and Days

BY NOELLE CARTER
Los Angeles Times

Proper storage can help bread last longer.

Whether you bake a lot of bread, buy from a favorite bakery or get your loaves from the supermarket, knowing how to properly store your bread can delay staling and help it to last longer.

Store the bread in a cool, dry place, away from direct sunlight. Store your bread in a bread box if you have one, or keep the bread in its original packaging (whether plastic or paper). The shelf life of bread will vary by type but should keep anywhere from two days to a week.

If the bread is still warm from baking, give the bread time to cool before storing it — wrapping the bread while it is still warm can trap excess moisture, causing it to go soft, even moldy.

You can also freeze bread. Bread will keep, tightly wrapped in foil or plastic, up to a few months. Thaw the bread before using (you can toast frozen bread slices straight out of the freezer).

Whatever you do, don't refrigerate your bread — refrigeration can actually cause the bread to stale (called starch retrogradation) faster.

To refresh a loaf of bread, warm it in an oven, or toast the slices.

Rocco DiSpirito Rethinks Classic (Fatty) Meatloaf

BY ROCCO DISPIRITO
For The Associated Press

I just can't help but look at ingredients and try to find new and unexpected ways to use them.

So when I started thinking about ways to give meatloaf a healthy makeover, I wondered: Could I use kamut cereal in place of high-carb, low-nutrition breadcrumbs?

The answer turned out to be a very delicious yes!

If you've never heard of kamut, let me introduce you. Kamut is one of the so-called ancient grains that has become a popular alternative to wheat. It has 20 to 40 percent more protein and is higher in good fats, vitamins and minerals than wheat. Plus, it can be tolerated by some with sensitivities to regular wheat.

In this recipe, kamut serves as a flavorful bulking and moistening agent to the meatloaf instead of the more traditional breadcrumbs.

But I didn't stop with kamut. I also wanted to try something a little risky with this hearty, stick-to-your-ribs favorite. I wanted to reduce the amount of meat used in order to cut fat and calories.

I used chopped cremini mushrooms to replace some of the meat. Why mushrooms? They actually have a meaty flavor all their own. And trust me, no one will ever know that this recipe has less meat. You can even use more mushrooms and less meat than I did. It's a great way to s-t-r-e-t-c-h your meatloaf and s-t-r-e-t-c-h your dollars.

I also tinkered with the blend of meats. I opted for lean ground turkey and lean ground beef. The result is a full-flavored, meaty meatloaf that tastes substantial and has just 2 grams of fat and 133 calories per serving. Ready for the comparison? Regular meatloaf can pack 45 grams of fat and 720 calories.

Tips:

- Can't find kamut cereal? You can substitute puffed brown rice cereal.
- The meat mixture will be wetter than you expect when you mix it together.

Meatloaf

Start to finish: 45 minutes (15 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- 6 ounces cremini mushrooms
- 1 cup puffed kamut cereal
- 1/3 cup fat-free, reduced-sodium chicken broth
- 1 egg white, lightly beaten
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 4 tablespoons low-sugar ketchup, divided
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 8 ounces 96 percent lean ground beef
- 4 ounces 99 percent fat-free ground turkey breast

Heat the oven to 375 degrees.

Place the mushrooms in a food processor, then pulse until they are finely chopped. Scrape the mushrooms into a large mixing bowl. Add the kamut and broth to the processor, then process until the kamut is coarsely crushed.

To the bowl of mushrooms, add the crushed kamut and broth, egg white, garlic, 2 tablespoons of the ketchup, the salt and pepper. Stir until well mixed.

Add the ground beef and ground turkey, then use your hands to mix well. Spread meat mixture evenly in a nonstick loaf pan. Spread the remaining 2 tablespoons of ketchup evenly over the top.

Bake for 30 to 35 minutes, or until the meatloaf reaches 165 degrees. Remove from the oven and carefully pour off excess liquid from the pan, using a spatula to hold the meatloaf in the pan while pouring. Let the meatloaf stand for 5 minutes. Slice into 4 servings.

Pies Can Have a Savory Side, Too

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Though apple pies tend to dominate this time of year, on chilly nights it's nice to remember that pie can have a savory side, too.

So we brought together another of autumn's star ingredients — sweet potatoes — and paired it with salty, savory ground pork and sausage. For good measure and to add a touch of sweetness to balance the fatty meats, we even tossed in a few apples.

Heaped high in a purchased deep-dish pie crust, the combination was not just delicious, but also beautiful.

Sweet Potato and Apple Pork Pie

Servings: 8. Start to finish: 1 hour.

- 2 pounds sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
- 1 tablespoon canola or vegetable oil
- 1 small yellow onion, diced
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh sage, divided
- 1/8 teaspoon allspice
- 1 teaspoon salt, divided
- 3/4 teaspoon ground black pepper, divided

- 1 pound ground pork
- 1 pound loose sausage meat
- 1 apple, peeled, cored and diced
- 1/2 cup breadcrumbs
- 1 egg
- 1 prepared deep-dish pie crust (raw)
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon finely grated lemon zest

Heat the oven to 400 degrees.

In a medium saucepan over medium-high, bring about 1 inch of water to a boil. Add the sweet potatoes and cook until tender, about 8 minutes. Drain and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a small saute pan over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion, 1 tablespoon of the sage, the allspice, 1/2 teaspoon of salt and 1/2 teaspoon of pepper.

Cook until the onion is tender, about 5 minutes.

In a large bowl, mix together the pork, sausage meat, apple, breadcrumbs, egg and the onion mixture. Pat this mixture into the pie crust. Bake for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl mash together the sweet potato, remaining 1 tablespoon sage, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, the nutmeg and lemon zest. After the pork cooks for 20 minutes, remove from the oven and dollop the sweet potato mixture over the surface.

Return the pie to the oven and cook for another 25 to 30 minutes, or until the sweet potato begins to brown and the pie registers 165 degrees at the center. Cool slightly before slicing and serving.

Per serving: 540 calories; 270 calories from fat (51 percent of total calories); 30 g fat (10 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 115 mg cholesterol; 42 g carbohydrate; 23 g protein; 5 g fiber; 770 mg sodium.

How to Cook with Oreo Cookies

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: I was making a cheesecake with a chocolate wafer crust. I couldn't find chocolate wafers, but I did find Oreos. I've seen recipes that called for crushed Oreos, but I've never used them because I'm confused about whether I should leave in the cream filling. Should I scrape it out before I crush them?

Answer: That's really two questions. First, to find the chocolate wafers, don't look on the cookie aisle. Many stores stock them on the ice cream aisle, along with the chocolate syrups and ice cream toppings.

Second, if the recipe doesn't call for removing the Oreo filling, leave it in. The cookies can be crushed easily in a food processor, filling and all.

The creamy filling will help the crumbs stick together to form the crust. And why would you want to remove all that creamy goodness?

Chase the crows feet away before the company arrives for the holidays.

A Goosey, Buttery Pear Cake Fit for Fall

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

German butter cake — which also goes by the name goosey butter cake — seems to be one of those dishes that has many meanings to many people in many places.

Germany, for example, has a butter cake, a yeasted confection topped with ample amounts of butter and sugar, sometimes almonds. Philadelphia and St. Louis also have butter cakes, sometimes yeasted, sometimes not, and always considerably more goosey than Germany's.

Then there are the Southern goosey butter cakes. They generally start with a cake mix and have a goosey cream cheese custard on top.

So why not add one more version to the mix, this one based more on season than location, and borrowing ideas from all of the above? We incorporate pear for a cake perfect for fall. They can simply be omitted for the straight up goosey version. We also added a touch of cardamom, but feel free to use cinnamon or ginger if it's more your style.

Lastly, we kept the almonds of the German butter cake, but they are easily left off if you prefer.

Goosey Butter Pear Cake

Start to finish: 2 hours (30 minutes active). Servings: 16.

For the cake:

2 medium fresh pears, peeled, cored and diced (or 1 1/2 cups diced canned pears, patted dry)
1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
1/2 cup milk, room temperature
1 1/2 teaspoons instant yeast
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
2 cups all-purpose flour
6 tablespoons (3/4 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature

For the topping:

ASSOCIATED PRESS

1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature
4 ounces cream cheese, room temperature
1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1/4 cup corn syrup
3/4 cup all-purpose flour
To finish:
Powdered sugar
Toasted sliced almonds

Coat a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with cooking spray.
In a small bowl, toss the pear with the cardamom, then set aside.
In the bowl of an electric mixer fitted with the paddle attachment, combine the milk, yeast, sugar, salt, egg and flour. Mix on medium until a smooth dough has formed. Add 2 tablespoons of the butter and mix until fully incorporated. Repeat with the remaining butter. This should take 6 to 8 minutes.
Scrape the dough into the prepared baking dish and, using greased hands, spread over the bottom of the pan. Cover with plastic wrap and let rise in a warm place until doubled, about 45 minutes.

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Sprinkle the pears over the top of the dough.
To make the topping, in the bowl of an electric mixer, cream together the butter, cream cheese, sugar and salt. One at a time, add the eggs, beating until well mixed. Stir in the vanilla and corn syrup, then mix in the flour. Dollop this mixture over the pear covered dough.

Bake for 40 to 45 minutes, or until the center is slightly set but still jiggly. Allow to cool. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and toasted almonds to serve. Refrigerate any leftovers.

Whoopie Pies: Latest Trendy Treat to Make at Home

These whoopie pies have a praline cream cheese filling and edges that have been rolled in toasted, chopped pecans.

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Which came first, the cupcake or the macaron? Or did pie beat them in the race to be the trendy treat of the moment?

Maybe it doesn't matter. Because the hot sweet now is the whoopie pie, those delicious oversized cake-like cookies sandwiching a fluffy, sugary filling.

While chocolate cookies with vanilla frosting are traditional, whoopie pies come in just as many wild flavor combinations as cupcakes, macarons and pies.

For our fall whoopie pie, we looked to three favorite cold weather flavors — gingerbread, pumpkin and pecan pie.

Gingerbread lends itself perfectly to the shell of a whoopie pie. It is, after all, still cake. And pumpkin marries so beautifully with the spices of gingerbread that we couldn't leave it out.

But for the filling, we wanted to get away from traditional fluffy vanilla frosting. So we opted for a praline cream cheese filling and rolled the edges in toasted chopped pecans for a treat that's reminiscent of a creamy pecan pie.

Pecan Pumpkin Gingerbread Whoopie Pies
Start to finish: 1 hour. Makes 20 small or 10 large pies.

- For the cakes:
- 2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 2 teaspoons ground ginger
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
 - 1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature
 - 1/2 cup vegetable oil
 - 2 cups packed dark brown sugar
 - 3 tablespoons molasses
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - Zest of 1 orange
 - 2 tablespoons minced candied ginger
 - 2 eggs
 - 15-ounce can pumpkin puree
- For the filling:
- Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese
 - 1 cup Marshmallow Fluff
 - 1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature
 - 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - 1 cup toasted chopped pecans

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Line 2 large baking sheets with parchment paper.

In a medium bowl, sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, ginger, cloves and allspice. Set aside.

In the bowl of an electric mixer, beat together the butter, oil, brown sugar, molasses and vanilla. Add the orange zest, candied ginger and eggs, then beat to combine. Beat in the pumpkin puree. Stir in the flour mixture until thoroughly mixed.

Drop the dough in mounds (1/4 cup for large or 2 tablespoons for small) onto the prepared baking sheets, leaving several inches between each for spreading. You should make 20 or 40 cakes, depending on whether you want small or large whoopie pies. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes, or until the cakes feel slightly firm to the touch. Allow to fully cool before filling.

To make the filling, in the bowl of an electric mixer, beat together the cream cheese, Fluff, butter, brown sugar and vanilla until smooth. Drop a large spoonful onto the flat side of half of the cakes. Use a second cake to top each, pressing the flat sides together.

Place the pecans in a large, wide bowl, then roll the edge of each whoopie pie in the pecans to coat. Refrigerate in an airtight container.

Savory-Sweet Dinner in 40 Minutes

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Here's a savory pie that's sweetened by sauteed onions. It's baked upside down so the crust is done in short order and avoids getting soggy.

Serve with a green salad or steamed broccoli. Adapted from "Vegetarian Food for Kids," by Laura Washburn (Ryland Peters & Small, 2011).

Onion Pie

4 to 6 servings.

5 to 6 medium onions, a mix of red and sweet
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 to 3 sprigs thyme
1/2 teaspoon plus
1/4 teaspoon fine sea salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 cup all-purpose flour, plus more for the work surface
1 cup whole-wheat flour
1 generous teaspoon baking powder
5 tablespoons chilled unsalted butter
Scant 1/3 cup whole or low-fat milk

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees.

Cut the onions into medium dice to yield about 8 cups.

Heat the oil in a medium (9- or 10-inch) ovenproof skillet over medium-high heat until the oil just begins to shimmer; a seasoned cast-iron skillet or enamel-coated pan works well.

Add the onions and the leaves from the thyme sprigs (to taste), stirring to coat. Cook for 8 minutes, stirring fairly often, until the onions have softened and some of them are lightly browned. Season with the 1/2 teaspoon of salt and the pepper to taste. Remove from the heat.

While the onions are cooking, whisk together the flours, baking powder and the remaining 1/4 teaspoon of salt in a large mixing bowl. Cut the butter into small pieces and use your fingers or a pastry cutter to quickly work the butter into the dry ingredients, creating crumbs that are no larger than pea size.

Lightly flour a work surface. Stir in the milk to form a soft dough that just pulls away from the bowl, then transfer the dough to the work surface. Pat or roll out the dough evenly, adding as little extra flour as possible, to form a round of dough that is slightly larger than the skillet.

Transfer the dough to the skillet, placing it directly on the onions so they are completely covered. (If the dough tears, just patch it back together.) Tuck the dough in around the edges of the onions, remembering that when you invert the pie, you'll want a raised edge to hold in the onions. Use a sharp knife to make a few shallow slits in the dough to allow steam to escape.

Transfer to the oven and bake for about 20 minutes, until the crust is firm and cooked through. Let sit for 2 minutes, then place a platter or cutting board over the skillet. Carefully invert. Cut the pie into slices; serve warm.

THOMPSON BECOMES FIRST WRHS GIRLS BASKETBALL PLAYER TO GO D-I

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • At some point during Haylee Thompson's brief basketball career, things just started to click. She had been told since the eighth grade that she had the talent to play basketball. It took until midway through her junior year for her to really believe it.

On Tuesday, the 6-foot-1 senior forward from Wood River High School signed a National Letter of Intent to play women's basketball at Utah State University in Logan, becoming the school's first girl's basketball player to ink with an NCAA Division I school and the first in the Magic Valley since Minico's Whitney Martin signed with Boise State nine years ago.

"It's amazing. It's a really cool feeling to be the first at the school and I love to think that I did it for her (Wood River head coach Mendy Benson) especially," Thompson said. "When I first started to get the drive, I felt like I'm going to go somewhere far (and play basketball)."

Thompson picked up the game her freshman year and quickly impressed Benson, earning heavy minutes with the varsity team and an eventual starting spot. Benson, though, said Thompson "just kind of existed" her freshman season, not really tapping into all the talent she possessed.

"Each year she just got a little better and I think it took her two years to accept that she had the potential she had," Benson said.

Thompson

"Once you believe in yourself it takes you to another level."

She reached that other level last season.

Thompson displayed a diverse post game and a newfound tenacity in the paint to average 11.8 points and 6.9 rebounds per game. Her play, combined with point guard Kaitana Martinez, led the Wolverines to their first Great Basin Conference title and first Class 4A state play-off berth and win.

She then scored a career-high 23 points in the state semifinals against Bishop Kelly to lift Wood River to its first state championship game.

"Everything came together last season," Thompson said. "I knew I had the physical skills, it was just getting the mental side down. She (Benson) knows the mental side of basketball. We call it 'mental toughness' every day in practice."

Thompson also worked on her game playing club ball in Boise the past two summers. With the help of her club coordinator, she got connected with Utah State, which was intrigued with her size and athleticism.

The forward will fill a void for the Aggies, who lose four post players after this season.

"Everything I do fits in with what they want," said Thompson of Utah State, which reinstated the women's program in 2003-04 after a 15-year absence. "They have a new program and they're so young to basketball and still on the rise, which is cool because I can

Lions Charting New Ground — And Loving It

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

In concluding Tuesday's practice, Lighthouse Christian football coach John van Vliet reminded his players that "this is supposed to be fun."

It wasn't that the Lions weren't having fun. They just want to ride the wave as long as it lasts.

"We've never practiced into November before," van Vliet said. "We're enjoying the heck out of this."

That Lighthouse Christian has the privilege of prepping for its first home playoff game in school history, Saturday against Kootenai, is down to a turnaround with its defense.

While the team was never short on scoring points with its intricate offense, the other side of the ball took more time to round into form. Early in the season tough run games wore against the Lions' defense.

But when its back was pressed against the wall of elimination, the defense threw the switch.

"I think in that Murtaugh game things started turning around for us," said senior Dylan van Esch. "We really played good defense, and we got some stops in the red zone to get us rolling."

Since then the Lions have outscored opponents 134-20 in nine-plus quarters — 40-14 over Murtaugh to qualify for a two-quarter state play-in, then 48-6 over Mackay in the play-in and 46-0 over Salmon River last week.

A dominant performance against the pass-happy Savages was due in large part to a scheme change, going from a 4-3 front to a 3-4. That allowed an extra linebacker to support the pass defense, while also keeping the same number of men in the box in case Salmon River opted to run instead.

"The first half was really hard, and the offense was a little slow (in starting), but we just kept pushing," said defensive lineman Donnie Aardema. "We did our best to treat it like just another game."

It was as much "another game" as a left hook can be called a love tap. But it earned Lighthouse Christian another game, one more step along this new, wild ride the team hopes ends in Pocatello next week.

The journey almost took the Lions to

PSU Launches Probe; Paterno's Job in Jeopardy

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • Coach Joe Paterno is fighting for his job amid "eroding" support from Penn State's board of trustees and a widening sex-abuse scandal and possible cover-up centered on former assistant and one-time heir apparent Jerry Sandusky.

Paterno's regularly scheduled news conference was abruptly canceled Tuesday. A university spokesman cited "ongoing legal circumstances," a reference to charges announced over the weekend that Sandusky molested eight young boys between 1994 and 2009, and that two PSU administrators who have since stepped aside failed to notify authorities of a 2002 incident reported by an eyewitness.

Late Tuesday night, the board said it would appoint a special committee to conduct an investigation into the "circumstances" that resulted in the indictments of Sandusky, athletic director Tim Curley and vice president Gary Schultz. The committee will be appointed Friday at the board's regular meeting, which Gov. Tom Corbett said he plans to attend, and will examine "what failures occurred and who is responsible and what measures are necessary to ensure" similar mistakes aren't made in the future.

The board also promised those responsible would be held "fully accountable."

"We are committed to restoring public trust in the

NBA Union: No Deal; No Fear of Ultimatum, Either

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • NBA players made it clear Tuesday: No deal.

No fear of Commissioner David Stern's ultimatum, either.

"The current offer on the table from the NBA is one that we cannot accept," players' association president Derek Fisher said.

Instead, the players said they will ask for another meeting with owners before Stern's Wednesday afternoon deadline — and sound willing to agree to a 50-50 split of revenues under the right circumstances — in an attempt to end the lockout and save the season.

In an interview on NBA TV, Stern said that whether he agrees to meet "would be guided by the labor relations committee."

NBA spokesman Mike Bass said the league has not yet heard from Hunter.

A month of the season has already been lost, and the NBA risks losing fans without an agreement soon. Some already appear to have forgotten: Blake Griffin, last season's rookie of the year, stood around in the lobby of a busy hotel off Broadway and was rarely approached by fans.

The league's current proposal calls for players to receive between 49 percent and 51 percent of basketball-related income, though union officials argue it would be nearly impossible to get above 50.2 percent.

An appreciation for Joe Frazier

George Foreman's crushing right uppercut connected for the first time in Round 1 and, suddenly, the heavyweight champion of the world was on the canvas. At ringside, the shocking sight sent Howard Cosell into a frenzy.

"Down goes Frazah! Down goes Frazah! Down goes Frazah!" Cosell screamed into his ABC television microphone.

Across the ring, Foreman was thinking one thing: Please don't let Joe Frazier get up.

"I saw him get up and I said to myself, 'Oh boy, he's going to get me now,'" Foreman recalled Tuesday during a telephone interview. "You didn't want him getting up, and you really didn't want him getting up mad."

Get up Frazier did, only to go down again and again. Six times in all before the bell could sound to end the second round.

Yet there he was still, out on his feet but still upright and ready for more. Frazier wasn't going to surrender his heavyweight title until the referee mercifully put an end to the carnage in Jamaica.

"Joe Frazier wouldn't back away from King Kong," Foreman said. "Joe Frazier was one brave man."

Brave enough to take on the fearsome and much bigger Foreman in a fight he seemed destined to lose. Brave enough to hand Muhammad Ali his first loss and then almost fight to the death with him in the Philippines.

But that's what Frazier was. An undersized warrior who didn't know how to back down. A fighter to the core.

Understand that, and you understood Joe Frazier.

He kept getting up when Foreman knocked him down. He kept trying to fight Ali even though one eye was swollen shut and he couldn't see out of the other.

And he kept fighting for his rightful place in history until his death Monday night in Philadelphia at the age of 67.

"His pride and dignity made him fight to the end," Don King said. "Joe never forgave Muhammad Ali for what he did to him, but Joe Frazier proved that he wasn't only a great fighter but a great man."

Odd Couple: Stanford, Oregon a Matchup of Contrast

ASSOCIATED PRESS

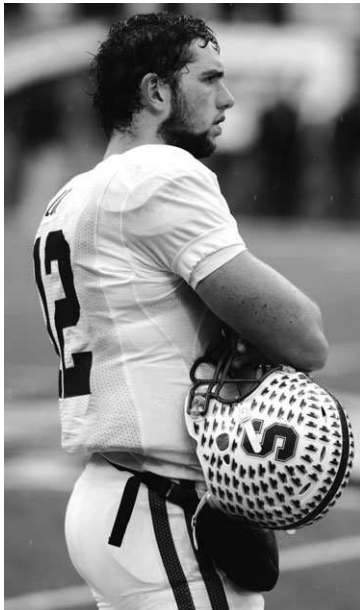

STANFORD, Calif. • Leave the defenses down in Dixie.

In the Pac-12's marquee matchup this weekend, No. 3 Stanford and No. 6 Oregon feature a pair of the nation's highest-scoring and most innovative offenses, showcasing schemes and stars that take remarkably different paths to success.

Power vs. Speed.
Luck vs. LaMichael.

Two contrasting styles that promise points — unlike top-ranked LSU's 9-6 overtime victory over previously No. 2 Alabama last week — when the Cardinal (9-0, 7-0) host the Ducks (8-1, 6-0) Saturday night on The Farm. The winner likely locks up a spot in the inaugural league title game and maybe even a chance to play for a BCS championship.

First team to score 50 wins?
"It's all about putting points up on the board. Our offense tries to do that and their offense does, too. It doesn't matter how you get to that point," Stanford quarterback and

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stanford's quarterback Andrew Luck takes a break on the sideline in the final minutes against Oregon State.

Heisman Trophy hopeful Andrew Luck said. "So long as you score."

Oregon's spread-option, no-huddle offense headlined by running back LaMichael James relies on speed and misdirection. And while Luck anchors a prolific passing game, the Cardinal count on a powerful pro-style offense, bunching up formations that often include three tight ends or seven offensive linemen.

"It's not just Andrew Luck," Oregon coach Chip Kelly said.

The Ducks and Cardinal lead the Pac-12 and also rank among the Top 10 in the nation in almost every major offensive category. The staggering statistics are the kind usually reserved for video games, producing similar results despite the differences.

Stanford averages 48 points and Oregon 46 points, good for third and fifth-best in the country, respectively. The Ducks have averaged 510.67 yards per game (seventh) to Stanford's 505.78 yards (eighth), with Oregon gaining slightly more on the ground and the Cardinal racking up more in the air. All of it is based on opposite personnel.

"It's a vicious circle, to a certain degree," Stanford coach David Shaw said. "We're probably the only team in the nation with four scholarship fullbacks on the team. This is who we are. We've got multiple, big-offensive linemen who can play. It's just what we do. They do the same thing. They have a scheme, and they're recruiting to a scheme that fits them."

Kelly developed his version of the spread when he was an assistant at New Hampshire, then tailored his scheme after arriving in Eugene as offensive coordinator in 2007 to accommodate running backs Jonathan Stewart and Jeremiah Johnson, as well as dual-threat quarterback Dennis Dixon.

Already running a no-huddle offense, Oregon further sped things up last season by streamlining play-calling, using distinctive posters flashed from the sidelines to signal plays as they surged to the BCS championship game, where they lost to Auburn.

"We're not a finesse team. We just have fast players," James said.

The style also makes the Ducks efficient — at times even too efficient, if that's possible.

Oregon is often so quick to score behind big-play bursts that its offense is hardly on the field. The Ducks rank 51st in the nation in time of possession, averaging only 23:52 per contest, meaning they're only on the field a little more than a third of the game. In comparison, Stanford's grinding offense averages a time of possession of 33:17.

"The way they use their athletes and their speed and the way they put points on the board is very impressive for an offensive guy," Luck said.

Stanford's system, meanwhile, is designed to methodically maul opponents with zone blocking.

Coaches: PSU Players Must Focus on Huskers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michigan State and Minnesota have coped with their head coaches' health scares the last two years, and Ohio State has had to deal with the fallout of NCAA rules violations.

Those situations are far different than the distraction 12th-ranked Penn State faces this week as it prepares for a home game against No. 19 Nebraska. Penn State and its veteran coach, Joe Paterno, are under fire after allegations of sex abuse involving children by former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky.

The athletic director and a school vice president already have lost their jobs, and there are calls for the removal of Paterno and the school president.

With all the discord, the players are being asked to continue with a season that, on the field, has exceeded expectations. If Penn State wins out, they go to the Rose Bowl.

"Usually you go one way or the other under adverse situations," Michigan State coach Mark Dantonio said Tuesday. "You're either going to thrive in it and fight back or you're going to let it take you over."

"Usually you go one way or the other under adverse situations. You're either going to thrive in it and fight back or you're going to let it take you over."

Michigan State coach Mark Dantonio

Dantonio and his counterparts on the Big Ten's weekly teleconference with reporters steered clear of commenting on the specifics of the Penn State situation. Several coaches expressed support for Paterno, who did not participate in the call.

Potential distractions are always a concern as teams prepare for games. Players get hurt, get arrested, decide to transfer. Sometimes there are tragedies, too; a year ago, Notre Dame student videographer Declan Sullivan was killed in an accident when the scissor lift he was on toppled over during practice.

Dantonio suffered a mild heart attack after a dramatic win over Notre Dame last year, and his Spartans went on to win a share of the Big Ten championship. Minnesota coach Jerry Kill has missed time this season because of seizures, and the Gophers have struggled, though not necessarily because of his absences.

Paterno

university," the board statement concluded.

At least a thousand students descended on the administration building about 11 p.m., EDT, chanting "Joe Paterno!" over and over, along with Penn State cheers. Many held up their smartphones to take photos or simply light up the night. A few young men climbed flag poles.

About 10 police officers stood on the steps of the building, guarding it.

Paterno's son, Scott, said his father was disappointed over the decision by PSU President Graham Spanier to cancel the news conference. Addressing reporters outside his parents' house, Scott said Joe was prepared to answer questions about Sandusky — who maintains he is innocent — and further that his father plans to coach not only Saturday's game against Nebraska, but for the long haul.

Hundreds of fans staged a raucous rally outside Paterno's home. He appeared briefly, along with some family members, and thanked the crowd for coming.

"It's hard for me to say how much this means," the 84-year-old coach said. "I've lived for this place. I've lived for people like you guys and girls."

Asked if he was still the coach, Paterno didn't answer but a young woman who stood with her arm around him replied: "Now is not the time."

As he returned to his house, Paterno stopped and pumped his fists above his head, yelling, "We are ..."

"Penn State!" the crowd replied.

"We're always going to be Penn State," Paterno said. "I'm proud of you. I've always been proud of you. Beat Nebraska."

At an afternoon practice, managers hastily put plywood boards over an exposed fence to block photographers' view of the field.

Paterno, who earns about $1 million annually from the school, has been head coach for 46 years and part of the Penn State staff for more than six decades, and his old-school values pervade every corner of the program.

Over that span, the Nittany Lions won two national championships, but unlike many other Division I powerhouses, the program avoided run-ins with the NCAA. The team generates millions of dollars each year in revenues from attendance, TV rights and sponsorships, but it has stubbornly stuck with the basic white-and-blue uniforms that are now among the most recognizable in college football.

All those things have inspired pride in the region and fierce loyalty to Paterno, who is the winningest coach in Division I and one of the most respected in any sport. That lofty status, however, has been the subject of heated arguments in recent days, among students on campus, construction workers on the street and the PSU board of trustees.

A person familiar with the trustees' discussions said support there for Paterno was "eroding," but couldn't gauge whether the board would take action. The same person said Spanier has also lost support ahead of Friday's board meeting. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the subject.

While praising Spanier's tenure at Penn State, an official of the American Council on Education, said, "The central issue for the board, which is charged with pre-(7-2, 4-1) is in control of the Legends Division, but Nebraska (7-2, 3-2), Iowa (6-3, 3-2) and Michigan (7-2, 3-2) are close behind.

The Hawkeyes, all but written off in the division after they lost to Minnesota two weeks ago, can make it to the first conference championship game if they win out.

"At the end of the day, there's so much talk about divisional play and conference races and all that stuff," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "The one thing that hasn't changed: the more you win, the better of you are; the more you lose, the worse off you are."

For Penn State to keep winning amid the uproar in State College, Pa., will be no small accomplishment.

Northwestern coach Pat Fitzgerald said PSU players must lean on each other. "Most coaches talk about understanding we're a football family and what happens in our family or to our family should stay within our family, as far as helping people through things and rallying around each other," Fitzgerald said. "There are those old 'coachisms' out there about what won't kill you makes you stronger."

serving and protecting the institution, is not the rearview mirror."

"It's the institution going forward," added Terry Hartle, senior vice president at the council, the main umbrella organization representing colleges and universities nationally.

Much of the criticism surrounding Paterno has concerned his apparent failure to follow up on a report of the 2002 incident, in which Sandusky allegedly sodomized a 10-year-old boy in the showers at the team's football complex. The eyewitness, Mike McQueary, is currently receivers coach for the team but was a graduate assistant at the time.

McQueary told Paterno about the incident the next day, and the coach notified Curley and Schultz, who in turn notified Spanier. Curley and Schultz have been charged with perjury and failure to report the incident to authorities, as required by state law.

Both men, as well as Paterno, testified that they were told that Sandusky behaved inappropriately in that 2002 incident, but not to the extent of McQueary's graphic account to a state grand jury.

be part of something bigger."

Benson, who played at Kansas State and Oregon, said Thompson's jump from 4A basketball in Idaho to D-I is a big leap and she's given the senior advice from her playing days. "I think she has a coaching staff there that will help her grow and not rush her into it quickly. There are a lot of D-I programs out there where you better perform right away or you're gone. I think that Utah State isn't like that," Benson said.

Said Thompson: "I realize the work that has to be put in and I know it's going to be hard, but I'm going to love it."

Holt Arena a week early, as Lighthouse Christian meets all hosting criteria except for shower accommodations for the visitors. But van Vliet, also the school's athletic director, called Twin Falls A.D. Mike Federico and arranged for Kootenai to be accommodated there post-game.

That paved the way for the school to host the biggest event yet for an athletic program on the rise.

Aardema's face lit up at the mere thought of what he and the rest of the Lions will see when they trot onto their home field Saturday. "It's going to be loud," Aardema said. "I think we'll have a big crowd, because it's a big game and people are going to want to see what we've accomplished."

WSOP Finalists Battle Deep Into Las Vegas Night

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS • Las Vegas poker professional Ben Lamb was eliminated from the World Series of Poker main event Tuesday night in four hands — leaving Pius Heinz of Germany and Martin Staszko of the Czech Republic battling for the $8.72 million title, a battle that had not concluded as this edition of the Times-News went to press. Lamb pushed all-in on the first hand of play with a king-jack, hoping to induce Staszko to fold pocket sevens.

But Staszko called and kept his marginal advantage as the five community cards were dealt. “I got the sense he wasn’t like super strong, but he actually was stronger than I thought he was,” Lamb said. That left Lamb very short on chips, and he pushed all-in again three hands later with a queen-six. This time, Staszko had pocket jacks and eliminated Lamb.

The 26-year-old Lamb won $4 million for finishing in third place. The hands pushed Staszko to a chip lead over Heinz.

Heinz, 22, of Cologne, Germany, and 35-year-old Martin Staszko of Trinec, Czech Republic, were each guaranteed a payday of at least $5.43 million.

Heinz led at the start with just over half the chips in play, but both Staszko and Lamb had enough chips for him to be wary. Each player must lose all his chips to be eliminated from the no-limit Texas Hold ‘em tournament, and win all the chips in play to take the crown. Heinz, who said he had a rough six-month run in poker before the series and was thinking about whether to go back to college, aggressively stormed from seventh in chips to first at the nine-hand final table on Sunday. He went from 16.4 million in chips to 107.8 million in just more than 7½ hours of play, propelling to a higher finish than at least six of his competitors.

Lamb, an experienced professional who made his mark at the 58-tournament series this year by winning Player of the Year honors, had a large contingent of rowdy supporters and a smaller group of friends and poker experts feeding him information about his play and his opponents.

He didn’t last long Tuesday.

For the first time, every hand at the final table was playing out nearly live on ESPN, including tense stretches of several minutes during which players mull difficult decisions.

The play was being aired on a 15-minute delay with hole cards revealed once hands ended — enough time to ensure gambling regulators that players couldn’t cheat.

Frazier

I spent some time talking to Frazier earlier this year as he reminisced about his career and his life. The 40th anniversary of the Fight of the Century was looming, and Frazier was more than happy to talk about a memorable night long past.

No one in Madison Square Garden that night, it seemed, wanted him to beat Muhammad Ali. Not the fans who scraped together enough money to get a cheap seat in the rafters, and certainly not the celebrities and various rogues of the night who dressed in their finest to parade around ringside before the bout.

Frank Sinatra shot pictures for Life magazine from ringside. Barbra Streisand and Bill Cosby watched from seats just a few steps away.

They saw Frazier do what no man had done before — beat the great Ali. If that wasn’t enough, he knocked Ali down in the 15th round with one of his classic left hooks to seal the deal.

I can’t go nowhere where it’s not mentioned,” Frazier said. “That was the greatest thing that ever happened in my life.”

He fought Ali the way he fought everyone, with his chin planted on his opponent’s shoulder, because that was the only way he could fight. Frazier barely stood 5-foot-10, never weighed more than 205 or so. He wasn’t going to beat people with his physical skills, so he figured out a way to keep relentless pressure on until he could find a way to land a left hook that surely was one of the most beautiful punches in boxing.

It didn’t work against Foreman because Foreman was simply too big, too powerful. Ali found a way to beat him in their final two fights, too, including a fight so epic that boxing people simply shake their heads when asked what happened at the Thrilla in Manila. Ali would later say it was the closest thing he ever knew to death. Though blinded by his swollen eyes, Frazier still tried to fight the 15th round against one of the greatest fighters ever. The bitterness toward Ali that Frazier carried throughout the rest of his life was especially rooted in that fight. Ali called him a gorilla, an Uncle Tom. When Frazier returned home, his children asked why the other kids at school were saying the same thing.

“Joe could never forgive him for that,” King said over the phone. “But you have to know the times, the race struggle in America. Joe couldn’t understand why some of the blacks looked at him with disdain and then extolled Muhammad Ali. But Smokin’ Joe was an integral part of history. That fight changed things for a lot of people. It changed the respect paid when people would look at other people of color.”

That fight changed things for Frazier, too. Neither he nor Ali were ever the same after the brutal bout, and Frazier would have only one more meaningful fight, a second knockout loss to Foreman. He would burn through all the riches he made in the ring, ending up in an apartment over his gym in Philadelphia. But he loved to make appearances, loved to be with fans, as he was in September when he signed memorabilia in Las Vegas.

“Joe Frazier, sharp as a razor,” he told them.

Ali put out a statement saying he would always remember Frazier with respect and admiration, something Frazier surely would have scoffed at.

In the end, he’ll go down as one of the great heavyweights ever, a man who fought hard in Ali’s shadow, then fought even harder to get out of it.

“All he wanted to do was beat up Muhammad Ali one more time,” Foreman said. “Maybe someday in heaven he’ll have a chance to do it.”

Cured, George Karl Still Fights Cancer

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • With no basketball to coach, George Karl is tending to his other passion in life: fighting cancer, a disease he’s beaten twice. The Denver Nuggets coach lent his voice Tuesday to the American Cancer Society and Quest Diagnostics, which are teaming up on a nationwide cancer prevention study. It aims to follow 300,000 people for 20 to 30 years to see how genetics, lifestyle and the environment affect cancer risk. “There are a lot of people who want to get into this fight who don’t have cancer, and this is one way,” Karl said. Karl is 21 months removed from a brutal battle with neck cancer, which came a few years after he beat prostate cancer. His son, Coby, is a survivor of lymph node cancer. Karl said he’s spending his spare time during the NBA labor impasse speaking at cancer charities and encouraging people to join the fight against the disease. Karl missed the end of the 2009-10 season because of his illness, then returned last year and guided the Nuggets through the Carmelo Anthony minefield while also recording his 1,000th win, joining Larry Brown, Don Nelson, Lenny Wilkens, Pat Riley, Jerry Sloan and Phil Jackson as members of the NBA’s most exclusive coaching club. He’s looking much stronger and leaner than he was last season, and his voice is much stronger, which makes it easier for him to talk about preventing cancer. “I’m very passionate about it. I enjoy talking about cancer,” Karl said. “I enjoy talking basketball more, I’d like to be able to talk basketball but I can’t right now. But you know, my family, everybody has been touched somewhere along the way.” The NBA locked out its players and canceled the first month of the season. The sides are meeting again this week with the remainder of the season hanging in the balance. Several Nuggets decided to play overseas during this season. Karl finds himself stumped without a team to teach. “I don’t know if the word’s difficult. To me it’s just strange. I don’t know what to do,” he said. “I go to work almost every day when I’m in Denver and then about 11 o’clock, I’m going, ‘What the hell am I doing here?’ We’re not allowed to do anything.”

N.D. Senate Says UND May Drop Fighting Sioux Nickname

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BISMARCK, N.D. — State senators voted Tuesday to let the University of North Dakota scrap its Fighting

Sioux athletics nickname, but ordered the school to wait three years to pick a replacement for a name the NCAA says is offensive to American Indians.

State law requires UND's athletics teams to be known as the Fighting Sioux. The school has sought to retire its nickname for years, and UND has been under sanctions from the NCAA since August for keeping the name and a logo that depicts the profile of an American Indian warrior.

"Let us ... recognize that being forced to change what you're called doesn't mean changing who you are," said state Sen. Mac Schneider, D-Grand Forks, a former UND football player.
"We are the University of North Dakota, and we'll always be fighting," Schneider said.
The state Senate voted 39-

7 to approve the legislation, sending it to the House, which has been more hostile to dumping the nickname. Rep. RaeAnn Kelsch, R-Mandan, the chairwoman of the House Education Committee, said she believed the measure would win House approval.
The proposed three-year wait "gives the emotions a little bit of time to heal, whether they actually will or not," Kelsch said.

Gov. Jack Dalrymple, who would have to sign an approved bill into law, has already expressed support for retiring the UND nickname and an American Indian school logo.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 21st day of February, 2012, at the hour of 10:00 a.m. of this day (recognized local time), in the office of Insured Titles, 841 Main Street, Gooding, 83330, in the County of Gooding, State of Idaho, TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash or cashier's check (cash equivalent), in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale in compliance with Section 45-1506(9) Idaho Code, the following described real property, situated in Gooding County, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:
East half of Lots 17, 18 19 and 20, Block 72 of the Amended Plat of the Village of Gooding, Gooding County, Idaho, as the same is platted in the official plat thereof, now of record in the office of the Recorder of said County.
The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that according to the County Assessors office, the address of 515 Arizona Street, Gooding, ID, 83330, is sometimes associated with said real property.
Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Jeffrey Straub and Brandi Straub, Husband and Wife, as Grantor(s), to TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, and Idaho Central Credit Union, as Beneficiary, recorded January 4, 2006, as Instrument No. 214461, in the records of Gooding County, Idaho.
THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION (45-1506)(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.
The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under the Note, the monthly payments of $984.33, due per month for the month of February 1, 2011 and all subsequent monthly payments of principal, interest, late charges and any miscellaneous fees thereafter. The Principal balance is $92,209.66, the current interest rate is 6.875% per annum, as of August 10, 2011. All amounts are now due, together with unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, costs and advances made to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

“Of all human follies there's none could be greater Than trying to render our fellow-men better.” — Moliere

In today's deal, you are South. Plan the play in seven spades after West leads the trump two. You appear to have a club loser in both hands. You can pitch a club from dummy but only after drawing trump — so that won't do you any good. What can you do to avoid the ugly fate of going down in a freely bid grand slam?

You must aim to reverse the dummy, which means taking ruffs in the long hand and drawing trump with the short hand. You can achieve this by ruffing three diamonds in the South hand. This will give you three trump tricks, three diamond ruffs, two minor-suit aces and five heart tricks. This line requires trump to behave. If they don't, you really have no chance at all.

So win the trump lead with your jack, play a diamond to the ace, and ruff a diamond in hand.

Now you need to cross to dummy to take another diamond ruff. Which honor should you cross to? It is vital to cross to dummy's heart king because otherwise, as here, someone might be able to discard his singleton heart on the next diamond. The general tip is that when in doubt in playing a crossruff, you should always use the dangerous entry first.

This deal comes from “52 Great Bridge Tips on Declarer Play” by David Bird.

ANSWER: The auction may seem surprising, even suspicious, but your partner had the opportunity to overcall or to raise spades and did not do so. Accordingly, he appears to have a bust, with a lot of minor-suit cards. Since a double of two hearts would be takeout (hearts have been bid and raised and you are facing a passed partner), what can you do but pass?

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 9, the 313th day of 2011. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Nov. 9, 1965, the great Northeast blackout occurred as a series of power failures lasting up to 13½ hours left 30 million people in seven states and part of Canada without electricity.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1872, fire destroyed nearly 800 buildings in Boston.

In 1918, it was announced that Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm II would abdicate. He then fled to the Netherlands.

In 1938, Nazis looted and burned synagogues as well as Jewish-owned stores and houses in Germany and Austria in a program that became known as "Kristallnacht."

In 1953, Welsh author-poet Dylan Thomas died in New York at age 39.

In 1961, U.S. Air Force Maj. Robert M. White became the first pilot to fly an X-15 rocket plane at six times the speed of sound. The Beatles' future manager, Brian Epstein, first saw the group perform at The Cavern Club in Liverpool, England.

In 1963, twin disasters struck Japan as some 450 miners were killed in a coal-dust explosion, and about 160 people died in a train crash.

In 1967, a Saturn V rocket carrying an unmanned Apollo spacecraft blasted off from Cape Kennedy on a successful test flight.

In 1970, former French President Charles de Gaulle died at age 79.

In 1989, communist East Germany threw open its borders, allowing citizens to travel freely to the West; joyous Germans danced atop the Berlin Wall.

In 1991, singer-actor Yves Montand died near Paris at age 70.

Ten years ago: The northern alliance proclaimed victory over the Taliban in the city of Mazar-e-Sharif, the most significant prize in northern Afghanistan.

Five years ago: Republican Senator George Allen conceded defeat in the Virginia Senate race to Democrat Jim Webb, sealing the Democrats' control of Congress. Champion figure skater Michelle Kwan was appointed America's first public diplomacy envoy by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice. CBS newsman Ed Bradley died in New York at age 65.

One year ago: Continuing his Asia tour, President Barack Obama flew from India to Indonesia, his home for four years of his youth. Former President George W. Bush officially kicked off the release of his memoir, "Decision Points," with a book-signing in Dallas. A special prosecutor cleared the CIA's former top clandestine officer and others of any charges for destroying agency videotapes showing waterboarding of terror suspects, but continued an investigation into whether the harsh questioning went beyond legal boundaries.

HAGERMAN

DEAR ABBY: My son invited two friends to our home for the weekend. We had never met them before, but they seemed nice.

At bedtime, the young man was on the couch and the girl was in our spare bedroom. In the middle of the night, I was awakened to loud lovemaking noises. They grew louder and louder, and the headboard was banging against our bedroom wall. My husband and I were mortified. Finally, I banged on the wall and it stopped. We couldn't believe these kids would act that way in someone's home.

They left before breakfast, so we didn't have to face them in the morning. What was proper here? Would it have been appropriate to knock on the bedroom door and ask the guy — or both of them — to leave?

I told my son about it the next day. He was embarrassed and apologized for his friends. What should we do if this ever happens again?

— RED-FACED

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR RED-FACED: Unless you first required your son's friends to sign an abstinence pledge before bedding down at your place, you were right not to have evicted them before morning. Next time, keep this from happening by having your son tip them off at bedtime that you're light sleepers and prefer not to be awakened by "nocturnal whoopee."

DEAR ABBY: When I'm reading a book, my husband chooses that moment to begin a conversation. If I don't immediately put it down and give him my full attention, he gets upset and says I'm being rude to continue reading and not talk to him.

I think it's rude of HIM to interrupt me when I'm reading. These aren't important conversations or even questions he needs immediate answers to. They are conversations we could easily share over dinner, or later when I'm not reading.

I love to read, but as a busy mom I rarely have the time. Being interrupted during those rare moments drives me crazy and makes me feel even crazier when I'm accused of being rude if I don't want to chat right then. Who's right and who's rude?

— TRYING TO FINISH
MY BOOK

DEAR TRYING TO FINISH: Frankly, I think your husband is right. He may not need the answer to his question as much as he needs your companionship at the time he's reaching out. If finishing a chapter is so important that you can't take a few minutes and talk with him, then suggest that in 15 to 20 minutes you can give him the rest of the evening to talk. If my husband is involved in a project, or I am, that's what we do, and it works for us.

DEAR ABBY: How do you handle a relative who seems to think your house is her own personal garage sale site? She rifles through my closets, brings out clothing, and then asks, "What can I pay you for this?" She also looks around our garage for items that are being stored and asks the same question. She would never act this way at a friend's home, but somehow it's different with me. By the way, she's my sister.

— NO SALE
IN AUSTIN

DEAR NO SALE: Because it's your sister and not some nervy acquaintance, be light-handed in your response. Smile and say, "I'm not ready to let it go, but when I am, you'll be the first to know." Then get her out of your closet or garage and direct the conversation elsewhere.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF NOVEMBER 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You could be a whiz kid of the boardroom during the next four to six weeks. Your investment acumen and business expertise are at the forefront, so this could be a good time to pursue business or career aspirations. Between December and February, keep your feet on the ground even though you are lifted upwards by a new romance or inspiring idea. You could get caught up in a fantasy and not see the truth. Wait until March and April when your judgment is at its best to make key commitments or major promises. Press forward with career or financial projects in June, when success is more likely in the material world.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unless your living room is in Las Vegas, what happens there isn't likely to stay there. Be discreet and avoid entanglements that could threaten your stable home and family life. Don't act on impulse or a whim.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A little kindness goes a long way. You suffer from a tendency to give the benefit of the doubt too freely. A trend to believe what you want to believe means that a little flattery can go to your head.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Remain as reliable as the Rock of Gibraltar, even when tempted to skip rocks. Cupid's arrow won't hit the mark during the next few days, even though you can see fantasies coming true in your mind's eye.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remain bright-eyed and bushy-tailed. If you are settled in a pleasant relationship, this could be a good time to discuss plans for the future. Don't make firm promises until all possibilities are considered.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The grass might look greener on the other side of the fence, but it is only a trick of light. Spats are possible if you act impulsively. Luckily, a friend indeed may guide you away from a passing fancy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All you have to do is ask. Favors are falling off the trees and a recipe for financial success is ripe for plucking. Your home could be used as a safe haven by someone who needs to take a break from the world.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What seems like a sure-fire investment could backfire. You are susceptible to flattery and that could prove costly. Steer clear of new romantic entanglements or taking on new financial obligations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid being taken in by come-hither glances. Your superb confidence can make you a target for someone who can count on your gullibility. Acts of charity could be repaid in days to come.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Big jobs get smaller quickly when more than one pair of hands join in. Passing flirtations are not serious, but can make time fly pleasantly. Don't make the mistake of trying to go it alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can't go too far wrong if you remember that money isn't everything. Keep your thoughts, finances and emotions focused on achieving long-term goals rather than seeking instant gratification.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Flirtatious eyes may just be a disguise. Your heart might start beating faster when a certain someone blinds you with a beautiful smile, but deep within you know that person is just playing a game.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Sensitive flowers need sensitive handling. Nurture key relationships and be especially kind to family members. Right now people assume you are wiser, better looking, and more talented than you are.

HAILEY BAGS PLASTIC BAN

TIMES-NEWS

Plastic bags will not be cast out from Hailey, as voters rejected a ban which would have docked retailers daily for not using paper or reusable bags.

The measure failed as it did not reach a 50 percent majority. Of the 1,484 votes cast, 864 were against the ban.

A group of Wood River High School students got the measure on the ballot. It was intended to reduce waste and encourage more shoppers to use reusable shopping bags or the recycled paper bags Hailey stores already offer.

Some town retailers and Jerome-based bag manufacturer Hilex Poly were firmly against the measure. Retailers say paper costs more and that not everyone has caught on to bringing their own reusable, fabric bags. Hilex Poly reps said the ban would have cost workers their jobs and launched an ad campaign against the measure.

Had the ban passed, retailers could have lost $50 a day in fines if they continued to use plastic.

KETCHUM WON'T CHANGE GOVT. FORMAT

TIMES-NEWS

Ketchum residents decided not to change their form of city government, but only by a narrow margin.

Nearly 57 percent of the 1,022 votes cast were against the format shuffle, meaning results for Tuesday's Ketchum City Council election are void.

Voters had to decide whether to stick with a mayor/council government or move to a manager/council. Since the council's format won't change, a new council won't be seated in January.

Now, the city will schedule a special election for May in which only two seats will be up for grabs, and those are currently held by incumbent Councilmen Larry Helzel and Curtis Kemp. In the null council election from Tuesday, 13 candidates vied for five spots on the new council. Incumbent Nina Jones led the field with 706 votes, followed by incumbent Baird Gourlay with 525, incumbent Randy Hall 421, Kemp 420, and Bob Kesting 388.

JEROME POLICE NOT MOVING ANYTIME SOON

TIMES-NEWS

Jerome police will have to stay in their current location for now.

The department asked voters to approve a $500,000 bond to fund moving police headquarters to a new building, but it fell short of the required 66 percent supermajority. The bond failed as only 63.6 percent of residents supported the move. The measure needed 506 votes but received only 482.

The Jerome City Council in July decided to include the 20-year bond proposal on the ballot and put down a refundable $20,000 deposit for the former Idaho Department of Fish and Game building, located on the 800 block of East Main Street.

The building, city officials hoped, would house city police and alleviate problems the force currently faces with its South Lincoln Avenue facility. The current police station was constructed back in the 1920s and formerly used as a telephone exchange. The partially underground building has leaky walls and a flat roof that drips, even with repairs.

KIMBERLY, JEROME REJECT RECYCLING PROGRAMS

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Kimberly voters said "no" Tuesday to adding recycling to city services.

The measure failed, as only 33 percent of residents supported giving city leaders the ability to create a single-stream recycling program. Mayor-elect Tracy Armstrong doesn't blame voters for turning the measure down.

"I can attribute that to a lack of confidence the people had in the information passed on to them," Armstrong said on Tuesday night. "They're reluctant to move forward with a lot of things right now. It's probably a wise decision at this time."

Polly Hulsey, city administrator for Kimberly, told the Times-News last month the recycling program could have potentially cut city costs by lowering landfill fees. If passed and created, the program could have added $3.50 to residents' bills.

Jerome city leaders wanted an opinion on a recycling program, and voters rejected the idea, but not by much.

Tuesday's vote would not have led city leaders to take immediate action — rather, it was to gauge how people felt about adding single-stream recycling. Of the 738 votes cast in the matter, it failed 378 to 360, just 18 votes shy.

The city has received a few proposals from companies for a possible recycling service. Residents would likely pay an additional $3.50 per month for each household on top of regular sanitation fees.

The Gooding School District would like to invite veterans and community members to a Veterans Day program at Gooding High School.

The event will take place at 2 p.m. in the gymnasium and will honor veterans past and present. All veterans are also invited to a free luncheon at 1 p.m. at the high school.

Those planning to attend the lunch should call 934-4831 to RSVP.

The Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind will have a veterans program at 1:20 p.m. the same day. Students will honor each Idaho soldier who has died in recent wars.

The school is located at 1450 Main St. in Gooding.

Advocates Seek to Stop Idaho, Montana Wolf Hunts

The National Rifle Association and other sporting groups have intervened in the case on the side of the federal government.

PASADENA, Calif. • Wildlife advocates appeared in federal court Tuesday seeking to stop gray wolf hunts that are already well under way in the Northern Rockies, arguing that Congress overstepped its authority in stripping federal protections from the canines.

Federal biologists say the wolf population is healthy enough to support the hunts in Idaho and Montana. The two states want to drive down the predators' numbers to curb their attacks on livestock and big game herds.

But wildlife advocates say too many wolves are being shot too quickly, threatening to unravel the species' decades-long recovery and killing animals closely followed by wolf watchers.

Almost 170 wolves have been shot since hunting began in late August.

"The longer the hunting season goes on, the more risk to the population in total," said James "Jay" Tutchton, an attorney who spoke on behalf of WildEarth Guardians, one of the groups that sued Interior Secretary Ken Salazar after wolves lost their federal protections.

The hunts were allowed after Congress last spring took the unprecedented step of stripping endangered species protections from more than 1,300 wolves. That prompted a lawsuit from wildlife advocates who say Congress effectively reversed prior court rulings that favored protections for the animals.

Tuesday's hearing was before a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Pasadena, Calif.

The 9th Circuit agreed to hear the case on an expedited basis. But several groups involved in the lawsuit requested an injunction to stop the killing of wolves while the case is pending. It is not clear when a decision will be issued, though two previous requests for injunctions were denied.

Anna M. Seidman, with Safari Club International, said hunters are being careful and do not want to see wolves returned to the endangered species list. Seidman's group, along with the National Rifle Association and other sporting groups, have intervened in the case on the side of the federal government.

"Hunters are conservationists," she said. "The whole idea behind hunting is sustainable use to make sure they're here now and remain there for many generations."

Tuesday's hearing marks the latest in two decades of courtroom battles over wolves. Gray wolf advocates, including members of Shadowland Foundation, stood outside the courthouse carrying signs saying "We love wolves" and even brought two pet wolves.

Prior lawsuits resulted first in the animals' reintroduction to the region and then later kept them on the endangered list for a decade after the species had reached the government's original recovery goal.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is monitoring the hunts, but agency officials said they have no plans to intervene because wolves have recovered in the region and the states have promised to manage them responsibly.

Montana's quota aims to reduce wolf numbers by 25 percent compared with last year, to 425 animals. Bob Lane, chief legal counsel for the state, said wildlife officials "fully intend to manage them as a viable species."

Idaho officials have said only that they plan to maintain at least 150 wolves, out of a current population of at least 700 animals.

So far this year, wolves in Montana and Idaho have killed 152 cattle and calves, 108 sheep, 12 dogs and three horses, according to confirmed kill tallies provided by state and federal officials.

Even without hunting, wolves are shot regularly in the region in response to livestock attacks. At least 103 of the predators had been killed this year by government wildlife agents and ranchers.

Federal officials have pledged to step in to restore endangered species protections if wolf numbers drop below 100 animals in either state.

Attorneys for the federal government said that safety valve undercuts the plaintiffs' contention that the hunts could cause irreparable harm.

Ask The Plant Lady

Question:

Dear Plant Lady,
My Christmas cactus has gotten so big this year! What should I be doing now to assure it will bloom this Christmas? Signed,
Greenthumb Grannie

Answer:

Dear "Greenthumb Grannie,"
"Zygo" cactus is not a true cactus but a epiphytes native to Central and South America. They prefer to be pot bound to bloom well, need to be kept in a cool room around 50-55 degrees and where there is no artificial light, especially at night. They need 12-15 hours of darkness each day to set their buds. Also water sparingly and make sure they are not near an area where they receive cold or warm drafts. Consistency in light, temperature and water are the keys to gorgeous holiday blooms. Also think ahead now for Amaryllis bulbs (7-10 weeks to bloom) and Paperwhites (4-6 weeks to bloom),
