They Served Afar, Leaving Others at Home

About 100 people gathered in Twin Falls to honor both veterans and those who tend the fires back home.

BY DAVE WILKINS
For the Times-News

Paul Maxwell, a young non-commissioned Army officer, had been away from home awhile for training. When he finally returned, he failed to recognize the toddler running toward him at the Boise Airport. It was his son. He'd been just a baby when Maxwell left. "I heard my wife say from the crowd, 'That's your son,'" Maxwell recalled Friday during a Veterans Day speech in Twin Falls.

It's not just members of the armed services who have to sacrifice, said Maxwell, a sergeant first class with the Idaho Army National Guard 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team who recently returned from Iraq. Family members must shoulder more responsibility while their loved ones are away, said Maxwell, the guest speaker at the event organized by the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2136. "Mom has to assume the role of father, disciplinarian," he said. "The children have to grow up and be flexible. "Our families, whether they volunteered for this or not, also have to put their service out there for their country. They have to keep the home fires burning."

About 100 people turned out for the ceremony at Twin Falls City Park. Vietnam veteran Tom Kennedy of Hansen, a member of the honor guard, attends the ceremony every year. "It means a great deal," Kennedy said after the ceremony.

The Comforts of Home

For the growing number of America's terminally ill, home hospice provides a mix of care with the comfort and dignity of home life.

WENDELL • Lynn and Vesta Drake once said if they were sleeping in the same bed and talking to each other at the end of 32 years of marriage, then life couldn't be that bad.

Thirty years later, the two are still married and still make each other laugh, but Vesta now sleeps alone. Lynn hasn't gone very far — he stays in the living room where he sleeps on a hospital bed.

"It's OK though," Vesta said. "At the end of 30 years we still have stuff to talk about and that's better than most."

Lynn has been in hospice care for the past two years. Due to several concerning medical conditions, primarily fighting a disease that tears down his lungs, doctors referred him to home care and eventually hospice.

Lynn is one of the 1.56 million terminally ill Americans currently in hospice care, reports the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization. The number has steadily risen as baby boomers age and more seniors require an intensive level of care.

Lynn was referred to the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center home and hospice care program. The hospital's hospice care program covers a 50-mile radius from the Twin Falls medical center. With only a handful of full-time nurses and two social workers, the staff is often on call every hour of the week.

Like most hospice programs, Lynn is overseen by a small village of volunteers, a chaplain, nurses, and social workers that rotate visiting him throughout the week. The program provides emotional support, pain management, bereavement counseling and legal advice.

"It's important to maintain continuity of care in every step of hospice care," said Lynn's primary nurse, Travis Stickler. "I'm with them in the

Canyon Crash Kills 1; Police Still Investigating

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls police are still investigating why a truck veered into the Snake River Canyon on Friday, killing its lone female occupant.

Law enforcement, paramedics and other first responders were dispatched shortly after 1 p.m. to the scene on Canyon Springs Road, where investigators said a small pickup truck drove off the edge of the canyon rim.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's spokeswoman Lori Stewart confirmed that the body of an adult female was found in the smashed truck. The woman's name and the details of how she came to plunge off the edge weren't available Friday.

Below the rim, investigators combed through debris and brush around the smashed pickup truck. Above, tire tracks and small bits of debris indicated where the truck swerved up on a hill across from the canyon, then traveled through an empty lot just above the Canyon Springs grade — slipping between rebar fence posts, a concrete barrier and a house.

Workers expected to pull the damaged vehicle back up over the rim with a crane. Cleanup and investigation was

Schools Project Seeks Feedback

TIMES-NEWS

Idaho Parents and Teachers Together has launched the Great Idaho Schools Project to collect ideas about how schools can work better.

The grassroots group, which opposes Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's Students Come First public education reforms, is asking residents around the state to complete a survey on their website.

Three people who complete the survey at GreatIdahoschools.org by Dec. 5 will win supplies for the school of their choice.

Winners will be selected randomly and will receive a $100 gift card that schools can use however they want. Cards will be presented to schools the week of Dec. 12.

BSU to Host Discussion on Paul Rhoades Execution

BY ANNA WEBB
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Boise State University's departments of Criminal Justice and Biological Sciences will host a public roundtable discussion about the scheduled execution of Paul Rhoades by the state of Idaho.

The discussion features Greg Hampikian, Boise State professor and forensic DNA scientist, and Teresa Hampton, supervising attorney of the capital habeas unit at the Federal Defenders of Idaho and co-counsel on the Rhoades case. It will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Monday in Room 112 of Boise State's Education Building.

The talk centers around legal issues involving lethal injection, the clemency process and stays of execution, death row exonerations, international issues regarding the death penalty and the personal background on Rhoades.

Rhoades' execution is scheduled for Nov. 18. He is on Idaho's death row for the 1987 murders of Stacy Baldwin and Susan Michelbacher. Rhoades also received two life sentences for the second-degree murder of Idaho Falls convenience store clerk Nolan Haddon around the same time. His execution will be the first in Idaho since 1994 and only the second since 1957.

Four Officials Refuse Raises in Bonner Co.

BY KEITH KINNAIRD
Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • Bonner County commissioners and Assessor Jerry Clemons have made good on pledges not to accept 3 percent cost of living wage increases.

Nearly all county employees were given wage increases in the current budget, but commissioners Cornel Rasor and Mike Nielsen said during budget negotiations that they would not accept the raise. Clemons made a similar pledge during budget workshops.

Commissioner Lewis Rich advised the county's payroll clerk on Oct. 18 that he, too, would not accept the raise.

Clerk Marie Scott accepted the raise, as did Treasurer Cheryl Piehl and Prosecutor Louis Marshall.

Coroner Kitt Rose's salary was increased from $40,000 to $44,000 because of an increased work load.

Nielsen and Rasor agreed to boost Sheriff Daryl Wheeler's salary from $57,000 to $69,000 because some of his subordinates were being paid more than he was. Rich opposed the sheriff's pay hike.

Wolf Trapping Season Starts Next Week

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

CALDWELL • Idaho's first wolf trapping season since the predators lost federal protections this year starts Tuesday, and a trapping supply shop says it's already boosted revenue.

Jessi Heck, whose family owns Rocky Mountain Fireworks and Fur in a yellow cinderblock building just off U.S. Interstate 84 in Caldwell, says trapping-related sales are up 15 percent this year, as enthusiasts stock up on leg-hold traps and snares capable of capturing a 120-pound wolf.

Meanwhile, the addition of wolf urine to her vast stock of scents inside Rocky Mountain's "stink room" has brought other, more subtle changes. The dark liquid meant to lure these territorial canines smells so awful, Heck's employees wait until just before closing to transfer the stuff from gallon jugs into pint bottles that retail for $8.95.

"It's terrible," Heck said Friday. "We usually will do it right when we know we have to leave for the day."

This past week, wildlife advocates went to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Pasadena, Calif., aiming to stop gray wolf hunts that began in Idaho on Aug. 31 and Sept. 3 in Montana.

There's too much killing, they argue, putting the species' survival at risk.

But the modern-day mountain men and women who aim to set their trap lines in Idaho's wintry mountains from Nov. 15 to March 31 contend hunts are hardly putting a dent in a wolf population that many in the state believe is eating too many elk, moose and domestic livestock.

Idaho doesn't have a quota for hunting and trapping this season, but its Department of Fish and Game says it wants to reduce the roughly 1,000 wolves in the state far closer to the 150-wolf, 15-breeding-pair threshold where the federal government could consider restoring Endangered Species Act protects.

Since Aug. 31, Idaho hunters have shot 114 wolves.

"I don't think Fish and Game is going to be effective without trapping," said Dan Davis, a former government trapper and Idaho Trappers Association director. "After the hunt goes on for a while, the wolves are going to get smart and stay out of people's way."

In Montana, where no trapping season is planned, hunters have killed about 60 wolves, well shy of the 220 quota.

Only about a quarter of Idaho territory will be open to trapping, primarily in the northcentral and northern mountains near the Montana and Canadian borders. Davis' group is already lobbying the Idaho Fish and Game Commission to open more of the state in January.

Jon Rachael, Idaho's wolf manager, didn't immediately return a phone call Friday.

In Alaska, where wolves can also be legally harvested, trappers account for more than half of the roughly 1,500 wolves killed annually, according to Alaska Department of Fish and Game statistics.

But trapping wolves in Idaho will differ significantly from Alaskan and Canadian methods, experts say. In those colder climates, trappers can bury leg-hold traps in the snow, then lure wolves with scents like wolf urine or even skunk paste.

With Idaho's rain-and-snow cycle, however, such traps can freeze shut just hours after they're placed.

Davis, whose company manufactures trapping gear in St. Anthony, located west of Yellowstone National Park, recommends Idaho trappers use snares, setting a line of these steel loops along a known wolf trail leading to bait of beaver carcass.

"You can set snares up to kill the animals quite rapidly," Davis said. "In about five to seven minutes, they'll be dead."

Trappers aren't going to win popularity contests with animal-rights activists, concedes Pat Carney, Idaho Trappers Association president. That's one reason he lobbied for Idaho to require an eight-hour class for would-be wolf trappers, regardless of whether they have 40 years of trapping experience, like Carney does, or is a newcomer.

"Wolves are a hot topic and there's lot of controversy," Carney said. "We wanted to make sure anybody who was going to be handling wolves with traps or snares, that they were knowledgeable and doing it correctly."

State law requires trappers to check their lines every 72 hours, to avoid prolonging the suffering of injured animals. Snares must break away, so elk or moose caught unintentionally can escape. There's no live bait allowed, and trappers also must set snares and leg holds far enough from official roads and trails, to keep dogs or hunters from stumbling in.

But neither Davis nor Carney expects a huge 2011-2012 harvest. Wolves travel in remote areas, the snows are likely to be deep and they're among the smartest animals in the backcountry. Even when trappers think they've found a sure-fire wolf trail, they may come up empty handed.

"Those wolves make big loops," Carney said. "They may come back every two weeks, every thirty days or in some places, one time in the fall. They may never come back."

There is within the Sufi tradition the idea that everything is but a reflection of the divine. The tradition teaches that the more one polishes his or her heart, the more one can see just how vast and interconnected the ocean of love we call reality really is (from Jesus to Rumi).”

Tidmarsh will share portions of his journey and explain why he believes that radical lovemaking is essential not only for one’s spiritual health but for the well being of the world as well.

Crowley’s Book Store Hosts Author, Book Signing

Crowley’s, the quad bookstore in the Magic Valley Mall, will hold a book signing with James M. Conis from 1 to 4 p.m. Nov. 19.

Conis is the author of “The Latter Rain: Using the Book of Isaiah as the Key to Unlock Bible Prophecies That are Relevant Today.”

“The Latter Rain” is a systematic presentation of a subject that isn’t discussed in Latter-day Saint circles. Conis believes members of the church should have a comprehensive understanding of the Latter Rain. This book will go a long way in supplying this understanding and in giving the saints a systematic and compelling look at God’s continuing work in our world.

Anyone interested is invited to come visit with Conis and learn how an understanding of Isaiah’s framework of symbolism can help unlock the meaning of many other books of the Bible as well.

Otters Honor Recipients of 2011 'Brightest Star' Awards

IDAHO STATESMAN

More than 100 outstanding volunteers from throughout the state were honored Thursday by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and first lady Lori Otter at the 10th annual Governor's Brightest Star awards ceremony at Boise State University.

Two of those announced as being at the top of the pack hail from south-central Idaho.

The 106 volunteers were nominated for their contributions in six categories — corporation, small business, organization, school, student and individual. All were nominated by fellow Idahoans for their extraordinary volunteer efforts.

"Volunteers are ever more important and valued as part of the foundation of recovery in our state and the nation," Otter said. "The first lady and I are honored to be here recognizing so many selfless Idahoans."

The governor and first lady announced the Governor's Choice Award — Monsanto of Soda Springs — and the First Lady's Choice — Mountain View Hospital of Idaho Falls — as most outstanding volunteers overall.

All nominees were recognized as stars in their communities, and one Brightest Star Volunteer of the Year award was chosen in each category. This year's recognized volunteer leaders were:

- corporation: Glanbia Foods, Richfield.
- student: Kelly Collins, Hailey.
- small business: Idaho Sewing for Sports, Grangeville.
- organization: Meals on Wheels Program, Elks Rehab System, Boise.
- school: Capital High School, Boise.
- individual: Glenn Vaughn, Post Falls.

Honorable mentions were also chosen from each category.

Visit serveidaho.gov for a list of recognized volunteers, as well as descriptions of their contributions.

IDAHO EXPORT GROWTH ON RECORD PACE FOR 2011

BOISE (AP) • Overseas demand for Idaho dairy products and silver helped drive export growth to 16.6 percent from July to September, keeping the state on pace for record out-of-country sales for 2011.

Idaho's third-quarter export growth trailed the national rate of 17.7 percent, compared to the year-ago period.

Department of Commerce director Jeff Sayer says international markets continued to be a bright spot for Idaho's economy.

Dairy exports rose by 70 percent to $194 million as fast-growing Asia Pacific countries had an appetite for whey protein and powdered milk.

OBITUARIES

Nathaniel A. Fritz

Nov. 7, 2011-Nov. 7, 2011

Nathaniel Andrew Fritz of Buhl couldn't wait to be held in his mommy's arms in four more months, but God asked him to come to heaven early Monday, Nov. 7, 2011.

Although we never got the chance to get to know him, we did get to hold him and blanket him with all our love. He brought such great joy to us, especially his mommy, Breanne Steward Fritz. She would constantly talk to him to make sure he knew what was going on while he rested in her womb. In turn, Nathaniel made sure mommy knew if he didn't like what she was eating or if he didn't want one of the cats sitting on her stomach. For a little guy, he had a good kick and would let mommy know he was good at it.

Nathaniel is survived by his mommy, Breanne Steward Fritz of Buhl; his grandparents, Marsha and Andy Fritz of Buhl and Bill Steward of Twin Falls; his aunt, Chelsy Steward; and his uncle, Justin Steward, who looked forward to being a part of his life; his great-grandparents, Rose (Rodney) Lattin of Jerome, John Sr. (Wanda) Berks of Quartzsite, Ariz., Donna Steward of Twin Falls, and Willard and Vicky Fritz of Buhl; and great-great-grandmother, Geraldine Hadley of Filer. He is also survived by his great-aunts/uncles and cousins.

Our family appreciates the outstanding love and support from the many people who have held us together during this difficult time.

A funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Nov. 14, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl. No internment will follow the service. A lunch will be provided at Church of Christ on Broadway in Buhl after the service.

Ramona Silva

Dec. 18, 1920-Nov. 9, 2011

Ramona Silva passed away Wednesday, Nov. 9, 2011.

She was born Dec. 18, 1920, in Fall City, Texas, to Severo and Concepcion Silva.

She is survived by three sisters, Trinidad Flores, Fidencia Castro and Theodora (Lola) Perez, all of Texas. She is also survived by her six children, Elvira (Alfredo) Medrano of Lubbock, Texas, and Elena DeLeon, Fernando Rodriguez Sr. (Balvina), Herminia Gonzalez (Cecilio), Victoriano Rodriguez Jr. (Chris) and Cruz Herrera, all of Twin Falls. She is also survived by 29 grandchildren, 54 great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren. She is preceded in death by her parents; two brothers, Jose Maria and Abelino Silva; one sister, Maria Serna; and three grandchildren, Elsa Rodriguez, Rudy Medrano and Rogelio Rodriguez.

Ramona spent her youth in Texas and, in 1939, married Victoriano Rodriguez. Later, they divorced. Ramona spent most of her life working hard in the fields, picking cotton, fruit, hoeing beets, potatoes and various types of vegetables in different parts of the United States. Ramona settled in Twin Falls in 1961. She worked at Idaho Frozen Foods for several years, from where she ultimately retired. She loved collecting antiques and knick-knacks and going to yard sales. She enjoyed going to Jackpot to try her luck on the slot machines. She also loved attending community bingo events. She loved spending time with her family, especially the visits from her relatives from Texas.

Ramona passed away peacefully surrounded by her children at the Twin Falls Care Center. She was a member of St. Edward's Catholic Church. Funeral arrangements will be conducted by Reynolds Funeral Chapel. The family would like to express their gratitude to St. Luke's Magic Valley and Twin Falls Care Center staff for the care and thoughtful attention provided to Ramona throughout her illness.

A rosary prayer service will take place at 7 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 13, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls. The funeral Mass will take place at 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 14, at St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church in Twin Falls, with Father Mike St. Marie as celebrant. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park. Friends may call from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Sunday at Reynolds Funeral Chapel.

Francis Evelyn Abbott Zollinger

Nov. 12, 1924-Nov. 10, 2011

Francis Evelyn Abbott Zollinger, beloved daughter, wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, passed away at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center on Thursday, Nov. 10, 2011, just two days before her 87th birthday.

Francis was born right after midnight on Nov. 12, 1924, at her Uncle Gray's house in Houston, Texas. She was the third of three children of Everett William and Margaret Sanderson Abbott. Francis grew up in Houston, Texas, graduating from Sam Houston High School when she was only 16 years old. When she was 19, Francis attended a soldiers' dance in Houston and there met her future husband, Bud David Zollinger. They were married at Bud's parents' home in Wendell, Idaho, on March 31, 1944, and were sealed for time and eternity in the Salt Lake Temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Aug. 20, 1952.

After World War II ended and Bud returned from Guam, he and Francis settled in Wendell, Idaho, where two children, Susan and Robert, were born. Francis joined The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in December of 1948 and became a very active member. She held many positions in Primary, Young Women's and Relief Society during the years. She loved serving and devoted many, many hours to her church callings. She was also active in community service, serving as the PTA president several times.

Francis and Bud lived in Wendell until 1960 and then moved to Rupert, Idaho. They lived there for 21 years, moved to Oregon for a few years, and then moved back to Twin Falls, where they have lived for 28 years. Francis was a wonderful, loving mother and grandmother. She always had time to play with her grandchildren and spent many hours making things for them. Her grandchildren always knew that Grandma loved them and had time for them.

Francis is preceded in death by her parents; her brother, Everett; and sister, Audrey. She is survived by her husband, Bud Zollinger of Twin Falls; her daughter, Susan Beddes (Jerry) of West Point, Utah, and her son, Robert (Kathy) Zollinger of Roseburg, Ore. She also leaves behind 10 grandchildren, Shanee, Matthew, Taun, Aaron, Jeri Dawn, Meggin, Bobbi, Amy, Adam and Courtney; and 37 great-grandchildren.

The family would like to express appreciation to the staff of Bridgeview, Twin Falls Care Center, Dr. Enders, and tender care given to Francis and her family at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

The funeral for Francis will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, at the Twin Falls LDS 19th Ward Chapel, 680 Hankins Road N., with Bishop Rich Bevan conducting. Burial will follow at the Wendell Cemetery. There will be a viewing for family and friends one hour before the funeral at the ward building. Services are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

CHEERS AND JEERS

JEERS to Idaho’s Congressional delegation for another round of subtle fear mongering.

This time, it was to motivate Idahoans to weigh in on a potential change in the usage plan of Lake Walcott and the Minidoka National Wildlife Refuge.

We agree with Sens. Mike Crapo, Jim Risch and Rep. Mike Simpson on the theme. It’s very important that Idahoans comment on the wilderness in our own back yard — a federal agency’s desk is often a long way from the area they’re making regulations for.

But the press release carries a tone that implies danger. “Idahoans should know a new plan is being crafted,” they say in unison. The release also goes on to dangle the statement that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service needs to “understand how important those activities are to ... small businesses.”

True statements? Yes. Like our delegation, we believe that a mixed-use plan is the best bet for the area.

But we’d appreciate a release that didn’t again offer up small businesses as a target the federal government would take down without our intervention. We should take part in the process, but not instantly acquiesce to a release that implies, should Idahoans not act, the feds in Washington would drastically restrict our use of the area.

CHEERS to Magic Valley Mall for marking 25 years in the Magic Valley.

As the only real mall between Boise and Pocatello, Magic Valley Mall is running strong — with the addition of the new theater complex next year, its future as a retail hub for the region is bright.

When looking at retail in Twin Falls, we’re often quick to point out the vacancies in the downtown area, but we’re less effusive with our praise of a nearly full retail center.

JEERS to the Occupy Twin Falls protesters for not accurately capturing the movement’s spirit.

We understand that a protest in Twin Falls can’t carry the same traffic-snarling momentum as its counterpart movements in New York, Seattle or anywhere in between. But it’s not the size of the movement that counts — it’s their motivation and understanding.

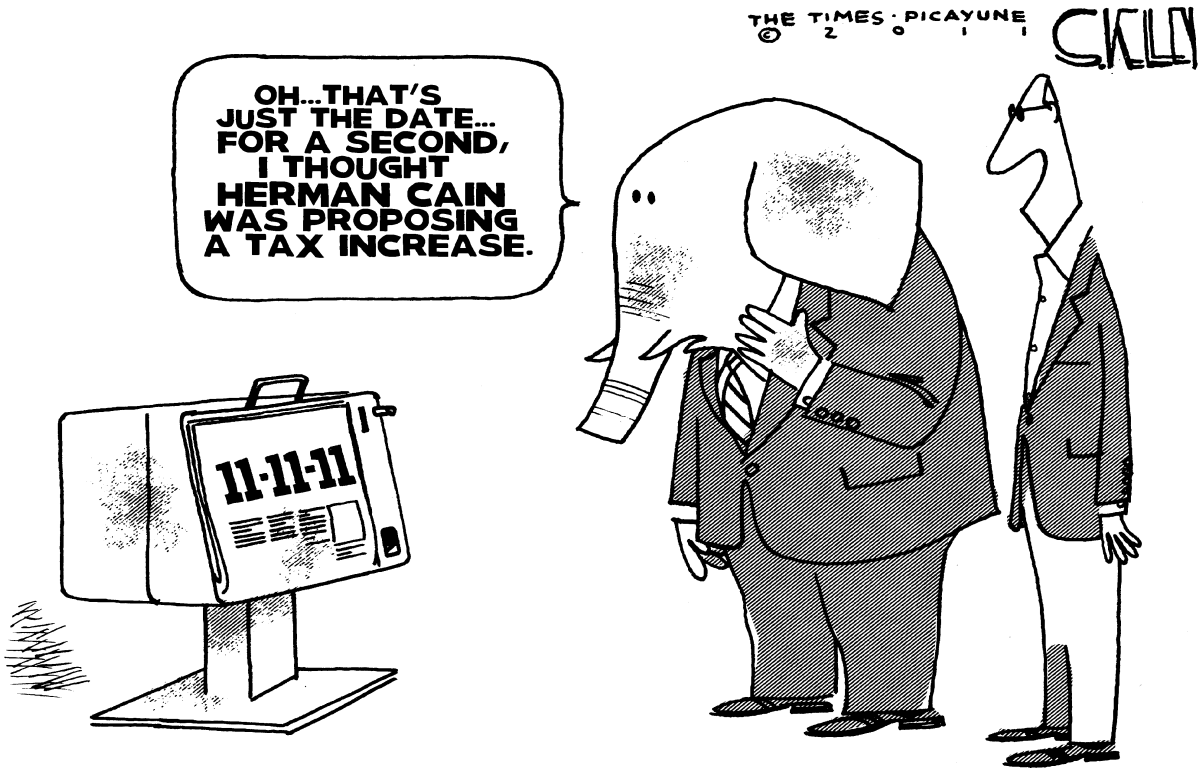

In the case of the Occupy Twin Falls crowd, they started their protest in front of a credit union. A tangent to the Occupy movement is that people should take their money out of big banks, and move them to ... wait for it ... credit unions.

The march ended at a similar location of dubious importance to the greater movement: a bar.

We’re not opposed to a protest — but if you’re going to ride on the coat tails of a national movement, keep in mind what you’re protesting for.

“Hey, listen. You try concentrating with Mitt Romney smiling at you. That is one handsome dude.”

Frantz Family Offers Thanks

It is with sincere gratitude that the family of Dr. Arthur W. Frantz wishes to thank those who honored a man whose life was well lived. First and foremost to Trent Stimpson and his staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, who made a difficult situation endurable; to all who contributed photos and Bethani, who compiled a video presentation of those photos as a tribute to her grandfather; Twin Falls Care Center for its attention to detail and allowing a man to keep his dignity. The family would also like to thank Pastors Dale Metzger and Mark Browne for their kind words, as well as the members of the Rock Creek Community Church for their hospitality.

Special thanks to Burt Huish and Donna Cox for accomplishing the “Impossible Dream.” The family knows that it was a difficult task for you to do this, due to your relationship with dad, but we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. We will never forget your tears after the tribute and asking, “Was that OK?” Burt and Donna, you were wonderful and we thank you.

A very special thanks goes to the Magic Valley Honor Guard and the Idaho National Guard. Gentlemen, you symbolized Dad’s beliefs in this country and his community. Idaho Professor Only Witness to All Three Atomic Bombs

BY SANDRA L. LEE
The Lewiston Tribune

MOSCOW • Not all who serve their countries in wartime wear uniforms or carry guns.

Lawrence H. Johnston carried a slide rule.

Seven decades ago, most people had never heard of computers, including Johnston, now a retired University of Idaho physics professor. Electronics was essentially a new word.

And the Atomic Age had not yet dawned.

But when it did, Johnston, now 93, was in the front row.

He was on the observation airplane that watched Trinity, the code name for the first atomic bomb test, July 16, 1945, in New Mexico. And he was on the B-29 dubbed Great Artiste when Little Boy was dropped on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945, and three days later when Fat Man devastated Nagasaki and finally brought World War II to an end.

It's pretty much accepted, Johnston said during a recent conversation at his Moscow home, that he is the only person to have seen all three bombings. He was there because he developed the detonator that made them work, the result of two weeks of isolated, intense work in a desert location where, if he failed, he wouldn't blow up anyone else.

But he didn't fail, the bombs went off and more than 200,000 people died. And many more lived.

The invasion was expected to create 1 million casualties. A warehouse on Tinian Island had been prepared with 300,000 coffins.

That risk, 66 years ago, was less important than the result, Johnston says as he looks again into the face of death, although this time after a long life filled with adventure and science and love. The goal was simple: to end a devastating war that was the focus of virtually every person, every part of society at that time.

Morality wasn't an issue, Johnston says.

"Not 'til later when everyone criticized us," adds his wife of 69 years, Millie Johnston.

Scientists knew as they worked that the force of the bomb would be enormous, perhaps beyond anything they could envision. But they also had a purpose. "It made the invasion of Japan unnecessary," Larry Johnston says. "That would have been a very bloody invasion."

At Trinity, they watched the blast from 50 miles away instead of overhead, a last-minute restriction by some suddenly cautious people, he says. He remembers still the brilliant flash, a huge cloud, but no noise and no physical impact, unlike three weeks later over Japan. In less than a minute, the infamous mushroom cloud that would become the symbol of the Atomic Age ballooned upward, passing them as they circled around it.

"At Hiroshima and Nagasaki we were a lot closer and we did feel something of an impact. It felt like somebody hit the side of the airplane with a footlong 2-by-4. Whack!"

Prior to the explosions, there was no discussion of protection from radiation exposure or health risks, he says. "I think there's too much concern about it now. The reason is whoever designed the human body built cells with wonderful repair mechanisms."

Johnston's journey to Moscow began in China in 1918, where he was born to missionary parents. He could have been a missionary instead of a physicist, Johnston says. He believes God steered him the direction he was intended to go.

He was 22 in 1940, with just a bachelor's degree in physics from the University of California at Berkeley. But the war effort was gathering in everyone, and one of his professors was Luis Alvarez, winner of the 1968 Nobel Prize in physics, "really a genius and the smartest man I have ever met."

Life changed for everyone the day the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, but that accelerated for Johnston when J. Robert Oppenheimer, who was in charge of the Manhattan Project that started in 1939, summoned Alvarez to help with a detonation problem. Alvarez asked Johnston to go along. In the ensuing whirlwind of activities, history and his life changed.

They went first to Boston, where he and Alvarez developed the Ground Control Approach Radar System that allowed a plane to land with zero visibility. Alvarez was an enthusiastic amateur pilot, "so this whole laboratory at MIT (Massachusetts Institute of Technology) was built on the basis of suddenly having an electronic unit called a magnetron. And the interesting fact is that microwave ovens are now powered by magnetrons."

But seven decades ago, "it was a secret thing the British let us have and that was how it was invented."

No one then was thinking about how it might be used down the road, he said. "I was just thinking, can we contribute something to this war?"

His bosses saw something else, however — Johnston was an unhappy man. Alvarez sent him back to California to see Millie. "He ordered me, 'bring her back with you,'" Johnston says. They were married in February 1942, then hurried back to Boston where his work waited.

From there, Alvarez and the Johnstons packed up and went to New Mexico to the government town of Los Alamos.

Increasingly as he is asked to speak about those years, Johnston says, people turn to Millie and ask her what it was like then as the world changed around them.

When the war ended, they headed east to visit family. Johnston found himself in demand as a speaker and for newspaper interviews. That long road trip also led him to appreciate modern marvels like tires without inner tubes that still seal well enough to hold air.

They then returned to Stanford where Wolfgang K.H. Panofsky, who had also worked on the Manhattan Project, asked Johnston to take charge of instrumentation on a new mega electron accelerator at the Stanford Linear Accelerator. It was to be 2 miles long with instrumentation every 20 feet.

"But I discovered that Panofsky was a very ambitious guy and he had promised the Atomic Energy Commission he would build the accelerator on time and on budget, which was unheard of for big projects like this."

He finished that project and began working on things that interested him, like a hydrogen cyanide laser that produced radiation in the far infrared of the spectrum, "way below the visible. ... All sorts of new physics could be done with this laser."

He still holds numerous patents, but he found teaching was fun.

It was more than that, Millie says. "He is a born teacher. He taught our kids so much." When the oldest of their four children was a freshman at Berkeley, she was tutoring her boyfriend in physics just from what she learned listening to her father, "because he couldn't help explaining things to everybody."

After retiring in 1988, "I decided to get into more interesting things so I went to the head of the biology department and said can you teach me something about evolution. He said, I don't know very much about evolution. Can you imagine that from the head of the biology department?"

So he called a friend in the field, an agnostic, and asked her how she thought life got started on Earth. "She said, nobody knows, but it's almost a miracle." That makes him laugh again.

What started as a campus seminar has dwindled to a weekly gathering at his home where old friends debate the greatest mystery of mankind — how the universe began.

"I think some creative personality, very powerful, went ahead and did it," he says of his own belief.

He expects to know with certainty in the not too distant future. He has lung cancer and he's short of breath at times, but not so much that the scientist in him is quenched.

He has a plan for when death does come. "Well, I hope I get to see Jesus and I have a bunch of questions I want to ask him," Johnston says.

Sodium Fire Reported at Idaho National Lab Site

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An employee believed to have been burned in a fire caused by a sodium reaction at the Idaho National Laboratory has been released from a hospital, with physicians reporting they found no evidence the cleanup worker was injured.

The U.S. Department of Energy says 10 others were evaluated on scene Friday and released by medical staff. Officials couldn't immediately comment on the size of the fire, but suggested it may have been caused by a sodium reaction.

Laboratory fire crews responded to the Materials and Fuel Complex, where officials say there's no more evidence of a continued reaction or fire. Firefighters and operations personnel have re-entered the building.

The incident comes several days after 16 cleanup workers were exposed to radiation when a box containing plutonium powder was opened.

N. Idaho Veteran, Historian Celebrate Collaboration

BY CAMERON
RASMUSSEN

Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • Don Zahn and Mark Bando share quite a few similarities, not least of which is their birthday.

Both born on Oct. 15, Zahn and Bando spent their 91st and 62nd birthday together reminiscing over their 20-year correspondence. Bando, a World War II historian, first contacted Zahn in the early '90s to ask about his experiences in the 101st Airborne. Since then, the two have developed a warm friendship, aptly symbolized by Zahn's birthday gift of a bathtub stopper to Bando.

Although the stopper appears to be any ordinary plug, its simplicity is deceiving. In fact, Zahn claimed the stopper as a souvenir from the home of its previous owner — Adolf Hitler.

"I imagined Hitler hanging his (backside) over that bathtub plug and figured I'd better take it," Zahn said. "I'm a bit of a collector, so I just reached in and grabbed it.”

In May 1945, around the same time the Soviets were occupying Berlin, Zahn oversaw a platoon guarding the Berghof, a Bavarian mansion located near the town of Berchtesgaden. Of all the residences Hitler occupied during World War II, he spent the most time at the Berghof. Zahn, a first lieutenant by the end of the war, grabbed the plug as a memento from the man responsible for his wartime experiences in the first place.

Those experiences began early morning June 6, 1944, with the D-Day parachute landings in Normandy and carried Zahn all the way to Hitler's own home. Through it all, he lost friends, saved lives, brushed against death and ultimately earned national recognition for his service.

Based on that history, the veteran has been an invaluable source of information for Bando in his documentation of training, combat and recreational life of soldiers in the 101st Airborne.

"At one point, I brought two or three videotapes to record our conversation, and he said, 'Oh, I can't talk that much,'" Bando said. "He was still talking by the time all the tapes were filled."

And a good thing, too — of the seven books Bando has written, six are about the 101st Airborne. Zahn's experiences, along with interviews from 1,022 other veterans of the 101st, have allowed Bando to compile the trials and tribulations of the Screaming Eagles into a comprehensive set of histories.

However, Zahn wasn't always so talkative. Like many other World War II veterans, he wasn't initially interested in reliving the sadness and horrors associated with his wartime memories. Eventually, Bando won him over with his commitment to accuracy and thorough research.

"I'll talk to this guy because he gets it right," Zahn said.

Zahn's interviews were one element that helped Bando make sense of the chaotic D-Day jumps on June 6, 1944. Bad weather and German resistance scattered the paratroopers, who were forced to improvise and form impromptu military units to accomplish objectives.

Along with a small group of paratroopers from Co. H of the 506th regiment, 101st Airborne, Zahn played an important role in one of the mission goals: the capture of two small bridges over the Douve River. He was the first to volunteer as a scout and the first to cross the bridge, but George Montillo, a sergeant from Zahn's company, would be the first to earn credit for the operation. The military awarded Montillo its second highest valor award: the Distinguished Service Cross.

Zahn finally received a Distinguished Service Cross of his own after tireless advocacy by his company commander Cpt. Robert Harwick. He received the honor at Berchtesgaden on May 9, 1945, the same week he took Hitler's bathtub plug.

However, that isn't Zahn's proudest wartime moment.

Zahn said that before boarding the planes to jump on D-day, paratroopers received verbal orders to take no prisoners for three days after the invasion. Within that timeframe, skirmishes along the Douve River and surrenders after the fighting yielded 25 disarmed German soldiers. Zahn and his comrades discussed the best course of action. However, Charles Shettle, a captain from 3rd Battalion S-3, had the final word as the ranking officer, according to Bando.

"Well, we have orders not to keep any prisoners," he told the men. "Zahn, take these guys and get rid of them."

The thought of killing prisoners immediately repulsed Zahn. After some quick thinking, he spotted his friend Whitey Hoffman, a soldier fluent in German, and told Shettle they could extract valuable intelligence from the soldiers. Zahn's idea swayed Shettle.

State Lawmaker Appointed Top Lobbyist by UI

BOISE (AP) • The University of Idaho has appointed a state lawmaker to become the school's chief lobbyist.

Republican Sen. Joe Stegner of Lewiston was among three finalists for the job. He beat out the governor's budget chief and the director of the Idaho Grain Producers to become the university's special assistant to the president for state government relations.

University President Duane Nellis announced the appointment on Friday.

Stegner will start his new job on Dec. 1 earning a yearly salary of $125,000.

He is replacing Marty Peterson, who retired this year after two decades in the lobbyist position. Stegner is a graduate of the Moscow-based university and completing his seventh term in the Idaho Senate.

Obama Honors Vets at Arlington Ceremony

President notes the coming transition from a nation fighting multiple wars in the aftermath of Sept. 11 to one where reviving the economy is the overriding focus.

BY MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. • Heralding the end of one war and the drawdown of another, President Barack Obama observed Veterans Day on Friday by urging Americans to hire the thousands of servicemen and women coming home from Iraq and Afghanistan.

In remarks at Arlington National Cemetery, he called it “a time when America needs all hands on deck.”

“The tide of war is receding,” Obama said. “My fellow Americans, our troops are coming home.”

He spoke on a chilly autumn morning to an audience of veterans and dignitaries in the cemetery’s amphitheater shortly after placing a floral wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns.

Following the ceremony, Obama left the White House for a flight to San Diego to join in a holiday basketball game aboard an aircraft carrier — the start of a nine-day trip that includes an Asia-Pacific summit in Hawaii and stops in Australia and Indonesia.

Obama used his Arlington speech to mark the coming transition from a nation fighting multiple wars in the aftermath of Sept. 11 to one where reviving a struggling economy is the overriding focus.

Last month, Obama announced plans to withdraw the last U.S. troops from Iraq. Between that and Obama’s commencement of a drawdown in Afghanistan, he said, for many military families, “this holiday season will be a season of homecomings.”

And he urged Americans to greet the returning vets with jobs and offers of help. “Let us welcome them home as what they are: an integral, essential part of our American family,” Obama said.

Obama spoke a day after the Senate passed his proposal to give companies tax credits for hiring jobless veterans. “Our economy needs their talents and specialized skills,” he said.

Earlier, with the aid of an honor guard, Obama placed the wreath on a pedestal in front of the marble tomb, then stood with a hand over his heart as a bugler played “Taps.” A bell tolled and flags fluttered.

First lady Michelle Obama, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki and other dignitaries watched from the side.

Dover Air Force Base mortuary employee Bill Zwicharowski reacts during an interview Friday about his and two other employees’ whistleblower complaints that led to a Pentagon investigation of the nation’s largest military mortuary in Wyoming, Del.

Whistle-blowers Shocked by Foul-ups at Dover Mortuary

This week, the Air Force said it had punished three top officials at the mortuary for ‘gross mismanagement.’

BY RANDALL CHASE
Associated Press

WYOMING, Del. • The body of the Marine lay on a gurney at the Dover Air Force Base mortuary, an arm bone jutting out from the torso.

Embalming technician James Parsons wondered how he would be able to get the stiffened arm back into position so that a uniform could be put on the corpse for a viewing. Parsons and a co-worker asked their supervisor, Quinton “Randy” Keel, what to do, and he told them to take the arm off, then left, according to Parsons.

“I’m thinking, ‘This is just wrong. We shouldn’t be doing this,’” Parsons recalled, contending that consent should have been obtained from the Marine’s family first.

Parsons refused to cut off the arm and instead stood and watched as his co-worker — a new employee still on probation — grabbed the saw and removed the limb, which was then placed alongside the Marine’s leg inside an undergarment that would be covered by his uniform.

A phone message left at a listing for Keel in Felton, Del., was not immediately returned Friday night.

After stewing for months about what happened, Parsons bypassed the military chain of command and reported the episode. He was one of three co-workers to complain about what they saw as callous or sloppy handling of remains at the main military mortuary for America’s war dead.

This week, the Air Force said it had punished three top officials at the Dover mortuary for “gross mismanagement,” including two instances in which

How the child sex abuse scandal has sundered Penn State’s carefully constructed sense of self.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • If only it were possible to block out the world’s harshest realities — the way the people of Happy Valley have done for decades now — this week’s crystalline skies might have set the scene for one more perfect chapter in local lore.

A glorious sun bathed Mount Nittany’s fading foliage in a rusty glow. Hundreds of Penn State students gathered once again in the protective shadows of Beaver Stadium, pitching 81 tents in the instant colony called Paternoville. Another Big Game lay just ahead.

But when Ed Temple, class of ‘70, put down the convertible top of his meticulously restored 1957 Chevro-

In the back seat of a car usually reserved for alumni parades, Temple propped up a life-sized cardboard cutout of Joe Paterno, benevolent ruler of this valley for nearly half a century — but now the ex-football coach, fired this week in the midst of a spiraling scandal centered on allegations of child sex abuse by one of his former assistants. In the front seat, Temple’s

Italy Moves Toward Economic, Political Change

A set of austerity measures clears the Italian Senate by a vote of 156-12, and in a sign of confidence from investors, Italy’s borrowing costs fall sharply.

BY COLLEEN BARRY
and NICOLE WINFIELD

ROME • Under pressure to control its dangerous debt, Italy sped a package of reforms toward approval Friday and prepared to hand its dysfunctional government over to a technocrat who Europe hopes can save the country from going broke. Financial markets around the world rallied in relief.

In its own step toward stability, Greece, which preceded Italy as the epicenter of the European debt crisis, installed a new prime minister. The Dow Jones industrial average in New York rose 2 percent, and markets in Britain, France and Germany posted similar gains.

A set of austerity measures cleared the Italian Senate by a vote of 156-12. The lower chamber of Parliament will vote today, and Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi has said he will step down once the reforms are passed.

In a sign of confidence from investors, Italy’s borrowing costs fell sharply. The yield on benchmark Italian 10-year bonds fell to 6.48 percent, safely below the crisis level of 7 percent reached earlier this week.

Greece, Ireland and Portugal all required international bailouts after their own borrowing rates passed 7 percent. The Italian economy would not be so easy to save. It totals $2 trillion, twice as much as the other three countries combined.

An Italian default could tear apart the coalition of 17 countries that use the euro as a common currency and deal a strong blow to the economies of Europe and the United States, both trying to avoid recessions.

The Senate chamber resounded with

MEXICO'S NO. 2 OFFICIAL DIES IN COPTER CRASH

Blake Mora, 45, was the second interior minister, the No. 2 post in the government, to die in an air crash during Calderon's administration. The crash that killed Blake Mora and seven others may have had to do with bad weather.

Penn State

With an edge heard in the voices of many Penn Staters, Temple — raised in this town that has long celebrated its seclusion — recalled life in the House that Joe Built. At first, the phrase was just a reference to the stadium, which packs in 107,000 on autumn Saturdays to revel in the words of the Alma Mater: "May no act of ours bring shame, to one heart that loves thy name."

But Temple went on to describe the tree-lined brick campus and the Valley itself as an oasis "sort of like Disneyland," one that has long drawn on a seemingly bottomless well of virtue and trust to sustain a family far bigger than any ordinary household could ever contain.

Now, trying to explain how it feels to be a part of that family, Temple, who is 65, reached for a parable of his own experience. Years ago, he said, his father, a local merchant and real estate developer, was sent to federal prison for four years after being convicted of tax evasion and mail fraud. Decades later, in a town where many people stay forever, Temple is certain some still cringe when he gives his name. Because of one man's deeds, he says, the family's identity is forever tarnished.

"That taints you for the rest of your life," Temple said, turning back to the scandal that has sundered Penn State's carefully constructed sense of self.

"We all have to live with that now."

A Singular Storybook Place

The American landscape is sprinkled with picturesque college towns. And many are places where football reigns, victory machines whose glories stir the soul and rake in dollars.

For years, though, Penn State has cast itself as a singular storybook place. Like other schools, it thrived on a culture of football. But to bleed blue and white, Penn Staters promised themselves, was about much more than a game.

It meant putting individual identity aside for the greater glory, an ethic symbolized by the jerseys players wear that, unlike those of many teams, bear no name besides that of the school. It was about a unique bond, founded on knowing that your fellow Nittany Lions were your family and the coach in the Coke-bottle glasses and rolled up pants known affectionately as "JoePa," your trusted patriarch. It was about doing things the right way.

"Success with honor," they called it. It was a slogan, sure, but one to be believed.

That can all seem like so much hazy nostalgia now, following former Paterno assistant Jerry Sandusky's arrest on charges of molesting eight boys and allegations that Paterno, Penn State President Graham Spanier and other officials were told about one such incident in 2002, yet never went to the police.

But understanding the unique role that Penn State and its hometown assigned themselves in American collegiate life helps make sense of, if not the tragedy, then at least the tears and the outrage it has unleashed.

When Paterno became head coach in 1966 after 16 years as an assistant, he announced a "Grand Experiment" — a self-appointed mission for the program and the university to prove that athletic success and academic achievement could go hand-in-hand.

Some outsiders found it self-righteous. But over the years, the Nittany Lions garnered two national championships and numerous bowl victories, all while fielding squads that consistently posted among the highest graduation rates of any top-ranked program.

That identity was cemented when the 1986 squad triumphed over a No. 1 University of Miami team for the national championship. The Miami squad spent the days before the game dressed in battle fatigues, earning them a reputation as rogues. Penn State's players arrived in suits and ties, led by a coach dubbed St. Joe.

"It was the Christians versus the infidels," said Ron Smith, a retired Penn State professor of sports history. "It's not hard to have a culture of doing right. But to be righteous about it, when something goes wrong ..."

The Penn State way made admirers of many who started out as critics.

But nobody bought into the legend like those who lived it. Paterno's program generated loyalty and money that were instrumental in turning a school once focused on agriculture into one of the nation's biggest and most respected research universities and a highly sought destination. Penn State's alumni association, with more than 165,000 members, is the largest in the world. When the Lion Ambassadors lead tours through campus, the call-and-response cheers that still erupt spontaneously across the lawns demand the attention of any visitor.

"WE ARE..." one student will shout. The response is forceful, immediate and heartfelt — and often draws a chorus of voices from hundreds of feet away: "PENN STATE!!"

Penn State's geography proved the ideal hothouse for nurturing its self-identity. Until new highways were paved in recent years, State College remained difficult to reach, hours removed from either Pittsburgh or Philadelphia and tucked between folds in the brooding Appalachian ridges. Getting to Penn State is "a camping trip," Indiana University's irascible basketball coach Bob Knight once said. "There is nothing for about 100 miles."

But people here have long seen that remoteness as a virtue.

"Happy Valley," reads a T-shirt for sale in one of the memorabilia shops that line College Avenue. "Livin' the Dream Since 1855. It Doesn't Get any Better!"

Visiting campus this week, 1974 graduate Dwight Bowie reminisced about the weekly "Gentle Thursday" gatherings of his youth, when students flocked to the lawn in front of Old Main's clock tower for "a little bit of smoking, a little bit of drinking and much music."

What amazes Bowie, now that he's older and aware of the events then taking place at other campuses around the country, is that he recalls virtually no anti-Vietnam protests at Penn State.

"It was like some things didn't seem to touch here," said Bowie, now an insurance executive who lives in Keene, N.H.

But for those who live in town — the children of university employees, the graduates who never leave, the many alumni who return to retire here — the Penn State way is much more than gauzy memories. In this town, where revered leaders were also friends and colleagues and neighbors, this week's revelations are a betrayal.

Sitting on the steps of Old Main Wednesday holding up a yellow legal pad with the word "HEAL," written in 4-inch high letters, doctoral student Peter Buckland recalled his childhood as the son of an English professor and an academic adviser.

Buckland spoke of afternoons playing with friends in Sunset Park, where they'd frequently see Paterno — whose name and number are still in the local phone directory — on solitary strolls. Mike McQueary, the assistant coach who went to Paterno in 2002 after seeing Sandusky in the locker room showers allegedly molesting a 10-year-old boy, was a year ahead of Buckland at State College Area High School. When Buckland's father died last August, 3 of every 4 mourners were people he knew from Penn State.

"You have this identity with this thing and it's bigger than you," said Buckland, who is 35, married to a fellow Penn State graduate and the father of a 4-year-old. The thought of child abuse being allowed to continue on the campus where he grew up makes it "frankly difficult for me — because I've been here so much — to separate what has happened to this place from myself."

Lou Prato, a 1959 alumnus who has written several books about Penn State sports history and was the first director of the university's All-Sports Museum, describes the valley as a cocoon and says that has intensified the shock.

"This goes beyond football. What's going to happen to this town? Because football has been this town," Prato said, his voice polished in the manner of a man who spent years in broadcasting.

"How did it happen here?" he continues. "This is like a nightmare, it really is. This is like your mother died."

Prato's voice cracks and tears begin to well.

"I'm sorry," he says.

In an essay in Friday's San Diego Union-Tribune, Vice President Joe Biden and his wife Jill wrote that "because of the incredible courage of the 9-11 generation, the tide of war is receding and America is more secure than a decade ago."

"But as our service members return, many are discovering a new battlefield as they leave the military and search for civilian employment opportunities," they wrote.

Their article also made a pitch for the veterans' assistance the Senate approved on a 95-0 vote. The bill, expected to clear the House next week, also includes more counseling and job training for unemployed veterans and service members about to leave the military.

"We're taking steps to make the job search easier for veterans," the Bidens wrote.

On Thursday, Mrs. Obama announced that private companies have made new commitments to hire 100,000 veterans and military spouses by 2014 as part of her Joining Forces initiative. That comes on top of the 16,000 veterans hired since the program was announced last April, and another 25,000 in hiring commitments announced earlier.

body fragments from remains shipped home from Afghanistan were lost.

One of the cases involved fragments of ankle bone embedded in human tissue associated with two crew members recovered from an F-15 fighter that crashed in Afghanistan. The other involved a piece of human tissue an inch or two long.

The investigators concluded that the removal of the Marine's arm had not violated any rule or regulation. But the Air Force has changed procedures to ensure that a representative of the deceased's service, in this case the Marine Corps, has a say in whether the family should be contacted before a body is altered so significantly.

All three whistle-blowers — Parsons, Mary Ellen Spera and William Zwicharowski — said in an interview Friday that the problems at the mortuary have since been fixed and that the families of fallen troops can be assured that the remains of their loved ones are being treated with respect.

"Please trust us when we tell you that your loved ones are taken care of at Dover," Zwicharowski said. "Your loved ones can't speak for themselves when they come through here, but we are going to speak for them, and we're going to represent them."

Col. Robert H. Edmondson, commander of Air Force Mortuary Affairs Operations at Dover at the time, received a letter of reprimand. Trevor Dean, Edmondson's top civilian deputy, and Keel, director of the mortuary, were reassigned to jobs dealing with families of the fallen and are no longer involved in mortuary operations.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta has since ordered the Air Force to consider imposing even stronger punishments.

The three whistle-blowers said they went outside the chain of command after their supervisors failed to address problems there.

"In house, it was falling on deaf ears," Zwicharowski said.

Italy

The Senate chamber resounded with warm applause for Mario Monti, the distinguished economist expected to succeed Berlusconi. He was unexpectedly named senator-for-life this week, putting him in line to lead.

"Our warmest and most cordial welcome," Senate President Renato Schifani told Monti after proclaiming him senator-for-life, an honorific reserved for the handful of Italians who have most contributed to Italian society.

A Cabinet meeting has been scheduled immediately after the vote in the lower house Saturday, suggesting Berlusconi might tender his resignation then.

The austerity measures will be not enough to revive the dormant Italian economy. They raise the retirement age to 67, but not until 2026. They call for the sale of state property and privatizing some services but contain no painful labor reforms.

The reforms also offer tax incentives to companies that hire young workers in a country where the unemployment rate for people ages 15 to 24 hovers around 25 percent. Unemployment overall is closer to 8 percent.

"There is more to be done," said Herman von Rompuy, president of the European Council, which sets the political course for the European Union. "The country needs reforms, not elections."

He added that Europe expects Italy to pass the reforms, at least as a first step.

In Greece, Prime Minister Lucas Papademos, a former vice president of the European Central Bank, assumed control of a temporary coalition government that will try to push through tough economic reforms and keep Greece from defaulting.

The Papademos government must pass a 130 billion euro, or $177 billion, bailout from the European Union. That was the deal that Papademos' predecessor, George Papandreou, said he would put up for a vote. He later backed off and resigned.

AS MORE USE HOSPICE, MEDICARE SEES SHARP RISE IN COSTS, FRAUD

BY KATE SANTICH
The Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. • On the final day Elly Barton worked as a hospice nurse last spring, she quit in disgust.

The 74-year-old Winter Park, Fla., woman had been hired as a “crisis care” nurse, assigned to patients considered so frail that they required around-the-clock medical supervision. Instead, Barton said, she wound up “baby sitting” a nursing home patient who needed nothing more than someone to make sure she didn’t “jump out of bed and fall over.”

“I know what the criteria are for crisis care — and this woman didn’t meet them,” Barton said. “And she wasn’t the only one. I was assigned to patients who were supposed to be bedridden and they’d be up cooking for themselves.”

Because of Barton’s presence, though, the hospice organization for which she worked could bill Medicare at the highest reimbursement level, a practice Barton thinks was a big waste for taxpayers.

“This is my money, too,” she said. “I’m on Medicare, and I don’t want the system to be abused.”

Her employer, Hospice of the Comforter in Altamonte Springs, is currently the focus of a whistleblower retaliation lawsuit by a former top financial executive. The executive, Douglas Stone, said he was fired after urging the CEO and board of directors to investigate Medicare billings that may have led to the organization returning millions of dollars in payments to the federal government.

Hospice of the Comforter officials have strongly denied any wrongdoing and characterize Stone as a disgruntled employee fired for insubordination. They would not address specifics of the case or comment further for this story.

Regardless of whether there was overbilling, as Barton suspects, or simply a difference of opinion about the level of care needed, hospice costs in general have risen sharply in recent years, prompting the federal government to crack down on waste and prosecute fraud.

Officials for Medicare report that spending for hospice care has increased about $1 billion per year since 1998 — to a record $12.1 billion in 2009, the most recent statistics available.

And since 2007, the main propellant of that increase has been the cost of hospice care for nursing home patients, which climbed nearly 70 percent from 2005 to 2009, when it reached $4.31 billion.

The growth parallels a rise in both for-profit hospice organizations — which now outnumber nonprofit hospices — and the rate of troubling compliance issues.

In July, the federal Office of Inspector General issued a report voicing “concern” over the growing number of hospice patients who reside in nursing homes, noting “hospices and nursing facilities may be involved in inappropriate enrollment and compensation.” Nursing home hospice patients tended to require less medical care than average hospice patients and yet have longer stays, giving providers a healthier profit margin, the auditors noted.

They also found that for-profit hospices had a greater percentage of their patients in nursing homes and that they were reimbursed, on average, 29 percent more per beneficiary than nonprofit hospices.

When hospice care was first covered by Medicare in 1982, it was seen as a way to lower end-of-life costs and provide a more humane, compassionate setting for terminally ill patients. And in the early years, hospices almost exclusively were not-for-profit organizations that served people dying of cancer.

Deaths at Occupy Camps Bring Pressure for Shutdown

BY TERRY COLLINS
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. • Leaders across the country felt increasing pressure Friday to shut down Occupy encampments after two men died in shootings and another was found dead from a suspected combination of drugs and carbon monoxide poisoning caused by a propane heater inside a tent.

Citing a strain on crime-fighting resources, police pleaded with Occupy Oakland protesters to leave their encampment at the City Hall plaza where a man was shot and killed late Thursday.

The Oakland Police Officer’s Association, which represents rank-and-file police, issued an open letter saying the camp is pulling officers away from crime-plagued neighborhoods.

“With last night’s homicide, in broad daylight, in the middle of rush hour, Frank Ogawa Plaza is no longer safe,” the letter said. “Please leave peacefully, with your heads held high, so we can get police officers back to work fighting crime in Oakland neighborhoods.”

Mayor Jean Quan said the city would issue another official notice to protesters to leave the camp, but she did not give a deadline.

Since the shooting, anonymous fliers have been posted around the encampment urging protesters to leave.

“Occupiers, turn on your brains and see the harm you are causing to our town,” it says. “You have devolved into mob rule. You have lost sight of the goal.”

City Council President Larry Reid said outside City Hall that the shooting was further proof the tents must come down. He was confronted by a protester who said he wouldn’t be in office much longer.

“You didn’t elect me,” Reid snapped back. “You probably ain’t even registered to vote!” Reid said the encampment has been a major setback for the area while attracting sex offenders, mentally ill and homeless people, and anarchists.

“This is no longer about Occupy Wall Street,” he said. “This is about occupying Oakland and extracting whatever you can get out of Oakland by holding our city hostage.”

The Oakland shooting occurred the same day a 35-year-old military veteran apparently shot himself to death in a tent at a Burlington, Vt., Occupy encampment.

On Friday, a man was found dead inside a tent at the Occupy Salt Lake City encampment, from what police said was a combination of drug use and carbon monoxide.

A preliminary investigation into the Oakland shooting suggested it resulted from a fight between two groups of men at or near the encampment, police Chief Howard Jordan said. Investigators do not know if the men in the fight were associated with Occupy Oakland, he said.

Protesters said there was no connection between the shooting and the camp.

The coroner’s office said it was using fingerprints to identify the victim and that a positive identification was not likely to be released before Monday.

Protesters have been girding for another police raid as several City Council members have said the Oakland camp must go. After police cleared the camp last month, Quan changed course and allowed protesters to return.

The mayor’s reversal strained relationships with city police and other San Francisco Bay area law enforcement agencies. More than a dozen agencies joined Oakland police in the Oct. 25 raid on the camp under a mutual aid policy in which each agency covers its own costs.

Alameda County Sheriff’s Department spokesman Sgt. J.D. Nelson said Friday that Oakland will have to pick up the entire tab if it asks for deputies to assist another raid.

Mutual aid was designed for law enforcement agencies to assist each other in unplanned emergency situations, Nelson said.

“When government officials allowed those campers to go back in, well now you know what you’re getting. It’s not an unplanned event,” he said.

Probe Begins into Hawaiian Helicopter Crash That Killed 5

BY AUDREY MCAVOY
Associated Press

HONOLULU • A couple killed on board a helicopter that crashed on Hawaii’s Molokai island were nuclear engineers from the Pittsburgh area who were married less than a week earlier.

Nicole and Michael Abel both worked for Westinghouse Electric Co., company spokesman Vaughn Gilbert said Friday.

“Clearly this is a tragic loss for the families involved and for Westinghouse. They had so many friends and colleagues who speak glowingly of them,” Gilbert said.

The newlyweds worked the company’s nuclear services division, which supplies nuclear power plants and nuclear power plant fuel, and performs plant inspections, maintenance and repairs.

The couple was married at St. Mary of the Mount Parish in Pittsburgh on Nov. 5, according to a website for a videographer who filmed their wedding. Videos of their ceremony have since been removed from the site.

The groom’s Facebook page said he was a 2008 graduate of Grove City College and joined Westinghouse the same year. He attended East Allegheny Senior High School in North Versailles, Pa.

He changed his Facebook status to “married” Tuesday.

The Abels were on a 45-minute aerial tour of west Maui and Molokai when their helicopter crashed around midday Thursday.

All four passengers on the Blue Hawaiian Helicopters flight and their 30-year-old pilot, Nathan Cline, were killed.

The names of the other two passengers haven’t been released, but authorities said they were from Ontario, Canada.

Pass the Drumstick and Wallet: Thanksgiving Meals to Cost More

BY RICHARD SIMON
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON • Add this to the nation’s economic indigestion: The cost of a traditional Thanksgiving dinner will rise by 13 percent this year, the biggest increase in the 26 years of the American Farm Bureau Federation’s informal price survey.

This year, the average cost of a meal for 10 is expected to be $49.20, up $5.73 from last year, the trade group reported. Turkey gobbled up a good chunk of the price increase. A 16-pound bird will cost $21.57 this year, up more than 22 percent from last year.

For starters, demand for turkey is up, John Anderson, the farm bureau’s senior economist, said in an interview. Turkey production is also up, in spite of increased production costs, he said, but “increase in supply has not kept pace with the growth in demand.” U.S. turkey exports are projected to increase as well, he said.

Sherrie Rosenblatt of the National Turkey Federation said in an interview that feed prices have increased. But, she added: “There’s still a bargain to be had when it comes to purchasing a Thanksgiving turkey.”

Indeed, the farm bureau said its volunteer shoppers look for the best prices without taking advantage of promotions or coupons.

The shopping list for the informal survey, conducted by 141 volunteer shoppers, includes turkey, bread stuffing, sweet potatoes, rolls with butter, peas, cranberries, a relish tray of carrots and celery, pumpkin pie with whipped cream, and beverages of coffee and milk.

“Retailers are being more aggressive about passing on higher costs for shipping, processing and storing food to consumers, although turkeys may still be featured in special sales and promotions close to Thanksgiving,” Anderson said in a statement attached to the survey.

The survey found that the price for a gallon of whole milk had risen by 42 cents to $3.66. A 30-ounce can of pumpkin pie mix was $3.03, up 41 cents. A pound of green peas was $1.68, up 24 cents; a 14-ounce package of cubed bread stuffing, $2.88, up 24 cents; a dozen brown-nerve rolls, $2.30, up 18 cents; three pounds of sweet potatoes, $3.26, up 7 cents; and fresh cranberries, $2.48, up 7 cents.

Cost of the feast goes up

It will cost you, on average, 13 percent more to feed family and friends a traditional meal this Thanksgiving.

SEC Disciplines Eight Employees over Madoff Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Securities and Exchange Commission says it has disciplined eight employees for failing to uncover Bernard Madoff's Ponzi scheme over a 16-year period. None of the employees were fired.
SEC spokesman John Nester says the discipline varied. Three employees had their pay reduced. Two received 30-day suspensions without pay, one of whom also received a pay cut. The others received shorter suspension or counseling memos. The actions were based on recommendations by a law firm hired by the agency.
Two years ago, the SEC inspector general questioned the conduct of 21 employees in a report on the Madoff affair. Ten of those employees have since left the agency.

Universal, Sony/ATV to Buy EMI for $4.1 Billion

BY RYAN NAKASHIMA
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • EMI Group Ltd., the iconic British music company that is home to The Beatles, Coldplay and Katy Perry, is being split and sold for $4.1 billion.
The deals will open EMI's buyers, Universal Music and Sony/ATV, to regulatory scrutiny as they increase their dominance of the music industry.
Universal Music Group said Friday that it will pay 1.2 billion pounds ($1.9 billion) for the recording division, joining Universal artists including Lady Gaga and Eminem with EMI superstars such as David Guetta and Lady Antebellum.
A consortium led by Sony/ATV reached a separate deal to pay $2.2 billion for EMI's publishing division, according to a person familiar with the matter. That business is in charge of songwriting copyrights for such artists as Rihanna and Adele. The person wasn't authorized to speak publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity.
Sony/ATV, a joint venture between Sony Corp. and the Michael Jackson estate, is a 38 percent partner in the consortium. The other parties were not immediately known.

The two-part sale, if approved by regulators, would further increase Universal Music's dominance in recorded music and springboard Sony/ATV into the top spot as a music publisher, according to Impala, an association of European independent music companies that is against the deal.
The purchases would give Universal Music and Sony/ATV undue negotiating power over artists and distributors of music, even powerhouses such as Apple Inc.'s iTunes, Impala said.
Both deals are expected to be carefully reviewed in Europe, the U.S., Japan and Australia. Even if regulators approve, they could force the sale of key assets or attach other terms.
Helen Smith, Impala's executive chairwoman, noted that when Universal Music bought music publisher BMG in 2007, it had to sell some assets to get smaller.
"When you have players which are dominant, even if they take over small players in market share, that can have a serious impact on competition," she said.

November Crop Report: Production, Demand Drop

One marketer worries that high corn prices have cut into feed demand as markets seek equilibrium.

BY CINDY SNYDER
For the Times-News

Fears of a reduced U.S. corn crop drove prices higher this month, leaving some to worry that high prices will reduce feed demand.
While traders expected to see October's 12.4 billion bushel crop projection drop this month, a drop of 100 million bushels came as a surprise. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's November projection would still equate to the fourth-largest U.S. corn crop on record if it holds true, although the projected per-acre yield of 146.7 bushels would be the lowest since 2003.
USDA left the forecast average annual national per-bushel corn price unchanged at $6.20 to $6.70. But weaker demand, primarily from the livestock sector, means already tight stockpiles won't be drawn greatly.
Randy Martinson, with Fargo, N.D.-based Progressive Ag marketing, thinks high corn prices are cutting into demand. He's skeptical that a reduced need for animal feed is the culprit, as hog inventory is holding steady and poultry numbers are down only slightly.

Many beef calves were placed into feedlots earlier than normal this year because of the devastating drought in the Southern Plains.
USDA beef and poultry production estimates have reduced, and are expected to push up prices through the rest of 2011 and 2012.
"Markets are trying to find equilibrium right now," Martinson said in a press conference call following the release of USDA's November World Agricultural Supply and Demand Estimate.
Markets want to find prices that will keep supply moving, he said, but not fall so much that users begin to churn through stocks too quickly. While livestock producers might appreciate seeing corn prices fall to $5.70 to $5.80 per bushel, Martinson is afraid that would push demand up too fast, thus inflating prices to ration the limited supply.
Although Martinson expects corn prices to drift lower on seasonal patterns, prices will have to remain firm enough to entice growers to plant the 95 million acres of corn in 2012 that some believe are needed to meet rising demand.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A little local difficulty."
— Harold Macmillan

.....

Regular readers of this column will know that the deals tend to get harder as we work our way through the week. By the time we get to Saturday, you should be ready to have your mind stretched just a little — as might be the case today.

You have driven to a grand slam in hearts that appears to have very little chance after West leads the spade 10. How will you get rid of your diamond loser, since you seem to have little hope of establishing a spade trick?

Don't despair! Your best chance is to hope that West began with the spade 10-9-8, and East with the ace and king, in which case, believe it or not, your contract is now undefeatable.

After covering the opening spade lead and ruffing in hand, you run all but one of your trumps, then cash the three top clubs, reducing dummy to the two top diamonds and the J-7 of spades. You have three diamonds and a trump in hand, and both defenders must retain two spades. If East bares his remaining spade honor, you can set up the jack with one ruff, while if West reduces to the bare nine or eight of spades, you will lead the jack from dummy and set up the seven. Since both defenders must keep two spades, neither can keep three diamonds. So cash the diamond ace and king, ruff a spade back to hand, and claim trick 13 with your remaining diamond.

ANSWER: Although your side has the balance of high cards, your partner appears to have a minimum balanced hand. You have no real fit with partner and certainly not the values to bid any further. So pass and hope to defeat your opponents in their contract. If you must bid, try two spades, a nonforcing call suggesting four good spades.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a senior in high school and I'm stressed out about the idea of driving. I took driver's ed during the summer and passed the course. Instead of being excited about taking that first step toward independence, I'm scared to death.

I know the goal of driver's ed is to learn safety precautions in driving, but I can't shake the feeling that every time I get into a car I'm risking my life. It has taken an emotional toll on me since last summer, and I wonder if I'll ever get past this fear.

I have talked to friends about driving, and my mom is investing in more driving lessons to boost my confidence. All I'm asking for is some reassurance that driving is not as horrifying as it seems to be. A little help, perhaps?

— I'D RATHER WALK IN HOUSTON

DEAR RATHER WALK: A car is only a machine. Like any machine, in the hands of someone who is careless — or hasn't learned to use it properly — it can be dangerous. You have successfully passed driver's ed. You will be getting more lessons so you can practice with supervision, which should make you an extra safe driver. If that doesn't give you confidence, then it's time to take your concerns to a therapist who can help you overcome your budding phobia.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: People write so often complaining about all sorts of irritating issues, so I thought I would add a touch of positivity. I'm 27. My boyfriend of five years and I struggle a lot. We're not where we'd like to be professionally, we're often strapped for cash, and frankly, life isn't going the way we planned. But the thing is, I'm happy.

I have a wonderful man who loves me and tells me every day. He makes me smile. Even after five years, the best part of my day is coming home to see him. He comforts me when I'm sad and cares enough to worry when he's away. We plan on getting married someday, but paying rent is more important to me than an engagement ring.

In these challenging times, I'd like to encourage other people to find something positive about their lives. It can really change your perspective.

— LOVES LIFE IN ORLANDO

DEAR LOVES LIFE: That's true, and thank you for pointing it out. I spoke recently with a reader who said that when she's feeling down, she "practices her gratitudes" — which include being thankful for a sunny day, someone holding a door for her, having friends who will listen and empathize, as well as her job, which is working with small children whose laughter and enthusiasm brighten her day. In other words, happiness is wherever she chooses to find it.

DEAR ABBY: My father is 85 and has dementia. I'm having a problem with relatives who want him to sign papers for property and medical supplies he can't use. They say that Dad OK'd them over the phone. What do I do?

— WORRIED DAUGHTER IN MONTANA

DEAR WORRIED DAUGHTER: Consult an attorney, preferably one with expertise in elder law, in order to safeguard your father's assets. You may also need to contact your father's physician, who can explain to the attorney to what degree your father's dementia has progressed and whether he is competent to be signing documents. Do not put this off — do it NOW.

IF NOVEMBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: For the next four to six weeks, your street smarts shine and you could be singled out for special treatment. You are not only ambitious, but have vision, making you an almost unbeatable competitor in the business world. Because you might mistake a friend for a lover between December and March, don't make any romantic commitments until you have received opinions from trusted advisers in April or May. That is also a good time to accept opportunities that arise and to launch crucial plans for the future.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Impractical ideas might have a practical application. Let someone else critique your plans, hopes and dreams and you might be able to find a way to "make it so." Don't let one "no" discourage you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could make a mountain out of a molehill. If so, you are probably standing on shaky ground. Pile the firewood into neat stacks or iron all of the sheets. Put annoyances to work to your advantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When you demonstrate confidence in someone else's abilities, he or she is more likely to prove you right. Naturally, the reverse is also true. Make a solid investment in a relationship by being supportive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't start anything you can't finish. You might be sidetracked by a get-rich-quick scheme or be unable to see your own shortcomings. Focus on building up an aura of tranquility — and don't stir up controversy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When the writing is on the wall, it is often considered graffiti. Get out the scrub brush and do your thing. Be meticulous when balancing the bankbook but chill out when alone with your favorite companion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Listen for that discouraging word that is seldom heard. You might be home, home on the range, but if you ask for someone else's opinion, you might not get the answer you want to hear under these stars.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and the thorns will still prick as deeply. You could be tricked into doing something that you shouldn't do. Stick to your guns and set reasonable limits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let minor issues get under your skin. Since you will need every ounce of patience to get through the day, plan to stay home from parties. Work on the yard or get out the checkbook and balance it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): One bad apple can spoil the whole bushel. It might be better to concentrate on building a friendship than on a love affair. If a friend suddenly leaves your life, it won't cut you to the core.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No one is an island. Yet there may be times today when you would be happiest playing the part of Robinson Crusoe and getting away from it all. Arrange to take a walk or run an errand by yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you were a bear, you would crawl in your den to hibernate. Enjoy the creature comforts of home and family where you can hide away from worldly problems. Fear of failure might block optimism.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use affirmations to affect a positive change. Stand in front of the mirror and tell yourself; "I can do it," "I am loved" or "I look great." It is likely that a few minutes of this will improve your outlook.

Golden Eagle Teams Earn Wins

Schierman, Sophomores Lead CSI Past Gillette

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

This was the Kylee Schierman the College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team has been waiting for.

Banged up last year with various ailments, Schierman struggled in her first year with the Golden Eagles, but on Friday night in the team's season-opener, the sophomore scored 19 points to lead CSI 81-57 over Gillette (Wyo.). "That's how Kylee has been practicing this year, playing with a lot of confidence. She shot the ball well and I was glad that she was actually able to get out on the floor," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers. "I'm really, really happy for her and how she played tonight."

Schierman averaged just 2.2 points and 2.4 rebounds last season and missed

Guthrie's 27 Points Elevate CSI Past Phoenix College

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

The night began with the unveiling of its 2011 NJCAA championship banner, and aside from a five minute stretch to start the game, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team played with that same championship swagger.

Rafriel Guthrie scored 27 points as a relentless attacker to the basket, and Paul Egwuonwu grabbed nine boards to lead the Golden Eagles over Phoenix College 102-91 in the their home-opener in front of a packed house.

CSI (3-1) fell behind 14-6 early as Phoenix guards Christian Bower and Kenneth Willis both made long 3-pointers to quiet the raucous crowd. Guthrie, however, helped jumpstart an 8-0 run for the Golden Eagles, highlighted by a layup off a one-handed bullet pass

Hagerman Reaches Title Game

BY RYAN HOWE

OAKLEY • Eleven down, one more to go.

Hagerman's quest for a perfect season and its first 8-man state football championship continued Friday night as the Pirates defeated Oakley 39-22 in the Class 1A Division I semifinals.

"It feels amazing, because last year we were going home, doing what Oakley's doing right now. It's like a dream come true," said Hagerman senior Xavier Strick.

Since losing to Grace in the state semifinals a year ago, Hagerman has won 11 straight and will make the school's first state title game appearance since 2000, when it competed in the A-4 11-man division.

The Pirates will face Kendrick, a 36-24 winner over Wallace on Friday, next week at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

"Every since I was playing fifth and sixth grade I've been looking forward to this. It's just unreal to go there," said Hagerman junior Justin Arriaga.

Having already beaten Oakley 54-8 during the regular season, Hagerman made sure the sequel followed a similar script. Oakley fought, but the outcome was never in question in the second half.

"We never looked past Oakley because they've always competed against us really well," said Hagerman senior Tyler Martin. "We knew it was going to be a battle when we go in here no matter what."

Hagerman was well-balanced offensively as six different Pirates put points on the scoreboard. Kade Kress passed for 123 yards and three touchdowns and Hagerman gained 215 yards rushing, led by Jonathan Owsley's 119 yards on 13 carries.

Owsley put Hagerman on the board first by catching a pass in the flats, slipping a tackle and rumbling 58 yards for the touchdown.

An Owsley fumble in the second quarter set up Oakley at the Hagerman 16-yard line. Stephan Ortiz ran in the five-yard touchdown to pull within 8-6.

But Hagerman went into halftime with momentum after a pair of Kress touchdown tosses — one to Justin Arriaga and another to Strick — gave it a 24-6 lead at the break.

Oakley had a chance to turn the tide when Ortiz returned the second half's opening kickoff all the way, but it was called back for an illegal block. The Hornets then went three-and-out and shanked the punt to give Hagerman the ball at the Oakley 14. Four plays later, Martin punched it in and the rout was on.

NBA Season Could Be Saved or Sunk in Next Few Days

BY BRIAN MAHONEY
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The time for talk in the NBA is over.

David Stern made that clear Thursday, saying the league is done negotiating. The next time he hears from the players' association, he expects an answer: Yes, players will accept the league's latest proposal for a new collective bargaining agreement, or no they won't.

If they do, the NBA will commence with a 72-game season on Dec. 15.

And if no? Then the next time LeBron James, Kobe Bryant and the rest of the NBA's biggest stars are in uniform, it might be in London during next summer's Olympics.

So the NBA's lengthy labor fight could come to an end this week. Or, the next phase might just be beginning.

Should players reject this deal — and they certainly don't love it — the next one comes with terms they would never accept, likely sending them into the court system to file an antitrust lawsuit against the league after disbanding the union. That's far from an assured victory, but it practically assures there would be no 2011-12 season.

Stern knows which he prefers — and which he thinks the union should accept.

"We both recognize the seriousness of what we're facing," he said. "I think both sides would like to begin the season on Dec. 15th, if that's possible. I think our teams want to start playing. That desire is matched by our players. We've done the best we can to cause that to happen. I think the events of the week and the offer that we presented had the desired impact of causing us both to focus intensely on whether there was a deal here to be done. We very much want to make the deal that's on the table that would get our players into training camp and to begin the 2011-12 season."

BOISE • They have only played three times against each other, but when Boise State and TCU clash on the gridiron, there is always something on the line.

The Broncos and Horned Frogs' previous meetings occurred in bowl games — the Fort Worth Bowl in 2003, the Poinsettia Bowl in 2008, and the Fiesta Bowl in 2010. Boise State won two of the three, with each game decided by seven points or less. Today they will meet for the first — and for the foreseeable future, last — time in the regular season, the winner emerging as a near-certain lock for the Mountain West conference title.

Penn State Trustees Promise to Search for Truth

BY GENARO C. ARMAS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • The arduous task of rebuilding Penn State's shattered image began Friday with a pledge by the board of trustees to search for the truth amid an unfolding child sex abuse case against a former assistant football coach, a scandal that has already claimed the jobs of coach Joe Paterno and the school's president.

The vow came as the school faced a warning by the Moody's credit rating company that its bond rating could be downgraded because of risks to its reputation and finances from the scandal.

In front of an overflow crowd at a meeting that was moved from a hotel boardroom to a ballroom to accommodate more people, the trustees opened with Chairman Steve Garban welcoming the replacement president, Rod Erickson, and Gov. Tom Corbett, who had pressed publicly for fast action by trustees accustomed to deferring to former president Graham Spanier.

The meeting was the first public gathering of the 32-member board in Injury-prone Bengals Head to Sacramento St.

BY MARK LIPTAK
Times-News Correspondent

Idaho State's game against Sacramento State could be accurately dubbed the 'Pity Bowl' due to the direction both teams are heading and why they are in that position.

Sacramento State (3-6, 2-5 Big Sky) started the year with wins at Oregon State and against Montana, propelling the Hornets into the Top 25. Things looked great.

Then the bottom fell out as the Hornets come in having lost three straight, including gut-wrenching losses to Eastern Washington in overtime and to Northern Arizona by a point.

As far as the Bengals (2-7, 1-5 Big Sky) are concerned, they've lost five in a row and continue to be gutted by injuries. Promising offensive lineman Josh Cutler was the latest to go down, his season ending with a shoulder injury. ISU head coach Mike Kramer made mention of the rash of injuries this week and also appeared to cast a stone at the previous coaching staff for part of the reason.

"The total number of injuries just continues to mount at, for me, an unprecedented level," he said. "Maybe we're used to it around here. I'm not used to it. I'm not used to having anybody really banged up more than one or two guys. We lose this guy to shoulder surgery, that guy for a shoulder, this guy for a knee. Some of these are pre-existing conditions of a team that wasn't recruited very well. We got to make sure that when we bring guys in to this program, they are healthy enough to survive the onslaught."

On the surface one might think that Kramer has thrown in the towel on his first year in charge. Not so. "I don't care about next year, not yet. We've still got a chance to win the last two games and do something that hasn't been done a lot around here (lately), win four games in a season."

To beat the Hornets, ISU is going to have to keep in check quarterback Jeff Fleming, back from injury and a guy who carved up Idaho State last year. He's helped by a good running attack led by Bryan Hilliard. The senior from Sacramento has rushed for over 600 yards, is averaging over 4 yards a carry and has six touchdowns. He has a running mate in Sam McCowan who is averaging over 6 yards a carry. In fact, counting Fleming, Sacramento State has an eye popping five players averaging over 4 yards every time they run the football.

Bengal cornerback Donovan Henley, one of the top defenders in the conference, knows how much a good run game takes the pressure off a quarterback. "Their running game really helps him (Fleming), because it slows down the pass rush and gives him more time when he wants to throw the football."

At this point, Kramer said, the key to a road win is simple and straight forward. "It's going to be the same as anything. I don't want to give a bunch of coaching clichés, but literally speaking, we have to be tougher than they are, we've got to be more mental than they are, we've got to be more on top of it, we've got to play aggressive and we've got to play like we know what we're doing."

For a team as beat up and perhaps beat down from a long season, that could be a tall order.

Penn State Coach McQueary Put on Administrative Leave

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • Penn State assistant coach Mike McQueary, a key witness in the child sex abuse scandal that has engulfed the school, has been placed on administrative leave.

School president Rod Erickson announced the move Friday, a day after the school said McQueary would not be present when the Nittany Lions play Nebraska on Saturday because he has received threats.

McQueary testified in a grand jury investigation that eventually led to child sex-abuse charges being filed against former Penn State defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky. The ensuing scandal brought down longtime coach Joe Paterno, who was fired by university trustees amid growing criticism that he should have done more to stop the alleged abuse.

McQueary, who testified that he saw Sandusky sodomizing a boy in the shower in 2002, has endured similar scrutiny. The university's athletic department released a one-line statement Thursday night saying it would be "in the best interest of all" if the receivers coach didn't attend the season's final home game at Beaver Stadium. The school did not provide details on precisely who threatened McQueary.

"It became clear that coach McQueary could not function in this role under these circumstances," Erickson said Friday, adding McQueary was told of the decision Friday afternoon.

Besides Paterno, school president Graham Spanier also has been fired.

Athletic director Tim Curley and vice president Gary Schultz have each been charged with perjury and failing to report an incident of abuse in 2002 to authorities. Curley has taken administrative leave, while Schultz — who was already working on an interim capacity — has returned to retirement.

plicated, and prosecutors have said he is not a target of the investigation. Curley and Schultz, through their attorneys, have denied wrongdoing.

The campus leaders faced mounting public criticism for failing to call police and prevent further suspected cases. So, too, has McQueary, who has not spoken publicly. His mother, Anne, said Thursday they have been advised not to comment.

Described in court papers as distraught about witnessing the 2002 attack, separate newspaper accounts from the time indicate McQueary appeared in the months and years that followed in charity events that Sandusky also took part in, or were to benefit Sandusky's group The Second Mile.

Asked if McQueary would be fired, Erickson said "there are complexities to that issue that I am not prepared to go into at this point."

In forums online, and in comments on other websites, some have indeed called for McQueary to be ousted, but the assistant coach could be protected as a whistleblower.

Gerald J. Williams, a partner at a Philadelphia law firm, said Pennsylvania law is broad in protecting a person who reports wrongdoing, as long as that person is part of a governmental or quasi-governmental institution, such as Penn State.

Asked if McQueary was protected by whistleblower status, trustee Boyd Wolff said Friday after a board meeting, "He's a witness. He's different from the others, so he has to be treated differently."

As an emeritus trustee, Wolff is a non-voting member, though he said he took part in deliberations this week.

According to Williams, such whistleblower protections could include any kind of adverse employment action — such as being fired, demoted, ostracized or punished — although a court, ultimately, would determine whether the person is protected if they bring a claim.

The penalty on an employer can include monetary damages, attorneys' fees and reinstatement of the employee, he said.

According to the grand jury report, McQueary "reported what he had seen" to Paterno the next day, and Paterno then spoke to Curley.

McQueary was also called to a separate meeting with Curley and Schultz. Schultz, in turn, notified university president Graham Spanier.

Curley and Schultz — as well as Paterno — testified they were told that Sandusky behaved inappropriately in that 2002 incident, but not to the extent of McQueary's graphic account to the grand jury.

Sandusky was arrested and charged last Saturday. His lawyer maintains his client is innocent.

A Penn State graduate and State College native, McQueary also played for Paterno. He was the starting quarterback of the 1997 team that finished 9-3. McQueary joined the staff as a graduate assistant in 2000 — the season after Sandusky retired — and moved on to become receivers coach and recruiting coordinator in 2004.

McQueary has relayed the offensive play calls from the press box on the field. Graduate assistant coach Terrell Golden is expected to assume McQueary's sideline duties against Nebraska.

Regardless of what university administrators do, the outcome of the search for a new coach could affect McQueary's future at Penn State. In college football, when a coach is hired from outside a university, he frequently brings along his own set of assistants who replace the current group.

Vandals Hope Confidence Will Help Team Against BYU

BY JOSH WRIGHT
For the Times-News

MOSCOW • Before last week's fourth-quarter explosion at San Jose State, it had been a fallow two months for Idaho. The defense and special teams unit were producing more touchdowns than the offense, close losses were becoming routine and fans were growing weary.

But Robb Akey never budged. He was adamant that a breakthrough, no matter how it came, would breathe the new life into UI's season.

Tonight in Provo, Utah, the Vandals (2-7) get to see how much good last week's win — the first in seven tries — did in sparking a late-season revival.

Idaho will clash with BYU at LaVell Edwards Stadium at 7:15 p.m. on ESPN2. This is UI's first nationally televised game this year and its first matchup with the Cougars since 1955.

The Vandals' confidence appears to have been restored. But in facing newly independent BYU (6-3), they'll go against a higher caliber of talent than they have seen this year in the WAC.

The Cougars, winners of five of its last six games, own road victories over Ole Miss and Oregon State. The club turned to Riley Nelson at quarterback a month ago, and he's surpassed the 200-yard passing and 50-yard rushing marks in all four of his starts since replacing Jake Heaps.

"I think Nelson is playing his tail off right now," Akey said. "He's doing a tremendous job, and he hurts you with his legs too."

An upset of the Cougars would give Idaho back-to-back wins for the first time since October 2009 — "it's been too long," Akey said — while Vandals sophomore quarterback Taylor Davis is looking to further solidify his leading role.

Davis supplanted Brian Reader as starter three weeks ago, yet he still often turns to Reader — easily the most experienced QB on UI's roster and one of the Vandals' captains — when a question arises.

"Oh, he's a great guy," Davis said of Reader. "He still helps me with everything — from film to practice to everything."

With a younger QB taking snaps, the Vandals have substantially added to the workload of running backs Kama Bailey and Princeton McCarty. Bailey went off for 163 rushing yards last week, while McCarty had 99 and 116 the two weeks prior.

Who will get the bulk of the carries tonight? That's to be determined.

"If one of them gets a hotter hand, then that guy should get fed a little bit more," Akey said.

the wake of the scandal, which has gripped one of the nation's largest universities and touched off a violent student demonstration. Besides the firings of Paterno and Spanier, an assistant coach who told his bosses in 2002 that he saw an assault was placed on administrative leave Friday.

Garban pledged to support Erickson — the trustees removed the "interim" tag on his new title but will continue to search for a permanent successor to Spanier — as the board works "for the future of this institution that we respect and love." Erickson, previously the university's longtime provost, said Penn State must devote itself to its core values — honesty, integrity, excellence and community — now more than ever.

"I know we can do this. We are resilient; we are a university that will rebuild the trust and confidence that so many people have had in us for so many years," Erickson said in a six-minute speech to the trustees.

Without mentioning Spanier or Paterno, Erickson told trustees that their deliberate and decisive action had set a course for the university's future. He said his heart aches for the victims and their families, and he pledged to reassure Penn Staters that the university's future is still bright.

But Moody's Investors Service Inc. said it put the school's high A+ bond rating under review for a possible downgrade and will assess over the next few months the potential impact on the school from possible lawsuits, a decline in students applying to attend, the loss of donations from philanthropies and changes in the school's relationship with the state.

The strong current bond rating, like a credit rating for a person, reflects Penn State's attractiveness to prospective students because of its respected academic program and status as Pennsylvania's flagship and land grant university, Moody's said. That has drawn out-of-state students paying high tuition rates.

Paterno and Spanier were fired Wednesday in the fallout of a shocking days-old grand jury report alleging repeated, illicit contact between retired assistant coach Jerry Sandusky and boys as young as 10 over a span of 15 years, sometimes in Penn State's facilities.

Police said Friday that a vandal may have smashed a window at Sandusky's home in State College on Thursday night. A broken ground-floor window in the front of the house was covered Friday with what looked what a white tarp. No one answered the door.

Meanwhile, Paterno's son, Scott Paterno, said his dad had retained attorney Wick Sollers, of the law firm of King and Spalding.

"Like everyone who has watched this story unfold, my father is experiencing a range of powerful emotions. He is absolutely distraught over what happened to the children and their families," Scott Paterno said in a statement. "He also wants very much to speak publicly and answer questions."

this matchup is unlike any other Mountain West foe his team has seen.

"You put the tape on, and to me they're just like they've always been — extremely athletic, really fast, well-coached, and play hard," Petersen said. "It's a different level."

The changes in the college football landscape will set the Frogs and Broncos apart following the season, and because of that, the Mountain West decided to change this game's venue from Fort Worth to Boise.

"Yeah, I remember hearing about that. They weren't too excited about that," Baker said.

As a result, defending Rose Bowl champion TCU (7-2, 4-0 MWC) will search for its conference record 22nd-straight Mountain West victory in Bronco Stadium, as Boise State (8-0, 3-0) tries to preserve its 35-game home winning streak.

"Every week we try to focus as much as we can, but I feel like this week, knowing we're playing a great team, we're trying to focus a little bit more and do the little things a little bit better," Bronco defensive back Ebo Makinde said.

Makinde and the Boise State defense are charged with slowing the Frogs' offense led by quarterback Casey Pachall and a stable of talented running backs that average 228 rushing yards per game.

"They're really running the ball. When you can do that, things fall in place," Petersen said.

Pachall, an efficient red-shirt sophomore who replaced TCU great and current Cincinnati Bengals starting quarterback Andy Dalton, is on pace to break or tie school records in completions, completion percentage and touchdown passes. Their defense features ferocious play-making linebacker Tank Carder, who instantly grabbed Bronco quarterback Kellen Moore's attention.

"Obviously he's kind of the focal point of that entire defense," Moore said. "He does a great job getting through (on blitzes), recognizing weaknesses in protection. I think he's a premier player."

One antidote for facing defensive pressure is the screen pass, which Boise State thwarted UNLV with last week, just as the Rebels were building momentum.

"I think any time you get an aggressive defense that wants to try to blitz then you hit them with a screen and get them out of position and get a big play," Bronco receiver Tyler Shoemaker said. "That will kind of put them on their heels."

Petersen did not rule out starters Billy Winn or Doug Martin, who both left the UNLV game due to injury. With or without them, the Broncos' focus and intensity increased this week because of their opponent.

"All together, they're a lot better than what we've seen so far," Makinde said. "It feels a little bit different."

"You can just feel it," Baker said. "It's a different atmosphere right now and TCU brings it out in us."

Pane's 21 Lead Utah Past BYU

LOGAN, Utah • Brockeith Pane scored 21 points and Preston Medlin added 15 as Utah State used an 11-0 second-half run to beat in-state rival Brigham Young 69-62 Friday night.

The Aggies have now won 32 straight home games — the third-longest active home winning streak in the nation behind Duke (36) and Kentucky (34).

The win avenges a 78-72 loss last November in Provo.

Noah Hartsock, playing with a bloodied nose, led BYU with 18 points as the Cougars began life without national player of the year Jimmer Fredette.

OKLAHOMA 78, IDAHO ST. 74
NORMAN, Okla. — Calvin Newell scored a career-high 19 points, transfer Romero Osby had 17 points and 10 rebounds in his Oklahoma debut and the Sooners beat Idaho State 78-74 Friday night in Lon Kruger's first game as the Sooners' coach.

Barry Honore came up with blocks on consecutive possessions to spark the decisive 9-0 run for Oklahoma.

After floating in a jumper from the right baseline, Honore swatted away Abner Moreira's shot and Carl Blair followed it with a 3-pointer from the right wing that gave the Sooners the lead for good at 56-54 with 9:44 remaining. Honore then blocked Chase Grabau's layup attempt on the next Idaho State possession.

DURHAM, N.C. — Seth Curry scored 16 points and Duke held off Belmont in the first round of the EA Sports Maui Invitational to move coach Mike Krzyzewski within one victory of tying Bob Knight atop the Division I men's career list.

Austin Rivers added 16 points in his college debut for the Blue Devils (1-0). They shot 43 percent and overcame 19 turnovers to avoid their first nonconference home loss since 2000 and put their Hall of Fame coach one step closer to history.

Krzyszewski started his 37th season as a head coach by improving his record to 901-284. He can tie his college coach and mentor's record Saturday when Duke plays Presbyterian.

Kerron Johnson scored 15 points for Belmont.

NO. 3 OHIO STATE 73, WRIGHT STATE 42
COLUMBUS, Ohio — Preseason All-American Jared Sullinger had 19 points and nine rebounds to lead Ohio State past Wright State in the Global Sports Shootout.

William Buford added 13 points for the Buckeyes. Point guard Aaron Craft had 10 points and just one turnover in 28 minutes in the opener for both teams.

A.J. Pachter had 13 points and Reggie Arceneaux 11 for Wright State.

NO. 4 CONNECTICUT 70, COLUMBIA 57
STORRS, Conn. — Jeremy Lamb scored a career-high 30 points and No. 4 Connecticut began defense of its national championship with a victory over Columbia.

Shabazz Napier added 21 points, eight assists and six rebounds for the Huskies, who led 37-22 at halftime in the season opener for both teams.

Tyler Olander had eight rebounds for UConn, four in the first 5 minutes when UConn used an 8-0 run to break a 5-5 tie. The Huskies never trailed.

Norwua Agho, who led the Ivy League in scoring last season, had 16 points for Columbia.

The win extends the Huskies streak to 12 games, after the 11-0 run that gave UConn the NCAA title in April. The Huskies unveiled their national championship plaque before the game.

NO. 2 KENTUCKY 108, MARIST 58
LEXINGTON, Ky. — Anthony Davis had 23 points and 10 rebounds to join Terrence Jones and Sam Bowie as the only freshmen in Kentucky history with 20-10 games in their debuts, leading the Wildcats past Marist.

Davis attacked the rim in the opener, finishing 10 of 13 with eight dunks, as Kentucky shrugged off a slow start with a dominant second half that turned a single-digit lead into a blowout in their first game of the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off tournament.

Jones, a sophomore, came off the bench for eight points after the university said he was involved in an early morning car accident. Coach John Calipari said earlier in the day that he would institute a curfew for the Wildcats. Isaiah Morton led Marist with 13 points.

NO. 8 FLORIDA 99, JACKSON STATE 59
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Newcomer Mike Rosario scored 19 points, freshman Bradley Beal added 14 and Florida opened the season with a victory over Jackson State.

Florida built a 30-point lead midway through the first half and started the second half with a 15-0 run.

Sophomore Patric Young had the first double-double of his career, finishing with 12 points and 10 rebounds. Erving Walker added 10 points. Jenirro Bush led Jackson State with 20 points.

NO. 9 LOUISVILLE 83, TENNESSEE-MARTIN 48
LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Kyle Kuric scored all 14 of his points in the first half and Louisville routed Tennessee-Martin to give Rick Pitino earned his 600th college victory.

Pitino is the 38th coach to reach 600 wins. He is the 15th fastest to the milestone, doing it one game quicker than former Louisville coach Denny Crum.

Freshman Chane Behanan had 14 points and 12 rebounds, and Peyton Silva added 10 points and nine assists.

Mike Liabo had 15 points and four assists for the Skyhawks.

NO. 10 PITTSBURGH 89, ALBANY 56
PITTSBURGH — Travon Woodall scored a career-high 25 points and had 10 assists, and Ashton Gibbs added 21 points for Pittsburgh, unbeaten in nine season openers under coach Jamie Dixon.

Gibbs and Woodall dominated, feeding off each other against Albany's overmatched backcourt. Woodall made 9 of 13 shots, including 5 of 7 3-pointers. Pitt played without sophomore forward J.J. Moore, suspended for one game for playing in an unsupervised summer league game.

Gerardo Suerlo led Albany with 17 points.

NO. 13 KANSAS 100, TOWSON ST. 54
LAWRENCE, Kan. — Thomas Robinson had 18 points, 11 rebounds and four assists, Travis Releford added 14 points and Kansas romped past outmanned Towson State in a season opener that was lopsided from the start.

Robinson, a 6-foot-10 junior getting his first chance to start with the departure to the NBA of the vaunted Morris twins, led Kansas in what counts as the opening round of the EA Sports Maui Invitational.

Point guard Tyshawn Taylor, suspended along with guard Elijah Johnson for the two exhibition games, added 12 points and four assists for the seven-time defending Big 12 champions. Connor Teahan had 11 points on 4-for-5 shooting and in three games is 17 for 21.

Robert Nwankwo had 14 points for the Tigers.

NO. 14 XAVIER 74, MORGAN STATE 63
CINCINNATI — Mark Lyons scored 22 points and Dezmine Wells added 12 in his college debut to help Xavier open the regular season with a victory over Morgan State.

Xavier star Tu Holloway, the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year last season, was suspended for the game by the NCAA for participating in two leagues this past summer, when only one is permitted. The secondary violation was reported by Xavier in August.

Kevin Thompson scored 14 points, 10 in the second half, for Morgan State.

NO. 18 MICHIGAN 59, FERRIS STATE 33
ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Stu Douglass scored

14 points after making a surprise start at point guard, and Michigan overcame some early shooting struggles to beat Ferris State.

NO. 22 MARQUETTE 91, MOUNT ST. MARY'S 37
MILWAUKEE — Darius Johnson-Odom led a balanced Marquette attack with 16 points and the Golden Eagles rolled past Mount St. Mary's.

Jae Crowder and Chris Otule each added 14 points for Marquette, which led 49-18 at halftime and was never threatened after the game's opening minutes. Julian Norfleet led Mount St. Mary's with 12 points.

NO. 25 MISSOURI 83, SE MISSOURI 68
COLUMBIA, Mo. — Ricardo Ratliffe and Marcus Denmon had 20 points apiece, leading Missouri to a ragged opening victory over Southeast Missouri State in coach Frank Haith's Tigers debut.

Kim English added 19 points and hit four 3-pointers in the second half, going 5 for 9 from long distance overall as the Tigers pulled away after leading by only two at the break. The Tigers have a 59-game home winning streak against nonconference opponents dating to the 2005-06 opener.

Tyler Stone, who had his scholarship pulled by Missouri after spending most of his freshman season on the bench, led Southeast Missouri State with 18 points and seven rebounds.

Top-ranked Tar Heels Top Spartans in Carrier Classic

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) • The nation's basketball-fan-in-chief appeared to enjoy the first college hoops game on an active aircraft carrier.

President Barack Obama sat courtside and watched No. 1 North Carolina beat Michigan State 67-55 on Friday night in the Carrier Classic on the flight deck of the USS Carl Vinson.

Harrison Barnes scored 17 points and John Henson had 12 points and a career-high nine blocked shots as the Tar Heels put their size advantage to good use.

Michigan State's Draymond Green had a career-high 18 rebounds.

Obama watched intently, chatted with wife Michelle and service members seated near him, and at one point appeared to check his BlackBerry.

When the game ended, he applauded and then shook hands with coaches Roy Williams and Tom Izzo.

"He said, 'Good luck!' I told him, 'Good luck!' He's got some pretty important things coming up in the next year, also," said Williams, the Tar Heels' coach.

Williams said it was nice that there wasn't a crisis that kept Obama away.

"I like a president who loves sports, loves athletics, loves college basketball," Williams said. "Don't take this wrong and I'm not being disrespectful, but he's a basketball junkie."

Said Izzo: "I thanked him. He thanked us. We're all trying to thank somebody. That damn military starts thanking you, and it's killing me because they do so much for us and they're thanking us. They're the most humble group I've ever met."

"We played the No. 1 team in the country and in front of the No. 1 team in the world," the Michigan State coach added.

Both coaches said the Carrier Classic worked.

"I absolutely loved it," Williams said. "We had some scary moments. We were worried about the weather for the last week, but it worked and I thought it was great."

Izzo "absolutely loved it. The military was so good on this whole deal, from when we got here to when we're leaving. I thought it was awesome," he said.

The Carl Vinson conducted Osama bin Laden's burial at sea after he was killed by Navy SEALs in a raid ordered by Obama.

Fitting with the Veterans Day theme, the Tar Heels and Spartans had U.S.A. rather than their names on the back of their jerseys, which had a camouflage design. At dusk, the game was paused for the lowering of the American flag. When the game ended, the players gave their jerseys to servicemen.

In a nod to the troops, Williams and his staff wore combat boots and cargo pants.

The Carrier Classic featured slam dunks and fast breaks on a court plopped down where jet fighters normally scream into flight.

"It took a while, but at some point you didn't even realize you were outside until the play slowed down," Henson said. "It was fun. My excuse was sometimes I felt like the boat moved a little bit when I shot," Henson joked. "That's why I missed."

North Carolina led by double digits from late in the first half on, including 36-25 after Kendall Marshall made two free throws with 44.8 seconds left before halftime.

This game turned out as have recent matchups between the schools. North Carolina has beaten Michigan State six straight times, including in the 2009 national championship game.

N. Idaho Sheriff Sues County Over House Move

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • The Kootenai County sheriff has filed a lawsuit against local government officials claiming they acted on personal vendettas when they halted the relocation of his home by barge across Lake Coeur d'Alene in northern Idaho. Sheriff Rocky Watson and his wife, Mary, filed their lawsuit against the county earlier this week in Idaho's 1st District Court. The complaint names former County Commissioner Rick Currie and current Community Development Director Scott Clark, the Coeur d'Alene Press reports.

Watson is seeking more than $10,000 in damages.

According to court documents, Watson claims Currie and Clark took action to halt his house relocation by barge in 2009 because of personal animosity toward him after he raised concerns over mismanagement of public funds, manpower and law violations.

Watson claims the Kootenai County Building Department was aware that he was moving his home by barge across Lake Coeur d'Alene to another property on Cougar Bay. But when the relocation was under way, Watson says officials issued an order to stop the project saying it violated a county building ordinance.

According to court documents, Watson alleges that Currie and Clark later learned the project was in compliance with county rules and did not fall under that particular ordinance. The Watsons claim they accumulated an extra $12,200 in barge fees when the work was halted.

The lawsuit claims that along with the unnecessary fees, the county violated their 14th Amendment rights by stopping road work they were conducting near their home in 2009. Watson is being represented by his brother, attorney Rollie Watson.

"My client expects reimbursement for his losses, and perhaps the change of treatment of people," Rollie Watson said. "If we make them accountable every time they pull this stuff, maybe they'll learn."

Currie said he was "not going to honor that allegation with a comment" when asked about claims he had retaliated against Watson. Clark, who still works within county government, could not be reached for comment.

Boise Jogger Hit by Car on Oct. 31 Still in Hospital

BOISE (AP) • A jogger remains hospitalized nearly two weeks after he was hit by a pickup truck at a Boise intersection but his condition has improved.

The Idaho Statesman reports Mark Nearman suffered life-threatening injuries when he was struck Oct. 31 while jogging with his dog and another man. Nearman was listed in serious condition at a Boise hospital on Friday.

His condition had been considered critical in the days following the accident.

The driver of the vehicle that hit Nearman told police he did not seek the jogger because it was still dark at 7 a.m. that morning.

Police are still investigating the accident.

BLM Reviews Comments on Wyo.-Idaho Power Line Plan

BY BOB MOEN
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • The Bureau of Land Management is reviewing comments submitted by hundreds of individuals and groups about a proposed $2 billion high-voltage power line in Wyoming and Idaho.

The proposed Gateway West transmission line by Idaho Power Co. and Rocky Mountain Power would span some 1,150 miles and carry power generated by wind and other sources in Wyoming.

The BLM received 350 to 400 comments by the Oct. 28 deadline.

The comments varied from being supportive and hopeful that the line will create jobs, to being concerned about its impact on property owners and their views of the skyline, BLM spokeswoman Beverly Gorny said.

"They were what we anticipated for the most part," Gorny said.

The BLM will study the comments and propose a preferred route from among the alternatives offered so far. There will be another comment period before the BLM makes a final decision.

"That won't likely happen until next summer or fall, because it takes that long to write the final document taking into consideration these comments," Gorny said.

One of the groups that submitted comments was the Northern Laramie Range Alliance, which includes prominent Wyoming landowners and businesspeople. They oppose one of the proposed routes through and next to the Laramie Range in southeast Wyoming.

Sharon Rodeman, a landowner and member of the group, said there is a proposed loop that crosses her land even though there is an existing power line corridor that Gateway West could follow.

"It's getting pushed on us because they can't go into the core sage grouse area; they could, but it's not beneficial," Rodeman said.

Sage grouse have suffered severe habitat loss over the last century. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has said that the greater sage grouse deserves listing as threatened or endangered, but other species in greater peril are in more urgent need of protection.

Rocky Mountain Power spokeswoman Margaret Oler said Friday that the company has been working with the Northern Laramie Range Alliance on the plan.

The company proposed the route off the current power line corridor not only to avoid sage grouse areas but to bring the proposed line closer to potential wind farm development, Oler said.

In addition, placing the line in a different area would provide a backup line in case another line goes down because of weather or some other reason, she said.

"You've got some separation between lines so that if possible you can then reroute power over a different line to keep people in service while you're repairing the damaged line," Oler said.

The line would run from a proposed substation near Glenrock to a substation to be built near Melba, Idaho. It would carry between 230,000 and 500,000 volts.

Woman Says Doll She Bought for Grandkids Has a Potty Mouth

BY PATRICK ORR
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • When Lynn Schable bought the "You & Me Interactive Triplet Dolls" from Toys R Us earlier this week as a Christmas present for her triplet granddaughters, she was excited.

The infant dolls looked cute and harmless. Dressed in different color onesies, each equipped with a milk bottle, they looked like a lot of fun for a trio of 2 1/2 year old girls.

But the girls won't be getting those dolls for Christmas. Schable says one of the dolls — the one in the pink onesie — says "bitch" in the midst of a stream of gobbledegook. Other customers on the Internet have also said the doll appears to say "crazy bitch."

"I am just beside myself. ... What is this world coming to?" said Schable, who intended to return the dolls to the Boise Toys R Us store on Milwaukee Street Friday night. "It's too bad. The dolls are just adorable. They would have been (the girl's) favorites, I'm sure."

Toys R Us Inc. has received at least one other complaint about "You & Me Interactive Triplet Dolls" dolls, from an attorney in Fort Smith, Ark., but company officials say the doll does not swear and that any sound similar to one is just a coincidence.

"What you are hearing is baby babble," Toys R Us spokeswoman Jan Albano said Friday.

"My babies don't babble like that," Schable says.

Albano said Toys R Us has no plans to remove the dolls from store shelves, which is what Fort Smith attorney Joey McCutchen demanded last month.

Albano said the dolls are exclusively manufactured for Toys R Us. The dolls retail for $39.99 on the store's website. Five of the seven customer reviews on the website mention that they have heard the pink baby say the word "bitch," or emit a sound that sounds like that.

Schable said she found out about the issue when looking up her purchase on the Internet Thursday night.

Idaho Professor Only Witness to All Three Atomic Bombs

He was there because he developed their detonators, the result of two weeks of isolated, intense work in a desert location where, if he failed, he wouldn't blow up anyone else.

BY SANDRA L. LEE
The Lewiston Tribune

MOSCOW • Not all who serve their countries in wartime wear uniforms or carry guns.

Lawrence H. Johnston carried a slide rule.

Seven decades ago, most people had never heard of computers, including Johnston, now a retired University of Idaho physics professor. Electronics was essentially a new word.

And the Atomic Age had not yet dawned.

But when it did, Johnston, now 93, was in the front row.

He was on the observation airplane that watched Trinity, the code name for the first atomic bomb test, July 16, 1945, in New Mexico. And he was on the B-29 dubbed Great Artiste when Little Boy was dropped on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945, and three days later when Fat Man devastated Nagasaki and finally brought World War II to an end.

It's pretty much accepted, Johnston said during a recent conversation at his Moscow home, that he is the only person to have seen all three bombings. He was there because he developed the detonator that made them work, the result of two weeks of isolated, intense work in a desert location where, if he failed, he wouldn't blow up anyone else.

But he didn't fail, the bombs went off and more than 200,000 people died. And many more lived.

The invasion was expected to create 1 million casualties. A warehouse on Tinian Island had been prepared with 300,000 coffins.

That risk, 66 years ago, was less important than the result, Johnston says as he looks again into the face of death, although this time after a long life filled with adventure and science and love. The goal was simple: to end a devastating war that was the focus of virtually every person, every part of society at that time.

Morality wasn't an issue, Johnston says.

"Not 'til later when everyone criticized us," adds his wife of 69 years, Millie Johnston.

Scientists knew as they worked that the force of the bomb would be enormous, perhaps beyond anything they could envision. But they also had a purpose. "It made the invasion of Japan unnecessary," Larry Johnston says. "That would have been a very bloody invasion."

At Trinity, they watched the blast from 50 miles away instead of overhead, a last-minute restriction by some suddenly cautious people, he says. He remembers still the brilliant flash, a huge cloud, but no noise and no physical impact, unlike three weeks later over Japan. In less than a minute, the infamous mushroom cloud that would become the symbol of the Atomic Age ballooned upward, passing them as they circled around it.

"At Hiroshima and Nagasaki we were a lot closer and we did feel something of an impact. It felt like somebody hit the side of the airplane with a footlong 2-by-4. Whack!"

Prior to the explosions, there was no discussion of protection from radiation exposure or health risks, he says. "I think there's too much concern about it now. The reason is whoever designed the human body built cells with wonderful repair mechanisms."

Johnston's journey to Moscow began in China in 1918, where he was born to missionary parents. He could have been a missionary instead of a physicist, Johnston says. He believes God steered him the direction he was intended to go.

He was 22 in 1940, with just a bachelor's degree in physics from the University of California at Berkeley. But the war effort was gathering in everyone, and one of his professors was Luis Alvarez, winner of the 1968 Nobel Prize in physics, "really a genius and the smartest man I have ever met."

Life changed for everyone the day the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, but that accelerated for Johnston when J. Robert Oppenheimer, who was in charge of the Manhattan Project that started in 1939, summoned Alvarez to help with a detonation problem. Alvarez asked Johnston to go along. In the ensuing whirlwind of activities, history and his life changed.

They went first to Boston, where he and Alvarez developed the Ground Control Approach Radar System that allowed a plane to land with zero visibility. Alvarez was an enthusiastic amateur pilot, "so this whole laboratory at MIT (Massachusetts Institute of Technology) was built on the basis of suddenly having an electronic unit called a magnetron. And the interesting fact is that microwave ovens are now powered by magnetrons."

But seven decades ago, "it was a secret thing the British let us have and that was how it was invented."

No one then was thinking about how it might be used down the road, he said. "I was just thinking, can we contribute something to this war?"

His bosses saw something else, however — Johnston was an unhappy man. Alvarez sent him back to California to see Millie. "He ordered me, 'bring her back with you,' " Johnston says. They were married in February 1942, then hurried back to Boston where his work waited.

From there, Alvarez and the Johnstons packed up and went to New Mexico to the government town of Los Alamos.

Increasingly as he is asked to speak about those years, Johnston says, people turn to Millie and ask her what it was like then as the world changed around them.

When the war ended, they headed east to visit family. Johnston found himself in demand as a speaker and for newspaper interviews. That long road trip also led him to appreciate modern marvels like tires without inner tubes that still seal well enough to hold air.

They then returned to Stanford where Wolfgang K.H. Panofsky, who had also worked on the Manhattan Project, asked Johnston to take charge of instrumentation on a new mega electron accelerator at the Stanford Linear Accelerator. It was to be 2 miles long with instrumentation every 20 feet.

"But I discovered that Panofsky was a very ambitious guy and he had promised the Atomic Energy Commission he would build the accelerator on time and on budget, which was unheard of for big projects like this."

He finished that project and began working on things that interested him, like a hydrogen cyanide laser that produced radiation in the far infrared of the spectrum, "way below the visible. ... All sorts of new physics could be done with this laser."

He still holds numerous patents, but he found teaching was fun.

It was more than that, Millie says. "He is a born teacher. He taught our kids so much." When the oldest of their four children was a freshman at Berkeley, she was tutoring her boyfriend in physics just from what she learned listening to her father, "because he couldn't help explaining things to everybody."

Sodium Fire Reported at Idaho National Lab Site

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An employee believed to have been burned in a fire caused by a sodium reaction at the Idaho National Laboratory has been released from a hospital, with physicians reporting they found no evidence the cleanup worker was injured.

The U.S. Department of Energy says 10 others were evaluated on scene Friday and released by medical staff. Officials couldn't immediately comment on the size of the fire, but suggested it may have been caused by a sodium reaction.

Laboratory fire crews responded to the Materials and Fuel Complex, where officials say there's no more evidence of a continued reaction or fire. Firefighters and operations personnel have re-entered the building.
