Judge Denies Stay of Execution

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge has refused to postpone the execution of an Idaho inmate slated to be put to death this Friday.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Ronald Bush said in a 43-page ruling Monday he would not grant a stay of execution to Paul Ezra Rhoades.

Rhoades, who was convicted of killing three people and sentenced to death for two of the murders, is scheduled to die by lethal injection Nov. 18.

He is suing the state in federal court, contending that Idaho's execution method can be easily botched and so amounts to cruel and unusual punishment, and he asked Bush to put his execution on hold while the lawsuit works through the courts.

State attorneys countered that Idaho's lethal injection process closely mirrors lethal injection protocol in other states that has already been upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court. The process relies on three drugs administered through IV: first, an anesthetic meant to make the condemned inmate deeply unconscious, followed by a paralytic that will

Background • Paul Ezra Rhoades

- Rhoades was given two death sentences for the sexual assault and murder of Idaho Falls teacher Susan Michelbacher, 34, whose bullet-ridden body was found in March 1987.
- He also was given two death sentences for the first-degree murder and kidnapping of Stacy Dawn Baldwin, 21, a Blackfoot convenience store clerk who was shot to death in February 1987.
- Rhoades was also sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole after pleading guilty to the March 1987 shooting death of Nolan Haddon, 20, a Blackfoot man who worked at an Idaho Falls convenience store.

Twin Falls City to Join Redistricting Lawsuit

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls County officials plan to file a legal challenge of the state's new redistricting plan, and the Twin Falls City Council thinks it's a good idea.

The council, with a 5-0 vote, decided Monday to join the county's pending lawsuit — which county Prosecutor Grant Loebs said he expects to file on Wednesday. Councilmen Will Kezele and Trip Craig were absent from the vote.

At the heart of the issue are questions of whether Twin Falls County and the city have legislative districts that provide fair and constitutional representation. Redistricting, which happens once a decade following each census, redraws legislative districts to reflect population changes.

The new plan, which barring a successful lawsuit will be used for the 2012 primaries, puts the city of Twin Falls into its own legislative district rather than split it in two like the current map.

Rural Twin Falls County is split to the east and west. To the west, it joins Elmore and Owyhee counties. Eastern county residents are paired with Cassia and Power counties.

For the city, it's a shift. Though only four current legislators hail from within the city limits, the city's two districts allow it to bend the ears of six lawmakers total.

"Right now, I can go to six legislators to talk to," said Councilman Lance Clow, adding that the new plan cuts that number down.

BURNED BY BUGS

Tiny pests lay siege to Idaho each winter — hiding in cords of traveling firewood. It's not clear how effective the state is at stopping them.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

Buy local, goes the refrain — your firewood, that is.

As winter kicks into gear, Idaho officials are stepping up their push for people to buy firewood in the area they burn it, to prevent the spread of invasive insects.

The Idaho State Department of Agriculture has conducted similar public awareness campaigns for the past two years. However, due to the restrictions on grant funding the project, agency officials aren't tracking how big the problem has grown or if their campaign is even working. The grant only allows the state to fund outreach measures that will educate the public on why they should buy local firewood.

The campaign started as a response to the threat of invasive species that live in dead forest trees. Insects across the country are being transported to non-infested areas by people moving the wood to their homes. Most of the problem bugs live under a tree's bark and remain unseen while the wood is transported.

If left unchecked, invasive insects carried by firewood can cost local governments $1.7 billion in damage and response costs, according to a report funded by The Nature Conservancy, a national conservation group.

"Most people don't realize that it's a threat to travel in and out of the state with firewood," said Pam Juker, ISDA spokeswoman. "Once they learn, people understand buying it from a local source is critical, they usually do it."

At a Glance The Major Invaders

- Emerald ash borer • This Asian native borer was first discovered in Michigan in 2002. There have only been a handful of cases reported in eastern Idaho. The borer's ability to consume a tree's bark makes it one of the most deadly invasive pests.
- Sirex woodwasp • This insect was only recently classified as a pest to the Northwest in 2006. The woodwasp injects toxic mucus and fungus into a tree's bark, eventually poisoning the tree to death.
- Gypsy moth • This moth can feed on up to 500 different plant species and, unlike many of its cousins, has the ability to fly 40 miles. The moth feeds on foliage and often kills trees after two seasons of completing defoliation during drought periods.

Jolley Left Impact on Peers, Those Whom He Cared For

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

Taenia Hudson has several favorite memories of Dr. Matt Jolley. One that sticks out was his love for Star Wars.

The physician used to slip the movies' references into conversation on a regular basis, giving the rest of the office enough ammo to tease him about, said Hudson, Jolley's former office manager for five years.

Jolley

"His sense of humor was hilarious," she said. "He loved some of the best things. But he had a good love for people too."

Jolley, 42, died Thursday after fighting a long battle with cystic fibrosis. According to friends, family and former colleagues, he leaves a heavy impact on the local community.

Jolley worked at the St. Luke's Physician Center in Twin Falls for 10 years.

That ruling, expected before next summer's Independence Day holiday, could determine the fate of Obama's signature domestic achievement, the most far reaching domestic legislation in a generation but a political lightning rod as well.

T.F. POLICE IDENTIFY CANYON CRASH VICTIM

TIMES-NEWS

Twin Falls police identified Lisa Lawson as the person killed when she drove her truck off the edge of the Snake River Canyon rim on Friday.

Emergency responders were dispatched at about 1 p.m. Friday to a report of a small pickup truck landing on the south side of the canyon along Canyon Springs Road. Lawson, 31, was found dead in the smashed cab of the truck. Investigators determined from debris that Lawson drove the truck through an empty lot just above the Canyon Springs grade, slipping between rebar fence posts, a concrete barrier and a house. Lawson's body was recovered nearly five hours after responders arrived at the scene.

Mayor Don Hall said he's heard both sides of the argument.

"It just seems to me to make sense to support the county," he said.

Clow said that while re-districting is more of a county issue, the city has a stake in the debate. By putting the city's dominant population into one district, the rest of the county ends up being swallowed by larger population centers, he said.

"The challenge is to try to come up with a solution that doesn't split counties as much as they're being split currently," Clow said.

The redistricting lawsuit will be heard by the Idaho Supreme Court.

Xavier Begins Search for New Principal

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

After its principal resigned last month, Xavier Charter School is looking for a new one — and the search is starting within the school building.

Interim administrator Mel Wiseman said the application process opened up Monday to current employees of the Twin Falls school.

"There are some great master teachers here that could step into that position," he said.

Board Chairwoman Debbi Burr said the board will look for internal candidates until Jan. 1; after that, it will advertise externally. If a current school employee is hired as principal, he or she would start in the position as early as next semester.

Wiseman said it's "not necessarily common" to accept applications from internal candidates first. It depends on the school or district and their hiring model.

He said he and co-administrator Kelly Murphy chose to open up the application process first to current employees "because of the uniqueness and dedication of the staff."

The principal position is currently vacant after former principal Everett Bomgardner resigned last month. He was placed on paid administrative leave in September. The school board later recommended he should be fired due to "multiple violations of policies and procedures."

Administrative duties at the 665-student school are being handled on an interim basis by Wiseman and Murphy, independent contractors who are both retired public school superintendents.

The school approved a contract with the consulting firm in October for $6,000 per month, an arrangement Wiseman said is negotiable.

"If they do hire someone and we don't need to come in as much, we're fine with that," he said.

If Xavier employees want to apply for the principal position, the process wouldn't be quite as lengthy as for an outside applicant.

The school already has background information and professional credentials on file for its current employees. Wiseman said that eliminates the need for a background check.

If a current school employee isn't hired, the job will be advertised. Wiseman said February and March are key advertising months for school administrative positions.

Burr said if an external candidate is offered the position, the start date would depend on their availability.

SCHOOLS IN FILER PLAN EDUCATION WEEK EVENTS

TIMES-NEWS

It's American Education Week, and the Filer School District has scheduled events for the occasion.

The annual observance was created 90 years ago by the National Education Association and the American Legion to bring public attention to illiteracy among World War I draftees.

In Filer, several guest speakers are coming in this week and Superintendent John Graham will read stories to students in the lower grades.

At the middle school, Laureen Metzler's eighth-grade exploratory class created PowerPoint presentations for each day that will run continuously in the school foyer.

Presentations cover topics such as the school district's history, how parents can help their students be more successful in school, what a typical day looks like at Filer Middle School, and substitute teachers.

As part of the week, small gifts will also be presented to the board of trustees and teachers.

Grand Jury Indicts Alleged Molester

TIMES-NEWS

The Twin Falls grand jury has indicted 58-year-old Steven Virgil Anderson for alleged child molestation.

Twin Falls County prosecutors had filed three separate criminal complaints against Anderson in the past month. Those cases were dismissed, as the grand jury investigation will take precedence. Its indictment, filed Nov. 2, levies seven felony counts of lewd conduct with a minor under 16, two felony counts of sexual abuse of a minor under 16, and two felony counts of witness intimidation.

Anderson pleaded not guilty to the charges at a Nov. 4 arraignment in Twin Falls County 5th District Court, and a jury trial is set for Feb. 27.

According to court records, one of Anderson's alleged victims, a 10-year-old, told police Anderson said she would be taken from her parents if she told anybody about the alleged illegal contact.

He is accused of forcing himself upon the girl multiple times between summer 2010 and this August while she stayed at Anderson's home.

KIMBERLY MAN SET FOR ASSAULT TRIAL

TIMES-NEWS

A Kimberly man accused of threatening a woman and her son with a knife is scheduled for a January trial.

Michael Dolan, 46, pleaded not guilty to three felony counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon last week in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Dolan allegedly went into a drunken rage and began fighting with a woman, Kandi Erskine, 39, and her 17-year-old son in August.

According to a police report, Dolan was choking Erskine and taunting her to call the police, and pulled a knife on the teenager, saying he would "gut her son up." The mother and son locked themselves in a back room of their home, and Dolan eventually left. He was arrested soon after.

Erskine told police Dolan was drinking and became agitated when he couldn't find his phone.

The two-day trial is slated to start Jan. 27. Dolan bonded out of custody in September.

BURGLARY SUSPECT MISSES HEARING

TIMES-NEWS

One of four suspects accused of calling in a false bomb threat as a burglary diversion failed to appear at his court hearing last week, while another pleaded not guilty to charges on Monday.

Terry Plew Jr. was scheduled for a preliminary hearing in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court on Thursday, but he never showed.

Judge Thomas Kershaw issued a $25,000 bench warrant for the no-show, who was arrested in mid-October.

Plew, 21, of Pocatello, and co-defendants Cassius Reynolds, 23, of Jerome; Angel Estabrook, 18, of Jerome; and Levi Hays, 19, of Twin Falls, allegedly reported a bomb at the Twin Falls Walmart to draw attention away from an attempt to burglarize the Kimberly Road Subway restaurant.

The group allegedly used a pay phone near the sandwich shop, and police located them in the vicinity. They planned to spend the money at a Fort Hall casino.

Plew is charged with felony conspiracy to commit burglary, and was released on his own recognizance. Estabrook is scheduled for a Nov. 21 arraignment in district court for felony conspiracy, as is Reynolds.

Reynolds also faces a charge of making a false report of explosives and carrying a concealed weapon without a license. Hays pleaded not guilty to felony conspiracy, and he is slated for a Jan. 5 trial.

make the inmate unable to draw breath, and finally a drug that will stop the inmate's heart.

The judge said that he agreed that the execution, if done incorrectly, could leave Rhoades in agony as he dies. But he also said the Idaho Department of Correction has done enough to safeguard against that error.

"The Court agrees with the parties that if Rhoades is not rendered sufficiently unconscious from the first drug used in the three-drug lethal injection protocol, then he will certainly suffer excruciating suffocation and pain from the remaining two drugs. The Court also finds, as agreed by the parties, that if properly anesthetized, there will be no risk of pain for Rhoades."

Bush went on to say that

Idaho isn't required to implement a one-drug execution — which essentially overdoses an inmate with an anesthetic — as Rhoades had wanted. The judge said that's because Rhoades didn't make a "more certain showing" that the existing three-drug protocol raises a substantial risk of serious harm.

"The State of Idaho has an interest in seeing that its laws are enforced, and further delay will not meet that interest," Bush wrote.

Rhoades' lawyers said they intend to seek a stay of execution today from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Without such intervention, Bush's ruling appears to clear the way for Rhoades' execution scheduled for Friday at 8 a.m. If the execution happens, it will be Idaho's first in 17 years and the only one in the last half-century to happen without the consent of the condemned inmate.

Currently, Idaho does not restrict people from bringing in wood from other states or counties, Juker said.

And while many Idaho parks and recreation areas have the option to buy local firewood on site, no one tracks who is bringing in outside firewood or using locally cut wood, said Jennifer Blazek, spokeswoman for the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

"Until there is some sort of regulation that says we have to monitor it, we don't," she said.

According to the ISDA website, firewood should be bought as locally as possible or within 50 miles of where it will be burned.

While there is no mandatory regulation on monitoring who is buying local firewood, Jan Wimberley said her personal experience shows the demand is high.

Wimberley, a Buhl resident, sells several cords a year from a stash of wood cut down several years ago on her property. She finds her buyers on Craigslist.

"I always have people calling me," she said. "I've never had a year when someone isn't interested in coming out here and buying from me."

N. Idaho Couple Seeks to Close Land to Hunters

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A northern Idaho couple is asking the state to prohibit hunting on public land near their home, citing concerns that bullets are being fired too close for comfort.

Bart and Pat Templeman recently sent their request in a letter to the Idaho Department of Lands. The Templemans are retired and live a couple hundred yards from nearly 500 acres of state endowment land in Coeur d'Alene. Hunting is allowed on all state endowment land.

"You become a prisoner of your own home during hunting season," Pat Templeman told The Coeur d'Alene Press.

The Templemans said they want the state to prohibit hunting on the property before they or their neighbors are victims of a bad shot.

A couple years ago, Bart Templeman said a bullet struck their barn while he was inside working to insulate the building. And several days ago, his wife said she came across a hunter who had shot a deer on neighboring private property.

Their neighbor, Christy Blazin, said she would also like to see hunters barred from the property near her home.

"We're not against hunting, but we just feel there's plenty of places for people to hunt that are not close to residential neighborhoods," Blazin said.

Another neighbor, Mike Hickie, said he is also concerned but does not want to close off the public land. Hickie, who is a hunter himself, said he would rather see more patrols from the Kootenai County Sheriff's Office and Idaho Department of Fish and Game, he said.

"I'm not really a big advocate of closing off more state lands," he said "That's the property of the citizens of Idaho. They should have access to use it reasonably."

However, the Department of Fish and Game has a dozen officers covering five northern Idaho counties and cannot afford to increase patrols there, said regional conservation officers Craig Walker. Property owners should place signs on their properties to discourage hunting access, he said.

Officials with the state Department of Lands have briefly discussed the concerns raised by the Templemans but no immediate action has been planned for this hunting season, said Roger Jansson, who is operations chief for the agency's northern Idaho offices.

"We do want to research this, see if we can come up with options," Jansson said.

The state would prefer to leave the area open to hunting, he added.

"It is the policy to keep it open," Jansson said.

Idaho Department of Lands area manager Mike Denney lives by the state endowment land and acknowledged that hunting is popular there, though he said he hasn't heard many complaints. Denney said he is aware of other areas where bullets have strayed from state land to private property.

"That's a concern I think is legitimate on any public lands at an open interface with homes close by," he said.

A Fond Farewell for Faithful Friends

Shabby last rites for a favorite pet gives Post Falls man an idea that turns into a thriving business.

BY BRIAN WALKER
Coeur d'Alene Press

POST FALLS • Little did John Gribbon know that the death of Jager, the family's adored yellow lab, would turn into a business.

When the pet of 12 years had to be euthanized after he became deathly ill with cancer, Gribbon's desire to have a dignified farewell turned into a horrible experience.

"When we had him cremated, his remains came back in a cardboard box covered with pink flowered material and he was a big macho dog," Gribbon said. "And his name was spelled wrong."

It wasn't what Gribbon had in mind for the dog that had saved a person's life who had nearly drowned at a beach and was a trained hunting companion.

The situation gave Gribbon the idea to change careers from an industrial account manager at Snap On Tools to start All Pets Cremation Services in Spokane Valley six years ago. Gribbon and his wife Gayle, who live in Post Falls, recently relocated their business to 4195 E. Third Ave. in Post Falls because they needed more space and wanted to work in their hometown.

"I thought it made more sense, especially when having to meet customers in need at odd hours of the night," John said.

In addition to cremation services, customers have the option of purchasing a wood urn that Gribbon custom engraves. The urns, Gribbon said, sets his firm apart from other pet cremation firms in the Northwest. With the urns, Gribbon is able to utilize his background

"It's really limitless as to what you can put on the urns," he said. "They make it really unique for the owner. Some things you see and say, 'I don't get it,' but the family gets it and that's what's important."

Gribbon performs cremation services for all types of animals, including horses, cats, birds and lizards.

"We've even done goldfish, if you can believe it," he said.

Gribbon said his business has grown by about 30 percent each year.

"We have a great relationship with some of the vet clinics and a lot of our business comes from repeat customers or through word of mouth," he said.

Costs vary depending on the pet's weight. For instance, cremation for a cat in which its remains aren't returned is $40 and dogs are in the $55 range. A full service that includes an urn and engraving can vary from $115 for a cat to $240 for a dog.

Award Winning N. Idaho Student Is On a Voyage of Discovery

COEUR D'ALENE • Parker Heisey isn't sitting on the sidelines of life.

The 18-year-old's high school resume is studded with a diverse array of activities. It is rich with awards and honors, both academic and athletic.

The Coeur d'Alene Charter Academy senior hasn't just been going through the motions, joining teams and groups, to pad his college applications.

"In all honesty, I'm still in a process of discovery. I'm still trying to discover what God's mission is for me," Heisey said.

Along the way, he says he's learning many valuable skills and life lessons, lessons he's eager to share with other young people like himself.

It's an attitude that will serve Heisey well, if he follows the career pursuits he's considering. Although he is open to other possibilities that may unfold, Heisey feels called to leadership, possibly in politics.

"One thing I do know is that I'm passionate about people. I'm passionate about connecting with people in a meaningful way, establishing relationships with them and ultimately helping lead them to their goals and their purpose in life," Heisey said.

He hopes to be accepted into a military academy, and is applying to West Point and the U.S. Air Force Academy.

"I just feel that right now I want to serve my country and just learn a little bit more and appreciate what it means to be free," Heisey said.

He sees military service as a necessary step toward leadership of the nation.

Some of the most profound lessons Heisey has learned as a high school student have come through his participation in the national Congressional Award Program, through his volunteer work and participation in speech and debate.

"One thing that I've really realized these last few months is the power behind having a vision for your future, and then creating a plan day by day to accomplish your goals," Heisey said.

vice, Personal Development, Physical Fitness, and Expedition/Exploration. There are no minimum grade point averages required. "In each of these areas you set goals which are attainable for yourself, so it teaches you who you are and what your strengths and weaknesses are," Heisey said.

The list of Heisey's speech and debate accolades is particularly long.

"It's challenged me in so many ways. It's taught me how to think critically about any issue, and it's taught me how to communicate my own opinions and ideas, in an effective way which is meaningful to someone else," Heisey said.

Heisey's volunteer work also stands out.

"That's one thing that I do want to communicate to other students out in the area," Heisey said. "Giving back to your community doesn't have to be something super major. You don't have to make this huge project."

Canyon School Boards Mull Asking Voters to OK Levies

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Declining market values and tax revenue, coupled with maintenance and curriculum needs, may prompt the Nampa and Caldwell school boards to seek special levy elections next March or May.

Nampa's board will consider several specific options for maintenance and curriculum/technology levies at their December meeting. And Caldwell's board also decided Monday night to plan for a supplemental levy, but no specific amount has been set. Caldwell's current supplemental levy is $2.75 million per year.

Nampa District Chief Operations Officer Harmon Hurren said the board could seek a two-year, $1.63 million supplemental curriculum and technology levy and/or a $1.5 million per year, 10-year plant facilities levy.

Bonner County Commissioners Refuse 3% Pay Raise for Employees

SANDPOINT (AP) • Commissioners who govern Bonner County in northern Idaho are following through with their pledge to refuse a 3 percent salary increase given the current budget constraints on local government.

County assessor Jerry Clemons also turned down the cost-of-living wage increase.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports nearly all county employees received a wage increase for the current budget year. But commissioners Cornel Rasor and Mike Nielsen snuffed out plans to boost their $56,000 yearly salaries during budget talks.

Commissioner Lewis Rich said Oct. 18 he would also refuse the 3 percent raise.

Sheriff Daryl Wheeler was among employees who did receive a pay increase. The county boosted Wheeler's salary from $57,000 to $69,000, saying it was necessary because some of his subordinates were being paid more than he was.

OUR VIEW

Now Isn't the Time to Reject Unemployment Benefits

Last week, Roger Madsen, director of the Idaho Department of Labor, encouraged Idaho lawmakers to reject additional unemployment benefit extensions provided by the federal government.

His reasoning: Providing benefits for that long contributes to the national deficit and cripples workers whose skills are dulled by being out of the workforce for so long.

Currently, the state provides up to 26 weeks of unemployment benefits. Federal extensions, which Idaho started receiving in 2008, cover up to 73 additional weeks, for a maximum total of 99 weeks of benefits.

Madsen isn't alone. Gov. Butch Otter has also thrown his support behind him, and Rep. Steven Thayn, R-Emmett, told IdahoReporter.com he thinks unemployment benefits should be capped at six weeks. On Monday, he explained to the Times-News that he knows his suggestion wouldn't get support right now.

"I think what I could get support for is changing eligibility requirements," Thayn said — perhaps taking a harder look at Idaho's rubric that determines how much money people receive per week, and for how long. The state needs to grow the private sector, not force people to rely on government handouts by crippling growth, he said.

We agree that 99 weeks is a long time to receive unemployment benefits, and we would much rather see the unemployed get back to work than living on aid.

But we're concerned that now isn't the right time to end those benefits, especially when Idaho's unemployment levels sit at 9 percent.

There are 68,000 unemployed people in Idaho right now, and an additional 50,000 who are working part time but looking for full-time work, said Bob Fick, communications manager for the Idaho Department of Labor. In October, there were 19,600 help wanted ads listed in Idaho, Fick said. Even if every single one of those open jobs was filled, we would still have 48,400 unemployed Idahoans.

Providing benefits for almost two years is excessive, but unfortunately, there is no way to reject only part of the funds. It's all or nothing, Fick said.

Madsen's suggestion especially smarts right now. Last week, Simplot announced its plan to close two factories and lay off at least 800 employees over the next two years. In Aberdeen, the location of one of those factories, that means the end of the town's only major industry.

It's going to take a lot of time for all of Aberdeen's Simplot workers to find work, or move to a place where they can find jobs. These 800 Simplot employees aren't people who are taking advantage of unemployment benefits, or feeling entitled. They're hardworking Idahoans who have been laid off, and they're about to join the 68,000 unemployed in our state.

Are there those who take advantage of the system? Of course. There always have been.

And if there were more jobs available, we would support Madsen's statement. But we're worried about Idaho's families, and hope to see other options for getting them back to work before removing that safety net.

Phony War on Christmas Distorted into an 'Obama' Tax

The following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Friday, Nov. 11:

Thanksgiving isn't even here yet and already America is enduring the first volleys in the annual faux war on Christmas.

Every year around this time, some conservative group or another invents a controversy to sell the concept that liberals, or government, or some evil eggnog-hating force is out to ruin Christmas.

The early Grinch candidate this year is President Barack Obama.

No, the secret Muslim from Kenya didn't cancel Christmas and replace it with Eid al-Fitr, though out on the farthest right wing of the Republican Party, that meme might sound plausible.

The president's U.S. Department of Agriculture did, however, institute a tax on Christmas trees — or so the conservative Heritage Foundation would have you believe.

The reality is quite a bit different than the headlines that appeared all over the Internet this week after Heritage blogger (and former enabler to Vice President Dick Cheney) David Addington wrote a piece titled: "Obama Couldn't Wait: His New Christmas Tree Tax."

In fact, the so-called "tax" is a self-imposed fee of 15 cents per tree proposed by the very industry that would pay it.

After watching the share of natural Christmas tree sales fall to artificial ones over the past decade, a group of tree farmers petitioned the USDA in 2009 to start the process of approving a promotional board to help the industry sell its goods. The National Christmas Tree Association supported the petition.

Such boards are authorized by a law Congress passed in 1996. Two of the Senate co-sponsors of that law were Missouri Republicans John Ashcroft and Christopher "Kit" Bond.

The law specifically directed the USDA to create new promotion boards for popcorn, kiwi and canola oil. This is the same program that brought us the beef checkoff promotion ("Beef, it's what's for dinner") and the "Got Milk" promotion.

According to National Hog Farmer magazine (we keep our copy next to The Economist), similar programs are authorized for watermelon, sweet corn, olive oil and blueberries.

These programs exist not because of government intervention, but because specific industries wanted to pool their resources to work hand-in-hand with the government to — wait for it — create jobs.

That's not quite the story reverberating in the right-wing echo chamber more fixated on fabricating conspiracy theories to discredit Mr. Obama than seeking the truth. That's why Rich Dungey, who does public relations for the tree association, is inundated with calls and emails this week wondering why he's the Grinch who taxed Christmas.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

U.S. Can't Afford to Turn Against Israel

Some people may not have understood the political cartoon in Thursday's newspaper (Nov. 10), as no story was printed telling what was going on and most news reporters were kept quiet about the situation.

The leader of France and Mr. Obama were talking. They were caught with their microphones open and slamming Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel. That's no surprise, people, as France was part of the Holocaust during World War II. Read history. However, what does our present government have against Israel? Does this show that Mr. Obama's back is turned and/or turning against Israel?

Perhaps people who profess to believe in God should read Genesis 12:1-3 in the Holy Bible. In short, God told Abram he would make of him a great nation and bless him. Is the Bible translated correctly? In my opinion, yes, it is. Belief in God is based on faith and trust.

The Jewish people are God's chosen, no matter that they did anger him. Let the punishment be God's and know that he is in control, not us. There are those of you who seem to hate the Jewish people because Jesus was crucified. Just a note to say that it was the Romans who used crucifixion as a way of death and stoning was the way the Jewish people carried out the death sentence. I will give you that a few Jewish people turned Jesus in, but you do not need to blame all of them.

Can the United States afford to turn against Israel? I don't think so. We have been blessed. Let us not lose that blessing.

If you are living like there is no God, you better hope you are right.

Online Classes Unfair to Families With No Computers

My daughter is an eighth-grader at O'Leary Middle School and is required to take a science class online through the Idaho Learning Academy. I have serious concerns about this as she is a great student that has never had a problem in science until this year.

It is my opinion that students at this level should not be taking this class online.

They are 13-year-old kids who need hands-on experience in a class such as this. I have spoken to other parents with eighth-graders as well and all have seen their students' grades slip in this class.

Education is supposed to be equal for all students. This class is a disadvantage for families out there that simply cannot afford computers for their house, the cost of the Internet or the software required for the class. Without these things, how are the students supposed to study or complete homework in a timely fashion without relying on school hours that a traditional teacher and textbook allow them to?

Drunken Drivers Better Watch Out

This is to all of the drunk drivers. It's gotten way out of hand.

I'm a professional truck driver and I want to go home to my wife every night after work. I think that for a first offense, the offender should get one year in prison and lose their license for five years. Second offense, five years in prison and lose their license for life. I know it's harsh, but we as a society have to say enough is enough.

Too many innocent people are getting killed due to drunk drivers. There are way too many drunk drivers getting a slap on the wrist, so they think it's OK to do this.

I'm telling all of you drunk drivers that it is not OK, and if I see you on the road and I think you're drunk, I will be on the phone with 911, and if you think I'm joking, try me.

Naked Man Gets Tangled in Barbed Wire

BOISE • Police say a man caught running naked through a Boise park became entangled in a barbed wire fence while trying to flee officers.

The Boise Police Department says 23-year-old Grant Gardner was arrested early Saturday. He remained jailed early Monday on a felony charge of battery on an officer, along with misdemeanor counts of public nudity, public intoxication and resisting and obstructing.

Police say officers first spotted Gardner at about 5 a.m. when he streaked past a squad car. Gardner initially obeyed commands to stop and sit down, authorities said, but then he fled and tried to climb a fence topped with barbed wire.

Police assisted Gardner down from the fence, where he had become entangled, and say he then punched an officer in the face.

Man Denies Tying Up Child

SANDPOINT • A Laclede man charged with hog-tying a 12-year-old boy with Asperger syndrome has denied a felony charge.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports 37-year-old Shane Lee Crawford pleaded not guilty on Nov. 7 to felony injury to a child.

Crawford's defense attorney said the incident was videotaped to document the man's interaction with the boy because the child was prone to exaggerating and he wanted help in dealing with the boy's Asperger-related outbursts. Asperger syndrome is a mild form of autism.

The footage was turned over to a counselor, who forwarded it to the authorities.

850 Gallons of Gas Spill in Tanker Crash

LOWELL • A weekend fuel tanker crash along the Lochsa River in northern Idaho spilled about 850 gallons of gasoline, but none is believed to have reached the water.

The tanker driven by Marco Williamson of Florence, Mont., failed to negotiate a curve and crashed about 8 a.m. Saturday on U.S. Highway 12 about 29 miles east of Lowell.

Lewiston Fire Department engineer and paramedic Mike Schmidt tells the Lewiston Tribune the tanker was carrying diesel fuel and gasoline, but only the gasoline tanker was breached.

About 2,000 gallons of diesel was recovered along with half of the estimated 1,700 gallons of gasoline.

2 UI Students Killed in Crash

MOSCOW • Idaho State Police say a one-vehicle crash east of Moscow this weekend killed two University of Idaho freshmen and injured four others.

The ISP identified the victims of the crash as 17-year-old Wyatt T. Smith of St. Anthony and 18-year-old Benson J. Sternberg of New Plymouth.

Officials say Smith was driving a pickup truck southbound near Troy when he lost control of the vehicle at 3:45 a.m. Saturday. The pickup hit an embankment and rolled once.

Barker: Residents of Little Ol' Kooskia Stick It to ExxonMobil

BY ROCKY BARKER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • The decision by Imperial Oil to seek a new route for its three-story-high shipments is a victory for Kooskia residents Linwood Laughy, his wife, Borg Hendrickson, and Peter Grubb of the River Dance Lodge in Syringa.

These Idahoans took on the state and one of the biggest corporations and won. Imperial, an Exxon-Mobil subsidiary, is spending an additional $72 million to break down 145 of the Korean-built modules to ship them on alternative routes.

The lawsuits the three brought, along with Idaho Rivers United and other environmental groups, became a cause celebre against the tar sands oil fields, where the modules were headed in Alberta.

Their fight to keep their highway open for emergency vehicles, anglers and floaters became a part of the larger fight to block approval for the Keystone XL Pipeline from the tar sands region to the Gulf.

The administration delayed the pipeline decision Thursday after thousands turned out to circle the White House in opposition.

Idaho's other interests in the shipments — the future of the Port of Lewiston and the ability of other shippers to move smaller and fewer larger loads on the state's highways — has been lost in the specific fight to protect the Wild and Scenic River corridor on U.S. 12, which snakes up the Clearwater River past Orofino and into Montana.

The state's industry lobbyists got fully behind the effort to permit the loads at all costs, even though there was little economic benefit for Idaho.

The oil industry has shown it will pay whatever it takes as long as it is profitable to drill, ship and deliver its products.

Imperial was told the shipments through the Port of Lewiston would not be a problem if a few power lines were moved, a few trees trimmed, and it paid for extra state police patrols.

In the end, Imperial is paying $500,000 per module to break them down here so they can use another route.

One could argue that more jobs were created in Idaho by the environmental law firm Advocates for the West forcing the alternative routes than by all the state and industry lobbying combined.

What didn't happen was a complete public process before Imperial was told it would be able to make the shipments. It had already begun shipping the modules to Lewiston in 2010, before any official approval, based on assurances from Gov. Butch Otter's administration.

Would Imperial be better off now had the public process come before the shipments arrived in Lewiston? We'll never know.

Idaho, Montana Commercial Real Estate Firms Merge

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Idaho Commercial Group, Hume Commercial and TSC Management, all in Idaho, and Grubb & Ellis Catalyst of Idaho and Montana, have combined to serve southern Idaho.

The new firm, Grubb & Ellis Catalyst, is an independently owned affiliate of Grubb & Ellis, a global commercial real estate and investment company. The Catalyst office at 398 S. 9th St., Suite 260, in Boise will have 12 licensed agents.

"We have decided to merge our firms because we share a common vision and commitment to offering the highest levels of service, professionalism and expertise," said LeAnn Hume, a partner at Catalyst and former designated broker at Hume Commercial. "My new colleagues at Catalyst are some of the most passionate and experienced professionals in the business, and we are excited to come together to put our clients' needs first and offer them a high level of both local and national commercial real estate services."

The affiliation will give Catalyst's local clients access to properties, services and detailed market information worldwide, the company said. It also will allow local clients to conduct business worldwide while using their local Catalyst broker as a single point of contact. Catalyst will offer expanded real-estate services such as tenant and landlord leasing representation, as well as asset and property management.

State Rep. Higgins to Retire

BOISE (AP) • Democratic State Rep. Elfreda Higgins says she doesn't plan to seek another term in the Idaho House, where she is assistant minority leader.

The Spokesman Review reports newly drawn political boundaries would have pitted Higgins against other incumbent lawmakers. But Higgins says Idaho's 2011 redistricting maps didn't weigh into her decision to retire.

The 66-year-old state lawmaker from Garden City says she has worked since she was 18 and wants to spend more time with family and friends.

At least two other lawmakers plan to retire from the Idaho Legislature following the 2012 session. Republican Sen. Joyce Broadsword of Sagle has announced she won't run again, and GOP Rep. Marge Chadderon of Coeur d'Alene says she doesn't plan to seek a 5th term.

Scientists Report on Yellowstone Vital Signs

REXBURG STANDARD-JOURNAL

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. • The Yellowstone Center for Resources has published its 2011 "Natural Resource Vital Signs" report, which helps park managers and scientists gain insight into park resources.

The report aims at fostering understanding of the status of important ecological health indicators.

Among the health indicators studied, a number of highlights have emerged, according to the report:

- Earthquakes: More than 3,000 earthquakes were detected in the park in 2010, including a swarm of 2,400 quakes northwest of Old Faithful near the beginning of the year, the largest concentration since 1985.

- Grizzly bears: Bear populations reached 602 in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem in 2010, the largest number since the recovery program began in 1975. About 150 of the bears are in the park.

- Bison: Efforts have been made by Montana in coordination with the Interagency Bison Management partners to expand winter grazing areas north of the park. The park bison population now numbers around 3,700, down slightly from 2010.

- Invasive species: Since 1994 more than 550,000 invasive lake trout have been removed from Yellowstone Lake to help revive the population of native Yellowstone cutthroat trout. But the lake trout numbers continue to climb, according to surveys.

- Wolves: Yellowstone's wolf population was about 100, but wolf numbers in the Greater Yellowstone Area have increased.

Park and other scientists reported on data from more than 24 natural resource indicators to study the influences both inside and outside of the park that affect Yellowstone's overall ecological and environmental stability.

These indicators include wildland fire as well as environmental quality, native species and stress producers such as wildlife disease and nonnative species. The report helps guide resource management decisions and supports ongoing and future research needs. The first study was conducted and published in 2008.

Over the next year, the Yellowstone Center for Resources and its research partners will re-examine the vital signs with a special emphasis on including cultural resource indicators.

Foster Homes, Supplies Needed for 59 Animals Seized in Raid

BY KATY MOELLER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Police seized 59 animals from a feces-covered trailer home in the 300 block of Cherry Lane in Meridian on Friday, and now animal welfare advocates are asking for the public's help in caring for animals.

The name of the 39-year-old woman who was housing the animals has not been released because she has not been charged with a crime, according to Meridian Police Deputy Chief Tracy Basterrechea. The investigation has been forwarded to the Ada County prosecutor, who will determine if the woman is charged with animal cruelty.

The animals that were seized included 27 cats. The remaining 32 animals included rats, chinchillas, a rabbit and squirrel.

Basterrechea said police became aware that a large number of animals were living in the house when someone tried to contact the woman who lives there and noticed a foul odor. Police were notified, and they immediately identified a strong odor of feces.

"The officer described it as overwhelming," Basterrechea said.

They looked through a window and saw a large number of animals in the house.

The woman who lives at the house wasn't home at the time police were there, but they were able to contact her by phone. Basterrechea said the woman was cooperative with police.

"She understood why we were there, why we were taking the animals," he said.

Volunteers with two different animal welfare groups stepped in to house and care the animals that were seized. Simply Cats has all 27 of the cats.

"We actually weren't taking cats. We moved some animals around so we could house these temporarily," said Patty Cutler, executive director of Simply Cats Adoption Center. "We just tried to help out because they needed somewhere for these cats to go."

Cutler said some of the cats were living in cages, while others were in kitchen cupboards, or loose in the house. The cats are being treated for fleas, ear mites, and upper-respiratory problems.

"It was a very, very sad situation," she said. She believes they were underfed and possibly dehydrated because they ate every morsel and lapped up all the water given to them at the shelter.

She said a veterinarian will look at the animals, and they may be available to go to foster homes as soon as Wednesday. If you are interested in helping foster one or more of the cats, call 343-7177 or email info@simply-cats.org

The other animals were taken into the care of volunteers with the Meridian Valley Humane Society.

"It appears as though there was no veterinary care for the animals. That is our biggest need right now," said Caroline Pavlinik, vice president of the Meridian Valley Humane Society. An account has been established with Wells Fargo under Pet Hoarding Donation Account/Meridian Valley Humane Society.

The group also needs food and supplies for these animals: cockatoos, parrots, love birds, chinchillas, hamsters, a rabbit, and a squirrel. Have extra shoeboxes? They need those too.

If you would like to help the Meridian Valley Humane Society, call 794-0944, or email meridiananimalshelter@hotmail.com.

High Court Health Care Showdown Set for Spring

The court's ruling could be its most significant and political decision since George W. Bush's 2000 presidential election victory.

BY JESSE J. HOLLAND and MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court on Monday promised an extraordinarily thorough springtime review of President Barack Obama's historic health care overhaul — more than five hours of argument, unprecedented in modern times — in time for a likely ruling affecting millions of Americans just before the presidential election.

That ruling, expected before next summer's Independence Day holiday, could determine the fate of Obama's signature domestic achievement, the most far reaching domestic legislation in a generation but a political lightning rod as well. It is vigorously opposed by all of Obama's prospective GOP opponents.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act aims to provide health insurance to more than 30 million previously uninsured Americans. But Republicans have branded the law unconstitutional since before Obama signed it in a ceremony in March 2010.

The court's ruling could be its most significant and political decision since George W. Bush's 2000 presidential election victory. But the justices left themselves an opening to defer the outcome if they choose, by requesting arguments on one lower court's ruling that a decision must wait until 2015, when one of the law's many provisions takes effect.

Legal experts have offered a range of opinions about what the high court might do. Many prominent Supreme Court lawyers believe the law will be upheld by a lopsided vote, with Republican and Democratic appointees ruling in its favor. But others predict a close outcome, with Justice Anthony Kennedy, a Republican appointee who sometimes joins his four colleagues appointed by Democratic presidents, holding the deciding vote on the nine-member court.

The White House has pushed for a final ruling as soon as possible, and Communications Director Dan Pfeiffer said the administration was pleased the justices agreed to take the case now, with arguments in March. "It's important that we put to rest once and for all the issue of maybe the law will disappear," said Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius.

Republicans also said they were happy the high court would hear arguments on the constitutionality of the provision at the heart of the law

Jordan's King Suggests Assad Step Down.
Pressure mounted on Syrian President Bashar al-Assad Monday after the Jordanian king suggested he step down ahead of a crucial Arab meeting in Morocco on Wednesday aimed at exploring specific measures to sanction Syria for its ongoing crackdown against protesters. Jordan's King Abdullah offered the most explicit condemnation yet of Assad by an Arab leader in a BBC interview.

Man Delays Iraq Lawn-chair Balloon Flight.
Oregon's "lawn-chair balloonist" has put off his flight in Iraq until next year. Kent Couch had planned a flight Tuesday in Baghdad along with Iraqi daredevil Fareed Lafta in a lawn chair supported by helium-filled party balloons, but a statement Monday from spokesman Mark Knowles says the two have delayed the flight until March to accommodate groups that want to use it to raise awareness of the plight of Iraqi orphans.

Giffords: No Return to Congress Until 'Better'

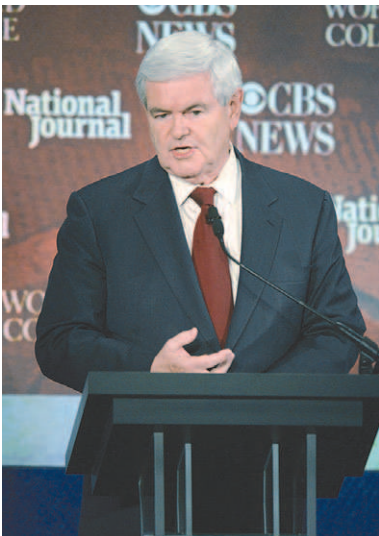

WASHINGTON (AP) • Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, who was shot in the head by a gunman in January, said Monday she will not return to Congress until she is "better."

In an interview on ABC's "20/20" program, Giffords struggled to form sentences throughout the interview and replied, "No. ... Better" when asked if she wanted to return to Congress.

She moved her hands in front of her mouth as if needing to form the words and said, "Better, better." Her husband, former astronaut Mark Kelly, completed the thought for her, saying, "She wants to get better."

There has been wide speculation about Giffords' career plans, including whether she would run for Arizona's open Senate seat.

Gingrich in Iowa: GOP Is Taking Second Look

JEFFERSON, Iowa • Newt Gingrich was about to take the podium at a meet-and-greet here Monday when he was introduced as a top contender for the GOP nomination. "It's the first time anybody, anywhere has introduced me as the leading candidate, which is kind of neat," said a clearly pleased Gingrich. The former House speaker from the 1990s was once an afterthought in the 2012 presidential race. Now he is the latest candidate to rise in the polls as some Republicans cast about for an alternative to Mitt Romney: A new CNN poll showed Gingrich statistically tied with Romney for the lead in the GOP race. It's no surprise to Gingrich, who never expressed a doubt that his intellect and policy proposals would swing voters his way. "I have more substance than any other candidate in modern history," he said recently.

House GOP Leader Cantor Says Deficit Deal Likely

Two Republican presidential hopefuls say they will not support any deficit-reduction plan by Congress' supercommittee that includes higher taxes.

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Sidestepping controversy, House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., declined to take sides Monday on a proposal for higher tax revenues backed by fellow Republicans on Congress' supercommittee, yet expressed confidence the panel would agree on a deficit-reduction plan of at least $1.2 trillion by a Nov. 23 deadline.

A proposal for $300 billion in higher taxes has stirred grumbling within the ranks of congressional Republicans, for whom opposition to such measures has been political bedrock for more than two decades.

Two of the party's presidential hopefuls said Monday they wouldn't support any committee deficit-reduction plan that includes higher taxes.

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, campaigning in Iowa, said he would "do everything in my power to defeat" any such proposal.

A spokesman for Rick Perry said the Texas governor "wants to look at details but if those details include a tax increase he's not going to be for it. He does not favor higher taxes," added David Miner.

Additionally, officials said that Sen. Pat Toomey, R-Pa., who outlined the plan last week in a closed-door meeting of four Republicans and three Democrats, has encountered criticism from fellow conservatives despite strong credentials as an opponent of higher taxes. "There's been a little bit, but it's been pretty muted," his spokeswoman, Nachama Soloveichik, said of the response.

Cantor's spokeswoman turned aside several emailed requests for the majority leader's views on the proposal. She said he hadn't seen the plan, and she referred to his comments at a news conference earlier in the day when he told reporters, "I'm not going to be opining as to any reports, hypotheticals or anything connected with their work."

Despite that pledge, Cantor was bullish in predicting agreement before the deadline and adding that a fallback requirement to cut $1.2 trillion from domestic and defense programs wouldn't be triggered.

Oakland Raid Is Latest in Occupy Camp Crackdowns

BY TERRY COLLINS
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. • Police in riot gear and armed with tear gas cleared out Oakland's anti-Wall Street encampment early Monday, the latest law enforcement crackdown amid complaints around the country of health and safety hazards at protest camps.

The raid at the Occupy Oakland camp, one of the largest and most active sites in the movement, came a day after police in Portland, Ore., arrested more than 50 people while shutting down its camp amid complaints of drug use and sanitation issues.

Police in Burlington, Vt., also evicted protesters after a man fatally shot himself last week inside a tent.

Police staged a previous raid on the Oakland encampment Oct. 25, but Mayor Jean Quan allowed protesters to re-establish their tent city. On Monday, however, Quan said officials could no longer ignore the problems the camp posed.

"We came to this point because Occupy Oakland, I think, began to take a

Ex-boyfriend of Cain Accuser Claims They All Met in '90s

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHREVEPORT, La. • Sharon Bialek's former boyfriend said Monday the then-couple spent an evening with Herman Cain in the 1990s. That countered the GOP presidential candidate's earlier statements that he never met the woman who has accused him of inappropriate sexual behavior more than a decade ago.

"Sharon indeed did meet and spend time with Mr. Cain," Victor Jay Zuckerman said.

In turn, Cain repeated his assertion that he had never met his accuser.

"I'm standing by what I have said," Cain said in Green Bay, Wis.

Hours after Zuckerman stepped forward to give his account, Cain's wife — Gloria — was defending her husband in a television interview as turmoil over allegations of sexual impropriety while he led the National Restaurant Association stretched into a third week.

and three other questions about the act. The central provision in question is the requirement that individuals buy health insurance starting in 2014 or pay a penalty.

“That the Supreme Court is taking this up, I think, is a positive signal that there are legitimate concerns surrounding the constitutional aspects of mandating that individuals purchase health care insurance and purchase it according to Washington’s guidelines,” said House Majority Leader Eric Cantor of Virginia.

The exceptional five and a half hours allotted for argument demonstrates the significance the justices see in this case. Normally, they allow only one hour, split between two sides. In the modern era, the last time the court increased that time anywhere near this much was in 2003 for consideration of the McCain-Feingold campaign finance overhaul. That case consumed four hours of argument.

This argument may even spread over two days, as the justices rarely hear more than two or three hours a day.

The health care overhaul would achieve its huge expansion of coverage by requiring individuals to buy health insurance starting in 2014, by expanding Medicaid and by applying other provisions, many yet to take effect.

The central question before the court is whether the government has the power to force people to buy health insurance. The White House says Congress used a “quintessential” power — its constitutional ability to regulate interstate commerce, including the health care industry — when it passed the overhaul.

But opponents of the law, and the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, say that Congress overstepped its authority when lawmakers passed individual mandate. A divided Atlanta court panel ruled that Congress cannot require people to “enter into contracts with private insurance companies for the purchase of an expensive product from the time they are born until the time they die.”

The Atlanta court is the only one of four appellate courts that found the mandate unconstitutional. The federal appeals court in Cincinnati upheld the entire law, as did appellate judges in Washington, D.C., in recent days. The appellate court in Richmond, Va., ruled a judicial decision on the law cannot be rendered until 2015, after the penalties for not having insurance have gone into effect.

Supporters have been encouraged that the appellate rulings in Cincinnati and Washington to uphold the law were joined by two prominent conservative judges appointed by Republican presidents: Jeffrey Sutton, appointed by George W. Bush, and Laurence Silberman, appointed by Ronald Reagan.

In Atlanta, however, Frank Hull, appointed by President Bill Clinton, joined with a Republican colleague in striking down the mandate.

Earlier District Court rulings followed political affiliation: Judges appointed by Democratic presidents upheld the law, while Republican appointees struck it down.

NBC Hires Chelsea Clinton as Correspondent

BY DAVID BAUDER
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Chelsea Clinton began work at NBC News on Monday, the second daughter of a former president at the network.

NBC said it had hired the 31-year-old Clinton to work on projects for “NBC Nightly News” and Brian Williams’ newsmagazine, “Rock Center.” She will report stories for the feel-good “Making a Difference” series.

The only child of former President Bill Clinton and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton is pursuing a doctorate at Oxford and working for the Clinton Foundation and Clinton Global Initiative.

Former President George W. Bush’s daughter Jenna Bush Hager does stories for the “Today” show.

NBC said Chelsea Clinton wasn’t available for an interview, but issued a statement: “People who imagine and implement solutions to challenges in their own lives, in their communities, in our country and in our world have always inspired me.”

Cain

Cain, trying to get back to a business-as-usual campaign schedule, gave an interview to the editorial board of the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel but stumbled through a question on Libya. The video ricocheted around the Internet.

After saying he did not agree with President Barack Obama’s handling of the revolt against longtime Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi, Cain said he would have taken similar steps to Obama. But he hesitated before answering.

“I got to go back, see, got all this stuff twirling around in my head,” Cain said, shifting in his chair and crossing his legs during a 10-second silence.

Asked later about the moment, Cain dismissed it and told reporters: “I paused so I could gather my thoughts.” An aide later said Cain hadn’t had enough sleep.

It was another distraction for the candidate just as he was looking to get beyond questions about his behavior while he led the restaurant association more than a decade ago. The allegations have dogged his campaign for the GOP nomination and sent his poll numbers slipping seven weeks before the leadoff caucuses in Iowa.

Cain has denied wrongdoing and vowed to stay in the presidential race.

Even so, he has been unable to put the controversy behind him.

Zuckerman, a Louisiana pediatrician, corroborated some of Bialek’s story — with attorney Gloria Allred at his side — just as the firestorm around Cain seemed to be subsiding since the first disclosures on Oct. 30 rocked Cain’s campaign. There hadn’t been any new information disclosed in the past week about Cain or the accusations, and plans for a joint news conference by his accusers seemed increasingly unlikely.

A week ago, Cain said he didn’t remember Bialek and had never seen her until she went public with allegations that Cain groped her when she sought his help getting a job after the trade group he led had fired her.

“I saw Ms. Allred and her client yesterday in that news conference for the very first time,” Cain said after that event. “As I sat in my hotel room with a couple of my staff members, as they got to the microphone, my first response in my mind and reaction was, I don’t even know who this woman is. Secondly, I didn’t recognize the name at all.”

Later, Cain added: “I don’t even know who this woman is. I tried to remember if I recognized her and I didn’t.”

But, on Monday, Zuckerman echoed Bialek’s account of the two of them meeting Cain — and spending the evening with him — in Chicago in 1997 at the National Restaurant Association convention. He said that Cain then invited them to an after-dinner party in a hotel suite.

“At that party, Mr. Cain engaged both of us in conversation,” Zuckerman said.

Later that year, Zuckerman said, Bialek told him that Cain inappropriately touched her when, at Zuckerman’s suggestion, she met him in Washington to seek employment help.

“When she returned, she was upset,” Zuckerman said. “She said that something had happened and that Mr. Cain had touched her in an inappropriate manner. She said she handled it and didn’t want to talk about it any further.”

On Monday, Cain’s team pointed to his earlier statement that he does not remember Bialek.

different path than the original movement,” Quan said. “The encampment became a place where we had repeated violence and last week a murder. We had to bring the camp to an end before more people got hurt.”

Demands increased for Oakland protesters to pack up after a man was shot and killed Thursday near the encampment at the City Hall plaza.

Protesters claimed there was no connection between the shooting and the camp. But police identified the slain man as Kayode Ola Foster, 25, of Oakland, saying his family confirmed he had been staying at the plaza.

Witnesses also told police that one of two suspects in the shooting had also been a frequent resident at the plaza. The names of the suspects have not been released.

Monday’s raid came as no surprise to protesters after the city issued its fourth order to abandon the camp. About 300 officers from the Oakland Police Department and seven other law enforcement agencies moved in around 5:30 a.m., arresting 33 people and tearing down about 150 tents.

Another man was arrested later in the morning for trying to break through police barricades and spitting on officers.

Protesters vowed to regroup and return.

“I don’t see how they’re going to disperse us,” said Ohad Meyer, 30, of Oakland. “There are thousands of people who are going to come back.”

Officials declared the operation a success, saying all arrests were peaceful and there were no reported injuries to protesters or officers. Police said those taken into custody likely will face charges of unlawful assembly and lodging.

“This had been a very difficult situation,” Quan said. “I’d tried to do what was right for the city and keep the most people safe at every step.”

STUDY: MANY PATIENTS SHUN FREE HEART DRUGS

BY MARILYNN MARCHIONE
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. • Give people free prescription drugs and many of them still won't bother to take their medicine.

Doctors were stunned to see that involving in a major study involving heart attack survivors. The patients were offered well-established drugs to prevent a recurrence of heart trouble, including cholesterol-lowering statins and medicines that slow the heart and help it pump more effectively.

"My God, we gave these people the medicines for free and only half took it," said one of the study's authors, Dr. Elliott Antman of Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

In fact, the researchers couldn't even give the stuff away: They had trouble just signing up patients to take part in the study.

Nevertheless, Aetna, the insurance company that footed the bill, thinks this approach will save money in the long run and plans to start offering certain heart drugs free to some patients. In the study, patients offered medicines at no cost suffered fewer heart problems and saved $500 on average over roughly a year.

It is no secret many Americans don't follow their doctors' instructions. In one survey, one-third said they didn't fill a prescription or used less medicine than they should because of cost. The researchers in this study wanted to see what would happen if they took cost out of the equation.

The results were disheartening.

"Adherence in America is miserable," lamented Dr. Eric Peterson of Duke University, who had no role in the study. He noted that only 10 percent of the patients were taking all the medicines they should one year after a heart attack.

The study was led by Dr. Niteesh Choudhry of Brigham and Women's, who presented the findings Monday at an American Heart Association conference in Florida. They also were published online by The New England Journal of Medicine.

The study did not examine why people didn't take their medications. But doctors know that some forget. Most of these drugs mean three pills a day or more, for the rest of a patient's life. Also, some of these medicines carry side effects such as fatigue, lightheadedness, muscle pains, cough, even sexual difficulties for men.

Still, heart attack survivors like Joan Ferraro, 53, of Freehold, N.J., said they can't imagine not taking prescribed medicines, though she sometimes forgets her pills over a weekend.

"Why would you want to go through something like that again? It was the most horrific experience of my life. I would never want another one," she said.

The study enrolled 5,855 Aetna members who had a drug plan as part of their benefits and were going home from the hospital after a heart attack. They were 53 years old on average, and three-fourths were men.

The researchers had hoped to recruit 7,500 patients but scaled back when so few signed on.

Pro Skier Dies in Utah Avalanche

In the season's first avalanche fatality, Jamie Pierre is swept over a cliff while snowboarding one of Snowbird Ski Resort's steepest slopes.

BY PAUL FOY
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A world record-holding professional skier who once famously jumped off a 255-foot cliff jump died in a weekend avalanche in Utah while on a steep slope at a closed resort.

Jamie Pierre, 38, was swept over a cliff Sunday at Snowbird Ski and Summer Resort in the Wasatch mountains about 30 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

Pierre was snowboarding one of Snowbird's steepest slopes with a friend when he was sent cartwheeling over a cliff after he triggered the late afternoon slide, the Utah Avalanche Center reported.

It was the season's first avalanche fatality in the U.S., authorities said.

Pierre's sister, Naomi Pierre, 33, of Minnetonka, Minn., said her brother was a deeply devout Christian who prayed before every jump or run down a dangerous slope.

"He absolutely loved the Lord. That was his purpose and mission in life, and his skiing was all about honoring God. He was incredibly passionate about getting that word out to youth," Naomi Pierre said Monday. "So he did that through jumping off cliffs and skiing down dangerous chutes."

"He always asked the Lord first if it was OK to go," she added. "He was a wonderful person."

More than a foot of fluffy snow had fallen in the mountains over the weekend where snow was already waist-deep, creating what authorities said were dangerous avalanche conditions.

"Early season is our most dangerous time of year — just the opposite of what most people think," Bruce Tremper, director of the Utah Avalanche Center, said Monday. "It's not anything you want to mess with."

Snowbird doesn't open for skiing until Saturday and hasn't cleared the mountain of danger. The resort had signs warning against skiing, and Pierre and his ski partner shouldn't have been on the slopes, Unified Police Lt. Justin Hoyal said.

"They're trespassing, technically, and it's very dangerous," Hoyal said Monday.

Pierre set off from nearby Alta Ski Area and made his way to neighboring Snowbird over a series of ridges. The two apparently avoided injury in one slide earlier in the day, officials said.

"With the partner watching, the victim dropped into the slope, immediately triggering the slide," the Utah Avalanche Center said in a preliminary report posted on its website. "He was carried hundreds of feet through steep rocky terrain and reportedly went over a small cliff band and came to a stop only partially buried."

Early season in Utah always brings skiers who can't wait to hit the slopes. And because many of Utah's ski areas sit on national forest land, they can't legally keep people from venturing out even before they open. However, the Forest Service allows Snowbird to keep skiers off its slope for a week before opening while it prepares the mountain.

Still, few skiers are ticketed or thrown off the slopes, Hoyal said.

Police wouldn't immediately release the name of Pierre's ski partner.

Pierre appeared in numerous ski films and had a legion of sponsors. He was best Pierre landed on his head in 12 feet of soft snow but escaped injury and promptly vowed he'd never try that again. He also had many other notable cliff jumps, including a 165-foot jump off Alta's signature Wolverine Cirque.

Surgeons to Try Deep-chilling Trauma Patients to Save Them

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Suspend animation may not be just for sci-fi movies anymore: Trauma surgeons soon will try plunging some critically injured people into a deep chill — cooling their body temperatures as low as 50 degrees — in hopes of saving their lives.

Many trauma patients have injuries that should be fixable but they bleed to death before doctors can patch them up. The new theory: Putting them into extreme hypothermia just might allow them to survive without brain damage for about an hour so surgeons can do their work.

In a high-stakes experiment funded by the Defense Department, the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center is preparing to test that strategy on a handful of trauma victims who are bleeding so badly from gunshots, stab wounds or similar injuries that their hearts stop beating. Today when that happens, a mere 7 percent of patients survive.

Get cold enough and "you do OK with no blood for a while," says lead researcher Dr. Samuel Tisherman, a University of Pittsburgh critical care specialist. "We think we can buy time. We think it's better than anything else we have at the moment, and could have a significant impact in saving a bunch of patients."

Tisherman calls the rescue attempt "emergency preservation and resuscitation," EPR instead of CPR. His team plans to begin testing it early next year in Pittsburgh and then expanding the study to the University of Maryland in Baltimore.

If the dramatic approach works, it will spur some rethinking about that line between life and death, says Dr. Arthur Caplan, a University of Pennsylvania bioethicist who is watching the research.

But before the first candidates get chilled, the scientists face a hurdle: The law requires that patients consent to be part of medical experiments after they're told the pros and cons. That's impossible when the person is bleeding to death. There won't even be time to seek a relative's permission.

So starting Tuesday, the Pittsburgh team is beginning a campaign required by the Food and Drug Administration to educate area residents about the study instead — with signs on city buses, video on YouTube, a web site and two town-hall meetings next month. Residents worried about possible risks, such as brain damage, could sign a list saying they'd opt out if they ever were severely injured.

Go even a few minutes without oxygen and the brain in particular can suffer significant damage. Doctors have long sought to use hypothermia in medicine since discovering that cooling can slow the metabolism of the brain and other organs, meaning they can go without oxygen for longer periods. Donated organs are chilled to preserve them, for example. And people whose hearts are shocked back into beating after what's called cardiac arrest often are iced down to about 90 or 91 degrees, mild hypothermia that allows the brain to recover from damage that began in those moments between their collapse and revival.

But the CPR that buys time during more routine cardiac arrest doesn't help trauma patients who've already lost massive amounts of blood. Injuries are the nation's fifth-leading killer, and hemorrhage is one of the main reasons, says Dr. Hasan Alam of Massachusetts General Hospital, who is collaborating with the Pitt study.

Enter deep hypothermia, dropping body temperature to around 50 degrees. It has worked in dogs and pigs, animals considered a model for human trauma, in experiments over the past decade conducted by Tisherman, Alam and a few other research groups.

The animals were sedated and bled until their hearts stopped. Ice-cold fluids were flushed through the body's largest artery, deep-chilling first the brain and heart and then the rest of the body. After more than two hours in this limbo, they were sewn up, gradually warmed and put on a heart-lung machine to restart blood flow. Most survived what should have been a lethal injury and most appeared to be cognitively fine, Tisherman and Alam say.

Hypothermia is counterintuitive for trauma because the cold inhibits blood clotting, something to watch while rewarming people in the planned study. Still, humans can get that cold and fare well, says Tisherman, who is co-author of a pending patent for emergency-preservation methods. He points to rare cases of people who fall through ice and instead of drowning are rewarmed and wake up, as well as deep-chilling that happens during certain heart operations that require completely stopping blood flow for a short time.

"Nothing is magical. Everything has got its limitations," cautions Alam. He says the big question is whether deep hypothermia can help in the chaos of real-life trauma when "the blood has already been lost and you're trying to do catch-up."

Co-founder of Social Network Diaspora Dies

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) • Ilya Zhitomirskiy, a co-founder of the startup social networking site Diaspora that put an emphasis on privacy and user-control, has died, a company spokesman said Monday. He was 22.

The cause of Zhitomirskiy’s death in San Francisco wasn’t immediately known, and neither the company nor the San Francisco Medical Examiner’s office would release details.

“Ilya was a great guy. He was a visionary, he was a co-founder of a company that hopes to bring a better social networking experience,” said Peter Schurman, a Diaspora spokesman. “We are all very sad that he is gone. It is a huge loss for all of us, including his family.”

Zhitomirskiy was one of four students who started Diaspora in a computer lab at New York University.

As an anti-Facebook of sorts, the group raised more than $200,000 by collecting contributions through the website Kickstarter. Last month, it posted a blog on its website asking for more contributions.

The site champions the idea of sharing while keeping control. On its website, the company promotes itself as a “fun and creative community that puts you in control.”

Disgraced Former United Way CEO Dies of Cancer at 84

BY MATTHEW BARAKAT
Associated Press

McLEAN, Va. • Over 22 years, William Aramony built the United Way of America from a tangled web of charities into a philanthropic powerhouse, bringing in more than $3 billion annually. His success was eclipsed by a scandal in which he spent the charity’s money to fund a lavish lifestyle, including gifts and trips for a 17-year-old girlfriend.

Aramony died Friday at the Alexandria, Va., home of his son Robert. He was 84. He battled prostate cancer that metastasized to his bones while he was serving a six-year prison sentence for fraud and tax evasion related to the scandal.

William Aramony was a son of Lebanese immigrants and dedicated his time after his 2001 release from prison to peace-building efforts in the Middle East, his son said. This summer, he traveled to Egypt to meet with political and religious leaders following the overthrow of Hosni Mubarak.

He earned a master’s degree in social work at Boston College in 1951. While serving in the Army in the 1950s, he did social work counseling soldiers, his son said. In 1954, he joined United Way’s predecessor, the United Community Funds and Council of America.

“At heart, that’s what he was, a social worker,” Robert Aramony said. “He did it his whole life.”

Aramony was the United Way’s CEO from 1970 to 1992, and he built the United Way into one of the nation’s best-known charitable groups. Revenue increased from less than $800 million to more than $3 billion during his time at the helm. The now-familiar structure of using United Way to facilitate payroll deductions at charity campaigns run through the workplace blossomed under Aramony’s guidance.

The United Way’s high-profile partnership with the National Football League also took hold under Aramony.

The charity’s successes were overshadowed by the scandal surrounding Aramony’s spending.

Prosecutors said Aramony’s spending on personal luxuries with United Way funds constituted a fraud because donors expected their money would go to charity.

At his federal trial in 1995 in Alexandria, where United Way is based, prosecutors and court officials estimated that he defrauded donors of anywhere from $600,000 to $1.2 million over a 10-year period. He was convicted on 23 of 27 counts, including fraud, tax evasion and conspiracy.

Much of the case against Aramony concerned his four-year affair with Lori Villazor, whom he met while he was 60 and dating her older sister. Aramony, who was married at the time, took the teenager on trips, billing her plane tickets and meals as charity expenses. Court testimony showed that Aramony directed his secretary to hide expenses for trips she took with him to Egypt, London, Paris, Las Vegas, New York City and other locations.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"Conventionality is not morality.
Self-righteousness is not religion."
— Charlotte Bronte*

Before you read the analysis of today's deal, you might want to put yourself in the South seat in four spades. If the defenders lead three rounds of hearts, you will ruff with the spade 10. Assuming no overruff, you plan to cross to dummy with a club finesse and take the spade finesse, then rely on the minor suits to behave thereafter.

Let's go back to the beginning. How would you play four spades on a heart lead, followed by a second top heart and a club shift at trick three? If you win the club in dummy and take the spade finesse, West may give his partner a club ruff. Maybe it is better to play ace and another spade to avoid the club ruff. You will still survive if the diamond finesse works.

Was that what you decided to do? Well, time to look at the full hand. When the deal originally occurred in New Zealand, that was what Patrick Carter as East hoped declarer would think when he overtook the heart-jack lead and cashed a second heart.

At trick three, he led the club two into dummy's tenace. South had never seen a more obvious singleton and so elected to play the spade ace and a second spade, using the reasoning described above. Needless to say, Patrick had just turned 10 tricks into nine for the declarer. Most declarers found no difficulty on this hand once they had taken the trump finesse ... but Patrick had not been at their table!

ANSWER: The preference to two spades is consistent with a doubleton honor in spades and a hand with no heart stop. Even though four spades rates to be the best game, you would like to explore further with a call of three clubs — but only if you are playing with a partner whom you could trust to know that this call was forcing. Are you?

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 15, the 319th day of 2011. There are 46 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Nov. 15, 1777, the Second Continental Congress approved the Articles of Confederation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1806, explorer Zebulon Pike sighted the mountain-top now known as Pikes Peak in present-day Colorado.

In 1889, Brazil was proclaimed a republic as its emperor, Dom Pedro II, was overthrown.

In 1935, the Commonwealth of the Philippines was established as its new president, Manuel L. Quezon, took office.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt laid the cornerstone of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C.

In 1948, William Lyon Mackenzie King retired as prime minister of Canada after 21 years; he was succeeded by Louis St. Laurent.

In 1961, former Argentine President Juan Peron, living in exile in Spain, married his third wife, Isabel.

In 1966, the flight of Gemini 12 ended successfully as astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. splashed down safely in the Atlantic.

In 1969, a quarter of a million protesters staged a peaceful demonstration in Washington against the Vietnam War.

In 1979, the British government publicly identified Sir Anthony Blunt as the "fourth man" of a Soviet spy ring.

In 1985, Britain and Ireland signed an accord giving Dublin an official consultative role in governing Northern Ireland.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush and Russian President Vladimir Putin failed to resolve their dispute over U.S. missile shield plans but pledged to fight terrorism and deepen U.S.-Russian ties as their summit, which began at the White House before shifting to Bush's Texas ranch, came to a close.

Five years ago: O.J. Simpson caused an uproar with plans for a TV interview and book titled "If I Did It," in which Simpson describes how he would have committed the 1994 slayings of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman. (The project was scrapped after an outcry condemning it as revolting and exploitive.) One of four U.S. soldiers accused of raping a 14-year-old Iraqi girl and killing her and her family pleaded guilty at Fort Campbell, Ky. (Sp. James P. Barker, who agreed to testify against the others, was later sentenced to 90 years in prison.) Emmitt Smith was named winner of ABC's "Dancing with the Stars" with his professional dance partner, Cheryl Burke.

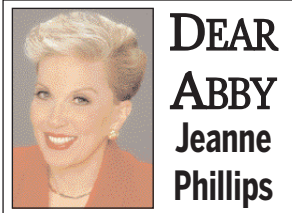

One year ago: A House ethics committee panel began closed-door deliberations on 13 counts of alleged financial and fundraising misconduct by U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who walked out of the proceeding after pleading unsuccessfully for more time to raise money for a lawyer. (Rangel was convicted the next day of 11 rules violations.) San Francisco Giants catcher Buster Posey and Texas Rangers closer Neftali Feliz were voted the Rookies of the Year.

DEAR ABBY: I have been battling breast cancer and have been blessed to have a lot of support from family, friends and some awesome medical providers. My husband's best friend and his wife socialize with us quite often, and the friendship is important to him. I recently celebrated a birthday and these friends had us over for a belated birthday dinner. They bought me beautiful flowers and a gift. The card attached made a joke about my "aging breasts," which she found quite funny.

Abby, I had a mastectomy, which she knew about! To make matters worse, my hair has just started to grow back from the chemo, so I decided to have some highlights put in, and she told me she didn't like my new hair.

I am hurt and dumb-founded by her insensitive behavior. Unfortunately, this isn't the first time she has said things like this. How do I tell her I'm offended by her rudeness without compromising my husband's friendship with them?

— HARRIED FRIEND

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR HARRIED FRIEND: You nailed it. The woman is insensitive — but you said she has also made tasteless comments in the past. For the sake of the friendship between your husbands, tune her out and spend less time with her one-on-one. It's OK to tell her that her joke about your "aging breasts" hurt your feelings in light of your mastectomy, and that as your hair is growing back you thought you'd like to try something "different." However, if you use the word "offended" she'll probably become defensive, so avoid that word.

A final thought: Most people are terrified of cancer. People sometimes try to make jokes about things that make them uncomfortable in an effort to diffuse those feelings. This may be the reason the woman tried to joke about it, so don't let it cause you to carry a grudge.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently reconciled with my girlfriend of six years, "Molly." It has been five months since our last fallout and longest breakup. While we were apart, a woman I knew through my business made it clear that she was interested in me. One thing led to another and "Tish" and I slept together. Now she's pregnant.

I'm happy to be back with Molly now, but have been contacted recently by Tish with proof of the pregnancy. I'm afraid Molly will leave me if she knows about it. She's the woman of my dreams and the one I want to spend the rest of my life with. Help, please.

— IT'S COMPLICATED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR IT'S COMPLICATED: I'll try. Talk to Molly about this and consult an attorney. Molly should not hold against you something that happened while you were separated. Whether the child is yours can be determined by a paternity test. If it is yours, you will be responsible for providing child support until he or she is an adult and emotional support well beyond. If Molly is, indeed, the woman of your dreams, she'll stand beside you. If not, you are better off without her.

And in the future, please use birth control, so you can plan the number of offspring you bring into this world.

DEAR ABBY: I work as a mattress salesperson. Often when I tell my senior customers about the 10-year warranty on a bed, they'll reply, "Oh, I doubt I'll be around that long."

At that point I'm usually at a loss for words. Any suggestions as to an appropriate response?

— SPEECHLESS IN SUFFERN, N.Y.

DEAR SPEECHLESS: Smile and say, "Then be sure to include the mattress in your will."

IF NOVEMBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ambitions may be fired up during the next six to eight weeks, but your overconfidence might be misplaced. This is a time to maintain a low profile. Don't go into debt to have a happy holiday, or to make a fantasy come true, but instead try to clear off the debt load for the New Year. In February, social gatherings could take precedence. You may widen your circle of business contacts. Wait until May to put your cherished plans into action when everything should turn out to your best advantage.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Taste is all relative, but some things are just too outlandish to even consider. When in doubt, ask the opinion of a close friend or colleague to prevent an embarrassing faux pas. Puzzles are right up your alley.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Treat yourself to the little things in life. If you set your mind to it, you'll find that your productivity will be vastly improved. You can rest assured that if you find yourself at an impasse, a friend will help.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money is no object. To truly impress a prospective significant other, know that a gourmet dinner is worth 10 fast-food outings. You'll excel at completing written work while mental prowess is enhanced.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Enjoy center stage. Your quick wit and engaging banter will make you the hit of the office. Others will be drawn to you like a magnet; subsequently you are able to ask for favors and aid with no problems.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Being alert to a potential pitfall in the early stages will allow you to take action and prevent it a major problem further down the road. Know your limitations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spread your social wings. If you make yourself approachable, you are likely to find compliments and attract interesting people. You will have no trouble easing your way through social situations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spice up your surroundings. Productivity improves by creating a dynamic and interesting environment for work. Spare no expense to get the best tools available, but keep some money tucked away for a rainy day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you've nothing else to sell, sell yourself. Promote yourself with honesty and sincerity and you'll certainly be the one who gets the job. Generosity and tolerance are tools to break down barriers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't let the day pass you by. Don't kick back and relax when there are lucrative opportunities at your fingertips. You can make valuable contacts and enter into beneficial agreements without worry.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep your eyes on the prize. Stay focused and determined to achieve your goal. If you experience doubts, enlist the aid of friends and well wishers to give you advice or a much needed boost.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's all in how you look at it. Optimism attracts success while fear and doubt pull you down. Make yourself available for public functions and outings where you can meet valuable new contacts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't look a gift horse in the mouth. If someone offers you words of wisdom, take heed and put them to good use. Any assistance you receive is going to be infinitely valuable so make the most of it.

Last Respects Paid To Frazier

PHILADELPHIA • With his championship belt and a pair of gloves draped over his casket, Joe Frazier was going one more round.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson asked mourners to rise, put their hands together and for one last time “show your love” for the former heavyweight champion.

Muhammad Ali obliged.

Wearing a dark suit and sunglasses, a frail and trembling Ali rose from his seat and vigorously clapped for “Smokin’ Joe,” the fighter who handed Ali his first loss.

Ali was among the nearly 4,000 people who packed a Philadelphia church for a two-hour “joyful celebration” of Frazier’s life. He died last week of liver cancer; he was 67.

Sandusky Proclaims Innocence In NBC News Interview

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Jerry Sandusky said in an interview with NBC that he is innocent of the child sex abuse charges that have rocked Penn State and cost coach Joe Paterno his job, though the former defensive coordinator acknowledged he “horsed around” and touched kids.

In a telephone interview, scheduled to be aired Monday night on NBC News’ “Rock Center,” Sandusky responded, “No,” when Bob Costas asked if he was a pedophile.

“I am innocent of those charges,” the 67-year-old Sandusky said. “... I could say that I have done some of those things. I have horsed around with kids I have showered after workouts. I have hugged them and I have touched their legs without intent of sexual contact.”

Sandusky, once considered Paterno’s heir apparent, is charged with sexually abusing eight boys over a 15-year span, with several of the alleged assaults occurring on Penn State property. Athletic director Tim Curley and Penn State vice president Gary Schultz are charged with perjury, and Paterno and president Graham Spanier were fired for not doing enough after Sandusky was accused of assaulting a young boy in the showers of the campus football complex in 2002.

The interview with Costas was Sandusky’s first public comment on the charges. He had previously maintained his innocence through his attorney.

The Associated Press has made several efforts to reach Sandusky by phone and through his attorney, but messages haven’t been returned.

A spokesman for Pennsylvania Attorney General Linda Kelly declined to comment on the interview, citing the active investigation.

Asked if there was anything he did do wrong, Sandusky said, “I shouldn’t have showered with those kids.”

When Sandusky retired in 1999, at just 55, he cited his desire to devote more time to The Second Mile, a charity he founded in 1977 to help at-risk kids. According to a grand jury report, however, Sandusky was a sexual predator who used the charity and his Penn State connections to prey on young boys.

Though he was not particularly close with Paterno, he remained a familiar sight around the Penn State football complex. He was given an office in the East Area Locker building, across the street from the football building, as part of his retirement package, and would bring Second Mile kids around the football facilities.

Wide receivers coach Mike McQueary, then a graduate assistant, told the grand jury he saw Sandusky

Martin’s Toughness Fuels Pirates’ Title Run

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

HAGERMAN • Heading in to this football season, many expected the Hagerman Pirates to be good.

The addition of Tyler Martin has made them great.

Martin, who transferred from Wendell to Hagerman midway through his junior year last year, has helped elevate Hagerman (11-0) to an undefeated season and a spot in the Class 1A Division I state championship game against Kendrick (10-1), 11 a.m. Friday at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

“Tyler is an outstanding player,” said Hagerman head coach Ron Echols. “He’s a tough kid and we’re happy to get him.”

The Snake River Conference coaches agree. Martin was voted the league’s Defensive Player of the Year for his domination at nose tackle. At times, the 6-foot-1, 245-pound senior takes on an opponent’s center and two guards all by himself.

He is the anchor to a Hagerman defense that shuts down opponents’ rushing game while allowing only two touchdowns per outing.

Martin is also a physical blocker in Hagerman’s explosive offense that produces 52.8 points per game. Plus he’ll get a few short-yardage carries and is unstoppable at the goal line.

“It’s unreal. Just having an undefeated season and going this far is just crazy,” said Martin. “We’re going to practice harder than we’ve ever practiced before. We’re going to work harder than any other team out there and we’re going to get the win.”

Hagerman (11-0) is making its first state championship game appearance since 2000, and sixth overall in school history. The Pirates won back-to-back state titles playing 11-man football in 1989 and 1990, but have never won an 8-man championship.

Martin said he expects a good fight from Kendrick.

“That team is not a joke. They did the exact same thing we’ve done; they’re in the championship game, too,” Martin said. “We’ve got to step it up higher than they will.”

Free Throws Costly Thus Far For CSI Women

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

smeyers@magicvalley.com

The College of Southern Idaho women’s basketball team had no problem earning trips to the foul line this weekend, attempting 47 shots in two games.

The trouble came in making those shots.

CSI made only 19 free throws against Gillette (Wyo.) and Mesa CC (Ariz.), a dreadful 40 percent clip.

The Golden Eagles’ 8-18 performance against Mesa was actually an improvement from the night before, where they made just 11-29 in their 81-57 win over Gillette.

“Now it’s probably in our heads and we need to come back tomorrow night and knock down some,” said head coach Randy Rogers after beating Gillette Friday. “Really that could have been a 30 or 40-point win if we could have knocked down some of those free throws. I was looking at the free throw tonight as a turnover, because we couldn’t make our shots.”

Chakala Carthen earned eight free throw attempts in each game, not surprising considering she shot the most free throws on the team last season, but she’s shooting just 50 percent right now.

Disciplined Teams Proving Difficult For Boise St. To Solve

BY ALEX CALINSKY

For the Times-News

BOISE • In the Boise State football team’s last two home games, Mountain West opponents were able to challenge the Broncos in ways other teams could not, culminating in TCU’s 36-35 win on Saturday.

The Horned Frogs and Air Force both displayed one trait that separated them from Boise State’s previous opponents — discipline.

Broncos’ quarterback Kellen Moore noticed it in TCU early in the week as he prepared for the Horned Frogs.

“Everything’s very assigned, everyone knows what they’re doing, they execute it very well, they obviously have great players and they’re well-coached.”

Take one look at an Air Force cadet’s daily routine and it is evident discipline is part of the Falcons’ football program. Air Force may not have the skill that TCU does, but still competed in a 37-26 loss in Bronco Stadium. Combine the Horned Frogs’ ability with coach Gary Patterson’s instruction, add clutch play-making, and it’s the right concoction to end a 35-game home winning streak.

“We were well-aware of the opponent we were playing and they did

Twin Falls Claims State Water Polo Title; Area Swimmers Excel

TIMES-NEWS

The Twin Falls water polo team captured its third state title in five years on Nov. 5, beating Moscow 7-4.

Coach Dave Buddecke, Twin Falls' coach in championship years in 2007 and 2008, cited the efforts of Parker Twiss, Kate Reed Connor Harding and Luke Burgett as key in his team's championship run. In Idaho, water polo is a co-ed sport.

Twiss also medaled twice at the state swimming championships, finishing second in the 100 breast and sixth in the 200 individual medley. Hannah Biedenbach's eighth-place finish in the 100 breast was also good for a medal. Biedenbach was also part of Twin Falls' top relay team, along with Jessica Aguirre, Liz Giddings and Kate Reed in the 200 free relay, in which Twin Falls finished seventh.

Harding was Canyon Ridge's top finisher, placing 18th in the 50 free.

Jerome's top effort was a 14th-place finish in the 200 medley relay with swimmers Dylan Morgensen, Luke Scarrow, Nathan Jensen and Jeremy Pamplona.

Kimberly received an 18th-place finish in the 400 free relay with Ethan Elison, Montana White, Nathan Eisenhower and Scott Mershon

Vitek Hired As Jerome Golf Pro

TIMES-NEWS

The Jerome Country Club has recently hired Gooding Country Club pro Troy Vitek to be its head professional. Vitek replaces John Peterson, who has been with the Jerome Country Club since it opened in 1979.

Vitek spent the last 20 years at Gooding Country Club, where he arrived after a seven-year stint at Fairview Golf Course in Caldwell. Vitek has served on several boards in the golfing community, most notably on the board of directors of the Rocky Mountain section of the PGA, as well as a term as president of the Snake River chapter of the PGA. In addition, Vitek was the boys golf coach at Gooding High School, and was the Class 3A District IV coach of the year in 2009 and 2011.

In 2010, Vitek won a national award from the PGA's Presidents' Council for his efforts in growing the game of golf.

"Due to the fact that John Peterson is the only pro the Jerome Country Club has ever known, we believe that Troy has big shoes to fill," JCC president David King said. "Based upon what we've seen and know of Troy, we think he's going to be able to do it." "It's certain I'll miss a lot of the friends I've made in Gooding, but I'm excited to be making this move," Vitek said. "I'm looking forward to working with the people I'll be working with in Jerome."

Vitek begins working at JCC on Jan. 1, 2012, a day after Peterson's final day on the job. Jason Lancaster has been hired to replace Vitek as Gooding's golf coach.

well," Moore said after the game.

Even against that cocktail of skill and discipline, the Broncos still could have pulled out the victory, which speaks to their level of high-class football. The difference in the TCU game was the Horned Frogs' neutralizing the Boise State defensive line, a unit with at least three players that may be NFL prospects. Quarterback Casey Pachall was only sacked once, when he tripped on one of his linemen, untouched by a Bronco.

"They were just playing football and we weren't getting to the quarterback when we needed to," Broncos' defensive end Tyrone Crawford said. Crawford's fumble recovery touchdown, forced by linebacker J.C. Percy behind the line of scrimmage, is evidence of the importance of controlling the line of scrimmage.

sodomizing a boy about 10 in a shower at the Nittany Lions' practice center in March 2002. McQueary did not go to police but instead told Paterno, Curley and Schultz, although it is not clear how detailed of a description he gave.

Schultz, in turn, notified Spanier.

Paterno is not the target of any legal investigation, but he has conceded he should have done more. He and Spanier were fired because trustees felt they had not done enough after the 2002 incident.

The interview came on a day when the president of That hiccup aside, TCU's offensive line provided Pachall time to throw for 473 yards and five touchdowns. Some of their huge scoring plays were on receiver routes with double moves — those are not successful without time to throw, allowing a capable quarterback to take advantage of a notoriously aggressive secondary.

"That's not totally on the secondary, everybody's involved there. We have to get some pressure, make sure he doesn't hold it too long," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said.

TCU's players and game-plan did what Georgia (Aaron Murray), Toledo (Eric Page), Tulsa (G.J. Kinne), Nevada (Rishard Marshall), and Fresno State (Derek Carr) — teams with success throwing deep before playing Boise State — could not. Patterson's use of Pachall, Josh Boyce and Brandon Carter was unlike anything the Broncos saw this season.

The Second Mile resigned. Jack Raykovitz, a practicing psychologist who had led the group for 28 years, said he hoped his departure would help restore faith in the group's mission.

The Second Mile also announced it had hired Philadelphia's longtime district attorney as its new general counsel.

Separately, the Big Ten has decided to take Paterno's name off its championship trophy. League commissioner Jim Delany said that it is "inappropriate" to keep Paterno's name on the trophy that will be awarded Dec. 3 to the winner of the conference's first title game.

The trophy had been Snow's 83-64 win over Mesa on Friday. The Badgers (4-0) play at Western Wyoming on Tuesday.

PACKERS REMAIN PERFECT, TOP VIKINGS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREEN BAY, Wis. • Another night, another four-touchdown performance for Aaron Rodgers — just about what the Green Bay Packers have come to expect from their superstar quarterback.

The real surprise came on the other side of the ball: A defense that finally showed it can take charge of a game.

The Packers (9-0) remain the NFL's lone undefeated team. And if they now can count on a defense to complement their high-octane offense, they just might be unstoppable.

Rodgers threw for four scores against a fierce Vikings pass rush, Randall Cobb returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown and the Packers defense contained Adrian Peterson and the Minnesota Vikings in a 45-7 victory on Monday night.

Green Bay's defense came into the game giving up nearly 300 yards passing per game, second-most in the NFL. Their last time out, the Packers nearly blew a big lead in the fourth quarter at San Diego, holding on for a 45-38 victory.

But the Packers finally played to their potential against the division rival Vikings (2-7), holding rookie quarterback Christian Ponder to 190 yards passing with an interception and limiting Peterson to 51 yards and a touchdown.

The Vikings' defense did its best to rough up Rodgers, sacking him three times and hitting him hard virtually every time he took off running. Defensive end Jared Allen harassed Rodgers at every turn.

The pressure didn't force any uncharacteristic mistakes from Rodgers, who was 23 of 30 for 250 yards without an interception. Rodgers threw a pair of touchdown passes to Jordy Nelson, and also found Greg Jennings and John Kuhn for scores.

Packers coach Mike McCarthy put backup quarterback Matt Flynn in the game with 10:30 left in the fourth quarter — and the Vikings couldn't keep him out of the end zone, either, as he scrambled 3 yards for a touchdown with 4:27 left.

But it was Cobb, a second-round rookie out of Kentucky, who got it all started for the Packers.

After the Packers' defense forced the Vikings to go three-and-out on their first possession, Cobb fielded a punt from Chris Kluwe and squeezed through a seam in the middle of the field.

Cobb accelerated down the left sideline and danced the final few steps into the end zone, tossing the ball in the air as if he was shooting a basketball before doing a "Lambeau leap" into the stands.

Cobb also had a 108-yard kickoff return for a touchdown in the Packers' season opener against the New Orleans Saints.

Rodgers finally got the ball at the 9:55 mark in the first quarter and directed an 11-play, 70-yard drive that included conversions on third-and-8, to Donald Driver, and third-and-7, to running back James Starks. Rodgers then finished the drive with a perfect pass to Jennings in the middle of the field for a touchdown.

SUPERIOR ENGINEERING MEETS HIGH-STRENGTH STEEL.

EXPECT PERFORMANCE AND DURABILITY LIKE NO OTHER.

Having the highest strength-to-weight ratio in the industry isn't an accident. It starts with high-tensile steel that provides an unmatched combination of high strength with lighter weight. Then our engineers create innovations like our single leg tower, a wider tower base than the leading competitive machines and up to 6,000 pounds of overall system weight savings for performance that is second to none.
