Moving? You're in the Minority

While Idaho grows, fewer Americans are relocating as the nation crawls out of the Great Recession.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

With less in their pocket-books, more Americans are staying put.

According to recent census data, only 11.6 percent of Americans changed residences between 2010 and 2011. The rate is the lowest since the U.S. Census Bureau began tracking movement in 1948 — beating out 2008 and 2009, when people hunkered down as the U.S. economy and housing market collapsed.

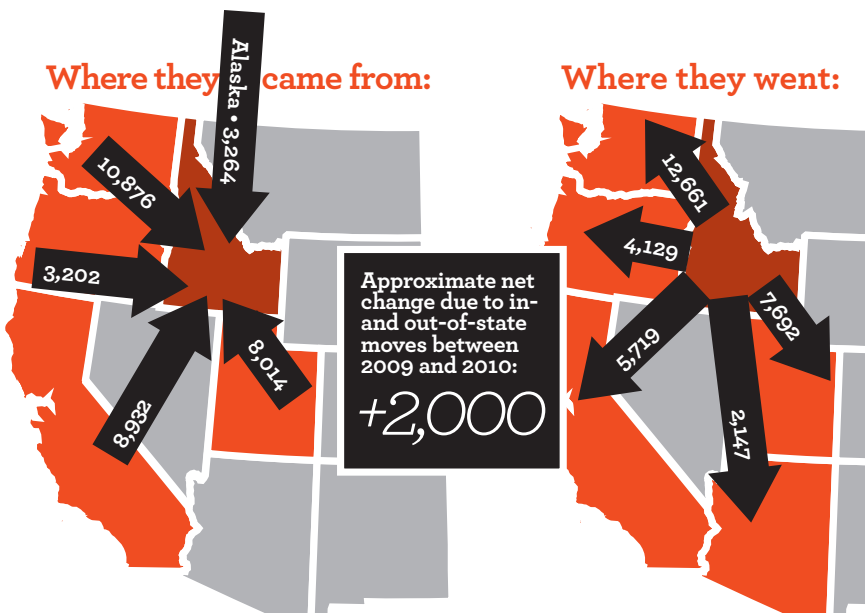

Slightly more people moved from other western states to Idaho last year than Idahoans moved away. But overall, migration patterns are slowing down.

The low moving rates stem primarily from the effects of a still-troubled housing market, said Jan Roeser, a regional economist for the Idaho Department of Labor. Homeowners' inability to sell their homes quickly or at a profitable price deters people from moving.

"People can't sell their homes," she said. "At least, not without going under water or not getting the

County to Auction Former St. Luke's Properties

BY BEN BOTKIN
bbotkin@magicvalley.com

Twin Falls County is putting seven pieces of commercial property on the auction block this week.

The decision follows the move of St. Luke's Health System to new digs along Pole Line Road.

The county had leased the property to St. Luke's for its assortment of clinics and services tied to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. With the health care provider moved out, Twin Falls County officials want to get out of the real estate business.

"Our real goal here is we don't want to be this big property owner in this county," County Commissioner Leon Mills said. "I think it's far more legitimate to turn it back to the tax rolls and let the other business people have it."

The county's still hanging on to the main hospital building, awaiting the results of a study that will show if moving county government offices to the former St. Luke's structure is an affordable idea.

A decision on that will come by the end of the year, Mills said. While the

Cities, N. Idaho County to Join Twin Falls County's Redistricting Challenge

TIMES-NEWS

From north Idaho to the Magic Valley, communities are perking up with interest in joining a legislative redistricting lawsuit that Twin Falls County will file today.

The city of Twin Falls decided Monday to join the county's case as another party. Buhl and Hansen are also signing on to the suit.

And in Filer, the City Council was scheduled to talk Tuesday night about possibly joining the legal action.

The lawsuit will be filed today in Idaho Supreme Court, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs. That's where all challenges of redistricting plans go. With the county handling the lawsuit, cities joining it don't expect to incur legal costs for supporting the county's filing.

Congress Pushes Back on Healthier School Lunches

WASHINGTON (AP) • In an effort many 9-year-olds will cheer, Congress wants pizza and french fries to stay on school lunch lines and is fighting the Obama administration's efforts to take unhealthy foods out of schools. The final version of a spending bill released late Monday would unravel school lunch standards the Agriculture Department proposed earlier this year. Read more on N1.

Anthropomorphic Potatoes Make Me Hungry

As a writer for our Food section, I've seen some pretty interesting food marketing.

But when it comes to goofy and over-the-top, nothing beats the marketing campaigns for potatoes. Consider the Pilgrahoan. This website, by the Idahoan brand, lets you build a face on a potato by dragging other food items. Think carrot medallions for the eyes, corncobs for noses and green beans for the mouth.

It's like a weird cross between an anthropomorphic Thanksgiving dinner and an edible snowman. I built one with turkey legs as eyebrows — I felt pretty proud about that.

Idahoan isn't the only potato group with awesome marketing. The Idaho Potato Commission's website is a spud lover's online mecca. It has hundreds of recipes featuring the beloved tuber, including Potato Lolipops (which I'm totally making) and Idaho Potato Sushi.

Throughout the site, you see references to Spuddy Buddy, a Russett Burbank with a face, limbs and a red T-shirt.

If, for some reason, you feel the need to buy a 3-foot-tall stuffed Spuddy Buddy, you can do so on the commission's website for $42.50.

You can also buy a

Spuddy Buddy snow globe. The product description says only this: "Yes, Spuddy really is using a crinkle cut French fry for a snow board."

My favorite marketing ploy, though, is Stunt Tater, another person-potato hybrid by the Idaho Potato Commission. Stunt Tater, who has a bizarre human face superimposed onto the potato skin, performs BASE jumping, tightrope walking and Evel Knievel-like tricks.

What is going on with these crazy spuds? I called Don Odiorne, vice president of food service at the commission.

The games and Stunt Tater are meant to appeal to a younger audience, he said. Spuddy Buddy is recognizable but has limitations. He can't talk, and he has to maintain a squeaky-clean image. Stunt Tater can be irrelevant, which appeals to teens and young adults, Odiorne said.

"I know it's kind of crazy, but I'm having a lot of fun with it," he said.

It certainly gets attention.

matter is undecided, one advantage would be the copious space for growth to meet county needs over the next few decades, he said.

The auction is a legally required step, with the minimum prices based on market values. The properties' combined minimum bids total $1.35 million.

That money will go to the county's general fund or be used for renovations if the county pursues relocation into the former hospital building, Mills said.

He said the buildings are well-maintained.

"The hospital took great care of them," he said. "They look brand new inside and out."

If You Go Twin Falls County Auction

The auction is at 10 a.m. Friday on the front steps of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N. Information packets can be picked up beforehand at the county commissioners' office on the third floor of the courthouse.

Invasion

For his part in the Dietrich home invasion robbery, Baker will serve eight to 10 years in state prison. Baker pleaded guilty to an amended charge of felony conspiracy to commit burglary in August. Judge John Butler on Tuesday imposed the prison term and a $1,000 fine on Baker in Lincoln County 5th District Court in Shoshone. Butler is allowing the state 60 days to submit a request for restitution.

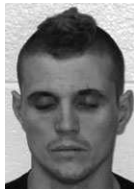

Baker is one of three defendants who have pleaded guilty and been sentenced to prison in the case. A fourth suspect, Aaron Donabedian, maintains his innocence and is scheduled for a January trial.

Investigators fingered the group for an early morning robbery, which took place in the Conners' country home in Dietrich on March 9. The Conners — David and his wife, Colleen — were awakened that morning to the sound of their dogs' unrelenting barking, a warning that David heeded.

David grabbed a shotgun and attempted to scare off the trespassers, but he was overpowered, his own gun turned against him by a pair of men: Jeremiah Bennett and, allegedly, Donabedian. Jamie Taylor and Baker waited in a van outside and did not enter the residence.

Baker sat in chains at the defendant's table on Tuesday, listening to the thoughts and fears that the Conners felt. David could not attend the hearing, but Colleen read an email he sent to a friend shortly after their morning encounter.

Redistricting

County will join the lawsuit as well.

Kootenai County commissioners don't like the new plan's District 7, because it lumps 5,000 residents in southern Kootenai County into a district stretching south to distant Idaho County.

They say it will make it difficult for legislators from that district to represent all their constituents, violating the Idaho Constitution.

Twin Falls County announced last month it would file its own challenge, arguing the redistricting map that splits it into three separate districts puts voters at a disadvantage.

It took two redistricting commissions this year to come up with a map. To take effect, it still must survive these legal challenges.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Moving

equity that they should be getting."

Idaho's sluggish moving patterns haven't always been this way. In the past, the state's cheap cost of living, combined with its recreation opportunities, attracted more out-of-state homebuyers and jobseekers.

But even as the economy climbs out of the recession, the change in migration affects how quickly a community can grow. New residents usually carry new money to add to the local economy.

Those who do move in Idaho are usually migrating to move in with family or, for the lucky ones, found a better job, Roeser said.

"Bottom line, we have had better times than down times in Idaho," Roeser said. "We're just not in a good time right now, but we'll get there."

People's need to downsize has helped moving companies maintain a high amount of business, said Robert Crabtree, owner of Crabtree Moving Systems in Jerome.

"People move to Idaho because it's cheap, pretty and there are less people here," Crabtree said. "Those attractions haven't changed."

Bev Griffith, manager of Magic Valley Movers in Twin Falls, says her clients are moving across town, not across the state.

"Last couple of years, the majority of the moves we've helped in have been local," she said. "They're either downsizing or retiring. A few of them upgrade, but definitely not all of them."

TFSD Fund Balance Continues to Shrink

In the wake of reduced state and federal funding, the district has carried over less money during each fiscal year since 2008.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls School District has little wiggle room for unexpected expenses, as the district's fund balance is at its lowest point in 10 years. The district had $2.3 million in fund balance at the end of June — money not spent and carried over from the previous year. It's enough to pay school district operating expenses for three weeks. "We're trying to retain as much funds as we can to get the job done," Fiscal Affairs Director Bob Seaman said. Also, that money could be used if there's an unforeseen event or emergency at a school. Three weeks' worth of operating fund balance is less than what Ray Ware, a local accountant for Ware & Associates, recommends. "I like to see two months," he told the school board.

In Other Business

During their Monday night meeting, Twin Falls school board members also: Heard concerns from Anna Scholes, Vera C. O'Leary Middle School Parent Teacher Student Organization president, about the new requirement that eighth-grade O'Leary students have to take a hybrid science class this year, with both in-person and online components. "In effect, the school district is doing a science experiment with my kids," she said. Scholes says she understands online classes will expand and she's not opposed to that, if classes are delivered well. Superintendent Wiley Dobbs will present his response during the December school board meeting. Approved the annual Idaho Financial Accounting Reporting Management System report. Approved a minor revision to a policy about annual contract employees. Trustees also heard about three other changes to procedures, but didn't take action. One of them is a Reduction in Force rubric, which would be used to make job cuts if needed.

Board members approved an annual financial audit report Monday night for the 2011 fiscal year, which ended June 30. Trustee Mary Barron was absent from the meeting. The school district received an "unqualified opinion" on the audit, which means there weren't any material weaknesses or concerns. Ware said it's the equivalent of getting an "A" on a school paper. The district's fund balance at the end of each fiscal year has fluctuated. The high point was in 2008, and the amount of money saved at the end of each year has dwindled since. Seaman said the district has received less money from federal and state sources over the past three years. That means more of the fund balance has been used for operating expenses. Carryover money can also be used to fill the gaps between the five yearly payments the district receives from the state. "You need to have enough cash on hand to operate until the next payment," Seaman said. The school district received about $37.72 million in general fund revenue during the last fiscal year. That money comes from county, state and federal sources, as well as local property taxes. School district expenses were also lower than they've been in the past. Ware told school board members that expenses last year were the lowest they'd been since 2007. Instructional expenditures — including teacher salaries and benefits, supplies and materials — totaled about $22.9 million during fiscal 2011. The district also spent about $15 million on support services, which include employee salaries and benefits, services for special needs students, custodial costs, textbook purchases and building maintenance.

Buhl City Council Joins Redistricting Lawsuit

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

BUHL • Support behind Twin Falls County's legal challenge of Idaho's legislative redistricting continues to grow. On Monday, the Buhl City Council voted unanimously to join the county's pending lawsuit, which is expected to be filed today. Like the county and city of Twin Falls, Buhl questions whether it will be provided with fair and constitutionally protected representation under the state's new plan. Redistricting is done to reflect population changes following each census. The plan calls for western Twin Falls County, including Buhl, to join Elmore and Owhyee counties in a legislative district. The city of Twin Falls gets its own district, and the eastern half of the county joins Cassia and Power counties. That has the council worried — not about the quality of leadership that may be available in Mountain Home, but about the connection those leaders may have with the far-flung community. "The representation we need would be lost with redistricting," said Councilman Bob Linderman. Mayor Tom McCauley said previous district boundaries meant legislators were highly visible and accessible. They knew the community, its economy and unique challenges, he said. McCauley said Buhl would be "hard-pressed to run someone from this area against the Mountain Home area" because of the differences in population. He questioned the fairness of pairing the communities together. Councilman Michael Higbee threw his support behind joining the lawsuit after finding out that Twin Falls County would cover the legal costs. "Especially with no cost involved (to the city), sign me up," he said. Blair Koch may be reached at blairkoch@gmail.com or 316-2607.

Councilman Bob Linderman

Jerome Deputies Rescue Man Lost on ATV Trail

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

Search teams from at least three agencies worked Monday night to locate a Jerome man lost on an off-road trail in the Devil's Corral area just north of the Snake River Canyon rim. Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said David Guymon took a ride on his ATV through the trails near dusk and wandered too far too late at night, becoming lost in the dark. Guymon's wife reported him as missing when he didn't meet up with her that evening. Search teams found his truck and trailer in the area, but it was too dark to locate him without assistance. Support from an Air St. Luke's helicopter allowed deputies to locate the man, who was spotted by search light at about 9 p.m. near his ATV. The four-wheeler's battery had died, as Guymon used his headlights to signal for help at night. Deputies on the ground weren't able to see the lights as Guymon was in a recessed area near the canyon rim, McFall said. Despite having his coordinates, deputies still had trouble getting to Guymon. A four-wheel drive truck didn't have enough ground clearance to traverse the area, so deputies went on ATV and foot, often becoming lost themselves. McFall said it took a few more hours to reach Guymon and jump his ATV's battery. Guymon was not injured, and although temperatures were chilly he did not suffer hypothermia.

Five Apply to Fill Term of Wilder Rep. Pat Takasugi

IDAHO STATESMAN

Five residents of Canyon County's District 10 have applied to fill the remaining 14 months of Rep. Pat Takasugi's term, and tonight that district's GOP Central Committee chairs will choose finalists to forward to Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter.

The deadline for applications was Monday night, but District 10 Rep. Darrell Bolz said it's possible – although not likely – that additional names could be nominated at Wednesday's meeting.

Takasugi, first elected to District 10's House Seat A in 2008, died Nov. 6 after a battle with appendix cancer.

The five applicants, all District 10 residents, are: Gayle Batt of Wilder, who filled in for Takasugi during the 2011 legislative session; Scott Syme of Wilder; Tom Tingey of Caldwell; Kent Marmon of Caldwell; and Jim Rice of Caldwell.

Otter will select one of the finalists to complete Takasugi's term, which continues through 2012.

Wednesday's meeting begins at 7 p.m. in the public meeting room of the Canyon County Courthouse, 1115 Albany St., Caldwell.

Republicans Look to Fill Seat of Idaho Sen. Stegner

LEWISTON (AP) • Republican leaders will have 10 days to decide on potential candidates to replace Idaho Sen. Joe Stegner once his resignation becomes official Nov. 30.

The University of Idaho announced Friday that Stegner had been tapped to become the school's chief lobbyist and his new job starts Dec. 1.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that once Stegner resigns from the Idaho Senate at the end of this month, the Republican Central Committee for his legislative district will have 10 days to nominate replacement candidates, and then provide the governor with three names.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will have 15 days to appoint one of the candidates to serve out the remainder of Stegner's seventh term.

At least one incumbent lawmaker – Republican Rep. Jeff Nasset of Lewiston – says he's interested.

Idaho Officials Approve 'Fracking' Rules

The rules were negotiated by representatives of the oil and gas industry, environmentalists, local governments and several residents of Payette and Washington counties, where drilling has started or drilling rights are being leased.

BY ROCKY BARKER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Rules regulating drilling and the controversial fracking technique were approved Tuesday by the Idaho Oil and Gas Conservation Commission.

The rules, aimed at protecting surface and groundwater and landowners, were approved by a 3-0 vote with acting Gov. Brad Little recusing himself because he is negotiating with a company seeking drilling rights. Little, Idaho's lieutenant governor, was standing in for Idaho Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter who is at a conference in Maui.

Secretary of State Ben Ysursa, state schools chief Tom Luna and State Controller Donna Jones voted to send the rules to the Idaho Legislature for final approval. Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, who was attending the meeting by phone, left before the vote.

The rules were developed in a negotiated rulemaking that included representatives of the oil and gas industry, environmentalists, local governments and several residents of Payette and Washington counties where drilling already has started or leasing of drilling rights is going on.

The rules set a 15-day period for public comments for drilling and well treatments, also called mini-fracking because liquids are pumped down wells under high pressure to increase flows. Horizontal fracturing, or fracking is done only in shale deposits and uses higher pressures.

The gas in southwest Idaho is not found in shale and no one is talking about fracking here. But many of the same fluids are used in well treatments and the rules require pits used to hold the liquids be lined. No pits are allowed in areas set aside for drinking water protection.

The rules also set up bonding requiring $10,000 plus an additional dollar for every foot drilled. A company could have up to 30 wells for a $150,000 bond, under the rules.

Owners of the surface rights, which aren't necessarily tied to the subsurface drilling rights, must be notified 60 days in advance of drilling. The state would get no more than $5,000 bond to cover lost agricultural income and lost value in improvements.

That was the limit of the commission's authority, said Eric Wilson, of the Idaho Department of Lands, who wrote the rules. If they wanted to do more, "we believe there would need to be statutory changes."

Little, chairing the Oil and Gas Commission and the Land Board for the first time, asked how they would be compensated if the land had a higher value such as development.

Tom Schultz, the new Department of Lands director, who just came from Montana said the experience in other states is that with millions in profits at stake companies usually seeks quick fair deals.

"The value tends to be standardized," he said.

Amanda Buchanan, a Weiser resident who participated in the rulemaking, urged the commission to protect landowners.

"What you consider to be a potential economic boon for the state could be a devastating loss to a property owner's single largest investment, the land she lives on," Buchanan said.

She and others urged the commission to ban cancer-causing liquids for use in fracking.

So far Bridge Resources and its partner, Paramax Resources Ltd., both of Canada, have drilled 11 wells in Payette County. Three of the 11 wells can produce at economic levels naturally. Four require stimulation through fracking, officials said. The other four were dry.

But Bridge announced last week it was selling off its Idaho properties. It had no representative at the meeting.

Instead Richard Brown and Chris Weiser, of the Arkansas exploration company Weiser-Brown testified. Its Idaho subsidiary, Snake River Oil and Gas, has been leasing drilling rights throughout the region and already has 24 people working in the state.

"We think these rules allow us to explore," Brown said, praising the Lands staff and negotiators.

Mom: Idaho Girl Had Bumps, Scratches Before Death

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • The biological mother of an Idaho girl who suffered fatal head injuries while in foster care claims she noticed scratches and bumps on her daughter during supervised visits before the toddler's death.

Samantha Richardson alleges that she saw physical and behavioral changes in her 2-year-old daughter Karina J. Moore before the girl died in January 2009, the Coeur d'Alene Press reported Tuesday.

Richardson sued state officials in April, saying she reported abuse allegations to social workers twice but her concerns were never addressed. The foster parents, Jeremy and Amber Clark of Post Falls, were arrested and charged this month with two counts of injury to a child and other felonies.

A grand jury in Kootenai County also charged them on Nov. 2 with destroying, altering or concealing evidence and perjury. The Clarks have been appointed public defenders, who declined to comment on the case to the Coeur d'Alene Press.

The public defenders could not be immediately reached Tuesday by The Associated Press because a call to the Kootenai County Public Defender's Office prompted only a recorded message.

The Clarks had been foster parents to Karina for more than a year when the child died. They told police that Karina fell about four feet down a flight of carpeted stairs, and Amber Clark said she performed CPR until emergency responders arrived and flew the toddler to Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane.

Karina was at the bottom of the stairs when police arrived, according to authorities. The child was declared brain dead at the hospital. The Spokane County Medical Examiner's Office ruled the case a homicide, citing blunt force head injuries.

The grand jury indictment accuses the Clarks of causing or inflicting injuries to Karina's head or permitting the injuries to occur. The Clarks are also accused of "causing the child's body temperature to drop under 96 degrees or permitting the same to occur; or by withholding medical care" for her.

The indictment includes allegations that the Clarks abused another child in their care when they forced a boy who was 4 or 5 years old to take ice baths and inflicted injuries to his body and head as part of abuse alleged to have occurred in December 2007 and January 2008.

Karina and two of her siblings, a brother and sister, had been living with the couple. Richardson claims that during her first supervised visit to see her children in November 2008, she noticed Karina had a knot on her head.

Richardson also claims her son told her he didn't like it when the Clarks spanked Karina for not listening.

"That was the very first thing he said to me in that visit," Richardson told the newspaper.

Richardson claims that during a third visit on Christmas Eve in 2008, Karina had black eyes and scratches on her face.

The other children were removed from the Clarks' care after Karina was injured and taken to the hospital. The couple had been a registered foster family for years and had taken in dozens of kids before Karina and her siblings went to live with them.

Police: Drunk Driver Likely Caused Four-vehicle Pile Up

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • William Timothy Larkin is being held in the Ada County Jail on a felony charge of aggravated DUI after police say he was driving drunk — and likely under the influence of prescription drugs — when he was caused a four-car pile up in West Boise Monday night.

A Boise woman had to be cut out of the wreckage from the car Larkin is accused of driving into, and she remained hospitalized Tuesday afternoon with what police described as serious injuries. Another woman, who was a passenger in the car, suffered several broken bones and was released from the hospital by Tuesday morning.

Police say Larkin was driving a pickup truck west-bound on Overland Road, near the Vinnell Way intersection, at 7:15 p.m. Monday when he drove into the east-bound lanes and collided head-on with a Ford Focus.

The force of the impact pushed the Ford Focus into another car behind it, which knocked that car off the road. Another pickup was damaged when it was hit by a box that flew out of Larkin's truck, according to reports.

Police said they detected a strong odor of alcohol coming from Larkin and also found evidence he had been taking at least three prescription medications. Police say Larkin failed field sobriety tests before he was arrested.

A suspected blood alcohol content percentage level was not available Tuesday as Larkin did not take a breath test at the jail. A blood draw was taken for later evidence testing, according to reports.

Larkin was to make his initial court appearance later Tuesday. The DUI is being charged as a felony because Larkin is accused of causing "great bodily harm, permanent disability or permanent disfigurement," according to Idaho code.

OTHER VIEWS

Republicans Lose Way by Misreading Bush History

In 2006 and 2008, voters inflicted on Republicans the worst back-to-back electoral drubbing any party has received since the Great Depression, when Franklin Delano Roosevelt all but destroyed the Party of Hoover. Republicans quickly reached a consensus about why they lost so badly: They had failed to be sufficiently Republican.

This consensus still moves the party — and since it is false, it moves them to make mistakes.

"We lost our way" was the cliché that expressed the Republican theory. "I believe we did not just lose our majority, we lost our way," said Rep. Mike Pence of Indiana, as he ran to replace the House Republican leadership after the 2006 elections. "In recent years, our majority voted to expand the federal government's role in education by nearly 100 percent, created the largest new entitlement in 40 years, and pursued spending policies that created record deficits, national debt and rampant earmark spending."

So widespread did this view become that the Republican leadership itself embraced it. Eric Cantor, Paul Ryan and Kevin McCarthy — high-ranking House Republicans all — wrote in a 2009 op-ed, "By the fall of 2006, it had become abundantly clear that Republicans had severely lost our way." Among other mistakes, "we had significantly increased federal spending." Speaker John Boehner has said the same thing: "Republicans lost our way on fiscal responsibility."

There are elements of truth in the conservative story. Bush-era Republicans did spend too much, refusing to make room for increased security budgets by cutting anything else. Bush's sincere belief that K-12 education could be reformed from Washington was naive. The Republicans' almost uniform rejection of President Barack Obama's stimulus and health-care legislation really did contribute to their victories in 2010.

But there's little evidence that big government was the reason, or even an important reason, for Republican defeats at the end of the Bush years. Take the top item on the list of conservative charges against Bush, his expansion of Medicare to cover prescription drugs. That idea was overwhelmingly popular, including among self-described conservatives whom pollsters contacted. It's hard to believe that Bush would have won Florida in 2000 without promising to match the Democrats on the issue, or that he would have won Ohio in 2004 without having made good on the promise. He won both states by small margins, and through them the Electoral College.

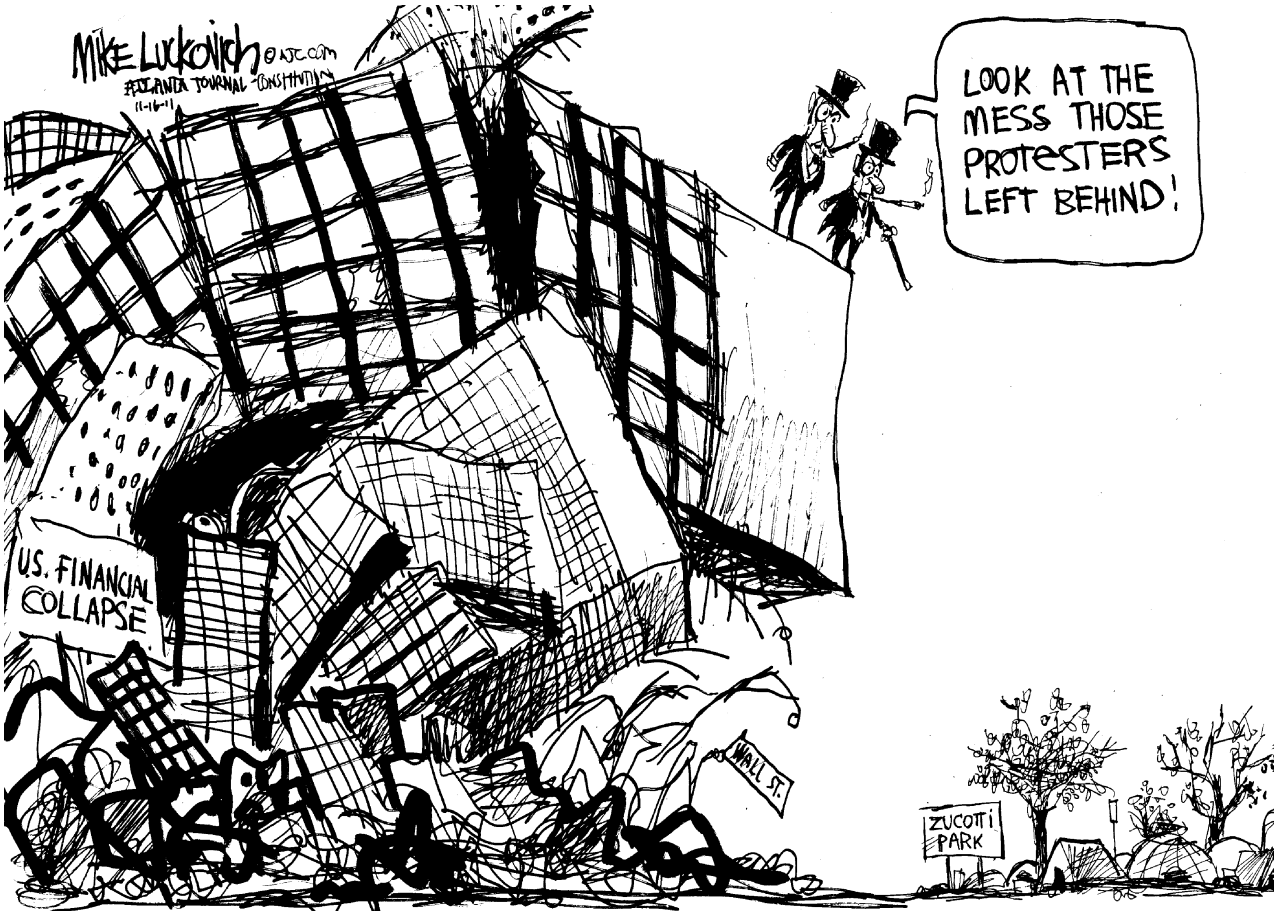

It seems much more likely that Republicans lost in 2006 because of the bleeding in Iraq, corruption in Washington, wage stagnation and the lack of any agenda by the party to do anything about these or other problems. Some of these issues had faded in importance by 2008, but in that year voters were also ready for a change after eight years of Republican control of the White House and, above all, dismayed by the economic crisis. In 2008, 60 percent of voters said the Republican presidential candidate, John McCain, wasn't "in touch with people like them" — and 79 percent of people who felt that way voted against him. That's what defeated Republicans, not a perception that they were doctrinally impure.

This isn't ancient history. The view that Republicans must avoid accommodation at all costs — that the principal obstacle to achieving conservative policy goals is a lack of spine and not, say, a lack of popular support — made them lose at least two Senate races in 2010. In Colorado and Nevada, conservative primary voters rejected two electable, conventionally conservative candidates because they were considered part of a compromising establishment. If Republicans fall two votes short of repealing Obama's health-care plan in 2013, the mythology they have created will be part of the reason why.

That mythology influences the Republican presidential primaries, too. It's why they have, to an unusual extent, showcased unpopular ideas that have no chance of going anywhere, such as abolishing the Environmental Protection Agency. It is part of the reason for the resistance to former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney: Conservatives fear he would be a big-government Republican, like Bush, and lead the party again to ruin.

Meanwhile, the real mistakes of the Bush years keep being made. Republicans had nothing to say about wage stagnation then and are saying nothing about it now. The real cost of Republicans' fixation on ideological purity is that it distracts them from their real problems, and the nation's.

Financial Regulation Remains Weak

Even as the Occupy Wall Street movement begins to stall, the reasons to protest abuses in the financial industry continue to accumulate, beginning with the spectacular, $41-billion collapse of Jon Corzine's MF Global Holdings in October.

Here we are, four years after the economy began to implode due to reckless practices by the banking and financial industry, and the misconduct continues virtually unabated. Mr. Corzine, trying to turn a small financial company into a big player on Wall Street, began making big bets on risky ventures such as Italian government bonds, apparently — according to investigators — using funds he was supposed to be safeguarding for his clients, i.e., playing with other people's money.

It was a gamble that the euro-zone would never allow a collapse similar to the demise of Lehman Brothers, thus setting off another economic plunge around the world, and would ultimately step in and bail out weak currencies to pay investors 100 cents on the dollar. That would have yielded big bonuses for MF Global and others who made a similar risky bet. But it didn't turn out that way — at least not in time to save Mr. Corzine.

The company went over the cliff and took with it the money of its investors. Trustee James Giddens is trying to find $600 million in missing customer money. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the first to detect the missing funds, has ordered the firm to retain all relevant records in a broad "do not destroy" notice.

As it turns out, MF Global has told regulators, the firm failed to segregate client accounts, one of the factors, along with the missing money, that led to bankruptcy. That is a fundamental violation of Wall Street rules, but, hey, there's no cop on the street, at least not one with the power to head off potential disasters before they occur.

Congress, after a protracted fight and over the objections of platoons of lobbyists, created the Consumer Protection Financial Bureau as a way to rein in abuses on Wall Street, but Republicans have been fighting a rear-guard action for months to prevent anyone from heading the agency.

That effectively prevents the CPFB from being able to exercise its full authority. MF Global may have gone belly-up anyway, but this episode shows the desperate need for more oversight on Wall Street and the failure of some of its denizens to learn from the mistakes of the past.

That's one of the lessons from this incident. We should be well past the day when anyone believes that self-regulation is the way to go, but there is no sign that Republicans on Capitol Hill will lift their objections to President Obama's nominee to head the bureau. The irony is that Mr. Corzine is a prominent liberal Democrat, having been both a governor and U.S. senator from New Jersey — proving once again that greed has no party.

Meanwhile, other evidence of a dysfunctional economy remains abundant. New census data indicate that the ranks of America's poorest have increased to a record high — one in 15 people. On the other end of spectrum, a comprehensive study found that 280 of the biggest publicly traded American companies faced income tax bills equal to only 18.5 percent of their profits over the last three years — just over half of the official corporate rate of 35 percent.

In Washington, the Senate has rejected President Obama's latest version of a jobs bill and the Super-committee to fix the budget remains deadlocked. As long as that remains the case, there's no hope of sparking a genuine recovery and giving the middle class reason to hope for a better day.

THEIR VIEW

All Our War Dead Deserved Was Respect

War — though sometimes necessary for the defense of our nation — never stops being hell. It's hazardous, demanding, tedious, frightening, gruesome, precarious and frustrating.

The expectations that service members have of "the boss" during wartime duty aren't high or unreasonable: Adequate equipment and weapons; competent officers to lead them; capable medics to care for the injured; honorable treatment of their remains should they die for their country; and compassion and support for their families.

The unfolding stories about mishandled remains at the Dover Port mortuary outrage an American public that reveres those who make the ultimate sacrifice. Words can't adequately describe the anguish and doubts that military families are experiencing.

For 18 years, media were banned from observing the return of war dead at Dover Air Force Base after President George H.W. Bush initiated a blackout during the 1991 Gulf War. The president believed a prohibition against photographs was necessary to protect the privacy of the families of fallen soldiers.

The irony is that what went on during the blackout years as accepted military policy disrespected the soldiers and their families much more than a photograph ever could.

Daisher Puts a Different Twist on Skydiving and Kayaking

BY KATY MOELLER
Idaho Statesman

The list of things Miles Daisher hasn't jumped off may be shorter than the list of things he has.

By his own count, he's jumped from more than 140 places, including bridges, cliffs, dams, buildings, cranes smokestacks, antennas — even a tree. He skis off mountains wearing a chute-like “speed wing.” He dreams of jumping a motorcycle over the Snake River Canyon this summer, opening a parachute and flying across the canyon.

He's done 2,966 jumps, possibly more than any other BASE (building, antenna, span and earth) jumper in the world.

Who would do 57 BASE jumps in a single day? Daisher did, setting the unofficial world record.

Daisher's fascination with aerial stunts began when he was a kid, after he saw “Hooper,” a movie about a Hollywood stuntman. When he was about 12, he began jumping off fences, trees, the roof of his one-story house and cliffs at a lake.

He took up bungee jumping in college. He even took a dive from the third story of his frat house, his dad said.

“He put a couple mattresses on the ground and did flips,” said retired Air Force Col. Phil Daisher (pronounced “dasher”), a pilot who flew fighter jets, spy planes and tankers.

While the elder Daisher never had occasion to jump out of a perfectly good plane, his son got hooked at age 25. Now it's his career. Since 2001, he's been part of the Red Bull Air Force promotional stunt team, traveling the world and performing on the energy drink company's tab.

Daisher, 42, has logged more than 3,100 skydives.

This year, he's traveled to New Zealand, Switzerland Korea and Mexico jumping and flying in “wing suits.” Two weeks ago, he parachuted from a helicopter 5,000 feet above UNLV's Sam Boyd Stadium to the deliver the game ball for the Boise State game.

“I landed on the 10-yard line and ran the ball into the endzone,” said Daisher. He gave a quick Heisman pose for the cheering crowd.

Daisher's willingness to try new things — and skill in pulling it off — earned him a mention in Ripley's Believe It or Not's new “Strikingly True” book for a stunt called “skyaking” — climbing into a kayak then pushing yourself out of a plane at 13,000 feet. “The daredevil has invented a new sport,” the Ripley's book says. “I'll be right up there with a seven-fingered wombat,” Daisher said. “I'm honored.”

Not His Idea

Parachuting with a kayak was the brainchild of his friend Scott Lindgren, who was shooting kayaking videos in 2002.

“Early on, I asked him to do all sorts of stupid stuff,” Lindgren said from his Lake Tahoe home.

“I caught wind of what Miles was up to. He was into stunts, and we were into filming it,” said Lingren, who made the extreme sports film “Burning Time.”

Daisher says he's done 54 skyaking jumps. He's tried different boats, and not all handled well in the air.

“We had one boat that worked really well,” Lindgren recalled. “Then we switched boats, and he ended up getting stuck upside down.”

Daisher had to pull the skirt and get out of the boat before he could parachute to safety. (The boat has its own chute.)

“People have some crazy fascination with skyaking now,” said Lindgren.

Landing on Water

The logistics of how to safely land a kayak in water after jumping from a plane do inspire fascination.

“It takes a lot of balance to get a kayak to stay upright in freefall,” Daisher said. He enjoys doing tricks, including rolls, flips and flat spins.

The surface area of the boat slows the descent significantly, to about 98 mph compared to about 120 mph lying flat on your belly. There's about a minute of freefall.

“It's hard for a cameraman to stay with me,” Daisher said.

He's managed to land in the water every time. The first jump was into a 10-by-100-foot pond.

“I do what's called ‘swooping’ for my landing,” he said. He turns his steep dive horizontal before he hits the water. “You're doing 50 miles per hour across the water when you touch down,” he said.

“You use that speed. Speed is your friend when you're coming in with a kayak,” Daisher said. “If you land hard, you're going to compress your back.”

Skybiking Not a Good Plan

As crazy as skyaking sounds, Daisher has done crazier. You can watch a video online of him parachuting with a bike.

Miles Daisher, who is sponsored by Red Bull, ‘skyaks’ down through Pillar Falls on Sept. 8, in preparation for the annual Perrine Bridge Festival in Twin Falls.

“It isn't hard to stay upright in freefall on a bicycle — it's impossible,” said Daisher.

He wasn't injured, but he's in no hurry to try that one again, he said.

He injured himself a lot growing up, but the worst injury he's sustained as an adult is a broken shoulder. He has had close friends die in aerial accidents.

Drawn to Idaho

In the past decade, Twin Falls has become a mecca for BASE jumpers because the Perrine Bridge — spanning the 486-foot-deep Snake River canyon — is one of the few places where it's legal to BASE jump.

Daisher was living and skydiving in the Bay Area in the early 2000s, visiting Twin Falls a couple times a year to jump.

He was thinking of moving there when he met Nikki Geist in California. She was from Twin. They moved to Idaho in 2004, got married and now have three children.

“Miles is a great guy,” Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter said. “He is really, really intense. He just lives life to the fullest.”

Daisher spoke at Carter's Rotary club last year.

“He wants everybody to be as excited as he is,” Carter said. “He gave a great talk, and everybody loved it.”

He credits Daisher for establishing the annual Perrine Bridge Festival, which brings BASE jumpers to town to raise money for children with special needs.

Carter skydived once, but has never tried BASE jumping.

“It sounds crazy as hell to me,” he said. “To Miles, it sounds really rad. We should all live in Miles' world.”

Rhoades' Attorneys File Emergency Appeal

BOISE (AP) • The attorneys for condemned Idaho inmate Paul Ezra Rhoades have filed an emergency appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court in hopes of staving off the execution set for Friday morning.

In a 33-page brief to the court, Oliver Loewy and the other attorneys with the Federal Defenders of Idaho reiterated Rhoades' contention that Idaho's new lethal injection protocol is likely to be botched, causing him to suffer excruciating pain in violation of the 8th Amendment.

Protesters Clash with Police Over Camp Site

Occupy Movement’s Future Unclear After NYC Sweep

State Supreme Court rules that protesters “have not demonstrated that they have a First Amendment right to remain in Zuccotti Park.”

NEW YORK • Hundreds of police officers in riot gear raided the Occupy Wall Street encampment in New York City in the pre-dawn darkness Tuesday, evicted hundreds of protesters and then demolished the tent city, leaving the future of the demonstration in limbo.

The police action began around 1 a.m. and lasted several hours as officers with batons and plastic shields pushed the protesters from their base at Zuccotti Park. Police Commissioner Ray Kelly said about 200 people were arrested, including dozens who tried to resist the eviction by linking arms in a tight circle at the center of the park. A member of the City Council was among those arrested during the sweep.

By 4:30 a.m., the park was empty, wiped clean of any traces of the camp that had been there since Sept. 17. Tents and sleeping bags were hauled away to the dump. Workers used power washers to blast the stone plaza clean. It wasn’t clear what would happen next to the demonstration. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said protesters would be welcomed back, but would no longer be allowed to erect tents or unroll sleeping bags. A judge’s ruling later in the day upheld the city’s crack-down.

“I don’t know what we’ll do,” said Chris Habib, a 36-year-old artist from New York, who was milling with other protesters near Zuccotti Park. He said he hoped the group could settle on a new protest site. He said he was confident the movement would continue even if its flagship camp was dismantled. “A judge can’t erase a movement from the public mind,” he said.

Congress Pushes Back on Healthier School Lunches

USDA’s proposed standards could have pushed pizza-makers and potato growers out of the school lunch business.

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Who needs leafy greens and carrots when pizza and french fries will do?

In an effort many 9-year-olds will cheer, Congress wants pizza and french fries to stay on school lunch lines and is fighting the Obama administration’s efforts to take unhealthy foods out of schools.

The final version of a spending bill released late Monday would unravel school lunch standards the Agriculture Department proposed earlier this year. These include limiting the use of potatoes on the lunch line, putting new restrictions on sodium and boosting the use of whole grains. The legislation would block or delay all of those efforts.

The bill also would allow tomato paste on pizzas to be counted as a vegetable, as it is now. USDA had wanted to only count a half-cup of tomato paste or more as a vegetable, and a serving of pizza has less than that.

Nutritionists say the whole effort is reminiscent of the Reagan administration’s much-ridiculed attempt 30 years ago to classify ketchup as a vegetable to cut costs. This time around, food companies that produce frozen pizzas for schools, the salt industry and potato growers requested the changes and lobbied Congress.

School meals that are subsidized by the federal government must include a certain amount of vegetables, and USDA’s proposal could have pushed pizza-makers and potato growers out of the school lunch business.

Piling on to the companies’ opposition, some conservatives argue that the federal government shouldn’t tell children what to eat. In a summary of the bill, Republicans on the House Appropriations Committee said the changes would “prevent overly burdensome and costly regulations and ...provide greater flexibility for local school districts to improve the nutritional quality of meals.”

Supercommittee: Boehner Calls Tax Plan ‘Fair Offer’

As time grows perilously short for agreement by the deficit-fighting panel, House Speaker says that adding tax reform would generate economic growth.

BY DAVID ESPO AND ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • House Speaker John Boehner publicly blessed a Republican deficit-reduction plan Tuesday that would raise $300 billion in additional tax revenue while overhauling the IRS code, bucking opposition by some GOP presidential hopefuls and colleagues wary of violating a longstanding point of party orthodoxy. Boehner, the top Republican in Congress, spoke as time grew perilously short for agreement by the deficit-fighting “supercommittee.” The panel has until a week from Wednesday to vote on any compromise, but several officials said that in reality, perhaps as little as 48 or 72 hours are available to the six Republicans and six Democrats.

While Boehner’s voice is important, his endorsement does not mean all Republicans will follow him or that a deal is in sight. Republicans have been unified for two decades in opposition to higher taxes, while Democrats on the supercommittee insist on additional revenue before they will agree to cuts in benefit programs like Medicare as part of a compromise.

The speaker said that the plan, outlined a week ago to Democrats on the committee, was “a fair offer.” Adding tax reform would generate economic growth, he said, speaking as the supercommittee groped for a compromise to reduce red ink

Scores of Soldiers, Civilians Killed as Syrian Crisis Accelerates

BEIRUT • Army defectors ambushed dozens of Syrian troops and regime forces gunned down civilians during one of the bloodiest days of the 8-month-old uprising, which appeared Tuesday to be spiraling out of President Bashar Assad’s control. Up to 90 people were killed in a gruesome wave of violence Monday, activists said. The extent of the bloodshed only came to light Tuesday, in part because corpses lying in the streets did not reach the morgue until daylight. As the bloodshed spiked, Assad’s former allies were turning on him in rapid succession — a sign of profound impatience with a leader who has failed to stem months of unrest that could explode into a regional conflagration.

13 ACTIVISTS ARRESTED AT ALABAMA PROTEST

MONTGOMERY, Ala. • Police arrested 13 protesters in Alabama's capital Tuesday as they demonstrated against the state's strict new law clamping down on illegal immigrants. About 100 people, most of them Hispanic and college-aged, chanted slogans as they marched in light rain around the state Capitol and to the adjacent Statehouse where the legislature works.

WISCONSIN GOVERNOR FACES RECALL EFFORT

MADISON, Wis. • Jubilant opponents of Republican Gov. Scott Walker launched their effort Tuesday to try to recall him from office, starting a 60-day blitz to gather more than half a million signatures to force an election next year. The drive to collect an average of 9,000 signatures a day, fueled by anger over Walker's successful push to take away nearly all public worker collective bargaining rights, began with pajama parties and other events after midnight.

Occupy

Hundreds of ousted protesters spent the day marching through Manhattan, chanting and looking for a new space to gather. There were skirmishes between protesters and police. Several journalists were arrested while trying to cover the marches.

At least 22 people were arrested after trying to move to an empty lot belonging to a church, Trinity Wall Street, that has been sympathetic to the movement. Two more people were arrested after hopping the barricades at Zuccotti Park, but there was no mass movement to retake the plaza from the police.

By late afternoon, hundreds of demonstrators waited on the sidewalk just outside Zuccotti Park, banging drums and chanting while they waited for the outcome of a court hearing to determine whether they would be allowed back in.

Supreme Court Justice Michael Stallman said in his ruling later Tuesday that the protesters "have not demonstrated that they have a First Amendment right to remain in Zuccotti Park, along with their tents, structures, generators and other installations to the exclusion of the owner's reasonable rights ... or to the rights to public access of others who might wish to use the space safely."

The plaza, near ground zero, is open to the public but is privately owned.

Lawyers representing the protesters had sought an order that would let them resume camping in the park. They said after the decision that they hadn't decided whether to appeal. They were examining the ruling in an attempt to determine what sort of new rules would apply to protests at the park.

Lost JFK Assassination Tapes Discovered

BY JOANN LOVIGLIO
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA • A long-lost version of the Air Force One recordings made in the immediate aftermath of President John F. Kennedy's assassination, with more than 30 minutes of additional material not in the official version in the government's archives, has been found and is for sale.

There are incidents and code names described on the newly discovered two-plus hour recording, which predates the shorter and newer recording currently housed in the National Archives outside Washington and the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Texas. The shorter recording was thought to be the only surviving version of the tape.

The asking price is $500,000 for the reel-to-reel tape, which is inside its original box with a typewritten label showing it was made by the White House Communications Agency for Army Gen. Chester "Ted" Clifton Jr.

It is titled "Radio Traffic involving AF-1 in flight from Dallas, Texas to Andrews AFB on November 22, 1963."

"As Americans have looked to the history of the Kennedy assassination in search of answers, somewhere in an attic there existed a tape made years before the only known surviving version, of the conversations on Air Force One on that fateful day," said Nathan Raab, vice president of The Raab Collection, a Philadelphia historical documents dealer that put the tape up for sale Tuesday.

The recording is the highlight of the personal effects from the estate of Clifton, who was Kennedy's senior military aide and was in the Dallas motorcade when the president was assassinated.

Clifton, who died in 1991, had kept a collection of audio tapes, documents, photographs and video stemming from his years in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. The Raab Collection, which is selling the tape and the rest of the archive, acquired the items at a public sale from Clifton's heirs after the death of Clifton's wife in 2009.

"At a time when there really wasn't what we consider today a chief of staff, Clifton carried on many of those functions," Raab said. "He retires in 1965, this goes with him."

The recording consists of in-flight radio calls between the aircraft, the White House Situation Room, Andrews Air Force Base and a plane that was carrying Kennedy press secretary Pierre Salinger and six Cabinet members from Hawaii to Tokyo when the president was assassinated.

The Clifton tapes include additional debate about whether Kennedy's body would be brought to Bethesda Naval Hospital or Walter Reed Hospital for autopsy and if first lady Jackie Kennedy would accompany the fallen president, as well as expanded discussions about arranging for ambulances and limousines to meet the plane.

No references to Kennedy nemesis Air Force Gen. Curtis LeMay occur in the shorter version, but the Clifton tape contains an urgent attempt by an aide to contact him. The aide, seeking to interrupt Air Force transmissions to reach LeMay, is heard saying the general "is in a C140. Last three numbers are 497. His code name is Grandson. And I want to talk to him!"

The whereabouts of LeMay, whose enmity for the president makes him a central figure for Kennedy assassination researchers, have long been disputed. The newly discovered recording can finally end the speculation and pinpoint his location immediately after the president's murder, Raab said.

Other conversations on the tape refer to "Monument" and "W.T.E." — code names for people as yet unknown — and someone only called "John."

Parts of the audio are difficult to discern because several conversations from the different patches are going on simultaneously. Raab said their digital copy was made as a straightforward recording, not as a forensic analysis, and current or future technology may be able to tease out and enhance the conversations.

Deficit

by $1.2 trillion or more over a decade.

Any deal must be certified by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office as meeting the $1.2 trillion target, circulated to lawmakers and then posted publicly before the committee takes formal action. Failure to act would trigger $1.2 trillion in automatic deficit cuts in 2013 that both sides say they want to avoid.

The full committee hasn't met in several days, but various subgroups have been in near constant contact.

More than deficit reduction is at stake, one year into an era of divided government.

Democrats are hoping to add elements of President Barack Obama's jobs legislation to any deficit-cutting deal, including extensions of a Social Security payroll tax cut and unemployment benefits that are due to expire at the end of the year. A comprehensive rewrite of farm programs may hang in the balance, too, and lawmakers also must pass legislation to assure sufficient funds to reimburse doctors who treat Medicare patients.

As the pace of private talks intensifies, the two sides vie publicly for the high ground in public opinion.

"I am still hopeful that a few Republicans will put their country first and come to us with a credible offer with real revenue," Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., co-chair of the supercommittee, told reporters as she emerged from a late-afternoon meeting.

Earlier, the Republican Senate leader, Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, said GOP members on the committee outlined a proposal several days ago and have yet to receive a response from Democrats. "It's been a long week, waiting for a counter-proposal," he said.

Lunches

School districts have said some of the USDA proposals go too far and cost too much when budgets are extremely tight. Schools have long taken broad instructions from the government on what they can serve in the federally subsidized meals that are given free or at reduced price to low-income children. But some schools have balked at government attempts to tell them exactly what foods they can't serve.

Reacting to that criticism, House Republicans had urged USDA to rewrite the standards in a bill passed in June. The Senate last month voted to block the potato limits in its version, with opposition to the restrictions led by potato-growing states.

Neither version of the bill included the latest provisions on tomato paste, sodium or whole grains; House and Senate negotiators added those in the last two weeks as they put finishing touches on the legislation.

The school lunch proposal is based on 2009 recommendations by the Institute of Medicine, the health arm of the National Academy of Sciences. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack said they are necessary to reduce childhood obesity and future health care costs.

USDA spokeswoman Courtney Rowe said Tuesday that the department will continue its efforts to make lunches healthier.

Eric Serafin Salinas

July 15, 1993-Nov. 14, 2011

RUPERT • Eric Serafin Salinas went back home to be with our Heavenly Father on Monday, Nov. 14, 2011, at the North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding.

Eric was born July 15, 1993, in Rupert, Idaho, to Serafin Salinas Jr. and Becky Rush. He lived at Preferred Community Homes in Wendell and attended Wendell Elementary, Middle and High schools.

Eric was an energetic, spontaneous young man. He was very loveable and care free. He loved swimming, kickball, swinging and making music. Eric loved spicy Mexican food, and he couldn't get enough licorice, kisses on the arms and lazy days on the couch. He loved going to school, especially riding the bus, long walks and splashing in puddles. He loved to be talked to in Spanish, and the love for his dad was undeniable.

Eric is survived by his parents, Serafin Jr. and Lorrie Salinas of Rupert; mother, Becky Rush of Rupert; brothers and sisters, Anthony Salinas, Nicholas Salinas, Avelina Salinas, Andrianna Perez, Sonia Perez, Adrian Rush, and Rachel Rush; grandparents, Serafin Sr. and Maria Salinas; grandmother, Carol Rush; lots of aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews and cousins. He was preceded in death by his great-grandpa, Salamon Salinas; grandpa, Kent Rush; aunt, Gracie Salinas Lopez; and cousin, Juan Carlos Aguilar.

A funeral Mass will be held 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 18, at St. Nicholas Catholic Church in Rupert. Burial will follow in the Rupert Cemetery. Viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, with a vigil at 7 p.m. at Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St., and viewing one hour prior to the service Friday at the church.

Eric will be greatly missed by all. The family would like to thank all the doctors and nurses who took excellent care of Eric, and a very special thanks to Preferred Community Homes (Eric's home), Kristen, Jennifer, Sandra and staff. God bless you!

Leona Marie Jansen Buchanan

March 11, 1915-Nov. 14, 2011

Leona Marie Jansen Buchanan, 96, of Twin Falls, Idaho, died Monday, Nov. 14, 2011, at her home.

She was born March 11, 1915, to Herbert J. Jansen and Margret Becker Jansen. Leona Jansen started in "Old Number 9" schoolhouse and continued on to St. Mary's in O'Neil, Neb. She began her life in Idaho in 1948 when she moved from Nebraska. She met and married Henry H. Buchanan in Twin Falls on April 18, 1951. They have two daughters, Renee (Steve) Whitmore and Donna (Dale) Brock. Their granddaughters are Amy (Bob) Nipper, Christa (James) Holeskinsky, Molly Brock and Ben Brandt.

Our mother was born when there was only a "horse and buggy." She lived through a period where she saw the "horse and buggy" turn into radio, then to Model T Fords, to the eradication of polio, men walking on the moon, computers and cell phones.

She always stayed with the value that she knew was true — family. Mom's focus was always to take care of the family and their needs. Mom was active in Blue Birds and Camp Fire Girls. Her abilities in creating art from almost anything became well-known. Mom made Easter bunnies from ribbon and old Ivory soap bottles. She made exquisite wreaths from pine cones and apples. Mom was the original "recylist." Mom took care of the world around her with the same care she tended her family. Mom's love of plants and flowers was always evidenced in her house and yard. Her devotion to her granddaughters was extraordinary. Mom was a devout Catholic. Funeral dinners, wedding celebrations — Mom helped at each and every one. Her willingness to give to everyone that needed help was a hallmark of her character.

Mom went "home" on Monday, Nov. 14, 2011. She will join her family, Herb and Mary Jansen, John (Margret) Jansen, Rosemary/Jan (Jim) Reynolds, Anne (Bert) Winchell, Agnes (Earl) Baldwin, Marie (Nick) Ries and Magdalen Jansen.

Leona's life will be celebrated with a funeral service at 2 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, with Pastor Dale Metzger officiating. A private family entombment will take place at a later time. Friends may call at Reynolds Funeral Chapel an hour prior to the service.

Messages of condolence and support may be left at www.reynoldschapel.com.

Roberta Nell 'Robbie' Kinard

May 24, 1971-Nov. 8, 2011

WENDELL • It is with deep sadness I notify family, friends and associates of the demise of Roberta Nell "Robbie" Kinard on Tuesday, Nov. 8, 2011, at home in Wendell, Idaho.

Robbie, a native of Charleston, S.C., was born May 24, 1971, the only child of Willard Grady Kinard Jr. and Cynthia Nell Rigdon Kinard. Her death is a result of complications of colon cancer. Her strong will and courageous war with this enemy lasted more than three years. Through this battle, her strengths lie from within; her smile, laugh and humor was ever constant.

Robbie attended Sonoma Valley High School in Sonoma, Calif., graduating in 1989. Upon graduating, she returned to her beloved Charleston, S.C., and family there. She resided and worked there for many years, her last employment being with Chembion Environmental Inc. Being very creative and talented, she crafted many beautiful items with sea shells collected from the beaches of the Charleston area and Jacksonville Beach, Fla.; scrapbooking; cross-stitching; candle-making and a desire to know her past, which began her search for ancestors. She shared her love with family, friends and especially her pets, dachshunds, Elizabeth and Karma; and cats, Girlie and Teensie Jane.

She is survived by her mother, Cynthia (stepfather, Jim) McCarley of Wendell; Aunt Donna (Uncle Steve) Gonzales; cousins, Melanie, Courtney and Grady; second cousins, Taylor and Frank; Uncle Michael Kinard; cousin, Kelsey; Aunt Lorna Roberts; cousins, Erin and Robert, all of whom reside in North Charleston, S.C.; Great-aunt Alberta Sapp; cousin, Debbie of Elizabeth City, N.C.; cousin, Kathy Gordon of Smokes, S.C.; Aunt Susan; and cousin, Hannah Kinard. She was preceded in death by grandparents, Roberta and Inslee Rigdon and Willard and Lucille Kinard; Great-uncle Ed Sapp; Uncle Roger Rigdon; Uncle Bobby Kinard; Great-aunt Frances; and many family members she met through her ancestral search for her roots.

At my daughter's request, there will be no service in Idaho. This delightful and wonderful child is missed.

Gently and compassionately, her request for cremation has been carried out by Demaray Funeral Service, Wendell Chapel.

Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarafuneralservice.com.

July 31, 1953-Nov. 11, 2011

BURLEY • Kent Allen Karlson was born July 31, 1953, to Edwin L. and JoAnn Jones Karlson. He passed away Friday, Nov. 11, 2011, from a short illness.

He lived in the Declo and Burley areas most of his life and attended schools in Burley. After high school, he attended CSI and achieved an associate degree in welding. In his younger years, Kent did carpentry and construction work for several local contractors. Later on, he did landscape work for Wes and Betty Karlson, which he enjoyed immensely. He was quick to learn new concepts and had a lot of natural ability. He was an accomplished artist and could draw just about anything. He enjoyed hunting, fishing and going camping with friends and family. Kent loved to play pool and, if you were foolish enough to accept his challenge, he would usually beat the socks off you. He was quite charming and was good with the ladies.

Kent is survived by his brother, Dennis (Marilyn) Karlson; niece, Shelly DeWitt; nephew, Jeremy Karlson; and the three "squirrels," Nevin DeWitt, Zoe Ann DeWitt and Shera Prague. He was preceded in death by his father and mother.

A memorial service will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

At Kent's request, cremation took place under the direction of the Rasmussen Funeral Home and Cremation Service.

He started his own company, Horizon Homes, in 1992 and built several homes around the Jerome County Golf Course. He began working for JM Kitchens in 1997, where he was a superintendent. He enjoyed finish work and building custom cabinets. His interests were fishing, being outdoors and working in his yard. He loved gardening (especially growing tomatoes and corn), collecting old bottles and anything NASCAR. One of his favorite hobbies was fly-tying.

Harlan Eugene Mink Jr.

Jan. 8, 1956-Nov. 10, 2011

THREE CREEK • Harlan Eugene Mink Jr., 55, of Three Creek, Idaho, passed away Thursday, Nov. 10, 2011, after a brief illness.

Harlan was born Jan. 8, 1956, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Harlan and Elsie Mink. Harlan was raised and educated in Twin Falls, Idaho. Shortly following his graduation from Twin Falls High School, his first employment was driving truck for Nelson's Inc. He then moved to Rogerson, Idaho, where he found work as a ranch hand for Bruce Kunkel and then for Swan Land and Livestock on the House Creek Ranch (later owned by Aslett Ranch). Cremation is under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home. A memorial service will be held from 3 to 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Hurshell Eugene Culley

July 2, 1916-Oct. 25, 2011

HEALDSBURG, Calif. • Hurshell Eugene Culley peacefully passed away at his home in California on Tuesday, Oct. 25, 2011, at the age of 95.

The only son and eldest child of Thurman and Grace Culley, "Hursh" was born July 2, 1916, in McCleansboro, Ill., infected with malaria he'd contracted from his sick, pregnant mother. Not expected to live, he was placed in a shoe box on the oven door for warmth and fed tiny spoons of coffee. In 1917 after he and Grace recovered, the family moved to Rupert, Idaho. Thurman found work as a teamster at the Minidoka Dam project, where Hursh grew up with his beloved sisters, Mary Jo Gosney, Millie Fournier and Gladys Massio. His beloved niece, Judy (Parkin), was added to the family along the way. Playing the trumpet in dance bands, Hursh paid his way through Albion State Normal School in Albion, Idaho. He competed in college swimming, boxing and track events. Graduating in 1936, he was business manager of the Albion Panthers "Sage" yearbook. That summer, he worked as a health aide for the U.S. Department of Forestry on the Idaho/Montana border.

After marrying his childhood sweetheart, Myrtle Deno, in October of 1936, Hursh took his first teaching job in Castleford, Idaho. Jesse Owens, winner of four Olympic gold medals in track in Nazi Germany's 1936 Olympics, came to Castleford that year advertising he could outrun the fastest horses in that area. The races were held at the school. Since Hitler had unsuccessfully tried to refuse to award the gold medals to him because he was black, Jesse was well-known. Hursh and his students got to watch Mr. Owens win most of his races that day and, of course, Hursh asked him how he did it.

Leaving Castleford for Ketchum, Idaho, in 1940 for a position as principal, he enjoyed famous visitors like Bing Crosby and Gary Cooper who frequented the Sun Valley Lodge. To encourage his students in the literary arts, he invited Ernest Hemingway to his school but turned him against using some of his more colorful words in his presentation. The summer of 1941 found Hursh as a forest ranger on Mount Baldy. Both he and Myrtle were teaching in Ketchum when World War II broke out. Knowing military duty was coming, Hursh and now pregnant Myrtle, moved to Portland, Ore., where he became a Boy Scout executive. Their first child, Patricia, and their second child, Charles, were born, and he became acquainted with Alfred Hitchcock, an ardent Boy Scout volunteer.

After serving in the Army of the Pacific from 1944 to 1946, Hursh returned to Scouting, first in Portland, then in Pocatello, Idaho, where his third child, Philip, was born. From Pocatello, Hursh accepted a position as chief executive of the BSA Council in Great Falls, Mont. Deciding the minus 40 degree winters were not for him, the family left Montana in 1949, moving to Blackfoot, Idaho, where he opened "Culley Motor Company," selling Studebakers and Packards in the post-war auto boom.

While there, his fourth child, Clista, was born, and he completed his BA degree at Idaho State University in Pocatello. In 1955, Hursh returned to Scouting in San Francisco, Calif., and earned his master's degree (cum laude) with an administration certificate at San Francisco State College. In 1966, he returned to teaching in a small town in California until he retired to Healdsburg, Calif., at age 65.

Hursh was a Mason and Shriner for more than 60 years. He visited Galveston, Texas, where his eldest grandson graduated from the University of Texas Medical School and was so pleased and proud of the new Shriner's Burn Center located just across from the medical school. He was active in Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis. Hursh was a quiet man, who dedicated his life to loving his family, improving the lives of young people and learning. He was a giving person. His love was unconditional. His wry sense of humor often caught his audience off guard — once "tongue in cheek" telling his great-granddaughter, Jessica, he was sorry she hadn't had enough money to buy herself designer jeans that didn't have holes in the knees.

Hursh was a gentleman, a scholar, a charmer and funny. He chronicled family history in photos. He truly was interested in you and your lives and was open to new, exciting experiences like celebrating his 90th birthday with his eldest grandson's family in Texas. The highlight of that trip for him was "cruising" the byways and highways, as a passenger in Steve's classy new Porsche. He was an artist, designing and making jewelry and beautiful woodcarvings. His handmade hook (no machinery allowed) was displayed at the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay.

Those of us who remain here loved him dearly and will miss him so much. But we know he's happier in his new home where his unfailing belief in God has taken him.

Hurshell was preceded in death by his beloved wife of 68 years; his son, Charles; his sister, Mary Jo; and brothers-in-law, Ken Gosney and Al Massio. He is survived by his children, Patricia, Philip and Clista; his grandchildren, Steven and Christopher Dockstadter, Clista Culley Reyes, Shauna Larsen, Will, Philip and Brandy Hand; his great-grandchildren, Jessica Ayre, Jessica and Wesley Dockstadter, Dana, Makenna and Peter Larsen, Eva Reyes, Zoey and Hailey Morgan, and his wonderful family, Millie (Hank) Fournier, Gladys Massio, Judy Parkin, Kathy Mooso, Bob and Ron Massio and Gary Fournier and their families and multiple cousins.

If you wish, you may honor Hursh Culley with a "living memory donation" to his great-nephew, Troy Mooso, who was injured in and is recovering from a terrible auto accident this year. Donations may be sent to Troy Mooso, in care of Kathy and Don Mooso, 32 E. 100 S., Rupert, ID 83350. Please include a note telling Troy and his family how you knew Dad. Thank you.

To compete for the 2011 title, sign up by calling Melissa Davlin at 735-3234 or e-mailing her at mdavlin@magicvalley.com. She'll give you the instructions and location for our Nov. 28 cookie-tasting panel.

BLAIR KOCH • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

At Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery, owner and winemaker James Holesinsky stirs this year's batch of fermenting merlot grapes. The mixture must be stirred several times a day for weeks.

4 Great Local Wines for Thanksgiving

BY BLAIR KOCH

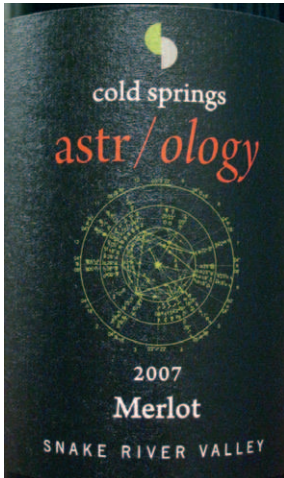

For the Times-News

Wine probably didn't make the menu for the first Thanksgiving in Plymouth, Mass., in 1621. The Pilgrims might have shared some ale, but water likely dominated the beverage menu.

How times have changed. Today's Americans love raising a glass in celebration of the day. Here's what four local wineries suggest for your holiday meal:

Cold Springs Winery

7853 West Ringert Lane, Hammett

For years, merlot dominated Thanksgiving wine sales, and although many varieties are brought to the table today, this wine is a still a crowd pleaser.

Cold Springs consistently produces award-winning merlot, and co-owner Bill Ringert suggests its 2007 Astr/ology, which took a gold medal at this year's Idaho Wine Competition in Boise.

"This is a very nice red merlot, very easy to drink," Ringert said. "I'd say that now that our vines are getting a bit older — some are nearly 10 years old — that the grapes are maturing ... that's leading to the wine being very, very good."

Buy Astr/ology for $13.99 a bottle Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise in Twin Falls, or at the winery (call 366-7993 for appointment).

DOWNTOWN WINE TASTING

Looking for new wines to love? This week's wine tasting at a Twin Falls business could help.

It's 7-9 p.m. Saturday at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise, 147 Main Ave. W. Cost is $30. The flight of 18 to 21 tasting wines, presented by distributor representatives, will be from specialty wineries around the world and vary in price from $15 to $100.

Dayle Click-Schmitz's recipe for NuNu's Chicken and Homemade Noodles is served Nov. 4 at her Twin Falls home. It's a family recipe that's particularly satisfying when the weather turns cold.

Chicken Noodle Love

A Twin Falls woman is writing a cookbook for her family, but she's also happy to share the recipes with you. Here, she demonstrates a stick-to-your-ribs dish that's ideal for fall.

BY ANDREW WEEKS

aweeks@magicvalley.com

The aroma of chicken broth teased the senses during a chilly day in Dayle Click-Schmitz's kitchen.

As she demonstrated how she makes her homemade noodles, a pot of broth and noodles simmered nearby, waiting to be eaten.

Dayle's homemade chicken and noodles is a favorite meal of her husband, Herman Schmitz. It also is one of the recipes in a forthcoming cookbook by Dayle, to be published early next year by Filer-based Misty Peak Publishing.

"I hope to have it done by about March," she said, noting that many of the book's recipes have been passed down through her family, including the chicken and noodles she prepared on that overcast day in Twin Falls.

"The recipe dates back to the Great Depression days of 1929-1935," Dayle said. "It was a way of stretching what food was available to feed large families or groups of people, with good, nourishing stick-to-your-ribs food ... with little cost."

A noodle maker sat unused on top of her kitchen cabinets — along with other cooking utensils that decorate the kitchen — as Dayle flattened five balls of dough.

"It's easier than using a noodle maker," she said. Flatten the dough to about as big as pancakes, she said, and then place them one on top of the other. Be sure to use plenty of flour, though, so they won't stick together.

When Dayle had stacked the dough circles, she then rolled them into a log and sliced them — once lengthwise down the middle and several times across.

With Olive Oil, Beware of Labels

BY JANE BLACK
Special to The Washington Post

Paolo Pasquali does not like to be called a crusader for good olive oil. But when I visited his oleoteca, the tasting room he built at Villa Campestri, his "olive oil resort" in the hills north of Florence, it was impossible for him to talk of anything else.

At lunch, dinner and breakfast the next morning, Pasquali rhapsodized about the storied history of the olive and fumed about consumers' feckless embrace of cheap oil. And, for most of the time, his pitch sounded like that of any number of upstart chocolate, coffee or cured-meat producers: Like wine, my product deserves more respect.

That is, until Pasquali reached into an imposing antique sideboard and pulled out a silver tray holding several small, brown apothecary bottles. "Smell this," he said, waving one labeled "rancid" under my nose.

It didn't smell bright or floral, like Pasquali's oil. But it did smell familiar. The rancid oil smelled like most olive oils I had had at restaurants and cooked with at home.

It has been about 30 years since many Americans began giving up their lard and Crisco for more-healthful extra-virgin oil. But that extra-virgin label has proved a poor guide to choosing the highest-quality oils. According to a recent study by the UC Davis Olive Center, 73 percent of the top five brands of imported extra-virgin olive oil failed to meet accepted international standards for extra-virgin. Moreover, a separate report revealed that 44 percent of consumers actually preferred rancid or fusty oil, a possible result of the prevalence of substandard extra-virgins available to American consumers.

Now, a new movement is afoot to redefine extra-virgin, teaching consumers — and the marketplace — what makes high-quality olive oil. Last year, Pasquali helped build an olive oil tasting program at the Culnary Institute of America in California's Napa Valley. An international organization, 3E, has created a "super-premium" category for extra-virgin oils that meet exacting standards of production, milling and storage. At the "Beyond Extra Virgin" conference this summer in Cordoba, Spain, the executive director of the International Olive Council, the guardian of the current extra-virgin standard, acknowledged that better label information should be a "priority for the sector."

New students of olive oil often believe the product was better before the sector industrialized. But extra-virgin oil is, in fact, a 20th-century invention. New technology allowed for faster picking and pressing and, therefore, fresher oil. Modern storage techniques eliminated exposure to heat and light, two factors that lead to rancidity. Indeed, the European Parliament invented the term "extra-virgin" only in 1960. Many Americans believe it refers to the first pressing of the olives, but in fact it's a baseline standard that embraces any oil made by solely mechanical means, instead of chemical treatment, and with less than 0.8 percent of free acidity, a laboratory measurement of rancidity. (Formerly, the limit was 1 percent.) Extra-virgin oils also are forbidden to have "disgusting odors such as rancidity, putridity, smoke, mold and olive fly."

"Extra-virgin just means it's free of defects," said Greg Drescher, executive director of strategic initiatives at the Napa CIA. "Can you imagine a stamp of approval in the wine industry that says it's good enough because it's not defective?"

The popularity of the Mediterranean diet in the 1990s was a boon to the olive oil industry. But olive oil fraud was also on the rise, according to a forthcoming book, "Extra Virginity," by Tom Mueller

(Norton, 2011). Generous government subsidies encouraged farmers and corporations to overstate their production figures and to make up the difference with inferior olive oil or even seed oils. Americans aren't the only consumers who are cheated. "There is no difference between Tuscany and the United States," said Pasquali, who takes his own olive oil with him to local restaurants. "We're all in the same boat."

Rampant fraud makes it difficult for high-quality producers to compete. But critics say the extra-virgin standard fails even the market of legitimate oils. The minimum sensory and chemical requirements admit a huge range of oils. Some are perfectly fine. Others are extraordinary. "But as a consumer, it's impossible to look at a shelf of bottles and be able to guess which is which," said Drescher.

International organization 3E (pronounced "tray ay" because it's Italian) is trying to change that with the debut of its "super-premium" category. The group gives that stamp of approval to 21 producers, including Pasquali's Villa Campestri and McEvoy Ranch, in Marin County, Calif. To receive the 3E certification, oil must pass rigorous chemical and sensory analyses. (Where extra-virgin allows oils with 0.8 percent free acidity, for example, 3E allows just 0.3 percent.)

Producers also must submit documentation about cultivation, milling and storage practices and on-site inspections. The aim is to certify the oil in a particular bottle and not — as is done for, say, Burgundy and Bordeaux wines — the estate. So a producer's oil might make the cut one year but not the next. Super-premium olive oils cost far more than the supermarket stuff. Half-liter bottles run between $30 and $55.

ONLINE: Better Homebrew through Science

Times-News Night Editor Nate Poppino blogs about all things beer at "Idaho On Tap." Here's what's on his mind this week:

"Twin Falls is on the map this week, folks! We've contributed to beer science (well, it's kinda scientific)."

"More specifically, local homebrewer Mike Duppong is the one contributing. Duppong is part of the latest Brew Your Own/Basic Brewing Radio collaborative experiment, looking at whether rehydrating dry yeast has any effect on your final product."

"Rehydration is what it sounds like — waking up your dried yeast in (usually) a warm water bath. It's a practice many homebrewers with dry yeast consider essential (read: those who remember to actually do it, unlike yours truly). But there's also concern that hydrating the yeast, if not done perfectly right, can lessen its effectiveness."

Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery

4477 A Valley Steppe Drive, Buhl

Winemaker James Holesinsky's Purple Oktopus 2009 syrah was one of two varieties earning gold medals at this year's Denver International Wine Competition. The syrah is perfect for Thanksgiving festivities, Holesinsky said, because it's such an easy-to-drink red. "It's good to serve because even beginner wine drinkers will enjoy it. It's not a dry wine and will actually leave your mouth watering," he said.

Purple Oktopus' dark berry and raspberry jam flavors balance well with crackers-and-cheese appetizers, throughout any main course and even dessert.

With an eco-friendly screw-top and easily served at room temperature, this wine is a dandy to have on hand for unexpected visitors. It's $14.99 at Rudy's in Twin Falls.

Turkey-day Wine Tips

Sommelier Jon Melone of Jerome offers a few tips for making sure the wines you offer your Thanksgiving guests are well received:

Snyder Winery

4060 N. 1200 E., Buhl

Want a wine that's likely to please everyone and go with your whole Thanksgiving meal? Owner Claudia Snyder suggests her 2007 White Riesling. Prepared in a "more German style," Snyder's Riesling isn't as sweet or golden in color as her more popular counterparts.

"There are pear and green apple flavors in the White Riesling, a slight tartness to it," Snyder said. "But it isn't as syrupy sweet, making it a good fit for turkey, and not just dessert, although it is still a great dessert wine, too."

The wine is $19.99 a bottle at the winery or Boise Co-Op.

Carmela Vineyards

1289 West Madison Ave., Glenns Ferry

For a versatile and affordable wine at the end of the meal, look for Carmela's Old Vine Sweet.

"Pop it in the fridge; served chilled, it matches best with chocolate dishes," bookkeeper Yvonne Decker said. "Or, something fun is to warm the wine in a Crock-Pot and then add in mulling spice mixes, some brown sugar and it makes nice hot toddy."

The grapes in this wine are a "winemaker's trade secret," Decker said, but expect a full-bodied red with hints of cranberry and black cherry. Carmela wines are distributed to nearly every grocery store in the state. At $10.99 a bottle, it's no wonder Old Vine Sweet is one of the winery's bestsellers. Pick up a bottle or two for Christmas, too.

Why bother with a noodle maker? Dayle Click-Schmitz flattens dough for her homemade noodles.

Dayle Click-Schmitz separates noodles that she shaped and cut by hand.

Noodle

The result: Noodles ready to be placed into a pot of chicken pieces and broth.

"Some people like to shake off the extra dough," she said. "But I like to leave it on because it makes the broth thicker."

A smiled played across Herman's face when Dayle dished up bowls a few minutes later.

"It's pretty tasty," he said.

Dayle, 75, has been cooking since she was a teenager in Southern California. She'd always heard that the way to a man's heart was through his stomach. "So I thought, I better learn to cook," she said. She found out later that the saying might not be entirely true: Her first husband left her to raise three children on her own.

She and Herman were married in 2007. Now that she has raised her family — she also has five grandkids and two great-grandchildren — and is thinking about a time when she is no longer with them, Dayle wanted to leave something of herself behind.

With about 300 recipes, her cookbook is titled: "Nunu's Talk'n Atacha With Her Cookbook!"

"My mother was called Noni and my grandmother was called Nana," she said. "So when the grandkids came along they decided I needed to be called Nunu. It got to the point where everybody knows me as Nunu."

She wanted to publish before Christmas so she could give the books as presents. But a virus infected her computer, causing her to lose most of the manuscript.

In a panic, she called friends and family, asking if they had any of her recipes. They responded, and Dayle started again to compile the recipes.

Dayle drew the illustrations for her book, including the cover — a female potato figure dressed in high heels, an apron and chef's cap, with a wooden spoon in her hand. Dayle, who is quick to laughter, named her "Miss Idaho Potato."

The book also will contain several pictures of Dayle over the years, starting when she was a baby. It's something she hopes her family will cherish.

"This is going to be a legacy to leave my children," she said.

Nunu's Chicken and Homemade Noodles

For the chicken and broth:
3 pounds of chicken (thighs, legs and/or breasts with skin)
Chicken bullion granules (to taste, if needed)

In a large pot, cover chicken completely with water. Place pot over medium-high heat and bring to a boil. Lower heat and continue cooking until chicken is falling away from the bones.

Remove chicken from the cooked broth; set aside until it's cool enough to handle with your hands. Remove skin; remove meat from bones. Cut meat into bite-sized pieces and set aside.

Strain chicken broth and place it back into the pot. Add chicken bullion granule to taste, if needed.

For the noodles:

3 eggs
6 tablespoons milk
1 1/2 teaspoon salt
3 cups flour

Beat the eggs in a bowl, and then combine eggs, milk and salt. Add enough flour that when stirred together it makes a stiff-sticky dough.

On a floured surface, take a ball of dough (about the size of a large lemon or small orange) and flatten into a pancake-like circle (about the thickness for pie crust). Repeat procesure. Place the circles on a clean dish towel and sprinkle liberally with flour. Stack the circles in layers, with plenty of flour between. Be sure to include flour on top of the stack.

Next, roll the stack as if you were making a jelly roll. With a sharp knife, cut across the roll, making 1/4- to 1/2-inch slices. Sprinkle with more flour, as needed. Separate the noodles and spread loosely; let them sit while you heat the broth back to the boiling point. Drop noodles into boiling broth a handful at a time (do not dump the whole pile in all at once). Using a long-handled spoon, separate noodles as they're added to the broth. Cook for 10 minutes.

Add chicken chunks back to the noodles and broth, and serve.

Note: As you drop the noodles into the boiling broth, you also will be dropping excess flour. This is good, as it will thicken the broth.

Surprising Yet Simple Dessert

WASHINGTON POST

Simple and seems like a good idea: elements of praise that apply to this quick dessert from legendary Spanish chef-restaurant Ferran Adria. Adapted from Adria's "The Family Meal: Home Cooking With Ferran Adria."

Mango With White Chocolate Yogurt

6 servings.

5 ounces white chocolate, preferably with at least 33 percent butterfat, such as Valrhona Le Blanc 35 percent 3/4 cup plain whole-milk or low-fat yogurt 24 skinned hazelnuts, toasted and caramelized, for garnish (see note) 3 large ripe mangoes (about 1 1/4 pounds total)

Break the chocolate into small pieces and place in a large heat-proof bowl. Suspend the bowl over a medium saucepan filled with a few inches of barely bubbling water (over medium heat). Let the chocolate melt slowly, stirring occasionally until smooth. Place the yogurt in a mixing bowl, then gradually stir in the melted white chocolate to form a sauce. Cool to room temperature. Break the caramelized hazelnuts into coarse pieces. Peel the mangoes and cut their flesh away from the pit, creating long, thick half-moons, or cut into bite-size chunks. If you leave them in long strips, figure 4 strips per serving. Divide the mango among individual plates. Spoon equal amounts of the yogurt mixture over each portion, then sprinkle with the hazelnuts. Serve right away.

Note: Toast hazelnuts in a small, dry skillet over medium-low heat for 4 to 6 minutes, shaking the pan occasionally so the nuts turn a slightly darker shade of brown all over. Cool. To caramelize the toasted hazelnuts, lay a piece of parchment paper or a silicone liner on a heat-proof surface. Heat 1/4 cup of sugar and 1/4 cup of water in a small, dry skillet over medium-high heat, stirring just until the sugar has dissolved. Cook without stirring for several minutes to form a lightly golden syrup. Add the toasted hazelnuts and stir to coat, then use a slotted spoon to transfer the nuts to the paper or silicone mat, separating them so they won't stick together. Cool completely. Per serving (using low-fat yogurt): 160 calories, 3 g protein, 16 g carbohydrates, 10 g fat, 6 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 40 mg sodium, 0 g dietary fiber, 14 g sugar.

Have Your Cake and Eat It Too

BY ROCCO DISPIRITO
For The Associated Press

I have joined the cupcake craze. Except that I don't want the calories, carbs and fat that come with these yummy delights. So I shrunk my cupcakes — not their size, but their fattening ingredients.

After all, people say you can do anything with a cupcake. Fill them. Leave them plain. Decorate them. So why not make them healthy?

I came up with this recipe for red velvet cupcakes, which remain satisfyingly large, yet have just 98 calories and under than 3 grams of fat each. Compare that with the standard cupcake, which can crash in with 513 calories and 26 grams of fat.

Red velvet cake has been around for decades. It started as the signature dessert at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. The cake had always captured my heart. But for dieting it plays hard to get. I wanted to come up with an adaption that would capture the richness of its namesake (minus the butter, sugar and white flour).

Red velvet cake is a very mild chocolate cake, but it is chocolate cake nonetheless. And yes, it is red. Unsweetened cocoa powder and natural red food coloring round out the tradition in this recipe. As for healthing it up, I did that with some simple but tasty substitutions you can try with just about any baked good. Here are the key changes:

- Whole-wheat pastry flour and flaxseed meal. Both are used to replace nutritionally bankrupt white flour. Whole-wheat pastry flour lends a light, fluffy texture to the cake. Add flaxseed meal (ground flaxseeds) and you've got a cupcake high in omega 3's, protein and both insoluble and soluble fiber. Flaxseed meal is a dieter's dream, as it helps you feel full. Look for it in the natural or bulk sections of the grocer, as well as in the baking aisle.

- Stevia and agave syrup. Both replace the sugar, while cutting calories. Stevia is an herb known for its natural (and intense) sweetness with zero calories. It bakes beautifully. Agave is a honey-like sweetener that is sweeter than sugar, so you don't need to use much. And make sure you buy raw agave, as some are highly processed.

Red velvet cake tradition-

ally is served with a cream cheese frosting, and I haven't veered from tradition. After your cakes have cooled, you'll frost them with a mixture of sugar-free vanilla pudding and low-fat cream cheese (this takes mere seconds to whip together). The frosting has a nice sweet flavor and hardly any calories. Trust me, for anyone in your family who prefers their desserts as decadent as they come, they won't be disappointed!

Tips:
• Add 1 teaspoon of cocoa powder and 1 packet of stevia sweetener to the frosting for chocolate frosting. It will only add 1 calorie per cupcake.

- Spraying the paper liners with nonstick spray keeps very low-fat cupcakes, such as these, from sticking to the paper.

- Don't have enough time? These cupcakes also can be "baked" in the microwave. Place paper muffin liners in four 6-ounce microwave-safe custard cups. Spray the papers and custard cups lightly with cooking spray. Spoon the batter into the paper liners. Microwave on 50 percent power (medium) for 1 minute and 20 seconds to 4 minutes, or until the tops feel just firm when lightly touched. The cupcakes will puff up high while cooking, then deflate when the mi-

2 teaspoons unsweetened cocoa powder
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons prepared vanilla sugar-free, fat-free pudding (such as Jell-O)
2 tablespoons fat-free cream cheese, softened

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Line 4 large (2 1/2-inch) muffin cups with paper liners. Lightly coat the liners with cooking spray.

Separate the egg yolks and whites, discarding 1 of the yolks. Place the remaining egg yolk in a medium bowl. Place the 2 egg whites in another medium bowl.

To the whites, add 2 packets of the Stevia, 1 teaspoon of the vanilla, and 1/2 teaspoon of the food coloring. Mix and set aside.

Add the remaining 3 packets Stevia, 1 teaspoon vanilla, and 1/2 teaspoon food coloring to the egg yolk. Whisk the yolk mixture for 3 minutes. Add buttermilk and agave.

Whisk until combined. In a small bowl whisk together flour, flaxseed meal, cocoa powder and salt. Add to yolk-buttermilk mixture and beat on low just until combined.

Using an electric mixer, beat the egg white mixture on medium to high until stiff peaks form. Working in 3 batches, fold the egg whites into the buttermilk mixture, being careful not to deflate the whites.

Spoon the mixture evenly into the muffin cups. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes, or until the tops spring back when lightly touched. Transfer the cupcakes to a wire rack and cool.

Meanwhile, to prepare the frosting in a small bowl combine the pudding and cream cheese. Mix until smooth. Spread or pipe evenly over each cupcake. Per serving: 98 calories; 3 g fat (24 percent of total calories, 1 g saturated); 54 mg cholesterol; 14 g carbohydrate; 5 g protein; 2 g fiber; 187 mg sodium.

Chicken and Plantain Moqueca. While plantains may resemble bananas, they taste and cook more like a tuber.

COOKING THE ‘BIG BANANA’ OF THE STARCH WORLD

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

They’re sold by the bananas, but they probably belong closer to the potatoes.

Because while plantains may resemble bananas, they taste and cook more like a tuber. And in much of the world, that’s how these starchy fruit — sometimes called a “cooking banana” — are used. In Africa and India, they often are used as the base of stews and curries, much as potatoes would be.

In this one-pot dinner from Brazil (inspired by a similar recipe in Leticia Moreinos Schwartz’ “The Brazilian Kitchen”), simmered plantains make a delicious base to a chicken curry. They also provide a natural starch that thickens the sauce.

When shopping for plantains, look for large, firm fruit. The thick skin can vary from green to yellow to black. Green is unripe, while yellow to black colors indicate the plantains are ready. But be warned — even ripe plantains are not pleasant eating when raw. Stick with recipes such as this one for cooking.

Got leftover plantains? They also can be thinly sliced and fried, then dusted with salt, paprika and sugar.

Chicken and Plantain Moqueca

Start to finish: 45 minutes.
Servings: 4.

- 2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into chunks
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 2 green bell peppers, cored and cut into chunks
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
- 1 tablespoon minced jarred jalapeno slices
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 15-ounce can coconut milk
- 1/4 cup tomato paste
- 2 bay leaves
- 3 ripe (skins should be yellow and black) plantains, peeled and cut into 1-inch chunks
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro

Place the chicken in a 5- to 6-quart Dutch oven. Sprinkle it with salt, pepper and 2 tablespoons of the oil. Stir to coat, then cover and set aside for 10 minutes.

Set the Dutch oven over medium-high heat. Sauté the chicken until lightly browned, about 6 to 8 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to transfer the chicken to a bowl. Cover and set aside.

Return the Dutch oven to the heat and add the onion and bell peppers. Sauté until softened, about 4 minutes. Add the garlic, ginger and jalapenos, then sauté for another minute. Return the chicken to the pot, then add the broth, coconut milk, tomato paste and bay leaves.

Bring the mixture to a boil and cook, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Add the plantains and cook, uncovered, for another 15 minutes, or until the plantains are soft but not mushy.

To serve, remove and discard the bay leaves, season with salt and pepper, then sprinkle with cilantro.

Rum Cream Enlivens This Pumpkin Soup

THE WASHINGTON POST

Bursting with the warm flavors of fall, this soup is velvety and rich, a lovely starter to a several-course meal. Or, with a salad and some nice brown bread and butter, a fine entree.

You’ll need to soak 1 cup of apple wood chips in water for 1 hour.

The pumpkin can be smoked up to 2 days in advance. Scoop out the pulp, put into a sealed container and refrigerate.

The soup recipe is from columnist Jim Shahin; the rum cream recipe is adapted from “The Inn at Little Washington: A Consuming Passion,” by Patrick O’Connell and Tim Turner (Random House, 1996).

Smoked Pumpkin Soup With Rum Cream

8 to 10 appetizer servings or 4 to 6 main-course servings.

- For the soup:
- 1 medium (about 4 pounds) pumpkin
 - 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
 - 1 medium shallot, minced
 - 5 cups no-salt-added chicken broth
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - 1/8 teaspoon freshly ground allspice
 - 1/2 cup orange juice
 - 1/2 cup heavy cream
 - 1/8 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste
 - Dash freshly ground black pepper
- For the rum cream:
- 1 cup heavy cream
 - Finely grated zest and freshly squeezed juice from 1/2 lemon (1/4 teaspoon zest and 1/2 teaspoon juice)
 - 3 tablespoons good-quality dark rum
 - Pinch sugar

For the soup: Drain the water from the wood chips.

Prepare the grill for indirect heat: If using a charcoal grill, light the coals. When the coals are hot, scatter the wood chips directly onto them. If using a gas grill, place 1 cup of the drained chips in a smoker box or an aluminum foil pouch punctured on top with a fork to release smoke. Place the smoker box or foil pouch between the grate and briquettes, close to the flame. Preheat on high until you see smoke, then reduce the heat to medium (350 degrees).

Meanwhile, discard the pumpkin stem. Cut the pumpkin in half from top to bottom. Scrape out all of the seeds and fiber.

When ready to grill, place the unpeeled pumpkin halves, flesh sides down, on the far side of the grill, away from the coals or flame. Smoke the pumpkin for 60 to 90 minutes, until a fork slides easily through the flesh.

Remove the pumpkin from the grill. When cool enough to handle, use a spoon to scrape the pumpkin flesh from its skin into a bowl. Discard the skin.

Melt the butter in a large pot over low heat. Add the shallot and cook for about 5 minutes, until soft. Add the broth, cinnamon, allspice and orange juice. Increase the heat to medium-high and bring to a boil, then reduce the heat to medium-low. Stir in the pumpkin; cook for 10 minutes, then add the cream and nutmeg, stirring to incorporate. Turn off the heat. Let cool for about 20 minutes.

Working in batches, transfer the soup to a food processor. Puree until smooth, then strain into a clean pot. Place over low heat and keep warm. Season with the salt and pepper.

For the rum cream: Pour the cream into the bowl of a stand mixer or handheld electric mixer. Beat on medium speed until soft peaks form. Add the lemon zest and juice, rum and sugar. Continue whipping until the cream is almost stiff. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve.

Divide the soup among individual bowls; top each portion with equal amounts of the rum cream. Serve right away.

A Beautiful Crusty Bread Even You Can Bake

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Don't be intimidated by those beautiful and delicious crusty breads that call to you from the bakery.

Even amateur home cooks can crank out gorgeous loaves with a crisp shell and a wonderfully soft center that just begs to be slathered with butter and eaten right from the oven.

We created this simple crusty bread recipe for just those cooks. It's quick (at least in terms of hands-on time), simple and might just convince you to give up store-bought bread.

Easy Crusty Bread

Start to finish: 3 hours (20 minutes active). Makes 1 loaf.

- 1 1/2 cups slightly warm water
- 1/4 cup whole-wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 teaspoons instant yeast
- 3 cups bread flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- Cornstarch, for dusting

In a large bowl, combine the water, whole-wheat flour, sugar, yeast and 1 cup of the bread flour. Stir until smooth. Let stand until doubled in size and bubbly, about 60 minutes. Add the rest of the flour and the salt and knead in the bowl until smooth. The dough will be very sticky. Cover and let rest for 15 minutes. Fold the dough over on itself. Repeat the rest-and-fold process 5 more times. The dough should become very elastic and stretchy with big bubbles of air. Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper, then dust it with cornstarch. Using floured hands, place the dough on the prepared baking sheet. Allow to rest for 15 minutes. Spritz the loaf with water, then bake for 25 minutes, or until golden brown and hollow sounding when tapped. Transfer to a rack to cool fully cool.

This recipe is quick, simple and can be enjoyed fresh out of the oven.

Can CSI Rally And Beat the 10 Count?

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

Cartisser

As of Thursday, Mission ‘X’ is officially a go. That’s the day the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team embarks on its quest for a record 10th NJCAA Division I championship at the national tournament in West Plains, Mo. The Golden Eagles, seeded fifth in the 16-team field, already own the record for most D-I titles — they broke a tie with Miami Dade when they won it in 2009 — and are riding high on momentum they gained from the Region 18 Tournament.

“All of us wish we could keep playing (immediately),” Cartisser said in a recent interview. “Eventually, it got to the point where we knew we had the talent to get here, and we had no choice but to do it or go home.” In the region tournament, CSI was faced with a 2-0 set deficit in the semifinals against Salt Lake Community College, after which the Eagles not only won three straight to knock off the Bruins to clinch a spot at nationals, they straight-setted host North Idaho College the next day to win the title. But that will have been 12 days in the past when CSI steps onto the court against Mineral Area College (Mo.) on Thursday. Not that the Eagles are worried. “I don’t think we have to bottle that (level of play),”

Coach K Alone Atop Division I List

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Mike Krzyzewski passed Bob Knight, then spent some special time with his former coach. The man known simply as “Coach K” became Division I’s winningest coach when No. 6 Duke beat Michigan State 74-69 on Tuesday night in the State Farm Champions Classic. The Blue Devils (3-0) gave Krzyzewski his 903rd win, breaking the tie with Knight, Krzyzewski’s college coach at Army and his mentor throughout his professional career. Junior guard Andre Dawkins had 26 points for Duke, which took control with a 20-1 run that gave the Blue Devils a 61-41 lead with 9:17 to play. Then it was just a matter of counting down the minutes until the celebration could get under way. With Knight sitting across the court at the ESPN broadcast table, and with several former players in the stands — many able to attend because of the ongoing NBA lockout — Krzyzewski moved to the top of the list in front of a sell-out crowd of 19,979 at Madison Square Garden. Krzyzewski went right across the court to Knight when the game ended. They were cheek to cheek in a hug. Krzyzewski, tears in his eyes, broke away and Knight pulled him back, hands on his shoulders, then one final slap of the shoulder. “I just told Coach I love him,” Krzyzewski said. “I wouldn’t be in this position without him. It’s a moment shared. I know he’s very proud and I’m very proud to have been somebody who’s worked under him and studied him and tried to be like him.”

Lighthouse Christian's Dillon Wilson calls out on defense during practice Tuesday afternoon in Twin Falls.

Crashing To A Halt

Opposing offenses finding out that Lighthouse Christian’s once-porous defense is now sturdy

dbashore@magicvalley.com

Lighthouse Christian hasn’t had any trouble scoring points this football season. Stopping the other team, however, has been an issue. Rather, it used to be. After struggling in the early part of the season, particularly in losses to Hagerman and North Gem, the Lions turned it on down the stretch defensively. That they wouldn’t be prepping for the Class 1A Division II state championship game without their defense is a valid assertion. “I don’t know that there was one moment or one thing,” said junior linebacker Dillon Wilson, who made a key interception in the team’s quarterfinal shutout of Salmon River. “We just grew closer together and started playing like family.” Cohesion goes a long way toward solidifying any unit in sports, but it helped that the Lions took their lumps in a couple of early-season games. That allowed them to sort out the best defensive packages and personnel schemes for any kind of opponent they might face. Since a 45-24 loss to Castleford, Lighthouse Christian has won four official games in a row, plus an extended playoff against Mackay for the right to go to state. During those four games, the Lions have outscored their opponents 220-40 (268-46 if you count the playoff). “We found our defensive identity midway through the season. With the players we had, we felt it was best to have more of a power, physical defense,” said Lighthouse Christian coach John van Vliet. “We’ve got the personnel to do a number of things. The defense we had for Salmon River was us preparing to face an offense that threw 53 times, but we can throw different looks against different teams if we need to.” The Lions concede they’ll have their hands plenty full with Carey, a team that is as fast and as fundamentally sound as they come in eight-man football. But their plan is just to play hard and manage the moment.

VERLANDER DOMINATES BATTERS, VOTING ALIKE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • There was little question Justin Verlander would unanimously win the AL Cy Young Award. Now, the far more intriguing question: Will he take the MVP, too? “Do I think it’s possible? Yes. Would I like to win it? Of course,” he said during a conference call. “It’s kind of a weird scenario.” No starting pitcher has won the MVP trophy since Roger Clemens in 1986, with Dennis Eckersley the last reliever to get it in 1992. Many say pitchers shouldn’t win the MVP, period. But Verlander’s season — he won the pitching version of the Triple Crown, led Detroit to its first division crown in 24 years and drew every first-place vote Tuesday in the Cy Young race — has ratcheted up the debate in a crowded MVP field that includes Curtis Granderson, Jacoby Ellsbury, Jose Bautista, Miguel Cabrera and more. “Pitchers are on the ballot,” Verlander said. Bolstering the case for all pitchers, Verlander pointed to the “tremendous effect we have on the day of our game.” If he doesn’t win, Verlander said he’d like to see Granderson, his former teammate, get the award. Verlander breezed to the Cy Young,

CSI Men Slip to No. 6 in Poll

The College of Southern Idaho’s lone loss of the young season, to Monroe College (N.Y.), proved costly in this week’s NJCAA Division I Men’s Basketball rankings as the 4-1 Golden Eagles fell five spots to No. 6 in the poll, released Tuesday. Monroe College jumped up to No. 1 after beating the 2011 NJCAA champion Golden Eagles 71-54 at its season-opening tournament in New Rochelle, N.Y. Nov. 5. CSI was ranked No. 1 in the preseason polls, with Monroe No. 2. Coffeyville Community College (Kan.), Palm Beach State (Fla.), Indian Hills CC-Ottumwa (Iowa) and Northwest Florida State College round out the top five in this week’s poll. Sandusky TV Interview Could Haunt Him at Trial

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. •

Former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky's admission that he showered with and "horsed around" with boys could be used by prosecutors trying to convict him of child sex-abuse charges. Experts in criminal law and crisis management questioned Sandusky's decision to give a TV interview in which he said there was no abuse and that any activities in a campus shower with a boy were just horseplay, not molestation.

"Mr. Sandusky goes on worldwide television and admits he did everything the prosecution claims he did, except for the ultimate act of rape or sodomy? If I were a prosecutor, I'd be stunned," said Lynne Abraham, the former district attorney of Philadelphia. "I was stunned, and then I was revolted."

Abraham, who led a grand jury probe involving 63 accused priests from the Philadelphia archdiocese, was retained this week to lead an internal investigation of The Second Mile, the children's charity founded by Sandusky, from which he allegedly culled his victims.

The child sex-assault charges filed against Sandusky this month have toppled Penn State's longtime football coach, Joe Paterno, and the university's president, Graham Spanier. The school's athletic director and vice president are accused of not reporting what they knew to police and have left their posts.

Sandusky is charged with abusing eight boys over the span of 15 years. He told NBC on Monday that he was not a pedophile but, in retrospect, should not have showered with boys.

"I could say that I have done some of those things. I have horsed around with kids. I have showered after workouts. I have hugged them, and I have touched their legs without intent of sexual contact," Sandusky said Monday on NBC News' "Rock Center." "I am innocent of those charges."

When NBC's Bob Costas asked him whether he was sexually attracted to underage boys, Sandusky replied: "Sexually attracted, no. I enjoy young people, I love to be around them, but, no, I'm not sexually attracted to young boys."

Sandusky apparently decided to talk to Costas by phone Monday at the last minute, with the blessing of his attorney, Joseph Amendola, who was in the studio.

because we've been getting after each other so much in practice," said freshman outside hitter Emily Ottinger. "Competition is healthy and we weren't really getting at each other earlier in the season. We knew we had talent, we just had to step up and prove it."

Proving it on the national stage won't be easy. Should CSI get past Mineral Area, it would face a potential quarterfinal match against fourth seed San Jacinto-Central, out of Texas. The Ravens beat CSI in four sets earlier in the season.

If higher seeds prevail elsewhere in the tournament, CSI could face undefeated No. 1 seed Blinn (Texas) in the semifinals and meet either Western Wyoming, which beat CSI twice in the regular season, or defending champion Western Nebraska after that.

Despite a gauntlet-like path to double figures in the championship column, the team is bullish about its chances.

"If we can come out and play the way we did in Coeur d'Alene, I think it's in our favor," Cartisser said.

This is Lighthouse Christian's first state championship appearance, in the first season it ever qualified for state in football. Carey owns five state titles, including three of the last five, and has a runner-up finish in that span as well.

While the Lions are confident they'll be ready for the challenge, they won't be 100 percent sure of how well they'll manage their emotions on the indoor carpet of Holt Arena.

"I'm sure we'll be excited, but it's our job to make sure we channel that into focus on the field," said senior Gabe Heath, who hasn't played this postseason due to a leg injury but hopes to play on Friday. "We'll know on the opening kickoff. Once you get that initial hit, the butterflies are all gone and it's just football."

"We hold Carey in the highest regard because they have such a great program, but we'll be ready to play."

NBA PLAYERS FILE ANTITRUST LAWSUITS AGAINST LEAGUE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Locked-out NBA players including Carmelo Anthony and Kevin Durant filed class-action antitrust lawsuits against the league on Tuesday in at least two states, moving pro basketball's labor dispute from the negotiating table to federal court.

Attorney David Boies, who represented the NFL during that sport's work stoppage and now has been brought aboard by basketball's players, said the NBA lockout violates antitrust laws by refusing to allow players to work.

Boies also said NBA Commissioner David Stern's ultimatum to the now-disbanded union to accept the owners' last economic model or face a harsher proposal "turned out to be a mistake" that strengthens the players' case because it proves that the collective bargaining process had ended.

"If you're in a poker game, and you run a bluff, and the bluff works, you're a hero. If someone calls your bluff, you lose. I think the owners

TOP 25 ROUNDUP

Ohio State Beats Florida

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio • William Buford scored 21 points and No. 3 Ohio State weathered Florida's fast start to beat the Gators, 81-74.

Jared Sullinger added 16 points, Deshaun Thomas had 15 and Aaron Craft 13 points and seven assists for the Buckeyes (2-0), who forced 16 turnovers and hit 27 of 34 free throws to pull away in the second half.

Freshman Bradley Beal had 17 points and Kenny Boynton 15 for the Gators (1-1), who have never beaten a top-3 team in a true road game. Down as much as 16 points, they got as close as five with under a minute left before Buford sealed it with two foul shots.

NO. 5 SYRACUSE 98, ALBANY, N.Y. 74

SYRACUSE, N.Y. • Kris Joseph and James Southland each scored 19 points to lead the Orange to the win in the NIT Season Tipoff.

Syracuse (3-0) advances to the tournament semifinals against Virginia Tech in New York.

The Orange beat Manhattan 92-56 in the first round on Monday night with a high-tempo attack that produced 42 points on the fast break, while the reserves contributed 50 points. This time they dominated the boards early to take charge against Albany (1-2).

Gerardo Suero had 31 points, Logan Aronhalt added 20 and Mike Black had 11 for the Great Danes, who scored 26 points from the free throw line to 12 for the Orange.

NO. 10 MEMPHIS 97, BELMONT 81

MEMPHIS, Tenn. • Will Barton scored 23 points and Wesley Witherspoon added 22 to lead the Tigers, who shot 7 of 14 from 3-point range.

Joe Jackson added 20 points and seven assists, and freshman Adonis Thomas scored 12 for Memphis (1-0).

J.J. Mann scored 18 points and Ian Clark had 16 for Belmont (0-2), which was coming off a 77-76 loss at No. 6 Duke last Friday. Kerron Johnson chipped in 13 points.

Memphis led by 12 in the first half before taking a 46-39 advantage into the break. The Tigers extended the lead to 18 by hitting 10 of their first 14 shots after halftime.

NO. 11 BAYLOR 77, SAN DIEGO STATE 67

WACO, Texas • Senior Quincy Acy and freshman Quincy Miller sparked an 18-5 run in the second half to lead the Bears.

Miller, a 6-foot-9 forward, had 20 points and has led the Bears (3-0) in scoring in all three games this season. Acy finished with 13 points.

The game was tied at 32 early in the second half before the two Quincys took control. Miller scored seven points during the 5-minute spurt, while Acy added nine.

Chase Tapley had 28 points with eight 3-pointers to lead San Diego State (3-1), which won 34 games last season and went the NCAA round of 16.

NO. 13 XAVIER 86, IPFW 63

CINCINNATI • Tu Holloway returned from a one-game suspension and scored 24 points to lead Xavier.

Holloway was suspended for the season opener against Morgan State for playing in too many summer league games, a violation of NCAA rules.

Xavier (2-0) got a big second half from junior guard Mark Lyons, who finished with 21 points. Lyons had just two points at halftime but went 4 of 6 from 3-point range after the break. Musketeers freshman Dezzmine Wells scored 12 of his 16 points in the first half.

Frank Gaines had 22 points for IPFW (1-1).

NO. 18 VANDERBILT 80, BUCKNELL 68

NASHVILLE, Tenn. • Jeffery Taylor scored 14 points and led five players in double digits to help Vanderbilt overcome the loss of two starters to injuries.

The Commodores (2-1) bounced back after losing to Cleveland State to drop from No. 7 in The AP Top 25. John Jenkins, the SEC's leading scorer last season, tweaked his right ankle in the loss, while senior center Festus Ezeli is out with a sprained knee until at least December.

Brad Tinsley, Lance Goulbourne and Kedren Johnson picked up the slack with 12 points apiece for Vanderbilt. Rod Odom chipped in 10.

Joe Willman led Bucknell (0-2) with 17 points and Joshua Singleton had 12.

NO. 20 CINCINNATI 73, JACKSONVILLE ST. 59

CINCINNATI • Dion Dixon scored 16 of his 20 points in the first half and the Bearcats weathered a sluggish second half for the victory.

Cincinnati (2-0) opened with a 26-9 run behind Dixon's 3-point shooting. He finished 4 of 8 behind the arc, where the Bearcats went 8 of 12 overall. Cashmere Wright had 23 points.

Jacksonville State (1-2) got 16 points apiece from Brian Williams and Mason Leggett.

Cincinnati turned the ball over 20 times and after pulling ahead 44-21 at halftime, they allowed the Gamecocks to go on a 15-1 run in the second half and trim the lead to 10 points. The Bearcats went 6 minutes, 8 seconds without scoring early in the second half.

3s to start Duke's big run. As Michigan State (0-2) kept missing shots down low, Seth Curry hit another 3 for Duke and then the Blue Devils closed the run by making 6 of 6 attempts at the free throw line.

The Spartans kept Krzyzewski coaching to the final minute. They finally started hitting shots and forcing turnovers to close to 74-69 with 12.9 seconds left.

It wasn't the Cameron Crazies cheering their coach on after a few nights waiting and sleeping in Krzyzewskiville. But a pro-Duke crowd started to get loud as the Blue Devils took control in the second half, as well as the fans from Michigan State, Kentucky and Kansas and a bunch of regular old New Yorkers including filmmaker and New York Knicks fan Spike Lee.

"The basketball gods are good ... they put two guys who've done a lot in the game together, special moments, and tonight is another one of those special moments," Krzyzewski said of Knight's presence at the historic game.

Tiger Woods of the U.S. team hits an approach shot during a practice round prior to the start of the President's Cup golf tournament at Royal Melbourne Golf Course, in Melbourne, Australia.

WOODS SENSES THINGS ARE LOOKING UP DOWN UNDER

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia • The motto for Tiger Woods these days is to move forward, and that covers a lot of territory.

Woods nearly made it through his entire interview Tuesday at the Presidents Cup before he was asked about the prospects of playing Adam Scott and ex-caddie Steve Williams, who caused such a stir over a racial comment he made to disparage Woods two weeks ago.

Would it not be better to face him early and get it out of the way?

"It's already done," Woods said. "I addressed it last week and I said life goes forward, not backward."

He is ready to put behind a summer of injuries, especially after such a promising showing last week in the Australian Open when he was twice within one shot of the lead on the back nine and finished third, two shots behind, his best result against a full field in two years.

Woods even sounded resigned to moving beyond such a successful partnership with Steve Stricker.

It took a dozen years and 16 partners in the Presidents Cup and Ryder Cup until Woods found what appeared to be the perfect partner. Two years ago at Harding Park, they became the first tandem to win all four team matches in the Presidents Cup, and the first to go 4-0 in any cup in 30 years.

They won two out of three matches at the Ryder Cup last year.

But there were growing indications that U.S. captain Fred Couples might break them up for some matches when the Presidents Cup gets under way at Royal Melbourne.

"Hopefully, we'll get put out there together," Woods said. "I know that we feel very comfortable with one another and we were talking about it today. There's a certain comfort level about each other's games."

He added, however, that the pairings for the week have not been decided.

"A lot of pairings have not been set in stone," Woods said.

Woods was excited the way Stricker hit the ball in a practice round Tuesday, particularly because Stricker last competed Sept. 25 at the Tour Championship while dealing with a neck injury that weakened his left arm. The turf is firm at Royal Melbourne, yet Stricker never flinched when he had to go after a shot.

The problem isn't finding a partner for Woods, rather finding a good fit for Dustin Johnson.

A year ago, the United States thought it had a dream pairing in Johnson and Phil

Mickelson, a pair of swash-bucklers who often play money games against each other in practice rounds at the majors.

They lost both matches badly in Wales, with neither one reaching the 17th hole.

"Me and Phil will not be playing together this week," Johnson said with a grin. "We do better playing against each other than with each other. We're good buddies. We love playing each other. But as Phil put it, we didn't have good energy."

Where does that leave Johnson? Someone suggested Woods, and he didn't blink.

"That's a possibility," Johnson said. "I don't know if we're supposed to be saying who we are playing with yet. ... Obviously, me and Tiger will be a great team if we do play together. It's up to Captain Couples, whether he wants to put us together."

Roethlisberger Nursing Fractured Right Thumb

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH • Ben Roethlisberger has an unexpected homework assignment during the Pittsburgh Steelers' bye week: protecting a fractured right thumb.

Roethlisberger injured the thumb on his throwing hand sometime during Pittsburgh's 24-17 win over Cincinnati on Sunday. He's not sure when it happened, only that he noticed it while coming out for the second half.

"It was hard to determine it on the sideline, but we did all the tests (Monday), and it's fractured in there," Roethlisberger said.

Roethlisberger didn't miss a snap as the Steelers improved to 7-3. He completed 7 of 11 passes for 70 yards in the second half, including a perfect 4-for-4 during the game-winning drive in the third quarter.

"It hurt, but (Steelers head trainer) John Norwig did a great job taping it up, making a quick splint out of tape and going with it," Roethlisberger said. "Squeezing the ball is the hardest part, but it's a good thing that I had a glove on it because that helps gripping it a little bit."

This isn't the first time Roethlisberger has played with a busted thumb. He suffered a similar injury in 2005, though it didn't prevent him from leading the Steelers to their fifth Super Bowl title.

There should be no issues this time either, though Roethlisberger will continue to play with a splint. Pittsburgh travels to Kansas City on Nov. 27.

"I won't have to throw for a week or so, (until) next Wednesday or whenever we practice next week," Roethlisberger said. "So, that'll be a good time for it to rest. For me, it'll just be getting used to throwing with a splint on again and a glove on, which I've done before."

Wide receiver Mike Wallace said he wasn't aware Roethlisberger was even hurt, though the quarterback work a black brace during a shortened practice on Tuesday.

"I didn't even notice to tell you the truth," Wallace said.

It's not unusual for Roethlisberger to play through minor injuries. He suffered a sprained foot in a loss to Houston on Oct. 2 then tied a franchise record with five touchdown passes in a victory over Tennessee.

"That's just Ben," Wallace said. "You know that something small isn't going to slow him down like that."

Roethlisberger has been playing some of the best football of his career during Pittsburgh's surge following a 2-2 start. The Steelers have won five of six going into their bye week despite an inconsistent running game and a defense that's put up its usual stellar numbers but has struggled to take the ball away.

Fish Thrilled to Make ATP Final

ASSOCIATED PRESS

When it comes to the ATP World Tour Finals, Mardy Fish is quick to admit he's simply happy to be there. "I'm sort of taking the approach of, 'Kind of excited to be a part of this thing,'" said

Fish, who will be making his debut at the season-ending tournament for the top eight men in tennis a few weeks before his 30th birthday. "I know well enough that you can't take it for granted," the American said Tuesday on a conference call with reporters. "There's no guarantee that anyone's going to be back here doing this thing again, and so I'm going to take it all in." Fish, who was born in Minnesota and now lives in California, will face 10-time Grand Slam champion

Rafael Nadal when play begins Sunday in London. Fish's other opponents in round-robin play will be Roger Federer, owner of a record 16 major singles titles, and Jo-Wilfried Tsonga. "There's really not too many holes there — apart from me, I think," Fish said with a chuckle. "I still don't feel like I really belong in that group. But I'll take it. I'll enjoy it for sure." The tournament's other four-man group includes No. 1 Novak Djokovic — who won the Australian Open, Wimbledon and U.S. Open this season — along with Andy Murray, David Ferrer and Tomas Berdych. Fish is ranked No. 8; he reached his career-best of No. 7 in August. Before this season, he never had been better than 16th. He went 43-22 in 2011, with one title and two runner-up finishes, and reached the quarterfinals at Wimbledon for the first time before losing there to Nadal. Today is Wednesday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 2011. There are 45 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 16, 1961, House Speaker Samuel T. Rayburn, 79, died at his home in Bonham, Texas, having served as speaker since 1940 except for two terms as minority leader of the Democrats.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1776, British troops captured Fort Washington in New York during the American Revolution.
In 1885, Canadian rebel leader Louis Riel was executed for high treason.
In 1907, Oklahoma became the 46th state of the union.
In 1917, Georges Clemenceau again became prime minister of France.
In 1933, the United States and the Soviet Union established diplomatic relations.
In 1959, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The Sound of Music" opened on Broadway.
In 1960, Academy Award-winning actor Clark Gable died in Los Angeles at age 59.
In 1966, Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard was acquitted in his second trial of murdering his pregnant wife, Marilyn, in 1954.
In 1973, Skylab 4, carrying a crew of three astronauts, was launched from Cape Canaveral on an 84-day mission.
In 1981, the Senate confirmed Dr. C. Everett Koop to be surgeon general. Oscar-winning actor William Holden, 63, was found dead in his Santa Monica, Calif., apartment. On the ABC-TV soap opera "General Hospital," Laura Webber (played by Genie Francis) married Luke Spencer (played by Anthony Geary).

Ten years ago: Investigators found a letter addressed to Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., containing anthrax; it was the second letter bearing the deadly germ known to have been sent to Capitol Hill. A University of Georgia football fan rushing to catch his flight ran past guards and through a passenger exit at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, forcing officials to halt flights; the man, Michael Lasseater, was later sentenced to five weekends or ten days in jail and 500 hours of community service.

Five years ago: Democrats embraced Nancy Pelosi as the first woman House speaker in history, but then selected Steny Hoyer as majority leader against her wishes. African, Arab, European and U.N. leaders agreed in principle to a joint African Union-United Nations peacekeeping force for Sudan's Darfur region. Gunmen abducted a private security team of four Americans and an Austrian in southern Iraq. (All five were later slain.) Minnesota Twins' ace Johan Santana won the AL Cy Young Award. Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman died in San Francisco at age 94.

One year ago: President Barack Obama presented the Medal of Honor to Army Staff Sgt. Salvatore Giunta, the first living service member from the Afghanistan and Iraq wars to receive the nation's top military award. U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel was convicted on 11 of 13 charges related to financial misconduct, prompting fellow lawmakers to censure the 80-year-old New York Democrat. The engagement of Prince William and Kate Middleton was announced in London. Hollywood publicist Ronni Chasen, 64, was shot to death in her Mercedes on Sunset Boulevard. (Police believe the killer was Harold Martin Smith, who took his own life when confronted by officers.) Roy Halladay of the Philadelphia Phillies unanimously won the NL Cy Young Award.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Again I took the intellectual eye For my instructor, studious more to see Great truths Than touch and handle little ones."

— William Wordsworth

In today's deal you reach a comfortable small slam, and if playing teams or rubber bridge, you would probably claim 12 tricks and move on to the next deal. However, since you are playing matchpointed pairs, the overtrick might turn out to be of critical importance.

At pairs what matters is whether you beat the other pairs in any deal, not by how much you beat them. So if you play six spades and make it with an overtrick, you score a matchpoint at the expense of everyone who failed to make that overtrick and, equally, one matchpoint from everyone who missed slam or went down in a grand slam — no more, no less. The quantum of difference is irrelevant.

Here you have 12 top winners. You can arrange to ruff a club in dummy, but that is with the long trump, which does not generate an extra trick; so you must try something else.

Win the heart lead with dummy's king and run six rounds of trump at once, pitching the diamond nine on the last. Then take the two heart winners, pitching a club from dummy, and cash the club ace. If the club jack is high, cash it. If not, lead to your diamond ace, cash dummy's diamond king, and hope the diamond eight will be high.

If you look at the full deal, you will see that after the major-suit winners were cashed, East had to unguard one of the minors, so your squeeze did work.

ANSWER: In competitive auctions of this sort, you must compete with extra trumps or side-suit shape, regardless of whether you are minimum in high cards or have a little to spare. Here, you know you have nine trumps between you and must therefore bid on to three spades. Your target is not so much to make three spades every time you bid it, as to make your opponents' lives tougher — they'd do the same for you!

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I receive a business communication from someone unknown to me with my first name in the salutation, as in "Dear Robert," it immediately goes into the trash.

Being addressed by my first name in this context is just plain wrong. Since I don't know the person who is sending the correspondence, I find the informal tone to be highly improper.

Please remind your readers — particularly those in business — about your booklet on correspondence and communication, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

I have been accused of being "old school." However, there are rules and guidelines governing written communication, and it seems as though they are being ignored. Would you please inform people about the proper way to write? And is your "Letters" booklet still available?

— CALL ME
"MISTER C.," SAN JOSE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR MISTER C.: I hope that by the time this email sees print, you will have cooled off. The communications that offend you probably were sent as part of a mass mailing generated by a computer. If that isn't the case, then the individuals who drafted them may not have realized that in business correspondence, the salutation should read:

Dear Ms. Smith
Dear Mr. Carson

The "Letters" booklet is still available and covers additional salutations that are helpful to know, including how to address a senator or congressman, a clergyman, etc. "How to Write Letters for All Occasions" can be ordered by sending a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds), to Dear Abby — Letters Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. My booklet also contains helpful suggestions for writing letters of congratulations; difficult topics to address such as letters of condolence for the loss of a parent, spouse or child; and thank-you letters for birthday gifts, shower gifts, wedding gifts and those that arrive at holiday time. (A tip: Keep a notepad handy and write down what immediately comes to mind when the gift is opened. This can be helpful if later you are at a loss for words!)

Judging from the high volume of email and snail mail I receive, letter composition is something that is not always effectively taught in school. My booklet can provide a helpful assist for anyone who needs a quick and easy tutorial, and it is particularly helpful for parents to use as a way to easily teach their children how to write using proper etiquette. Keep it in a drawer and dip into it as needed.

DEAR ABBY: I am 8 years old. At the bottom of a letter, sometimes people write XOXO. Which one means hug and which one means kiss?

— ANNA IN MISSOURI

DEAR ANNA: The "X" means kiss and the "O" signifies a hug.

P.S. Some people write "SWAK" on the flap of the envelope, which stands for "sealed with a kiss."

IF NOVEMBER 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are more ambitious than usual during the next several months. It is wise to put forth as much effort as possible to achieve your financial and business aims before the end of the year. During January and the first half of February, avoid taking on extra obligations or making crucial changes. That is a period when your luck is in low supply and others could be disapproving. May is the best month to launch key projects and plans or to make key decisions because your judgment is sound. Mid-July is an excellent time for making business or financial decisions.

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ask and you shall receive. There's no point in running yourself ragged to accomplish a goal when all you need to do is ask for help. Look for lucrative opportunities to show up on your front door.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lend an ear. Because of your trustworthy nature, you are likely to become privy to sensitive information. Information given to you in trust should be kept in trust, but you can still benefit from it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be the brightest star at the center of your universe. Show off by throwing your weight around a little. Pick up the tab and spread good cheer while inviting others to become a member of your "team."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tread carefully. You are in no position to have your way, so don't step on anyone's toes. When confronted by obstacles, take the long way around, rather than trying to bulldoze them out of your way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It's the thought that counts. Go out of your way to perform a good deed, whether you expect the favor returned or not. A tough task will become infinitely easier if you rally friends and colleagues for support.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Know when to hold 'em and know when to fold 'em. Sometimes the best move in poker is to simply sit back and watch what the other guy does first. You will do better by following someone else's lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be generous up to a point. No matter how worthy a cause is, it is foolish to simply give away more than you can afford. Find the balance between showing genuine concern and taking sensible steps.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you don't know, don't pretend that you do. There is no shame in not knowing the answer. The wisest course of action is simply to ask a question and the next time someone asks, you will know.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find a partner. The load you've taken on may be a little too much to carry by yourself. Lighten your burden by bringing in some help. You exude confidence that makes you sexually attractive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't look down your nose at people. Shunning folks just because of their appearance could make you miss out on a valuable experience. The most unlikely people could turn out to be angels in disguise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't let your mouth write checks that your body can't cash. You may lose the opportunity unless you embellish the truth, but it might be a job you aren't equipped to handle. A superior may grant favors.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Consolidation is better than competition. Bring a rival around to your side by finding common ground to share. There's no need to engage in a contest when you are both working towards the same goal.
