Hunting Holiday Spirit

Cutting your own Christmas tree means hard work, but the rewards are many, as one Times-News reporter learned.

Times-News reporter Kimberlee Kruesi carries her subalpine fir tree back to the company truck after cutting it down Tuesday in the Sawtooth National Forest near Magic Mountain Resort. A permit to cut down a tree of up to 10 feet tall in the forest costs $5.

HANSEN • With snow tickling down my back and my fingers turning red, I quickly realized I wasn't coming home with a small tree.

It was the first time I had ever gone out to the woods to cut down a Christmas tree. I had a guide, a handsaw and a reporter's notebook to get me through the event. Unfortunately, I foolishly forgot to bring a pair of gloves.

Last Friday, the U.S. Forest Service began selling Christmas tree permits for those who would like to cut their own tree in the Sawtooth National Forest. The agency estimates it will sell close to 3,000 permits before Christmas. Demand has grown

About 200,000 Idahoans are expected to hit the road, rails or skies to get to their Thanksgiving destinations.

For Thanksgiving this year, Jon Trydahl plans to go with his family to enjoy a buffet at a casino in Jackpot, Nev.

The Buhl resident's plan means a trip of about 52 miles each way. But gasoline prices won't derail his plans – he points that gas prices have dropped in recent weeks.

He's not alone. AAA predicts more people this year are willing to travel to celebrate Thanksgiving, a trend anticipated for both the U.S. and Idaho.

Nationwide, an estimated 4 percent more people will hit the road or take to the skies this week than did so last year. Locally, AAA estimates a 4.1 percent bump for Idahoans.

Though it's a step toward signs of recovery, a wide gap remains before people travel as much for the holiday as they did several years ago before the Great Recession hit.

O'Leary Receives $20K for Track Project

The Twin Falls school has about a fourth of the money it needs to resurface its aging track.

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

A parent group at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School is one-fourth of the way to its goal of raising $100,000 to fix the school's track.

O'Leary's Parent Teacher Student Organization received a $20,000 donation Tuesday from the Twin Falls Optimist Club during a school pep assembly.

Now, the PTSO has $25,000 total for the project — resurfacing the Twin Falls school's outdoor track, which is in disrepair.

"We're a quarter of the way there and we've only been fundraising since the end of September," PTSO President Anna Scholes said.

The parent group still needs $75,000 for the project and Scholes says no donation is too small.

"We're hoping to get other individuals' and service clubs' help with our fundraising efforts," she said. Kiwi Loco also donated $310 to the project during the Tuesday assembly.

Keleigh Godfrey, past president of the Twin Falls Optimist Club, said club members knew they wanted to make a donation to O'Leary.

How to Donate

Tax-deductible donations can be made through the Twin Falls School District Education Foundation's website, www.ed.tfsd.org.

"When we found out there was a huge need for a track, we donated to that project," she said.

About $12,000 of the money donated to the project was raised through the club's "Wings & Things Ultimate Tailgate Challenge," a food competition in September.

Scholes said the school has also raised about $5,000 through "innovative fundraising ideas."

Students brought in about $1,300 through a class competition. The class that brought in the most money got to decide what activities they'd do in P.E. class for one week.

Another fundraiser — which brought in about $800 — featured "wrestling." Competitors wore ankle bracelets made out of Velcro and the goal was to pull them off their opponents' ankles.

The school is taking a break from track project fundraising for the next month to focus on its "Festival of Giving" — raising money for the Valley House homeless shelter and collecting canned goods for the Salvation Army.

Economy Would Suffer if Tax Cut, Jobless Aid End

A tax cut that reaches 160 million Americans and government aid for the long-term unemployed will expire at the end of the year and suck $165 billion out of the economy next year — unless Congress takes action. Economists hoped the so-called congressional supercommittee would decide whether to extend both measures. But the committee couldn't even agree on how to reach its main goal, cutting $1.2 trillion from the federal budget deficit.

Foster Parents Overcome Challenges for Kids in Need ve interviewed several foster and adoptive families in the four years I've been at the Times-News. It's a topic that has always interested me, both personally and professionally, so I attended the Idaho Adoption Day celebration at Twin Falls County's judicial building Friday.

Before heading over, I glanced through profiles on the Idaho's Wednesday's Child website, which features older children in the foster system who are waiting to be adopted. I recognized a couple of the profiles from the last time I did a story on foster families. It's been more than a year.

Those who foster and adopt children don't always see happy Annie-like endings. Parents have told me stories of unresolved grief and angry outbursts from the kids in their care. Some suffer from reactive attachment disorder, where children who have been neglected have a difficult time forming bonds. I've heard of children who hoard food, who have fetal alcohol syndrome, who lash out at siblings and pets. Some of the teenage girls in foster care are mothers themselves. Other teens are on probation.

But the kids are worth it, said Angel Lopez and Graciela Enriquez. The Jerome couple has fostered nearly 50 children in 20 years. On Friday morning, before the ceremony, they had finalized the adoption of the two newest members of their family, a brother and sister whom they had fostered.

Many of their foster charges were troubled, but Lopez knows the short time he spent with them has made a difference. "Even with just a little time, you have that space in their heart," Lopez said.

We sat through the ceremony, where Judge Richard Bevan and Judge Tom Borrensen gave remarks on adoption. As Sherry Hill of Twin Falls spoke to the crowd about adopting her now-adult daughter, Bevan wiped at his eyes, while Borrensen played with a toddler. Each of the adopted children walked away with a teddy bear, evoking excitement from the young ones and sheepish embarrassment from the teens.

The event's message was clear: Each of these kids deserves a chance to be loved, no matter how tough their lives have been.

Fourth Suspect Faces Trafficking Charge

TIMES-NEWS

Nearly two weeks after three people, including a husband and wife, were charged with trafficking marijuana, a fourth suspect was charged by investigators as the source of the weed.

According to a new criminal complaint, Michael and Robin Pendleton and Adrian Will allegedly got the marijuana by burglarizing the home of Pendleton's uncle. Michael Pendleton, 20, and Will, 23, told police they broke into the home of David Henderson, 35, at 465 Ostrander St. N. Pendleton said they stole the drugs and a .45-caliber handgun from the house because they knew his uncle was holding them.

Police initially found the Pendletons and Will with 591 grams of marijuana, a notebook with weights and prices, as well as 6 grams of methamphetamine, earlier in November at a Twin Falls motel.

A few days after their arrest, Henderson's home was searched, as he is on felony probation for forgery convictions out of Twin Falls County. Police located meth and interviewed Henderson about the marijuana. He allegedly told investigators that a friend from California had brought the marijuana to his house and stored it there.

Henderson faces a charge of felony trafficking in marijuana. He is held on $50,000 bond and is scheduled for a Dec. 2 preliminary hearing.

Preliminary hearings for both Michael and Robin Pendleton were continued to Dec. 9. Michael Pendleton is also charged with felony burglary and is slated for an additional hearing on Dec. 9. Will posted bail and was released from Twin Falls County Jail. A future hearing date for him has yet to be set.

CSI Carries $7.3M Into New Fiscal Year

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

The College of Southern Idaho ended its fiscal year with $7.3 million in fund balance money that wasn't spent.

"That's about what we like to carry forward," Vice President of Administration Mike Mason said, but the college hasn't always hit that benchmark.

The college's 2011 fiscal year ended June 30. CSI has enough carryover funding set aside to cover about 21/2 months of operating expenses.

CSI trustees unanimously approved the college's audit report during their Monday meeting. The college received an "unqualified opinion" – the highest possible review of its financial procedures.

"You're in good shape financially," said Ray Ware, a local accountant for Ware & Associates.

Last year, CSI's operating expenses totaled about $135 million, while total revenue came in at $137 million.

Nearly $14 million of the college's revenue came from student tuition and fees.

Last year, CSI also distributed about $67 million in federal financial aid to students. More than half of that went to students at the College of Western Idaho in Nampa.

CWI has about 8,000 students enrolled, about 1,000 fewer than CSI. However, CWI has more full-time students.

CWI opened its doors in spring 2008 and since it's not accredited yet, CSI is the sponsoring school.

Mason said the Nampa school could earn its accreditation as early as January. In the meantime, "really, we oversee the entire operation," he said.

faint of heart. Cold and icy weather can make driving on the windy roads dangerous. You also need to bring a sharp saw and have a vehicle capable of carrying the tree back to your home.

My Christmas tree guide, Karl Fuelling, graciously agreed to help me throughout the process. Fuelling has been a forester for the Forest Service for more than 20 years. As I tried to keep up with his long strides in the deep snow near Magic Mountain Resort, Fuelling pointed out the various kinds of trees I could cut down.

If you know where to look, he said, you can have your pick of lodgepole pine, known for its excellent needle retention and candle-like shape. There are a few Douout the national forest, but due to their popularity, they're harder to find. I wasn't committed to finding any particular tree and after 20 minutes of climbing in the snow, I was ready to cut down just about anything which is why I was thankful Fuelling finally pointed to a lone subalpine fir.

"It's a little taller than 10 feet but that's OK," Fuelling said with a smile. I think he wanted to see if I could actually carry the thing back to the truck by myself.

Sawing the tree down was easy. Lugging it back to the truck was another story. I sheepishly accepted a pair of gloves and carried the tree through the freshly blazed trail. Branches flicked in my face and the notebook I had stuffed in my back pocket fell out without me even noticing.

What surprised me was

"We're not boasting about some major increase," said Dave Carlson, spokesman for AAA Idaho. "This is the first increase of any note that we've seen this year during any of the holidays."

The estimate is based on economic data that includes employment, household net worth, gas prices and other travel costs like airfare and hotel rates.

It forecasts that 42.5 million Americans will travel 50 miles or further for Thanksgiving. That's up from 40.9 million last year. Of those, 200,000 are Idahoans, AAA said.

By comparison, 58.6 million traveled for Thanksgiving in 2005.

Gas prices this year are higher than last Thanksgiving. Idaho's current average price is $3.46 for a gallon of unleaded – 11 cents higher than the current U.S. average, and 52 cents higher than the state average a year ago. In Twin Falls, average prices on Tuesday clocked in at $3.53, some 7 cents above the state's average.

"Of late, prices in parts of the state have been generally dropping, an indication that retailers have some wriggle room and are willing to compete on price points," Carlson said in an email. "Twin Falls retailers have been a little slower to climb aboard the price reduction bandwagon, even though, theoretically, they're paying the same lower price for their product as their neighbors in eastern Idaho and in the Treasure Valley."

Of course, travelers will need to watch the weather. For the Magic Valley, the National Weather Service predicts partly sunny weather today with a high in the mid-50s. The earliest inclement weather coulds come Thanksgiving night, when there's a 30 percent chance

Minidoka Memorial Notes Reduced Demand, Increased Costs

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Minidoka Memorial Hospital saw reduced demand for inpatient services in fiscal 2011, while bad debt and charity costs continued to rise.

The county-owned hospital in Rupert took in slight ly more than $21 million in revenue for the year ending Sept. 30 and showed a 1 percent profit margin, taking in $222,423 more than it spent during the year. Hospital Administrator Carl Hanson said that a tentative settlement of $175,000 from Medicare will be added in as an adjustment to that figure later on.

The hospital received $164,000 in tax revenue from Minidoka County.

Bad debt and costs for charity work increased from $1,033,256 in 2010 to $1,115,039 last year. A 5 percent increase in rates for hospital service has been implemented by the hospital board for this year. That increase exempts home health and swing-bed room rates, which will remain unchanged.

The swing bed Medicare program allows rural hospitals to use their beds for people who need extra time to heal.

Swing bed days decreased from 721 to 484 over the past two years, while visits to the hospital's rural health clinic jumped from 11,248 in 2010 to 13,170 in fiscal 2011. The average length of a hospital stay was 2.6 days and the hospital had on average 49 patients in its nursing home.

The hospital's cash reserves increased from more than $5 million in FY 2011 to more than $10 million last year, due mostly to an ongoing renovation of the emergency room and exits.

"We're pleased that it's that low," Hanson said of the small error rate.

Idaho Falls Company, ISU to Produce Cancer-fighting Isotope

IDAHO STATESMAN

Idaho Falls-based International Isotopes Inc., a manufacturer of nuclear medicine products, and Idaho State University began a joint partnership this month to produce Copper-67.

Copper-67 shows great potential in treating non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma as well as bladder, colorectal and ovarian cancers, the company said. However, it is a difficult isotope to produce and has not been consistently available in the United States. That has restricted its evaluation in cancer research and clinical trials.

Idaho State University developed an advanced method for producing the isotope using technologies at its Idaho Accelerator Center in Pocatello. Under an agreement, Idaho State will produce the raw isotope and International Isotopes will transfer the material to its Idaho Falls headquarters, where it will be processed and packaged in its final form.

"To be able to play a role in treating these diseases is exciting and speaks to the university's role as a distinguished research university leading in opportunity and innovation through research, education and service," said Idaho State President Arthur Vailas.

Idaho State also is providing the expertise for chemical processing. International Isotopes will make an inkind contribution of equipment for the isotope processing, technical support for packaging and shipping, and supporting safety staff. International Isotopes said it is licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for this type of activity. Its plant is registered with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as a manufacturer of drug products, which will help facilitate the commercial development of Copper-67, the company said.

"It is especially noteworthy that we have been able to join the resources of an Idaho business and an Idaho university to proactively collaborate on the production of this potentially important medical isotope," said Steve T. Laflin, president and CEO of International Isotopes.

Tattoo Artist Found Guilty in 2001 Shooting Death

LEWISTON (AP) • A jury convicted former tattoo artist David Meister on Tuesday of first-degree murder and conspiracy after his retrial for the 2001 shooting death of a Moscow woman.

TIMES-NEWS

The jury returned the verdict after four hours of deliberations in the case involving the point-blank shooting of 21-year-old Tonya Hart, the Lewiston Tribune reported.

Meister, now 29, was convicted in 2003 and sentenced to life in prison. The Idaho Supreme Court later ordered a new trial, ruling that Judge John R. Stegner erred when he didn't allow Meister's defense to pursue a theory that another man killed Hart.

During Meister's 17-day retrial, jurors heard from Lane Thomas, who defense attorneys claimed confessed to other inmates in the Asotin County Jail that he had killed Hart.

But Thomas testified that he had nothing to do with Hart's death.

Police said Meister initially confessed in 2002 that Hart's boyfriend had paid him $1,000 to kill her. Meister later recanted, claiming

N. Idaho Meth Suspect Avoids Prison Time, May Regain Children

BY KEITH KINNAIRD Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • A Bonner County woman implicated in a methamphetamine cooking operation will dodge prison time and possibly regain custody of her children if she avoids relapsing.

Family and supporters of Shauna Lynn Crump wept as she received a suspended prison sentence of two to four years and placed onto probation on Monday.

Crump, 32, pleaded guilty to possessing the addictive stimulant as part of a plea agreement with the state. Crump and her husband were originally charged with trafficking meth after Bonner County sheriff's deputies uncovered a crude lab in their Bandy Road home in August. They were also facing felony child endangerment charges because of the drug-making operation in their home.

The couple's six children were placed into foster care following the raid, where they currently remain. A neighbor, Leuis Mark Blood, faced an identical set of charges.

Under the terms of the plea agreement, Brandon Crump and Blood pleaded slightly amended to charges of trafficking by attempted manufacture. The child endangerment charges were dismissed.

"Shauna realizes that her choices have had a ripple effect on society and, certainly, her family," Shauna Crump's defense attorney, Serra Woods, told 1st District Judge Steve Verby.

Woods urged Verby to adopt the Idaho Department of Correction's recommendation that she be given a suspended prison term and put on probation. Deputy Prosecutor Shane Greenbank also recommended a suspended sentence, but urged for retained jurisdiction, which would have imprisoned her for up to a year.

Greenbank based the recommendation on a presentence investigation which alleged that Brandon Crump cooked meth for a decade and Shauna Crump had been an off-and-on user of the drug since 18 and despite a growing family.

Shauna Crump said she had contemplated quitting drugs and said the meth that was being produced was strictly for personal use. She described her arrest as a blessing in disguise.

"Losing my kids is the hardest thing I've had to deal with," Crump said before the sentence was imposed.

Ask The Plant Lady Question: Dear Plant Lady,

I've noticed little tiny gnats flying around some of my indoor plants. They are so pesky! Why are they around and how can I make them go away? Signed "Gnatty'

Answer: Dear "Greenthumb Grannie" These pests are harmless to us but they can spread plant diseases. They feed on plant roots and seedlings. First of all, inspect plants before you buy them to make sure they are not infested, and then never overwater. There are products on the market to control them Gnattrol or Neem are both effective. Follow directions carefully. Other methods are yellow sticky cards you can purchase here at the store or using hydrogen peroxide at the rate of 1 part to 4 parts water as a drench. Good luck!

POLICE ACCUSE N. IDAHO MAN OF TRYING TO BURN WIFE

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A Dalton Gardens man doused his wife with gasoline and tried to set her on fire during a dispute in their home, authorities said.

Police arrested Daniel Zehm, 52, on Sunday. He was charged Monday in 1st District Court with intent to commit a serious felony and burglary for entering his own home with the intent of committing a felony.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports Zehm is being held in the Kootenai County Jail and is barred from having contact with his wife, Sondra Zehm.

Investigators said the couple began arguing Saturday night and continued into Sunday morning. At one point, Daniel Zehm burst into the home and dumped gasoline on his wife, saturating her clothing, police said. Deputies said he told them he "spilt a little bit of gas on her" because his wife would not leave him alone after she got upset about another woman.

"Daniel said he went out to the shop and got the gas to 'shut her up,'" their report said. "Sondra began to plead with Daniel and said, 'OK, OK, oh my God?"

After dousing her body and clothing, Daniel Zehm began flicking a cigarette lighter in his wife's direction, authorities said. She then

Mexico's War With Itself

President Felipe Calderon's security strategy, including his decision to deploy more than 50,000 soldiers against the drug cartels, hasn't reduced violence, and may in fact be fueling it.

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Monday:

exican President Felipe Calderon's most enduring legacy may well turn out to be the death toll from his country's bloody drug war. Since 2006, some 45,000 civilians have died, and the body count continues to rise. The homicide rate increased by more than 260 percent between 2007 and 2010. And a new report by Human Rights Watch indicates that drug cartels and organized crime aren't solely responsible for the bloodletting. The military, deployed to protect civilians, may have caused many of their deaths, according to the group's study.

The report is just the latest reminder that Calderon's security strategy, including his decision to deploy more than 50,000 soldiers against the cartels, hasn't reduced violence, and may in fact be fueling it.

Mexico's troubles have no easy fix. Poverty, corruption and weak rule of law are all part of the problem. So are extrajudicial killings and other abuses by the government and the military, according to the report. If Calderon intends to push forward with his military strategy - and he shows no sign of changing course — then he ought to, at the very least, implement some safeguards to address the abuses taking place at the hands of authorities. Judicial reforms would be a good place to begin. His administration took a promising step forward earlier this year when it appointed Marisela Morales to serve as attorney general. A former prosecutor who had led a unit dedicated to fighting organized crime, she has since fired dozens of federal prosecutors and moved to clean up corruption in the office.

But much more remains to be done. Most of the constitutional reforms approved on paper in 2008 remain on paper. That includes a call to move away from an "inquisitorial" legal system to an "adversarial" model in which defendants and victims can challenge evidence in open court. And calls for overhauling investigations of alleged human rights abuses have gone unanswered. Currently, only cases of torture, rape and enforced disappearance are handled by civilian prosecutors. Military investigators oversee all other prosecutions of abuse, including those involving extrajudicial killings. That has led to concern that investigations of soldiers accused of shooting civilians won't be impartial and will lack accountability. The United States, which has pledged more than $1.6 billion since 2007 to assist Mexico in fighting drug cartels and criminal gangs, can help. The Obama administration ought to urge Calderon to focus on strengthening Mexico's judicial system and encourage his government to adopt reforms.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for All the Hard Work on Vineyard Creek

November is another of my favorite months with garden, irrigation and yard work complete (or nearly complete). There is time for reading, reflection and Thanksgiving. So first of all thank you to the Times-News, a great way to begin a day with a column such as Virginia Hutchins' on Vineyard Creek. I also appreciate the carrier who has the paper waiting in my rural box each morning so I can reminisce with a cup of coffee.

I have been to Vineyard Creek and Lake at least three times. The first was probably in the early 1980s when my husband, Harold Brown, a BLM employee, was working on a mitigation project with Idaho Power and wrangled me a volunteer pass to join him for a day. There is a third way to reach the area across the river from the south side in an Idaho Power motorboat with Idaho Power workers at the helm. I remember being a little nervous crossing the Snake River and probably not too impressed as afterward we hiked through the weeds, brush and up rocky slopes as the project was for Idaho Power to bypass or prevent contaminants from reaching Vineyard Creek. On that trip, I don't really remember spending any time at the lake. But a big thank you to Idaho Power for not only providing us with electricity but cooperating on projects such as this that preserve our Idaho environment.

For a second trip I'll quote from my journal an entry on May 2, 1998, after my husband retired: "Our Saturday hike down to Vineyard Lake, warm, lovely day over lichen and moss-covered rocks from our parking spot to the canyon rim where we actually rock climbed to descend, beautiful creek and lake where we ate lunch across from a low falls. Exiting the lake, another higher falls was tumbling over a lava ledge. We saw crayfish skeletons discarded by a raccoon or otter and man's remnants of plastic bottles, beer cans and shotgun shells with which we filled the pack and coat pockets. Also a doe bolted in front of us and we heard shots. I'm sure the two polite teenagers we apprehended were not shooting at her; a gorgeous spot and a good, good day!"

My third trip was to show our son and daughter-in-law one of Idaho's unique areas. That day we also included their two dogs, Beagle and Lucky, and for two reasons I would not recommend taking dogs on the trip. First, we had to lower them over the rocks as we again crossed Ehler's property. Thank you to the Ehlers for the access. Second, I think wildlife probably doesn't need the dogs, and the dogs certainly don't need segments of the wildlife. Beagle with his nose promptly encouraged, Lucky to join him in the chase. Lucky complied, resulting in a face and mouthful of porcupine quills. Thank you, Dr. Hughbanks, for your work pulling quills that evening.

Last a big thank you to the Bureau of Land Management for its continued work in the Vineyard Creek area. I hope every visitor will respect and preserve it for future generations. JEANNE BROWN

Lighthouse Lions Football Team Deserves Kudos

The city of Twin Falls has an Idaho State Football Champion this year, and it is not Twin Falls or Canyon Ridge High schools. Emerging from the pack after three losses in their first seven games and going on a six game winning streak is the Lighthouse Christian School Lions. As the fifth seed in the state 1A D2 playoffs, they had to survive a play-in game with Mackay to just make it to the playoffs. What transpired is a modern day David vs. Goliath facing The Giants scenario; capped off with an unlikely win over heavily favored, and defending state champions, the Carey High Panthers, to the tune of 34-22. For any Lighthouse fan, it was surreal to say the least. But not to the eight young men on both sides of the ball that carried the Lighthouse Lions' banner. The Carey Panthers came to play, but the Lions emerged from their den with the mindset to conquer – and that they did. With diminutive Logan Bosma passing to the likes of Dylan Van Esch, Brad Wall and Gabe Heath and Eli Berndt in rotation; freshman Adam Taylor providing the spark with his broken field running; and Logan Vanderstelt, Donnie Aardema, Kade Evans and Trenton Leslie providing the blocking up front, the Lions were just too much for the Carey defense to handle.

Let's not forget the fearsome defense of Donnie Aardema, Logan Vanderstelt, Kade Evans, Trenton Leslie, Dillon Wilson, Dylan VanEsch, Adam Taylor, Brad Wall, with Philip DeMello, Gabe Heath, Andre Briggs and Eli Berndt in rotation, who held Carey to their lowest offensive output of the season. Kudos are in store for head coach John Van Vliet and his very capable staff of Robert Kohler, Cory Holloway, Jerry Andreason and Bobby Post. They were all instrumental in making the midseason changes on defense that keyed the Lions' resurgence to that of eventual state champions. So for the 2011 edition of the Lighthouse Lions, the appropriate prayer would be: "To you, O Lord, we lift up our souls; in you we trust, O our God. Do not let us be put to shame, nor let our competitors triumph over us." Psalm 25 (paraphrased).

THEIR VIEW

The following editorial appeared in the Albany (Ore.) Democrat-Herald, Nov. 17:

Language Barrier as a Drunk Driving Defense

f you're going to drive in Oregon, it is assumed you know enough English to get by, but not necessarily enough to understand a police officer's spoken instruction when he pulls you over.

The issue of understanding is before the Oregon Supreme Court in the form of an appeal by Jose L. Nunez Cabanilla, arrested in Malheur County in 2008. He refused to take a breath test, and this fact was used in the trial that convicted him of drunken driving.

His conviction is being appealed on the grounds that he didn't understand a warning the officer read to him, a warning about the consequences of refusing to submit to an alcohol breath test.

It's not clear how this affects his criminal case. Under Oregon law, if you refuse a breath test, your license is suspended for a year. If you take it and fail, the automatic suspension is only 90 days. But this is an administrative procedure separate from the criminal charge of driving under the influence.

Just how this driver's refusal played into his criminal case was not reported. But it should not matter.

The principle is that for public safety alone, driving in Oregon requires a rudimentary familiarity with English. How else do we expect drivers to heed warnings such as "Road work" and "Left lane closed ahead," not to mention reader boards advising us to "Expect delays 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. Sun thru Thur"?

On the other hand, requiring fluency in English can hardly be a legal requirement for driving. If it was, some foreign tourists would not be allowed to drive their rented cars through the state on their United States vacation.

In the case before the court, comprehending the cop's warning should hardly matter. The consequences of refusing a blood alcohol test are the same whether a driver knows them or not.

Let's hope the court does not establish a new defense against drunken driving in this case, one that says if don't understand what the cop says, you can't be found guilty of the offense.

Lawmakers Pull Back on Plans for Energy Incentives, Advocate

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • An interim legislative committee is backing away from previous support for the creation of a consumer advocacy office for the state's utility customers and a set of tax incentives for renewable energy.

The Legislature's Interim Energy, Environment and Technology Committee decided Monday not to endorse an advocate's office.

The panel is in the process of rewriting the state's 2007 Energy Plan, and Monday's vote on details of the plan is the first of two before the document is sent to the Legislature for review starting in January.

The Idaho Statesman reports that the committee (http://bit.ly/s1b8rb) also backed off language supporting fuel efficiency standards and backing for a local option sales tax that would be used to help finance mass transit projects.

Despite Monday's revisions, energy efficiency remained the top priority for the new five-year plan that is intended to guide state energy policy. The plan attracted more than 80 detailed comments from the public but included no new initiatives like its 2007 predecessor.

"People really got engaged, but this plan has less teeth than the last one," said Democratic Rep. Wendy Jaquet, of Ketchum.

The initial draft of the plan specifically promoted incentives for renewable energy and energy efficiency programs. The panel approved language "encouraging investment" but did not endorse incentives like the 6 percent renewable energy sale tax rebate, which expired earlier this year amid fierce legislative lobbying and debate. Rep. George Eskridge, R-

Dover, and co-chairman of the committee, said the plan still would support legislation that proposes tax incentives for renewable energy projects. And Sen. Curt McKenzie, R-Nampa, said the draft approved Monday would not rule out incentive programs that state utilities and some conservative groups have fought against in the past.

The idea of creating a consumer advocacy office had the support of groups including AARP, conservationists and companies like Monsanto, which operates phosphate mines and is one of the state's biggest electricity customers. But Rep. Eric Anderson, R-Priest Lake, said the state already has an effective consumer advocate in the form of the Public Utilities Commission, the state regulator of utilities operating in Idaho.

"We have the cheapest rates in the nation," Anderson said. "How much lower can we get the rates?"

But Sen. John Tippets, R-Bennington, argued that a consumer advocate would keep balance at the PUC when utilities spend money on attorneys and experts to make the case for raising rates.

"Frankly, they can just outgun the other ratepayer classes," said Tippets, who works for Agrium Inc., another phosphate mining company and big power user. "It seems to me we ought to level the playing field."

Anderson disagreed. "I think it's ridiculous to say the PUC is not doing that already, it's insulting," Anderson said.

Idaho is one of four states without a consumer advocate for electricity customers.

Court Says Yellowstone Grizzlies Still Threatened

BY MATTHEW BROWN Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • A federal appeals court ruled Tuesday that grizzly bears in the Yellowstone region need continued protection under the Endangered Species Act due to the decline of a tree species that serves as a key food source for some of the animals.

The ruling from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals blocks the federal government's effort to lift protections on about 600 threatened grizzlies across 19,000 square miles of Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

Such a move would have turned over management of the animals to state wildlife agencies that could set hunts for grizzlies for the first time in decades.

But Yellowstone's whitebark pine tree stands are fast disappearing because of beetle infestations brought on by a warmer climate. And that means some grizzlies can't get the pine nuts they relied on as a source of protein.

A three-judge 9th Circuit panel said federal wildlife officials wrongly were trying to push past that issue. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service had argued grizzlies could adapt and find other food sources.

"Now that this threat has emerged, the Service cannot take a full-speed ahead, damn-the-torpedoes approach to delisting," Judge Richard Tallman wrote.

Judges also were unconvinced that protections could be restored at a later date if the bears' recovery falters: "We reject out of hand any suggestion that the future possibility of relisting a species can operate as a reasonable justification for delisting."

Protections for Yellowstone grizzlies were lifted in 2007 following a costly recovery effort that also has resulted in a sharp increase in bear-human run-ins. Four people have been killed by grizzly bears in Montana and Wyoming over the past two years.

Fish and Wildlife spokesman Chris Tollefson said the ruling was under review.

The agency's grizzly bear coordinator, Chris Servheen, said an appeal was unlikely. He said officials soon would start working on a new proposal to lift protections based on research not available to the 9th Circuit.

Since the case began in 2007 – and despite the loss of whitebark – the grizzly population has continued to expand.

"We're seeing the bears pushing out to where they haven't been in decades, and the density of bears in the center of the ecosystem is very high," Servheen said. "We can provide more information on the whitebark issue as they requested."

Tallman was joined in his opinion by Judge Susan Graber. The 9th Circuit panel's third member, Judge Sidney Thomas of Billings, issued a dissenting opinion. Thomas agreed with the other judges on the whitebark issue. And he said the government also failed to set up adequate plans to protect grizzly bears once they come off the threatened list.

Graber and Tallman said the regulatory framework proposed in 2007 would protect the bears. That part of the case will go back to a lower court for reconsideration.

Grizzly bears were once found across much of the West. Their numbers dwindled rapidly in the late 1800s and early 1900s as intensive hunting and trapping exterminated the animal across more than 98 percent of its historic range in the lower 48 states.

By the time they received protections under the Endangered Species Act across in 1975, as few as 136 bears survived in the Yellowstone region.

A Montana conservation group, the Greater Yellowstone Coalition, challenged the government's decision to lift those protections in a lawsuit four years ago. In 2009, U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy sided with the group in a ruling that restored protections. The government appealed, setting the stage for Tuesday's opinion.

Greater Yellowstone Coalition executive director Mike Clark said the ruling highlighted the impact climate change is having on one of the wildest regions of the country, where 85 percent of high elevation whitebark trees are dead or dying.

"Whitebark is the key food source that has a dramatic effect on whether grizzly bears live or die," said the coalition's attorney, Doug Honnold with EarthJustice. "Since 2007 we've lost a whole lot more whitebark so the situation for grizzly bears is even more dire."

State wildlife agencies, the National Wildlife Federation and the Safari Club had intervened in the case on the side of the federal government.

National Wildlife Federation attorney Thomas France said he was encouraged the 9th Circuit had sided with the government at least on the issue of regulatory protections.

"We feel like the grizzly bear in the greater Yellowstone is a real conservation success story," France said.

Hearing Set For Eagle Woman Accused of Hitting Cars in Failed Suicide Attempt

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Zandra Sue Steck, 70, was charged with two counts of aggravated battery and felony malicious injury to property after a Nov. 2 crash on State Street. She is scheduled for a preliminary hearing on Dec. 12, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Dan Dinger said Tuesday.

Steck, who was injured in the crashes, was arrested after she was released from the hospital Nov. 7. She is being held in the Ada County Jail on $1 million bond.

Ada County Sheriff's investigators say Steck intentionally drove across the center turn lane on State Street on the morning of Nov. 2. She accelerated directly toward a Ford F250 pickup truck and the crash dislodged the truck's axle, causing it to roll, according to the sheriff's office.

The pickup driver, a 64year-old man from Eagle, was not wearing a seat belt and was ejected from the truck. He suffered life-threatening injuries and had surgery for a head injury. Dinger said the man since has been released from the hospital.

Steck also struck another vehicle immediately behind the pickup truck. The driver of that vehicle, a 20-yearold boy from Boise, was wearing a seat belt. He was treated and released for minor injuries.

Boise Police: No Charges Will

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Boise police have completed their investigation into the Oct. 31 collision between a pickup and a jogger on Glenwood Street, and they do not plan to file charges against either the driver or the runner.

Mark Nearman, the jogger who suffered lifethreatening injuries, remained in serious condition Monday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, according to a hospital official.

Boise police detectives and a crash-reconstruction team investigated the crash. According to investigators, the driver did not commit any crimes. Nearman committed an infraction when he crossed the street outside the crosswalk and didn't yield to traffic that had the right of way. Boise Police spokeswoman Lynn Hightower said it's not often that a citation isn't issued following a collision.

"But officers say looking at the totality of circumstances in this case, issuing the man a citation is just not the right thing to do," Hightower said. "Everyone here is just hoping he recovers."

Just after 7 a.m. Oct. 31, Nearman was running with his dog and a friend as they crossed Glenwood diagonally near Crestwood Drive, near the top of the rise between Chinden Boulevard and Goddard Road. Nearman, an avid runner who has done many local marathons and races, was wearing reflective clothing.

Witnesses told police it was dark, the intersection has no signal light and traffic was heavy. The driver told officers he didn't see the jogger in the darkness. The Idaho Transportation Department says it has taken another step in becoming "the best DOT in the country" with adoption of a new strategic plan.

ITD operates and maintains almost 5,000 miles of highway, more than 1,700 bridges and 30 recreational and emergency airstrips. It has an annual budget of $562.5 million and 1,827 employees.

The new plan builds on the department of transportation's recently completed realignment that reduced layers of supervision, put more people on the frontlines where the work is being done and saved $3.5 million.

"This is an exciting cultural shift for the department and provides us with new opportunities," ITD Director Brian W. Ness said in a press release. "Implementing the plan will require us to think differently about how we do our jobs, prioritize our projthree primary goals:

• Commit to providing the safest transportation system possible.

• Provide a mobility-focused transportation system that drives economic opportunity.

• Become the best organization by continually developing employees and implementing innovative business practices.

"The plan is our road map to realizing our over-riding vision of being the best DOT in the country," Ness said.

Recognizing the department has a substantial role in economic opportunity is a major cultural step for the department, according to Ness. In the past at most state transportation departments, economic development was determined by how many jobs were created or retained on a project-byproject basis.

"Our new strategic plan focuses on the state's overall

Ness said the department will align its business, work and employee performance plans to the new goals and performance measures. The strategic plan will be implemented with oversight from the ITD board.

"I am challenging the department to focus on a different future for these goals, not past performance or activities, and to do so with a sense of urgency," Ness said. BOISE • White powder found Tuesday in a mail room near the Idaho State Capitol was likely residue from rubber bands used to bundle mail, or dust from mail processing equipment, said Boise Police spokeswoman Lynn Hightower.

Crews from the Idaho State Police, FBI and Boise Fire Haz Mat were on scene at 550 W. State St. after workers discovered the powder Tuesday morning. The Statehouse was not evacuated.

Tuesday's scare was on the heels of an earlier incident, Nov. 9, in which a letter addressed to the Idaho Attorney General's office contained a bomb threat, and a claim that powder inside the envelope was anthrax. Those claims proved to be false.

Economy Will Suffer if Tax Cut, Jobless Aid End

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A tax cut that reaches 160 million Americans and government aid for the long-term unemployed will expire at the end of the year - and suck $165 billion out of the economy next year - unless Congress takes action.

Economists hoped the so-called supercommittee congressional would decide whether to extend both measures. But the committee couldn't even agree on how to reach its main goal, cutting $1.2 trillion from the federal budget deficit.

If the tax cut goes away, the average family would pay about $1,000 more in taxes next year, the equivalent of an extra tank of gas every two weeks. Someone earning $100,000 would pay $2,000 more.

And if long-term unemployment benefits are allowed to expire, about 6 million people would lose weekly checks averaging about $300. For most of the long-term unemployed, that is their main source of income.

"There's an awful lot of uncertainty ahead," said Michael Hanson, senior U.S. economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch.

Both changes would leave Americans with an estimated $165 billion less to spend. The Federal Reserve

Justice Dept. Sues Utah Over Immigration Law

SALT LAKE CITY • The U.S. Justice Department filed a lawsuit Tuesday challenging Utah's immigration enforcement law, arguing that it usurps federal authority and could potentially lead to the harassment and detention of American citizens and authorized visitors. "The federal government has the ultimate authority to enforce federal immigration laws and the Constitution does not permit a patchwork of local immigration policies," Justice Department officials said in a statement. "A state setting its own immigration policy interferes with the federal government's enforcement efforts." The lawsuit was filed Tuesday in Salt Lake City's U.S. District Court after months of negotiations between Justice Department attorneys, Utah Attorney General Mark Shurtleff and the state's elected leaders. Protesters Reject Peace Offerings by Egypt's Military

CAIRO • Egypt's military ruler promised Tuesday to speed up a presidential election to the first half of 2012 and said the armed forces were prepared to hold a referendum on immediately shifting power to civilians - concessions swiftly rejected by tens of thousands of protesters in Tahrir Square, who chanted, "Leave! Leave!"

The latest standoff plunged the country deeper into crisis less than a week before parliamentary elections, the first since the ouster nine months ago of longtime authoritarian leader Hosni Mubarak.

In a televised address to the nation, Field Marshal Hussein Tantawi rejected all criticism of the military's handling of the transitional period and sought to cast himself and the generals on the military council he heads as the nation's foremost patriots. Significantly, he made no mention of the throngs of protesters gathered in Tahrir Square to Please see EGYPT, N2

Pepper-spraying California Officer Previously Honored

DAVIS, Calif. • The police officer who pepper-sprayed a row of peaceful Occupy Wall Street protesters at a California university last week is a retired U.S. Marine sergeant who has been honored for his police work on campus, but he also figured in a discrimination lawsuit against the university. Lt. John Pike has risen swiftly through the ranks of the University of California, Davis, police force over the past decade. Now, as one of four lieutenants, the 39-yearold supervises more than one-third of the sworn officers on the suburban campus near Sacramento, including the investigations unit. Footage of Pike and another officer clad in riot gear casually spraying an orange cloud at protesters' heads has sparked national outrage since it began circulating online Friday night. Obama in New Hampshire: I'm a Tax -cutter, GOP Should Go Along MANCHESTER, N.H. • President Barack Obama dashed into politically important New Hampshire Tuesday, seeking to steal the spotlight from Republican presidential candidates and challenging GOP lawmakers back in Washington to stand by their anti-tax pledges on one big measure.

He was greeted with a blunt message from Republican contender Mitt Romney, who bought campaign ads telling Obama, "Your policies have failed?

In his first trip to New Hampshire in nearly two years, the president was confronted by a state that has shifted sharply to the right since his victory here in the 2008 election. The state's crucial independent voters sided solidly with Republicans in the 2010 midterms, and recent polls suggest Obama would lose to Romney by 10 percentage points here if the election were held today.

Giving Thanks Helps Your Psychological Outlook

Psychologists also are trying to figure out the brain chemistry behind gratitude.

BY SETH BORENSTEIN

WASHINGTON • Count your blessings this Thanksgiving. It's good for you.

While it seems pretty obvious that gratitude is a positive emotion, psychologists for decades rarely delved into the science of giving thanks. But in the last several years they have, learning in many experiments that it is one of humanity's most powerful emotions. It makes you happier and can change your attitude about life, like an emotional reset button.

Especially in hard times, like these.

Beyond proving that being grateful helps you, psychologists also are trying to figure out the brain chemistry behind gratitude and the best ways of showing it.

OREGON GOV. BANS DEATH PENALTY FOR REST OF TERM

Saying he "simply cannot participate in something I believe to be morally wrong," Oregon Gov. John Kitzhaber on Tuesday declared a moratorium on the death penalty, granting a temporary reprieve for an inmate who has battled in the courts to hasten his own execution. "The death penalty as practiced in Oregon is neither fair nor just," said Kitzhaber.

Michael McCullough, who has studied people who are asked to be regularly thankful. "When you are stopping and counting your blessings, you are sort of hijacking your emotional system."

And he means hijacking it from out of a funk into a good place. A very good place. Research by McCullough and others finds that giving thanks is a potent emotion that feeds on itself, almost the equivalent of being victorious. It could be called a vicious circle, but it's anything but vicious.

He said psychologists used to underestimate the strength of simple gratitude: "It does make people happier ... It's that incredible feeling."

One of the reasons why gratitude works so well is that it connects us with others, McCullough said. That's why when you give thanks it should be more heartfelt and personal instead of a terse thank you note for a gift or a hastily run-through grace before dinner, psychologists say

Chicago area psychologist and self-help book author Maryann Troiani said she starts getting clients on gratitude gradually, sometimes just by limiting their complaints to two whines a session. Then she eventually gets them to log good things that happened to them in gratitude journals: "Gratitude really changes your attitude and outlook on life."

Gratitude journals or diaries, in which people list weekly or nightly what they are thankful for, are becoming regular therapy tools.

In the journals, it is important to focus more on the people you are grateful for, said Robert Emmons, a psychology professor at the University of California, Davis. Concentrate on what life would be without the good things - especially people such as spouses - in your life and how you are grateful they are there, he said.

Economy Means Scaled-back Thanksgiving for Many

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some are holding potluck dinners instead of springing for the entire feast. Others are staying home rather than flying. And a few are skipping the turkey altogether.

On the fourth Thanksgiving since the economy sank, prices for everything from airline flights to groceries are going up, and some Americans are scaling back. Yet in many households, the occasion is too important to skimp on. Said one mother: "I don't have much to give, but I'll be cooking, and the door will be open."

Thanksgiving airfares are up 20 percent this year, and the average price of a gallon of gas has risen almost 20 percent, according to travel tracker AAA. Rail travelers were also affected, with fares on most one-way Amtrak tickets up 2 to 5 percent.

Still, about 42.5 million people are expected to travel, the highest number since the start of the recession.

But even those who choose to stay home and cook for themselves will probably spend more. A 16pound turkey and all the trimmings will cost an average of $49.20, a 13 percent jump from last year, or about $5.73 more, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation, which says grocers have raised prices to keep pace with higher-priced commodities.

In Pawtucket, R.I., Jackie Galinis was among those looking for help to put a proper meal on the table. She stopped at a community center this week seeking a donated food basket. But by the time she arrived, all 300 turkeys had been claimed.

So Galinis, an unemployed retail worker, will make do with what's in her apartment. "We'll have to eat whatever I've got, so I'm thinking chicken," she said.

Then her eyes lit up. "Actually, I think I've got red meat in the freezer, some corned beef. We could do a boiled dinner."

Galinis has another reason to clear out her apartment's freezer: Her landlord is in the process of evicting her and her 3-year-old son. The unemployment rate in Pawtucket, a city struggling with the loss of manufacturing jobs, is 12.1 percent, well above the national average.

Carole Goldsmith of Fresno, Calif., decided she didn't need to have a feast, even if she could still afford it.

Goldsmith, an administrator at a community col-lege in Coalinga, Calif., said she typically hosts an "overthe-top meal" for friends and family. This year, she canceled the meal and donated a dozen turkeys to two homeless shelters. She plans to spend Thursday volunteering before holding a small celebration Friday with soup, bread "and lots of gratitude."

"I think everybody is OK with it," she said. "They understand. Everybody is in a different place than they were a year ago?"

In suburban Chicago, the Oak Park River Forest Food Pantry got rid of turkey altogether. Last year, the pantry had a lottery in October to distribute 600 turkeys between almost 1,500 families.

The pantry's management has decided to give all of its families a choice between other kinds of meat ground turkey, sliced chicken, fish sticks and hamburger patties - along with the other trappings of a Thanksgiving feast.

Obama

Seeking to boost his appeal with independents in this low-tax state, Obama urged Congress to extend a Social Security payroll tax cut due to expire next month. In effect, he dared Republicans - many of whom have signed anti-tax pledges - to vote against an extension, a move the White House says would lead to a $1,000 tax hike on a family making $50,000 a year. If lawmakers vote "no, your taxes go up. Yes, you get a tax cut," Obama told the crowd. "Which way do you think Congress should vote?" "Don't be a Grinch. Don't vote to raise taxes on working Americans during the holidays," he said during his speech at a Manchester high school. Democrats had hoped to tuck the payroll tax extension, as well as a renewal of jobless benefits, into an agreement from the congressional deficit-reduction supercommittee. But with that option off the table following the committee's collapse Monday, the White House plans to make a full-court press for a separate measure to extend the tax cuts before they expire at the end of the year - and set up Republicans as scapegoats if that doesn't happen.

Much of Obama's stop in Manchester was about trying to gain a foothold for his economic message in New dent's speech was interrupted by a handful of people venting the frustrations of the Occupy Wall Street movement that has spread across to a number of cities.

Even some Obama supporters have sensed a shift in the state.

Naomi Preble, 62, backed

Obama in the 2008 election, and the independent voter plans to vote for him again. But she said young people in New Hampshire have soured on the president.

philosophical differences that sank the supercommittee could complicate the debate.

At the same time, Congress may be unwilling to force what is essentially a tax increase on tens of millions of Americans just as an election year begins.

Both measures were part of a deal struck in December 2010 by President Barack Obama and Republicans in Congress.

The cut applies to the tax that pays for Social Security. The tax applies to the first $106,800 a person makes in a year. The deal lowered the rate paid by individuals to 4.2 percent from 6.2 percent for this year. Companies also pay a 6.2 rate on their payroll.

Some Republicans have indicated they could support extending the tax cut, but there would almost certainly be a fight over how to pay for it. Without spending cuts or other tax increases, renewing the Social Security tax cut would swell the deficit.

Obama, as part of his jobs bill in September, Obama proposed lowering the rate further, to 3.1 percent, and cutting the employer portion to 3.1 percent up to the first $5 million on their payrolls.

Cuts at that level would pump almost $250 billion more into the economy compared with last year, when individuals and employers both paid the 6.2 percent rate.

Hampshire to balance the anti-Obama rhetoric from the Republican candidates swarming the state ahead of the Jan. 10 presidential primary. Obama's trip came on the same day that the GOP contenders were gathering in Washington for a foreign policy debate sure to focus on what they see as the president's failings.

Obama came face to face with the frustration of some New Hampshire voters, who are fed up with a local economy that is struggling to grow and increasingly unhappy with the president's leadership.

A group of protesters outside Manchester Central High School carried signs that read "Obama Isn't Working." And the presi-

Economy Grew at 2 Percent Rate in Third Quarter

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The U.S. economy grew more slowly over the summer than the government had earlier estimated because businesses cut back more sharply on restocking of shelves. The Commerce Department said Tuesday that the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2 percent in the July-September quarter, lower than an initial 2.5 percent estimate made last month. The government also said after-tax incomes fell by the largest amount in two years, reflecting high unemployment and lower pay raises.

Black Friday expects to draw out more than a third of all consumers • Shoppers are most likely to be parents taking the opportunity to grab some deep bargains for themselves and family members, rather than traditional Christmas shopping.

Making Black Friday ever bigger, longer and more bargain-filled is ultimately a problematic strategy, Michael Niemira (chief economist for the Interna-tional Council of Shopping Centers) said. All the heavy discounting means less profits if the sales are displacing sales that would be made anyway. The biggest selling category, he said, will be gift cards, followed by clothing, toys and games, and music.

TOY SAFETY REPORT FINDS SOME HOLIDAY DANGERS

BY JENNIFER C. KERR Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Hidden dangers lurk in some of those less-expensive toys that parents might grab as stocking stuffers this time of year - like a Sesame Street Oscar the Grouch doll.

The small furry green Oscar, purchased for $6.99, was one of the toys singled out in the annual toy safety report from the U.S. Public Interest Research Group.

The consumer advocate's report, released Tuesday, found just over a dozen toys on store shelves that violate federal safety standards. Some had unsafe levels of lead or chemicals called phthalates, and others contained small parts that young children could choke on. Besides Oscar, other toys deemed potentially dangerous included a plastic book for babies, a $1 plastic mini-crossbow that fires off little balls and a handheld "whirly wheel." The Oscar doll has a small hat that could come off easily, which is a possible choking hazard, PIRG said. The crossbow's small parts also put young children at risk of choking, according to the report.

The book and the whirly wheel had high levels of lead, according to the study. But an importer of the whirly wheel disputes that, and says the company's own testing shows the spinning magnetic toy with lead levels well below the limit.

PIRG also warned about toys that are too loud and could lead to damaged hearing, such as an Elmo talking cellphone that the group says tested just above voluntary industry noise limits.

Ed Mierzwinski, the group's consumer program director, said industrial chemicals and toxins in toys were the biggest problems the group found this year. Exposure to lead can cause irreversible brain damage, and some studies have linked phthalates to reproductive problems.

Government figures show 34 toy recalls in fiscal year 2011 – down from 46 recalls the previous year; 50 in 2009 and 172 in 2008. Recalls related to lead were down from 19 in 2008 to four this past year.

PIRG credited a 2008 law that set stronger standards for children's products, including strict limits on lead, for helping to make many of the products on store shelves safer for youngsters. The law was passed after a wave of recalls of lead-tainted toys.

New Strategies to Rake in Holiday Cash

BY RODDIE BURRIS

McClatchy Newspapers

COLUMBIA, S.C. • With the heart of the Christmas shopping season fast approaching, retailers are pulling out all the stops in an effort to get shoppers through their doors.

Retailers hope more layaway options, increased hours for Black Friday and more conveniences, such as personal shopping and gift registries, will draw in cashconscious consumers.

Retail experts are advising consumers to shop early this year to get the best prices on the best selections. Retailers will be reluctant to restock their shelves, they say, with the economy only showing weak signs of recovery.

The Return of Layaway: Layaway is an old concept with a new clientele – and more stores are expanding their services to include it as they prepare for an "average" shopping season.

In recent years, some of the most recognizable retailers, such as Kmart, Sears and Best Buy, have revived layaway. This year, the world's largest retailer, Wal-Mart, hopped onboard. And Toys R Us, which launched a layaway program in 2009 limited only to big-ticket items, is letting shoppers put almost any toy on layaway at its stores this year.

Layaway allows customers to pay for large purchases in installments before Christmas, without having to worry about paying interest on credit cards after the holiday. That is important because the strained economy has made getting credit harder for many families.

The practice also can help shoppers stick to a budget, retail experts said, by having stores set aside only the amount of merchandise they can get paid off before the holiday.

Black November? The day after Thanksgiving normally is the biggest shopping day of the year. But retailers desperate for sales are opening earlier for Black Friday and looking to roll that day into weeks,

Retail Changes

3 ways shopping will be different this season:

• Early hours. Stroll the aisles at some stores almost any hour of the day or night. The downside? You can no longer show up giftless, arguing the stores were closed.

 Layaway is back. Stores responded when shoppers said they missed it. A good way to avoid credit cards, but you have to make your selections early.

 Personal shoppers. The ultimate in convenience. Let someone else do your shopping (while you stay at work).

by offering Black Friday-level sales in early November, experts say.

"Traditions are meant to be honored, revered and protected, never to be broken unless you are a retailer desperately needing sales. November 1 now seems to be the unofficial (kickoff of the) Black Friday selling season," Bickle said. "Retailers are changing the Black Friday one-day sale into three weeks of discounted frenzy."

Retailers typically make up to 40 percent of their profits during the holiday season. And many – worried that shoppers won't turn out this Christmas or will wait until the last minute – have been advertising big sales early. Red Carpet Convenience: Shoppers, of course, are the beneficiaries of retailers' hand-wringing. Not only do they have more opportunities to get the lowest prices, they also are getting the red-carpet treatment from some retailers.

Some stores, such as Belk at Columbia's Columbiana Centre mall, this year unveiled a free personal shopper service for customers. A trained employee is available by appointment to advise and assist shoppers in making whatever selections they need.

Eating Light: Marsala Deepens Veal, Mushroom Stew

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Veal and mushrooms just seem to belong together. The mix of cremini, oyster and white buttons complements the meat. In this stew, I add Marsala, which is often paired with veal. It deepens the flavor of the broth without overwhelming the other ingredients.

The only mushroom I try to avoid is shiitake, which becomes too tough after the long cooking required to tenderize the veal. The browning of the meat and mushrooms takes time, but don't skip that step; it adds flavor and color to the stew.

To save time, use presliced mushrooms. Flat mushrooms, such as oysters, should be separated into bite-size pieces. Serve over rice, noodles or your favorite grain.

This stew can be made and refrigerated up to 4 days.

Veal and Mushroom Ragout Makes 7 to 8 cups (7 to 8 servings).

6 to 9 teaspoons olive oil 1 large onion, finely diced (8 ounces, about 2 cups diced) Salt

- 1 1/2 pounds sliced assorted mushrooms, such as cremini, white button and oyster
- 1 2/3 pounds lean stewing veal, cut into 1- to 1 1/2inch chunks
- 1/4 cup flour
- 2 cups homemade or nosalt-added chicken broth Freshly ground black pepper 3/4 cup Marsala
- Water, as needed 2 tablespoons finely
- chopped fresh parsley, for garnish

Heat 2 teaspoons of the oil in an ovenproof 4-to-5quart Dutch oven over medium heat. Add the onion and salt to taste. Adjust the heat so the onion cooks but does not brown. Cook for 8 to 10 minutes, until the onion is soft.

Meanwhile, heat 2 teaspoons of the oil in a large, shallow nonstick saute pan over mediumhigh heat. Working in batches, add a portion of mushrooms, filling but not crowding the pan. Stir-fry the mushrooms just until they start to brown. Transfer to the pot with the onion; it's OK if the onion is still cooking. Repeat, adding oil as needed, until all of the mushrooms have been cooked and transferred to the Dutch oven. Working in batches, add the veal to the (now-empty) pan and cook for a few minutes, turning the pieces as needed to promote even browning and adding oil to the pan as needed. While the meat is cooking, stir the flour into the onion-mushroom mixture in the Dutch oven so the flour is absorbed. Add the broth and season with salt and pepper to taste. Adjust the heat so the mixture is barely bubbling. Transfer the veal pieces to the mushroom-onion mixture as they are done.

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees

When all of the meat has been browned, keep the saute pan over mediumhigh heat and add the Marsala to deglaze the pan. Use a spatula to dislodge any bits from the bottom of the pan, then pour the wine and the bits into the stew in the Dutch oven, stirring to incorporate, Add water as needed so the meat and mushrooms are barely submerged. Cover the pot and transfer to the oven. Cook the stew for about 2 hours; the veal should be fork-tender.

Serve immediately, garnished with the chopped parsley. Or cool, transfer to a container with a tight-fitting lid and refrigerate for up to 4 days. Per serving (based on 8): 210 calories, 23 g protein, 9 g carbohydrates, 7 g fat, 2 g saturated fat, 80 mg cholesterol, 160 mg sodium, 1 g dietary fiber, 3 g sugar.

Fajitas Inspire This Turkey Dish

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Sweet peppers are so flavorful that they can take the place of a sauce, as they do in this fajita-inspired dish with lime and cilantro.

Instead of creating your own spice rub, feel free to use 21/2 teaspoons of your favorite packaged fajita-style spice rub instead.

Thin-sliced turkey cutlets are widely available at grocery stores; you can also buy turkey breast cutlets and pound them between pieces of plastic wrap to a thickness of 1/4-inch, or buy turkey breast halves and freeze them for 15 minutes or so, then cut them into thin cutlets. Figure on 4 ounces per serving.

Spicy Turkey Scaloppine With Peppers and Onions

6 servings.

For the rub:

- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or more if desired
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon sweet paprika 1/2 teaspoon dried
- oregano 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon chili powder

For the rub: Combine the salt, pepper, paprika, oregano, cumin, nutmeg and chili powder in a small bowl. Rub together to pulverize the oregano leaves and break up any clumps. For the turkey and pepper-onion mixture: Lay the turkey cutlets on a large platter or sheet of aluminum foil. Use 1 1/2 teaspoons of the rub to season them evenly on both sides. Sprinkle the cutlets with the juice of one of the limes and 2 teaspoons of the oil, turning to coat the cutlets evenly. Marinate at room temperature for 15 minutes.

While the turkey is marinating, heat 2 teaspoons of the oil in a large saute pan or on a rimmed, two-burner-size griddle pan over medium-high heat. Use tongs to stir in the peppers and cook for 3 minutes, then stir in the onions and season with the salt, adjusting the heat so the vegetables cook but do not brown too quickly. Cook for 8 to 10 minutes, tossing the vegetables with the tongs, until they are soft and just beginning to brown.

Add the tomato paste and the remaining 1 teaspoon of the spice rub. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring to incorporate. Stir in the broth and cook for 2 minutes, then transfer the vegetables and pan juices to a shallow bowl. Cover with aluminum foil to keep warm. Use a paper towel to wipe out the pan or wipe off the griddle. Return to mediumhigh heat; add the remaining 2 teaspoons of oil to coat the cooking surface evenly.

Note: Double-concentrated tomato paste is found in the Italian section of most supermarkets or near the regular tomato paste. It's a wonderful product that comes in a tube and keeps for months in the refrigerator. If you can't find it, 2 tablespoons of regular tomato paste may be substituted. Per serving: 210 calories, 28 g protein, 11 g carbohydrates, 6 g fat, 1 g saturated fat, 70 mg cholesterol, 240 mg sodium, 2 g dietary fiber, 5 g sugar.

A Kitchen Torch Isn't Anything to Sweat About

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS can point and click. McClatchy Newspapers

Question: I recently watched Martha Stewart use a kitchen torch to brown a meringue and creme brulee. Can you give information on where to buy one and how complicated (and dangerous) it is to use?

Answer: A kitchen torch is just a miniature version of a blow torch, but it isn't dangerous as long as you

The trick is to keep the flame pulled back a little from what you're browning and keep it moving continuously so you don't overbrown a spot. Use a gentle brushing motion, almost like combing someone's hair. Kitchen torches are sold in most cookware stores and range in price from $30 up to $60 or more. However, I can share a trick we use in food styling: Go to a hardware store and look for a "pipe sweater," usually stocked with the plumbing supplies.

It's a basic blow torch with a replaceable blue tank that is used to tighten the seals on pipes. They're not as small as kitchen torches, but they're lightweight, easy to use, and usually cost about $15. They may not look as fancy, but they get the job done.

A Healthy Chicken Cordon Bleu

BY ROCCO DISPIRITO For The Associated Press

When it comes to finding ways to reduce fat and calories, I favor reinventing a classic recipe rather starting from scratch.

And many times, that's all it takes. For example, just a little innovation was all that was needed to reinvent an old classic like chicken cordon bleu.

Traditionally, this recipe is made from a chicken breast that is pounded flat, wrapped around a filling of ham and cheese, then dipped in breadcrumbs and sauteed in butter. Translation - eat too much of it, and you'll have to call in a search-and-rescue team to find your bones.

Here is a much easier interpretation - with fewer calories and less fat, sodium and cholesterol. And healthful doesn't mean tasteless.

This recipe tastes delicious, even though I swapped out several fattening ingredients. For example, I replaced the butter with small amounts of cholesterol-free olive oil. The ham and cheese are lower-fat versions, and light wholewheat bread takes the place of higher-carb breading. Voila! Now chicken cordon bleu can be declared a health food.

I designed this recipe so vour kids can get involved in the preparation and cooking, too. Let the kids do the flattening, stacking and rolling, while you do the actual cooking (which involves only a little microwaving and sauteing). The process will pique their interest in helping out in the kitchen.

The recipe, by the way, takes only 20 minutes – perfect for short attention spans. The kids will love the melted cheese in the center, and you'll love the fat and calories you save. Traditional versions of this dish can have as many as 780 calories and 32 grams of fat per serving. Mine has just 231 calories and less than 4 grams of fat

CLOTH OR PAPER TOWELS IN THE KITCHEN?

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS McClatchy Newspapers

Question: I use paper towels instead of dish towels for everything from drying dishes to blotting fried foods. Are paper towels sanitary, or am I exposing myself and my dinner guests to chemicals by using them?

Answer: I couldn't find information on the potential for chemical contamination. If there are chemicals or bleach present, you'd have to do something to cause the paper to release them, such as heating the towel or soaking it.

However, there is an environmental impact in disposing of so much paper. So I asked Benjamin Chapman, extension service food safety specialist with N.C. State University, whether it is preferable to use paper towels instead of dish towels that can be washed. While some sources suggest it's better to use disposable paper towels for kitchen spills, Chapman didn't agree. When you wash your hands, he says, you really do three things: You loosen the bacteria with soap, you rinse some of it away with water, and then you deposit the remaining bacteria on what you use to dry your hands. In that example, it's better to dry with a paper towel you throw away, so another person doesn't use it.

TIMES-NEWS

However, for wiping up spilled meat juice or wiping a counter you've cleaned and sanitized, there's no reason you can't use a dish towel and then toss it in the washing machine.

Just make sure that you change dish towels often, possibly more than once a day, and launder them in hot water.

Salty and sweet. Savory and rich. It's the treat for chocolate fans who think they've tried it all.

It's caramel bacon peanut bark. That's right. Read that one again.

We start with a smooth, rich pool of melted milk chocolate, then scatter chopped peanuts over that. On top of that goes a healthy scattering of cooked and crumbled bacon. Trust us the salty-savory-sweet flavors play so well together. But we didn't stop there. Over that goes a drizzle of caramel and a sprinkling of flaked sea salt.

Once the bark has completely cooled, it can be broken into chunks and packaged in plastic bags or candy boxes for gifts. It should hold at room temperature for up to a week.

A No-bake Holiday Treat Perfect for Gift Giving

12 ounces maple or brown sugar bacon Two 12-ounce packages milk chocolate bits

1 1/2 cups chopped peanuts (salted or not)

10-ounce bag soft candy caramels Large flake sea salt

Line a baking sheet with waxed paper.

Heat a large saute pan over medium-high. Working in batches, add the bacon and cook until very crisp, about 10 to 12 minutes. Transfer to paper towels to drain, then repeat with remaining bacon. Set aside to cool completely. Once cooled, crumble the bacon into small pieces.

Place the chocolate bits in a medium microwavesafe bowl. Microwave on high for 1 to 2 minutes, stirring every 20 seconds, or until melted and smooth. Pour the chocolate onto the prepared baking sheet, then tap it the chocolate into an even, smooth puddle. Immediately sprinkle the peanuts and bacon evenly over the chocolate. Allow the chocolate to fully harden, about 15 to 20 minutes. Meanwhile, place the caramels in a medium microwave-safe bowl. Microwave on high for 1 to 2 minutes, stirring every 20 seconds, or until melted and smooth. Drizzle the caramel over the bark, then sprinkle lightly with the sea salt. Allow to cool and harden, then break into pieces.

Sawtooth

Ketchum's only brewery that the business was flooded on its first night of operation.

Sawtooth served 300 customers in 3 1/2 hours, Holle said. At one point, the brewpub ran short of glassware.

"Last night really couldn't have gone better," he said.

The attention wasn't unfounded. There's a lot to be excited about at Sawtooth, which is slowly ramping up toward its Dec. 2 grand opening. Holle and Jones plan to have five house regulars on tap by then, including a cream ale, rye IPA and stout. They'll also put on a malty, spiced winter seasonal and offer "beer fusion" ice cream, coffee, pretzels and Frenchman's wine. Customers are invited to bring in their own food to enjoy with their pints.

Even the beers Holle doesn't brew stand out. Sawtooth features one tap set up to pour beer using nitrogen rather than carbon dioxide, and another for cask-condition ales using a beer engine acquired from the former Papa Hemi's Hideaway. On Nov. 12, his taps ranged from a selection of winter ales to Deschutes Brewery's Stoic – an eclectic Belgian quad.

Holle said he has a long list of future seasonal and "irregular" offerings to make, including barleywine, hazelnut brown ale and imperial stout. He also wants to feature unusual, American-made beers on his extra taps. Anything seasonal, barrel-aged, smoked or otherwise odd is fair game.

"I asked the distributor, 'What've you got that's just weird?'" he said.

That Saturday, visitors enjoying the diversity included locals and out-of-towners, some chatting and others watching the Boise State Broncos lose to Texas Christian University.

Several were there for the first time, including Terry Potts of Hailey. He applauded the location – convenient when he stops by Silver Creek Outfitters – and was impressed with the crowds drawn during a quiet time of year for the resort town.

"In slack, to be that busy? People are excited!" Potts said. "In the ski season, this place is going to boom."

Ketchum resident Piper Reed said she was excited not only to have a place in her hometown that offers locally made beer, but "I could walk in here in my ski boots and it'd be OK." Sharing her table, Travis and Ashley Marcus of Corvallis, Ore. — a part of the country where craft breweries are far less rare — were also impressed by what they saw and tasted.

Holle said he and Jones have also been well-received by the local food and beverage industry. Other breweries have welcomed the newcomer. And the pair have gone from pitching their beers to restaurants to having those businesses approach them, instead.

"That is a key change," Holle said.

It'll still be some time before you see Sawtooth beers crop up in other corners of the Wood River Valley. First, Holle and Jones must expand their production from 40 gallons a week to about 60, a step Holle expects to happen around January.

For now, the pair are focused simply on bringing people to their taproom while enjoying what they've managed to accomplish so far.

Leila Gott July 17, 1929-Nov 18, 2011

KIMBERLY • Surrounded by her family, Leila Josephine Henry Gott passed away Friday, Nov 18, 2011, from complications of pneumonia.

Leila was born the fourth of five children to George and Elsie Henry on July 17, 1929, in Twin Falls, Idaho. As "Rock Creeker's" life was not always easy for the Henry family during Depression Era America and like most young people of that era, Leila learned the value of hard work, thrift and perseverance in the face of adversity through daily practice. All were virtues that framed her approach to adult life and values that she later passed on to her children. But most prominent of all of Leila's values was her love of life. She could hook a fish, shoot a deer and pluck a chicken all in the same day. She could then turn the same into a scrumptious meal that would cause young folks from miles around to suddenly appear at the Gott dinner table, with or without an invitation. Leila never knew a stranger and no one ever left her table hungry.

Leila was an outstanding student at Kimberly High School, graduating near the top of her class in 1947. Leila met and married the love of her life, Glenn Gott in 1949, and unto this union were born four children, Janet (Gary) Eller of Twin Falls, Glenda (Rick) Skeen of Twin Falls, Bruce Gott of Lewiston and Judy (Dick) Young of Kimberly. The Gott's built their Kimberly home on Taylor Street with callused hands and the sweat of their brow, all while Glenn worked as a brick mason and Leila chased her growing brood. Leila later worked as the lunchroom supervisor for the Kimberly School District and later as a secretary for the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office and again as secretary for the Kimberly School District. Rare was the child attending school in Kimberly during the '60s and beyond who was unfamiliar with "Mama" Leila's lunchroom delicacies. Only Leila could serve mashed potatoes with an extra helping of love and a dollop of sound advice: "Eat up and get out! Make something of yourself!"

Leila was preceded in death by her parents; her brothers, Keith Henry and Walter Henry; and her sister, Ada Albin. Her husband of 62 years; her four children; seven grandchildren; 17 great-grandchildren; two brothers, Wayne Henry of Tucson, Ariz., and Albert Henry of Sacramento, Calif.; and several nieces and nephews survive Leila.

The funeral for Leila will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Nove. 28, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Pastor Dale Metzger officiat ing. Friends and family are encouraged to donate to their favorite children's charity in lieu of flowers.

Services are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

Brian Joseph Hackett

Sept. 10, 1960-Nov. 16, 2011

On a warm summer day on Sept. 10, 1960, Brian Joseph Hackett entered the world kicking and screaming at Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls. Thus the boy who would become known as B.J. arrived to Virginia and Tom Hackett. He leaves us now, much too early.

B.J. was a rather energetic child, realizing early on that the competition would be keen as the seventh child living in that small house on Fairway Drive. He was a whirlwind and more than held his own

If there was anyone who could use the discipline of nuns, it was B.J. So, it was with good fortune that he entered St. Edward's Catholic School. There he spent the next eight years - causing many of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary to reconsider their vows. Having conquered parochial school, B.J. moved on to O'Leary Junior High and Twin Falls High School. No nuns there, but B.J. was an equal-opportunity pain in the butt and enjoyed making them earn their pay. At home, however, he acted like a saint.

During his high school years, B.J. began working at Pedersen Sports. He started out in the basement, tuning skis and putting energy into as asset. More than one customer walked into Pedersen's simply looking for a pair of gloves and then walked out a half-hour later with a pair of K2s and Salomon boots after sharing a little time with B.J.

When Pedersen's decided it was time to expand, he led the rollout of a new store in the Twin Falls Mall before moving on to Boise to open and manage a new store there.

B.J.'s children, Shelbie and Justin, made him proud as they succeeded in school, sports and life. They loved their Dad and will miss him greatly.

In addition to his children, B.J. is survived by his sisters, Nancy (Paul) Zimmerman of Buhl, Anne (Paul) Niemsyk of Boise and Tracy (Todd) Blakeman of Boise; and his brothers, Sean (Melissa) of Middleton and Kevin of Boise. He was preceded in death by his parents; as well as his sister, Patty; and his brothers Rob and Greg.

A memorial service for B.J. will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 26, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Henrietta 'Ann' Schultz

April 16, 1927-Nov. 18, 2011

Henrietta "Ann" Schultz was born April 16, 1927, in Bemidji, Minn., to Henry Schwartz and Margret Olive Cote Schwartz. She graduated from Bemidji

High School in 1945. She passed away Friday, Nov. 18, 2011, surrounded by her loving family. Ann was a member of St. Edwards the Confessor Catholic Church.

She married Donald L. Schultz in Bemidji, Minn., in 1947, and they moved to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1960. After her husband passed away in 1979, Ann worked part time at IC Penney and Dunken Distributing. She then worked for Lynch Oil Inc. as a bookkeeper and banker for 15 years until she retired in 1997. Ann was a dedicated wife and mother to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She loved them all. Through the years, Ann's family had grown to four children, six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Ann loved traveling that included most of the United States, including Hawaii and cruises to Mexico and the Caribbean. She enjoyed her flower garden, playing cards, taking long walks and books; she was an avid reader. She volunteered at her church for many years and for the American Red Cross blood drive. Most of all she loved being with her family.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Don; her paren) of Jerome, Idaho, and Kim (Paul) Boysen of Liberty Lake, Wash.; her grandchildren, Scott Lynch, Nicholas (Justine) Lynch, Dustin Fry, Lindsay (Clint) Harrington, Garrett Flower and Tyler (Kari) Flower; her great-grandchildren, Swaye and Jaxon Lynch, and Leilani Flower; her brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Richard "Dick" and Bee Schultz of Twin Falls; her brother, Gene (Cleo) Schwartz of Bemidji, Minn.; her brother, Larry (Michele) Schwartz of Henderson, Nev.; and many nieces and nephews.

Donations in lieu of flowers may be made to the Angel Fund or St. Edwards building fund. The family would like to thank Dr. Steven Kohtz, Dr. Symington and the Twin Falls Care and Rehabilitation Center for their kindness, love and support during their mother's illness.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 25, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park" in Twin Falls. Condolences may be shared with the family at www.whitemortuary.com.

Latest Installment of Federer-Nadal Is Decidedly Not A Classic

LONDON • Roger Federer raced to one of his easiest wins over rival Rafael Nadal on Tuesday, routing the Spaniard 6-3, 6-0 to ensure a semifinal berth at the ATP World Tour Finals.

From 3-2 in the first set, Federer (below) ran away with it and not even Nadal's trademark defensive abilities could handle the pace and accuracy of the 16-time Grand Slam champion's forehand.

The 26th match between the former No. 1s was over in exactly 1 hour. Federer finished with 28 winners to Nadal's four.

With one match to play in Group B, Federer is assured of a place in the semifinals as he targets a record sixth title at the season-ending event.

Jo-Wilfried Tsonga earlier kept alive his hopes of reaching the last four by beating Mardy Fish 7-6 (4), 6-1.

Brewers' Braun Nips Kemp As NL MVP

Milwaukee's Ryan Braun wins NL MVP

NEW YORK - Ryan Braun sat alone on a balcony in his Malibu home that overlooks the Pacific Ocean, uneasy about his chances of winning the NL Most Valuable Player award.

With the season Los Angeles' Matt Kemp had, he wasn't sure the call would come at all.

The phone rang all right, and Braun has been smiling ever since.

Braun was voted the NL MVP after helping the Milwaukee Brewers win their first division title in nearly 30 years.

"I'm not going to pretend like I wasn't anxious or nervous because I was," Braun said. "It's honestly difficult to put into words how much this means to me."

The left fielder received 20 of 32 first-place votes and 388 points in voting announced Tuesday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

MLB Has New Labor Deal

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig and union head Michael Weiner smiled and exchanged handshakes while others in the room dug into knishes and pigs in a blanket.

Not exactly the kind of scene that played out in sports labor talks this year.

Baseball ensured itself of 21 consecutive years of peace at a time the NBA season might be canceled because of a lockout and the NFL still is recovering from its CBA negotiations.

"We've learned," Selig said Tuesday after players and owners signed an agreement for a five-year contract running until December 2016. "Nobody back in the '70s, '80s and the early '90s, 1994, would ever believe that we would have 21 years of labor peace."

The agreement makes

MLB the first pro major league in North America to conduct blood tests for human growth hormone, allowing it during spring training and future offseasons but for now only studying whether it will be implemented during the regular season.

"MLB and the players union should be applauded for taking the strong step to implement the HGH test at the major league level to protect clean athletes," said Travis Tygart, chief executive officer of the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency.

The deal, which must be ratified by both sides and drafted into a formal contract, expands the playoffs from eight to 10 teams by 2013, lessens draft-pick compensation for free agents, expands salary arbitration by a few players and for the first time allows teams to trade some draft selections

BYU Out, SDSU In For Boise State, Big East?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brigham Young won't be part of the Big East's westward expansion.

Negotiations between the rebuilding conference and BYU have broken off, a person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press.

The person spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity because the conference and school have not been making their talks public.

"BYU to the Big East is dead. It's not going to happen," the person said.

BYU athletic department spokesman Brett Pyne said in an email that school officials declined a request for comment.

The Big East was trying to add BYU as part of its plan to expand westward, along with Boise State, and become a 12-team football league. Boise State's acceptance of a Big East offer was contingent upon the conference adding western presence beyond the Broncos.

At issue are television rights. The person says BYU wanted to retain the rights to its home football games and the league could not agree to that.

No other school in a major conference has such a deal.

TWIN FALLS returns Eric Harr, last year's Times-News player of the year. He averaged 18.4 points and 5.6 rebounds per game. Robert Sanchez, another backcourt player, adds perimeter shooting. Filer transfer Jared Allen adds key size down low. Improving on last year's thirdplace state finish is not out of the question for the Bruins. ... JEROME returns three starters, led by first team all-GBC center Jake Hollifield. The 6-6 senior averaged 11.6 points and 7.6 rebounds last year, and has a pair of guards returning in Spencer Geist and Shaquille Kennedy to get him the ball. MINICO has perhaps the toughest rebuild of any team in the state, losing an entire roster's worth of seniors from a 20-3 squad that finished fifth at state. New coach Adam Johnson says to watch out for 6-0 junior Matt Harper and 6-3 senior Ethan Belnap. ... The rebuild at CANYON RIDGE is also challenging, with scant experience coming back for coach Jacoby Fox. Chase Petty, a 6footer who will contend for all-GBC honors, and 6-2 Neil Kauppila are the Riverhawks' only players with varsity experience. ... Wood River went 0-22 last year, but watch out for 6-3 guard Stone Sutton, who would get more notice if his team could win more games. New coach Rick Bradshaw could make a difference as well. ... BURLEY has a trio of building blocks in point guard Jason Boehmer, shooting guard Kody Coltrin and senior Taylor Carson. Size, or lack thereof, is a huge concern for the Bobcats.

SAWTOOTH CENTRAL IDAHO CONFERENCE

FILER returns gobs of talent and experience from last year's 14-9 team, including a four-year starter in Ryan Karel, a 6-2 guard. He's one of four returning starters for coach Allen Kelsey. ... Kimberly coach Marvin Mumm likes his size, with five players 6-3 or taller, including returning starters Jade Wadsworth and Zach Funk from last year's 16-7 squad. ... BUHL coach Dan Winn isn't shy in suggesting his team is the underdog in the SCIC, but with Camden and Kellen Gillins returning to anchor the backcourt, the Indians could be a tough out for a lot of teams if some size emerges up front.

CANYON CONFERENCE

Experience isn't a problem for VALLEY and coach Steve Hunter. Four starters return, and several reserves are beginning their third year on the varsity. Senior Austin Shawver and junior Justin Johnson were all-league picks. ... Val Christensen returns as coach at DECLO and he's counting on 6-5 center Seth Baker and shoeting guard Colum Webb for and shooting guard Calum Webb for production. Nine players from the school's state title team are on the roster, including guard Xavier Strick, Cato's lone holdover from last year. ... HANSEN went 4-19 last year, so coach Mike Pfieffer believes getting to .500 is "ideal" for this team. Four starters return, with Seth Williams and Devon Spearing leading the backcourt. Size is a major issue, so Devon Fitzsimmons, a 6-2 sophomore, is a key to the Huskies' success. ... SHOSHONE coach Larry Messick laments losing five of his top six from a team that finished 20-6 and went to the state tournament, but has a great building block in Garrett Sant, a 6-1 swingman who averaged a team-best 11.1 ppg and 4.3 rpg. Messick has bodies, among them 6-1 forward Gage Roberts, but needs a few to step up to the forefront for the Indians to approach last year's results. ... OAKLEY finished 6-15, so there's an attitude about the returning players that this year will be better, said coach Tyler Matlock. Leading the Hornets are Brodie Bell a 6-2 forward, and Gerrit Wybenga, a 5-11 guard. ... GLENNS FERRY played its best ball at the end of last season for coach Nathan Jones, but loses leading scorer Rory Hance and his 16 points per game. Chris Popoca, Wilder Jones and Adrian Martinez bring back experience, but size is a huge issue for the Senators.

NORTHSIDE CONFERENCE

If you want to get CASTLEFORD, get 'em now. With several players still nursing injuries from the Wolves' 10-1 football season, coach Tracy Vulgamore says his team, which went to state and finished 17-4, isn't close to being at full strength. But as long as Mitch Howard, who averaged 17 points last year, is playing, the lineup is formidable. ... DIETRICH is another team with several gridiron stars, with the Howard brothers - Jakob and Andru - along with Gray

Weber and Brody Astle all returning starters from a team that went 14-8 last year. As expected, this team will get better as it gets healthier ... COMMUNITY SCHOOL should take several strides forward from last year's 2-13 mark. Back is 6-2 senior guard Will Brokaw, who started as a sophomore before missing last year, and 6-6 Henry Rickbeil adds uncommon size at this level. ... MURTAUGH and coach Clete Edmundson believe they can improve on last year's 14-11 mark with a pair of big-time producers in guard Humberto Pacheco (20 points, 7 rebounds, 5 assists per game) and center Austin Stanger (12 ppg, 10 rpg). ... LIGHTHOUSE CHRISTIAN brings back point guard Eli Berndt, an honorable mention all-Northside pick. Coach Ryan Franklin likes his team's ability to stop other teams, but needs consistent scoring threats to step up. ... CAREY returns four experienced players, among them Baley Barg and his 14 ppg, from a state championship team that finished 24-2. On paper, the Panthers look poised to at least make it back to the title game, but could hit some bumps early as several of its stars recover from the football season. .. CAMAS COUNTY (6-16) has a pair of cousins in Andy and George Simon, with the former averaging 15.1 noints and nearly six re game. Coach Matt McLam will "play them about everywhere." Davey Knowlton is another player being counted on for production. TWIN FALLS CHRISTIAN ACADEMY actually plays an independent schedule, and is not part of any conference. But the Warriors will be a familiar foe to area teams, and with three starters returning from a 7-13 team in Rueben Zismer. Kevin Wilmot and Jesse Bolyard, coach Dan Johnson has something to work with.

four Class 1A Division II state tournament appearances in five seasons.

"He brings excitement and intensity," said Matt Harper, who is among seven Spartan seniors. "He has a different philosophy and more intense practices."

For all the hype that followed last year's Minico team, this year is the exact opposite.

"Everybody is expecting us to be the worst team to come around in 10 years. But we don't think so," said senior Ethan Belnap. "We're going to work hard, as hard as we can. We'll do our best and see what happens."

Said Harper: "I'm sure people are thinking we're going to be the underdogs, with no returning varsity players. They're probably going to be underestimating us. But we're going to be pressing hard and we'll be really intense."

As a JV squad, this group hovered around .500 last season, but lost its leading scorer, Tanner Stallings, to a football knee injury.

"We have other guys who can step up and we think we can have a constant nine-man rotation," Harper said.

In Johnson's new system, Minico has been working on pushing the ball up the floor, as well as running its halfcourt set. Johnson said his team will be looser and less structured than the Spartans' past.

"We're going to be a team that gets better throughout the season and start to jell later in the season," Johnson said. "We're going to have to rely on our athletic talent early in the season while we're trying to build that chemistry. It will be exciting to see that momentum build as the season goes on."

The 2010-11 state thirdplace finisher, Twin Falls is the early favorite in Class 4A District IV. Jerome won't be far behind, while Minico should find itself in a dogfight with Burley, Wood River and Canyon Ridge. Johnson is aware of the Great Basin Conference hierarchy, but isn't concerned. Rebuilding a program, he's got enough to worry about right now.

"We know what's out there, but at this point I think you focus on yourselves," Johnson said. "Our goal is to get as good as we can by the time the conference tournament rolls around."

Crosby Tired, But Healthy After Debut

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH • Sidney Crosby woke up on the first day of the rest of his hockey life and felt something he hadn't experienced in a long, long time.

Tired. In the best way possible.

"Obviously, it's been a long time since I played," Crosby said.

Funny, it didn't look like it.

Crosby returned from a 10-month layoff while recovering from concussionlike symptoms to score two goals and add two assists in a 5-0 romp over the New York Islanders on Monday.

The spectacular performance left Crosby emotionally drained. Erasing nearly a year of doubt and worry will do that.

Yet there appeared to be no hangover. Crosby joined his teammates in a spirited hour-long practice Tuesday morning, with his legs, his lungs and - most importantly - his head feeling just fine after his first game in 320 days.

The 24-year-old felt no recurrence of the "fogginess" that kept him sidelined for nearly a year after sustaining head shots in consecutive games last January.

Although he will continue to be monitored, he doesn't expect to check in with his medical team each day to give them an update.

"Unless there's really something I need to go to them for I don't see it being a constant thing," Crosby said.

Fantastic news for the Penguins. For the rest of the NHL? Not so much.

Crosby's breathless debut already has him fielding questions on whether he can win the league scoring title. He trails Toronto's Phil Kessel by 25 points with three quarters of the season to go.

"That'd be great, but I don't think that's possible," he said. "It's not even something on my radar."

He's more concerned with getting his legs back.

Adrenaline fueled Crosby during most of his nearly 16 minutes on the ice against the overmatched Islanders. It will fade soon enough, perhaps as early as Wednesday when the Penguins host St. Louis.

Duke (6-0) put on an offensive show near the shores of the sparkling Pacific Ocean, scoring on an array of 3-pointers and spectacular shots to remain undefeated (14-0) at the Maui Invitational.

Andre Dawkins added 14 points and the Blue Devils hit 11 of 21 3-pointers while shooting 56 percent overall to earn a spot in Wednesday night's title game against the winner between No. 14 Kansas and UCLA.

Police Won't Look Into UH Gambling

HONOLULU • An anonymous letter has raised allegations that University of Hawaii football players are involved in a point-shaving scheme, but police said Tuesday that they don't have enough information to launch an investigation.

University President M.R.C. Greenwood said in a statement that the admissions office received an anonymous letter Nov. 3 that accused unnamed players of intentionally playing poorly to affect the final score as part of a gambling scheme. Officials immediately alerted Honolulu police and the NCAA, the statement said.

Kealoha to offer the university's full cooperation. The university released the statement Tuesday after KITV was the first to call asking about the probe. The Honolulu Police Department said in a statement later that it became aware of the allegation in early November but "at this time there is not enough information to open a criminal investigation."

When asked whether the university or NCAA would investigate regardless of the police's decision, university spokeswoman Lynne Waters said she couldn't immediately comment.

The Warriors won 10 games in 2010 but are 5-6 this year. They're 3-7-1 against the point spread and have failed to beat the spread in nearly two months.

MVP

A nerve-racking morning that began with a solitary drive turned to elation in the California sun.

The 28-year-old Braun shared the news with his brother and girlfriend, who were at the house. He called his parents, then rang good friend

Aaron Rodgers, the Green Bay Packers quarterback, and exchanged text messages with Kemp, the runner-up.

"This really is a dream," Braun said. "This is beyond my wildest dreams to be in this position at this point in my career."

Kemp earned 10 firstplace votes and 332 points after coming close to winning the first Triple Crown since Carl Yastrzemski in 1967. Braun's teammate Prince Fielder finished third with 229 points, and Arizona's Justin Upton finished fourth with 214 points. Fielder and Upton each received one first-place vote.

St. Louis' Albert Pujols finished fifth, the 11th straight year the three-time MVP was in the top 10 in balloting.

NL Cy Young Award winner Los Angeles' Clayton Kershaw was 12th in the voting a day after Detroit's Justin Verlander added the AL MVP to his Cy Young.

"I think he was the single most dominant player in baseball this year," Braun said of Verlander. "As a position player I'm biased to the fact that I think position players should be at the forefront of the award, but if you honestly look at what he accomplished, how much he meant to that team and how dominant he truly was you cannot make any argument against him winning that award."

In his fifth year in the big leagues, Braun led the NL with a .597 slugging percentage and had a chance to overtake Jose Reves for the batting title on the last day of the season but finished second with a .332 average. The fourtime All-Star had 33 homers, 111 RBIs, 109 runs scored and stole 33 bases as Milwaukee won a franchise-best 96 games. His 77 extra-base hits was tops in the league.

Kemp led the NL with 39 homers, 126 RBIs and was third in average (.324), but played for the NL West's third-place Dodgers. He also won a Gold Glove.

"Everything must be like something, so what is this like?" – E.M. Forster .

In this spade game from a pairs contest at the Orlando Nationals, Jeff Aker demonstrated that he could cope with his partner's overbidding. The deal features a trump coup, a way to take a finesse in the trump suit, even though one of the hands has no trump left. Does that sound illogical? Read on

One point about the auction is worth noting: South did not reopen with a negative double at his second turn to speak. With such limited defense, he would have pulled a penalty double from his partner, so he did not want to give his partner a chance to defend.

Perhaps North should simply have raised two spades to three, but he thought his lack of club honors facing likely shortage meant that his honors would come in useful.

The defenders led three rounds of hearts and shifted to a club. Aker ruffed, cashed the spade ace and king to find the bad news, then led a diamond to the 10, ruffed a second club, and went back to the diamond queen.

At this point in the deal, declarer was all set up for the trump coup. He was down to two trumps and one card in each red suit, with dummy having the doubleton diamond ace and two small clubs. Aker cashed the diamond ace, then the diamond six to pitch his good heart, and remained in dummy for the trump coup at trick 12.

ANSWER: You could settle for a slightly cautious call of one notrump. If not, you are somewhere between a simple preference to two clubs or an invitational jump to three clubs. I prefer the more aggressive position because of the possibility of spade ruffs in your hand. Your partner's rebid of one spade should show at least 4-4 in the black suits; with a balanced hand, he should have rebid one no-trump.

Times News

DEAR ABBY: I'm a freshman in college and have the sweetest boyfriend in the world. We've always been close and trusted each other, never pushing the other too far. I always thought it was innocent and safe.

Last weekend, though, things got a little heavy between us. We stopped before anything happened, but I felt dirty afterward. As I thought about it, I realized that, to me, it had seemed OK that our relationship was starting to take a more intimate turn.

Is it wrong for me to think this way? I don't know how to bring up the "sex talk" with him without seeming desperate or like I'm rushing things. What should I do?

- NEEDS TO KNOW IN VIRGINIA

NEEDS DEAR TO KNOW: You and your boyfriend are normal, healthy young adults. If this is the first time you and a young man have gotten "a little heavy," then it's not surprising that you felt conflicted, depending upon how you were raised to think about premarital relations.

However, because you have now progressed to the point of physical intimacy, it is important that you and your boyfriend talk about last weekend and what may happen in the future. Share your feelings and ask how HE feels about what happened and what he would like to happen going forward. That's not desperate or rushing things - that is communication. True intimacy involves the mutual sharing of thoughts and feelings in a relationship.

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, my wife returned from a business meeting out of town. After unpacking, she took a bath. I happened into the bathroom just as she finished drying off. When she saw me, she grabbed a towel and held it over her shoulder and breast, but not before I spotted a hickey and bruise on her chest.

When I asked her about the hickey, she said she had no idea what had caused it. After that, she refused to discuss the matter. The hickey faded and disappeared after two or three Yesterday she agreed to take a polygraph test, but how do we go about arranging one? Your thoughts?

- TROUBLED HUSBAND IN TEXAS DEAR TROUBLED HUS-BAND: If your marriage is on such thin ice that you need a lie detector test to determine if your wife is telling the truth, you may need the services of a family law specialist.

You asked my opinion, and here it is: From my perspective, you and your wife could benefit more from some truth sessions with a marriage counselor than with a polygraph examiner. However, one way to find a polygraph examiner would be to Google "polygraph examiners in Texas." Another would be to consult an attorney about a referral.

Thanksgiving Prayer

And now, Dear Readers, allow me to again share the traditional Thanksgiving Prayer that was penned by my dear mother, Pauline Phillips. No Thanksgiving would be complete for me without it:

Oh, Heavenly Father, We thank Thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank Thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank Thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service, That Thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen. Have a safe and happy Thanksgiving, everyone! Love, ABBY

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Once you know what brings real happiness and joy, you should grasp it close to your heart and hold on. You can see the intricacies of relationships clearly and feel positive about where they are heading. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Strive to be honest with yourself and others. The more information you gather, the more apt you are to discern the truth. You should be filled with contentment with the blessings you have been provided.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ethics aren't easy. When you resolve to follow the best and wisest path, you stumble upon new contacts that challenge your opinions and make you think long and hard about right and wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Connect the dots. You can figure out how to get where you want to go. There is more clarity about money matters, and you may see where you have made mistakes, but also see how you have done well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The jury is out on being judgmental. Once you are fully aware of how to peacefully reach a meeting of the minds without anyone losing face, you can enter a new phase of truthful harmony.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A hectic pace doesn't suit your mood. You may be more reflective and seek quieter surroundings. Relationships may be monopolizing your time, but that could be because you are so attractive right now.
