A snowboarder makes his way down a run at Pomerelle Mountain Resort near Albion on Thursday. With 22 inches of snow as a base depth, the resort on Mount Harrison is one of the few southern Idaho ski areas that's currently open.

Snow-starved Ski Runs Start to Open

Despite December's lack of moisture, area ski resorts are starting to launch their seasons.

ALBION • On Thursday, Cody Christensen of Twin Falls took his friends and his snowboard on the road to Pomerelle Mountain Resort.

Pomerelle is something of an exception so far this winter. It's the only area option besides Sun Valley Resort that's open for the winter ski and snowboarding season.

This year's ski season has gotten off to a slow start for some resorts, thanks to the whims of nature. With a shortage of snow, skiers and snowboarders aren't yet able to hit the slopes at other popular spots like Soldier Mountain Ski Area north of Fairfield and Magic Mountain Resort Snowboarders, including Christensen, don't have any complaints. Still, they wryly note that more snow would soften any unexpected landings.

School Districts Seek to Patch Gaps Left by Stimulus

Much of the federal money that saved teachers' jobs and paid for professional training since 2009 is drying up.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

For the past few years, federal stimulus money has helped sustain school district budgets.

But that money will soon be gone, leaving districts to figure out other ways to fill the gaps.

The Twin Falls School District has received about $5 million in American Recovery and Reinvestment Act money since 2009, but the last check came in this month. The remaining money is budgeted for this fiscal year, which ends June 30.

"Basically, next year all of those funding sources are gone," Fiscal Affairs Director Bob Seaman said.

Statewide, about $361 million in stimulus money was distributed for public education between February 2009 and this September.

It hasn't been enough to make up for budget shortages, though. During the last school year, school districts received 7.5 percent less in state funding.

From the stimulus, the Twin Falls School District received $1.3 million from the federal Education Jobs Fund to preserve jobs and minimize cuts to teacher salaries. The fund was created in 2010.

Part of that money was also used to add four school days and two teacher work days back to the 2010-11 school year.

In the Wendell School District, Superintendent Greg Lowe said stimulus money was used to provide professional development for employees and create some job positions.

A stimulus-created special education position was left vacant this year. The new Title I teaching position — to provide extra help for students living in poverty — is still around, but the district has applied for more funding for it from the state.

Idaho Mine Closed After 7 Miners Injured

The seven were injured Wednesday night during a rock burst while working 5,900 feet below the surface; all were safely rescued.

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. • The federal government on Thursday temporarily shut down a mile-deep silver mine in Idaho that has been the site of three serious accidents this year, including one this week that left seven miners injured.

Two miners died in separate accidents earlier this year at the Lucky Friday Mine. On Wednesday night, seven miners were injured during a rock burst while working 5,900 feet below the surface; all were safely rescued.

The incident prompted the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration to shut down the Lucky Friday while it investigates the cause.

"We've issued a closure order so the entire mine is shut down," said Amy Louviere, spokeswoman for the agency in Washington, D.C. "We will conduct a thorough investigation and we will not allow it to reopen until we are sure it is safe."

She could not say how long the mine would be closed.

The agency issued a scathing report after the April death of a miner at the Lucky Friday. A second miner died in a November accident.

Settlement Clears Way for Wendell Wastewater Project

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

Instead of proceeding to the Idaho Supreme Court, a lawsuit over the city of Wendell's attempt to expand its wastewater system has been settled.

The case was brought by residents Bruce and Dee Clark, who appealed Gooding County's granting Wendell the special-use permit needed to bring the city's sewer treatment system into compliance.

In June 2010, the city purchased 235 acres for $1.8 million for its wastewater project, which calls for land application of treated waste. The Clarks are neighbors of the site and contended that their 3 acres, essentially surrounded by the land application site and nearby storage lagoons, would decrease in value.

Under the settlement, the Clarks will receive $50,000. They couldn't be reached for comment Thursday and their attorney, Andrew Wright of Twin Falls, did not return calls.

"It was time that we as a city stepped up and set an example," Wendell Mayor Brad Christopherson said of the settlement, which the City Council agreed to during a special Nov. 8 meeting. He announced the settlement to the public Wednesday during a meeting on the proposed new Gooding County Jail.

Christopherson said settling was the right decision for many reasons — chief among them the need to begin work on the wastewater facility and to curb further spending on related legal fees, which have totaled $30,000 since October 2010.

Christopherson noted that the lawsuit had already delayed work by more than a year, and the Idaho Supreme Court would have taken another six

U.S. Formally Ends Iraq War with Little Fanfare

Nearly nine years after American troops stormed across the Iraq border in a blaze of shock and awe, U.S. officials quietly ended the bloody and bitterly divisive conflict here Thursday, but the debate over whether it was worth the cost in money and lives is yet unanswered. While many of the speeches painted a picture of victory — for both the troops and the Iraqi people now set on a path for democracy — gnawing questions remain.

The losses are documented, but districts are still sorting out what to do about them.

“The difficulty always comes when the money goes away,” Twin Falls School District spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass said.

Twin Falls found some help last spring, when voters approved a two-year, $7.5 million supplemental levy.

“Without the supplemental levy, the hole created by the loss of ARRA funds would have been significant,” Seaman said.

The smaller hole was still felt, however. The district still had to make decisions about job positions created using stimulus money.

“Certainly two fatalities and a serious accident are great cause for concern,” Louviere said. “That’s why we are going to take a hard look at what happened.”

Until this year, the mine had operated without a fatality for 25 years.

In the Wednesday night accident, none of the seven miners suffered life-threatening injuries. All were brought to the surface within an hour of the rock burst, said Melanie Hennessey, spokeswoman for owner

Hecla Mining Co.

“There was a broken arm and some stitches, but overall they were quickly removed from the area and brought to local hospitals to be treated,” Hennessey said.

The area where the miners were injured had suffered a rock burst — defined as a spontaneous fracturing of rock — about a month ago. At the time of Wednesday night’s rock burst, miners were erecting a system of mesh material that is designed to contain such bursts, Hennessey said.

The cause of the rock burst has yet to be established, Hennessey said.

months to a year to even hear it.

“We’re under a consent order with (the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality) stipulating no new development in the city that would add to the sewer system until we bring it into compliance,” the mayor said. “Now we can move forward with the project and focus on economic development.”

According to the meeting minutes, the City Council unanimously supported a motion to settle with the Clarks on the terms the couple released their claim against the city. In addition to paying the Clarks, the city will landscape a strip between the sewer treatment area and private property. The “buffer zone” will include a berm and mature conifer trees.

Christopherson said he believes landscaping should be designed to buffer other homes around the site as well.

Candace and JC Kilgore live next to the Clarks and were originally named as co-plaintiffs in the case. But after paying $10,000 in legal fees, they couldn’t keep fighting and recently dropped out of the claim.

Candace hadn’t heard about the settlement until speaking with the Times-News on Thursday. She said she doesn’t know if they will explore filing a new legal claim against the city.

“We never wanted to fight the city. These are our neighbors and friends, but we felt like they shouldn’t just be able to take our retirement. Who is going to want to buy our property now?” she said.

The project should be finished by December 2012.

Salvation Army Captain Hopes to Sing His Way to World Record

BY BRADLEY GUIRE

bguire@magicvalley.com

The cold and calloused fingers of Capt. Marcos Marquez’s left hand danced across steel strings running down a dark fret board. His right hand, surrounded by bells on his wrist, strummed along while he held the iconic Salvation Army bell between his ring and pinky fingers.

Thursday afternoon, Marquez was five hours into his attempt to beat the world record for Salvation Army bell ringers — a 36-hour mark set last year by Capt. Kyle Smith of Spokane, Wash. Even as the tenor Marquez stood outside the Twin Falls Walmart, playing his guitar and singing Christmas carols, 27 other bell ringers around the country were also trying to surpass the feat.

“I have to not only beat 36 hours, but be the last man standing,” Marquez said.

The rules say he must stand, and he may not eat during his fundraising marathon. Water, Gatorade or other hydration drinks are allowed. He can play guitar, sing or do whatever he chooses — as long as he keeps the bell chiming. The drive began at 10 a.m. Thursday, meaning he has to endure through 10 p.m. tonight.

“This has the potential to go more than 36 (hours),” he added. “I think it’ll shoot in to the 48-hour mark.”

nered with the Salvation Army to do more than collect cash in the kettles. Walmart held a food drive, and KMVT collected Toys for Tots gifts for a few hours in the early evening.

Through it all, Marquez continued to man his post — the key is not locking the knees, he said — bursting in to “Feliz Navidad” or “Angels We Have Heard on High,” and breaking the verse only to say “Thank you” to shoppers who stopped to give a few dollars.

Ski Resorts

“When it’s hard and icy, it’s not as good as fresh powder,” Christensen said before he headed up the lift.

Pomerelle had a base depth of 22 inches and a total depth of 31 inches on Thursday. The resort’s had about 70 inches of snow so far this season.

“We’re very happy with the season so far” said Jody Burrows, a spokeswoman for Pomerelle. “... I would classify our conditions now as early season.”

The slopes are machine-groomed and hard-packed, she said, adding “but it’s white and downhill.”

Gary Miller, owner of Magic Mountain Resort, said the area has received about 14 inches of snow but needs about six more inches before it can open.

“To cover everything, we need one storm,” he said.

Miller is holding out hope that he can open this weekend, but that prospect remained uncertain Thursday afternoon.

Aside from the snow shortage, he’s ready to go. The hills are groomed and most runs are in decent shape, though a few rocks are visible. Miller said he doesn’t want to open too early and have someone hit a rough section.

“I don’t want to ruin anybody’s skis and boards,” he said.

Connie Johnson, assistant mountain manager of Soldier Mountain, put it succinctly.

“It’s all about the weather,” she said. “It depends on when the snowstorms are going to come.”

A wet snow, she said, would be the best kind.

“Wet snow is really what we need to pack down for a base,” she said.

At Sun Valley Resort, which started its season on Thanksgiving, more slopes will open this weekend. On Saturday, three more lifts will open on Bald Mountain on Saturday and another run in the Warm Springs area will open, said Jack Sibbach, a spokesman for the resort.

Sun Valley has a snow machine, but Sibbach notes it doesn’t cover the entire mountain.

He said that it’s good for the entire industry when all the resorts are open, adding that a presence of snow everywhere, not just in the mountains, keeps winter activities at the forefront of people’s minds.

“If there’s no snow down there, they think there’s no snow everywhere,” he said.

Ski resorts can also benefit other businesses, though the tight economy has some skiers packing their own lunches.

Heather Mortensen, owner and manager of the Albion Cafe, said she’s not sure what to expect from Pomerelle’s presence. That’s because she just opened up in May.

Still, she said she’s considering ideas for reaching out to the traffic that goes through town toward Pomerelle and may offer sack lunches that skiers can pick up on their way to the slopes.

For now, snowboarders will stick with spots that are open and, of course, keep on eye how much more snow hits slopes that haven’t opened yet.

“More would be awesome,” said Nic Petruzzelli, a snowboarder from Twin Falls. “You can’t have enough.”

Kimberly Hopes for Housing Boost from Chobani

BY DAVE WILKINS

For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • Home construction has started to rebound in Kimberly, and city officials expect the new Chobani yogurt factory going up just miles away to spur additional growth.

Kimberly has issued five building permits for new single-family homes in the past two weeks alone, Planning and Zoning Director Jenny Nickerson told City Council members Tuesday night.

“We’re seeing renewed interest in some dormant applications,” she said.

Chobani plans to hire about 400 workers for the Greek yogurt plant that’s under construction in southeast Twin Falls. Located just three miles west of Kimberly, the new plant is expected to be completed sometime in mid 2012.

“They’re going to need housing for those workers, and Kimberly is the most logical location,” Nickerson said in an interview after the council meeting.

Nickerson said she’s heard from at least one contractor who’s excited about the potential boost the yogurt plant could have on local housing activity.

Kimberly has seen an uptick in residential construction the past couple of months.

Three new single-family homes were completed in November in a subdivision behind Arctic Circle, and a groundbreaking ceremony will be held Saturday for four more.

The seven new homes are all part of a self-help housing project funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Rural Development agency.

Qualified families build the houses themselves, allowing them to accumulate “sweat equity” and buy at reduced cost, said Shandele Kestie, self-help administrator at the South Central Community Action Partnership. SCCAP manages the housing program on the local level.

Kestie expects an increase in housing activity in Kimberly and southeast Twin Falls once the yogurt plant starts production. With the increase in jobs, more people will qualify as homebuyers.

“Once (workers) obtain a job through the yogurt factory, I think our applications will increase,” Kestie said. “There are people who are interested in our program, but they don’t make enough money to qualify.”

SCCAP hopes to help eight more families get started on new homes in the same Kimberly subdivision next spring, she said.

Alleged Counterfeiter Also Wanted in Calif.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

A Twin Falls man has been arrested for allegedly producing nearly $1,500 in counterfeit money.

Matthew T. Harrington, 48, was arrested Monday on two counts of forgery and one count of committing fraud with a computer. Harrington was already in jail on other charges when he made a recorded phone call to Myka Medlock, with whom he'd been living, discussing getting bonded out of jail.

According to the sheriff's report, Medlock stated there was only $20 of "good money" in his wallet and the rest was "bad money."

On Aug. 1, deputies searched Medlock's apartment. Deputies reportedly found three large bags filled with copies of currency that had been shredded. Over the next few days, deputies reported, they examined the paper and pieced together more than 100 examples of 10- and 20-dollar denominations of money that had been copied.

Later, detectives determined the counterfeit money had been printed on resume paper purchased at Wal-Mart.

Deputies also found 13 fake bills had been passed in Twin Falls city and county, and three had been passed in Jerome County.

Also seized from the apartment was a computer, 10 different external hard drives and thumb drives, and a printer.

Two other men were also arrested and found with counterfeit bills that were found to have come from Harrington.

Patrick Van Wert was arrested on two outstanding warrants and found with two counterfeit bills on Aug. 29. He told deputies he received the money from Harrington and agreed to assist police in a controlled purchase of more counterfeit currency from him.

Carlos Paladini was booked on felon in possession of a firearm and other charges on Sept. 29. He told police he carried counterfeit $20s in his wallet because he would rather spend time in federal prison than state prison for his crimes.

The three fake $20 bills Paladini was carrying were found to be copies of notes from shreds recovered from Harrington's apartment.

According to the sheriff's report, Harrington is also wanted in California for counterfeiting. His past record includes possession of methamphetamine, possession of firearms by a felon, grand theft, burglary, hit and run, armed robbery, kidnapping and taking a vehicle without the owners consent.

T.F. Protesters Plan Saturday Event at Bank

TIMES-NEWS

Local protesters, following in the footsteps of the Occupy Wall Street movement, plan a Saturday protest in downtown Twin Falls.

Organizers of Occupy Twin Falls say they'll meet from 1-3 p.m. Saturday in front of the Wells Fargo Bank branch at 102 Main Ave. S. to protest what they call the bank's "unfair and unethical lending practices."

Organizers said a protesting Santa Claus will join the event and hand out false foreclosure notices to passersby. The public is invited to join in the protest or talk to protesters during the event.

Man Loses Appeal on Marijuana Charges

BOISE (AP) • A man arrested for marijuana possession during a traffic stop in 2007 has failed to convince the Idaho Court of Appeals he can't be prosecuted on drug charges because he used the pot as a religious sacrament.

Court documents show Cary William White, 53, of Boise had argued that marijuana was a natural product and gift from his creator. "I enter into the experience of Marijuana with the intent to bless it," White said in court documents.

The appellate court, however, ruled Wednesday that his use of the drug was not substantially motivated by religious belief, agreeing with two lower court decisions. White plans to appeal his case to the Idaho Supreme Court, his public defender said.

Boise police arrested White after he was pulled over for a faulty headlight. Officers reported that they spotted marijuana in the vehicle and later found a pipe underneath the driver's seat. White, a musical therapist who works primarily with Alzheimer's patients, he had smoked pot earlier that day, police said.

He was charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

A magistrate judge in Idaho's 4th District denied his motion to dismiss the charges for religious reasons. White testified that he smoked pot as a natural alternative to pain medication after he fell from a ladder and found that it enabled him to have a spiritual experience.

White also testified that the Bible provides for the use of marijuana and other plants, citing Ezekiel 34:29 and Revelations 22:1-2, which describe a "plant of renown" and a tree of life with leaves "for the healing of the nations."

The magistrate court rejected his argument. "It seems White has borrowed the ideology of many different religions and has used this ideology to meld into a justification for his use of marijuana," Magistrate Theresa Gardunia said in her written ruling to deny the motion to dismiss.

"Although it is certainly White's prerogative to believe whatever he wishes, it is not, however, a legitimization of illegal activity under Idaho's Free Exercise of Religion Protected Act," Gardunia wrote.

Judge: Public Can't See Idaho Prison Settlement

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge has refused to unseal a settlement agreement between an Idaho inmate and a private prison company involving allegations of rampant violence at a lockup near Boise known as "Gladiator School."

The Associated Press had asked the court to unseal the settlement between Marlin Riggs and Corrections Corp. of America.

However, U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge said Wednesday the interests of Riggs and the company in keeping the settlement confidential outweighed the interest the public has in learning its terms.

The AP's West regional editor, Traci Carl, said the news organization's attorneys were reviewing the ruling and considering the legal options.

"The AP is disappointed with the ruling and believes the public has a right to know the terms of the settlement," Carl said.

Neither Riggs' attorney James Huegli nor CCA's attorney Kirtlan Naylor immediately returned messages from The Associated Press seeking comment.

Riggs initially asked for $55 million in damages, saying the Idaho Correctional Center was nicknamed "Gladiator School" and that guards knew Riggs was about to be attacked but failed to protect him.

The AP contended the lawsuit raised profound and far-reaching issues of public interest. In his written ruling, Lodge acknowledged that the operation of a prison raises issues of public concern, but he said he feared releasing the document would place Riggs at risk for intimidation or assault in prison. He also said future litigants would be discouraged from participating in judicially supervised settlement conferences if they believed the outcome could be made public.

The judge also noted that a settlement agreement in a "companion lawsuit" between other inmates at the prison and CCA was released to the public. In that case, the inmates were alleging the same types of civil rights violations that Riggs claimed, but they didn't ask the court for any monetary damages. Instead, the inmates wanted changes to the way the prison is run — and in the settlement agreement, CCA agreed to make those changes, though the company did not acknowledge any guilt or liability. Both CCA and the American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho, which was representing the inmates, agreed to make that

Man Caught With Pot on I-84 Found Guilty of Trafficking

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • It took an Ada County Jury less than an hour to find Tuan Oai Pham guilty of drug trafficking Wednesday, following a two day long trial.

Ada County Sheriff's deputies arrested the 35-year-old Pham following a traffic stop on Interstate 84 in May, where deputies found 17 pounds of marijuana in a suitcase inside his van, according to reports.

Pham is set to be sentenced Jan. 31 by 4th District Judge Thomas Neville. The crime of trafficking marijuana is punishable by up to 15 years in prison.

A deputy originally pulled over Pham for speeding on the I-84 May 1. Arrest reports do not indicate if deputies were tipped off about Pham's cargo but the officer did have a K-9 dog with him, which detected the presence of drugs in the car.

Arrest reports also don't say if deputies had a theory as to where the marijuana was being taken to. Pham was in the van alone at the time of his arrest.

Pham told investigators he is from San Jose, but the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials currently have a detainer hold on Pham at the Ada County Jail, which usually means they suspect that person is in the U.S. illegally.

Bomb-maker Convicted of Manslaughter in Spokane

SPOKESMAN-REVIEW

SPOKANE, Wash. • After the first jury decided 9-3 to acquit him, a second jury handed down a unanimous second-degree manslaughter conviction against the man who built a homemade bomb that killed a Spokane man at a belated Halloween party in 2010.

Christopher A. Harris, who turns 21 on Sunday, faces about three years in prison at his sentencing, scheduled for Jan. 6. Harris was convicted of killing 28-year-old Cody R. Hathaway on Nov. 6, 2010, north of Chattaroy.

The jury acquitted Harris of first-degree manslaughter. Harris offered no comment on the verdict, but his attorney, James Kirkham, criticized Deputy Spokane County Prosecutor Dale Nagy for retrying the case after an earlier jury came to a decision weighted heavily toward acquittal.

Harris brought three bombs, which were small metal cartridges filled with black powder, to the party.

Congress Must Stop Spooking Farmers about Dust

The U.S. House reminded us all it's election season last week by throwing its weight behind a complete non-issue — the regulation of farm dust as a pollutant.

Like all good panics, this one starts with a kernel of truth.

Under President George W. Bush, the Environmental Protection Agency proposed regulating rural and urban areas more equally when it comes to “coarse particulate matter” — or soot — in the air. Farms could have fallen under the tighter restrictions, and a federal appeals court did conclude in a February 2009 ruling that the EPA proved farm dust “likely is not safe.”

The EPA under Obama defended that ruling at first, but then backed off the issue and has repeatedly disavowed any plans to single out farm dust as a health issue.

Meanwhile, the agency is now in the middle of reviewing its airborne pollutant standards, as required every five years under the Clean Air Act.

That's given opponents of the feared farm dust regulation another chance to warn of federally mandated doom, headed straight for America's farming communities. It culminated Dec. 8, when the House passed 268-150 the Farm Dust Regulation Prevention Act of 2011, an attempt to block the EPA for one year from imposing more stringent dust rules that it already doesn't plan to impose.

Sadly, some politicians took the chance to advance their rhetoric from fearmongering to blatant lying. Rep. Blake Farenthold, R-Texas, was quoted by the Associated Press saying, “The EPA's regulations on this” — present tense — “are the height of overreach.” Republican presidential candidates have offered their own alternate-universe takes on the issue.

To his credit, U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, the Magic Valley's man in the House and a co-sponsor of the bill, doesn't claim ignorance of the EPA's current statements.

Asked this week why this issue is worth spending time on now — as opposed to, say, such pressing items as unemployment and the deficit — Simpson argued it provides valuable certainty for farmers. His staff noted that behind the scenes, Simpson — a member of the House appropriations and budget committees — is still working on solutions to the nation's deficit addiction.

We can understand the argument he's trying to make. But the farm dust issue has been too badly overblown by now to escape the taint of political gamesmanship — another sign being the Dec. 8 vote that, with only a little support from Democrats, broke along largely partisan lines.

Whether the EPA should be taken at its word is certainly a fair point to debate, and we don't criticize the right Simpson and others in Congress have to doubt its assurances. We also would agree that regulating farm dust would be a bureaucratic nightmare, and a remarkable federal overreach.

But let's give the agency a chance. The rule-making process the government follows exists for a reason and shouldn't be stepped on based on a fear blown out of proportion. Somehow, we're willing to believe that if the EPA took the slightest step toward regulating farm dust, Congress would rally to block it.

“... There's no more time for partisan finger-pointing,” Simpson said in a Nov. 16 press release about the deficit.

We agree. And that's what the farm dust issue has become.

“It makes my blood boil. All the money in the world isn't going to bring them back to where they were before the sexual assaults.”

Harrisburg lawyer Ben Andreozzi, who read a statement by his client, identified in a grand jury report as Victim 4 after Jerry Sandusky stunned a packed courtroom and backed out of a preliminary hearing at the last minute, avoiding a face-to-face confrontation with accusers.

THEIR VIEW

Farmers Among Those Looted in Latest Financial Scandal

You'd think it wouldn't be easy to lose $1.2 billion. But there was former Democratic Sen. Jon Corzine, in the hot seat before a congressional committee, delivering one of the most astonishing statements of a tumultuous year: “I simply do not know where the money is.” This isn't a case of money lost because of assets beaten down by falling market prices. The money is missing from customer accounts at now-bankrupt MF Global, whose primary business was commodity trading. Customer accounts are supposed to be segregated; even when Lehman Brothers went down in 2008, those accounts weren't violated. Getting at these assets is supposed to be extremely difficult, a process typically requiring multiple approvals from various executives. What remains a mystery is how it happened at MF Global.

The firm's downfall Oct. 31 reverberated through Midwest farm communities because farmers and ranchers use commodity markets to lock in prices for their crops or livestock. Many farmers whose trades were handled by MF Global found their assets locked up. The Missouri Farm Bureau has urged Congress to ensure that federal regulators provide the “safeguards necessary to protect the integrity of the futures market trading system ...” Last week, a lawyer for the trustee handling the MF Global case told a court that money had been taken from MF Global customer accounts via “suspicious” trades. Missouri Farm Bureau President Blake Hurst said MF Global, which had placed a heavy bet on European sovereign debt, may have found itself short of collateral and reached for the customer accounts, thinking the funds could be quickly replaced. If so, it was a shocking breach not only of the law but of trust, an event that further undermines public faith in the probity of the financial markets. If customers' accounts were looted to cover trades by the firm, those responsible should face serious jail time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

American Companies, Foreign Workers

Irwin Tools is running a commercial stating that it is proud of the American workers that use its tools. Carhartt says that the American workers have not lost their grip and to just shake one of their hands. Both companies have closed American plants and moved jobs over our borders. And they are both proud of the American workers — gee, thanks. The problem is not with the American worker; it never has been and never will be. The problem is with million-dollar-a-month chief executive officers that close American factories, lay off American workers and devastate American towns. And then these companies have the unmitigated gall to wrap themselves in the American flag and tell us how proud they are of us all. We are not so proud of them. A proud American worker, ROBERT STEVENSON Jerome

Benefits in Several Locations

In reporting on Friedman Airport, Ketchum's Sustain

Blaine Organization recently stated its focus is “economics,” “not locations.” The premise that only Friedman can provide sustainable revenue for Blaine County is factually misleading. Completeness demands more. Studies show economic benefit would be derived from any of several locations. Landrum and Brown, global leader in aviation planning, published a 60-page report (www.flysvra.com) concludes relocation would create $30 million new annual revenue, 500 new jobs! None of Landrum's economic data, quoted below, was mentioned at Sustain Blaine's meeting nor reported in news releases: “Economic/Air Service Studies Completed — Landrum and Brown has also completed economic analysis, including an aviation forecast that assesses future demands for air service in the region, and an economic analysis of the air passenger market. In a nutshell, these reports confirm, due to the limitations on expansion and operations at Friedman, that the number of passengers utilizing Friedman can not increase in the future and a replacement airport will stimulate new air service and produce a $30 million annual positive impact from new visitor spending, increased economic activity associated with improved air traffic and new employment. Nearly 500 new jobs are projected as a direct result of a replacement airport. While the specific economic projections were calculated prior to the economic downturn of 2009, the findings clearly indicate that a significant positive economic impact will result from a replacement airport regardless of the economic events of the last year to 18 months.” Based on this report, it is hard to summarily dismiss relocation if the airport is truly the “driving engine” of Blaine County's economy. Trying to fit a square peg in a round hole moves us closer to Twin becoming the regional airport. Question: what is tourism's economic role? As Wally Huffman stated in September, “any airport is better than no airport.” DONNA SERRANO Bellevue Take the Necessary Precautions Dear Citizens of Twin Falls County: Christmas and New Year's are approaching fast. I would like to take this time to remind everyone that law enforcement officials in the Magic Valley have seen a dramatic increase in property crimes and a recent increase in home invasion crimes. These increases in crime mean that it is even more important to take precautions and provide any deterrents that you can to protect your families and homes. Precautions, such as outdoor lighting, a dog, alarms and locks can help deter criminals. Be vigilant of your family and possessions, but also watch out for your neighbor as well and report any suspicious activity to the authorities. Avoid becoming a victim of identity theft and be cautious in giving out any personal information. A good rule to follow is if you have to pay for it or give personal information over the phone or by mail, it is probably a scam. I would also like to thank the citizens of Twin Falls County for the enthusiastic reception that I have received from the various groups that I have visited since announcing my candidacy for Twin Falls County sheriff in 2012. I look forward to meeting more Twin Falls County residents in the near future. Have a very Merry Christmas. JACK JOHNSON Murtaugh

Two Missing School Girls Found Safe in Rexburg

BY JOSEPH LAW
Standard Journal

REXBURG • Rexburg police say two school girls who were taken Wednesday morning from Kennedy Elementary by a noncustodial parent, Heather Anne Fisher, 28, have been safely found.

Detective David Stubbs, of the Rexburg Police Department, said the two girls, Dezirae Ann John, 9, and Kiara Ann John, 6, were located in Provo, Utah Thursday morning with Fisher.

According to police Fisher is originally from Pleasant Grove, Utah, but has been living in Las Vegas.

Stubbs said Rexburg police had been in contact with Fisher Wednesday evening by cell phone and she had been given an opportunity to voluntarily release the two children but she failed to meet the deadline of 8 a.m. Thursday.

He said Provo police then located Fisher and the two children without incident at about 8:45 a.m. at a Denny's Restaurant in Provo and took custody of the children.

As of mid-morning the two girls were on their way back to Rexburg.

Stubbs stated that no charges have been filed against Fisher, and she is not in police custody, but the incident is being reviewed by the Madison County prosecutor.

"We had a lot of cooperation from other law enforcement agencies," he said, noting participation on the case by the Madison County Sheriff's Office, the FBI and the Center for Missing and Exploited Children. He said police also obtained judicial permission to get assistance from cell phone providers to help pinpoint Fisher's location.

Police were initially notified Wednesday afternoon that the children had been taken when the girls' stepmother called police after she received a call around 1:30 p.m. from the children.

They told their stepmother they were going with "mommy," police say.

In checking with the school, police determined that the two girls had been picked up by Fisher at 9:05 a.m.

Stubbs said his department plans to work with Madison School District to help prevent incidents like this.

"Our main focus is the return of the kids," he said. "We want to work with the schools to make sure we are doing everything to protect our young children."

Janet Goodliffe, a spokesperson for Madison School District, said that workers at Kennedy Elementary were going off the best information they had when they released the children to Fisher. She said the school secretary followed the standard check-out procedure they always follow, stating "there was nothing to clue the district off that something was amiss."

She encouraged parents to always keep the most recent custodial records with the district to protect children in these situations.

"It behooves parents to make sure the district has the most current and correct custodial records on file," she said. "We can reassure parents that safety of students in our primary role."

Goodliffe called the incident "a complicated custodial case with with a lot of issues involved and potentially different legal interpretations of custodial rights from a few different states," and she added that it didn't appear to be an abduction, "the children greeted the mom and agreed to go with her."

ordered a southern Idaho dairy to show it is complying with FDA regulations before it sells any cows to slaughter for food.
The consent decree was issued by U.S. District Magistrate Judge Candy Dale on Wednesday after the Food and Drug Administration sued G&H Dairy, contending that the business was sending cows to slaughterhouses even though the animals had higher-than-allowed levels of drugs in their systems.
G&H Dairy milks about 4,500 cows at three locations in Wendell, Buhl and Dayton and sells the animals for meat when they can no longer produce milk. Last month, the dairy's attorney Robert E. Williams said the business was preparing to enter a consent decree with the FDA but it didn't admit the truth of the allegations.

WinCo Foods Enters Phoenix Market

MESA, Ariz. • The Phoenix-area grocery store business is about to get a lot more competitive. Idaho-based warehouse chain WinCo Foods has announced plans to begin work on two stores in Mesa and Gilbert, but so far no opening dates have been announced.

The East Valley Tribune reports WinCo has scouted locations across the Phoenix-area since at least 2010. Supermarket industry consultant David J. Livingston says WinCo's debut could shake up the market with a focus on low prices and strong customer service. Livingston adds the recession and slow recovery help a chain like WinCo expand because more consumers have become price-conscious.

Twin Falls Deputies Arrest Two Buhl Residents for Drugs

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

In Hollywood, "The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo" was nominated for a couple Golden Globes.

In Buhl, a 29-year-old woman with a dragon tattoo on her back and a few warrants for her arrest was found crouching in the front seat of Aleksandar Gelever's Acura. Both Gelever and the woman, later identified as Nicole Erdmann, were arrested Monday on a variety of criminal charges.

According to Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies, Gelever is well known to police but Erdmann had to be identified through the distinctive tattoo on her back. Both Buhl residents were arrested after they refused to heed an officer's instruction while parked in what a police report described as a high crime area along Broadway Avenue South.

The deputy reported repeatedly knocking on the car's windows as Gelever and Erdmann roll the windows down or leave the car. Instead, the deputy reported, they alternated between hiding their faces, flailing their arms and yelling words the deputy couldn't understand.

As the two continued to yell and police backup arrived, the deputy told Gelever he was going to break the window and then used a window punch device to break it and arrest the car's occupants.

Gelever, 27, was allegedly found with methamphetamine, while Erdmann was allegedly found with a bag of marijuana and a glass pipe. Deputies also seized a wallet containing $1,274 from the car.

Erdmann was arrested on warrants for failing to appear for her sentencing hearing on a charge of failure to purchase a driver's license and allegedly violating her probation on a willful concealment conviction. She was also charged with obstructing and delaying an officer, possession of a controlled substance and possession of paraphernalia.

Gelever was arrested for allegedly violating his probation on a driving without privileges charge, and was charged with possession of a controlled substance, obstructing and delaying an officer and harboring a wanted inmate of a public institution.

Gelever's wife, Jill Gelever, was shot and killed last July in a Twin Falls hotel room. Thomas Trevino Jr. was recently sentenced to serve 15 years in prison for her murder.

Northern Idaho Man Gets 5 Years for Lewd Conduct

COEUR D'ALENE • A 32-year-old northern Idaho man has been sentenced to up to life in prison for lewd conduct with a 14-year-old girl.

First District Judge John T. Mitchell sentenced Coeur d'Alene resident Nicholas J. Ryan Tuesday. The judge said Ryan would be eligible for parole after serving at least five years.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports Ryan was also convicted of intimidating a witness in the case, because prosecutors said he communicated with the victim despite a court order prohibiting him from doing so. He was sentenced to two and a half years for that crime, to be served at the same time as the lewd conduct sentence.

Sen. Hammond Expects Idaho Legislature to Tackle Texting

BY DAVID COLE
Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE • Idaho state Sen. Jim Hammond, chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee, said he's fairly confident there will be legislation banning text messaging while driving that will make it through the Idaho Legislature in 2012.

"You cannot adequately drive and text at the same time," Hammond told The Press Wednesday. "It creates a safety hazard for the texter and surrounding vehicles."

Hammond, of Coeur d'Alene, said there already is a law on the books addressing inattentive driving, but the state needs something that more specifically targets texting and driving.

If no legislation is brought forth on texting, Hammond plans to do it himself.

The National Transportation Safety Board on Tuesday called for a nationwide ban on driver use of personal electronic devices, like cell phones, while operating a motor vehicle.

The NTSB said its recommendation was inspired by a long list of deadly crashes.

A recommendation by the federal government is nice, but it's going to be up to the Idaho Legislature to pass laws that drivers here must follow.

State Rep. Frank Henderson, a member of the House Transportation and Defense committee, said there have been efforts in the past two legislative sessions to ban text messaging while driving. Those efforts failed, in part, because of questions about enforcement, he said.

"I would support anti-texting" legislation, but first he'd have to read the bill and see what the penalties would be, said Henderson, of Post Falls. "It's a serious distraction while driving."

State Rep. Phil Hart, of Athol, said he believes that if cell phone use while driving is banned, people will do it anyway, and they'll likely work hard to hide it, which makes it even more distracting.

Besides, he said, the inattentive driving law is already on the books.

He has not decided on his support for a law specifically targeting cell phone use by drivers.

"Personally, for me, I need to see more data before I make up my mind," Hart said. "I still need to do more personal study on the issue."

When it has come up in the past, legislators couldn't agree on the language or approach, Hart said.

State Sen. John Goedde, of Coeur d'Alene, said, "I don't understand how people could text while driving," though acknowledging it happens.

Anonymous Donors Pay Off Layaway Accounts

At Kmart stores across the country, Santa seems to be getting some help from people paying off strangers' Christmas shopping bills.

BY MARGERY A. BECK
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. • The young father stood in line at the Kmart layaway counter, wearing dirty clothes and worn-out boots. With him were three small children.

He asked to pay something on his bill because he knew he wouldn't be able to afford it all before Christmas. Then a mysterious woman stepped up to the counter.

"She told him, 'No, I'm paying for it,'" recalled Edna Deppe, assistant manager at the store in Indianapolis. "He just stood there and looked at her and then looked at me and asked if it was a joke. I told him it wasn't, and that she was going to pay for him. And he just busted out in tears."

At Kmart stores across the country, Santa seems to be getting some help: Anonymous donors are paying off strangers' layaway accounts, buying the Christmas gifts other families couldn't afford, especially toys and children's clothes set aside by impoverished parents.

Before she left the store Tuesday evening, the Indianapolis woman in her mid-40s had paid the layaway orders for as many as 50 people. On the way out, she handed out $50 bills and paid for two carts of toys for a woman in line at the cash register.

"She was doing it in the memory of her husband who had just died, and she said she wasn't going to be able to spend it and wanted to make people happy with it," Deppe said. The woman did not identify herself and only asked people to "remember Ben," an apparent reference to her husband.

Deppe, who said she's worked in retail for 40 years, had never seen anything like it.

"It was like an angel fell out of the sky and appeared in our store," she said.

Most of the donors have done their giving secretly.

Dona Bremser, an Omaha nurse, was at work when a Kmart employee called to tell her that someone had paid off the $70 balance of her layaway account, which held nearly $200 in toys for her 4-year-old son.

"I was speechless," Bremser said. "It made me believe in Christmas again."

Dozens of other customers have received similar calls in Nebraska, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana and Montana.

The benefactors generally ask to help families who are squirreling away items for young children. They often pay a portion of the balance, usually all but a few dollars or cents so the layaway order stays in the store's system.

The phenomenon seems to have begun in Michigan before spreading, Kmart executives said.

"It is honestly being driven by people wanting to do a good deed at this time of the year," said Salima Yala, Kmart's division vice president for layaway.

The good Samaritans seem to be visiting mainly Kmart stores, though a Wal-Mart spokesman said a few of his stores in Joplin, Mo., and Chicago have also seen some layaway accounts paid off.

Palm-sized Baby Among World's Smallest

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES • At birth, Melinda Star Guido was so tiny she could fit into the palm of her doctor's hand. Weighing just 9 1/2 ounces — less than a can of soda — she is among the smallest babies ever born in the world.

Most infants her size don't survive, but doctors are preparing to send her home by New Year's.

Melinda was born premature at 24 weeks in late August and is believed to be the second-smallest baby to survive in the U.S. and third smallest in the world. She spent the early months cooed in an incubator in the neonatal intensive care unit in Los Angeles.

Despite hurdles, Melinda lived to her original Thursday due date. Doctors say it is too early to say how she will fare developmentally and physically when she grows up.

For now, her 22-year-old mother sits at her bedside almost every day and stays overnight whenever she can.

On Wednesday, Haydee Ibarra caressed Melinda through the portholes of the incubator where nurses pinned up a homemade sign bearing her name. Now 3 1/2 months old and weighing 4 pounds, Melinda gripped Ibarra's pinky finger and yawned.

During her pregnancy, Ibarra suffered from high blood pressure, which can be dangerous for mother and fetus. She was transferred from a hospital near her San Fernando Valley home to the county's flagship hospital, which was better equipped to handle high-risk pregnancies.

There was a problem with the placenta, the organ that nourishes the developing fetus. The fetus was not getting proper nutrition, blood and oxygen. Doctors knew Melinda would weigh less than a pound, but they were surprised at how small and fragile she was.

U.S. Formally Ends Iraq War with Little Fanfare

Gnawing question hangs over ceremony in a fortified corner of Baghdad airport: Will Iraqis be able to forge their new government amid sectarian clashes?

BY LOLITA C. BALDOR AND REBECCA SANTANA
Associated Press

BAGHDAD • Nearly nine years after American troops stormed across the Iraq border in a blaze of shock and awe, U.S. officials quietly ended the bloody and bitterly divisive conflict here Thursday, but the debate over whether it was worth the cost in money and lives is yet unanswered.

While many of the speeches painted a picture of victory — for both the troops and the Iraqi people now set on a path for democracy — the gnawing questions remain: Will Iraqis be able to forge their new government amid the still stubborn sectarian clashes? And will Iraq be able to defend itself and remain independent in a region fraught with turmoil and still steeped in insurgent threats?

Stark reminders of the fragile and often violent nature of the situation in Iraq engulfed the 45-minute ceremony. It was tucked into fortified corner of the airport, ringed with concrete blast walls. And on the chairs — nearly empty of Iraqis — were tags that listed not only the name of the VIP assigned to the seat, but the bunker they should move to in case of an attack.

The speeches touched on the success of the mission as well as its losses: Nearly 4,500 Americans and 100,000 Iraqis killed. Another 32,000 American and tens of thousands Iraqis wounded. And $800 billion from the U.S. Treasury.

On the other side of the ledger, an Iraq free from the tyranny of Saddam Hussein, inching forward toward democracy and vowing to be a good neighbor in the region.

"To be sure the cost was high — in blood and treasure of the United States and also the Iraqi people," Defense Secretary Leon Panetta told the roughly 200 troops and others in attendance. "Those lives have not been lost in vain — they gave birth to an independent, free and sovereign Iraq."

Gen. Lloyd Austin, the top U.S. commander in Iraq, said the Iraqi people now have an unprecedented opportunity to live in a relatively peaceful environment, but he also acknowledged it will be a

Optimism Growing in Congress on Deal to Avoid Federal Shutdown

BY DAVID ESPO and ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The endgame at hand, both Democratic and Republican congressional leaders expressed optimism Thursday at prospects for swift compromise to extend Social Security tax cuts, keep long-term jobless benefits flowing and avoid a threatened partial government shutdown at midnight Friday.

Still another year-end bill, setting new rules for the handling of terror suspects in U.S. custody, won final congressional approval and headed to President Barack Obama's desk for his signature.

"Right now, Congress needs to make sure that 160 million working Americans don't see their taxes go up on Jan. 1," said Obama, referring to the tax cut extension at the core of the jobs program he outlined in a nationally televised speech three months ago.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio, the most powerful Republican in an era of divided government, agreed. "We can extend payroll tax relief for American workers, help create new jobs and keep the government running. And frankly, we can do it in a bipartisan way," he said.

The long-moribund job market, too, appeared to be on the mend. Government figures showed 366,000 applications for unemployment benefits were filed last week, the lowest number since the near-collapse of the financial system in 2008 and the brutal recession that followed.

In the Capitol, the previous day's bristling rhetoric and partisan jabs all but vanished.

Government to Adopt Strict New Limits on Chimp Research

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Days in the laboratory are numbered for chimpanzees, humans' closest relative.

Chimps paved astronauts' way into space and were vital in creating some important medicines. But the government said Thursday that science has advanced enough that from now on, chimpanzees essentially should be a last resort in medical research — a move that puts the United States more in line with the rest of the world.

Chimps' similarity with people "demands special consideration and respect," said Dr. Francis Collins, director of the National Institutes of Health.

His move came after the prestigious Institute of Medicine declared that most use of chimpanzees for invasive medical research no longer can be justified — and that strict new

Companies Have a Year to Pipe Down Loud TV Ads

BY RYAN NAKASHIMA
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Shush, already. That’s the message the Federal Communications Commission is sending with new rules that force broadcast, cable and satellite companies to turn down the volume on blaring TV commercials.

On Tuesday, the FCC passed a set of regulations that will prevent commercials from being louder than the shows around them. It’s all part of the Commercial Advertisement Loudness Mitigation (or CALM) Act, which President Obama signed into law last December. The rules go into effect a year from now. Companies that don’t comply will face unspecified FCC action.

Thunderous television ads have annoyed viewers for years. The FCC says people have grumbled about the issue for at least a half century. But since 2002 — thanks in part to all those clangorous car commercials, earsplitting electronics ads and booming beer pitches — loud advertisements have been one of the top complaints the FCC receives.

Complaints grew in recent years, as ads became even louder. In the days of analog TV, louder ads took up more space on the airwaves. So broadcasters toned them down to avoid interfering with other channels. Since the conversion to digital TV broadcasts two years ago, loud ads no longer take up more airwave space than quiet ones. The change transformed the commercial break into a noisy arms race.

Full Ban on Driver Calls Could Be Tough to Enforce

BY MATT SEDENSKY
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. • A driver in the next lane is moving his lips. Is he on a hands-free cellphone? Talking to someone in the car? To himself? Singing along to the radio?

If lawmakers follow the advice of a federal board, police officers will have to start figuring that out — somehow.

The National Transportation Safety Board said this week that drivers should not only be barred from using hand-held cellphones, as they are in several states, but also from using hands-free devices. No more “Sorry, I’m stuck in traffic” calls, or virtually any other cellphone chatter behind the wheel.

Though no state has yet implemented such restrictive rules, the NTSB’s recommendations carry weight that could place such language into future laws, or motivate the federal government to cut funding to states that don’t follow suit.

Many of the men and women patrolling the nation’s streets and highways wonder how they would sort the criminally chatty from the legally chatty.

“It would be almost impossible to determine if someone was talking on a phone or exercising their vocal cords,” said Capt. Donald Melanson of the West Hartford, Conn., police department, which took part in a national pilot program aimed at cracking down on drivers’ cellphone use. “That would be much more difficult to enforce, almost to the point where it would be impossible.”

Officer Tom Nichols of the Port St. Lucie, Fla., police said a law written like the NTSB suggests would be difficult to enforce because so many variables would be at play.

“If you identify someone who has a hands-free set hooked up to their ear that doesn’t mean they are talking on the phone,” he said. “They could be talking to a passenger. They could be talking to a child in the back. They could be singing.”

Police could end up turning to technology for help. They might even end up with the cellphone equivalent of a radar speed gun.

Fred Mannering, a Purdue University civil engineering professor who is associate director of the Center for Road Safety, said that since all cellphones emit signals, a simple Bluetooth detection device could spot them.

Computers are already common in patrol cars, and Mannering said a relatively cheap add-on could fit them to track cellphone signals.

“It would be really easy for police to have a computer on board and pick up those signals,” Mannering said, “but it is sort of Big Brother.”

The NTSB’s proposal, announced Tuesday as a unanimous recommendation of its five-member board, urges all states to impose total bans except for emergencies. It cited deadly crashes caused by distracted drivers across the country, and noted that many studies have shown that hands-free cellphones are often as unsafe as hand-held devices.

The recommendation poses an astounding number of questions. What about chauffeurs and traveling salesmen who spend their entire day on the road?

And roadside Amber Alert and Silver Alert notifications that implore drivers to call in if they spot a specific vehicle? What comes of phone lines dedicated to those “How’s My Driving?” signs on trucks? How will you let someone know you’re stuck in traffic?

Joe Schwieterman, a DePaul University professor who studies people’s use of technology while traveling, said he can’t envision a law so restrictive ever hitting the books because phone use has become commonplace for drivers. He called such an approach “draconian” and said that if such a law were passed, the public would despise it as “imperial overreach,” then ignore it.

“It’s a little like speeding laws where it will become just culturally acceptable to violate,” he said. He said a no-call law would be followed only if violations carried stiff penalties like those for drunken driving.

Lewis Katz, a law professor at Case Western Reserve University, said a nationwide ban on using cellphones while driving would be wildly unpopular, and likely the target of legal challenges. But he believed such a law, and the methods police might use to enforce it, ultimately would be deemed as constitutional as seatbelt enforcement.

“I’m sure that it would be challenged on all sorts of constitutional grounds, including free speech,” he said in a phone call from his car. “But it seems to me that it doesn’t in any way infringe on any constitutional rights. It’s a simple safety issue.”

Whether the NTSB’s recommendations will motivate decision-makers remains to be seen, but they have certainly caught their attention.

Iraq

challenging time. And he urged Iraqi leaders to make good choices based on what is best for their people.

“Violence and prosperity cannot co-exist,” said Austin, who eight years, eight months and 26 days ago gave the order for U.S. troops to storm across the border into Iraq. And on Thursday he gave the order to retire the flag of U.S. Forces-Iraq.

The flag was then rolled up, covered by a camouflage colored sheath and will be brought back to the U.S.

Speaking to the troops in the audience, Panetta lauded their service and their bravery, adding, “You will leave with great pride — lasting pride — secure in knowing that your sacrifice has helped the Iraqi people to begin a new chapter in history.”

Many Iraqis, however, are uncertain of how that chapter will unfold. Their relief at the end of Saddam, who was hanged on the last day of 2006, was tempered by a long and vicious war that was launched to find non-existent weapons of mass destruction and nearly plunged the nation into full-scale sectarian civil war.

“With this withdrawal, the Americans are leaving behind a destroyed country,” said Mariam Khazim, a Shiite whose father was killed when a mortar shell struck his home in Sadr City. “The Americans did not leave modern schools or big factories behind them. Instead, they left thousands of widows and orphans. The Americans did not leave a free people and country behind them, in fact they left a ruined country and a divided nation.”

Some Iraqis celebrated the exit of what they called American occupiers, neither invited nor welcome in a proud country.

“The American ceremony represents the failure of the U.S. occupation of Iraq due to the great resistance of the Iraqi people,” said lawmaker Amir al-Kinani, a member of the political coalition loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr.

Others said that while grateful for U.S. help ousting Saddam, the war went on too long. A majority of Americans would agree, according to opinion polls.

The low-key nature of the ceremony stood in sharp contrast to the high octane start of the war, which began before dawn on March 20, 2003, with an airstrike in southern Baghdad where Saddam was believed to be hiding. U.S. and allied ground forces then stormed across the featureless Kuwaiti desert, accompanied by reporters, photographers and television crews embedded with the troops.

The final few thousand U.S. troops will leave Iraq in orderly caravans and tightly scheduled flights.

Austin led the massive logistical challenge of shutting hundreds of bases and combat outposts, and methodically moving more than 50,000 U.S. troops and their equipment out of Iraq over the last year — while still conducting training, security assistance and counterterrorism battles.

The war “tested our military’s strength and our ability to adapt and evolve,” he said, noting the development of the new counterinsurgency doctrine.

As of Thursday, there were two U.S. bases and fewer than 4,000 U.S. troops in Iraq — a dramatic drop from the roughly 500 military installations and as many as 170,000 troops during the surge ordered by President George W. Bush in 2007, when violence and raging sectarianism gripped the country. All U.S. troops are slated to be out of Iraq by the end of the year, but officials are likely to meet that goal a bit before then.

Chimps

limits should determine which experiments are important enough to outweigh the moral cost of involving this species that is so like us.

“The bar is very high,” said bioethicist Jeffrey Kahn of Johns Hopkins University, who led the institute panel.

The group stopped short of recommending an outright ban, saying a handful of research projects today might still require chimps — but more importantly, that the animals might be required in the future as new diseases evolve and emerge.

Animal welfare groups welcomed the change but continue to push for Congress to pass legislation that would go a step further and phase out all invasive chimp research.

“Chimpanzees have provided limited value in research settings, and now alternative methods have been developed that will make their use all but obsolete,” said Wayne Pacelle, president of the Humane Society of the United States.

But some scientists say it’s not that big a change because chimp studies already were dwindling fast as researchers turned to less costly and ethically charged alternatives.

“The use of a chimpanzee in biomedical research is the rare exception,” said Dr. Thomas Rowell, who directs Louisiana’s New Iberia Research Center, one of five research centers that houses chimps and other primate species used in both government- and privately financed studies.

It’s not clear exactly how many of the nation’s 937 research chimps — 612 of them owned by the NIH — are in the midst of experiments that would be affected by the new standards and could be moved into retirement instead. Most of the chimps are fairly old, as the nation has had a moratorium on breeding since 1995.

But Collins temporarily barred new government-funded studies involving chimps as his agency began implementing the recommended restrictions.

Republicans agreed to consider changes to a $1 trillion spending bill compromise that they and at least one Democrat said had been wrapped up days ago. The White House said it wanted adjustments.

There were separate negotiations on legislation to extend the Social Security payroll tax cut and unemployment benefits. Democrats abandoned their demand for a surtax on million-dollar incomes that they wanted to include in the measure, removing a provision that Republicans strongly opposed.

“We hope that we can come up with something that would get us out of here at a reasonable time in the next few days,” said Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada.

At a news conference, Boehner minimized the concession, noting that Democrats lacked the votes to impose the surtax a year ago when they commanded 60 votes in the Senate. Even so, he said, “there was some movement yesterday from the White House and Democrat leaders” toward a compromise.

Boehner also left open the possibility of a compromise on another key sticking point — a House-passed provision that all but requires construction of the proposed Keystone XL oil pipeline from Canada to Texas.

Construction “will put 20,000 people to work immediately. And there are about 115,000 other jobs directly related to it,” he said. Yet he skipped an opportunity to say construction of the project was a non-negotiable condition as talks on the payroll tax cut bill proceed.

Obama has threatened to veto the House-passed bill, in part citing the requirement for the pipeline. The project has been studied for more than three years, but the president recently announced he would put off a decision until after the 2012 elections.

Without an extension of the payroll tax cut, 160 million Americans will have smaller take home pay beginning on Jan. 1, a fact that the president and leaders of both parties stressed as they looked for compromise.

Obama asked Congress to extend and also to expand the payroll tax cut that took effect last Jan. 1 and is due to expire at the end of the year. The House-passed bill renews the current reduction for one year, and it was unclear whether a final compromise would go any further.

Masked Pakistani Taliban militants take part in a training session on Sunday in Pakistan's tribal South Waziristan region along the Afghan border. AP reporter and photographer Ishtiaq Mahsud spent six days with fighters from the Pakistani Taliban near the Afghan border. His account of their travels through South Waziristan offers a glimpse into an area that the Pakistani military claims was brought under control by an army offensive two years ago.

Journey With Taliban Shows Militants' Resilience in Pakistan

BY ISHTIAQ MAHSUD
Associated Press

SOUTH WAZIRISTAN, Pakistan • For 15 hours, we walked with Taliban fighters through territory supposedly controlled by the Pakistani army and frequently pounded by U.S. drone strikes. Avoiding roads and towns, we easily evaded soldiers and were shown recruits drilling with weapons, militant positions and — from a distance — a compound used by foreign fighters.

The rare trip to South Waziristan revealed the resilience of militants in the northwestern tribal areas, some of whom are also battling American soldiers across the frontier in Afghanistan. It also demonstrated that the insurgents, who once ruled much of South Waziristan from permanent bases with many hundreds of fighters, are now largely a guerrilla force there.

The Pakistani Taliban had invited three Pakistani journalists to meet its leader, Hakimullah Mehsud, at a time when splits have appeared in the movement. But Mehsud canceled, with his aides saying he was called into urgent meetings with a delegation of Afghan Taliban elders who had arrived from across the border.

The trip began in the capital of North Waziristan, Miran Shah, where the Pakistan army has yet to launch an offensive despite requests from Washington. Militants, including al-Qaida and Afghan Taliban factions, are in firmer control in this region than in South Waziristan. Extremists from other countries and other areas of Pakistan were visible on the streets of the town.

We then drove to the boundary with the south, and began our journey on foot, accompanied by four fighters.

South Waziristan was once home to about 500,000 people but its towns and villages are now mostly empty. The population was told to flee ahead of a major Pakistani army offensive in 2009. The army has declared victory, but most locals haven't returned. They do not believe official statements that their homeland is safe.

In one abandoned village, three men were living in a single room in a ruined house. They said they couldn't leave because they had no money and two of them were blind from birth. Their sole possessions were a dirty mat and some blackened cooking pots. One, 30-year-old Mafiq, said the Taliban gave them monthly rations and sometimes cooked food.

At night, we slept in empty houses. Once, we feasted on goat with about 40 fighters in a forest encampment.

The Pakistani military remains in South Waziristan in force but its men are often targeted in ambushes.

On the main roads there were army posts, vital for supplying the roughly 30,000 soldiers in the region. But it was easy to travel without being spotted or pursued so long as our group stayed off them.

"The army is confined to the roads," said Shameem Mehsud, the operational commander of the Pakistani Taliban. "All the surrounding areas are in Taliban control."

After 15 hours hiking, our group came to a semi-permanent forward position used to attack troops traveling on a main road below. About 30 fighters were armed with rocket launchers, sniper rifles and artillery. Through binoculars, Mehsud pointed out what appeared to be an anti-aircraft gun on a nearby ridge he said belonged to the Taliban.

As we chatted, the army fired mortars at the position, one round landing about 50 meters (yards) away.

On the return journey to the north, again on foot but using a different route, one of the fighters pointed to a collection of buildings that he said was used by fighters from Turkmenistan. He said fighters from other countries stayed at different places in the region.

The tribal regions, particularly North Waziristan, have become a magnet for Muslims wanting to fight jihad or "holy war." The area is also used by Afghan militants to stage attacks inside their homeland, knowing that U.S. and NATO troops cannot enter Pakistani territory.

The Pakistani army, which has several times flown reporters to South Waziristan and other Afghan border areas to show off its achievements against militants, was not available for comment on what we observed on our trip.

The army offensive in South Waziristan was launched after heavy American pressure, and was followed by operations in six of the seven tribal regions along the border. But as U.S.-led forces have found in Afghanistan, holding exposed and remote territory against insurgents who know the area and can count on local support is fiendishly difficult.

Eager to wipe out a safe haven for al-Qaida and protect American troops in Afghanistan, the United States has supplied Pakistan with money, weapons and expert assistance for its campaign against the militants. That cooperation has faltered badly this year amid a series of crises between the two nations, whose divergent interests in Afghanistan have proven hard to reconcile.

There is no love lost between the Pakistani military and the Pakistani Taliban, which is allied to al-Qaida and has carried out scores of suicide bombings around the country since 2007.

Some insurgent commanders in the northwest have said recently they were in peace negotiations with the Pakistani government. Militant attacks in major cities outside the northwest have been down sharply this year, a drop some have attributed to the success of army operations and the drone strikes.

The commanders in South Waziristan rejected any talk of peace. They said they would negotiate with the government only if Islamic law were implemented throughout the country, the army withdraws from the region and all Taliban prisoners are released.

"Despite all their resources and atomic power, America, NATO and Pakistan cannot defeat the Taliban as our suicide bombers will use their bones as bullets, their flesh as gunpowder and their blood as fuel," Mehsud said. "They have no way to counter to this spirit."

OBAMA STANDS BY MEDAL OF HONOR AWARD TO MARINE

BY DYLAN LOVAN
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. • President Barack Obama is standing by his award of the Medal of Honor to a Marine in the Afghanistan war despite a published report Thursday charging exaggerations of the battle.

Obama presented the award to Marine Sgt. Dakota Meyer three months ago, calling him the "best of a generation" that joined the military after 9/11. He described the day in 2009 when Meyer braved enemy fire in eastern Afghanistan to save U.S. and Afghan comrades.

McClatchy Newspapers reported that its review of documents turned up numerous "untrue, unsubstantiated or exaggerated" assertions about the firefight.

The report by a McClatchy Newspapers correspondent who was embedded with the military and witnessed the Sept. 8, 2009, battle, based the story on analysis of dozens of military documents, including sworn statements by Meyer and others involved.

The story also said Meyer displayed heroism that day and deserves the award.

Obama spokesman Jay Carney said the award was based on sworn testimony and reviewed by the Marine Corps. He said Obama "remains very proud" of Meyer and his "remarkable acts of bravery."

Meyer, a native of Green County, Ky., could not be reached for comment Thursday. He said on his Twitter page that he has received an outpouring of support since the report was published. He posted a picture of the front page of a Lexington newspaper that prominently displayed the story.

"I can't thank everyone enough for the support people on Twitter and other Americans are showing me. So Thank You all," Meyer tweeted.

A friend of Meyer's who attended the Medal of Honor ceremony at the White House on Sept. 15 said Meyer was frustrated by the report because he has used the medal to draw attention to fallen and wounded Marines and soldiers.

"He's been very clear in almost every interview, he didn't ask for this. But he now has learned that it's his responsibility," said Chris Schmidt, of Columbia, Ky.

Meyer's grandfather, Dwight Meyer, said he hadn't seen the story and didn't know what it was about.

"Dakota just doesn't talk about (the battle), because he's had so much on his mind about it, because it's affected him tremendously," Dwight Meyer said.

Meyer has been humble about receiving the honor, calling it "the worst day of his life" because his comrades died.

The Marines said in a statement they were very disappointed McClatchy published the story. The award investigation process used first-person, eye-witness accounts and supporting documents and that Meyer "rightly deserved the nation's highest military honor," the Marines said.

The Marines acknowledged that the process was not flawless.

"Because of the nature of the events supporting awards for valor, it is normal for minor discrepancies to appear when reviewing the source information and collecting eyewitness statements," it said.

Retailer Overstock.com Unloads Goods at Auction

BY PAUL FOY

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Hundreds of people are bidding on returned merchandise at the Salt Lake City warehouse of Internet retailer Overstock.com.

Turns out, Overstock is overstocked. It's the company's first auction and an unusual one. Goods are being sold by the pallet, each one containing a hodgepodge of unsorted goods, mostly furniture.

Overstock says each pallet is worth hundreds or thousands of dollars at full retail price, with bidders offering about 30 cents on the dollar.

ECONOMY UPDATE

REPORT SAYS WESTERN STATES EDGING TOWARD RECOVERY

BY CRISTINA SILVA

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • The West is recovering faster than the nation as a whole, but employment across the region remained far below pre-recession levels and the housing market showed few signs of improvement, according to an economic report released Thursday.

The report prepared by Brookings Mountain West researchers at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas focused on economic growth in 10 metropolitan areas spread across Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado and Idaho.

Overall, the region saw a modest 0.3 percent growth in employment in the quarter ending in September, compared to the national rate of 0.1 percent, the study found. Utah, Colorado and New Mexico — states that have built broad economic bases — struggled the least, researchers said.

In Arizona and Nevada, the housing collapse continued to limit job growth.

“We don’t have a robust, steady recovery yet,” said Mark Muro, policy director for the Brookings Metropolitan Policy Program. “The real estate crack up continues to have a severe influence on the places that struggle with it.”

In all, every metropolitan area lagged behind pre-recession employment levels, with Phoenix and Las Vegas experiencing the sharpest differences. Job levels languished 10.8 and 13.4 percent below their respective pre-recession peaks.

“The road to recovery remains long and uncertain,” the report noted.

Still, there was enough employment growth in the past year to drive down the unemployment rate in every major metropolitan area singled out by the report. Utah and New Mexico had the lowest unemployment rates, while Las Vegas had the highest at 13.6 percent.

Leading the recovery were Utah's Ogden and Provo, Albuquerque in New Mexico, and Phoenix. Boise and Las Vegas showed modest signs, but Tucson, Ariz., and Colorado Springs were still struggling, according to the report.

Unemployment Claims at Lowest in 3 1/2 Years

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

WASHINGTON • The job market is healthier than at any time since the end of the Great Recession.

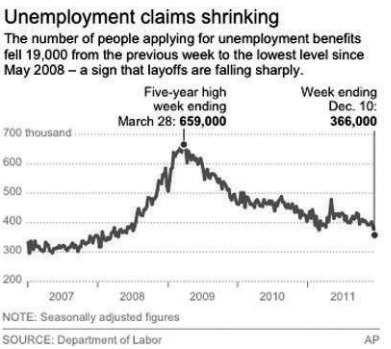

The number of people filing for unemployment benefits fell last week to the lowest since May 2008, a sign that the waves of corporate layoffs that have defined the past few years are all but over.

“This is unexpectedly great news,” said Ian Shepherdson, an economist at High Frequency Economics.

It will take an additional step — robust hiring, not just the end of layoffs — to bring the 8.6 percent unemployment rate down significantly. Experts say that won’t happen until businesses are more confident about customer demand. And the European debt crisis could still cause damage here.

But the report on unemployment claims Thursday was the latest to suggest that the economy, two and a half slow years after the official end of the recession, may finally be picking up momentum.

The nation added 100,000 or more jobs every month from July through November, the first such streak since 2006. And the economy, which was barely growing when the year started, has picked up speed each quarter.

More small businesses plan to hire than at any time in three years, a trade group said this week. And another private-sector survey found more companies are planning to add workers than at any time since 2008.

The number of people applying for unemployment benefits came in at 366,000, down from 385,000 the week before. Applications are nearing their pre-recession level of about 325,000.

The last time claims were so low, the nation was six months into the recession but didn’t know it yet. The unemployment rate was 5.4 percent — a level almost hard to imagine these days. Unemployment has been above 8 percent for almost three years.

Corzine Disputes He Knew More About Money

WASHINGTON • Jon Corzine on Thursday disputed an allegation that he knew about customer money that may have been transferred to a European affiliate just before MF Global collapsed.

“I did not instruct anyone to lend customer funds to MF Global or any of its affiliates,” Corzine told a House panel. He also said he didn’t know about “the use of customer funds on any loan or transfer.”

Corzine made his first public appearance since Terrence Duffy, the CME Group Inc. executive chairman, alleged Tuesday that he might have known about the $175 million transfer.

If true, Duffy’s accusation would raise the possibility that Corzine misled Con-

DON'T GET IN HER WAY

This Twin Falls dart player's competition is friendly, but she's a formidable opponent in the local league.

As curlicues of cigarette smoke rose to the ceiling, Kelly Butler prepared for another throw. She took aim at the ring in the center of the electronic board and released the dart. "I'm not very good with a camera flash in my face," she said Tuesday afternoon at Twin Falls' Log Tavern, where she works as bar manager. But looking at the board, you'd think: What is she talking about? Two of the three darts she threw hit the bull's-eye.

Darts

Butler is one of the valley’s top women dart throwers, said Bloxham, who taught her how to throw about 12 years ago when they were married. The two are still friends and compete on a team, which wraps up the season’s Saturday competitions this weekend at the bar. The team’s name: “2 out of 3 Ain’t Bad.”

Butler laughed at the name, saying it was Mike’s idea, and invited Bloxham to demonstrate shooting darts with her. She keeps coming back to the game because it’s fun, a stress reliever.

“I don’t take it as seriously as everyone else does,” Butler said. “I just like to have a good time.”

Something that makes it fun: the unofficial rivalry between her and league member Robin Lancaster.

“We’re always trying to one-up each other,” Lancaster said. “One year she’ll score higher than me, and the next I’ll score higher than her. But that’s what I like about darts. It’s friendly competition.”

Lancaster, of Twin Falls, has been playing darts for about 24 years and said there’s no one right way to throw a dart. Everyone has a technique. The important thing, she said, is practice. “If you’re not practicing, it’ll show in your game.”

Darts have become quite popular in the Magic Valley, Bloxham said, nodding to a number of plaques from the Western Music Mark Dart

Association that hang on a wall inside the Log Tavern, honoring various teams with first-place wins.

“This place was the dart mecca in the valley,” he said. “It still is. More darts are thrown here than anywhere else in the area.”

The bar has electronic dart boards as well as the more traditional kind, which use steel darts.

Throwing steel darts is toughest, Butler said. They’re heavier and don’t stay in the boards as well.

You’d think Butler would have a lot of time to practice at the bar, as she works there. But that rarely is the case if she’s not playing with her team. “I’m too busy.”

On Tuesday, however, she took a few minutes to demonstrate her skill.

Butler released another dart, and the electronic board lit up and beeped another bull’s-eye.

Lancaster, beware.

writes in the image’s description. “Driven into his chest by the banker’s index, extending from the clinched fist of war, is the determination to extinguish the breath of rebellion, and subjugate the soul to the dictates of Business so that it might forget it’s (sic) humanity.”

Ransom works on the drawings daily, and often in public. Pat and Corina Scheidt, owners of Von Scheidt Brewing Co., said Ransom used to draw at their business when it was open as a restaur-rant. That drew a lot of attention from other customers, Corina said.

The Scheidts still have two of Ransom’s pieces displayed on their wall. Ransom’s studio is next door to their brewery, and he’s a great neighbor, Pat said.

Ransom approaches each new drawing with a clear mind.

“I try not to be in my head at all when I’m creating an image,” he said. “I never have an idea of what’s going to come up. It just evolves.”

Paul Hanson, art teacher at Xavier Charter School in Twin Falls, is impressed by Ransom’s technique.

Robert Ransom made this drawing after his father suffered a stroke. Ransom says he likes using a ballpoint pen because people normally don’t employ it in the art world — they use it in business, to write checks.

Mini-Cassia Musicians Promise the Real-Deal Santa at Burley Concert

BY MCKAYLA HAACK
 For the Times-News

BURLEY • It wouldn't be Christmas in Burley without the Magic Philharmonic Orchestra.

"Christmas music is especially fun to play because it has a really special feeling with it," orchestra musician Colleen McCall said.

Colleen and her husband, Gary, are longtime members of the Magic Philharmonic, which will perform Dec. 20 in Burley's King Fine Arts Center. Colleen has been in the group of volunteer musicians since its formation more than 25 years ago, and she convinced her husband to join a year later.

"It's really nice. It's a common interest that we share. She complements me and I complement her, and it is just fun doing that together," Gary said.

Gary plays timpani and Colleen plays flute; both have been on their instruments since they were young. Gary was raised in a family that found music important, and he and Colleen raised their children to feel the same way. All of their children play instruments, and two are music teachers. For two years, Colleen drove their daughter to Utah for cello lessons.

"It takes money and time and a tremendous effort, and that's how you get to the next level. I consider it a great investment," Gary said.

Fortunately for Mini-Cassia music lovers, the McCalls aren't alone in that sentiment.

Magic Philharmonic was started because "a lot of people learn to play instruments and have no place to use their talents. It's just fun to get together to make music," said Jolene Hobson, chairwoman for the Dec. 20 concert. The event will also showcase the talents of area youth, such as Suzuki Strings violin students.

"In this small area, it's really good for the youth to have this opportunity to play," Gary McCall said.

Volunteers young and old come together in this dynamic group of musicians. The orchestra doesn't have a full-time conductor, so even its conductors are volunteers.

That delights board member Bob Dayley, because "we get such a variety of sounds and feelings behind the music." Guest conductor for the Dec. 20 performance will be Magic Philharmonic member Elizabeth Leuk.

The orchestra will play an array of fun and traditional Christmas carols, accompanied by narration. Expect new songs that Magic Philharmonic has not played in the past. The concert will be especially exciting because "we feature Santa Claus, the real one, straight out of

It's a modest start, but the Twin Falls Public Library this month launched an e-book lending collection of about 200 titles.

BY DAVE WILKINS
For the Times-News

Patrons of the Twin Falls Public Library can now borrow some books without ever stepping inside the building.

The library has joined an e-book consortium that allows readers to download digital copies of selected titles.

Patrons need just two things to get started: a library card and a computer or mobile device with an Internet connection. Just browse the e-books website, click on a title you want, then borrow it for a period of either seven days or 14 days.

"Once the checkout period has expired, the title will automatically remove itself from the device and check itself back in," said Adam Day, information technology specialist at the Twin Falls library.

The southern Idaho consortium has started out with a modest digital collection of about 200 titles, including recent works by novelists Tom Clancy, Janet Evanovich, Stuart Woods and Danielle Steel. Additional titles will be added each month.

The consortium must pay for each digital copy that it offers.

"One misconception is that because it's a digital library, you have an infinite number of copies of every item. Unfortunately, that's not true," Day said.

"It's going to be like a physical book," he said. "If we had five of the same title, five items would be available for download at any particular time."

The e-books can be read on many mobile computing devices, including the iPad, Kindle and many other e-readers and smartphones.

How to Borrow an E-book

This is free for Twin Falls Public Library cardholders:

- First, sign in on the digital library website (www.ebooks.twinfallspubliblibrary.org) using your library card number.

- Browse the collection. Many of the titles will not be available for immediate download because they've already been checked out. If the book you want is not available, you can place a hold on it.

- Select a download format that's compatible with your device (Kindle, iPad/iPhone, Nook, etc.) and add the title to your cart. You will be directed to a website to redeem your library loan. Kindle users will be directed to the Amazon.com website, for instance, where they must log into their account.

- Complete checkout. The selected title will be downloaded the next time the wireless system on your mobile device is activated.

The E-book Converts

The eight-library consortium's new service was available to the public for the first time Dec. 5. At an informational session Dec. 6, Twin Falls library staffers answered questions about the service, and Best Buy representatives fielded questions about various e-readers.

Nichole Webb of Jerome was there with her Kindle, a Christmas gift she received last year. It took Webb a while to warm to the idea of reading books electronically, but now she loves her Kindle and is intrigued by the idea of downloading library books.

"I resisted for a long time because I like to hold a book. I like to see the cover art," she said. But Webb became a digital convert after a long trip. "It was so nice to travel on the plane and not have a big bag."

The move to e-books isn't likely to turn your local library into a museum anytime soon. Librarians expect the shift to be gradual and limited to certain genres.

"There are still things that print books do better than ebooks," said Jennifer Hills, reference librarian at the Twin Falls library: Imagine reading a children's book, a cookbook or poetry on an e-reader.

Many people may also balk at spending $80 for a basic e-reader when they can borrow print books from the library for free, Hills said. "I don't think we will see the shift yet."

Who Else Is Doing It?

Starting a digital library service can cost several thousand dollars. A digital platform that works with different e-reading devices must be set up online, and there are licensing rights to be paid to book publishers.

The consortium that Twin Falls joined also includes public libraries in Nampa, Caldwell, Eagle, Emmett, Mountain Home, Hailey and Ada County.

Boise Public Library has offered an e-book lending library for the past couple of years, but Gina Persichini, networking consultant for the Idaho Commission for Libraries, believes Boise to be the only public library in the state to do so on its own.

Smaller libraries are also interested, but upfront costs have kept most on the sidelines.

"The smaller libraries are very interested in offering e-books to our patrons as well, but it's cost-prohibitive for us," said Julie Woodsford, director of the Burley Public Library.

A company called Overdrive dominates the e-book lending platform business, but others appear ready to jump in. Smaller libraries hope that increased competition will lower costs.

"We are waiting to see if there is something that we could afford," Woodsford said.

Persichini estimates that a third to a half of all public libraries in Idaho now offer e-book lending.

"I think that we are right on par with other states," she said.

From Jerome to Air Supply and Back to the Classics:

Classical Christmas Concert Reunites Jerome High Alums

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • They sang together at Jerome High School in the '80s before each went off to pursue a professional music career.

Now John Mauldin, Leslie Mauldin and Jed Moss are reuniting to present a night of Christmas music, along with professional opera soprano Celena Shafer from Salt Lake City and Boise's Hatvani Chamber Ensemble.

The fourth annual Classical Christmas Concert will be at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 23 in the Sun Valley Opera House. Tickets are $35, at 622-2135 or toll-free at 888-622-2108.

"I can't wait to sing together again," said Leslie Mauldin, who now lives in Boise after performing around the world. "When you grow up musically together, there's something organic that never goes away. It's like an old recipe that always turns out perfect."

In Jerome, the trio honed their love for music under choir teachers Sharon Warner and Carson Wong, who has conducted throughout Idaho including at the College of Southern Idaho. The two teachers introduced their charges to a smattering of musical styles, including the classics, oratorios and jazz harmonies.

"They made it wonderfully fun. And we were like a basketball team. We had a real camaraderie. There's something moving about singing in harmony and being part of that blend of voices. You sing together, breathe together, move together," Leslie Mauldin said.

"It's amazing the number of professional singers that came out of Jerome and Twin Falls, from Gary Puckett to Nikki Sixx of Motley Crue," said John Mauldin, now entertainment director for Sun Valley Resort. "I know in high school we had the most singers in the All-Northwest Choir Conference even though we were a small school by most standards."

Leslie Mauldin

John Mauldin

Jed Moss

Moss started out as a professional piano player, occasionally adding his rich baritone voice to the mix, as he performed with top orchestras including the Los Angeles and New York philharmonics.

Amidst this he was approached by the rock band Air Supply, which wanted him to audition as a keyboardist. "I'm a classical concert pianist," he remembers responding.

But at the urging of friends like Leslie Mauldin, he ended up playing with Air Supply for 13 years, marveling at the difference between playing for mega audiences in stadiums and more intimate audiences in classical concert halls. He co-wrote the instrumental piece "Once" with Air Supply's Graham Russell for "The Book of Love," along with pieces for motion picture soundtracks. Eventually, he returned to the classical scene, he said, but bringing with him a knack for improvisation that he learned as a pop performer.

Moss, now of Salt Lake

City, said he's looking forward to playing in Sun Valley, which he remembered fondly from his youth: "I've always loved Sun Valley, but with my busy schedule, I've never had the chance to play there."

The trio and the rest of the Dec. 23 lineup will perform a variety of familiar Christmas music, such as "White Christmas," "I Wonder as I Wander," "What Child is This?" and "Sweet Little Jesus Boy," and some classical numbers.

"I'm always in awe at my brother. He's a beautiful tenor. And Celena has a beautiful presence," Leslie Mauldin said.

Kids and Adults, You Can Audition for Oakley Musical

TIMES-NEWS

Oakley Valley Arts Council plans auditions for its spring production, "Dear Edwina," from 7 to 9 p.m. Jan. 5 and from 9 a.m. to noon Jan. 7 at Howells Opera House in Oakley.

Children and adults may audition; ages 7-14 should be accompanied by parents. Musical audition will include listening to and sight reading a song from the show. Music is available before auditions from director Kent Evensen, at 677-2787.

"Dear Edwina" will be performed March 9-10, 12, 15-17, 19 and 22-24 at Howells Opera House.

In this musical by Zina Goldrich and Marcy Heisler, 13-year-old Edwina Spoonapple has talented siblings and thinks that she isn't special. Yet Edwina's talents include leadership, singing and advising, and she combines them by directing musicals out of her garage. Their topic is letters written to her by neighborhood kids who need advice; she gives advice through songs and dances that she orchestrates with her friends.

One of the show's main themes is Edwina's desire to be in the Advice-a-palooza festival, to prove that she is as talented as her siblings.

ISU Places Three on AP All-American Team

BY MARK LIPTAK
For the Times-News

POCATELLO – The Idaho State Bengals have won a total of four football games in the past three seasons but nobody can say there wasn't some talent on the field at Holt Arena during that time period.

For the second straight season the Bengals had three players named to the AP All-America football team announced Thursday. Punter David Harrington and receiver Rodrick Rumble both made the first team, with linebacker A.J. Storms getting picked on the second team.

For Harrington and Storms it's the second time they made the All America squad.

Storms finished as the leading tackler in ISU history with 434 breaking the old mark of 414. He had 122 tackles this past season.

"It's one of those things, you work your whole life for something and it's nice to know that someone recognizes the effort," he said while finishing up a practice at the FCS Scout Bowl in South Carolina. Storms will be playing in the Saturday game before numerous scouts. He expects to sign with an agent next week.

FEELING BLUE?

Twin Falls students provide their unique brand of energy at boys basketball games

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

Some wore bright, construction orange trucker hats and black, hipster reading glasses. Two others donned blue skin-tight body suits, with almost everyone in the student section at Baun Gymnasium clad in blue and white 'Blue Crew' T-shirts.

All of the 100 or so Blue Crew members formed a line after Twin Falls' 49-42 win over visiting Filer Wednesday night for a congratulatory handshake, baseball player style, for a good night of chants, heckling and controlled rowdiness.

"My voice is almost always gone after the game," said Chase McKelvey, one of two ringleaders of the Blue Crew. "It's intense."

McKelvey and fellow senior Marcus Donaldson made it a mission this season to create an electric, energized, creative student section at Twin Falls High School. The Blue Crew is their conception.

Every game night, McKelvey and Donaldson show up to the gym around 6 to prepare for the night's festivities. Before the season, they watched film of other school's chants. They each bought the blue body suits at Halloween City and wear them under their "Blue Crew" T-shirts they designed.

They've created 90 T-shirts through the help of the Twin Falls booster club and Donnelley's Sports. The shirts come

BRUINS' DEFENSE BESTS BOBCATS

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

The Twin Falls girls basketball team is fast growing a reputation for keeping an opponent's best player under lock and key. And sometimes the Bruins take it a step further.

The Bruins shut down the entire Burley roster in the second half Thursday, slogging out a 36-29 win at Baun Gymnasium.

Burley (3-7, 1-3) led by two at the break, but the Bobcats only scored nine points in the second half. Standout guards Aubrie Vale and Chelsea Baker combined to score three after halftime, all by Baker.

"Defense is what our team's all about this year," said Twin Falls guard Brylee Bartlett, who led all scorers with 12 and drew primary responsibility for hounding Vale. "(Vale) is really quick, but you've just got to stay down and stay in front of her, and trust your defense if she gets past."

Vale and Baker both scored 10 in the loss for Burley, but both went two full quarters without scoring. Baker blanked in the second and third quarters and Vale was held off the board the entire second half.

With the two players normally accounting for most of the scoring going quiet, none of the other Bobcats was able to step into the offensive breach.

"We can be a complete team, and we need to win that way," said Burley coach Roger Caresia. "You can't ride one or two girls the entire game, other girls need to step up. We're tentative at times and our youth shows."

Twin Falls (5-3, 3-1) kicked off the first game of three in as many nights. The Bruins will head south to play a pair of Nevada teams tonight and Saturday.

Ex-CSI Baseball Player Killed in Canada

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

For the second time in 15 months, the College of Southern Idaho baseball family has been struck by tragedy.

Former CSI shortstop Tanner Craswell was shot dead south of Calgary, Alberta, at around 3:30 a.m. Thursday, according to The Guardian of Prince Edward Island, Craswell's native province.

Craswell, who played for CSI in 2009-10, was one of five people shot in what local authorities are calling a murder-suicide, according to reports. In total four people were killed, with the fifth victim recovering in a Calgary hospital.

"Right now we're in shock. It's something that is tragic and there are five families that are suffering right now because of this news," said CSI athletic director Joel Bate. "Tanner was a great kid, we were just hoping that he'd continue on. We're just very sorry for his family that they have to go through this."

Craswell and friend Mitch MacLean were headed to the Calgary airport to fly home for the holidays from Prairie Baseball Academy in Lethbridge, where they were attending school. Craswell moved on to Prairie from CSI, returning to Twin Falls with the Dawgs last season for a game.

"I received a text about (5 p.m. Thursday) asking if I heard about Tanner ... my jaw dropped and I was speechless," said former CSI pitcher Trey Mohammed, who was in the program from 2009-11, in a Facebook conversation with the Times-News. "Cras really lived life to the fullest. He would always be there to cheer you up, he knew when to have fun, and he also knew when to compete. He is going to be missed by many, that's for sure."

Craswell is the second player with recent ties to the CSI program to die in little more than a year. Devon Austin, a catcher from Coeur d'Alene, was killed in an early-morning car accident in September 2010.

"You know when you're in this and you have so many kids that unfortunate things are going to happen, but you hope it's when they've lived a full life," said CSI coach Boomer Walker. "Tanner was very, very special to us. Great kid, loved him to death. It's just too bad."

"I've been on the phone with players for the last couple of hours and everybody's asking the same question: 'Why?' That's a standard question at a time like this, but it's just a hard pill to swallow."

The Commissioner Strikes Back... Sort Of

David Stern faces the same problem as the commissioner of every other pro sports league operating in North America, save the NFL.

He's got too many lousy teams — or if you prefer, not enough superstars to go around — and a labor deal that handcuffs him from trying to do anything about it.

So give the NBA boss an 'A' for effort by maneuvering Chris Paul to the Clippers for the sake of competitive balance. But also recognize the deal for what it was: a raging conflict-of-interest that could come back to haunt him soon enough.

Trading on his second job as proxy owner of the league-owned New Orleans Hornets, Stern nixed a trade that would have sent Paul to the Lakers and claimed he got a better one when the Clippers jumped in. Maybe so.

The real consequences of the swap won't be known at least until next year's draft picks have played a sizeable chunk of the season, but this much we already know: Stern pulled the rug out from under the Lakers, and didn't do the Rockets and Celtics any favors. The only way this qualifies as competitive is by making more teams bad.

The move makes the Clippers as good as they've ever been, maybe even competitive in the crowded Los Angeles market. Paul drove the Lakers crazy last season in the Western Conference playoff while carrying a Hornets team barely half as talented as the one he'll join with the Clippers.

Emerging star Blake Griffin is a perfect complement — the duo has already been dubbed "Stockton and Malone 2.0" — and if the partnership lasts half as long, a title for one of the

BAILEY SHOOTS MINICO PAST WOOD RIVER

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • On its way to a 21-3 record and the Class 4A state championship game last year, the Wood River girls basketball team didn't have many blemishes on its record.

One of those losses, however, was on a late January night in Rupert. At the time, Wolverines head coach Mendy Benson suggested it was a mental issue. Her girls had never won in Minico's gym, and that stuck in the back of their minds.

On Thursday, the hex continued. Despite holding Marlee Chandler, Minico's best scorer, to just two points, the Wolverines once again found a way to lose in Rupert.

Hannah Bailey scored a game-high 19 points and Micaela Merrill had 14 as Minico got a much-needed Great Basin Conference win, 45-36.

"It was huge. It's a big confidence boost for our team," said Bailey. "Everyone played their game and we all played good as a team. We were all looking for the open person and tonight it happened to be me right there."

The majority of Bailey's points came from 17-foot jumpers in the high post.

"We've been telling her to shoot that shot. They were giving it to us all night," said Minico coach Terry Merrill.

Minico (6-5 overall, 1-2 GBC) employed a full-court pressure defense that caused problems for the Wolverines.

"We used our press to bring our energy," said Bailey. "Our coaches have felt that a lot of the time that's what keeps us intense, is to be running the full court."

As a result, Wood River committed 11 more turnovers than Minico. Plus, despite a size disadvantage inside, the Spartans finished with three more rebounds.

"Our defense was tenacious, I thought," said Terry Merrill. "We knew we would give up a few points inside with their big girls, but our girls pulled together tonight and it was a good team win."

Wood River (4-4, 2-2), which ended its four-game winning streak, got a team-high 15 points from Haylee Thompson.

"We haven't won here at Minico since I've been in high school and we came in fired up. We wanted to get the win here," said Wood River senior guard Haillie Taylor, who had 10 points. "It was probably our best first quarter that we've come out and actually played a good first quarter, and we played four quarters all the way through. Towards the end we were getting tired because we have two players out. With no subs you have to use your timeouts, and that doesn't help you at the end of the game."

Both teams are back in action Saturday. Minico hosts a league game with Canyon Ridge, while Wood River ventures out of conference at Rigby.

JEROME SLAMS SPRING CREEK

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Spring Creek, you've just been Hollified.

Jake Hollifield, the 6-foot-6 Jerome forward scored 21 points, grabbed eight boards, blocked two shots and threw down one mean two-handed slam off an alley oop to lead the Tigers 56-42 over the visiting Spartans from Nevada on Thursday night.

"He's a pretty special player they've got. We tried every time he got the ball to send another man on him to try and help, but he beat that or passed the ball to their shooters," said Spring Creek coach Andy Hendrickson. "We see players like that in our area, but that's not to take anything away from him. He's a really good player."

The Tigers (5-1) ran a play early in the game to get Hollifield a dunk. The pick and roll worked to perfection as guard Shaquille Kennedy drove the lane and flipped the ball to Hollifield for the easy two-handed flush.

"That was pretty cool wasn't it?" said Jerome coach Joe Messick. "We try to get him one of those plays a game. It gets the crowd going early in the game and it worked perfectly for us"

The Spartans (1-5) took a greater emphasis defending Hollifield in the second quarter, doubling him as soon as he touched the ball in the post.

Two possessions in a row, however, Hollifield found a wide open Garrett Leavitt for wide open threes as the Tigers pushed the lead to 18-10. Jerome didn't slow down from there, taking a 25-18 lead at the half and pushing it to as large as 18 early in the fourth quarter.

"When I was able to seal a guy and get my back to the basket, it was easy," Hollifield said. "Our guards did a great job finding me in the post and giving a great pass. ... I would feel that second defender when he'd come over, but we have such great shooters and I was able to get the ball to them. It seemed like we had three after three."

The Tigers just made the two 3-pointers, but shot 57 percent in the second half with a greater emphasis on getting the ball into the post. Spencer Geist scored eight of his 12 points in the third quarter as the Tigers built their lead. Leavitt finished with 12 points and Tavin Archuleta led Spring Creek with 15.

Jerome opens Great Basin Conference play tonight in Rupert against Minico (0-4).

in blue and white and in four different designs, with such sayings, 'Fear the Blue Crew' and 'Are You With the Crew.'

McKelvey and Donaldson have been selling the shirts for $15 or $25 with all the money going toward a scholarship fund to help 15 students attend the senior trip to Disneyland in June.

"Last year, there would be chants but everyone would be wearing different stuff. We thought it would be cool to have the entire crowd wearing blue shirts that all say Blue Crew," McKelvey said. "And with the money raised, we're helping people out who maybe couldn't go on the senior trip and that's a pretty cool deal."

Since they aren't playing on the court, the Blue Crew's main objective every game night is to beat the other school's student section.

"We can't lose," Donaldson said. "We have all the chants. I don't want to get ahead of myself, but I think we're the best student section around."

On Wednesday, thirty seconds before the game, senior Zayne Slotten, led the group in the "I believe that we will win" chant made famous by Utah State students. The Blue Crew, already on their feet, jumped up and down and screamed in unison until the buzzer sounded to start player introductions.

Then, one by one, every fan pulled out a newspaper page, holding it in front of their face as the Filer starters were introduced. Eric Harr hit his first 3-pointer early in the quarter and the students held three fingers in the air, chanting "MVP! MVP!"

After the first quarter, the cheerleaders helped lead the students in a fun chant where the crowd sits on the bleachers, waving their hands in the air to mimic the rocking motions of riding a roller coaster.

"That's always a fun one," said Donaldson, who helped create a Facebook page for the Blue Crew, which has gained more than 470 friends since its inception in October.

They use the page to help tell fans when the game is and what to wear. McKelvey and Donaldson said they plan on having white-out and blue-out nights.

"I think the students get more excited than we do during and before the game. At school, it's like 'hey wear your blue tomorrow! People come up to me and ask if I'm ready to go and they say they're ready,' Harr said. "They really get your blood going before the game. You can just feel the energy. It's pretty sweet to play in."

Twin Falls went on a run in the third quarter Wednesday to take control of the game and the Blue Crew promptly made sure the Filer fans knew, yelling "Scoreboard! Scoreboard!" at the Wildcats faithful.

The fans even sang happy birthday to Bruins player Chase Crandall and every time a Twin Falls player hit a 3-pointer in the second half, every Blue Crew member gave a chant Jonathan Drew of 1450 KEZJ would be proud of, saying, "Boom goes the dynamite."

"They do a pretty good job. They've created a fun environment for everyone and haven't taken it too far," said Twin Falls athletic director Mike Federico.

McKelvey and Donaldson admitted they like to rattle the opposing team and can get a little rowdy, but they haven't gotten in trouble with Federico. They plan on tripping to all of the Bruins' road games this season and the No. 1 game on their radar is Jan. 6 against cross-town rival Canyon Ridge.

"Oh yeah, that one is circled on our calendar," McKelvey said. "We'll have something special for that game."

Asked about his crew's performance Wednesday night, McKelvey said it was an OK night.

"We've got to step it up and get more fans out here," he said. "I think it's been pretty fun though. We have one of the best basketball programs in the state, so it's always going to be exciting."

BCS Sticks BSU's Moore With Flop Finale

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kellen Moore deserves a better send off.

The Boise State quarterback, who has more victories as a starter than any college quarterback in history, will conclude his brilliant career Thursday night at the MAA-CO Bowl Las Vegas against Arizona State, a 6-6 team that has already had its coach fired.

What a waste. In many ways there is no more damning indictment of the Bowl Championship Series and college football's bloated bowl postseason than Moore and this group of Boise State seniors being relegated to a third-tier game.

Even mild-mannered coach Chris Peterson finally snapped at the BCS after his team's latest snub. The Broncos were No. 8 in the final AP Top 25 for the regular season.

"Everybody is just very tired of the BCS," Petersen told reporters in Idaho earlier this month. "I think that's the bottom line. Everybody is frustrated. Everybody doesn't really know what to do anymore. It doesn't make sense to anybody. I don't think anybody is happy anywhere.

"The whole thing needs to be changed, there's no question about it," he said. "... I think (change) is coming, I really do."

Too late for this band of Broncos, though.

In four seasons as a starter, Moore has led Boise State to 49 victories and thrown 140 touchdown passes, second on the NCAA career list.

Of course, it's not just

Moore.

Fellow seniors such as second-team All-American tackle Nate Potter, third-team All-American safety George Iloka, defensive tackles Billy Winn and Chase Baker and running back Doug Martin have formed the foundation of team that has lost twice the last two seasons. Both times they were a last-second field goal away from earning BCS bids.

Instead, it's been two straight postseason trips to Las Vegas.

There's no denying Boise State's gaudy record has been inflated by playing in conferences — the Western Athletic Conference, before coming to the Mountain West this season — with more than a few soft spots.

There is also no denying the Broncos have proved capable of beating good teams from power conferences. Just ask Oregon, Georgia and Virginia Tech.

The bowl seasons should have been another chance to see Boise State take on the heavyweights, to find out if the Broncos were truly worthy of being labeled national championship contenders.

Maybe Moore would have gotten buried by a good SEC defense. Maybe Winn and company would have gotten shredded by a Big 12 offense. The haters could have happily dismissed Boise State as a fraud.

Or maybe the Broncos would have cut a couple more of the so-called college football elite down to size and stuck it to the doubters.

Come to think of it, it's not just Moore who deserved better, it's all college football fans.

Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore should end his career against a more high-profile opponent in a more prestigious bowl. But college football's lack of a playoff means Moore and the Broncos must settle for a 6-6 Arizona State team in the Las Vegas Bowl.

FOURTH MAN ACCUSES FINE OF SEXUAL ABUSE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DANNEMORA, N.Y. • A 56-year-old New York prison inmate says former Syracuse University assistant basketball coach Bernie Fine began molesting him more than 40 years ago and continued to have sexual contact with him into adulthood.

Floyd VanHooser told The Associated Press during a prison interview Thursday that Fine began sexually abusing him when VanHooser was 14 years old. As an adult, the contact included sex acts for money. VanHooser is the fourth man to accuse Fine of sexual abuse. He initially made his allegations to the Post-Standard of Syracuse.

Fine was fired Nov. 27 after a 36-year career at Syracuse after three men said he molested them when they were boys.

Fine has denied wrongdoing and has not been charged. A federal investigation is ongoing.

VanHooser is serving 16 years to life at Clinton state prison near the Canadian border for several burglaries of Syracuse-area homes. He was sentenced in October as a persistent felony burglar.

PSU Recruits Facing Questions About Future

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio • Two prized Penn State recruits have already backed away from their verbal commitments and will go elsewhere, due to the Jerry Sandusky sex scandal hanging over the football program and the uncertainty over the Nittany Lions' next head coach.

More decommits may be on the way.

Until the focus shifts to the future instead of the ugly recent past, national recruiting analysts believe it will be difficult for the Nittany Lions to turn things around.

"They're going to need someone to come in and reinvigorate the fans," said Scott Kennedy, director of scouting for Scout.com. "In today's society, I don't think this is as program-killing as people have talked about. Not to minimize what's been going on there, but I just don't think this is akin to a death penalty."

"However, I do think in the short term it's going to get worse before it gets better."

What was at one time considered a solid class of prospects — possibly among the 10 best in the nation — has no choice but to pin its future on the reassurance of what is expected to be a lame-duck coaching staff. Meanwhile other programs are taking advantage of the lingering questions surrounding Penn State to spirit away players.

Five-star defensive tackle prospect Tommy Schutt from Glen Ellyn, Ill., announced on Monday he was taking back his commitment to Penn State and now says he's headed to Ohio State. Offensive lineman Joey O'Connor, of Windsor, Colo., also has reversed his thinking and now says he will not go to Penn State. He's still considering his options.

One major reason for the defections is the stigma of the charges that Sandusky, a former Penn State assistant coach who retired in 1999 but still had an office at the school long after, allegedly abused young boys.

The Sandusky allegations led to the firing of coach Joe Paterno on Nov. 9, along with the departure of other top athletic department officials. Longtime defensive assistant Tom Bradley took over on an interim basis as the Nittany Lions went 9-3 and earned a spot in the TicketCity Bowl on Jan. 2 in Dallas against Houston.

With no new head coach yet there has been very little hope or optimism surrounding the program. Penn State's once glittering brand name has been mentioned prominently in a persistent drum-beat of court dates, appearances, interviews and further allegations.

best punter in school history. He finished his two-year career with the best punting average in Big Sky history, averaging 46.29 yards a kick, just edging the 46.27 mark set from 2001-02 by ISU's Eddie Johnson.

Harrington also had the best single-season average for a punter this year, averaging 48.7 yards a punt, good for the top mark in the nation. He had a career-best 70-yard punt and 29 punts of 50 yards or more.

"My mom called me in the morning and said that I got it and I couldn't believe it. I had to go on-line to see for myself," Harrington said with a laugh. "It feels really great to get something like this... it's the payoff for seven years of really hard work."

Harrington was invited to the same FCS Scout Bowl as Storms but had to refuse because his final exams were later in the week and he wouldn't have had enough time to get to the game on the other side of the country.

"I have an agent and now that I've graduated I'll be returning home to Southern Californiato work harder than I have in my life," Harrington said. "I hope that I can get an invitation to another All Star game to show what I can do."

Rumble destroyed opposing defenses with a season for the ages. He set the school and Big Sky record for receptions with 112, to go along with 1,348 receiving yards, the second-best mark in Idaho State history. Rumble, who also earned first-team all-conference honors this year, recorded nine touchdowns and had the third-best single-game performance in Idaho State history with his 218 receiving yards at Washington State. He'll return next season to play for head coach Mike Kramer.

Kramer couldn't be reached for comment as he and his staff is out on the road recruiting for the February signing period.

Even though the team didn't achieve much success on the field — Storms only won five games in his entire college career — the players said what they experienced and what they went through was worth it.

"This award doesn't take away the sting of losing," Storms said. "But it's good to know that the time spent wasn't a total failure and the people I met and played with; that bond is something that I'll never forget."

Bears Receiver Arrested on Drug Possession Charges

CHICAGO • Chicago Bears wide receiver Sam Hurd was locked up in federal custody as his stunned teammates learned he had been charged with trying to set up a drug-dealing network following his arrest with more than a pound of cocaine.

U.S. Magistrate Young Kim ordered Hurd held until at least Friday while prosecutors and defense attorneys work out bond details before he is sent to Texas to face charges. The handcuffed Hurd declined comment to a reporter before the hearing.

Asked if he was still a member of the Bears, he said: "As far as I know." He shook his head when asked if he had talked to anyone on the team.

Hurd was arrested Wednesday night after meeting with an undercover agent at a Chicago restaurant, according to a criminal complaint that says the player was first identified as a potential drug dealer over the summer as the NFL lockout was coming to an end.

Hurd told the agent that he was interested in buying five to 10 kilograms of cocaine and 1,000 pounds of marijuana per week to distribute in the Chicago area, the complaint said. He allegedly said he and a co-conspirator already distribute about four kilos of cocaine every week, but their supplier couldn't keep up with his demands. A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.

Big Ben Sits Out Practice Again

PITTSBURGH • Ben Roethlisberger's sprained left ankle looks, well, more like an ankle than it did after last week's 14-3 win over the Browns.

The swelling is down. The rainbow of colors that surrounded the mangled joint earlier in the week have been reduced to a little black here, a little blue there.

That doesn't mean the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback is any closer to playing on Monday night against San Francisco.

Roethlisberger sat out his third practice in a row on Thursday, hoping another 24 hours of rest will help him avoid missing his first start due to injury in more than two years.

"The goal is as soon as possible to get in there and get in as much work as I can," Roethlisberger said.

That might not be until Saturday at the earliest, and offensive coordinator Bruce Arians said the team could wait until after warm-ups against the 49ers to make a decision.

Losman Looks Forward to Playing Former Team

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. • J.P. Losman is familiar enough with Buffalo Bills fans to not make any predictions regarding what reception he might get should the Miami Dolphins backup quarterback start against his former team this weekend.

Whether he gets booed or cheered, Losman says

he'll "laugh it off."

Losman heard both — and often in the same game — during a mercurial five-year career in Buffalo.

It began with great promise in 2004, when the Bills drafted the strong-armed Tulane product 22nd overall. And it ended five years later, after Losman lost the starting job for a second time to Trent Edwards. On Sunday, he'll make his first return to Buffalo, though it's uncertain whether he'll start in place of Matt Moore, who sustained a concussion and a neck injury last weekend.

SHAQ LAUNCHES NEW CAREER AS NBA ANALYST

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • Shaquille O'Neal doesn't like the Chris Paul trade; Charles Barkley says Commissioner David Stern made a mistake.

O'Neal also says the trade talk swirling around Dwight Howard has damaged his relationship with the Magic though Barkley says the center is the first player he would choose to start a franchise.

Let the debates begin. O'Neal, the Hall of Fame-bound center, is joining Barkley, Kenny Smith and Ernie Johnson on the set of TNT's "Inside the NBA."

Barkley and O'Neal seemed to disagree on all the NBA's hot stories on Thursday. The two outspoken and entertaining former stars had differing views of the deal which sent Paul from the New Orleans Hornets to the Los Angeles Clippers.

"I think that they totally took a step back," O'Neal said of the Hornets.

Barkley said the Hornets, who acquired guard Eric Gordon, forward Al-Farouq Aminu, center Chris Kaman and a first-round draft choice, protected their future without making a huge sacrifice in their current outlook.

"I think it's a great trade for the Hornets because they weren't going to win with Chris Paul," Barkley said.

Barkley said the Clippers can win with Paul.

"I can't believe I am saying this, there is a legitimate question now: Who is the best team in L.A.?"

"The Clippers have got all of their young talent and now they've got a leader. Chris Paul is a leader. He's going to force them to mature quicker."

O'Neal wasn't ready to crown the Clippers the new top team in town.

"I think the Lakers are always the Lakers," O'Neal said before adding the Clippers will be more competitive. "Their team is going to be very, very exciting to watch."

Barkley had sharp criticism of Stern for nixing the Hornets' proposed trade of Paul to the Lakers.

"David Stern is the best commissioner in sports in the last 25 years, in my opinion," Barkley said. "That's the first time I saw him make a mistake. I don't know what happened but it wasn't good for the NBA."

"That was not good for the NBA the way that went down, plain and simple."

O'Neal, sometimes soft-spoken, may have to find his voice to be heard above Barkley's bold, booming delivery.

Smith said O'Neal is under no pressure to play a lead role, unlike his playing career.

most clueless franchises in any league is within the realm of possibility. That the Clippers got so much better at the expense of the Lakers will only make the rivalry edgier.

This assumes that the team on the other side of town will react the way it always does, but it's been a very un-Laker-like few days. It began with Stern blocking the deal that would have moved Lamar Odom to New Orleans and Pau Gasol to Houston in exchange for Paul, while the Rockets would have sent Luis Scola, Kevin Martin and Goran Dragic, and a first-round draft choice to New Orleans. Facing the prospect of an unhappy Odom, the Lakers inexplicably pulled the trigger on a deal shipping him to Dallas for next to nothing.

It was little surprise when Kobe Bryant complained, another thing when Phil Jackson weighed in from retirement. Besides, it leaves the Lakers with the prospect of a grumpy Gasol and no easy choices to re-tool a lineup that looked old and out-of-sorts at the end of last season.

But the collateral damage in the Paul deal wasn't limited to the Lakers. The Celtics had their eyes on David West while the trade carousel was still spinning and the Rockets, who were also harboring hopes of plying Nene away, are left scrambling to fill their front line. Instead of contenders, both now will be marginal playoff qualifiers.

The sooner Stern gets out of the ownership business, the better. We saw baseball commissioner Bud Selig wearing two hats — for part of his tenure, he remained owner of the Milwaukee Brewers — and remember how that worked out.

Certainly, Stern may have made the Clippers much better and the Hornets more attractive to a buyer in the short run. But like Selig, he can't do anything about competitive balance without real NFL-style salary caps and revenue-sharing agreements. That was clear when the agents for a few of his marquee players began investigating deals even before the ink was dry on the latest collective bargaining agreement.

"It's been a lot of fun," Stern said, referring to his stint playing fantasy general manager for the Hornets. "But I don't get paid to have fun."

Good thing, too.

BBQ Dining Set

Do-it-yourselfers who need extra outdoor seating for the summer's barbecues and parties can build their own dining set with little more than basic tools, lumber, hardware and a weekend of work. This project is easy, inexpensive and fun to build, even for amateurs.

The rectangular picnic table and bench set is six feet long. It requires only basic assembly using nuts, bolts and wood screws. The table can be built with either a straight leg design (as shown) or a curved, country-style leg design.

The plan includes full-size patterns for angled or curved cuts, step-by-step assembly instructions with photos, exploded diagrams and a shopping list and cutting schedule.

657 DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My fiancée said, "Shut UP!" during a recent conversation with my mom, using the phrase in the same way people say, "No way!" or, "Get outta here!" to express friendly disbelief.

Mom didn't say anything and gave me no reason to believe she was offended; however, I find talk like that better suited to friends and siblings — not parents or future in-laws.

As soon as we were alone I asked my fiancée to please not use that expression with my parents. She said she'd try, but warned me that it might be hard to stop herself. A frequent reader of your column, she also said you probably would have told me to let it go. I suggested we find out. Should I have said nothing?

Today is Friday, Dec. 16, the 350th day of 2011. There are 15 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Dec. 16, 1811, the first of the powerful New Madrid earthquakes, with an estimated magnitude of 7.7, struck the central Mississippi Valley. (There were, according to the U.S. Geological Survey, three main shocks in all; the second struck in Jan. 1812 and the third was in Feb. 1812.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1653, Oliver Cromwell became lord protector of England, Scotland and Ireland.

In 1773, the Boston Tea Party took place as American colonists boarded a British ship and dumped more than 300 chests of tea into Boston Harbor to protest tea taxes.

In 1809, the French Senate granted a divorce decree to Emperor Napoleon I and Empress Josephine (the dissolution was made final the following month).

In 1907, 16 U.S. Navy battleships, which came to be known as the "Great White Fleet," set sail on a 14-month round-the-world voyage to demonstrate American sea power.

In 1944, the World War II Battle of the Bulge began as German forces launched a surprise attack against Allied forces in Belgium (the Allies were eventually able to beat the Germans back).

In 1951, a Miami Airlines Curtiss C-46 Commando crashed just after takeoff from Newark Airport in New Jersey, killing all 56 people on board.

In 1960, 134 people were killed when a United Air Lines DC-8 and a TWA Super Constellation collided over New York City.

In 1971, Bangladesh won its nine-month war of liberation against Pakistani forces.

In 1976, the government halted its swine flu vaccination program following reports of paralysis apparently linked to the vaccine.

In 1991, the U.N. General Assembly rescinded its 1975 resolution equating Zionism with racism by a vote of 111-25.

Ten years ago: After nine weeks of fighting, Afghan militia leaders claimed control of the last mountain bastion of Osama bin Laden's al-Qaida fighters, but bin Laden himself was nowhere to be seen. The first U.S. commercial food shipments since 1963 arrived in communist Cuba. Cleveland Browns fans threw thousands of bottles onto the field after officials overturned a last-minute call, a decision that helped the Jacksonville Jaguars win the game 15-10.

Five years ago: Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas called for elections to end his violent standoff with Hamas. Ten players, including NBA scoring leader Carmelo Anthony, were ejected for fighting during a wild brawl near the end of a game between the Denver Nuggets and the New York Knicks. (Denver won 123-100.) Terrell Owens spat in the face of Atlanta cornerback DeAngelo Hall during the Cowboys' 38-28 victory over the Falcons. (Owens was fined $35,000 by the NFL.) Time magazine named everyone using or creating content on the World Wide Web its "Person of the Year."

One year ago: The House joined the Senate in passing a massive bipartisan tax package preventing a big New Year's Day tax hike for millions of Americans. Interviewer Larry King, joined by a parade of former guests, concluded his CNN talk show after 25 years.

IF DECEMBER 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This month, you can receive the most credit and recognition by not cutting corners or taking the easy way out. Romantic interludes may need to fit into a busy schedule and loved ones will need to be understanding when you are distracted by a circle of friends or club activities. Don't make waves or changes in March when the nose-to-the-grindstone attitude works best. March is the best month to make business, job and financial decisions. Plan for vacations in May when Lady Luck smiles on your endeavors. At that time, you'll find your wisdom is heightened, and you'll be given a chance to reap some of the benefits deserved for all your hard work.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Fantasies can be fulfilled. Necessity might require that you toe the line with time-consuming career matters, but there is a strong likelihood that you will encounter warm arms waiting in the wings tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be an active member of the community. Promote your own interests and help others at the same time. You are poised to make personal improvements, but must restrain impulses until the time is right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't kid around if you think you might be made a scapegoat. Remain guarded in sticky situations. Your reputation will be enhanced if you keep a smile on your face through thick and thin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends can light a fire under your enthusiasms and brighten your day. Write down your goals and intentions and let your subconscious work on the ways to get you headed in the right direction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pose as though you are poised. A change of venue could put you in an awkward position. Maintain your equilibrium if you are thrown into contact with people of divergent backgrounds and philosophies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might need to wing it. Find an appropriate opening to wield your eagle eye for details. You may be asked to come up with ingenious methods to complete last-minute projects or create clever party favors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep up appearances. You are too kind-hearted to turn down invitations or to side-step worthy charitable donations. Skillfully juggle job requirements and family events with bustling social activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The siren call of holiday fun, hobbies and entertainments is getting louder. Work hard now to make time for play over the weekend. You can squeeze in time to put the finishing touches on a homemade gift.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't cross invisible lines. What you embrace with casual delight could be a serious, formal matter for someone else. Don't become overly familiar with someone; stay at a respectful distance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Social activities could take precedence over ambitions. With pleasure-loving Venus in your sign, you are happiest when waited on hand and foot. You would be content with a fine dining experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The prize in the Cracker Jack box is only worth its price. Don't mistake something of little value for the real thing. Avoid making holiday purchases while you remain spellbound by advertising.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There may be few free moments to spend with loved ones. You might be a busy bee today and in your rush not notice that you are held in high esteem by others. Enjoy being the center of attention.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Another such victory over the Romans, and we are undone."

— Pyrrhus

Today's deal from a recent junior championship was one of the coups of the year. It arose in the Norway-Portugal match, and it was somewhat ironic that all it did was hold declarer's losses on the board.

Three no-trump by South looks to be a fair spot, but you will see that it is very hard work for declarer to establish a ninth trick. Say you win the lead of the heart 10, cross to dummy, and successfully run the diamond 10. West wins and plays a second heart, and the defense has the tempo to establish hearts before you get a diamond trick.

All right: back to the drawing board. Win the second heart and play on diamonds. That is no good either; the defense still has the necessary communications to get hearts going.

Roderigo Soares varied the script when he found the excellent play of ducking TWO rounds of hearts! West naturally enough played a third heart, and now Soares crossed to dummy in clubs to run the diamond 10 to West's king. (Yes, East would have done better to cover the diamond 10 with the jack, but this play is not so easy to spot at the table, and he did not find it.) As West had no heart left, declarer came to his ninth trick in comfort.

Alas for him, his teammates had been doubled in three hearts with the East-West cards and had gone for 800, so Soares's coup only limited the damage. Still, it was a very well-played hand.

ANSWER: You have enough to invite game, and the obvious trump suit is diamonds, so jump to three diamonds to show precisely these values. If no-trump is the correct resting place, let partner suggest it. Without a high honor in spades, you should not probe for no-trump here unless you have game-forcing values.
