A day of change: New city council members voted into office in November will start taking their seats this week, as Magic Valley cities' governing bodies hold their first meetings of 2012.

Most notably, that starts Tuesday, when the Twin Falls City Council welcomes its new councilmen and selects a new mayor. If you want to see how the new council gets to work, head to Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E., at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Entertainment

If it quacks like a duck: Well, in this case, it must be a world champion duck caller. Canyon Crest Dining & Event Center in Twin Falls will offer that slightly odd form of entertainment for it's "Guys Night Out" event at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Cost, Traffic Concerns Are Next Issues for Zip Line

Four years after the first push for a Snake River Canyon zip line hit Twin Falls, P&Z approval means a new set of challenges for the attraction's backers.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE bguire@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • By May, locals and tourists alike could attach themselves to a 2,200-foot cable and fly down a portion of the Snake River Canyon.

Maybe. With the approval of the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission, Magic Valley Flight Simulation can now make progress on building a zip line attraction near Canyon Springs Golf Course in Twin Falls. Spokeswoman Jody Tatum said the company's next steps are to meet with engineers and receive a building permit, provided an appeal of the special use permit is not filed within the next two weeks.

"If everything goes smoothly," Tatum said, "we anticipate construction toward the end of March; to open by the end of April."

Tatum said a two-year-old cost estimate put the project at $350,000. But fluctuation in material costs could change that figure, and company officials won't know an exact price until they meet with engineers.

The special use permit was approved Wednesday by a 7-1 vote of the planning and zoning commission. At least two companies have attempted to gain permission to build the attraction — on either side of the canyon - since 2007. Magic Valley Flight Simulation spent the past two years navigating P&Z requirements.

The project has faced a vocal group of opposing city residents, many of who live on Canyon Springs Road or Canyon Park Avenue. Canyon

As the Campaign Unreels, Voters Feel Dispirited

A decade ago, customers flocked to the store in the converted fire station on the east side of Toledo, Ohio, in pursuit of Old Glory.

Howard Pinkley established Flags Sales & Repair in 1960, and runs it with his daughter, Wendy Beallas. In days after Sept. 11, 2001, customers lined up outside the door. Americans wanted to show their pride, their determination, their Americanism.

It's all a fading memory now.

America. Nearly three decades later, as another presidential campaign begins, it feels like twilight - or, if it is morning, it is the kind of gray winter daybreak when the sun is only a rumor and only an optimist clings to hope that the clouds will break.

Listen to Americans in three closely contested states and you'll hear the same plaintive echoes, not just about politics or the upcoming election, but about the unsettling predicament that is America in 2011.

Republicans or Democrats, liberal or conservative, young or old, they lack confidence - in the country's potential to be great again, in their elected leaders' ability to do the right thing, in the economy and in themselves.

It's not that they feel incapable of doing what needs to be done, as much as they are uncertain about what that right thing is and whether anything they can do Please see DISPIRITED, A2 will have any real impact. In Mount Airy, N.C., where a quaint Main Street is merely a reminder of better days: "We need to get back to the '60s and the '50s, and we need to get ourselves back to where we used to be - standing on our own two feet;" says long-haul trucker Harry J. Moore, 57, punching a beefy fist into his open left hand to punctuate each syllable. "We're losing our pride. Our pride's gone

In North Las Vegas,, Nev., where the bursting of the housing bubble has forced hard choices: "People have lost a lot of spirit," says Elmer Chowning, 70, who had hoped to slow down in his golden years, but is instead still working in real estate while raising his 8-year-old granddaughter.

apart?"

If you look, you can find optimism in Ohio.

The Armstrong Air & Space Museum is in Wapakoneta, hometown of Neil Armstrong, the first man to walk on the moon. It stands as a monument to an earlier, more hopeful time, and there are visitors who are convinced that those times can come again.

To Stephen Andrasik, a foam salesman from Indianapolis who has stopped in to the museum on his way back home from a business trip, the U.S. remains resilient, facing problems that can be solved by new leaders in Washington who will allow Americans to live up to their potential.

"I think we're still the same people we were back then," says Andrasik. He studies a display case filled with inventions that were spinoffs of the space program, everything from fireproof clothing to battery-powered hand tools.

"I'm assuming it's going to get better as long as the American people have the ability to do what they want, to invent things, to start new businesses, we'll be as great as we've always been?'

But standing before a model of the Apollo 11 command module at the edge of the museum's parking lot, Jake Retter, a chimney cleaner from Blissfield, Mich., notes the irony of a country that once raced a communist rival to put a man on the moon and now relies on China to buy its debt.

Rather than pursuing national goals, politicians chase their own divisive agendas, he says. A nation built on hard work and thrift has lost sight of what really matters.

"This country's been falling apart for the last 50 years. It's taken time," Retter says. "It's not that capitalism is failing us. It's that we're failing capitalism."

For many years, this region provided the muscle of American capitalism. Its pride in its talent for making things is evident in Toledo place names such as Jeep Parkway and the Veteran's Glass City Bridge.

The long, slow decline of factory work has been a source of constant sorrow in the Rust Belt. Recent stirrings such as announcements by Chrysler and General Motors that they will add 1,400 new jobs at their plants in Toledo, and Ford's plans to ramp up engine production in Lima have offered some reason to hope.

"I can definitely feel like the forward momentum is there" jobs at the union hall are picking up, says Kurt Kaufman, 31. A union electrician, he worked steadily until 2006. He has since spent as much as nine months between jobs.

Still, he says, "I don't think it's ever going to be as good as it was around here?"

But a bad economy, some say, is not at the core of what ails northwestern Ohio, and America. There have been hard times before, and there will be again. The real problem, they say, is in Americans and their leaders.

"What's different from this and the Great Depression is that the moral fiber has changed," says Russ Terry, a retired postal carrier who lives moved here with her husband outside Lima and has stopped from southern Indiana five in for a morning break at The years ago and opened Mayber-Meeting Place on Market, a ry on Main, where the walls coffee and sandwich shop and shelves are lined with downtown. "The reason we items like Aunt Bea's Kerosene can't handle this is we don't Cucumbers and Otis's Moonhave the moral backbone, the shine Jelly. "That's the main stick-to-it-tiveness, the colthing that we hear. 'We wish lective people working togeth-

Terry, who describes his politics as very conservative, blames the federal government for printing too much money in an attempt to stimulate the economy. But at its heart, the country's failings reflect the will of individuals, he says. "The government is just a reflection of the people, is it

Just down the road from Toledo's GM plant, Martin Ridener says his worries are based on more than 20 years of running a 16-unit apartment building he once thought would pay for his retirement. Instead, a building that used to generate a steady income is now barely covering its expenses, as many tenants lose jobs, fall behind on rent and move out.

Ridener, who is 75 and votes Republican, can't imagine voting for President Barack Obama given the state of the economy, but he can't see how Republicans taking over the White House will make things any better.

"I don't consider either side wrong in what they're doing. What I resent is that every Democrat thinks completely one way and every Republican thinks another way. They're afraid to talk over it and do what's best for the country."

By comparison, Mount Airy is a bit of fantasy in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains.

The hometown of Andy Griffith, it is Mayberry -America as it used to be, or as we would like to believe it used to be, when the nation's industrial and military might was unquestioned and seemed unbounded; when a man, even one without a high school diploma, could earn enough to own a house, buy a new car every couple of years and send his kids to college for a better life than even he'd enjoyed. Stroll down Main Street, and you expect to meet characters like Aunt Bea, Goober and Floyd the barber.

They're not here. Instead, you'll find businessmen and women struggling to survive the recession by selling nostalgia, and real people eager to

"They're looking for what we wish that times could be again," says Debbie Miles, who Russell Hiatt takes a breather between customers in November 2011 at Floyd's City Barber Shop in downtown Mount Airy, N.C. Hiatt, whose fictional counterpart cuts famous native Andy Griffith's hair in the painting hanging on the wall, says people come to this real-life 'Mayberry' to remember better times in America.

Debbie Miles folds T-shirts in November 2011 at Mayberry on Main in Mount Airy, N.C. She and her family moved here from Indiana several years ago because they fell in love with the town, but business at their shop is off about 10 percent from a couple of years ago.

that it could be like that again - like it was on the show?''

Business is down about 10 percent from a couple of years ago. But Miles can't afford that kind of pessimism.

'You know, if you're an optimistic person, you think there's nowhere to go but up;" she says with a laugh. "It probably does try everyone, but I think you still have to be optimistic, you know? That's what Americans are supposed to do — think for the future?"

Darrel Miles - who, like his wife, is a registered Democrat but did not vote for Obama – finds it a bit harder to be hope-

"I think they need to turn the whole upside down in Washington and shake it real good," says Miles, who worked 32 years for a company that made soda and ice dispensers. "I think we might have the wrong government, the wrong people trying to fix certain things. There's too many hands in the fire, as you would say. I mean they can't even come to agreement even within their own parties to fix certain things, you know?"

Across the street, at Snappy Lunch, business is down 20 percent or 30 percent over a couple of years ago, says Mary Dowell, whose husband, Charles, has owned the restaurant since 1960.

"We still have tourists who come in, but the bus groups have dropped a little bit," Dowell says over the sizzle of meat for the diner's "famous pork chop sandwich?" "Last year, I did have to give everybody a day a week off, because we were so slow. And we'll probably do that this year."

On this sunny afternoon, Jennifer Brown stands outside

Snappy Lunch and peers through the window. Her parents, Steve and Diane, both have good jobs in manufacturing. But the 27-year-old Cleveland-area woman, who has an associate's degree in office management, can't find permanent employment.

"I did telemarketing. I worked at a park. I even worked at a county fair for a week," she says. "I'm doing side jobs, some retail. But nothing that I wound up being able to keep?"

Her mother, whose company was recently bought out by a European firm, can't help feeling that the U.S. is in decline.

"Because the average person can't graduate from high school and find a job," she says. "It's easier for somebody to come from another country and get started than it is for us who grew up here?"

"Mmmm," her daughter nods in agreement. Jennifer Brown motions to the street scene around her.

"This is where it needs to go back to," she says. "Like the American dream. America, not the socialist stuff that's going on. And where you could just, you can get a job."

Around the corner from the bustle of Main Street, in front of the Andy Griffith Playhouse and Museum, Sheriff Andy Taylor and son Opie stride in bronze, hand in hand, rods over their shoulders, toward an imaginary fishing hole. A plaque at their feet reads, "a simpler time."

Inside the museum, the gauges on two vintage "ethyl" gas pumps are frozen at 17.9 cents a gallon. Oil worker Jeff Zwicker of Vacaville, Calif., poses for a photo with museum founder (and Griffith childhood friend) Emmett Forrest.

Zwicker, 55, a 20-year Air Force veteran who served on cargo planes in Operation Desert Storm, is worried about the deficit and American indebtedness to foreign creditors such as China. But if Washington can get those things under control - and he's confident it can — "I think the future's great for our country."

"We're a great nation," he says. "We have a lot of smart people here, and if we put all the smart people on this and get it going. But you've gotta get serious about it, you know? You've gotta really do it. You've gotta WANT to do it."

Forrest isn't so sure. The 84-year-old former electric company vice president says Obama has "taken us down the path to absolute ruin" and, if he's re-elected, "there'll be no recovery from it?

"Ten or 20 years ago, I think we were the shining star of the world, and our star has dimmed quite a bit," he says. "I guess I'm just compone patriotic. I love this country and hate to see it go down?

But to Pablo Hernandez, these are good times.

Hernandez, 45, came here from Mexico in 1987. He traveled the country, picking apples, oranges, tomatoes -"everything" — before landing a job at a chicken-processing plant in nearby Dobson.

For the past five years, he and his wife, Salustria, 33, have operated La Sierrita Tienda Mexicana in a strip mall on a bypass outside downtown. They sell everything from black beans and dried chilies to CDs from groups like Los Rancheros and Fortunato y sus Cometas.

Sure, Hernandez is concerned about the recent wave of anti-immigrant sentiment in places like Alabama and South Carolina. But he is not a pessimist.

The American Dream "is still alive for me," he says, as Nadia reads a picture book beneath a ceiling dangling with colorful pinatas. "Because I'm still here, you know."

Crews Respond to Oil Leak in Clearwater River

OROFINO (AP) • A Lewiston Fire Department official says experts are working to determine the cause of a petroleum leak in the Clearwater River along U.S. Highway 12 in northern Idaho.

Capt. Erik Kelly tells the Lewiston Tribune that the substance reported Friday is coming out of a 60-foot-wide sandbar just downstream from the Orofino bridge.

Kelly, leader of a fivemember Hazmat team, says two absorbent booms have been placed downstream.

Kelly says samples of the substance have been too diluted to make precise identification possible.

Powerball Tickets Set to Double in Price

BY MICHAEL J. CRUMB Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa • Powerball lottery organizers are betting that bigger jackpots will entice more people to play, but gamblers are going to have to dig deeper into their wallets to try their luck.

Tickets for the multistate game are doubling in price to $2 beginning Jan 15. While the odds of winning one of the game's giant jackpots also are improving, those in charge of the lottery are gambling that people are willing to pay more for the hope of becoming a millionaire in a down economy.

"With the price of everything else going up, there's not much you can get for a dollar anymore," said 28-year-old Ryan Raker, of Des Moines, Iowa, who buys a ticket once a month. He says he'll probably play less frequently now.

Lotteries have long sold regular people on the hope of becoming rich quick by simply picking a lucky combination of numbers. Some play loved ones' birthdays or anniversaries in the hope that fate may point them in the direction of a jackpot. Selling that hope is easy; less so is predicting consumers' sensitivity to price changes.

Powerball's move follows the model of scratch ticket games, which once were all $1 but now are offered at higher prices with the chance for bigger prizes.

The evolution of scratch tickets and the creation of families of games that offer tickets at different prices has proven successful across the country, said Rebecca Hargrove, president of the Tennessee Lottery. Scratch games like Win for Life in Illinois, Jumbo Bucks in Tennessee and the Crosswords game in Iowa have all been successful, Hargrove

"The more choices you gave players the higher the sales were," Hargrove said. "A family of games at multiple price points created the most excitement. Once those kinds of games were introduced we saw a dramatic increase in sales."

For example, in Iowa, scratch ticket sales increased from $125 million in 2007 to $165.3 million in 2011, state lottery officials said.

Lottery officials believe increasing the price of the game will make it more attractive to players, said Terry Rich, spokesman for the West Des Moinesbased Multistate Lottery Association, which runs Powerball.

"People like variety;" Rich said. "We're repackaging and freshening up the product and enriching the product?"

Romney's Chief Iowa Rivals Press Electability

DES MOINES, Iowa • With time running short, Ron Paul, Rick Santorum and other Republican presidential contenders argued Sunday that they could beat President Barack Obama as they worked to persuade undecided Iowa Republicans aching to win the White House to choose them over chief rival

"I'm the candidate that actually was able to win in states, as a conservative, in getting Democrats and independents to vote for us," Santorum, the former Pennsylvania senator who is surging in the race and is a favorite among cultural conservatives, said in an interview on CNN. "Mitt Romney has no track history of doing that?"

Paul, a libertarian-leaning Texas congressman who Romney has said is outside the GOP mainstream, countered the suggestion that he's a fringe candidate. In an interview with ABC from his home state, where he was spending the weekend, Paul insisted: "I'm electable. I've been elected 12 times in Texas, when people get to know me?

With Romney in a position of strength in Iowa, both Santorum and Paul went directly at the former Massachusetts governor's chief argument - that he is the most electable Republican in a headto-head matchup against Obama next fall. They hope they can sway the roughly half of likely caucus-goers who say they are undecided or willing to change their minds two days before the leadoff presidential caucuses.

A Des Moines Register poll released Saturday showed Romney and Paul locked in a close race, with Santorum rising swiftly to challenge them. Nearly half of likely Iowa caucus-goers view Romney as the Republican most likely to win the general election. He was far ahead of Santorum and Paul, who was viewed as the least likely to win.

Those two are fighting against the notion in GOP circles that their bases of support are narrow and neither would be able to cobble together the diverse voting coalition necessary to beat Obama in November. Paul attracts legions of backers who put states' rights above much else, while Santorum — an anti-abortion crusader — is popular among Christian conservatives who make up the base of the Republican

NOT AS MANY DEAD BLACK BIRDS IN ARK. TOWN THIS YEAR

BEEBE, Ark. (AP) • Authorities in a central Arkansas town say about 100 blackbirds died on New Year's Eve after being spooked by fireworks, far less than the thousands that perished there a year ago.

Beebe police Lt. Brian Duke said Sunday that officials asked people to stop setting off fireworks after blackbirds again started flying into objects and each other. Residents were celebrating the year's end with fireworks in their neighborhoods.

Duke says police are gathering information and may have more details

Large numbers of migrating blackbirds roost in the community northeast of Little Rock. Last year, fireworks were blamed after thousands of birds were rousted from their roosts and flew into homes, cars, telephone poles and each other.

FEARFUL, IRAQ'S SUNNIS LEAVE MIXED NEIGHBORHOODS

BY REBECCA SANTANA Associated Press

BAGHDAD • The question was disturbing: Why do you live here?

Ahmed al-Azami, a Sunni Muslim, has owned a house in Baghdad's Shiite neighborhood of Shaab since 1999. But when Shiite residents recently began questioning why he, a Sunni, was living among them, he decided it was time to

His story and similar tales by other Sunnis suggest Iraqis are again segregating themselves along sectarian lines, prompted by a political crisis pulling at the explosive Sunni-Shiite divide just weeks after the American withdrawal left

Iraq to chart its own future. The numbers so far are small and not easy to track with precision, but anecdotal accounts and a rise in business at real estate agencies in Sunni neighborhoods reveal a Sunni community contemplating the worse-case scenario and acting before it's too late. Baghdad and the rest of Iraq are already highly segregated places. Running from bombs, death squads and their own neighbors at the height of violence in 2006 and 2007, Sunnis and Shiites fled neighborhoods that were once mixed.

That violence and the resulting migrations slowed in 2008, but tensions are again swirling as a power struggle worsens between Shiite Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki and Sunni politicians who have been largely sidelined since the overthrow of Saddam Hussein. And many fear increased violence could result.

"People started to question my origins. Why don't you live in Azamiyah?" said al-Azami, referring to the Sunni-dominated enclave in northern Baghdad where he has a shop. He felt so nervous and unwelcome that he began looking for a house in Azamiyah a few weeks ago. Once he moves, he'll either rent out or sell his Shaab house.

"I will always be a stranger to them," he said, referring to his Shiite neighbors.

In a sign that he is not alone, rental prices in Azamiyah have risen by about $200 a month, said real estate agent Abu Abdullah al-Obeidi. Other Sunni neighborhoods of the capital like Adel and Khadra have also seen rent increases, he said.

spokesman said Barnes was an Iraq war veteran. Authorities recovered his vehicle, which had weapons and body armor inside, Troyer

Barnes was also a suspect in the early Sunday morning shooting of four people at a house party south of Seattle, police said.

Authorities believed the gunman was still in the woods, with weapons. They asked people to stay away from the park, and for those already inside to leave.

"We do have a very hot and dangerous situation," Troyer said.

Troyer said authorities were following tracks in the snow they believe are from the gunman, and crews planned to bring an airplane through the area with heatseeking capabilities.

"We believe we have a good track on him, but he's ahead of Troyer said.

Kevin Bacher, spokesman for the park, said about 125 people were still at the visitor's center Sunday night along with five law enforcement officers protecting the facility. He said crews had considered removing them in armored vehicles, but decided not to take any risk.

The park would remain closed Monday, officials announced late Sunday.

Jason Simpson, 29, of Kent, said his parents were still trapped at the visitor's center after traveling to the mountain for a day hike. His parents were able to make a call explaining their situation, and Simpson drove to the park entrance to wait.

"It's very distressing;" Simpson said.

Sgt. Cindi West, King County Sheriff's spokesperson, said late Sunday that Barnes was connected to an early-morning shooting at a New Year's house party in Skyway, Wash., south of Seattle that left four people injured, two critically.

Electability

In contrast, Romney has styled himself during this campaign as a Republican able to attract a broad spectrum of voters. As polls showed him in strong standing in Iowa in the past week, he has redoubled his effort to portray himself as the business-savvy executive with national appeal who is best able to defeat Obama on the campaign's most pressing issue, the economy.

Although the race remains fluid, it appeared that Romney's carefully crafted plan to avoid underperforming in Iowa, where he campaigned little until last week, may be working, given a divided GOP electorate torn between several more conservative candidates and Paul's appeal to libertarians.

The issue of what type of candidate to choose cuts to the heart of why the Iowa race is so volatile; an NBC/Marist poll last week showed nearly even percentages of Iowa caucus-goers want a candidate who shares their values as want a candidate who can beat Obama.

"The first thing you see when you talk to any Iowa Republican is that desire to beat Barack Obama," Iowa GOP Chairman Matt Strawn said on CNN.

Mindful of that, both Romney and Santorum canvassed the state Sunday as they cast themselves as the strongest contender - and their schedules illuminated their late-game strategies for rallying their backers to the polls.

Romney was set to appear in Atlantic and Council Bluffs as he works to maximize the edge he holds in critical areas, especially those he won in his second-place finish here four years ago, rather than risk underperforming in places where more ardent conservatives are leery of his Mormon faith and shifting positions on social issues. On Monday, he was heading to his eastern Iowa strongholds, Cedar Rapids, Davenport and Dubuque.

During campaign stops in Iowa over the weekend, Romney repeatedly projected confidence that he would be the GOP's nominee this year, promising to return to Iowa, a general-election swing state, in the fall campaign.

Santorum, for his part, was campaigning deep into GOP-rich rural northwest Iowa Sunday, with stops in conservative counties won by Mike Huckabee during the former Arkansas governor's victorious campaign here four years ago.

As he met voters, his final ad for Iowa TV called him "a full spectrum conservative" who is most likely to beat Obama and the "trusted conservative who gives us the best chance to take back America:"

The activity of their rivals was more muted. Paul, who has slipped somewhat in the wake of attacks on his foreign policy positions, remained out of the state for a second straight day. But he did a few national TV interviews from Texas, where he celebrated the New Year with his family.

In the interviews, he argued that the majority of Americans are with him when it comes to a non-interventionist foreign policy.

"I would say that I'm pretty mainstream," he told CNN. "I think that people who are attacking me now are the ones who can't defend their records, and they've been all over the place?

Along with Romney, Texas Gov. Rick Perry, for mer House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann all of whom are trailing in polls and fighting for the support of Christian evangelicals - spent the morning in church.

"Romney would buy the election if he could," Gingrich, who has fallen steadily in the polls since early December, told reporters after attending mass in Des Moines with his wife, Cal-

Gingrich later waded through a busy sports bar packed shoulder-to-shoulder with more than 200 people and a heavy contingent of press without stopping to speak to the crowd.

Bachmann and Perry tried to make the electability argument while assailing Santorum, who suddenly has found himself the target of sharp attacks on his conservative credentials from rivals vying for the same bloc of voters.

Bachmann told ABC, "I have the best ability to take it to Barack Obama in the debate and hold him accountable?' On Fox, she lambasted Santorum, noting that he was soundly defeated when he ran for re-election in 2006, losing by a 59-41 margin to Democrat Bob Casey.

"I won four races in the last four years, in the toughest years for Republicans in a liberal state like Minnesota, I won," Bachmann

Perry, who never lost an election in Texas but has struggled in his first nationwide race, told "Fox News Sunday" of his opponents, "They may do OK in Iowa, but when it comes to running a national campaign, they're going to falter."

Looking for a late-game lift, Perry also renewed his attack on Santorum, saying: "He's got a spending problem. He's got an earmark problem. He voted eight times to raise the debt ceiling in the United States Senate?

Iraq

"The people who are coming to Azamiyah to rent or buy are afraid that they will be killed during any possible sectarian war if they stay in the mixed areas," al-Obeidi said.

Iraq's worst political crisis in years blew up just as the last American troops were rolling across the border into Kuwait on Dec. 18. Al-Maliki's government issued an arrest warrant for the country's highest-ranking Sunni politician, Vice President Tariq al-Hashemi, on charges he ran a hit squad that assassinated government officials five years ago.

Al-Hashemi is staying in the semi-autonomous Kurdistan region beyond the reach of Iraqi law enforcement, and the government has televised purported confessions in which his bodyguards say he paid them to carry out the killings.

Al-Maliki is also trying to get rid of Sunni Deputy Prime Minister Saleh al-Mutlaq after he likened the prime minister to Saddam, a comparison meant to suggest he had autocratic leanings.

Al-Maliki has threatened to form a government without a key Sunnibacked party, Iraqiya, which has been boycotting parliament because its members say al-Maliki is not sharing power.

Even before the U.S. military withdrawal, sectarian tensions were rising after the arrests of hundreds of former members of Saddam's Sunni-controlled Baath Party. For Sunnis, a purge of Baathists is seen as a shot against all Sunnis.

When Iraq's violence was at its worst, hundreds of thousands of people fled to neighboring Jordan and Syria. Most of them were Sunnis, and more than a million remain there. But with a crisis in Syria and tightening visa requirements for Iraqis in Syria and Jordan, Sunnis now seem to be relocating around Iraq. Some, like al-Azami, are moving from Shiite to Sunni neighborhoods, others are going from Baghdad to Sunni-dominated cities such as Fallujah or Mosul or the relatively safer Kurdish region.

This means Iraq's sectarian map will have even more sharply drawn boundary lines. For some of those contemplating moves - most of them minority Sunnis it is a familiar feeling

"We declare solemnly and confidently that the foolish politicians around the world, including the puppet group in South Korea, should not expect any change from us."

North Korea's National Defense Commission in a statement aimed at leaders in Seoul and Washington

THEIR VIEW

Can Bird Flu Research Be Kept in Pandora's Box?

The following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Thursday, Dec. 29:

ontroversy erupted at the intersection of science and terrorism barely 10 days ago, and already the dispute has mutated.

On Dec. 20, the National Science Advisory Board for Biosecurity requested that two respected scientific journals — Science, based in Washington, and Nature, based in London—omit certain details from two research papers before publishing them.

This was not an ideology-driven attempt to censor legitimate scientific findings, as was done during the administration of President George W. Bush. Rather, the board worried that terrorists might be able to use the information to create biological weapons of fearsome potency.

Given the stakes — and the board's record of not interfering with scientific work — its request seems sensible. The question now is how to apply stricter and smarter security to the research projects, both of which involve avian influenza — bird flu.

Science and Nature plan to publish different papers describing similar research on the avian flu virus, H5N1. Scientists working separately at the University of Wisconsin at Madison and at Erasmus Medical Center in Rotterdam in the Netherlands have produced a genetically altered strain of the virus that, unlike the existing one, is highly contagious among people.

Since 1997, about 600 people have become sick with H5N1 influenza, which is found in poultry. Most of the cases have occurred in Southeast Asia, where 50 percent to 60 percent of those sickened have died. The Spanish flu pandemic that killed some 40 million people in 1918-1919 had a mortality rate of about 2.5 percent.

H5N1 is neither easily acquired by humans nor easily passed from one to another. Catching it requires close contact with infected fowl; it cannot be transmitted via airborne mucus like ordinary flu. If it could, H5N1 could decimate human populations.

To avoid that, the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases funded research projects at universities in Wisconsin and in the Netherlands. The goal: Test how susceptible H5N1 was to genetic mutations that might give it airborne capability among mammals. Ominously, both projects produced just such mutated strains.

The advisory board's 23 voting members — all academic scientists and public health officials — spent weeks studying the research papers. They knew public health workers could use the information in the papers to identify a mutated strain early and quickly move to contain it. Other researchers could use it to work on a vaccine and better treatments.

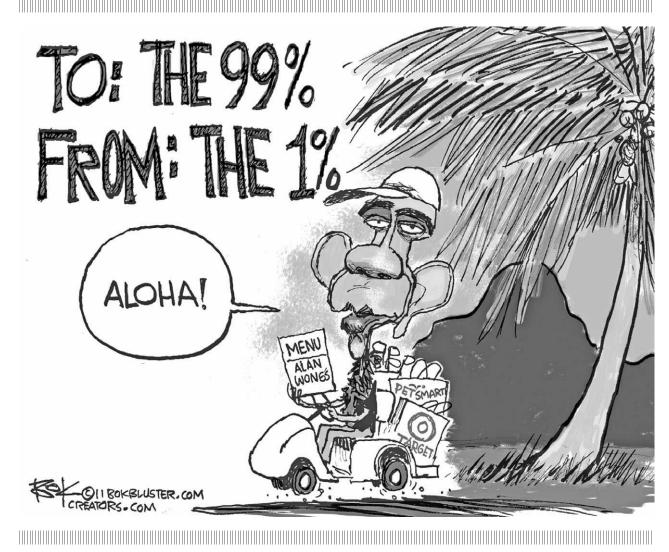

But what if terrorists adapted the information?

Since its creation in 2004, the board never had asked scientific journals to delete material prior to publication. This time, it voted unanimously to do

Science and Nature will honor the board's request. Bruce Alberts, the editor of Science, told NPR's "On the Media" that editors were asked "not to include the recipe for this thing — how to produce it — and we're not to include the exact results; that is, what mutations were needed to change the virus to the form that is thought to be truly dangerous to humans."

But Mr. Alberts said the National Institutes of Health is likewise obliged to come up with a workable plan to get the information to scientists and public health officials who can prove they need it.

Scientists and officials now are arguing over whether the research was necessary at all and whether — now that the information exists — Pandora's box can be sealed. The former question is moot; the latter is crucial.

Payroll Tax Deal Will Take Toll on People with Disabilities

old the applause:
Extending the payroll tax cuts is a bad deal for nearly million disabled Americans who rely on Social Security Disability Insurance for survival.

Like millions of Americans, my first paycheck of 2011 was slightly larger because of the tax relief provided by the one-year reduction in my Social Security payroll taxes. But I didn't feel much of a sense of relief. As a person with a disability who will someday soon need Social Security Disability Insurance, I feared that raiding Social Security was a dangerous precedent that would continue far beyond one year.

American workers usually pay a tax of 6.2 percent on their earnings to build the Social Security Trust Fund.

Mike Ervin

Progressive Media Project

Employers pay the same percentage of tax on wages paid. Workers who are not of retirement age but have paid these taxes for a certain number of yearsOx160can receive income through Social Security Disability Insurance if theyOx160become disabled for a year or longer and thus are unable to work and earn at their previous capacity.

But now I fear that this insurance pool is in jeopardy.

In 2011, workers contributed only 4.2 percent and employer contributions were unchanged. That tax cut was supposed to be for one year but President Obama has pushed hard to extend it for another year. It's true that transfers

It's true that transfers from general revenues have been used to replenish the Social Security Trust Fund to fill the gap from reduced payroll tax revenues. But Social Security is funded by payroll taxes so as to make it an earned benefit, giving it stability by insulating it from the fickle funding whims of Congress.

The National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare maintains that continuing the reduction in workers' contributions poses a "grave threat" to the Social Security program because by financing it through general revenue, Social Security would "suddenly have to compete with other programs, such as funding for defense and education."

The president's insistence on continuing this re-

many in Washington focused

duction bears out the committee's additional fear that the contribution level will never return to 6.2 percent because no politician will risk being accused of raising taxes on working people. Therefore, Social Security's dependence on other revenue sources just to keep pace will be perpetual.

How long before the enemies of Social Security in Congress seize this as an excuse to reduce benefits and/or restrict eligibility? Workers who became disabled and collect the Social Security Disability Insurance we earned are not responsible for the federal deficit or the dismal economy.

We, of all people, should not have to pay the price.

resident Obama backed down from his threat to veto the 2012 defense authorization bill that Congress passed this month. But the legislation takes a position on detainees that is misguided. It should prompt the president to fully exercise the discretion the legislation gives him.

For the first few years after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, it was not at all clear we were beating al-Qaida: Terror attacks took place in London, North Africa, the Middle East, South Asia and the Philippines.

Philippines.
Today, al-Qaida's leader-ship is decimated and its regional affiliates are struggling mightily. The lone-wolf threat remains significant, but lone wolves do not represent strategic threats any more than gang killings represent the crippling of U.S. society. We have far to go to defeat our jihadist adversary and its slowly eroding ideology, but we are more than halfway through writing the book of the downfall and death of al-Qaida.

Amid the global decline of deaths from terror attacks, our nation recently debated whether to give this group what it wants: continued treatment as a viable military adversary on par with U.S. soldiers. Doing so suggests that al-Qaida fighters deserve to be treated differently than the common criminals and murderers they are. Their ideology is dying because they can't defend themselves against charges of wanton murder across the Muslim world; that is their Achilles' heel. Yet now we have agreed to mandate military custody for some detainees.

Rather than engage in a dispassionate assessment of what plagues our adversary, on internal political disputes. Meanwhile, it's the degradation of its platform that al-Qaida hates, the perception that its fighters are weak killers with no vision and no future. Certain provisions in the defense legislation offer a boon to al-Qaida, allowing its fighters to argue that they remain a strategic threat, that they are a powerful movement meriting a military response and that the growing perception that they've become common criminals is wrongheaded. We don't seem to be fighting them when we decide they have to head to military custody; it's what they want. We're fighting among ourselves, even as we're grinding them down operationally.

One rationale for why we are headed down this path might be that it is a better option for the U.S. agencies that have to interrogate the fighters. Yet not once in nearly 10 years in senior positions at the CIA and the FBI did I hear a professional raise this issue. Indeed, some of our most respected national security leaders have said they don't need or want this law.

The United States does not want to suggest that al-Qaida is a battlefield adversary; it is not. Yet we have said its members are worthy of treatment as military adversaries, requiring military custody. They are below this and slipping further every day from self-inflicted missteps. We should take advantage of their mistakes and use those errors against this fading threat. Don't give them what they want. Give them what they hate.

NASA's Lunar Probes Will Test Theory of Why One Side of the Moon Is Lopsided

BY BRIAN VASTAG The Washington Post

She hangs there nightly, a yellow or white or spookily orange disk, the bringer of tides, the caster of romantic shadows. She waxes and wanes and sometimes she turns ruddy as the shadow of the Earth crosses her face. For all her beauty, though, our moon hides a lumpy, unflattering secret: She's lopsided. Her backside is much thicker than her front. And no one knows

It's unseemly, really. After more than 100 robotic and human missions to the moon, scientists still can't account for why one half — the half we can't see — is taller than the

arrived at our satellite this weekend may finally reveal a shocking truth: that early on, smaller twin moon smushed into her. As this intruder splatted into its big sister, it shattered "like a megaavalanche," said Erik Asphaug, the planetary scientist at the University of California at Santa Cruz who published the twin-moon idea in the journal Nature in August. His co-author was Martin Jutzi of the University of Bern in Switzerland.

This collision would have spread a wide hump of rock onto the back of the moon. There, the material cooled and hardened into a thick crust: the far-side lunar highlands.

"This is one of those ideas that all sorts of people will try to prove wrong," said Maria Zuber, the MIT scientist heading up the new NASA moon mission. "But it's extremely testable?"

And so the Gravity Recovery and Interior Laboratory, or GRAIL, will test it. Designed to probe the moon's interior, the two washingmachine-size spacecraft will reveal the thickness of the moon's crust, its topmost

If the two-moon theory is correct, the backside crust will be much thicker than that of the front side. The hump should taper toward the equator.

GRAIL could also spot another hidden feature predicted by the theory. If a second moon did crash into the first, the collision would have occurred when the big moon was young and hot. A thin layer of molten heavy elements including uranium and potassium still burbled just under the crust.

The backside impact would have squeezed this liquid, pushing it around to the front side. There it would have cooled and hardened, leaving a telltale layer.

The existence of both features-a thick backside crust and a thin, dense layer under the front's crust — would offer strong support for the twin-moon theory, Asphaug said.

When Zuber first heard the notion, she scoffed. "This is going to be nonsense," she recalled thinking. But computer simulations run by Asphaug and Jutzi were com-

The idea is also simple, another stroke in its favor. By contrast, other explanations for the moon's front-back discrepancy tend toward the complicated and unsatisfying.

"There are all these theories out there," Asphaug said, "that have big warts on them."

Such as: Maybe the front side of the moon was terribly unlucky, flattened by seven or eight big space rocks. The problem: Asteroids and comets arrive from all directions; there's no reason impacts should cluster. "It's like flipping a coin and getting heads eight times," Asphaug

Another theory suggests that the backside hump is a tidal bulge. Planets and moons sport such bulges when they get tugged at and the Earth tugs on the moon a lot. The problem: Tidal bulges tend to be symmetrical, so there should be a bulge on both sides of the moon.

Public lines up for new low-cost appliance that slashes heat bills

Amish craftsmen vow to keep up with rush for brand-new Hybrid-Thermic™ 'Miracle Heater' that uses about the same energy as a coffee maker per hour, so just plug it in and never be cold again

BY: SAMUEL A. JAMES Universal Media Syndicate

(UMS) – Everyone hates high heat bills. But we're all sick and tired of turning the thermostat down and freezing our buns off.

That's why Sears knew they had a home-run on their hands with the first-ever low-cost appliance with Hybrid-Thermic[™] heat technology. And no other heater anywhere has it.

The brand-new portable L.E.D. Heat Surge HT sips so little energy, you can run it for a full 12-hour day or night for just about

This modern marvel, hailed as the zone heating 'Miracle Heater,' caused such a frenzy at Sears stores, one shopper refused to leave until she got one. Since there were none in stock, store managers were forced to hand over the store's only floor model, against store policy.

So today, immediate action is being taken to give more people, more ways to get them.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m., today's readers are allowed to phone in or snag one online. Heat Surge even posted a 2-Day Double Coupon which has been reprinted on this page for today's readers to use.

By using this coupon, everyone who calls is being rewarded with $227. That makes this remarkable new home appliance a real steal at just $299. Since this is a Double Coupon Deal, it not only gives you an extraordinary discount, but also entitles you to free shipping and handling, totaling $227 off. So now everyone has a fair shot at getting one.

"Folks are saving money everywhere by zone heating with the new Heat Surge HT," said Kris Rumel, the company's analyst tracking the impact Heat Surge is having on consumer heat bills.

This all started when Sears wanted the world-famous 'Amish Miracle Heater' that everyone was asking for.

The shy but now famous Amish craftsman said Sears made the most sense. "I'd reckon they're the oldest and most trusted in the country," one of the Amish craftsmen known as Melvin said.

'We've been saving folks money, big money. And we know it because we're hearin' about it," he said.

"They know about our quality. No particle board, just real wood. Fully-assembled cabinets by our hands and we're making them right here in the good ole USA," Melvin said.

Director of Technology David Martin explained, "The Heat Surge HT is a revolutionary appliance that can easily roll from room to room. But we didn't want it to look like some metal box that just sits there. So we turned to our Amish craftsmen and now each one is made to look like a sleek, slim fireplace that has no real flames."

"The peaceful flicker of the 'Fireless Flame' is so beautiful, everyone thinks it's real, but it's totally safe to the touch. All you do is just plug it in," Martin said.

People from New Mexico to Washington and even Florida and Arizona are flocking to get them because they are finally able to give their central heat a rest during this long, frigid winter.

According to the avalanche of consumer reviews, people absolutely swear by them, repeatedly saying, "it saves money," "looks beautiful," and "keeps you warm head to toe, floor to ceiling." And the word is getting out. That's why people are clamoring to get them.

But Martin said right now the real problem is making sure the Amish craftsmen can keep up with the lingering winter rush.

That's why the Double Coupon expires in two days.

So for readers hoping to get the new Heat Surge for themselves and take care of gifts for others, there is good news.

You can use the 2-Day Double Coupon more than once. But there is a catch. You can only get away with it for the next two days from the date of today's publication by calling the National Appliance Center at 1-800-618-8510.

Then, when it arrives, you'll be rushing to turn down that thermostat. Just plug it in, watch your heat bills hit rock bottom, and never be cold again. ■

■ GOTTA HAVE ONE: People are flocking to Sears stores everywhere to get the brand-new Heat Surge HT. An eager crowd remained respectful as Jonas Miller stages a promotional delivery event. "I heard so much about the Amish Miracle Heater but couldn't find where to get one," an excited Mary Straughn said. That's why a National Appliance Hotline has been set up for today's readers who can't rush out to get one. Readers who call the Hotline at 1-800-618-8510 will get free delivery with an extraordinary 2-Day Double Coupon that has been reprinted below.

How It Works: You get 74° of bone-soothing room heat even when the home thermostat is turned down to 59° with the first-ever Heat Surge HT

Heat Surge HT micro-furnace fits in any room because it's packed inside a small Amish-built cabinet that measures just 25" high, 18" wide,

This is the revolutionary Heat Surge HT, the first-ever appliance with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology. Hybrid-Thermic heat technology is an engineering genius so advanced, it actually uses a micro-furnace from the Coast of China and a thermal heat exchanger to perform its miracles. The thermal heat exchanger acts like the rays of the sun to heat you, the kids, the pets and everything else. The micro-furnace then heats all the surrounding air. Together, this Hybrid-Thermic heat technology warms both you and the air around you, taking care of all the cold spots. In fact, it actually produces bone-soothing heat to help you feel good.

This modern marvel uses L.E.D. technology and just a trickle of electricity and saves you money based on a U.S. average that says it uses only about 9¢ of electricity an hour on the standard setting, yet it produces up to an amazing 4,606 British Thermal Units (BTU's) on the high setting. But here's the big surprise. It's not just a metal box that belongs in a basement. The Heat Surge HT is a showpiece in any room. That's because

Fiesta Bowl Pits 2 of Nation's Best QBs

BY JOHN MARSHALL

Associated Press

GLENDALE, Ariz. • The Fiesta Bowl has just about everything you could ask for from a bowl game: two of the nation's best teams, most explosive offenses and defenses, underrated ready-for-the-NFL quarterbacks and this year's best case for changing the BCS.

OK, so maybe there's no national title on the line. LSU and Alabama get that honor under the current BCS format.

Still, when No. 3 Oklahoma State and No. 4 Stanford play Monday night at University of Phoenix Stadium, it figures to be one of those can't-miss shows, the kind that leaves fans asking "Did you see that?" the next day.

"This is about as good as it gets right here," Oklahoma State quarterback Brandon Weeden. "I'm pretty sure everybody around the country will be watching?

Might as well start with the quarterbacks. They are, after all, two of the most intelligent, mature and prolific ones out there.

Stanford's Andrew Luck has been projected as the No. 1 overall pick in the NFL draft almost since his days at Stratford High in Houston. Last year's Heisman Trophy runner-up, he made it two straight just misses after returning for a stellar senior season.

Prototypically sized, deceptively agile and mature beyond his years, Luck tore through Stanford's record book almost as often as he did opposing defenses and improved his NFL-ready resume by calling some of his own plays this season.

"There is a reason why he is going to be the first player picked in the draft, because he is very good at what he does and he's had a lot of success the last couple years," Oklahoma State coach Mike Gundy said.

Gundy's quarterback is no slouch.

Weeden won't challenge Luck for the No. 1 pick, but he certainly could give the big Cardinal a run in the Fiesta Bowl.

Agile and accurate with a big right arm, Weeden came seemingly out of nowhere to pile up yards and touchdowns as a junior and continued it this season, putting together one of the most impressive two-year runs in Oklahoma State history.

Old-School Badgers, Newfangled Ducks Meet

ROSE BOWL

BY GREG BEACHAM

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. • The Rose Bowl is a living archive of football tradition. Every year, teams participate in the same oceanside pep rallies, Disneyland visits and Hollywood beef-eating extravaganzas before those flowered parade floats glide down Colorado Boulevard right before the game. All that history suits No. 9 Wisconsin perfectly. Coach Bret Bielema has built a Midwest powerhouse by largely adhering to traditional styles and schemes, determined to win Rose Bowls with unapologetically old-fashioned football. And though No. 6 Oregon usually seems to be visiting our planet from the near future, coach Chip Kelly's Ducks also love every bit of the history they see out of their mirrored helmets.

The last two losers of the Rose Bowl will return Monday for a chance at redemption in the 98th edition of the Granddaddy of Them All, matching two offenses with thoroughly disparate strategies for racking up similarly huge numbers on the scoreboard.

"You can't get two teams much more different than these, but that's why I think it's going to be a great game," said Bielema, who has led the Badgers to their first back-to-back Rose Bowls in a dozen years. "We do things a certain way at Wisconsin like we've done them in the past, and Oregon always has something new for you. People are going to see something special in this matchup."

Bielema was a defensive lineman at Iowa in the 1991 Rose Bowl, which featured the most total points (80) in the game's history. That record could fall before sunset in Arroyo Seco if quarterback Russell Wilson gets the Badgers (11-2) rolling and Oregon's Darron Thomas can orchestrate his offense's usual success.

"We'll be comfortable from the jump, because we've already played in these types of games before," said Thomas, a redshirt at the Rose Bowl two years ago. "Everybody wants to knock us off, so they come with their best punch. It's not really pressure, but we want to win one."

New York Giants quarterback Eli Manning celebrates after a four-yard touchdown pass to New York Giants wide receiver Hakeem Nicks against the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday, Jan. 1, 2012, in East Rutherford, N.J.

Giants Join Playoff Party

BY TOM CANAVAN

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. • Victor Cruz and Eli Manning have the New York Giants dancing to the playoffs for the first time since 2008.

Manning threw three touchdown passes, including a 74-yarder to Cruz early, and the Giants (9-7) won an allor-nothing game to claim the final spot in the NFL playoffs, beating the Dallas Cowboys 31-14 on Sunday night.

The loss left Jerry Jones' Cowboys (8-8) out of the playoffs for the second straight year.

New York won three of its final four games for 65-year-old coach Tom Coughlin and earned a wild-card home game next Sunday against the Atlanta

Falcons (10-6). The Cowboys lost four of their final five games in their first full season under coach Jason Garrett. Dallas (8-8) was its own worst enemy in a game with the season on the line. They missed tackles on all three of the Giants' first-half touchdowns, failed to recover two fumbles within their grasp in the half and failed to convert on a Tony Romo sneak on fourthand-1 at the Giants 10 while trailing 21-

Romo, who played with a bruised right hand, moved the Cowboys in the second half but all he could generate were touchdown passes of 34 and 6 yards to Laurent Robinson, the last one getting Dallas within a 21-14 with 10:15

Cruz, however, had a 44-yard thirddown catch and another for 20 yards to set up a 28-yard Lawrence Tynes' field goal and Manning iced the game with a 4-yard TD pass to Hakeem Nicks with 3:41 to play. Manning finished 24 of 33 for 346 yards and no interceptions as the Gi-

season marked by inconsistency on a high note. Cruz, who set a single-season record for yards receiving, finished with six catches for 178 yards, a 29.7

ants beat the Cowboys for the second time in four games and ended a regular yard average, and of course, he did his touchdown salsa after the first score.

Romo was 29 of 37 for 289 yards but he was sacked six times, including twice by Osi Umenyiora who returned to the lineup for the first time since spraining an ankle late last month. Dallas' final possession ended with Romo being sacked by Justin Tuck and losing a fumble.

Coming off a 29-14 win over the rival Jets last week in what might have been the Giants best game of the season, Coughlin's team put together another outstanding 30 minutes in jumping to a 21-0 halftime lead. Cruz, who sparked the win over the Jets' with a team-record 99-yard touchdown, made another monster play on the Giants' second offensive series, turning a short pass into points. Cruz caught a short square out, eluded a tackle by Terence Newman, turned the corner after getting a seal block from Nicks and outraced two defenders down the sideline in front of the Giants bench for a 7-0 lead.

Broncos, Bengals in Playoffs, Patriots top AFC

BY BARRY WILNER

Even without any Tim Tebow heroics, the Denver Broncos have won the AFC

They did it despite falling 7-3 to the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday because San Diego knocked off Oakland 38-26. The Broncos and Raiders tied for the division lead at 8-8, but Denver won on the tiebreaker, better results in common games. Baltimore (12-4) took the AFC North and a firstround bye as a No. 2 seed when it outlasted Cincinnati 24-16. Even though the Bengals lost, their 9-7 record earned them a wild card in a head-to-head tiebreaker over Tennessee, the only other team with that record in the AFC. The

BRONCOS LOSE TO CHIEFS, WIN AFC WEST

DENVER • Tim Tebow fell short in his latest comeback bid, vet his Denver Broncos are still going to the playoffs.

Former Bronco Kyle Orton got his revenge in leading the Kansas City Chiefs to a 7-3 win over Denver on Sunday, but it's the Broncos who clinched the AFC West and is headed to the postseason.

After congratulating their former starting quarterback, the Broncos celebrated the end to their six-year playoff drought once San Diego beat Oakland 38-26 later Sunday.

Losers of their last three games, the Broncos finished 8-8, same as the Raiders. They win their first division title since 2005 on a tiebreaker.

CINCINNATI • Ray Rice had a pair of long touchdown runs that gave the Ravens their third AFC North title and the No. 2 seed in the playoffs.

Baltimore (12-4) will get a first-round by e followed by a playoff game at home, where the Ravens are 8-0 this sea-

Despite the loss, the Bengals (9-7) also got into the playoffs, securing the final wild card as the Jets and Broncos also lost. It's Cincinnati's third playoff appearance in the last 21 vears.

CHARGERS 38, RAIDERS 26 OAKLAND, Calif. • Philip Rivers threw three touchdown passes and Richard Goodman returned a kickoff 105 yards for another score as Oakland's playoff hopes ended.

The Raiders (8-8) went into the final day of the season needing to win and get help to end an eight-year playoff drought. They got the assistance they needed when Denver (8-8) lost 7-3 at home to Kansas City but were unable to do their part by beating the Chargers (8-8). The Broncos won the division based on record versus common opponents.

STEELERS 13, BROWNS 9

CLEVELAND • Isaac Redman replaced an injured Rashard Mendenhall and ran for a touchdown as Pittsburgh limped into the AFC playoffs.

Redman scored on a 7yard run in the third quarter for the Steelers (12-4), who finished tied with Baltimore for first in the AFC North but lost the tiebreaker because the Ravens beat them twice.

SCHEDULE: TONIGHT'S BIG GAMES

yard kickoff return early in the fourth quarter put Cincinnati ahead to stay.

The Bearcats (10-3) capped the season with their third straight victory in the 31-24 win over Vander-But the co-Big East Conference champs had to work to put away Vanderbilt (6-7), a team that tied for fourth in the Southeastern Conference, despite forcing three turnovers and coming up with two sacks. The Commodores led 21-17 when Abernathy became the first Cincinnati player to return a kickoff for a TD in the program's 13 bowl

Archibald Vandy's Barnes blocked Tony Miliano's 39-yard field goal with 3:58 left, giving the Commodores the ball with plenty of time to go ahead. Nick Temple picked off a Larry Smith pass with 3:15 remaining, and Pead sealed the victory with a 12-yard TD run with 1:52 left.

LATE TO WIN LIBERTY BOWL

CINCINNATI PULLS AHEAD

FIGHT HUNGER BOWL Illinois 20, UCLA 14

SAN FRANCISCO • Terry Hawthorne returned an interception 39 yards for Illinois' first touchdown late in the third quarter and Illini snapped a six-game losing streak.

Scheelhaase Nathan added a 60-yard touchdown pass to A.J. Jenkins midway through the fourth quarter to seal the first victory for Illinois (7-6) since beating Indiana 12 weeks ago.

The game between two six-win teams who have already fired their head coaches matched the underwhelming expectations as there was little excitement before Hawthorne's thirdquarter touchdown that gave Illinois its first lead.

CHICK-FIL-A BOWL

Auburn 43, Virginia 24

ATLANTA • Onterio Mc-Calebb scored on a 3-yard run and 25-yard pass while subbing for suspended star running back Mike Dyer and Auburn beat Virginia in its highest scoring game of the season.

Auburn won despite losing quarterback Clint Moseley to an ankle injury early in the first quarter.

Auburn (8-5) also had big plays on special teams, blocking two punts and recovering an onside kick.

appearances.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ohio State (6-6) at Florida (6-6). 11 a.m.(ESPN2) Line: Florida by 2. Series Record: Florida beat Ohio State 41-14 in the 2007 Bowl Championship Series national title game in the only previous meeting between the schools.

WHAT'S AT STAKE One team will end up with a losing record. something neither has done in decades. Ohio State hasn't endured a losing season since going 4-6-1 in 1988, the first season under John Cooper, Florida's last losing mark came in 1979 under Charley Pell. The Gators finished 0-10-1 in Pell's first season. KEY MATCHLIP

OB Braxton Miller vs. Florida's defense. Miller has at least 100 yards rushing in three of Ohio State's last four games, and dualthreat quarterbacks have given the Gators fits this season. South Carolina's Connor. Shaw ran for 88 vards and two scores against Florida, which also allowed at least 40 vards on the ground to Kentucky's Morgan Newton, Auburn's Kiehl Frazier and Georgia's Aaron Murray. PLAYERS TO WATCH

Ohio State: DE John Simon has a team-high seven sacks and will be lined up against a backup. The Gators will be without RT Matt Patchan, forcing struggling Xavier Nixon back into the starting lineup.

Florida: RB Chris Rainey leads the team in rushing and receiving, and if the Gators can get the speedster into open space, it could be a long day for Ohio State. Rainey has 790 yards rushing and two touchdowns, and 28 receptions for 350 yards and two scores. FACTS & FIGURES Ohio State is playing in the Gator Bowl for the first time since an epic ending in 1978, when coach Woody Haves nunched Clemson's Charlie Bauman following an interception in the closing minutes. The school fired Haves the following day, ending his 28-year run as head coach. . Ohio State and Florida have developed a recent rivalry, with the programs playing for football and basketball national championships in 2007. Florida's 41-14 victory in Glendale, Ariz., in January 2007 could provide some motivation. ``I know they're still upset about that game." Rainey said. Florida (18) and Ohio State (16) rank first and second, respectively, in January bowl appearances since 1993. ... Florida has won three consecutive bowl games and five of its Capital One Bowl ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - No. 10 South Carolina (10-2) vs. No. 21 Nebraska (9-3). 1 p.m.

(FSPN) Line: South Carolina by 2 Series Record: Nebraska leads 3-0.

WHAT'S AT STAKE Both programs are trying to put a positive spin on season's that began with a lot bigger hones. South Carolina had its sights on returning to the Southeastern Conference championship game for the second straight year, but was tripped by an early-season loss to Auburn and late-season setback to Arkansas. Nebraska struggled at times during its first year in the Big Ten, with losses to Wisconsin, Northwestern and Michigan, South Carolina is making its fourth straight bowl appearance, but hasn't won one since beating Houston in the 2006 Liberty Bowl. Nebraska is also making its fourth straight bowl appearance, with its last win coming in the 2009 Holiday over Arizona. KEY MATCHUP

Both defenses will have to deal with quarterbacks that have the ability to run the football. Gamecocks sophomore Connor Shaw ran for nearly 500 yards and seven touchdowns in just nine games this season. The Cornhuskers' Taylor Martinez amassed more than 800 rushing yards and nine touchdowns in 2011. PLAYERS TO WATCH South Carolina: WR Alshon Jeffrey has 45 receptions for 614 vards and seven scores. while DE Melvin Ingram leads the defense with 8.5 sacks. Nebraska: Martinez is also dangerous through the air having completed 152 of 272 passes for

1,973 yards and 12 TDs. RB Rex Burkhead has rushed for 1.268 vards and 15 TDs. FACTS & FIGURES Nebraska is 12-5 all-time against SEC opponents in bowl games, including a 7-4 record against Top 10-ranked SEC teams. ... The Cornhuskers committed eight turnovers in their three losses this season and only nine in their other nine games combined. ... South Carolina is just 4-12 all-time in bowl games.

Outback Bowl

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Michigan State (10-3) vs. Georgia (10-3), 11 a.m.(ABC) Line: Georgia by 3. Series Record: Georgia leads 2-0. WHAT'S AT STAKE After losing the conference championship games in their respective conferences, the Spartans and Bulldogs are hoping to finish the season on a winning note. Michigan State lost the Rig Ten title game to Wisconsin 42-39 and has dropped its last five bowl games, four of them under coach Mark Dantonio Georgia led ton-ranked LSII early in the Southeastern Conference championship game before fading badly in a 42-10 rout. The Bulldogs rallied from an 0-2 start to win their final 10 games of the regular season. KEY MATCHLIP

Georgia OB Aaron Murray vs. a strong Michigan State defense that allowed the fewest vards per game in the Big Ten. Murray has thrown for 2.861 yards and a Bulldogs-record 33 touchdowns, while being intercepted just 12 times. The Spartans led the Big Ten in sacks and rushing defense. PLAYERS TO WATCH

Michigan State: OB Kirk Cousins has thrown for 3.016 yards, 24 TDs and seven interceptions. He is the winningest quarterback in school history, posting a 26-12 record as a starter, including 21-5 over the past two seasons. RB Le'Veon Bell led the Spartans in rushing, averaging 5.5 yards per attempt on the way to 900 yards and 11 TDs. WR B.J. Cunningham has 72 receptions for 1.240 vards and 12 TDs.

Georgia: Murray has plenty of talented targets when he drops back to throw the ball. including leading TE Orson Charles, who has 44 receptions for 572 yards and five TDs. WRs Tavarres King and Malcolm Mitchell averaged 12.2 and 16.2 vards per reception, respectively, and combined for 11 TDs. Injuries and suspensions have forced coach Mark Richt to use four different starting tailbacks. Richt said redshirt freshman Ken Malcome likely will start against Michigan State. FACTS & FIGURES The Outback Bowl is a homecoming for Georgia's Murray and Charles, who also were teammates in high school and won a state championship at Tampa Plant. ... Michigan State hasn't won a bowl game since beating Fresno State 44-35 in the 2001 Silicon Valley Bowl. The Spartans have gone 0-5 since then, including a 24-12 loss to Georgia in the 2009 Capital One Bowl. ... Richt has led Georgia to a bowl appearance in each of his 11 seasons as coach. The Bulldogs are 7-3 under him, including a 10-6 loss to Central Florida in last season's Liberty Bowl.

Ticket City Bowl DALLAS (AP) - Houston (12-1) vs. Penn State

(9-3), Noon (ESPNU) Line: Houston by 7. Series record: Penn State leads 2-0. WHAT'S AT STAKE Two teams that encountered coaching upheaval try to end the season on an upbeat note. Gary Levine leads the Cougars for the first time since being promoted to replace Kevin Sumlin, who left to take the job at Texas A&M. Longtime defensive coordinator Tom Bradley hopes the game isn't his last with the Nittany Lions since being appointed interim coach after Hall of Famer Joe

Paterno was fired Nov. 9.

KEY MATCHUP Houston OB Case Keenum vs. Penn State defensive line. The Cougars' record-setter with the quick release has been lighting up defenses all season. But Penn State's defensive line will likely be the best front four he'll face all season, particularly All-American tackle Devon Still. The Nittany Lions hope they can shuffle linemen in and out to keep un with Houston's fast-naced offense PLAYERS TO WATCH

Houston: Keenum. The NCAA career leader in passing vardage (18.865) and touchdown passes (152) gets a shot to prove the Cougars' 12-0 start wasn't a fluke against the Big Ten's stingiest defense (15.7 points). Penn State: OB Rob Bolden. The sophomore gets the start with first-stringer Matt McGloin sidelined after suffering a seizure and concussion Dec. 17 following a locker room altercation with a teammate. Bolden is more mobile than McGloin, but Penn State's middling offense has especially struggled with Bolden behind center.

FACTS & FIGURES

This will be Penn State's first bowl game without Paterno as head coach since the 1962 Gator Bowl, a 17-7 loss to Florida... Penn State will contribute its bowl proceeds estimated to be up to $2.3 million, to causes devoted to the research and treatment of child sexual abuse... Today is Monday, Jan. 2, the second day of 2012. There are 364 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On Jan. 2, 1942, the Philippine capital of Manila was captured by Japanese forces during World War II.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1788, Georgia became the fourth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1811, Sen. Timothy Pickering, a Federalist from Massachusetts, became the first member of the U.S. Senate to be censured after he'd improperly revealed the contents of an executive document.

In 1900, Secretary of State John Hay announced the "Open Door Policy" to facilitate trade with China.

In 1921, religious services were broadcast on radio for the first time as KDKA in Pittsburgh aired the regular Sunday service of the city's Calvary Episcopal Church.

In 1935, Bruno Hauptmann went on trial in Flemington, N.J., on charges of kidnapping and murdering the 20-month-old son of Charles and Anne Lindbergh. (Hauptmann was found guilty, and executed.)

In 1959, the Soviet Union launched its space probe Luna 1, the first manmade object to fly past the moon, its apparent intended target.

In 1960, Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts launched his successful bid for the presidency.

In 1971, 66 people were killed in a pileup of spectators leaving a soccer match at Ibrox Stadium in Glasgow, Scotland.

In 1974, President Richard M. Nixon signed legislation requiring states to limit highway speeds to 55 miles an hour. (Federal speed limits were abolished in 1995).

In 1981, police in Sheffield, England, arrested Peter Sutcliffe, who confessed to being the "Yorkshire Ripper," the serial killer of 13 women.

In 1991, Sharon Pratt (Dixon) was sworn in as mayor of Washington, D.C., becoming the first black woman to head a city of Washington's size and prominence.

In 2006, 12 miners died in a methane gas explosion at the Sago Mine in West Virginia, W.Va., but one miner, Randal McCloy Jr., was eventually rescued.

Ten years ago: The new Afghan government confirmed that American bombs had killed the Taliban's intelligence chief (Qari Ahma-dullah). Eduardo Duhalde was sworn in as Argentina's president.

Five years ago: The state funeral for former President Gerald R. Ford began with an elaborate service Washington National Cathedral, then moved to Grand Rapids, Mich. New York City commuter Wesley Autrey Sr. saved Cameron Hollopeter, a 19-year-old film student who'd fallen onto subway tracks, by leaping down and pulling the teen and himself into the trough between the tracks as a train passed over them. Talk show host Oprah Winfrey opened a school for disadvantaged girls in South Africa. (The school later became embroiled in allegations of abuse; Winfrey apologized and promised an overhaul.) No. 5 Louisville beat No. 15 Wake Forest 24-13 in the Orange Bowl. Former Jerusalem Mayor

Teddy Kollek died at age 95. One year ago: The U.S. Navy said it would investigate raunchy videos broadcast to the crew of the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise. (Capt. Owen P. Honors, who'd produced the videos as the ship's executive officer, was removed as the Enterprise's commander but was later allowed to remain in the Navy.) A magnitude 7.1 earthquake shook southern Chile, sending tens of thousands of people fearing a tsunami to higher ground. "Dick" Maj. Richard Winters, who'd fought in several major battles in World War II and whose quiet leadership was chronicled in the book and television miniseries "Band of Brothers," died in Palmyra,

Pa., at age 92.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Fools, they do not even know how much more is the half than the whole."

– Hesiod

In baseball they say that if you give the opposing side a fourth out, you will get punished, but in today's deal, South did not take advantage of his extra life.

When West led a club against the heart game, declarer saw nothing better than the 75 percent line of winning the club ace, drawing trump, then leading diamonds toward the queen and jack twice. When both the ace and king turned up offside, declarer went one down and blamed the lie of the cards rather than his own carelessness. Can you see what he might have done better? It was lucky for declarer that

West did not lead a diamond, but once South had caught a break at trick one, he should have looked to improve on the line he actually followed. The key is the discard available from dummy on the top spades. It does no good to discard a diamond from dummy — that still leaves you with the same problem in diamonds. Instead, win the club lead, draw trump in two rounds, then cash the three top spades and make the apparently irrelevant discard of a club from dummy. The point is that you can now exit with a club. Even if West wins and shifts to a low diamond, you can simply cover with the jack. This endplays East into returning a diamond or giving you a ruff-sluff.

The approach of eliminating the side-suits when you have spare trump in each hand pays dividends surprisingly often.

ANSWER: When in doubt, lead from a four-card major rather than a minor. While I try to avoid leading from ace-fourth into a strong hand, I have no concerns about leading from any other four-card suit headed by one honor. Here, the heart lead looks best, with my second choice a diamond. (There is no third choice.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that happens once a year - my birthday at work. There's a huge potluck with cake, banners, gifts and a card that has been circulating around the office for a week. I cringe at the attention. Everyone means well, but these celebrations are pure torture for me. I'm a 7year-old all over again, trying my best to keep the anxiety and waterworks in check.

It goes back to my childhood. Growing up, we were very poor, and my parents made it clear that sacrifices had been made for my "big day," which always ended up with me guilt-ridden and in

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

As an adult, I celebrate my birthday with my husband and son. We keep it low-key and I'm surrounded by the unconditional love I craved as a child.

I have tried bowing out and asked that gifts be made to charity instead, but I am told, "Oh, come on! We ALL have to go through this." I went so far as to confide to the party planners why I'm so uncomfortable. To my horror, a few of them began complaining about how hard they worked pulling everything together or how late they stayed up baking the cake, etc. It was like hearing my parents all over again.

Am I being too sensitive? I'd appreciate your opinion. - SPARE ME

IN MICHIGAN DEAR SPARE ME:

Because you have tried talking to your co-workers about the special circumstances surrounding your reason for not wanting an office celebration, it's time to talk to your supervisor or someone in human resources. I see no reason why you should have to suffer emotional stress so that everyone can have a party on your birthday.

And no, you are not being too sensitive. The partyplanners have been insensi-

DEAR ABBY: My mother never liked my paternal grandmother. Grandma "Jane" was tolerated, but often treated as an object of ridicule or contempt. My unquestioningly absorbed my mother's prejudice against her and is blatantly rude to her.

Over the years I have grown close to Grandma Jane. My husband and I visit her regularly. Dad knows, but says it's better if Mom doesn't know.

Grandma has asked me several times if I know why Mom dislikes her. She's in her 90s, isolated from her family and desperately searching for answers. I can only imagine it stems from some disagreement dating back to before I was born.

I am also sad that Dad won't visit his mother because Mom won't go with him. I can't believe Grandma Iane has done anything to deserve being forced to die alone, and it hurts knowing my mother would be so vindictive out of spite.

Grandma's good health can't last forever. I worry what will happen when she can no longer live independently. I believe in reconciliation, tolerance and a little maturity, but I know I am in the minority. What can I possibly do?

- LOYAL DAUGHTER, CARING GRAND DAUGHTER DEAR LOYAL AND CAR-

ING: Not knowing the details of what caused the rift, I'm advising you to do as your father has suggested. If he were stronger, he would have insisted decades ago that his mother be treated with respect. That he would allow her to be ridiculed or treated rudely in his presence while he remained silent is shameful.

While you can't heal the breach, you can remain caring and supportive of your grandmother. When she can no longer live independently, she will need someone to help her or to move her to assisted living. The ideal person to watch over her then would be you.

IF JANUARY 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You need to keep a pen and paper close by, because for the next few weeks, your heart and mind are filled with inspiring ideas. Jot down your ideas or take a vacation built for two, but put business, career and financial decisions on hold until the end of February. Sail off into the sunset with a special someone and experience your own "happy ever after" this year by putting important plans into motion during March. Your judgment will be at its best and the world in general is likely to cough up some beneficial opportunities during that period of time. For pure financial success, make business decisions in early May

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It is said that opportunities come to those who make them happen. Be careful when trying to get your foot in the door. Some doors that are kicked open with brute force can never be closed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make a wish, and then click your heels three times. Adventures and travel can be a great deal of fun — but like Dorothy, you may come to the conclusion that there's no place like home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The plot thickens. You are easily swayed by opinions and ideas in the business world, especially if they offer a shortcut so you can fulfill your fantasies. The opinions offered may be based on self-interest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Wear your heart on your sleeves, even if you have to roll them up. Your sincerity shines brightest when you are working toward a goal. There is no room in your heart for subterfuge or backstabbing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Mutual gain is the key to success. What is good for you must benefit the other person, as well, whether you are setting up a late date with your latest romantic conquest or putting together a business deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Say those three little words. Strengthen attachments by speaking your mind. People in close contact will be impressed by your sincerity and commitment to maintaining a viable relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get real about an attraction to the rare. You might be attracted to someone who doesn't just walk to the beat of a different drummer; that person might be moving along to the beat of an entire SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Perform an act of faith. Sharing your innermost secrets with others doesn't need to leave you vulnerable. A romantic partner can be counted on to maintain confidentiality; it is up to you to confide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When others speak, you should listen with your heart as well as with your ears. Someone is likely to tell you quite clearly that there is a trustworthy commitment. Take time to form a tight bond.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Before you drink from the well, consider the source. Although you thirst for facts and figures, you may ask the wrong person for direction. Biased opinions don't offer a barometer of value.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You don't need a divining rod to find the truth. Others will reflect your trustworthiness like a mirror, so there is no risk in being forthright about intentions. Join forces for romantic or career goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Admit to your mistakes. When you do so, you will find people are willing to give you the benefit of the doubt. Honor promises and you will find that all your fears vanish in a blink of an eye.
