Water Users Set Record for Aquifer Recharge

More water was returned to the aquifer that feeds southern Idaho in 2011 than any year since state recharge efforts started in 2008.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Despite constrained funding and limited resources, Idaho water users helped provide record-breaking aquifer recharge in 2011.

Since 2008, Gem State water experts have pushed to replenish the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer. The fear is that more water is being pulled from the underground body of water than is being put back, potentially imperiling area agriculture and the majority of southern Idahoans who rely on the Lake Erie-sized aquifer.

This year, close to 156,000 acre-feet of water was returned to the aquifer, said Bill Quinn, a technical engineer with the Idaho Department of Water Resources. An acre-foot is enough water to cover one acre, one foot deep.

"This is water that would have been lost," Quinn said. "We're getting more people on board with the effort."

The amount is the highest level of recharge for Idaho in three years. And for the first time, the private sector contributed to recharge efforts.

A group of irrigation, groundwater and other water users have come together to form the Eastern Snake Plain Recharge Alliance. The group contributed close to 29,000 acre-feet of recharge in the fall.

T.F. Council Selects Lanting as New Mayor

Three of four council members elected in November were sworn into new terms at Monday's meeting.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The first meeting of the new year brought a new look to the Twin Falls City Council, as new members took their seats and Councilman Greg Lanting was selected as mayor.

Retired police chief Jim Munn Jr., prior Councilman Chris Talkington and re-elected Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka were sworn into their new terms. Shawn Barigar was on a previously scheduled trip and will take his oath later this month.

Another change came as Don Hall decided not to seek another two-year term as mayor, or "chairman of the board" as he calls it.

Lanting's nomination was unanimous. He has served on the council since 2006.

Twin Falls Kiwanis Pulls Plug on Recycling

Service group to remove familiar yellow bins after failing to find another group to take over project.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE
bguire@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The familiar yellow bins of the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club recycling program will be no more as of the end of the week.

The service club announced Tuesday its plans to end the 33-year-old program, which was once the city's only means of recycling waste, on Friday. The bins were provided free to the public to recycle aluminum cans and newspapers.

Trent Stimpson, president of the Twin Falls club, said the writing was on the wall once the city started its own no-sort, curbside recycling service one year ago.

"It's taken about a year, trying to make the right decision," Stimpson said, "because we've done it for so long."

The Kiwanis debated revamping the bins or consolidating locations — there are seven around town. It even cast a line to find another service club to take over. No one bit.

"The bins have turned into an eyesore, and they're not a big money maker," Stimpson added.

The club used the program to help fund college scholarships and donate to area schools. Stimpson said the loss of the recycling program won't affect the club's ability to give.

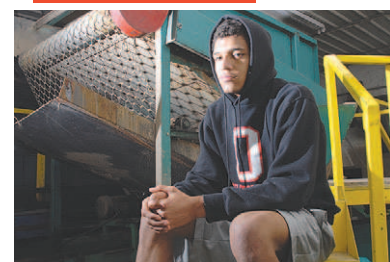

According to the club, the program kept nearly 23,000 cubic yards of material from ending up in the landfill.

Taking On a New Challenge

I spent most of my holidays in bed with a nasty chest cold. The days bled together in a blur of cough syrup and broth soup, and I thought of little more than the mindless Netflix movies I used to pass the time.

So this week's arrival came as a shock. I'm taking over the politics beat at the Times-News, and, like lawmakers and reporters from across the state, I'm heading to the Capitol for the legislative session.

I've spent the last week packing and trying to figure out what I'll need to take to my little Boise apartment, and what I'll need to leave behind for my husband. (Who uses the stock pot more often, me or him? How many dish towels do I really need?)

But the impending move — both to Boise and to the new gig — hadn't sunk in until Sunday, when I was walking my dogs and realizing they wouldn't be there to greet me when I got home from reporting at the statehouse.

Melissa Davlin
The Back of the Notebook

It's a bittersweet change. I'm excited for the new challenge, but I've been a features writer at the Times-News for four years, and I loved it. I'll surely miss the job, especially writing Food section stories and the frequent samples that came along with them.

But what I loved most about features writing — meeting real people every day — will carry over to the politics beat. I look forward to talking to Magic Valley residents about how seemingly abstract political issues affect their families, businesses and everyday lives.

As for this column, I'm shifting it to talk a bit more about Idaho politics. Feel free to keep e-mailing me at mdavlin@magicvalley.com.

CSI Opens Bidding for New Jerome Head Start Center

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho is moving forward to bring Head Start and Early Head Start programs under one roof in Jerome.

The college is accepting bids to construct a new 6,192-square-foot facility, with an estimated $1 million price tag. It's scheduled to open in mid-to-late September.

CSI Head Start Director Mancoie Fedder says the new building will be more user-friendly and will consolidate services into one location.

"It's just going to be a very positive thing to move into one facility," he said.

Head Start is a federally-funded program that provides educational, health, nutritional and social services to children up to age 5 and families living at or below federal poverty levels. The Early Head Start program is for pregnant women, infants and toddlers up to age 3.

Right now, North Side center programs are located in two old houses on First Avenue East. Administrative offices are nearby in a leased building.

"The facilities are less than desirable," Fedder said, and there's just barely enough space to accommodate the programs.

The new center will be located near the Jerome School District's administrative building on Fourth Avenue West.

"It will make for a nice partnership," Fedder said.

Plans to construct a new center have been in the works since last spring. This summer, CSI bought 1.5 acres of land from the Jerome School District for $105,000.

Mike Mason, CSI's vice president of administration, didn't return a phone call Tuesday.

The demand for Head Start and Early Head Start

How to Submit a Bid

services continues to increase and there are waiting lists for both programs.

Despite a larger facility on its way, though, programs can't expand without Congressional approval.

Last year, 882 low-income children in Jerome County qualified for the Head Start program. But there are only 84 slots available.

It's a similar situation for the Early Head Start program. Nearly 385 people qualified last year, but only 24 received services.

"There's a large gap there," Fedder said.

Jerome Family Loses Home in Fire

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • A family in Jerome is taking refuge with the Red Cross this week after a fire destroyed their trailer home Monday night.

A combination of embers from a fireplace, nearby flammable flooring and the trailer's heating ventilation system caused the fire to quickly spread, Jerome Fire Department Deputy Fire Chief Jack Krill said.

The occupants of the trailer at Majestic Meadows at 218 W. Ave. 1 were not home at the time, but a small dog died in the fire, Krill said.

Jerome firefighters were called to the scene at 9:17 p.m. and had the fire under control in less than 30 minutes. It took crews longer to get hot spots throughout the trailer extinguished to ensure no flare-ups would occur.

"We're concluding what happened is that some embers rolled out of the fireplace," Krill said.

Less than a foot away from the fireplace was linoleum flooring with particle board underneath that quickly caught fire, he said.

Also near the fireplace was a heating vent that the fire used to travel through the trailer.

"The fire took the path of least resistance," Krill said.

The extensive damage to the underside of the trailer, which was built in the 1970s, caused it to be a total loss.

Krill said the home had five people living in it and no smoke detectors, something he hopes others will learn from.

"If you go to bed you should have a smoke detector there," he said.

If anyone needs a smoke detector, Krill said they should contact the Jerome Fire Department at 324-2323.

Krill also advised people to refresh themselves on heating safety.

"Be very cognizant of embers and things that can roll out of the fireplace," he said.

In this case, the fireplace had solid metal doors that had been opened to allow more heat out. Leaving something like that unattended, even for a few minutes, can have dire consequences, Krill said.

"The fire spread so quickly, they were lucky they weren't home," he said.

Accused Drug Trafficker Strikes Plea Deal

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man could spend up to five years in prison after pleading guilty to drug and burglary charges Tuesday.

Michael Ethan Pendleton pleaded guilty in Twin Falls County 5th District Court to charges of possession of marijuana with intent to deliver and burglary as part of a plea deal.

Prosecutors reduced a charge of trafficking marijuana to possession and dismissed a charge of possession of methamphetamine in exchange for Pendleton's guilty pleas.

It is recommended he serve three to five years in prison, which he could forgo through successful completion of a year in the state's retained jurisdiction program.

Pendleton will also undergo a substance abuse assessment that includes a plan for treatment.

Adrian Will, 23, of Filer, and Michael and Robin Pendleton, both 20, were initially charged with trafficking after police allegedly found them with more than a pound of marijuana, a notebook with weights and prices, and six grams of methamphetamine, in early November at a Twin Falls motel.

They led police to Michael's uncle, David Henderson, 35, whom they said they stole the drugs from, according to the police report. Henderson was charged with trafficking as well.

Michael and Robin Pendleton are scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 27. Will and Henderson are scheduled to be arraigned in district court Jan. 9.

Aquifer

The Idaho Water Resource Board has sponsored the state's recharge program since its inception. The board's latest approval allotted $132,700 to fund the recharge of 44,245 acre-feet below American Falls. But in a year when water was plentiful, money was tight.

"Incentives for recharge are starting to wane, so we determined there might be a possibility to conduct recharge for the private sector if there are incentives for them," said Dave Tuthill, technical adviser to the alliance and former IDWR director.

The alliance's goal is to receive credit for their recharge efforts from the department. Alliance members from water districts could use that credit to make up for any impact junior water right users have made on senior water users in the area.

But that decision won't be made until department officials have time to review the alliance's proposal in February, Tuthill said. "We're inventing a process to encourage recharge among the private sector," he said. "We don't see private companies replacing the public program, but moving forward together."

N. Idaho Sheriff Releases Details in Fatal Chase

BOISE (AP) • Authorities say a northern Idaho man accused of threatening to set his wife on fire was trying to get the woman to drop felony charges against him in that case when he kidnapped her at gunpoint and fled police.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's Office released new details Tuesday in the death of 52-year-old Daniel Zehm, who authorities say fatally shot himself Saturday after police flattened his vehicle tires.

Sheriff Rocky Watson says Zehm pepper-sprayed his wife, Sondra, earlier that day and was armed when forcing her into the vehicle.

She escaped by jumping from the moving van and was not hurt.

Twin Falls Educators Host Legislative Sendoff Tonight

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Education Association and Twin Falls School District are hosting an event tonight to send off state legislators from south-central Idaho to the Capitol for the 2012 legislative session.

The meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m. in the teacher's lounge at Twin Falls High School. Members of the public are invited to attend.

Education topics will be discussed during the meeting. The state's legislative session begins Monday in Boise.

Judge Reduces Bond for Accused Child Molester

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A judge reduced the bond of Aaron W. Frandsen Tuesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. Frandsen is accused of 10 counts of child sex crimes and was being held on $250,000 bond, which was reduced to $100,000 Tuesday.

According to court records, Frandsen will be required to wear an electronic monitoring system if he bonds out of Twin Falls County Jail.

Frandsen, 34, was accused of committing the acts against a female child starting in 2006, when the child was 7 or 8 years old.

He was indicted by a Twin Falls grand jury on Dec. 19. County Prosecutor Grant Loeb declined to say how Frandsen knew the child.

According to the indictment, the abuse occurred at several residences throughout Twin Falls, the latest occurring between Aug. 1, 2009, and May 31, 2010, when the child was 11 years old.

Frandsen has been ordered to have no contact with his alleged victim or other minors.

A pretrial conference is scheduled for Feb. 27 and a trial is scheduled to begin March 6. Prosecutors estimate a trial would last four days.

Idaho Snowpack Levels Below Normal

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • When it comes to snow, Idaho just needs a strong one-two punch.

It's no secret that the state is experiencing a drop in snowfall. However, there's still time for a storm to hit before the weather warms up, said Ron Abramovich, water supply specialist for the National Resource Conservation Service.

"We'll have a period where it's cold but there's no moisture," he said. "And then we'll get a brief time of moisture but it's not cold enough for snow. We need the two to hit at the same time."

The agency tracks snowfall to help predict the amount of available water during the summer. And with winter almost halfway over, water trackers are trying to remain optimistic that snow-dumping storms will hit before April.

In south-central Idaho, the snowpack is considerably below average, providing a stark contrast to last year, when snowpack levels exceeded normal amounts. Every Idaho basin contains less than its average snowpack level for early January. The Upper Snake Basin has collected 72 percent of its average, while the Salmon Falls Basin is at 43 percent of average.

In the Big Wood Basin, snowpack is 70 percent of its normal amount at this time. That figure drops to 60 percent in the Little Wood Basin. This is Idaho's lowest snowpack since 1988, but Abramovich said even then, a late storm hit the state and recovered the snowpack to 75 percent of the annual average.

However, even with the low numbers, the situation isn't as dire as it may appear. Reservoirs are still full from last year's wet spring, giving water users enough of a margin to handle a low snowpack year.

"We got spoiled last year," he said. "We just need one or two good storms."

Man to Plead Guilty to Child Porn Charges

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A 23-year-old Twin Falls man has agreed to change his plea to guilty on charges he downloaded child pornography on multiple computers.

Shawn Freeman's attorney appeared at a pretrial hearing Tuesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court and reported his client wanted to accept a plea agreement. A trial had been scheduled to begin next week.

Freeman was charged with 19 counts of felony possession of sexually exploitative material. The police report reveals the investigation into Freeman began nearly 18 months before his arrest when the state attorney general's office received a tip through its Internet Crime Against Children Task Force.

Police interviewed Freeman in March and April 2010, when he admitted to downloading child pornography since 2004. He agreed to allow police to search multiple computer hard drives, and in August a forensic examiner in Boise reported identifying nearly 1,000 images as possible child pornography.

The maximum penalty upon conviction is up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. It was unclear Tuesday how many charges Freeman agreed to plead guilty to.

He is scheduled to enter the plea Jan. 9.

Police Identify Victims of New Year's Eve Rollover

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Idaho State Police have identified two of the injured passengers in a New Year's Eve rollover accident in Jerome.

Derreck F. Olsen, 21, Lucinda Crowley-Hodges, 19, and an unidentified female minor were all injured in the single-vehicle accident Sunday night. The driver, 18-year-old Devin Crawford, was also injured.

Crowley-Hodges was not wearing a seat belt and was ejected from the vehicle. She taken by air ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

The other passengers and the driver were wearing seat belts and were transported by ground ambulance to St. Luke's. As of Tuesday, none of the victims were current patients at St. Luke's.

According to a report by Idaho State Police, the vehicle rolled through the median and came to rest on the shoulder after Crawford lost control of the vehicle. It is unknown if alcohol was a factor in this crash.

OPINION

“Not really, but I think it’s a possibility. I don’t deceive myself. You know what the odds are. The odds have been slim.”

Republican Ron Paul, a leading contender in Iowa’s presidential caucuses, when asked by ABC News whether he sees himself in the Oval Office.

THEIR VIEW

A Fair Block on Internet Piracy

The following editorial appeared in Tuesday’s Washington Post

Billions of dollars are lost each year to online piracy, which stifles the ability of writers, songwriters and others in the creative arts to earn the royalties they are due and drains profits from legitimate manufacturers. Consumers often find themselves saddled with shoddy products and no prospect of obtaining a refund.

A broad consortium of copyright and trademark holders — corporate behemoths and small enterprises alike — is pushing for legislation to help combat rogue Web sites. Many of them, based off shore and out of reach of U.S. law enforcement, leech off of the rightful owners’ goods and talents. This group is getting considerable pushback from the likes of Google and open-Internet advocates. The opponents fear that tinkering with the infrastructure of the Internet to crack down on scofflaws could do irreparable damage to the Internet’s freedom and independence.

The two forces met at an unusually raucous House hearing last month. The focal point: the House’s Stop Online Piracy Act, or SOPA. SOPA would allow the Justice Department or a copyright or trademark holder to seek a court order to block a rogue site or force financial companies such as PayPal or MasterCard to stop processing payments from U.S. customers doing business with such sites. The criticism of SOPA is warranted. It contains several provisions, including a definition of a rogue site, that are dangerously overbroad and could threaten legitimate Web sites. The Senate, which is further along in its proceedings, has offered a similar, but better thought-out and more prudent, approach.

The Senate’s Protect IP (Intellectual Property) Act is designed to target foreign Web sites that are “dedicated to” and have “no significant use” beyond copyright or trademark infringement. Defendant Web sites would have the right to contest the allegation and would be subject to further action only if a federal judge determines that the site meets the definition above. A Web site that sold a product that turned out to be counterfeit or unwittingly linked to or posted an item to which it did not have the rights would be shielded from legal action. Only the Justice Department would have the authority to seek a court order demanding that an Internet service provider block the site from U.S. consumers. Both Justice and private rights holders would be permitted to ask a judge to compel Internet advertising agencies and financial services firms to discontinue processing payments or providing services to the rogue site.

Even though Protect IP offers a more restrained approach, many open-Internet advocates worry that it still presents dangers to Internet openness and security. As lawmakers in the House and Senate work through their differences, they should continue their dialogue with stakeholders to ensure the creation of a narrowly tailored bill that preserves Internet freedom and protects legitimate businesses from being ripped off.

Even Despots Don’t Live Forever

It was a bad year for the villains of the world. Three of the biggest bad guys met their ends: Osama bin Laden, killed by U.S. commandos who stormed his villa in Pakistan in May; Moammar Gadhafi, killed by Libyan insurgents who captured him (with the help of a NATO airstrike) in October; and Kim Jong Il, the ruler of North Korea, who died Dec. 17, reportedly of a heart attack.

Bin Laden was the most important. Americans remember him, of course, as the architect of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11. But his larger achievement was in organizing al-Qaida, a multinational movement whose purpose was to focus its violence not on local issues — plenty of terrorist groups do that — but on the distant United States. That innovation will guarantee him a place in history. “It is fair to say,” former CIA analyst Michael Scheuer wrote in his biography of bin Laden, “that he has had a greater impact on how Americans view their society, government and security than any other individual in the past 50 years.”

But by the time the Navy caught up with bin Laden, relentless U.S. attacks had reduced the “core” of al-Qaida to only a few high-value targets, most of them in hiding. True, the organization had atomized successfully into franchise operations in Yemen, Somalia and North Africa, but the local groups quickly got caught up in local politics and lost their focus on attacks against the United States. That caused distress to the founder, who sent letters urging his affiliates to get back to killing Americans. With bin Laden gone, al-Qaida isn’t over, but it’s a much smaller threat to us now.

The second of the three despots who left us in 2011 — Gadhafi — was known by the end of his career more for his flamboyantly theatrical uniforms and his onetime crush on Condoleezza Rice than for being a global threat. But Gadhafi was once one of the world’s top terrorists, instigator of the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 that killed 270. And he ruled his fellow Libyans with an arbitrary brutality exceeded by few others.

The dictator met his end because of a bigger trend, the wave of democratic enthusiasm sweeping the Arab world. Libyans saw auto-crats fall in two neighboring countries, Egypt and Tunisia, and decided they could change their circumstances too. Even with considerable help from NATO, it took the rebels six months to take the capital of Tripoli, and two more to capture Gadhafi. His end was ugly and ignominious; he appears to have been tortured and shot by the insurgents who found him.

Kim Jong Il, by contrast, died without violence at the end of a 16-year reign over the world’s last hermetically sealed communist dictatorship, a regime that ruined its own economy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teachers, not Laptops Should be Ed. Focus

Superintendent Luna’s task force has recognized that implementing the education laws passed by the Idaho Legislature will not be possible without significant changes.

They have recommended more than 50 changes, including scrapping the provision to give computers to all ninth-graders. They have also questioned the legality of requiring all students to take online classes for graduation. (See the Dec. 13, 2011, Times-News article: “Luna’s Task Force Approves Recommendations for Education Changes.”)

I suggest to our legislators that rather than spending time and taxpayer money trying to tweak the laws, they recognize that the basic premise is flawed. If they really want to improve education in Idaho, they need to scrap those laws and start over.

Idaho students, parents and educators have tried to convince our legislators that it is teachers, and not computers, that help students learn. Research verifies this fact.

“Of all the variables under a school’s control, the single most decisive factor in student achievement is excellent teaching,” the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation reported.

Computers are not a magic bullet that will increase student learning. Good teachers are the solution to our educational problems. But potentially good teachers will not enter the educational field nor remain teaching in Idaho if they are made to feel that they are expendable scapegoats.

I urge our legislators to read “Part II: The Education Challenge” in the book, “That Used to Be Us” by Thomas L. Friedman and Michael Mandelbaum, which is where the quotes above can be found. There they will find examples of educational policies that work.

KATHLEEN HEDBORG Burley

(Editor’s note: The task force’s recommendation for laptop computers was to phase in the devices, giving them to all students at high schools representing one third of Idaho’s student body yearly for three years, beginning in fall 2013. High school teachers would still receive devices in fall 2012.)

Strict Slaughter Ban, Cruelty Laws Needed for Horse Protection

As an advocate for the humane treatment of horses and other animals, I appreciated the story about Ruth Harder and her efforts to save neglected horses (“Abandoned, but Not Helpless,” Dec. 28).

Animals of all types are more likely to be neglected or abandoned when hard times hit, and horses are no exception. Sadly, as confirmed by the police officer in the article, Idaho’s anti-cruelty laws are weak. In addition to supporting the effort of good people like Ms. Harder who are dedicating themselves to saving horses, we should also be working to support stronger laws against all forms of animal abuse, including abandonment, in our state.

It should also be pointed out that horse slaughter was never “banned” here in the United States. Congress defunded U.S. Department of Agriculture inspection of horse slaughter plants, which made the sale of horse meat across state lines illegal, although that law was recently — and unfortunately — overturned. Even with that law in effect, however, the same number of horses were still being shipped across our borders to be slaughtered for human consumption in countries where they are considered a delicacy by wealthy diners.

The key to protecting horses is to pass the American Horse Slaughter Prevention Act, which will ban the slaughter of America’s horses for human consumption both here and abroad. Only then will breeders stop producing an over-abundance of horses to be snatched up by the cruel and greedy kill buyers.

State Treasurer's Use of Credit Card Scrutinized

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

Crane

BOISE • A southwestern Idaho prosecutor is scrutinizing whether state Treasurer Ron Crane broke the law by using a state credit card to put fuel in the personal vehicle he drives to and from the Capitol.

Canyon County prosecutor Bryan Taylor confirmed that Idaho Legislative Services auditors who have been reviewing the financial records of Crane's office for months have forwarded their preliminary findings to him.

"They've asked us to see if any criminal offense took place within Canyon County's jurisdiction," Taylor said. "We're fairly early into that investigation."

Legislative Service audits division manager Don Berg declined comment, saying he's awaiting Taylor's conclusions before releasing the audit of Crane's office. The audit is conducted at least once every three years, by state law.

Crane has hired attorney David Leroy, a former Idaho attorney general, to represent him after auditors alerted current Attorney General Lawrence Wasden's office about concerns that Crane's activities may have broken the law.

"As a former prosecutor, I can state that these kinds of policy and practice review questions are occasionally presented to public council for review," Leroy said Tuesday. "I would anticipate that the Canyon County prosecutor will conclude this involves questions of public policy and that no finding of criminal conduct will be made."

Leroy contends that Crane — as an elected official and not just a state employee — has the discretion to make decisions about the most-efficient and cost-effective means of organizing his official travel.

According to Idaho government policy, use of state vehicles for personal business is strictly prohibited.

"Home-to-office driving is only permissible when beginning or ending an authorized trip outside of regular business hours, or for other reasons considered in the best interest of the state and approved by the department director," according to the policy.

The bill for Crane's state Chevron card over the last three years totaled about $6,900, according to documents obtained through a public records request.

The bill was about $2,030 in 2009, $2,875 in 2010 and $1,980 for the first nine months of 2011.

In a recent interview with AP, Crane said he's used a state Chevron card with a $1,500 spending limit to fill up his own car since February 2005, when he gave up a state-provided vehicle in a bid to save Idaho taxpayers money.

Crane said he only uses gasoline paid for by Idaho

"I would anticipate that the Canyon County prosecutor will conclude this involves questions of public policy and that no finding of criminal conduct will be made."

Attorney David Leroy, who is representing state Treasurer Ron Crane taxpayers for commuting to the Capitol, as well as for other official business. Personal travel, he said, is paid out of his own pocketbook.

Crane, a four-term Republican, lives in Nampa, 25 miles from the Capitol. He considers driving to and from work state business, he said. For stops along the way, including at the grocery store, he doesn't differentiate between state or personal business.

"Or if I'm just in the city of Nampa, with incidental running to the post office, or to church, or something like that, I don't delineate," Crane told the AP in November. "But, if I take a trip to Cascade, because we have a (vacation) place in Cascade, I've used my personal card to fill that up. If I drive to Lewiston to see my daughter, I put that on my personal card. I can demonstrate that with financial records. That's the way I've done it for the entire time" since selling the state car in 2005.

Crane contends that giving up the state car provided to the treasurer, then filling up his own car with the state Chevron card, has saved Idaho taxpayers roughly $32,500 over six years in leasing and maintenance costs. That's why Crane said he was taken aback when he learned auditors had reported concerns to the Idaho attorney general.

"I was dumbfounded, to be quite honest," Crane said, adding only on one occasion did somebody else fill up the vehicle using the state card — when his wife retrieved him from the Boise Airport as he returned from official business.

A review of other Idaho state elected officials' commuting patterns shows differences.

Wasden commutes in a state-provided car from Nampa and pays for fuel with a state credit card, much like Crane did before 2005.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter drives a personal vehicle to and from the Capitol "80 percent of the time" and pays for his own fuel, his office said. His Idaho State Patrol detail sometimes picks him up at his home in Star and brings him to official events, Otter spokesman Jon Hanian said.

For their commutes, Lt. Gov. Brad Little and Secretary of State Ben Ysursa say they pay for their own fuel in personal cars.

Controller Donna Jones drives her own vehicle back and forth from Payette, about 120 miles roundtrip. Her office said she doesn't claim mileage.

IDAHO BRIEFS

Mediation Started in N. Idaho Assault Case

SANDPOINT • Attorneys for two teenage runaways accused of brutally attacking a 66-year-old northern Idaho woman have started mediation sessions with prosecutors in hopes of resolving the case before it goes to trial next week.

Marshall Ditrlich of Danville, Calif., and Joseph Martin, of Denver, are each charged with felony battery with intent to commit robbery in Idaho's 1st District Court.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports the 17-year-olds are scheduled to be tried separately as adults on Jan. 9.

Authorities say Ditrlich and Martin ran away from a boarding school in Montana and were hitchhiking last July when Vera Gadman, of Hope, offered them a ride. The Bonner County sheriff's office says Gadman was choked with a cord and hit with a bottle before she managed to flee the attack.

Walmart Employees Share Idaho's $1M Raffle

BOISE • Five employees of a Walmart in Ontario, Ore., are sharing Idaho's $1,000,000 Raffle prize.

Idaho Lottery officials say the five claimed their winnings at lottery headquarters in Boise on Tuesday. Each received $200,000 before taxes.

KTVB-TV reports the five put $10 from each paycheck into a pool for the past couple of months, and used the money to buy 70 tickets at a Maverik Store in Weiser.

The winners are: Pamela Linville and Aaron Anderson of Ontario, Ore.; Eddie Yrizeg of Nyssa, Ore.; Monica Draper of Payette and Aaron O'Neil of Weiser.

They say they'll use the money to pay off bills.

Idaho police say man crashed 2 cars in chase

CULDESAC • The Idaho State Police say a man wrecked one car and stole another while fleeing from police.

According to an Idaho State Police news release, the chase began Monday morning after troopers were asked to help locate a suicidal person and then spotted the man speeding on U.S. Highway 95 near Lewiston. Police say the man didn't pull over, but instead continued driving until he crashed near the town of Culdesac.

The police say that's when the driver took control of another woman's car and fled again, driving until he crashed into a ditch.

The Idaho State Police release says 19-year-old Sheldon Blancher Stamper was taken into custody and treated at a nearby hospital for minor injuries. It wasn't clear if anyone has been charged in connection with the chase.

Man guilty of scamming $75K from Boise woman

BOISE • A man with a history of stealing money from elderly people has pleaded guilty to three counts of felony grand theft for scamming more than $75,000 from a Boise woman in 2008.

The Idaho Statesman reports James William Schmidt pleaded guilty last month. Ada County prosecutors are recommending 9 to 11 years in prison when Schmidt is sentenced on Jan. 26.

Prosecutors allege Schmidt sold the woman an air purifier in 2008, then became more involved in her life. He eventually asked for loans he didn't repay, wrote unauthorized checks on her bank account and used her credit cards.

Schmidt is serving a 10-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to 12 counts of first-degree theft for stealing from Washington state residents.

Amid Hardships and Hope, Iraqis Get New Start in Idaho

BY ANNA WEBB
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE • In the past year, more than 9,000 of the 56,000 refugees who came to the U.S. came from Iraq. Iraqis now represent one of the largest groups of refugees in Idaho.

In the past five years, 912 Iraqi refugees have arrived in the state — 93 in the last year. Thousands more Iraqi men and women who worked for the U.S. military are in the country on special immigrant visas.

According to the Idaho Office for Refugees, the number of refugees from the Near East/South Asia (Iraq, Iran, and Afghanistan) will continue to grow as post-war resettlement efforts continue.

Like any population, immigrants are mobile, moving for job opportunities or to be closer to family members in other cities. Officials don't know how many Iraqis have stayed in Idaho over the years, said Kara Fink, communications specialist with the IOR.

But many have stayed. Three men who told their stories to the Idaho Statesman share a concern for the chaos and uncertainty in their home country after the departure of U.S. troops.

Before the war began, Hayder Alrubaye, 27, was in school in Baghdad. He was studying English and planning to become a basketball coach.

"But war is war. College stops. School stops. Everything stops," he said.

A little more than a year after arriving in the U.S., the Baghdad native is living in a Boise apartment. He translates for local refugee resettlement agencies. He also works nights, from 10 p.m. to 6:30 a.m., at a food processing plant.

He'll start at Boise State University this semester. He wants to study criminal justice. He's still figuring out how he's going to juggle school, work and helping his family.

During the war, Alrubaye worked as a translator in Iraq for the U.S. military. He, his sister and nephew came to Idaho as refugees.

In 2005, assassins killed Alrubaye's mother because of her position as a head mistress at a school and because she was a member of one branch of Islam, Shia, in an area where the Sunni branch was the majority.

Alrubaye said his mother's death was just one example of the unrest in his home country. Life remains impossible there, he said, with broken infrastructure, frequent power outages and the constant threat of violence.

"In recent days there have been 12 bombings in Baghdad alone," he said. "Officers are being assassinated, hospitals are calling for blood donations."

There is hope, he said. His country has endured hard times in the past. And people are waking up, becoming intolerant of government corruption. Still, he believes it will take at least another decade before life returns to something close to normal in Iraq.

Like others who worked for the U.S. government, he would be in danger were he to return, he said.

Luckily, he and his family are integrating into American life. The plant where he works hires many refugees and immigrants. He laughs about how his manager sits by the doorway and greets workers in 14 different languages.

Alrubaye worried about how Americans would react when they learned his nationality.

"But people don't care," he said. "They just want to know how I learned to speak English and how I got here."

Iraqi immigrant Michael Paul doesn't call the war in Iraq a war.

"For me, it is the revolution of American love in Iraq," he said.

Paul, 41, who took a westernized name upon his baptism at an American base in Iraq, worked as an interpreter for the U.S. Army and Navy for more than two years. He arrived in the U.S. nine months ago on a special immigrant visa.

He lives in Post Falls. He opened a barbershop, calling on training he got at the French embassy in Baghdad when he was a teenager.

"I also gave haircuts on the base. It was a natural thing to open a shop here. God had prepared me 25 years ago," he said.

Lately he's become an uncle-like figure for homesick Arabic-speaking students studying at local universities. He counsels them as he cuts their hair.

Paul is unlike many of his fellow immigrants. For him, work with the U.S. military had as much to do with spirituality as with politics.

"My goal was serving the American military in Iraq because I believe it was a kind of ministry," Paul said.

He converted from Islam to Christianity in 1993. He practiced his new religion quietly for a decade, waiting for the day he could practice in the open. His first goal after walking onto a U.S. base in 2003 was to meet the American chaplain and get baptized.

He wanted to come to the U.S. to study with biblical scholars. And he could not stay in Iraq; his religion and his work put him in double jeopardy.

He was kidnapped three times while working for the Americans. He describes his kidnappers as "masked militia men" whom he heard say, "We caught that traitor. He has no loyalty to his country." American soldiers rescued him after each kidnapping.

"I received a lot from Americans in Iraq. I want to give back in the way God allows me," Paul said.

That included attending the funeral of Coeur d'Alene Army Spc. Nicholas Newby, killed in Baghdad by an improvised explosive device in July.

Some of Paul's friends warned him away from the funeral, worried about how he'd be received. He went anyway. When the pastor asked if anyone wanted to speak, Paul stood. Everyone in the church turned to look at him.

"I told them that I was working for Americans, and that I knew what Americans did to sacrifice. I'm here, and he gave me his life," said Paul.

Alaa Sayah's two young daughters are thriving in school in Boise. He recently attended his older daughter's holiday music program. She plays the viola.

Though he is proud of his daughters, Sayah worries they will forget their Arabic. His youngest daughter has become so fluent in English, he uses it to explain the meaning of Arabic words.

He insists the girls speak their native tongue at home.

"It's nothing against English. I got all of my jobs because of English," Sayah said, "but having two languages will be better for them than having one."

In a couple weeks, Sayah will return to Iraq and to his work on an American base. He has been a translator, working with reporters from U.S. newspapers, including the Baltimore Sun. He now works for a "logistic support company," managing a fleet of 200 buses on the base.

He's uncertain what his employment future holds, whether he'll continue traveling back and forth between the U.S. and Iraq, or move to Boise to stay.

Long separations aren't new for the family. When they were in Iraq, Sayah lived on the base and his family lived outside. But Sayah's work for the U.S. military inevitably made it too dangerous for them to stay.

Even with the war officially over, violence continues. In just the last week, the Baghdad apartment house where his mother and sister live was bombed and destroyed.

"But they are still living in the apartment. People are living daily. They don't think about tomorrow," he said.

N. Idaho City May Get Workforce Housing

BY ALISON BOGGS
Spokesman-Review

COEUR D'ALENE • A Coeur d'Alene condominium project postponed three years ago when the economy faltered has resurfaced as a rental housing proposal geared toward workers with moderate incomes.

The city of Coeur d'Alene devoted $1 million toward a facelift of an area known as Midtown in 2008. The neighborhood runs mostly along Fourth Street, a northbound arterial that connects downtown with Interstate 90.

The city also was working with its urban renewal agency, the Lake City Development Corp., and with the Idaho Housing and Finance Association to bring "workforce housing" to Midtown. In 2008, a proposal called for up to 35 condominiums in a four-story building that was to include ground-floor retail.

That project was reintroduced Dec. 21 at an LCDC board meeting as a 45-unit rental project that would offer studio, one-bedroom and two-bedroom units to people who earn between 40 percent and 60 percent of the area median income. Representatives of The Housing Co., IHFA's non-profit affordable-housing development arm, asked the urban renewal agency to contribute $447,000 toward the project, which will seek $5.3 million in federal tax credits as its primary funding source.

"We see that the market is improving for rental product," said Douglas Peterson, director of The Housing Co. "The hope is that this will bring a strong residential component to an area that doesn't have a lot of residential activity right now."

LCDC Executive Director Tony Berns said the urban renewal agency has been trying to add affordable housing units to Midtown for years. But, he said, "The world fell apart, economy-wise. The reason it's got life right now is because they've redefined the project to be rentals. The only thing that seems to be working these days is rentals. Nobody's building any condos."

The Midtown project hinges on receipt of federal tax credits. The Housing Co. would raise money for the project by selling the tax credits to investors for about 84 cents on the dollar, according to LCDC board minutes.

LCDC board members will consider the proposal again at their January board meeting.

Gingrich Plots Attack on Romney's Record

BY SHANNON MCCAFFREY
Associated Press

BURLINGTON, Iowa • After weathering a full-on assault in Iowa, Newt Gingrich and his allies planned Tuesday to hit back hard at rival Mitt Romney as the Republican presidential campaign pushed east.

The first salvo was a full-page ad in the New Hampshire Union Leader that was to appear as Gingrich touched down in the state early Wednesday. It labels the former House speaker a "Bold Reagan Conservative" and Romney a "Timid Massachusetts Moderate."

Campaigning in Iowa hours before the first in the nation caucuses got under way Tuesday night, Gingrich said his campaign will put up television ads in New Hampshire, South Carolina and Florida — the next three states to vote — that aggressively contrast his record with Romney's. And at least one pro-Gingrich super PAC was getting into the mix.

"We definitely plan to engage," said Rick Tyler, a former longtime Gingrich aide now working for the pro-Gingrich super PAC Winning our Future. "I think that Newt has signaled a communications shift in which he wants to define Romney and to draw a contrast between his record and Romney's."

Tyler declined to be specific about the group's plans. The independent political action committees are banned by law from coordinating with the candidates they are supporting.

OBAMA APPEALS TO IOWA DEMOCRATS ON CAUCUS NIGHT

BY KEN THOMAS
AND LUKE MEREDITH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Inserting his voice into a big night for Republicans, President Barack Obama was appealing to Iowa Democrats during the first balloting in the GOP presidential campaign, seeking to counter months of withering criticism in the state that launched his presidential ambitions four years ago.

Obama was hosting a live video teleconference for Democrats attending precinct caucuses across Iowa, outlining his progress during the first term and asking for their help in the upcoming campaign. Beyond the lead-off caucuses, Iowa is expected to be hotly contested in the fall election.

The president's re-election campaign emailed supporters a video of Obama's Iowa victory speech in January 2008, arguing he has kept the promises he made that night: making health care more affordable, cutting taxes for the middle class, ending the war in Iraq and reducing the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

"A new chapter in the story of 2012 starts with what happens in Iowa tonight," Mitch Stewart, a top Obama campaign aide, said in a separate email to supporters. "Most of us will watch what happens on TV — but as you do, remember that the end of this story is up to you and what you decide to do in the days and weeks ahead."

White House press secretary Jay Carney said Obama would thank supporters for their help and discuss his efforts to keep the promises

SANTORUM, ROMNEY LEAD TIGHT IOWA VOTE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES, Iowa • Rick Santorum and Mitt Romney waged a seesaw battle for supremacy in Iowa's Republican presidential caucuses Tuesday night, the opening round of a campaign to pick a challenger to President Barack Obama.

Texas Rep. Ron Paul was running a close third. The final result of the caucuses wasn't available when the Times-News went to press Tuesday night.

Returns from nearly 90 percent of the state's 1,774 precincts showed Santorum, a former Pennsylvania senator, and Romney, former governor of Massachusetts, separated by just 19 votes.

It was a fitting conclusion to a race as jumbled as any since Iowa gained the lead-off position in presidential campaigns four decades ago.

The winner was in line for bragging rights — and perhaps much more — as the Republican nominating campaign makes the turn to primaries in New Hampshire on Jan. 10, then South Carolina and Florida before the end of January.

Each of the three in the top tier strove to create a distinct identity and brought a different style to the race.

Santorum, the former Pennsylvania senator, ran the old-fashioned way, spending parts or all of 250 days campaigning in the state in hopes of emerging — as he did in the campaign's final week — as the preferred conservative alternative to Romney.

Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, brought organization and money to the table, and was aided by deep-pocketed allies who ran television commercials attacking former House Speaker Newt Gingrich and others. That allowed Romney to take the high road in person, running as a former businessman who knew how to create jobs and defeat Obama.

Paul, the Texas congressman, was something of a blend of the two approaches, with money and organization.

He drew on the support of younger caucus-goers with a libertarian-leaning approach that included a call to legalize marijuana and bring home U.S. troops from overseas.

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates • Iran closed out naval war games in the Gulf on Tuesday much the way they began last month: striking a tone of military defiance while Western powers rallied behind tougher oil and financial sanctions as a crippling tool against Tehran's nuclear program.

The standoff atmosphere — less than a week after Iran warned it could block one of the world's key oil tanker sea lanes in response to economic pressures — appeared to deepen further with an Iranian general suggesting a U.S. aircraft carrier is not welcome to return to the Gulf.

In Paris, meanwhile, France's foreign minister said there is "no doubt" that

LA ARSON SUSPECT CURSED U.S. DAYS BEFORE FIRES

BY MICHAEL R. BLOOD
AND GREG RISLING

LOS ANGELES • Harry Burkhart watched as his mother was arrested last week on fraud charges from their native Germany, and a day later he exploded in an expletive-laced rant against the U.S. at her court hearing.

That's when, authorities believe, Burkhart, angry over his mother's legal troubles, went on a nighttime rampage of arson attacks that terrorized Los Angeles and caused $3 million in damage.

Court documents unsealed Tuesday said Dorothee Burkhart, who is in her 50s, was charged with 19 counts of fraud in Frankfurt, including failing to pay for a 2004 breast-augmentation surgery and pilfering security deposits from renters.

In a brief court appearance, she appeared perplexed, wondering aloud if her son had disappeared or was dead. At one point, she said, he is mentally ill and questioned whether Nazis knew where she and her son lived.

"Where is my son? What did you do to my son?" she asked U.S. Magistrate Judge Margaret Nagle.

Harry Burkhart, 24, was being held without bail after being arrested in the arson case Monday. His mother also is being held without bail and her court hearing was delayed until Friday so she can hire an attorney.

Outside his Hollywood apartment, some neighbors described him as a loner who loitered around the busy commercial strip at night and could be heard arguing with his mother.

But Shlomo Elady, a hair stylist who regularly trimmed Burkhart's long hair, recalled someone who spoke three languages, dreamed of visiting Jerusalem and cared for a sickly mother who had trouble walking.

Elady said he was stunned that the man who lived with his mother above his Sunset Boulevard shop is suspected of torch-

TALIBAN TO OPEN QATAR OFFICE FOR PEACE TALKS

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) • The Taliban announced Tuesday they will open an office in the Persian Gulf nation of Qatar to hold talks with the United States, an unprecedented step toward a peace process that might lead to a winding down of the 10-year war in Afghanistan.

Although U.S. and Taliban representatives have met secretly several times over the past year in Europe and the Persian Gulf, this is the first time the Islamist insurgent group has publicly expressed willingness for substantive negotiations.

BODY FOUND IN FOREST IS MISSING DISPATCHER

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. • A police dispatcher last seen alive leaving a party with her boyfriend shortly before Christmas was slain, authorities said Tuesday after confirming that a body found in the wilderness over the weekend was hers. Dawna Natzke's death has been ruled a homicide, but investigators haven't determined exactly how or when she was killed, said her former boss, Hot Springs Village Police Chief Laroy Cornett.

SOURCE: TOILET DENIAL, THEN NY ISLAM CENTER ATTACK

NEW YORK (AP) • A man hurled crude firebombs at an Islamic cultural center in part because he wasn't allowed to use its bathrooms and targeted four other New York-area sites on New Year's Day because of personal grievances, a law enforcement official said Tuesday.

The 40-year-old man, of Guyanese descent, was taken into custody Tuesday after he was tracked through a stolen car with Virginia license plates believed to be at the scene of at least two of the attacks Sunday evening on a convenience store, three homes and the cultural center, police said.

video that showed a pony-tailed man emerging from a garage where a car was set ablaze.

"When they saw the security footage, they recognized him and they contacted the arson task force," a State Department official told AP, speaking on condition of anonymity because the investigations are ongoing.

Burkhart had been living in the U.S. when his mother arrived in October and went with him to the German consulate in Los Angeles to renew his passport, according to court documents.

Authorities didn't say how long Burkhart had been in Southern California, but both mother and son had the appropriate legal documents.

A federal law enforcement official, speaking on condition of anonymity because the official was not authorized to discuss the case, said Harry Burkhart was present when his mother was arrested Dec. 28 on a provisional arrest warrant.

Provisional arrest warrants are normally issued when there are criminal charges pending overseas against someone. Ordinarily, U.S. authorities then obtain an arrest warrant through the State Department and the Justice Department.

Burkhart had been in court Thursday afternoon. Harry Burkhart launched into an obscenity-laden tirade, saying "F-- the United States!" said Thom Mrozek, spokesman at the U.S. attorney's office in Los Angeles.

Mrozek said Burkhart was detained and later escorted out of the courthouse.

SEVEN LIVES LEFT? UTAH CAT SURVIVES 2 EUTHANASIA ATTEMPTS

Janita Coombs plays with her cat, Andrea, at her Syracuse, Utah, home in October 2011. West Valley city may put an end to its animal shelter gas chamber after Andrea survived a shelter's two attempts to euthanize her.

WEST VALLEY CITY, Utah (AP) • A stray cat has survived two trips to a Utah animal shelter's gas chamber, leading shelter volunteers to seek a switch of its euthanasia method to lethal injection, which they called more humane.

Volunteers with West Valley City's animal shelter were expected to appear at a city council meeting Tuesday evening to argue for the switch from carbon monoxide poisoning to injections of sodium pentobarbital.

No one adopted Andrea, a longhaired black cat with white paws and green eyes, in 30 days, so shelter officials tried to put her to death in October. She survived, so they gassed her again.

Shelter officials detected no vital signs and presumed she was dead after the second try, so they put her in a plastic bag in a cooler. But when they checked the bag, they saw she had vomited on herself and had hypothermia, but was alive.

Officials decided to stop trying to kill her. "It was just one of those things where they thought this cat obviously really wants to live," West Valley City spokesman Aaron Crim told the Salt Lake Tribune. "Let's give it a chance to find a permanent home."

Volunteers with another shelter who took her in after the ordeal said she was a bit "wobbly." But she was adopted Dec. 11, and her new owners reported she was settling in.

Volunteers say euthanasia by lethal injections of sodium pentobarbital would be more humane than the gas chamber, and also cheaper.

Shelter officials still aren't sure why the gassing failed to kill Andrea. The other cats with her in the euthanasia chamber that day all died.

Obama

he made in Iowa four years ago. But Carney said the president "has a lot of work to do before he engages aggressively in the general election. That will come in due time."

Obama was wasting little time getting back in front of voters following a Hawaiian vacation spent largely out of the spotlight. Campaign officials said Obama was expected to take questions from voters during the Iowa session, which was airing only for those who attended the caucus meetings. On Wednesday, Obama will travel to Cleveland for an event focused on the economy.

Obama was seeking to counter months of pounding by Republicans in Iowa and by the Republican National Committee, which has assailed Obama's economic record and tagged him as a president who has failed to live up to lofty expectations.

"Three years later, the president's promises of hope and change have been replaced with a record of failed leadership and policies that have made the economy worse," RNC spokeswoman Kirsten Kukowski said.

Iowa looks to be among about a dozen states that could shift either way in the 2012 campaign. Trying to build on his 2008 win there, Obama's campaign has opened eight offices in the state and had held more than 1,200 training sessions, phone banks and other events and made more than 350,000 phone calls to supporters since April.

"When the rest of the Republican field packs up their office and leaves town, we have been here, we will continue to be here and we will continue to take and treat Iowa seriously," said Democratic National Committee chairwoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz, a Florida congresswoman.

Wasserman Schultz and Rep. Bruce Braley, D-Iowa, tried to raise expectations in Iowa for Republican Mitt Romney, saying anything but a top finish in the state would bode poorly for his campaign.

Iran

Iran is moving toward a nuclear weapon and urged Europe to match America's tighter sanctions set in motion last week. Alain Juppe said the measures could include targeting Iran's Central Bank and imposing an Iranian oil embargo.

A Western snub of one of OPEC's heavyweight exporters would still leave Iran with many oil-hungry markets such as China and India — and give Tehran crucial economic lifelines to resist the U.S. and its allies. But worries that Gulf tensions could disrupt supplies sent oil above $101 a barrel and piled more pressure on Iran's currency, the rial, which hit record lows against the dollar earlier this week.

"It's clear the economy is in dire straits and the sanctions are having an impact no matter what Iranian officials say," said Salman Shaikh, director of The Brookings Doha Center in Qatar. "Hitting the oil sectors may push the economy down even further, but that doesn't mean Iran will bend to the West."

Iran has proposed restarting international talks on its nuclear program, which Tehran insists is only for peaceful energy and research purposes. The offer to reopen dialogue is widely interpreted as a sign that Western sanctions are taking a serious bite.

But the outreach could also include preconditions such as easing the economic pressures, which would likely meet strong resistance in Washington and elsewhere.

"This has become the classic Iranian approach all along with the nuclear issue: try to buy some time with offers of cooperation but then coming back with the hard line," Shaikh said.

As 10-day naval maneuvers wrapped up, Iran's army chief, Gen. Ataollah Salehi, said an "American warship" that left the Gulf should not return. He didn't cite a specific vessel, but the U.S. Navy's 5th Fleet has said that the aircraft carrier USS John C. Stennis and another vessel headed out from the Gulf and through the Strait of Hormuz last week after a visit to Dubai's Jebel Ali port.

Pentagon spokesman George Little said Tuesday the U.S. presence in the Gulf is in compliance with international law and the Navy would maintain what he called a "constant state of high vigilance" in order to ensure the flow of sea commerce.

The 5th Fleet, based in Bahrain, is one of the Pentagon's main counterbalances to Iran's expanding military role in the Gulf. France and Britain also have warships stationed in the region. In addition, U.S. allies Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates recently closed deals for major arms purchases.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Wall Street's Happy New Year: Dow up Almost 180

NEW YORK (AP) • The stock market got a big jump on a better year. After a flat 2011, stocks rose sharply Tuesday in the first trading of 2012 after investors returned from the holiday and found encouraging economic reports from the United States and around the world. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 179.82 points, or 1.4 percent, to 12,397.38, its highest close in more than five months. The Standard & Poor's 500 index, a broader gauge than the Dow, finished up almost 20 points at 1,277. The S&P finished 2011 almost exactly where it started — down a sliver, 0.04 of a point.

Fed to Regularly Forecast Interest-rate Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) • In a major shift, the Federal Reserve will start announcing four times a year how long it plans to keep short-term interest rates at existing levels, according to minutes from its December policy meeting. The shift marks the Fed's latest effort to make its communications with the public more open and explicit. The change is intended to reassure consumers and investors that they will be able to borrow cheaply well into the future. And some economists said it could lead to further Fed action to try to invigorate the economy. The Fed's first forecast for interest rates will be included in the economic projections it will issue after its Jan. 24-25 policy meeting.

On Dec. 29, a construction worker carries a steel bar for the foundation of 3 World Trade Center in New York. The eighty story office tower is one of three skyscrapers at the site under construction by developer Silverstein Properties. U.S. builders spent more in November on single-family home construction, apartment building and remodeling projects, pushing construction spending up by the largest amount since August.

Factories, Builders Boost Economy at End of Year

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • U.S. manufacturers ended 2011 with their best month of growth since the late spring. And the struggling construction industry spent more on projects for the third time in four months. The data bolstered hopes that the economy is gaining momentum and helped Wall Street start 2012 with a bang. Factories hired more workers in December, saw the most growth in new orders since April and ramped up production. U.S. builders spent more in November on single-family homes, apartments and remodeling projects.

The strong reports correspond with other positive signs for the economy. Consumer confidence is up, unemployment benefit applications have tumbled and the unemployment rate is at a three-and-a-half-year low. Economists caution that Europe's debt crisis will likely slow global growth in the first half of the year.

But on Tuesday, the outlook was mostly positive.

The Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing managers, said its manufacturing index rose to 53.9 from 52.7 in November. Readings above 50 indicate expansion. The Commerce Department said spending on construction projects rose 1.2 percent in November. The increase was the largest since a 2.2 percent rise in August.

"The trend for the U.S. economy is most decidedly to the upside," said Dan Greenhaus, an analyst at brokerage firm BTIG LLC in New York. The Dow Jones industrial average rose by 215 points in midday trading. Broader indexes also climbed. Reports that manufacturing grew in China and India, two of the world's largest economies, also drove markets higher.

U.S. manufacturing has expanded for more than two years. Factories were one of the first areas of the economy to start growing after the recession officially ended in June 2009. They faltered over the summer after Japan's March 11 earthquake disrupted auto and electronics supply chains.

The December ISM survey showed many factories have largely recovered from their slump earlier this year. Exports rose despite the trouble in Europe. Growth in new orders means output will likely increase in the coming months. And U.S. factories hired last month at the fastest pace since June, an optimistic sign ahead of Friday's important measure of job growth in December. "All in all, an upbeat report," said Peter Newland, an economist at Barclays Capital, who noted that the stronger manufacturing activity should contribute to faster economic growth in the October-December quarter.

Construction spending rose 1.2 percent in November to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $807.1 billion. While that's barely half the $1.5 trillion that economists consider healthy, home construction has begun a gradual rebound and likely added to the nation's economic growth in 2011.

Jan. Business Forum Nears

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • The Jan. 10 registration deadline for this month's Southern Idaho Business Forum is approaching. The forum is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Jan. 17 at the Jerome Country Club, 649 Golf Course Road.

It's designed to educate businesses on topics such as economics, accounting, performance management, succession planning, strategic planning, budgeting and marketing. The topic is "The right tools to build and maintain your business." Luncheon speaker John Glerum is director of the Technical and Entrepreneurial Center at Boise State University. Hosts are Bryan Matsuoka, director of the Idaho Small Business Development Center; Marjorie Schmidt, workforce consultant for the Idaho Department of Labor; and Larry Hall, director of Southern Idaho Rural Development. The registration fee is $15 and lunch is included. After the Jan. 10 registration deadline, the cost is $20. To register, call 732-6450 or visit www.csi.edu/isbdc.

Glanbia Backs Habitat Building Effort

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Glanbia Foods has lent its backing to a June 4-8 Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley blitz build of two homes for low-income Magic Valley families. Nationally, Habitat for Humanity's Home Builders Blitz 2012 seeks to build 250 homes during one June week. "Thanks to Glanbia's sponsorship of this event and the continued support from local contractors, (two Magic Valley) families will realize the dream of homeownership," Local Habitat Executive Director Linda Fleming said in a written release. "We are so grateful to this generous company and to these home builders that are working to make our community a better place." Locally, Eric Lott of I.B. Panels is gathering subcontractors and suppliers to obtain the materials and professional labor needed for the build. The first informational meeting for the build will be held at 5:30 a.m. Jan. 11 at the ReStore/Habitat office at 669 Eastland Drive S., Twin Falls. So far, at least 13 local companies have committed to take place in the build. Fleming said the effort is in need of painters, finish carpenters, flooring installers, roofers, plumbers and heating, ventilation and air conditioning companies.

Mocha Man

A Twin Falls businessman goes ‘beyond the call of duty’ to deliver custom coffee to a growing clientele.

TWIN FALLS • The scent of fresh coffee and the rock music of the ‘80s filled the cab as John Kelley stopped for his next delivery. He climbed from the driver’s seat and entered the heart of the custom-designed truck — a small kitchen where coffee beans, grinder, espresso machine and syrups waited. While a Prince song played from the truck’s speakers, Kelley reached for a pinch of this, a dab of that. Before long, a steaming cup of mocha sat on the counter. He was out of the truck a couple of minutes later, greeting a client.

“Try that to see what you think,” he told Gracie Prescott, a hairdresser at D&L Academy of Hair Design in downtown Twin Falls. She had ordered a Three Muskeeteer, one of Kelley’s unique mochas. “Perfect,” Prescott said. Another happy customer. Kelley owns and operates Mocha N’ Motion, a coffee delivery business that caters to a growing clientele around Twin Falls. He started selling coffee the day after Black Friday in 2010. It took years of planning, however, before he opened his company-on-wheels. Kelley worked in construction before a dour economy forced him out. Wanting to do something en-

RESOLVED: MORE FIBER, MORE SUSHI, MORE CHOCOLATE-COVERED CRICKETS

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

It’s a new year in dining, and that means resolutions for many — such as trying new foods or staying away from others. Here’s what seven Magic Valley folks plan to do in 2012:

Mysty Tyler, Jerome

Tyler

“I’m going to start a blood-type diet. ... A lot of people don’t know they can do it and be more successful at it than other types of diets.” Tyler said her sister tried the diet and lost several pounds.

That’s her goal, as well. “I want to lose my baby fat. ... I get to eat lots of red meat, no dairy, gluten-free products.”

Sandra McDannel, Twin Falls

McDannel

“I have to eat better this year, get more fiber in my diet. More fruits. I was very bad this past year. Knowing my body, I feel like it’s time for me to start eating healthier.”

Silvia Martinez, McCammon

Martinez, who was visiting family in Twin Falls over the holidays, lost a few pounds in the past year by growing — and using — her own garden. Things she wants to try in 2012 include spicy Malaysian recipes. Why? Because her daughter lives in Malaysia and that sparked her interest in the country’s food. “I’d love to try their tamales.”

Martinez

Elisha Hodge, Jerome

“No more fast food. It’s easy when you’re on the go all the time, but it’s not good for you. ... I plan to eat a lot of sushi. Right now I eat it about twice a

Can Do Aluminum?

Craft breweries nationwide have been embracing aluminum for their beers.

BY DANIEL FROMSON
Special to The Washington Post

You could almost see the woman wince. The smiling, pink-faced man at the beer store had just recommended a craft beer sold in a can. “I’m going to a dinner party,” she said. Couldn’t he suggest something bottled?

I restrained myself from interrupting, but here’s what I wanted to say: You’re going to have to get used to this. In fact, we all are. Almost conspiratorially, craft breweries nationwide — from such giants as Sierra Nevada Brewing to upstarts like the District of Columbia’s DC Brau — have been embracing aluminum. Some of them, such as Florida-based Cigar City Brewing, are among the most highly regarded breweries in the country. In certain circles, 2011 might be remembered as the Year of the Can.

Canned craft beer has been around since 2002, when Colorado’s Oskar Blues Brewery began canning its flagship Dale’s Pale Ale, but it didn’t take off until recently. In 2009, about 50 craft breweries, mostly small ones, packaged beer recipes, often soliciting the help of neighbors to try his brews. They'd tell him which ones they liked, which ones they didn't, and then Kelley would go back to work on them again.

"How in the world are we going to find a product that will sell?" he remembers asking his wife, Kimberly. The answer came from Treasure Valley Coffee in Boise, where he buys dry-roasted beans. All of the products he uses come from Idaho, Kelley said.

And because he owns his business outright — he put around $100,000 into buying and designing the delivery truck — the only overhead he has is insurance and fuel, spending between $450 and $500 on gas a month.

"It's been a really good year," he said in December.

Kelley never served in the armed forces, but you wouldn't know it by looking at his green-and-white truck. Its sides depict a cup of coffee parachuting from the sky. A motto is painted above the door: "Serving above and beyond the call of duty."

The mission: Drop into a person's day and give them service and a product that will make them smile.

His clients, who call or text him their orders, have about as much affection for Kelley as he does for them.

"He's just like a good friend," said Jim Purves, owner of Clos Office Supply. He and daughter Shelley like Kelley's pumpkin and Mexican mochas.

"The pumpkin mocha is to die for," Shelley Purves said.

Kelley begins his days visiting clients at the College of Southern Idaho, call centers and doctors' offices before heading to downtown shops. Some of his clients have come on board within the past couple of months; others have been with him all year.

"He's a lot of fun," said Katie Bowman, a hairdresser at D&L. A few of the women at the salon order from Mocha N' Motion several times a week. "It's delicious. It's much better than Starbucks — better and cheaper."

What's most popular? Kelley sells drip coffee, but most of his customers seem to prefer the sweet stuff, Kelley said. And for non-coffee drinkers, no worries: He offers hot chocolate. Bagels and muffins also are on the menu.

Candy Retmier, an office worker at Dr. Alan Olmstead's dermatology office, likes to order a bagel with her favorite brew, a skinny vanilla latte.

"Let me toast it for you," Kelley told her. "You'll like it better toasted!"

When he had gone back to his truck, Retmier said: "It's great service."

"He gives amazing service," Staci Carter, a client at The Locker Room, echoed a little while later. "I used to be a fan of Starbucks, but not anymore."

Kelley said he is considering buying a stationary shop, or even hiring an employee sometime. But it's a tough decision, he said, because he likes to oversee the making of every cup of mocha.

It has taken him a year to get his technique down, and his customers don't seem to be complaining. If they ever do complain, he said, he'll give them their money back or make them another brew.

"I'm so into customer service," Kelley said. "I want people to be happy." After a few laughs with another client, Kelley was back in his truck, on his way to his next stop.

year, but now that I have a better-paying job I can eat it more often. Once a month would be awesome."

Tom Gonzales, Jerome

Gonzales

"I plan to eat healthier with less fat, less carbohydrates, that stuff." One way he hopes to do this is by eating less at fast-food establishments. "And eat more salads."

Sydney Linch, Twin Falls

Linch

"It's always a goal to eat healthier, more organic stuff. I make my own baby food." Linch, who has three daughters, said it's convenient to make things from a box, but she believes preservatives play a big part in causing health problems. "It's good to teach kids the right way to eat instead of the fast, convenient way. ... I plan to make more of my own foods."

Maria Sanchez, Twin Falls

Sanchez

A Drink That Combines 2 American Tastes

THE WASHINGTON POST

Named after the now-defunct Diamondback Lounge in Baltimore's Lord Baltimore Hotel, this cocktail proves that two great American tastes — rye whiskey and apple brandy — are terrific together. Add the French twist of yellow Chartreuse (the lower-proof, more honeyed of the famous liqueurs), and you've got a rich cocktail that's perfect for a cold winter night.

This recipe is adapted from "The PDT Cocktail Book," by Jim Meehan (Sterling Epicure, 2011).

Diamondback

1 serving.

Ice
 2 ounces rye whiskey

1/2 ounce apple brandy
 1/2 ounce yellow Chartreuse

Fill a mixing glass halfway with ice. Add the rye, apple brandy and Chartreuse. Stir vigorously, then strain into a chilled cocktail (martini) glass.

From Toques to Tattoos, a Kitchen Culture Change

BY MICHELE KAYAL
For The Associated Press

Stephanie Izard looks like the girl next door, all T-shirt and curly pony tail. Until she wipes the sweat from her forehead with the back of her hand. And then you see it.

The fish tattoo. "Cooking is an art and tattoos are another form of art," says the chef-owner of Chicago's acclaimed Girl and the Goat restaurant, showing off the delicate drawing on the inside of her wrist. Roll up her pants and a pea tendril struggles up her calf, a tiny plant becoming strong. A bright green gecko sits on one hip. A dolphin resides somewhere unshowable. And across her back, the piece de resistance — a blossoming basil plant encircled by cartoonish flying pigs.

"People come into our restaurant and say 'Do you only hire line chefs with tattoos?'" says Izard, the first and only woman to win Bravo's "Top Chef." "No, we just happen to have lot of them covered in them."

Once considered the province of sailors, bikers, ex-cons and, of course, college hipsters, tattoos have become standard attire in professional kitchens, a symbol of culinary culture as surely as a toque. Whether the drawings are egg beaters, lemon meringue pies or ancient tribal motifs, body art in the kitchen is now so mainstream that everyone from lowly kitchen rats to celebrity chefs proudly display their work on television, magazine covers, high-end catalogues and in the pages of their cookbooks, making culinistas ever more like rock stars.

"It used to be those cockamamie chef hats that denoted an expertise with a spatula," says Rocky Rakovic, editor of Inked magazine, a publication dedicated to tattoo culture and that has featured several chefs. "But now time in many kitchens is represented by the amount of tattoos one has."

Meat cutting diagrams — the different cuts of a pig or cow denoted by dotted lines — and kitchen knives done like daggers are popular with chefs, tattoo artists say. Cupcakes, hot dogs, pies, equipment — a stand mixer showing a reflection in the stainless steel bowl receives raves from tattoo connoisseurs — are standard when you're talking food tattoos. Food Network chef Duff Goldman, also known as The Ace of Cakes, has a whisk.

Hugh Acheson, chef-partner of three acclaimed Georgia restaurants, has four tattoos himself, including the names of his wife and children, as well as a Mayan god he got during a trip to the Yucatan peninsula when he was 16 (he swears he was sober). His favorite is the radish on the inside of his left forearm, which commemorates the first plant he grew at his house more than a decade ago, and which gets the spotlight in his new cookbook's food photos.

But lots of chefs make little or no reference to their profession. In those cases, the ink — and the reasons for getting it — are as individual as the chef.

Marc Forgione's eight tattoos represent turning points in his life or career: the Navajo art that inspired him to open his own restaurant; the "1621" on both biceps documenting his recreation of the first Thanksgiving, the meal that cinched his 2010 win on the Food Network's "The Next Iron Chef"; the tribal infinity symbol his parents gave him on his 18th birthday.

"I use them almost like a roadmap of my life," says the 32-year-old chef-owner of Restaurant Marc Forgione. "They all have their own little story. It's a badge of memory."

Chefs with tattoos are nothing new, Rakovic says. What is new is their emergence from the bowels of restaurant life onto television and into the spotlight. But industry watchers like Dana Cowin, editor-in-chief of Food & Wine magazine, say the volume of ink has definitely increased during the past five years or so — and it should be no surprise.

"If you look at a chef with beautiful tats you might also be looking at a chef that presents very beautifully plated food," says Cowin, whose July 2009 cover featured the elaborately inscribed arms of chefs Nate Appleman and Vinny Dotolo and drew fire from a few readers who thought it was in poor taste. "So the opposite conclusion can be drawn: not 'They're heathens,' but, 'They must be appreciators of art.'"

Which is exactly why chefs like them. "Chefs are artistic people who get inspired by things and that has a lot to do with tattoos," Forgione says. "We're kind of artistic, rebellious, a little crazy."

Dinner in 35 Minutes: Mushroom Pasta

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Here's a midweek dish that begs you to invite company over to share it. The combination of delicate mushrooms is a refined upgrade from the usual earthiness of darker varieties.

The sauce is rich, so serve this with a salad of peppery or slightly bitter greens, or with sauteed broccoli rabe.

Adapted from "Takashi's Noodles," by Takashi Yagihashi with Harris Salat (Ten Speed Press, 2009).

Medley of Japanese Mushrooms With Orecchiette

4 servings.

1 piece thin, center-cut bacon
Kosher salt, for the cooking water, plus 1/4 optional teaspoon for the dish
8 ounces dried orecchiette (ear-shaped) pasta
1 large shallot
1 large clove garlic
Handful flat-leaf parsley leaves, for garnish
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
12 shiitake mushrooms
1 cup (about 2 ounces) maitake mushrooms
6 ounces enoki mushrooms
3/4 cup half-and-half

1/2 cup freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
Pinch freshly ground black pepper

Line a plate with a few layers of paper towels. Cook the bacon over medium heat until it is just crisped, in a saute pan or skillet that's large enough to eventually hold all of the mushrooms and pasta, then transfer the bacon to the plate to drain. Turn off the heat under the pan or skillet.

Bring a large pot of water to a boil over high heat. Add a generous pinch of the salt, then the pasta. Cook until just al dente; drain in a colander set in the sink, reserving 1/2 cup of the cooking water.

While the pasta is cooking, mince the shallot and garlic (it's OK to pile them together). Finely chop the parsley.

Add the oil to the pan or skillet; heat over medium heat, then add the shallot and garlic. Cook, stirring, for about 2 minutes, then add the butter and reduce the heat to low, allowing the butter to melt slowly. The shallot should be softened.

mushroom stems. Use a brush to clean the caps, or rinse them briefly under cool running water, then cut the caps into 1/4-inch slices. Clean and stem the maitake mushrooms. Clean and stem the enoki mushrooms, then cut their long stalks in half.

Toss the mushrooms into the pan or skillet so they are evenly coated. Increase the heat to medium-high; cook for about 4 minutes, stirring, so the mushrooms are slightly wilted and become fragrant. Reduce the heat to medium; add the drained pasta, half-and-half and cheese, stirring until they are well incorporated. If the resulting sauce seems too thick (keeping in mind that it will continue to thicken a bit once it's off the heat), add some or all of the reserved pasta cooking water. Season with the pepper; taste, and add the 1/4 teaspoon of salt if needed.

Divide among individual plates or wide, shallow bowls; crumble a little of the crisped bacon over each portion, then sprinkle equal amounts of parsley on top. ## A Pudding Film by Any Mother Name

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: What do you call the film that forms on top of pudding? My mother always called it "mother."

Answer: I'm not sure if there is an official name, although it is often called a skin.

"The Oxford English Dictionary, Shorter Edition" defines skin as "a film resembling skin on the surface of a liquid." Since a pudding starts as a liquid, that works.

However, the term "mother" can mean something that grows in a fermenting liquid. Mother of vinegar, for instance, is a growth that can be used to start another batch of vinegar.

Since you don't remove the film from pudding to start another batch of pudding, it would seem that mother isn't a good fit. But far be it from me to contradict your mother — my mother would skin me for that.

Time to Tone Down the Heavy Eating

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Creamy in texture without being cream-based, this soup satisfies with vegetables, wild rice and rosemary.

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

After all that heavy holiday eating, it's good to tone it down a bit for the new year.

Whether you resolve to make a commitment to better eating or just want a palate cleanser from all the roasts and dips, this light and creamy soup will do the trick. Creamy in texture without being cream-based, this soup satisfies with vegetables, wild rice and rosemary.

We've opted for quick and lean protein in the form of chicken breast, but shrimp would be another easy, tasty option.

Creamy Rosemary Wild Rice Soup

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes. Servings: 6.

1 tablespoon olive oil
8 ounces boneless, skinless chicken breast, cubed
1 medium yellow onion, diced
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 stalks celery, diced
1 large carrot, peeled and diced
1 large parsnip, peeled and diced
3 tablespoons minced fresh rosemary

1 quart (4 cups) low-sodium chicken broth
1/2 cup wild rice
2 tablespoons instant flour (such as Wondra)
2 cups fat-free half-and-half
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

In a large saucepan over medium-high, heat the olive oil. Add the cubed chicken breast and sear until browned, 4 to 5 minutes. The meat does not need to be cooked through.

Add the onion, garlic, celery, carrot and parsnip, then cook until browned, about another 3 to 4 minutes. Add the rosemary, chicken broth and wild rice. Bring to a simmer and cover. Cook for 45 minutes, or until the rice is tender.

Add the instant flour and cook, stirring constantly, for 3 minutes, or until thickened. Add the half-and-half and heat, but do not boil (the half-and-half will separate). Season with salt and pepper. Per serving: 210 calories; 40 calories from fat (18 percent of total calories); 4 g fat (1 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 25 mg cholesterol; 27 g carbohydrate; 15 g protein; 3 g fiber; 220 mg sodium.

A WARMING WINTER TODDY

THE WASHINGTON POST

Toddies are a wonderful, warming first drink to serve at gatherings. This version includes the dynamic duo of rye and apple brandy, along with maple syrup and pumpkin puree.

This recipe is adapted from "The PDT Cocktail Book," by Jim Meehan (Sterling Epicure, 2011).

Pumpkin Toddy

1 serving.

5 ounces just-boiled water
1 ounce apple brandy
1/2 ounce rye whiskey
1/2 ounce freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/2 ounce homemade or store-bought (unspiced) pumpkin puree
2 dashes Angostura bitters

Warm a mug with a little of the boiled water, then pour out the water. Combine the apple brandy, rye, lemon juice, maple syrup, pumpkin pie mix and bitters in the just-warmed mug; stir well. Top with the remaining boiled water, then stir again. Serve warm.

Dinner in 25 Minutes: Sesame Chicken

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

When I first made this recipe — ahem, years ago — cilantro wasn't available at most grocery stores, and cookbook authors referred to it as "coriander," as was the case for this recipe.

These days, when cilantro is in the ingredient list, I look for lime to be included as well. It was quite easy to substitute lime juice for the original lemon. The result: yet another quick way to cook chicken on a weeknight.

Serve with slices of avocado drizzled with a mild olive oil.

Adapted from "A Chef's Tale," by Pierre Franey with Richard Flaste and Bryan Miller (Knopf, 1994).

Sesame-Coated Chicken

4 servings.

1/2 cup sesame seeds (preferably a mixture of black and white, just for interest)
4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (no tenderloins; 1 1/4 pounds total)
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
3/4-inch piece fresh ginger root
1 or 2 limes
Leaves from 6 to 8 stems cilantro (may substitute flat-leaf parsley)
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
1 teaspoon toasted sesame oil
4 tablespoons (1/2 stick)

DEB LINDSEY • THE WASHINGTON POST

unsalted butter
1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce

Spread the sesame seeds on a plate.

Trim off and discard any fat from the chicken. Place the chicken between pieces of plastic wrap and pound lightly all over so the pieces have an even thickness (1/2 to 3/4 inch). Season them lightly all over with salt and pepper, then gently press the chicken into the sesame seeds so the chicken is coated evenly.

Peel, then grate the ginger root to yield about 2 teaspoons. Finely grate the lime zest to yield about 1 teaspoon, then squeeze the lime(s) to yield about 2 tablespoons of juice. Coarsely chop the cilantro to yield 3 tablespoons.

Heat the vegetable oil and sesame oil over medium heat in a nonstick skillet that's large enough to hold the chicken in a single layer. Add the chicken and cook for about 5 minutes, adjusting the heat as needed so the sesame seeds don't burn. Turn the chicken over and cook for about 4 minutes, until it is cooked through and lightly browned. Transfer to a platter (preferably warmed) and cover loosely to keep warm.

Use paper towels to wipe out the skillet, then return it to medium heat. Add the butter and swirl to coat as it melts.

Add the ginger; cook, swirling or stirring, for a few minutes so the butter turns a light brown. Stir in the lime juice and the soy sauce until well incorporated.

Pour the pan sauce over the chicken, then sprinkle with the cilantro and lime zest. Serve right away.

James Bond Shaken as Gin Seeks to Reclaim Its Place in Martini

The House of Bols Cocktail Bar in Amsterdam gives visitors a chance to sample cocktails made with gin.

BY JOHN MARIANI
Bloomberg News

Ever since James Bond ordered a martini, "shaken and not stirred," made with vodka, in Ian Fleming's 1958 novel "Dr. No," gin's popularity began to sink.

While vodka has cannily capitalized on the youth market, gin, the other white liquor, hasn't been a hot category for decades. Gin sales have been soaring in China, India and Russia, but in the top markets like the Philippines, the U.S. and Spain shipments have dropped or remained flat, except for premium imports.

Of course, purists would never dream of making a martini with anything but gin, whose dryness is the subject of countless jokes, as in the instructions to "have a bartender just glance at the vermouth bottle" before pouring the gin into a shaker. A few other classic cocktails demand gin, the Gibson, the gimlet, the negroni, the French 75 and the Singapore sling, but none has the cachet of newer cocktails like the saketini or Cosmopolitan.

Three hundred years ago, gin was all the rage. Originally created by Dutch physician Franciscus Sylvius, gin was used to treat everything from gallstones to bubonic plague.

Cheap to produce, gin became the drink of the poor, with 7,500 gin shops in 18th-century London, whose squalor and dissipation were depicted in Hogarth's "Gin Lane" engravings.

One innkeeper of the day advertized "Drunk for a penny, Dead drunk for twopenny, Clean straw for nothing!" During Prohibition in America "bathtub gin" could literally be made by anyone with access to neutral spirits.

Gin's name derives from "genever," the Dutch name for a spirit that uses juniper as its principal flavoring. Gin is just one of many genevers, which may have many different flavorings. The minimum alcohol level required by the European Union is 37.5 percent. In the U.S. it is 40. The two main types are Hollands and London. The term "London" once connoted a gin made in or near London, but is now a general term.

For a full immersion course in gin-ology, visit the House of Bols Cocktail & Genever Experience in Amsterdam, just across from the city's Van Gogh Museum. During a self-guided tour you'll learn the history of the Genever Co., founded by Lucas Bols in 1575, and pass through a gorgeously lighted Hall of Taste where you can touch and smell the ingredients that go into genever, and sniff from 36 "puffers" of flavorings from strawberry to white mint, coffee to peach.

The tour ends at a bar/lounge called the World of Cocktails, where they'll make you any of hundreds of cocktails made from scores of Bols genevers. There's even a Ladies Night special discount, and you can sign up for the Bols Bartending Academy to become a registered bartender.

You will also learn the proper way to drink genevers, which involves leaning over to take a sip from a full shot glass on the table without picking it up. And if you follow a beer with a chaser of genever, it's called a kopstoot (headbutt) in Flanders.

Bols sells its products worldwide, but while new vodkas — from improbable places — seem to appear in the market every month, few producers anywhere seem to making new gins. So I thought a tasting of well-established gins was an easy way to tackle what's out there.

Professionals usually taste whiskies cut with a little water, but who would ever drink gin with water? I tried them straight.

Beefeater London Dry Gin ($20): Beefeater is a true London gin, "distilled in the heart of the city," at a high 47 percent alcohol, so it's very lush. When I poured a little from the bottle, its aroma of juniper, Seville oranges and lemon bounded out of the glass. Very aromatic, Beefeater is complex and wonderful on the rocks, but also good for a Gibson, a martini garnished with cocktail onions.

Gordon's London Dry Gin ($17): Gordon's is based on a 1769 formula, with a "By Appointment by Her Majesty the Queen." The weak nose is a little sharp and it's a fairly bland, minty gin that would do well as a mixer with tonic or in a negroni.

Seagram's Extra Dry ($14): "Extra Dry" means little since all gins are distilled dry. This has a light aroma of citrus that floats over the palate, with a distinctly American taste — punchy, with not too much alcohol (40 percent), fruity and fleshy. At $14 you can see why it's such a big seller in the U.S. My father, a smart man, always used to have bottles of Seagrams and Gilbey's in the liquor cabinet. He'd use the Gilbey's for those who asked for gin on the rocks or with tonic, the Seagrams to make a perfect martini. He was right.

Bombay Sapphire East ($25): Worth every penny, with 42 percent alcohol, this British product is a stylish gin rife with aromatics, many stenciled on the bottle, like Thai lemongrass and Vietnamese black peppercorns. They make it unusual and somewhat exotic, the kind of gin you might have expected in a Singapore sling at the Long Bar in Raffles Hotel, before heading out to tend your rubber plantation.

Tanqueray Special Dry English Gin ($25): For many gin lovers this is the apex of London gins, highly refined, bursting with aromatics and tropical fruit, all balanced with spice notes that linger on the palate. It's almost creamy and is best enjoyed on its own or in the very driest martini a bartender can make, with a lemon peel, not an olive.

OBITUARIES

Sept. 18, 1927-Jan. 1, 2012

LAS VEGAS • Scott L Bolton, 84, of Las Vegas, Nev., and formerly of Dietrich and Kimberly, passed away Sunday, Jan. 1, 2012, in Las Vegas, Nev.

Scott proudly served his country for 20 years before retiring as a master sergeant in the United States Air Force. While in the military, he served in World War II as well as the Korean War.

He was preceded in death by his daughter, Cornelia Bolton. Scott leaves to cherish his memory his wife, M. June Bolton; six children, Jackie Clay, Mary Hennessy, Carol Andersen, Marilyn Mills, Scott Bolton Jr. and Shawna Reed; 17 grandchildren; 24 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandchild; three sisters; and one brother.

Visitation will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 7, with a service following at 11 a.m., both at Oasis Park Ward, 1550 Buchanan in Boulder City, Nev., and a graveside service with military honors at noon at the Southern Nevada Veterans Memorial Cemetery.

Arrangements are being handled by Palm Northwest Mortuary, 6701 N. Jones, Las Vegas, NV 89131; 702-464-8460.

Patrick W. Rasmuson

March 17, 1950-Dec. 25, 2011

LAS VEGAS • Patrick W. Rasmuson, 61, passed away Sunday, Dec. 25, 2011, in Las Vegas, Nev.

He was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, youngest son of Whitney and Dorothy Rasmuson. Longtime resident of Burley, Idaho, he attended schools in Burley, Moscow and Rexburg. Pat operated the family farm, built a home on the Burley farmland and was caregiver to his mother until her death in 2004. Pat married for the first time in 2003 to Jenny Jeme'ez, formerly from Costa Rica. They resided in Las Vegas, Nev.

Pat leaves behind a loving wife, Jenny; siblings, Sue DiLullo, Karen Mungall and Jim Rasmuson; four nieces; five nephews; and many friends and relatives.

A memorial will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 7, at the Canyon Ridge Christian Church, 6200 W. Lone Mountain Road in Las Vegas, Nev.

Arlene Marva Fairchild

Aug. 27, 1963-Dec. 30, 2011

JEROME • Arlene Marva Fairchild, 48, of Jerome, passed away Friday, Dec. 30, 2011, at her home.

She was born Aug. 27, 1963, in Twin Falls, the daughter of Orvil Isaac Fairchild and Ilene Coombs. Arlene was raised in the Magic Valley, where she attended school. She raised two sons, Jeremy and Jerrad. Arlene enjoyed socializing with her friends but especially loved spending time with her children and grandchildren, including camping and other outdoor activities.

She is survived by her sons, Jeremy (Trenea) Fairchild and Jerrad (Ami) Little; eight grandchildren; two sisters, Louisa and Sherrie; one brother, Dean; and many extended family members and friends. She is preceded in death by her parents; and her sister, Donna.

A celebration of Arlene's life will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 7, at the Home Church, 900 N. Lincoln in Jerome, with Pastor Scott Worthington officiating.

In lieu of flowers, Arlene's family suggests that memorials be made to the Fairchild Funeral Fund at any Pioneer Federal Credit Union branch or contact Ryan Inchausti at 320-7205 or Bill Perreira at 539-9864.

Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Dora D. Young

July 9, 1918-Dec. 30, 2011

BURLEY • Dora Dean Young, of Burley, passed away Friday, Dec. 30, 2011, at the age of 93.

Dora was born in Redmesa, Colo., on July 9, 1918, to Lawrence Joseph and Ida May Devenport Dean. At the age of 5, she moved with her family to Salt Lake City, Utah, where she lived, loved, laughed and grew into a beautiful young woman. She much preferred playing tennis and softball or tumbling than learning how to cook or sew. She married C. Bruce Young on June 8, 1937, in the Salt Lake LDS Temple. Together, they raised four children, Farrell, Marvin, Paul and Darla.

She eventually learned all the necessary homemaking skills that helped her raise her family and keep them well fed and well clothed. However, she never lost her interest in sports. She bowled in a women's league until she was nearly 70 years old and played tennis, volleyball and softball with her children and the neighbors' children as they grew up. She loved to play ping-pong with her grandchildren and told them that they weren't allowed to beat her at that game until they were 16 years old. When she could no longer play, she became an ardent TV supporter of the Atlanta Braves baseball team and anything that looked like tennis on television.

In 1944, they relocated to Boise from Salt Lake City. They made a move to Burley in 1959 and, for the last 52 years, Dora has been a delightful presence around town. People have known her in the bowling alley, in the senior center, at church and in the homes of those who needed a little cheering up or a little attention from a kind neighbor. Dora worked at Cassia Memorial Hospital for many years and enjoyed her associations there.

Dora was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in all the auxiliaries throughout her life. She and her husband served as missionaries to Russellville, Alabama. Upon their return to Burley, they served as workers together in the Boise Temple.

Dora was a peaceful, unassuming, kind and devoted mother of four children, a grandmother of 25, a great-grandmother of 95, and great-great-grandmother of two — and counting — and she knew them all by name.

She always had a treat, a smile and a kind word for those who came to visit her. She was always up to date on the latest BYU athletic accomplishments as well as other world happenings. She enjoyed surprising her grandkids with her superb knowledge of the sporting events of the day and carried on a very intelligent conversation right up to the end. For years, Dora completed daily crossword puzzles in ink and was very good at the game of Scrabble. No one can deny her great knowledge of the English language.

She is survived by her husband, Bruce of Burley; son, Farrell (Doratha) Young of Rexburg; son, Paul (Susan) Young of Burley; daughter, Darla (Barry) Johnson of Idaho Falls; and daughter-in-law, Diane Young of Springville, Utah. Also surviving her are 25 grandchildren; 95 great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; her brother, Harold; her sister, Marva; and her son, Marvin Young.

The funeral will be held at noon Saturday, Jan. 7, at the Burley LDS 3rd and 7th Ward Church, 2200 Oakley Ave. in Burley, with Bishop Dan Alvey conducting. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 6, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10:30 until 11:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Fred Milano of Dion and the Belmonts Dies at 72

BY KAREN MATTHEWS
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Fred Milano, who made rock and roll history on doo-wop hits with Dion and the Belmonts in the 1950s and continued to perform while starting a late-in-life career with the New York City Department of Correction, has died. He was 72.

Milano died Sunday, three weeks after his lung cancer was diagnosed, said Warren Gradus, who joined the Belmonts in 1963. Milano lived in Massapequa, on Long Island, and died in a hospital, Gradus said.

Dion DiMucci, the lead singer who left the Belmonts in 1960, said on his Facebook page Tuesday, "May he rest in peace and rock on in heaven."

Milano and three friends from the Bronx formed the Belmonts in the mid-1950s, borrowing their name from the borough's Belmont Avenue. They became Dion and the Belmonts after DiMucci joined in 1958.

Milano sang tenor on hits like "A Teenager in Love" and

"Where or When."

The Belmonts continued to perform and to record with different lineups after DiMucci left for a solo career. Gradus said Milano was performing with the Belmonts at casinos and other venues just weeks ago.

There was strife between DiMucci and Belmonts members, who were not pleased when DiMucci was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame without them in 1989.

In his Facebook posting, DiMucci said Milano "was very savvy with harmonies" and added, "We had our ups and downs through the years but that's how things go in families, even rock-and-roll families."

Milano went back school in middle age and joined the Department of Correction in 2003.

In his position as a legal coordinator at the Rikers Island jail complex, he helped inmates research their cases and taught a legal research class, said Karen Powell, director of law libraries for the department.

St. Trinian's cartoonist Ronald Searle Dies at 91

BY RAPHAEL SATTER
Associated Press

LONDON • British cartoonist Ronald Searle, the creator of the willfully wicked schoolgirls of St. Trinian's who amused generations of Britons, has died, his family said Tuesday. He was 91.

Searle was a prolific illustrator who drew for The New Yorker, Punch, and Walt Disney but it was the fictional girls' boarding school where the students ran riot that most captured the public imagination.

The long-legged, leering schoolgirls drank, smoked and generally cut a swath of destruction; their weapon-wielding antics were colored by Searle's morbid sense of humor. His satire of the venerable English school system struck a chord, launching a series of hit films, including one recent incarnation starring Colin Firth, Gemma Arterton and Russell Brand.

Searle's secret, as one early profile noted, was to turn "the very epitome of decency and polite tradition for every right-thinking Englishman" into "a place of terror more hellish than anything conceived since the days of Hieronymus Bosch and Pieter Brueghel."

Searle's dark streak may well have been informed by his experiences as a soldier during World War II. Born in Cambridge on March 3, 1920, his promising career as cartoonist was interrupted by his capture by the Japanese at Singapore. He spent the rest of the conflict under atrocious conditions as a prisoner-of-war, but somehow managed to keep drawing despite beatings and bouts of malaria and beriberi.

His drawings of camp life were published following his liberation in 1945 in fellow prisoner Russell Bradon's account of his own captivity, "The Naked Island."

St. Trinian's sly schoolgirls made him famous, but Searle long insisted that the students were just "a small part of my work."

Beer

in cans; now there are close to 150, and they aren't all small. By the end of 2012, at least half of the 25 largest U.S. craft breweries will be selling canned beer, twice as many as the year before.

Even Boston Beer, maker of Samuel Adams, is working with several manufacturers to develop cans for its products, according to its president, Jim Koch, who used to be firmly in the anti-can camp. "There will come a day," he says, "when I will feel comfortable putting Sam Adams in a can."

So what accounts for the mainstreaming of what Oskar Blues once dubbed the Canned Beer Apocalypse? For one thing, cans help beer stay fresh by blocking light, which can turn it skunky, and by keeping out oxygen better than many bottles do. Made from recycled materials and easy to recycle, they also appeal to sustainability-oriented breweries, and they're more portable than glass, which helps explain why they've caught on in outdoor-activity Meccas such as the Rockies.

In addition, although the decision to can comes with steep up-front costs — for special equipment and bulk can orders — brewers save money in the long run. "A bottling line would take up almost half of our warehouse, whereas a canning line has a very small footprint," says DC Brau's chief officer, Brandon Skall. Shipping is cheaper, too, because cans are lighter than glass.

MATT MCCLAIN • THE WASHINGTON POST
Sixpoint's Diesel comes in a 16-ounce can.

Still, cans aren't perfect. Their plastic linings, like those of most other food and beverage cans, usually contain Bisphenol A, a chemical that has been linked to endocrine and reproductive problems, and the linings sometimes break down over time, which can put beer in contact with metal, imparting off flavors. "They're not really ideal for beer that people are going to want to age," says Joey Redner, owner of Cigar City Brewing, which will continue to use bottles for its limited releases.

Even if attitudes toward cans are changing, many people don't like the idea of craft beer cozying into containers whose cultural status has long been defined by Bud, beans and Spam. Dogfish Head Craft Brewery's Sam Calagione, for example, says his focus has been to elevate beer to the level of wine, a mission best served by gravitating toward 750-milliliter bottles, not 12-ounce aluminum tubes.

For Boston Beer's Koch, the main problem with cans is how they affect beer's taste. Although many brewers disagree with him, he believes that tiny tears in can linings frequently lead to metallic notes and that the plastic linings suck up delicate hop aromas. "The cans tend to absorb the floral character of the hop and, to me, dumb the hop down," he says. In developing cans for Samuel Adams, he adds, he hopes to create thicker, denser linings that address those problems.

Nonetheless, one thing is indisputable: Plenty of good beer comes in cans, as evidenced by the fact that can-using breweries such as Oskar Blues, Indiana's Sun King Brewing and San Francisco's 21st Amendment Brewery, among others, took home an impressive array of medals at last fall's Great American Beer Festival.

JAZZ STAY UNDEFEATED AT HOME

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Al Jefferson scored a season-high 26 points to lead the Utah Jazz to an 85-73 win over the Milwaukee Bucks on Tuesday night.

Paul Millsap had 13 points and 12 rebounds and Gordon Hayward added 12 points for the Jazz. Hayward scored five points on back-to-back possessions and Millsap added a jumper on the next offensive set to clinch the game with 1:07 to play.

Drew Gooden had 24 points and 12 rebounds for the Bucks but didn't have the inside presence of center Andrew Bogut as the Jazz had plenty of point-blank looks at the basket. Bogut missed the game due to personal matters and Mike Dunleavy was out with groin pain.

Led by Brandon Jennings' 4-for-19 performance, the Bucks shot just 31 percent and had 10 shots blocked by the Jazz, including a career-best five by Derrick Favors.

The game marked the third back-to-back set of the compressed season for the Jazz. They lost the back end of the other two, but were playing at home on consecutive nights for the first time since 2008 and improved to 3-0 in Energy Solutions Arena.

Millsap also limped off the court midway through the fourth quarter but returned to help the Jazz close out the Bucks. The injuries forced the Jazz to play rookie Alec Burks a season-high 28 minutes and showed some odd combinations coach Ty Corbin hadn't played before.

The Bucks couldn't hit open jumpers and had little luck driving into the paint. Stephen Jackson was the only other Milwaukee player in double figures with 16 points but shot 5 for 17.

The Jazz, who lead the league in blocked shots, took advantage of Bogut's absence early to get 30 points in the paint in the first half and block nine Bucks shots on their way to a 43-34 halftime edge. Poor free-throw shooting and 14 first-half turnovers were all that kept the Bucks within striking distance.

Utah finished with 24 turnovers, but was in front since midway through the first quarter.

NOTES: Former Milwaukee coach and current University of Utah coach Larry Krystkowiak was in attendance. Milwaukee's last win in Salt Lake City was October 30, 2001, when Ray Allen had 32 points.

MICHIGAN NEEDS OT TO WIN SUGAR BOWL

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • Brendan Gibbons drilled a 37-yard field goal down the middle in overtime to lift Michigan to a 23-20 victory over Virginia Tech in the Sugar Bowl on Tuesday night.

The victory capped an impressive debut season for head coach Brady Hoke, who has led the Wolverines (11-2) back to prominence with a BCS bowl victory. Denard Robinson highlighted an otherwise unspectacular night with touchdown passes of 45 and 18 yards to Junior Hemingway.

Virginia Tech (11-3) had more than doubling Michigan's total yards, 377-184, and had 22 first downs to Michigan's 12 but settled for four field goals in regulation by third-string kicker Justin Myer.

However, Myer was unable to connect on his fifth try from 37 yards away in the opening possession of overtime.

BURLEY • Buhl was fully aware of Burley's knack for perimeter shooting.

Stopping it, however, isn't easy.

Despite defenders' hands in their faces, the Bobcats ripped the nets in the 71-41 nonconference home victory.

Burley shot 52 percent from the field, including 12 of 19 from 3-point range, to move to 6-2 overall (1-0 Great Basin Conference).

"That's one of our strengths that we're going with this year, our 3-point shot. Sometimes we live and die by it. Tonight we were shooting pretty well," said Burley coach Jack Bagley. "(The last two games) we struggled, so I was worried a little bit. But we had a couple good practices and hopefully this will give us some confidence as we're entering our district time."

Kody Coltrin hit four 3-pointers en route to 14 points, 11 of which came in the third quarter as Burley built a 30-point lead.

"We wanted to bounce back from our poor shooting night against Century," Coltrin said. "We were looking for each other on open shots, setting good screens and playing as a team. Everybody played really good team defense, so that helped us out."

Buhl turned the ball over 27 times. "We have to rely on our quickness and try to put ball pressure on them and force turnovers," Coltrin said.

VALLEY STAYS ON TOP OF CAREY

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

HAZELTON • Valley wasn't going to let it happen again.

Up by 18 points on the defending Class1A Division II champions at Carey's house in early December, the Vikings quickly found out what a hot-shooting team these Panthers could be as Carey turned the game into a too-close-for-comfort eight-point contest.

So, when the Vikings went up big on Carey Tuesday night in their house, they didn't let up. They were relentless on defense, allowing just three fourth-quarter points and three players scored 17, 18 and 19 points, respectively, as the Vikings rolled past Carey 58-33 to move to 5-1 on the season and secure the season sweep.

"This is the best win of the season for us, as far as playing a complete game and finishing the game," said Valley head coach Steve Hunter. "Last time we played them, we found out pretty quick that they can get hot. I kept telling these guys we've got to finish the game and not let up the intensity!"

Trailing 27-22 at halftime, Carey (2-5) tied the game at 27 early in the third quarter on a 3-pointer from Chance Chavez. That'd be the last moment this was a competitive game.

Valley ripped off an 11-0 run in a three-minute span to go up 38-27 and pushed their lead to 44-30 at the close of the frame. The run was fueled by four Panthers turnovers leading to easy layups for Austin Shawver and John Cauhorn, who scored 19 and 18 points, respectively.

"We just limited our turnovers in the second half and really took pride on the defensive side of the ball," said Shawver, who scored 10 of Valley's 16 first-quarter points. "That run was all about the defense. We did a good job of mixing the man and 2-3 zone looks which kept them off balance."

Carey hadn't played a game since Dec. 12 and its rustiness showed on both sides of the floor, especially in the paint in the fourth quarter, where the 6-0 Cauhorn scored eight of his points, mostly on uncontested layups.

"I told the guys you just have to come out and play. You can't spend your time complaining about a missed call or that you're got banged around," said Carey coach Dick Simpson. "We got lazy on defense, allowing guys to cut behind us and we didn't take care of the ball. This is one of those games where we'll learn a lot though and we'll move on."

Baley Barg led Carey with 12 points. The Panthers host Butte County on Friday.

Justin Johnson had a double-double of 17 points and 13 rebounds for Valley, which is back in action Friday, hosting Declo in a Canyon Conference matchup.

Taylor Carson scored 11 points for Burley, and Bridger Gunnell came off the bench to score all his 13 points in the fourth quarter.

Kade Crossland led Buhl with eight points, but he left the game with 4:21 remaining in the third quarter when he landed awkwardly after blocking a shot. He did not return, sitting behind the Indians' bench with ice on his ankle.

"One player shouldn't make a team," said Buhl senior Camden Gillins. "(Crossland) is doing a great job shooting from the outside, but we've got to learn that injuries can happen to anybody at any time, so we have to learn to play together no matter what."

Buhl (3-6), has lost three straight.

"We're going through a little bit of adversity right now," Gillins said. "Minico and Burley just came and outworked us, so we need to figure that out and just calm down. We'll be alright."

Buhl hosts Declo tonight, while Burley hosts rival Minico on Friday.

"They're scrappy and they work hard," Bagley said of Minico. "We need to match their effort and take care of the ball."

Ortiz

in rural southern Idaho produced a once-in-a-generation athlete like Ortiz, who owns four state championships across three sports. That is, until you get to know the real Stephan Ortiz.

Juana Ortiz left her drug-abusing husband in Chicago and moved with her three young children to Idaho. Ever since, Stephan, the youngest, has looked to his brother Steven Terry as a role model.

"I usually had my big brother who was like my dad," Ortiz said. "I started wrestling in second grade because I saw him doing it. When he did football, I wanted to do football. I did every sport he did."

Terry, who won a state wrestling championship as a senior in 2006, started his younger brother on a that he makes it look easy.

Fon Fon, as they call him, is embraced by his teammates and opponents alike. Despite having every reason to be, Ortiz isn't arrogant. He's congenial and coachable with an occasional good-natured, smart-alec sense of humor. He's mellow.

"I very rarely have seen him show emotion," said Oakley wrestling coach Brennan Jones. "I could count on one hand the times that he's really shown emotion about winning or losing a match. He's always even. He doesn't let a bad thing bother him; he doesn't let a good thing get to his head. That's probably his greatest attribute, the fact that he's so even."

Jones calls Ortiz a "once in a lifetime" athlete. He's Oakley's only two-time state wrestling champ, and most agree a third title is on its way.

"He's always been the very best in the biggest matches. He rises to the occasion," Jones said.

With his older siblings — Steven and Saless Terry — attending college, Ortiz lives with his mom and cousin in a modest home within walking distance to school.

"I'd rather live in that than where people can influence me into doing drugs," Ortiz said. "Because once you start using drugs like my dad, you just go down."

"I'd rather start with nothing and get successful than start with nothing and just go down from there."

Ortiz hasn't seen his father since he was 9. His dad has called only once — to wish Stephan a happy 18th birthday. Dad doesn't know about all of son's accomplishments, but that's fine with Ortiz.

"If he really wanted to see me grow up and all that, he should have come and stopped all the drugs," Ortiz said.

After graduation, Ortiz plans to attend college, hopefully with a football scholarship. At 5-foot-11 and 160 pounds, he hopes his legacy at Oakley is, "Even if you're small, you can still push yourself to get bigger, faster and stronger. If you really want it that bad, you can get it... if you want it as bad as you want to breathe, you'll have it."

For all his athletic greatness, people who know him say Ortiz is just as gifted as a person. What you see is what you get. Jones compares him to a box of Wheaties.

"He's everything the box says he is. He has all the attributes you could ever hope a young man would have," Jones said, and then paused while watching Ortiz skillfully turn his practice partner into a pretzel.

"We'll never see another like him."

Wither Stanford's Direction in 2012?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STANFORD, Calif. • The time every Stanford supporter has dreaded has finally arrived. The Andrew Luck Era is over. As one of the most promising and productive periods in the program's history ends, the real challenge for first-year head coach David Shaw begins this offseason: Keeping the Cardinal among the nation's elite.

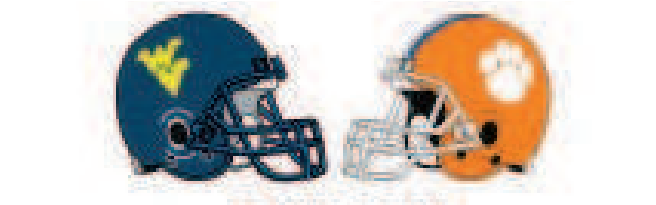

symbolize either the start of Stanford's dip back to mediocrity or the dawn of a new day of dominance on The Farm. After all, the exodus goes well beyond the two-time Heisman Trophy runner-up. Offensive linemen Jonathan Martin and David DeCastro are set to join Luck as projected first-round picks in April's NFL draft and much of the supplanting cast on both sides of the ball is graduating, including top tight end Coby Fleener and starting safeties Michael Thomas and Delano Howell.

Stanford fans have three years of memories to savor from quarterback Andrew Luck, but now the Cardinal face an uncertain future with the two-time Heisman runner-up off to the NFL.

at the head of a Stanford class that raised expectations for every team that follows. "They came in with the mindset that they are going to make a splash here," Shaw said. "That they were going to show the nation that you can be a high academic institution and go to BCS bowl games and make it happen, that there are young men out there that are looking for what Stanford University has to offer, which is the best of both worlds. "We are not going to shy away from that. That's our mission. And these guys, Andrew in particular, were at the forefront of that." Luck's legacy is unmatched in Stanford's history.

ORANGE BOWL West Virginia (9-3) vs. Clemson (10-3) Jan. 4 Clemson (10-3) vs. West Virginia (9-3), 6 p.m. EST (ESPN)

Line: Clemson by 3. Series record: Clemson leads 1-0, beating West Virginia 27-7 in the 1989 Gator Bowl. WHAT'S AT STAKE: The Tigers are making their first appearance in a major bowl since January 1982, when they beat Nebraska in the Orange Bowl for their lone national title. The Mountaineers will try to improve to 3-0 in three Bowl Championship Series games. KEY MATCHUP: Clemson's passing attack against the Mountaineers, who ranked 15th in the nation in pass efficiency defense. Tajh Boyd threw for 3,541 yards and 30 scores and ranked 18th in total offense. His targets include first-team All-Americans Sammy Watkins and Dwayne Allen. The Mountaineers' defense is led by Bruce Irvin (7 1/2 sacks), Justin Miller (six sacks) and Keith Tandy (12 career interceptions). PLAYERS TO WATCH: Clemson: True freshman Watkins set a school record with 1,153 yards receiving. He ranked fourth in the nation in average all-purpose yards (173.1). Allen caught eight touchdown passes and won the John Mackey Award as the nation's top tight end. Andre Ellington rushed for 1,062 yards and 10 scores. Boyd set school records for yards passing, passing touchdowns and total offense. West Virginia: Third-team All-American Tavon Austin set a school record with 89 receptions, ranked No. 2 nationally in all-purpose yards (191.2) and was fifth in punt returns (14.1 per return). Geno Smith has thrown for 3,978 yards and 25 touchdowns, and he ranked ninth in the nation in total offense. Stedman Bailey set a school record with 1,197 yards receiving in the rankings by winning their first eight games. The Mountaineers were ranked as high as 11th. ... Clemson scored at least 35 points eight times. ... The Tigers won their first Atlantic Coast Conference title in 20 years, and they won 10 games for the first time in a decade. ... Three times Clemson overcame a deficit of at least 14 points to win. ... The Tigers ranked only 80th in run defense. ... Clemson QB Boyd planned to enroll at West Virginia before changing his mind. ... West Virginia rushing leader Dustin Garrison will miss the game with a left knee injury. ... The Mountaineers are making their 10th consecutive bowl appearance. ... The Mountaineers have 18 Floridians on their roster.

MISSED PLAYOFFS? HERE'S WHAT TEAMS CAN DO TO GET THERE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Change or be left behind. The 20 teams out of the playoffs - even those with winning records - face serious challenges if they want to be playing deep into next January. Five of those teams, maybe more, must fill coaching vacancies, and some have holes in the front office. Others need to look at incumbent players at key positions and perhaps even the backups. Here are some suggestions how to fix those ills, in projected draft order.

priority No. 2. Find a left tackle to pass protect. Keep a close eye on Adrian Peterson's recovery from a serious left knee injury. CLEVELAND: Bolster an abysmal offense that scored more points than only the Missouri teams. Eliminate all the drama that surrounded Peyton Hillis and Colt McCoy, who might not be the top choice at QB. Find a way to slow down opposing running games. TAMPA BAY: The new coach has to rekindle the spirit of a team that didn't seem to care or try particularly hard in recent weeks. With so many young players, the Bucs need a strong guiding hand. They also need to figure out how to stop the run and improve overall defensively. WASHINGTON: Things aren't as dire in the nation's capital as elsewhere. Mike Shanahan wants a strong running game and has the makings of one with youngsters Roy Helu, Evan Royster and Tim Hightower. But is Rex Grossman the right QB? And they had two players suspended for violating the league's drug policy, Fred Davis and Trent Williams. What to do with them? JACKSONVILLE: New ownership promises changes, beginning with the coaching staff, and hiring a QB guru for Blaine Gabbert is essential. Boosting the offense around league rushing leader Maurice Jones-Drew is a must. The defense has a solid foundation. CAROLINA: Ron Rivera has a defensive background, and now that the offense is in the extremely capable hands, arms and feet of Cam Newton, he can set about fixing his specialty. Boy, does it need fixing in just about every area, but a return to health by LB Jon Beason would help immeasurably. MIAMI: Owner Stephen Ross would like to make a big splash in his coaching hire, which is why he reached out quickly to Jeff Fisher. Miami isn't that far away from contention, but it has to get more takeaways and improve in the passing game on offense and defense. Is Matt Moore the quarterback to run the offense? More likely, he's a better fit as the backup. BUFFALO: Other than Chicago and Kansas City, no team was more devastated by injuries than the Bills. When versatile RB Fred Jackson went down, the offense stalled. Only New England forced more turnovers in the AFC, but Buffalo didn't protect the ball well enough, winding up only plus-1 in turnover margin. KANSAS CITY: This one is easy, once the Chiefs decide whether to keep Romeo Crennel as coach (they should). QB Matt Cassel and TE Tony Moeaki will be a huge boost. The secondary could be among the league's best with Berry back. SEATTLE: Two straight 7-9 records under Pete Carroll won't cut it, even though the Seahawks made the playoffs the first season and beat the Saints. Carroll has to solve the quarterback dilemma, but re-signing and then feeding the ball to RB Marshawn Lynch is essential. ARIZONA: Here's another team with QB questions, but in a nice way because coach Ken Whisenand believes both Kevin Kolb and John Skelton are winners. Finding another stud receiver to go with Larry Fitzgerald and getting more out of TE Todd Heap would help. The defense is coming on, but had only 10 interceptions. DALLAS: It's time to re-evaluate the talent in Big D, particularly on defense. The secondary needs revamping, and the front seven has declined, excepting for DeMarcus Ware and Sean Lee. The Cowboys make too many errors, especially late in close games. Tony Romo needs to be more careful in those situations. PHILADELPHIA: Finding cohesiveness, which seemed to happen as the Eagles won their final four games. Lowering expectations would help, too. On the field, the defense has to step up against the run and the Eagles can't survive another 38 turnovers. Michael Vick has to stay healthy. The team might have to replace disappointing WR DeSean Jackson and CB Asante Samuel. NEW YORK JETS: Rex Ryan should not change his personality or coaching style - players see through any phoniness - but he should tone down the rhetoric. A backup QB to push Mark Sanchez would help, and stronger leadership on offense would, too, particularly if LaDainian Tomlinson leaves. A pass rush less reliant on the blitz is needed, as are more reliable receivers. OAKLAND: Fix the defense. Cut down the penalties; Oakland set a league record in 2011. Find CBs who can cover. Develop the young receiving corps. Find out if RB Darren McFadden can stay healthy for a full season. Oh, and hire a "football guy" to run the front office in the wake of Al Davis' death. SAN DIEGO: Now that Norv Turner is staying as coach and A.J. Smith remains as GM, the Chargers have to play more disciplined football. The Pro Bowl version of Philip Rivers must re-emerge at QB. Some balance is needed in the pass rush and consistency stopping the run. CHICAGO: Upgrade the depth so injuries don't destroy the next season. Watch for telltale signs of the defense getting older. Retool the offense, making it less complicated and more suited to QB Jay Cutler's skills. Improve the secondary's pass coverage. TENNESSEE: With Chris Johnson on hand all season, the running game should produce. As Jake Locker takes over at quarterback, which is the right move, get him more familiar with his targets, particularly Kenny Britt, who returns from a right knee injury. Tighten up the run defense.

ASU's Vontaze Burfict Declares For NFL Draft

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEMPE, Ariz. • Arizona State linebacker Vontaze Burfict says he'll skip his senior season and make himself eligible for the NFL draft. Burfict made the announcement Tuesday in a one-paragraph statement. He thanked his coaches and professors and added that he plans to return to school in the future to get his degree. The 6-foot-3 Burfict was the Sun Devils' second-leading tackler this season with 69, including seven for losses. He also had an interception and fumble recovery. But Burfict was supposed to be one of the Pac-12's most dominant defensive players this year and coach Dennis Erickson described the linebacker's season as "average." As a sophomore, Burfict led the team in tackles with 90 and was a second-team All-Pac-10 selection. In 2009, he was the Pac-10's Defensive Freshman of the Year.

Akron Former North Carolina State coach Chuck Amato is Akron's new defensive coordinator. New Akron coach Terry Bowden named Amato his associate head coach Tuesday. The 65-year-old Amato coached North Carolina State, his alma mater, from 2000-06, posting a 49-37 record and leading the Wolfpack to five bowl games. Bowden, hired last month to turn around the Zips, called Amato "an exciting addition" to his staff. Amato spent 21 seasons on Florida State's coaching staff under Bobby Bowden, Terry's father. Amato visited Akron before accepting the job and said he was impressed with the school's facilities and the administration's commitment to building a winning program. Amato said he will "recruit relentlessly, coach players with the same intensity and help to bring a winning mentality to the Akron Zips football team." The Zips went 2-22 the past two seasons under former coach Rob Ianello.

COLLEGE OF SOUTHERN IDAHO
INVITATION TO BID

CSI HEAD START / EARLY HEAD START CENTER, JEROME, IDAHO

Sealed bids for the specified construction project will be accepted until 2:00 p.m. Wednesday, January 18, 2012 in the Office of the Vice President of Administration in the Taylor Administration Building, 315 Falls Avenue, Twin Falls, Idaho and then publicly opened.

Bids must be sent or delivered to the above address on or before the above listed date and time to be accepted. The outside of the bid envelope should clearly indicate "SEALED BID ENCLOSED: CSI Head Start / Early Head Start Center, Jerome, Idaho."

The project consists of construction of a new 6,192 square foot Head Start / Early Head Start Center with related sitework in Jerome, Idaho and will be constructed under a General Contractor Agreement with the College of Southern Idaho. Plans, specifications, proposal forms, and other information are on file for examination at the following locations:

Leatham-Krohn-Van Ocker, Architects

2400 E. Riverwalk Drive
Boise, Idaho 83706
Phone: (208) 336-3443

Idaho AGC

1649 W Shoreline Dr. Ste. 100
Boise, Idaho 83702
Phone: (208) 344-2531

A State of Idaho Public Works Contractors License is required to bid on this work. A bid bond in the amount of 5% of the total bid amount, including any add alternates, is required. The College reserves the right to reject any or all bids, to waive any formalities, and to accept the bid deemed to be in the best interest of the College.

One hard copy set of documents, together with documents in electronic format, may be obtained by licensed general contractors and by licensed mechanical, plumbing, and electrical subcontractors from the Architect for a refundable deposit of $200.00. Others may obtain documents in electronic format only at no cost.

A Pre-Bid Conference will be held at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, January 5, 2012 starting at the Jerome School District Administration Building, 125 4th Avenue west, Jerome, Idaho, then proceeding to the project site. Bidders are encouraged to attend.

DEAR ABBY: My long-distance boyfriend, "Wayne," moved here two years ago to take a job working for my twin sister "Kim's" mentor. After five months on the job, Wayne was terminated and was replaced by — my sister! To say there are hurt feelings is an understatement.

Wayne and I were unaware that Kim had been having an affair with this much-older married father of two. He has now left his wife and kids and is living with my sister. Kim is enjoying her job as his assistant and reaping all the benefits of his long-established business.

I'm devastated by the betrayal. It frustrates me that after months of deception, my twin is benefiting from a massive indiscretion that ended a marriage and destroyed a family. We were always close, but I don't want to include her lover in any upcoming events in my life. She says they're a "package deal." How do I move past this — or should I?

— DECEIVED BY MY EVIL TWIN

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR DECEIVED: I'm not sure what "upcoming events in your life" you're referring to, but if they include Wayne, his feelings should also be taken into consideration. How angry and resentful will he feel if he's forced to interact with the man who fired him so he could be replaced by your sister?

I can't decide for you how you will work this out, but I will offer this advice: For the present, make no hard and fast decisions. This could play out in any number of ways. Her boss could marry her, or he could return to his wife and family. Wait and see what the future brings. It's often full of surprises.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single adult female. I have a neighbor and friend I'll call Kurt. He has been terrific to me. He has given me things, taken me out a few times and seems very caring. I enjoy the time we spend together and I have developed romantic feelings for him. My problem is Kurt is gay.

I know I can't have the kind of relationship with him that I'd like to. Once, we spent the whole day together and I spent the whole time wishing it had been a real date. It seems like whenever we go out together I don't know how to handle the situation. Because he's a neighbor, I run into him a lot. I could use some advice on this.

— SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR IN TEXAS

DEAR NEAR AND FAR: You and Kurt appear to be compatible on many levels, but you must accept that as wonderful a person as he is — he cannot give you the romantic love you're looking for. He isn't "wired" that way. Wishing, hoping and dreaming won't change that — but it WILL waste your time and prevent you from looking for eligible men.

You need to put the brakes on this friendship until you have regained your balance and/or have met someone else. And tell Kurt why, so his feelings won't be hurt. I'm betting it won't be the first time he's heard it.

DEAR ABBY: Is a grandmother being disrespectful when she purposely continues to misspell her 12-year-old grandson's name on cards and gifts?

— HIS NAME IS JOE!

DEAR H.N.I.J.: Not knowing the grandmother, I can't say for certain. She may be letting you know she's disappointed you didn't name the boy after his grandfather "Morris." She could also be illiterate or somewhat demented, but I'm betting she's letting you know she's not happy with the name you chose.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Yours is the shame and sorrow
But the disgrace is mine."
— D.H. Lawrence

Howard Cohen of London is a fount of amusing bridge stories, generally told against himself. Here is one of his recent coups, resulting as usual in a severe blow to both his pride and his pocketbook. To test yourself, cover the East and West cards before reading the commentary.

Against three no-trump West led and continued hearts. Declarer won the second trick and set about finding out what he could before deciding on the location of the diamond queen. Three rounds of spades suggested that West had started with four or five spades, while it seemed East had started with five hearts and West just three.

South's inclination was to play West for the diamond queen because he knew East had at least eight cards in the majors while West had at most eight. But, before he made the diamond play, there was one last thing he could try ... so he cashed the club ace.

When East's king dropped, declarer was now sure East held at least three diamonds. So he cashed the diamond ace and played a diamond to his 10. This lost to West's queen and declarer went three down!

It is time to tell you where Cohen was sitting. He was South, and the East who had made the fine play of dropping the club king from an original doubleton was Graham Orsmond. What was worse, Cohen had not thought to cash the club queen to confirm the club position!

ANSWER: This auction does not sound forcing to me: I'd expect your partner to hold a hand in the range of 10-11 points with real diamond support. But your hand is extremely promising because of your excellent controls and long (in context) diamond suit, so you should bid on. My best guess would be to go all the way to five diamonds. (Game should need no more than a successful finesse.)

IF JANUARY 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may make romantic escapades a priority for the next few weeks. Take a notebook along and write down your ideas, as they may be valuable in the future. Hold off on business or financial decisions in February when you temporarily lose your deft touch with worldly matters. Make your most important decisions and implement key changes or projects in late March or early April when Lady Luck will be rooting for your team and things in general are likely to run smoothly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Originality of character makes you stand out in a crowd, but you don't need to be defensive about being somewhat different. Your romantic nature is a powerhouse that inspires you to tackle bigger things. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The balance of power is shifting from the tried and true to the new and innovative. You won't know quite which way to jump, so this is a good time to stand still. Don't alter current structures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep the faith. While it might appear that there are hidden pitfalls in an ongoing business transaction, you must still uphold your part of the bargain. Do not implement impulsive financial stratagems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Indulge in industriousness. Put the finishing touches on projects, but don't initiate anything new. A small delay with a check or a contract could cause worry, but everything will turn out fine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep a pen handy. A minor crisis of confidence will be swept away by a tide of new ideas. This is not a very good time to make major decisions, but an excellent time to take notes about whatever inspires you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Collect a cache of money-making ideas to use in the future. A significant other could influence your income. Fleeting doubts about the wisdom of your actions is only natural; don't let them undermine confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The teeter-totter always goes up and down. Just because you feel you are heading in the wrong direction, is no reason to jump off. Hang on tight and ride it out. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some things are best left unsaid. It isn't necessary to act on every idea or thought. Rather than blurting out exactly what you think, perhaps you can wait a few days to give a thoughtful answer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Depend on the dependable. Someone has your best interests at heart and probably has the answer to a predicament - or at least will lend a hand. The majority of others are more demanding than usual.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Learn to hold close with open hands. Overprotective, possessive attitudes won't sit well with loved ones, so loosen your iron grip. Better conditions for business transactions arrive next week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stick to the plan. It might be tempting to make a change or jump ship, but remember that someone is counting on you. Do what you can to fulfill promises and honor commitments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pass the test by studying hard life lessons. When held up to scrutiny, it is the results and your actions that are graded, not your intentions. The more professional you act, the more likely you will achieve success.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
