Otter Maps Aggressive Plan for Idaho

After years of slashing state spending, the governor's budget proposal for 2013 includes a 5 percent spending hike, along with millions in tax relief and salary increases for state workers.

BOISE • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter presented his budget proposals for the next fiscal year at Monday's State of the State address, kicking off Idaho's 2012 legislative session.

The proposals — for fiscal 2013, starting July 1 — include $45 million set aside in tax relief, $60 million for replenishing the state's reserves, and $41 million for revenue-based salary increases for state employees.

Otter said that the state's financial condition is getting healthier thanks to its leaders' focus on fiscal responsibility.

"Thanks to your leadership and an understanding of our constituents' needs ... the result is a state government that does not face, and will not face, the staggering deficits, layoffs, shutdowns, tax increases and other problems that are plaguing many states," Otter said.

In outlining his $2.66 billion spending plan, Otter didn't make a recommendation on what form the $45 million in tax cuts should take. Instead, he deferred to the Legislature, saying he looked forward to hearing proposals on where to most effectively cut taxes.

The governor also reiterated his support for Students Come First, the public education reform package passed by the Legislature last year. His recommended budget calls for fully funding the reforms, which include technology and pay-for-performance initiatives.

Otter asked the Legislature to set aside $41 million for state employee salary increases in the form of two one-time payments, contingent upon the state meeting its revenue projections. Of that, $26 million would go to public school salaries.

Otter's proposals are based on a revised revenue projection for fiscal year 2012, in response to lower-than-expected revenues from the last four of five months.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, made up of House and Senate members, will consider Otter's proposal when appropriating funds.

Many Ways to Teach Technology

School districts across Idaho are pitching their plans to spend a total $13 million on classroom technology.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • There's no "one size fits all" approach for how Magic Valley school districts plan to improve the technology in their classrooms.

Idaho districts and public charter schools will receive a total of $13 million in technology money for the first time this year under the state's Students Come First reforms. They had a Friday deadline to submit plans to the Idaho State Department of Education detailing how they'll use their shares.

The Twin Falls School District — which will receive about $240,000 — has a technology plan that's already been in place for a couple years. One goal is to put a projector and interactive whiteboard in every classroom.

"(The funding) will allow us to implement them significantly faster than we originally anticipated," said Brett Keller, information technology department coordinator. He estimates interactive equipment could be in every classroom by next year.

The next step will be figuring out how to use the technology in classrooms through online and blended learning approaches.

"The goal is to have three-fourths of classroom activities involving an interactive format," Keller said, so students are more engaged and aren't just listening to lectures.

The "blended learning" concept in high schools involves a combination of in-person instruction with online tools. Keller says teachers will put their curriculum online, including recorded lectures.

The Jerome School District will receive about $105,000 this year, but it will only be used in a handful of elementary and middle school classrooms.

That, said Superintendent Dale Layne, is because it would be a challenge to install new equipment in every classroom.

"We don't have anybody who can do that in a mass situation," he said, as the district has only a two-person technology department.

Three to six teachers per school — who haven't been selected yet — will receive technology money. They'll be partly responsible for deciding what equipment to buy, installing it and teaching others how to use it.

Layne said high school teachers won't be included because the state has future plans to provide a mobile

Twin Falls City Council Postpones Building Design Vote

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls City Council held off Monday on adopting guidelines for structures in the city's Historic Warehouse District.

The design standards would define the look of building exteriors within the district. Thanks to a $12,000 grant, the city Historical Preservation Commission was able to work with a Colorado consulting company to draft the set of architectural guidelines.

However, the draft lacked any sort of appeals process, causing the City Council to spend much of its meeting discussing who should oversee the process.

Other highlights from the governor's speech:

• Otter praised the Idaho Army National Guard 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team, and said state agencies, including the Department of Labor and the Department of Education, are working to address unemployment among military veterans with the Hire One Vet initiative. "It is our responsibility to ensure our troops have the tools they need to resume their productive civilian lives," he said.

• Otter also promoted his Idaho Global Entrepreneurial ships among entrepreneurs, higher education, industry, the Center for Advanced Energy Studies and the Idaho

National Laboratory. IGEM would provide $50,000 loans for entrepreneurs to establish prototypes and build capital.

• The governor expressed support for Idaho establishing its own health care exchange, while repeating his opposition to the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. "I have struggled with the federal imposition of this mandate in part because Idaho was exploring ways to create its own market-based health insurance exchange long before the federal law was adopted," he said.

• Otter called for fully funding enrollment growth and occupancy costs at Idaho's college and university campuses.

Magic Valley Legislators React

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert

Cameron, co-chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriation Committee, said some of the governor's proposals seem aggressive. "I'm trying to figure out how he's fitting everything he's suggesting into the revenue stream," Cameron said. But, he added, Otter has been analyzing the revenue since September, and the Legislature is just now taking a look at it.

Cameron

Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome

Bell, co-chairwoman of JFAC, thought many of the governor's proposals were thoughtful, but had reservations about his approach to revenue-based pay increases for state employees. "It's a clumsy way to do a salary increase," she said. She did like his emphasis on replenishing rainy day funds. "Savings is the right thing to do."

Bell

Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum

"He didn't say anything about Health and Welfare," Jaquet said. "I'm a little concerned about that." She was surprised at the $60 million he wanted to put into the state's rainy day funds, and liked the IGEM economic development plan. "I really like the idea of going out and getting America's finest," she said.

Jaquet

Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls

"I guess my first overriding impression is how in the world are we going to afford all this?" Smith said. He liked the idea of starting to replenish the state's rainy day funds, "but $60 million is a lot of money."

Smith

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding

Pence was concerned about Otter's approach to education. "When he said 'the new normal for education,' I don't know why we need a new normal, cut to the bone that it was," she said.

Pence

Rep. Sharon Block, R-Twin Falls

Block liked that Otter emphasized job creation and education, and was intrigued by his IGEM plan. "I'm looking forward to finding out more about that," she said.

The council approved the technical change 6-0, with Councilman Shawn Barigar absent.

Judge Rules Against Atlanta Gold in Pollution Case

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge has determined that Atlanta Gold Corp. is legally responsible for high levels of arsenic and iron flowing from an abandoned mine shaft and polluting a tributary of the Boise River system.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Mikel H. Williams on Monday issued a ruling against the mining company, which has been exploring gold deposits for decades in the mountains around the tiny town of Atlanta northeast of Boise.

The Idaho Conservation League and the Northwest Environmental Defense Center sued the company last year, accusing Atlanta Gold of allowing levels of arsenic and iron higher than allowed by permit to flow daily into Montezuma Creek, a tributary of the Middle Fork of the Boise River.

The mining company denied the allegations and claimed the environmental groups lacked the legal footing to file the lawsuit. Company lawyers cited a 2005 agreement that resolved a previous dispute over water pollution at the abandoned shaft as reason to have the new claims tossed out of court.

But Williams rejected the company's arguments and determined that it's highly likely Atlanta Gold's work in and around the shaft in recent years is responsible for increasing water flows, and consequently the levels of pollutants flowing into the stream.

"We're pretty excited about this," said John Robison, public lands director for ICL. "We're relieved that the court is holding Atlanta Gold responsible for their promises to protect water quality."

Minidoka County Approves Changes to Commission Districts

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • The boundaries of two Minidoka County commission districts will shift slightly, contingent upon the resolution of state redistricting efforts.

About 67 registered voters in North Burley on the east side of Idaho Highway 27 will actually inhabit two different districts, depending on the election they're participating in. Though normally in Heyburn Precinct 1, they will shift west to Heyburn Precinct 2 for elections involving the city of Burley.

Commissioners Bob Moore and Kent McClellan voted in the changes Monday, with Commissioner Sheryl Koyle absent.

The other boundary tweaks will affect which district each commission seat represents.

"This will bring the districts into compliance with the current population," County Prosecutor Lance Stevenson said.

Stevenson said the boundaries are examined after every federal 10-year census.

There are no significant population variances within the county's districts, Stevenson said.

Minidoka County Clerk Patty Temple said the North Burley swap will consolidate the voting places for Heyburn residents who vote in Burley elections.

Temple said the county is receiving a package of letters just about every day. Each package includes a call for the church's president, Warren S. Jeffs, to be freed from prison. computing device for each student in those grades.

The Buhl School District is using a broader approach with its technology money — less than $40,000 this year. The plan is to add interactive equipment to classrooms that don't have it yet.

"What (the money) will allow us to do is put interactive projectors and document cameras in every classroom," Superintendent Byron Stutzman said.

Some middle and high school math classes already have the equipment, as well as a few elementary school classrooms.

The Cassia County School District plans to use its nearly $160,000 to buy devices such as iPods, iPads, classroom laptop computers, document cameras and mobile instructional boards for teachers.

The next step is teaching school employees how to use the equipment. Out of the state's technology funding this year, $3 million will go toward training.

Dog Rescued from Idaho Mine Shaft

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An Idaho man's dog is recovering after tumbling down a 50-foot mine shaft west of Dubois.

Hubert Quade tells KIFI-TV that he was flying his falcons Friday afternoon and training his bird-dog, a 6-year-old English pointer named Chester.

When it was time to leave, he couldn't find his dog.

Quade followed the tracking device on Chester's collar to a 5 foot-by-5 foot hole in the ground. It was an unmarked mine shaft about 50 feet deep.

Quade called 911. Clark County search and rescue used a tow truck and a boom to lower Chief Deputy Boyd Eddins into the mine to rescue the dog.

Justices Criticize EPA's Dealings with Homeowners

BY JESSE J. HOLLAND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Several conservative members of the Supreme Court criticized the Environmental Protection Agency on Monday for heavy-handed enforcement of rules affecting homeowners after the government told an Idaho couple they can't challenge an order declaring their future home site a "protected wetlands."

Justice Antonin Scalia assailed the "high-handedness" of the environmental agency when dealing with private property, and Justice Samuel Alito described some of the EPA's actions as "outrageous," arguing that most people would say "this kind of thing can't happen in the United States."

The EPA said that Mike and Chantell Sackett illegally filled in most of their 0.63-acre lot with dirt and rocks in preparation for building a home. The agency said the property is a wetlands that cannot be disturbed without a permit. The Sacketts had none.

The couple, who attended the Supreme Court arguments, said they had no reason to suspect there were wetlands on their property. They paid $23,000 for their property in 2005 and decided two years later to build a three-bedroom home. Workers spent three days filling in just under a half-acre of land.

Three EPA officials showed up, said they believed the land was wetlands, asked for a permit and told the workers to stop. Six months later, the EPA sent the order that triggered the court case. The Sacketts wanted to challenge that order, but lower courts have said that they cannot.

The EPA issues nearly 3,000 administrative compliance orders a year that call on alleged violators of environmental laws to stop what they're doing and repair the harm they've caused. Major business groups, homebuilders, road builders and agricultural interests all have joined the Sacketts in urging the court to make it easier to contest EPA compliance orders issued under several environmental laws.

"You think maybe there is a little drainage problem in part of your lot, so you start to build the house and then you get an order from the EPA which says: 'You have filled in wetlands, so you can't build your house; remove the fill, put in all kinds of plants; and now you have to let us on your premises whenever we want to.' You have to turn over to us all sorts of documents, and for every day that you don't do all this you are accumulating a potential fine of $75,000. And by the way, there is no way you can go to court to challenge our determination that this is a wetlands until such time as we choose to sue you."

Justice Samuel Alito

Justice Anthony Kennedy wondered how far the Supreme Court should go in a ruling, noting that government agencies often threaten citations when people don't comply with the law. "Health inspectors go into restaurants all the time and say: 'Unless you fix this, I'm going to give you a citation.' Fire inspectors, the same thing," he said.

The Sacketts' lawyer, Damien M. Schiff, argued that they weren't trying to take away EPA's power. Environmental groups say a purpose of the orders is to make it easier to negotiate a resolution without a protracted legal fight.

"Let EPA administer the act and issue compliance orders," Schiff said. "But let's also give homeowners a fair shake, too. Let them have their day in court to contest what the agency has done."

Alito leveled some of the strongest criticism against the EPA, noting that the Sacketts had to wait until the EPA sued them to even challenge the idea that there were wetlands on their property.

"You think maybe there is a little drainage problem in part of your lot, so you start to build the house and then you get an order from the EPA which says: 'You have filled in wetlands, so you can't build your house; remove the fill, put in all kinds of plants; and now you have to let us on your premises whenever we want to,'" Alito said. "You have to turn over to us all sorts of documents, and for every day that you don't do all this you are accumulating a potential fine of $75,000. And by the way, there is no way you can go to court to challenge our determination that this is a wetlands until such time as we choose to sue you."

Chief Justice John Roberts said that because of the potential fines, few people are going to challenge the EPA's determinations.

"Because of the administrative compliance order, you're really never going to be put to the test, because most land owners aren't going to say, 'I'm going to risk the $37,000 a day,'" Roberts said. "All EPA has to do is make whatever finding it wants, and realize that in 99 percent of the cases, it's never going to be put to the test."

The EPA's normal procedure is to contact the homeowner before issuing a compliance order, Justice Department lawyer Malcolm Stewart said. A wetlands biologist has also confirmed to The Associated Press that he advised the Sacketts in May 2007 that their property was a wetlands and that there were wetlands on three sides of their land. The Sacketts say that in 2010, other wetlands consultants examined their land and concluded that the first one was wrong.

If the Sacketts "had wanted a judicial resolution of the coverage question without subjecting themselves to potential penalties, they could have filed a permit application before discharging, they could have gotten review there. All we're saying is they can't discharge fill, wait to see whether EPA notices, and then insist upon immediate judicial review if EPA notices and objects," Stewart said.

The justices will rule by summer.

Otter Names Whitehead to Head Idaho Highway Board

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter named a southwestern Idaho businessman and trucking industry advocate to head up the Idaho Transportation Board, the panel that makes decisions governing hundreds of millions in highway construction spending annually.

Jerry Whitehead is stepping into the role to replace Chairman Darrell Manning, who announced in December he was retiring after his latest five-year stint with the state highway agency.

Otter named Whitehead during his annual State of the State speech.

Whitehead has been a member of the Idaho Transportation Board since 2009, when Otter appointed him to represent southwestern Idaho.

Whitehead founded Western Trailers, a Boise-based manufacturer of commercial truck trailers since 1969.

He's also a past chairman of the Idaho Trucking Association and Idaho Truck Pac Inc., groups which promote the interests of trucking companies.

New Sex Education Standards Released

BY KIMBERLY HEFLING
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Young elementary school students should use the proper names for body parts and, by the end of fifth grade, know that sexual orientation is “the romantic attraction of an individual to someone of the same gender or a different gender,” according to new sexual education guidelines released Monday by a coalition of health and education groups.

The non-binding recommendations to states and school districts seek to encourage age-appropriate discussions about sex, bullying and healthy relationships — starting with a foundation even before second grade.

By presenting minimum standards that schools can use to formulate school curriculums for each age level, the groups hope that schools can build a sequential foundation that in the long term will better help teens as they grow into adults.

Experts say schools across America are inconsistent in how they address such sensitive topics.

Despite awareness of bullying, for example, Debra Hauser, president of Advocates for Youth, one of the groups involved with creating the standards, said some schools don't address it — or at least not in relation to sexual orientation or gender identity, which is where she said a lot of the bullying occurs.

“They should tackle it head on,” Hauser said.

Other organizations involved with the release include the American Association of Health Education, the American School Health Association, the National Education Association — Health Information Network, the Society of State Leaders of Health and FIRE WHOM?

Republican presidential candidate, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, speaks to reporters after he campaigned at Gilchrist Metal Fabricating in Hudson, N.H., Monday.

Romney Draws Flak on Eve of Primary

BY DAVID ESPO
and KASIE HUNT
Associated Press

NASHUA, N.H. • Republican front-runner Mitt Romney stumbled down the homestretch of the New Hampshire primary on Monday, declaring, “I like being able to fire people who provide services to me” as his rivals intensified already fierce criticism.

“Gov. Romney enjoys firing people. I enjoy creating jobs,” said former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman, who has staked his candidacy on a strong showing in Tuesday's primary and has shown signs of gaining ground in recent polls.

Adding insult to any injury, Texas

Gov. Rick Perry posted a ringtone to his campaign website that consisted of Romney saying, “I like being able to fire people,” over and over.

Romney is the odds-on favorite in New Hampshire, and Huntsman as well as other Republicans who are contesting the state have generally been content to vie for second place in hopes of emerging as his main rival in the South Carolina primary on Jan. 21.

“Second place would be a dream come true,” said former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, as he raced through a final full New Hampshire campaign day that began before sunrise and stretched for more than 14 hours. The former Pennsylvania senator finished a surprising second in last week's Iowa caucuses, but without money for television ads he has appeared to struggle as he seeks to convert that into momentum.

Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, won in Iowa by eight votes. A victory in New Hampshire would make him the first Republican in a contested presidential nomination battle to capture the first two races of the campaign since Iowa began leading off for the GOP in 1976.

The battle has grown increasingly rancorous in recent days — both in New Hampshire and next-up South Carolina — with Santorum, Perry and former House Speaker

Newt Gingrich escalating their attacks on Romney's claim that a background in business uniquely qualifies him to help create American jobs.

At the same time, an organization that backs Gingrich has spread the word that it intends to spend $3.4 million on television ads in South Carolina that are expected to attack Romney with gusto.

“Now we'll see if he has the broad shoulders and can stand the heat,” said Gingrich, relishing the battle ahead as the nominating campaign wheels South.

Romney's remark about firing people was the second jarring moment for the front-runner in the span of less than 24 hours.

On Sunday afternoon, the millionaire businessman told an audience that he understood the fear of being laid off, adding, “there were a couple of times when I was worried I was going to get pink-slipped.” His aides refused to provide details.

On Monday morning, addressing the Nashua Chamber of Commerce, he said he wants individuals to be able to choose among different health insurance policies as they seek coverage.

“That means the insurance company will have an incentive to keep you healthy. It also means if you don't like what they do, you can fire them,” he said.

Mont. Teacher Disappears While Running; Shoe Found

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont.

• Authorities expanded their search Monday for a high school teacher who's missing from an oil boom town in northeast Montana, after recovering only a single running shoe since she failed to return from a weekend run.

The search for algebra teacher Sherry Arnold, 43, focused on a 10-square-mile area north of the town of Sidney near the North Dakota border. That's in the general vicinity of the roadside ditch where Arnold's shoe was discovered Saturday along one of her running routes.

Her family confirmed the shoe was hers, said Assistant Police Chief Robert Burnison. No evidence has emerged indicating foul play, and the case is being handled, for now, as a missing person report, he said.

“It's just been grueling,” said

MANY U.S. COMMUNITIES ARE BLOCKING MEDICAL MARIJUANA

More and more states are saying yes to medical marijuana. But local governments are increasingly using their laws to just say no, not in our backyard.

In California, with the nation's most permissive medical marijuana laws, 185 cities and counties have banned pot dispensaries entirely. In New Jersey, perhaps the most restrictive of the 17 states that have legalized marijuana for sick people, some groups planning to sell cannabis are struggling to find local governments willing to let them in.

Dispensaries have also been banned in parts of Colorado and have run into opposition in some towns in Maine.

Local politicians have argued that pot is still illegal under

D.A. to Seek Death Penalty in Shooing of Police Officers

BY PAUL FOY
Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah • A prosecutor said Monday he will pursue the death penalty against a man suspected of opening fire on police during a drug raid, killing one officer and wounding five others.

Matthew David Stewart of Ogden is being investigated on suspicion of aggravated murder, eight counts of attempted aggravated murder, and marijuana cultivation, Weber County Attorney Dee W. Smith said.

Stewart shot at and missed two additional officers who were trying to assist their wounded colleagues, he said.

“There were a lot of shots fired,” Smith said. “I don't think anyone can give a number.”

Smith said he believes he has sufficient evidence to arrest and charge Stewart but won't do so until doctors clear him for release from a hospital. Stewart was shot in a backyard shed during the gunfight.

It wasn't clear when Stewart, a 37-year-old U.S. Army veteran, might be ready for release.

OBITUARIES

Golda Agnes Hargroves Watkins

Feb. 4, 1909-Dec. 30, 2011

BOISE • Golda Agnes Hargroves Watkins enjoyed more good times in her 102 years than most people would in several lifetimes, and she lived every one of her days on her own terms.

She began this amazing life in Missouri in 1909, born into a large, loving family of four brothers and five sisters. From an early age, Golda was very much an independent, free spirit. As a teenager, she moved to Chicago in the '20s — a thrilling time for a young woman in a big city. At age 20, she married Ray Watkins. This marriage began on a dare from her oldest sister while on a road trip to Montana. Her wedding "dress" was a pair of striped overalls. This dare lasted for the next 50 years until Ray's death in 1979.

Golda and Ray loved to travel and lived in Oklahoma, California, Colorado and Alaska. Golda was 27 when her only child, a son named Don, was born. Golda, Ray and Don came to Idaho and lived in Ketchum at a very exciting time, when Sun Valley Ski Resort was being built, and finally settled down in Gooding, Idaho. Golda loved her family and her many friends; she also adored antiques and travel. She turned her passion for antiques into her life's work, owning and operating Golda's Antique Shop in Gooding until age 93. Golda was a fixture in the local auction scene in the Magic Valley and shared her knowledge and expertise by teaching classes on antiques.

Late in her life, her adventurous spirit allowed her to travel independently to many exotic, international destinations. She would be the first to tell you, "I have been around the world twice." Golda's 100th birthday party was attended by more than 100 family members and friends. When she was ready to blow out the overflowing candles on her cake, the Gooding Fire Department burst into the room and put out her candles with squirt bottles, much to the delight of the party. When asked her secret to her longevity, she always replied, "A toddy for the body." She lived the last year of her life at the Pattie House, a beautiful assisted living home in West Boise. The last days of her life were spent with family, friends and her very best friend and companion, Ernie Wortman, by her bedside.

Golda was preceded in death by her husband, parents, nine siblings and an infant granddaughter. She is survived by her son, Don (Elaine); and their children, Kelle (Doug), Sandy (Tim), Craig (Linda) and Tim (Rebecca); (great-grandchildren, Tawnee, Tim (Lyndsay) and Melissa (Brandon)).

Golda always said that when she died, she was "going to college." And as she wished, her body has been donated to Washington State University. She will continue to influence others in a unique way that is characteristic of the way she lived her life.

Golda's family would like to thank Dr. Lisa Dockter and Legacy Hospice for taking such good care of her. Special thanks to Sunny, Katie and the staff at Pattie House for providing such a beautiful, loving home for Golda during this last year.

A memorial service is being planned; details will follow at a later date. Please make donations in Golda's name to a charity of your choice.

David Ross Allred

Jan. 14, 1957-Jan. 5, 2012

BOISE • David Ross Allred, 54, passed away Thursday, Jan. 5, 2012, at his home in Boise.

Dave was born in Manhattan, Kan., in 1957. He was raised in Twin Falls, Idaho, in the River Outfitting business owned by his family, Nicholson and Sons. He spent several years outfitting, fishing and adventuring with his dad, Nick, in Idaho on the Middle Fork of the Salmon and later with his brother, Paul, in Alaska. Dave mastered the art of finish carpentry and owned and operated his own company, AC Carpentry, for 20 years.

From his early childhood, Dave persevered through a number of potentially debilitating physical ailments. He never complained or allowed these ailments to limit or define his being nor the way in which he lived. He was an amazingly strong man, both physically and intellectually, possessing the emotional intelligence of a great philosopher.

Those who knew David learned he had one speed, full ahead, like a bullet. He deeply loved his family, his work and anything outdoors. The great outdoors was his spirituality and happiness. David's sense of humor was legendary. He was a hoot; he had a power smile you could see a mile away! He adored his daughter, Elizabeth, and his grandchildren were first in his heart.

Dave married the love of his life, his adored Lisa, on Aug. 13, 2011, in Boise. Joined by their many families and friends, a beautiful partnership was created on a gorgeous day. Every day since, he told Lisa she was beautiful. He made her laugh and he always let her know how much he loved and appreciated her. That is how Dave was; he told his family and friends how much he thought of them without hesitation. He was loved by most everyone. He was considerate, unpretentious and always kept a positive attitude.

Most of Dave's spare time was spent camping, hunting, skiing, fishing and floating rivers. He searched for and found the biggest waves and the fastest slopes. He could turn the average into the unique, often kayaking with his dog, Kona, riding the spray skirt. Dave was an avid fisherman, expert skier, river guide and a meticulous finish carpenter. He was a man who never met a stranger. He was a wonderful husband, father, brother and son. David will be dearly and deeply missed. Like a bullet, David is gone.

Dave is survived by his loving wife, Lisa Wirtanen Allred; Lisa's daughter, Audrey and son, Clay; his daughter, Elizabeth and grandchildren, Kiya and Layce; his parents, Nick and Esther Nicholson of Boise; brother, Paul Allred and wife, Sharon and their son, Ely Allred; sister, Jamie Olavarria and husband, Andy and son, Alec and daughter, Claire; brother, Jeff Allred and wife, Cindy and children, Dylan and Arlee; and sister, Jole Allred Voulelis and husband, Jim and their boys, Nick and Max; Lisa's mother, Ginny Wirtanen; her brother, Tom Wirtanen and wife Anne, and their children, Hannah and Rachel; sister, Kellie Wirtanen; brother, George Wirtanen; uncle, Jack and wife Betty Allred and son, Jackson and daughter, Jill Wornell; and aunt, Miriam Allred Smith and her husband, Dick of Burley and daughter, Connie Jones and Steve of Boise. Dave was preceded in death by his birth father, Maj. James H. Allred, a decorated Vietnam veteran; his granddaughter, Shiane Raine; and his cousin, Mitch Allred of Burley.

If we could ask Dave his advice about how to cope with his passing, he would simply say a heartfelt, "I love you man." He would give you the shirt off his back and his last dime if needed. He will leave a hole in many hearts, most of all in his true love, Lisa's, and of course, the rest of his family. Thank you, Dave, for just being yourself and your retort to open vague questions, "Hard sayin', not knowin'," will live forever in your family.

A celebration of Dave's life will held at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 11, at Municipal Park in Boise. A gathering of family and friends will be held at Jim and Jole's residence, 215 Bene Posto Place in Boise, immediately following the service.

Donations in Dave Allred's name can be made to Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited or Idaho Rivers United, 2600 Rose Hill St., Suite 201, Boise, ID 83705 (343 7481).

Physical Education, and the Future of Sex Education Initiative. The latest suggestions were already drawing less enthusiastic reactions from some.

By the end of second grade, the guidelines say students should use the correct body part names for the male and female anatomy, and also understand that all living things reproduce and that all people have the right to not be touched if they don't want to be. They also say young elementary school kids should be able to identify different kinds of family structures and explain why bullying and teasing are wrong.

Beyond lessons about puberty by the end of fifth grade, the guidelines say students should be able to define sexual harassment and abuse.

When they leave middle school, they should be able to differentiate between gender identity, gender expression and sexual orientation, according to the guidelines. And the way they should be able to explain why a rape victim is not at fault, know about bullying and dating violence and describe the signs and impacts of sexually transmitted diseases.

It calls for those leaving eighth grade to also be able to evaluate the effectiveness of abstinence, condoms and other "safer sex methods" and know how emergency contraception works. Many of these issues the groups encouraged to be further addressed in high school as well.

It's unclear how much influence the recommendations will have among educators.

"I like being able to fire people who provide services to me. If someone doesn't give me the good service I need, I'm going to go get somebody else to provide that service to me," he added.

A few hours later, in a previously unscheduled appearance before reporters, Romney emphasized he had been talking about insurance companies.

"Things can always be taken out of context, and I understand that's what the Obama people will do. But as you know I was speaking about insurance companies and we need to be able to make a choice and my comments entirely reflected that discussion."

federal law, that marijuana dispensaries bring crime, and that such businesses are just fronts for drug-dealing, supplying weed to people who aren't really sick.

Cities and towns are prohibiting dispensaries outright or applying zoning ordinances so strict that they amount to the same thing. The ordinances typically set minimum distances between such businesses and schools, homes, parks and houses of worship.

The township manager of Maple Shade, N.J., where the zoning board last year turned down an application for a dispensary at the vacant site of a former furniture store, said his town was just following zoning law. But Gary LaVenia said it is easy to see why people would be nervous about legal pot-dealing in their communities.

"People read the accounts of what's going on in the other states, like Colorado, like California," he said. "Regardless of the fact that use here is the most regulated, people still read those accounts and assume that that's what's going to happen here."

Medical marijuana advocates say the resistance is going to hurt people in desperate need of relief.

"It prevents patients with mobility issues from getting their medication," said Kris Hermes, a spokesman for Americans for Safe Access, an Oakland, Calif., group. "It also pushes patients into the illicit market."

States such as California and Colorado have seen an explosion in the number of pot dispensaries, along with criticism that the rules are so lax that practically anyone can buy weed. Also, there have been cases of violence involving people trying to steal pot from dispensaries.

Local governments are within their rights to restrict or keep out pot businesses, said Lars Etzkorn, program director for the National League of Cities.

Zoning Works Best with A Dose of Planning

Late last month, the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission gave us a whole new way to see the Snake River Canyon. Magic Valley Flight Simulation now has permission to build a gravity-driven zip line attraction alongside Canyon Springs Golf Course, an effort two years in the making.

As they have the whole time, nearby residents opposed the zip line, with perhaps the biggest concern being the increased traffic it will bring to the windy Canyon Springs Road that's the only route to reach it in the canyon.

Some members of the commission decided that traffic and that road weren't their problem. "We don't want to punish (Magic Valley Flight Simulation) for the city not fixing the road," commission member Kevin Cope said.

Then, the commission decided to address traffic issues at the site of the zip line, requiring the developers to expand the parking available for their customers.

The implication of that conversation for a key city planning board is concerning at best.

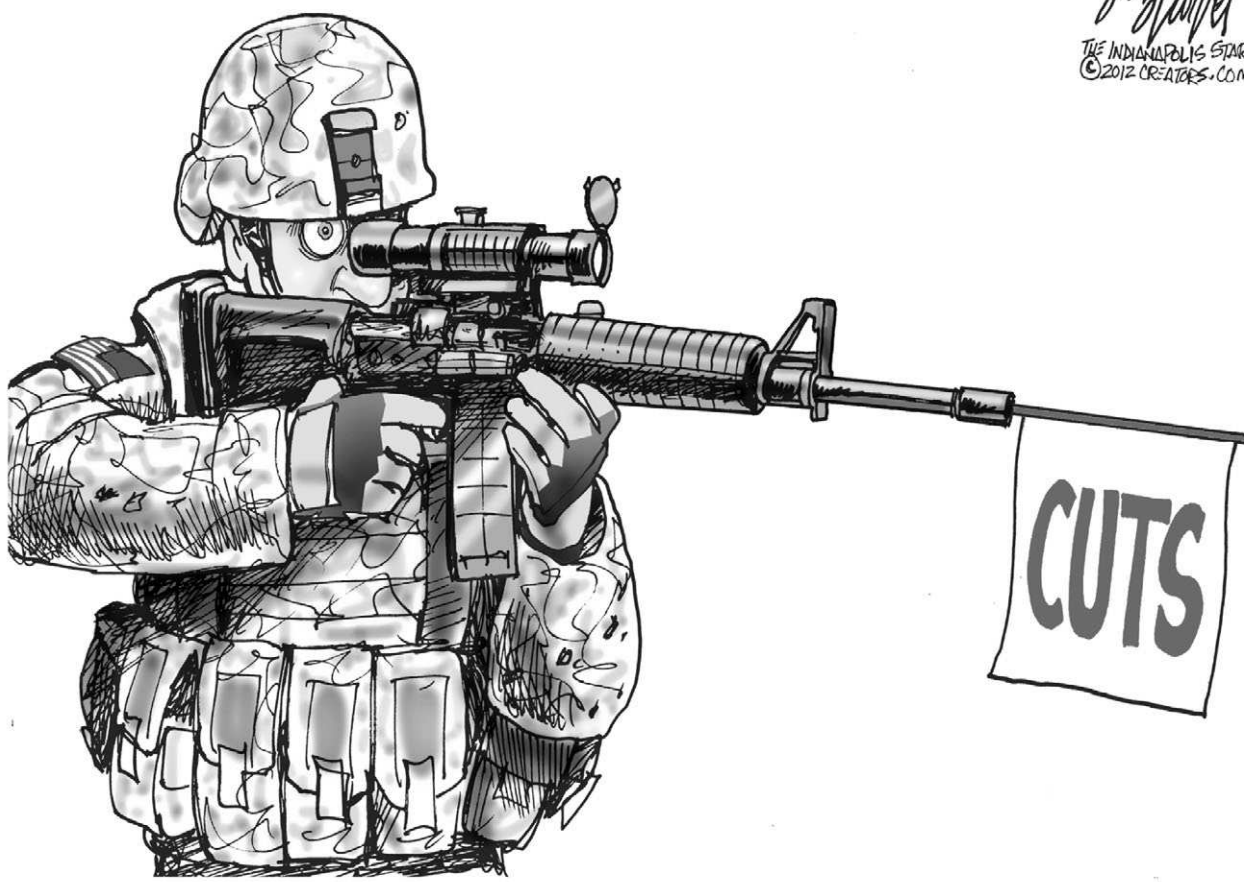

We're sure those on the P&Z who gave the zip line its permit honestly believed that taking road conditions into account overstepped their authority. But it doesn't. City code allows the commission to examine whether a development requiring such a permit will receive adequate public services — including streets — and if approving it will create "excessive additional requirements at public cost" down the road.

Now, will traffic on Canyon Springs Road cause those excessive requirements? Early last year, the city's Traffic Safety Commission concluded the zip line's presence won't add tremendously to the number of vehicles winding their way into the canyon — a report that also played a large role in the P&Z's approval. Magic Valley Flight Simulation estimates another 12-20 vehicles will wind down the road each day due to its operation — spaced out through a business day, that's another 2 1/2 cars an hour at most.

Frankly, we hope the zip-line company's estimate ends up a little low. The developers' tenacity in bringing a new type of business to town is commendable, and it's good to see locals stepping up to give our economy another shot in the arm. What's more, Canyon Springs Road can probably absorb this increase.

But the P&Z's reluctance to examine how the zip line connects to the rest of the nearby world is a policy that only means trouble down the road. When it comes to special-use permits, the P&Z is the final stop. Signing off on business development while assuming the city has the resources and ability to keep up nearby infrastructure is the sort of planning that will lead to congestion and collisions one day, no matter what part of town is involved.

New development and new business is commendable, but it doesn't have to come at the expense of common sense.

County Focuses on Inmate Change over New Jail

After reading the editorial recently about the regional jail issue I feel compelled to respond. At some point Twin Falls County will have to deal with inmate overpopulation issues, however, now is not that time. We are not spending enough on out of county housing for inmates to justify the expense of a new facility. Assuming Gooding builds their jail, I will use it if the price is comparable to other out of county housing rates. Sheriff Gough is fair and our working relationship benefits both counties.

At this time I believe the greater need is to address the number of inmates who re-offend and land back in jail. I would like to supplement the programs we have available to help inmates become successful, law-abiding citizens. In order to make programs of this nature work, the county will need to build additional classroom space in the facility. My goal is to offer inmates the tools needed to make positive changes in their lives, not simply house them. This would not only benefit the inmate but the citizens of this county.

When I ask the taxpayers to fund the jail I want it to be for the good of everyone.

Watch Out for Dubious Magazine Sellers

I have a question for your readers:

In June 2011, there was a group of magazine sellers here in town. One young man stopped by and my husband decided to buy a magazine in climbing for our grandson. Well, this is what I found out.

We have no book. Yes, outfit, D&D Consulting, P.O., Kitridge, Colo. No such name of a town on the map. No phone listing. They were in Denver, Colo., three years ago and left.

The county Better Business Bureau said they have 10-plus complaints and 44 filed for collection.

I think we were duped. The check was cashed in three days after they received it.

Looking into the Future of College Sports

The future of collegiate sports might be something like this:

There will be no more scholarships. Athletes will not be required to attend class, nor even be enrolled as students. Colleges will sponsor teams that still carry their name. Players will be paid a stipend for their participation. When their services end, they may or not go on to professional teams. Presently, few top athletes who survive a 15 to 20-year pro career choose to then take advantage of their Ancient Egyptian Social Conditions or Pre Impressionist Art of Indigenous People's degree, received at a staggering cost paid for by increasing tuitions.

In the future, those gridiron athletes who want an education can enroll and, like all the others, bear the cost of their own education.

It may sound heartless, but presently a college team needing a third string punter or field goal kicker to round out their roster will offer a scholarship to a boy who may, in his four years there, be called up on to play five minutes of actual game time. By any commercial standards, that's highly inefficient. There might be a multi-school talent pool where self-specialized players in highly specialized positions wait until called upon: much as the alternate jury member system works.

Well, you may not like it, but with your 17-year-old looking at a $40,000 annual tuition, under our present system, in addition to carrying their own load, they might be called upon to mentor (do the work of) a star player. It's unrealistic to expect players to carry a full course load and spend 60 to 80 hours a week working out, practicing, studying plays. Additionally, they may be gone many school days traveling to away games. Maybe you think they're given more than our 24 hours a day. Not true.

Why Publish Such Religious Buggery?

It was with execration that I read Cal Thomas's monstrosously craven column that you used as an editorial on Dec. 22, 'Death of an Atheist' (Christopher Hitchens).

Why on earth (or in heaven's name) would you publish such religious buggery by Thomas is my ken. Thomas has to be the most infuriatingly dishonest, self-righteous, posturing poltroon whose garbage you pay good money for.

If I am right, and I am, Thomas is a gleeful evangelical gangbanger for the religious right wingnuts; a phony who has, somehow or other, passed himself off as an astute observer and writer of national politics and human behavior.

Why he would attack a dead man when he lacked the dimissaries to attack that same man when that man was living shows me that he is nothing more than (but probably less than) a miserable caitiff of the spineless, fly-blown Pat Robertson variety.

Thomas gives new meaning to Hitchen's phrase, "religious lunacy": people who take mirthful pleasure at the death of a worthy and superior opponent and whose hatred of honesty and truth and contrary opinions and physical pleasure is the war cry of the lubricious, well-gulled deadbeats of the lost-in-space religious catatonics who have brought more fear and self-loathing into the world than any other known (to me) group.

I have long believed that people who spend their lives (as Thomas has done) speaking ill of individuals and groups have something they have difficulty repressing.

What Hitchens said about Larry Craig on Sept. 1, 2007, seems applicable to Thomas: "Next time you hear some particularly moralizing speech, set your watch. You won't have to wait long before the man who made it is found crouched awkwardly yet ecstatically while the cistern drips and the roar of the flush maddens him like wine."

New Law Seems to Be Unfair

Driving while on cell phone: A new law just got passed today, Jan. 3, 2012. Any professional truck driver caught talking on their cell phone and driving could cost us more than $2,500.

I have been a professional truck driver for 26 years and I feel that is an excellent law. That's what they make headsets for, so we can keep both hands on the wheel at all times.

But now what about the non-professional drivers that at this moment are still allowed to talk and drive? If that law is passed for us, then it should definitely be passed for them. I mean it's dangerous any way you look at it. Over the years, I have seen everything from women putting on makeup driving down the road to guys reading going down the road.

I think all dangerous activity seen inside a moving vehicle whether the vehicle is a big truck or a small car, the same law should be in effect with a costly penalty if not obeyed. Maybe there would be a few less accidents.

Idaho Treasurer Should Be Ousted from Office

Unless a public employee has a likelihood of responding to an emergency day or night, there is no reason for taxpayers to provide a vehicle for his use.

Our state treasurer Crane has abused the credit card provided him by using it to pay for his commute. He seems to regard his position as so important that he spends taxpayers' money for his own use and I, for one, consider this on a par with embezzlement.

He really should be removed from office.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CAMP PLAGUED BY VANDALISM

BY KATHY HEDBURG
Lewiston Tribune

LEWISTON • The latest indignity included a load of household goods dumped on the site of the Talmaks campground, located about seven miles south of U.S. Highway 95 between Craigmont and Winchester.

An old refrigerator, a toilet, windows, broken-down furniture and other debris were scattered as if the historic church campground was nothing more than a landfill.

"I don't know what it is," said Maple Stuiwenga, president of the Talmaks Camp Association.

"I don't know if it's just youth or adults being out and about and they just find that place. It's obvious it's an Indian church camp."

The dumping follows several years of vandalism and harassment of the church grounds and its participants, capped a couple of years ago by a truckload of people who drove by at night yelling racial slurs and epithets.

But Stuiwenga, a quiet-spoken woman whose grandfather and aunt have also served as camp association presidents in the past, stops short of saying the incidents are racially motivated.

"We're a Christian camp. We're a Presbyterian camp," Stuiwenga said. "I hate to think of it that way. I don't want to think that people are so racially motivated that they would do that at a Christian camp. I would hope that we would get past all that racial stuff and there isn't that much prejudice out there. But maybe there is."

Stuiwenga admits her perspective is not shared by all members of the organization. Some people are certain the trouble at Talmaks is because it's an Indian campground.

Leslie Hendrick, chief of the Nez Perce Tribal Police Department, said the investigations into the recent vandalism and harassment have been suspended because of lack of evidence and lack of suspects.

"The last dumping, we went through furniture and looked in the cushions and down below trying to find a name or something and we weren't able to find anything," Hendrick said.

The tribal police keep an eye on the campground, however, and include it in regular patrols when the road is passable, Hendrick said.

The camp started in 1897 when the six Presbyterian churches on the Nez Perce Reservation that were founded by missionaries came together for an annual meeting.

The two-week camp was originally held at one of the churches, located at Spalding, Kamiah, Ahsaka, Stites and the Camas Prairie. But in 2004 the camp moved to its permanent site on Mason Butte overlooking the Camas Prairie.

Stuiwenga said since the early days whole families would gather at Talmaks for the annual camp, listening to speakers, taking part in Bible studies and other Christian activities.

"When our families moved to Talmaks, we moved there for the full two weeks," Stuiwenga said. "The church was a big white tent that the men raised up a week before the camp started.

"Back when women didn't work outside the home it was easier for families to move up there. We'd have visiting ministers ... and we try to keep the youth engaged with prayer services and worship services — we had something scheduled for every day for two weeks."

The tents have since been replaced by a main gathering hall, a kitchen and guest cabins. Each family has its own separate campsite. Visitors are common, Stuiwenga said, and are fed and housed at no expense.

"The camp is very family, Christian-oriented. It's not some kind of weird religion," she said. "And I don't know if people just have a misunderstanding of what we are. Anybody is welcome to come, we usually put (the announcement of the camp) in the paper and we've had people from all over.

"The only thing that we ask people is just be respectful of the grounds. Because that's our place of worship."

The worst incident of vandalism took place about a year ago when someone broke down the front gate to the camp and damaged several cabins, breaking windows, tipping over refrigerators and stoves. The vandals poked holes in the walls of buildings and took tepee poles and rammed them through a wall.

"It was a lot of senseless damage that took place," Stuiwenga said. "Nothing was stolen. It was all just going in and trashing the place.

"I was so sorrowful to go up there to see all of that damage."

Since then there have been other incidents where people have broken down gates and fences and driven into the grounds and spun their pickup trucks around. Windows have been broken and other damage has taken place.

Stuiwenga said volunteers have helped restore the damage each time and the incidents have been reported to the police. So far no clues have emerged regarding the culprits.

Talmaks members are continuing to discuss ways to prevent such happenings, including posting night guards during the summer camp. But the rest of the year the place is vulnerable because of its isolation, and the only thing that can be done is to increase individual and law enforcement patrols whenever possible.

"You think that you're going out there and you're going to be safe because we're out there to worship," she said. "And yet we still have to watch out for stuff like this."

O'Neill Butte is seen from South Kaibab Trail in September 2010 in Grand Canyon National Park, Ariz. The Obama administration announced Monday a 20-year ban on new mining claims on more than 1 million acres near the Grand Canyon, among the most well-known and visited natural wonders in the U.S.

U.S. Bans New Mining Claims Near Grand Canyon

BY MATTHEW DALY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Obama administration is banning new hard rock mining on more than a million acres near the Grand Canyon, an area known to be rich in high-grade uranium ore reserves.

The decision, announced Monday by Interior Secretary Ken Salazar, hands a victory to environmental groups and some Democratic lawmakers who had worked for years to limit mining near the national park, one of the nation's most popular tourist destinations.

"When families travel to see the Grand Canyon, they have a right to expect that the only glow they will see will come from the sun setting over the rim of this natural wonder, and not from the radioactive contamination that comes from uranium mining," said Rep. Edward Markey of Massachusetts, the senior Democrat on the House Natural Resources Committee.

But congressional Republicans and industry groups opposed it, arguing that Salazar was eliminating hundreds of jobs and depriving the country of a critically important energy source. The area near the Grand Canyon contains as much as 40 percent of the nation's known uranium resources, worth tens of billions of dollars.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., called the ban a "devastating blow to job creation in northern Arizona."

McCain said the ban was "fueled by an emotional public relations campaign pitting the public's love for the Grand Canyon against a modern form of low-impact mining that occurs many miles from the canyon walls."

During a speech at the National Geographic Society,

Salazar said he was "at peace" with the decision, one of the most high-profile actions of his three-year tenure at Interior. Salazar twice had imposed temporary bans on mining claims.

"A withdrawal is the right approach for this priceless American landscape," Salazar said. "People from all over the country and around the world come to visit the Grand Canyon. Numerous American Indian tribes regard this magnificent icon as a sacred place, and millions of people in the Colorado River Basin depend on the river for drinking water (and) irrigation."

The decision imposes a 20-year ban on new mining claims on federal land near the Grand Canyon. About 3,000 mining claims already staked in the area will not be affected, although officials expect fewer than a dozen mines to be developed under existing claims.

While uranium remains an important part of a comprehensive energy strategy, Salazar said, the Grand Canyon is a national treasure that must be protected. Salazar called the ban "a responsible path that makes sense for this and future generations."

Uranium is used in nuclear power plants, which supply about 20 percent of the nation's electricity.

The national park attracts more than 4 million visitors a year and generates an estimated $3.5 billion in economic activity. About 26 million Americans in four states, including the cities of Phoenix and Los Angeles, rely on the Colorado River for clean drinking water.

Conservation groups called the 20-year ban a crucial protection for an American icon. Uranium reserves near the Grand Canyon pose a real and present threat to Grand Canyon

National Park and its water supply, said Taylor McKinnon, public lands campaigns director at the Arizona-based Center for Biological Diversity.

McKinnon and other environmentalists disputed claims by the mining industry and some Republican members of Congress that the ban would hurt the state's economy and the nation's energy independence.

"The real economic engine in northern Arizona is not uranium mining. It's tourism," McKinnon said. "To jeopardize our economic engine with more toxic uranium mining is unacceptable."

GOP lawmakers lambasted the ban, calling it an overreach that jeopardizes jobs for no proven reason. They cited a study showing that even a severe mining accident would increase uranium levels in the Colorado River by an amount undetectable over levels normally carried by the river from erosion of geologic deposits.

"It is unconscionable that the administration has yet again caved to political pressure from radical special interest groups rather than standing up for the American people," said Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah. "Banning access to the most uranium-rich land in the United States will be overwhelmingly detrimental to both jobs in Utah and Arizona and our nation's domestic energy security!"

Bishop, McCain and other GOP lawmakers back legislation that would prevent the Interior Department from imposing the 20-year ban.

Using modern techniques, mining does not affect drinking water from the Colorado River, the GOP lawmakers said.

The Bureau of Land Management said the 20-year ban on new mining claims would reduce overall uranium production by about 6 percent of current U.S. demand.

State, local and federal governments are expected to lose an estimated $16.6 million in annual tax revenue, and 465 jobs would not materialize.

The Bush administration had opened up land near the canyon to new mining claims. Salazar reversed the Bush policy in 2009 and called for a two-year moratorium on new mining claims around the canyon. He followed up with a six-month extension last year.

Rates Fall at Weekly Treasury Bill Auction

WASHINGTON (AP) • Interest rates on short-term Treasury bills fell in Monday's auction. The Treasury Department auctioned $29 billion in three-month bills at a discount rate of 0.01 percent, down from 0.015 percent last week. Another $27 billion in six-month bills was auctioned at a discount rate of 0.05 percent, down from 0.055 percent last week. The three-month rate was the lowest since these bills averaged 0.005 percent on Dec. 19. The six-month rate was the lowest since these bills averaged 0.04 percent, also on Dec. 19. The discount rates reflect that the bills sell for less than face value. For a $10,000 bill, the three-month price was $9,999.75 while a six-month bill sold for $9,997.47.

Newedge Paying $700K Fine for Inaccurate Reports • Federal regulators have ordered Newedge USA to pay a $700,000 civil fine for filing inaccurate trading reports and violating a previous order sanctioning the brokerage firm for the same conduct. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission said Monday that Newedge agreed to the fine to settle charges that it submitted trading reports with numerous errors between March and July 2011. Newedge was sanctioned in February 2011 for filing erroneous reports between June 2009 and July 2010. New York-based Newedge paid $220,910 in fines and restitution under the 2011 order, which also covered alleged violations of caps on the amount of trading allowed for speculation in cattle futures in 2009.

GM Likely to Recapture Global Auto Sales Lead

BY TOM KRISHER and DAVID MCHUGH
Associated Press

DETROIT • General Motors Co. is on track to retake the title of world's top-selling automaker, riding strong sales in the U.S. and China to beat Volkswagen and Toyota. GM, which lost the crown to Toyota in 2008 after holding it for more than seven decades, won't release global sales numbers until later this month, but it's on pace to finish 2011 at around 9 million cars and trucks, at least 800,000 more than its German and Japanese rivals.

Winning the global sales crown doesn't mean much to a company's bottom line, but for GM, it's an example of just how far the company has come since it nearly collapsed in financial ruin back in 2009. That year, the company sold only 7.5 million vehicles. GM executives have consistently said they're more focused on making money than outselling Toyota or Volkswagen. But it does boost employee morale and gives bragging rights to the winner.

Volkswagen AG on Monday said it sold a record 8.156 million vehicles last year, a 14 percent rise over 2010. The company expects a tough 2012, though. Toyota, whose production suffered from the tsunami and Fukushima nuclear disaster, had earlier reported sales of 7.9 million vehicles in 2011.

GM, meanwhile, sold almost 7 million vehicles worldwide in the first three quarters and is expected to reach around 9 million for 2011.

At GM, the company's recent new products are far more appealing than the company's offerings in past years when Toyota took the crown away, says Jeff Schuster, senior vice president of forecasting for LMC Automotive, an industry consulting company in Troy, Michigan.

Other manufacturers have passed Toyota partly because its car production was paralyzed by Japan's earthquake and nuclear disaster last year. But rivals also developed stylish vehicles that are drawing more customers. "They're not pushing their designs as much as others in terms of new looks and feel," Schuster says of Toyota. "The market has changed."

Volkswagen met its aggressive sales goals in the U.S. and throughout the world, and its products also have made it a strong global competitor, Schuster says.

In the U.S., VW sales rose 26 percent last year to top 324,000 vehicles, boosted by a new Jetta compact sedan and the Passat midsize sedan. That surpassed its goal of 300,000.

Schuster expects a tighter race for the global sales crown next year with Toyota recovering from Japan's disasters and the Nissan-Renault venture challenging the leaders.

Volkswagen, whose brands include Audi, Skoda and Seat, has a goal of producing 10 million vehicles per year and passing Toyota and GM to become the world's biggest automaker by 2018. Volkswagen's top sales and marketing executive, Christian Klingler, says that "all the company's brands have shown increases in difficult conditions on volatile markets" and called the 2011 figures "an outstanding result."

But he added that the coming year will be demanding. "In 2012 the risks are increasing above all on European markets."

The 17 countries that use the euro are struggling with a financial crisis over too much government debt. Fears that a country may default and damage the banking system have weighed on the wider economy and many think the eurozone economy may have shrunk in the last three months of 2011.

But the 2011 figures underlined a strong year for German automakers, who have profited from strong sales and profits in emerging markets, especially China. Volkswagen, Daimler AG's Mercedes-Benz, BMW, and Porsche all recorded record vehicle sales for the year.

Luxury carmaker BMW AG said Monday that it sold a record 1.67 million vehicles under its BMW, Mini and Rolls-Royce brands thanks to a 14.2 percent increase over 2010.

The BMW brand, the company's mainstay, sold 12.8 percent more cars and SUVs — a total of 1.38 million. Rolls-Royce increased unit sales by 30.5 percent with 3,538 cars sold worldwide, breaking a sales record from 1978.

Porsche on Monday reported a 22 percent sales increase to 118,867 vehicles.

Daimler AG on Jan. 5 reported record sales of 1.362 million for its Mercedes-Benz, smart and Maybach brands.

Some analysts have said that VW is the world's biggest because GM's figures include vehicles made by its Wuling joint venture in China. Many don't count Wuling because GM doesn't have controlling interest in the company, but GM includes it in global sales figures.

Including Wuling, GM will overtake Toyota and Volkswagen, says Schuster, senior vice president of forecasting for LMC Automotive, an industry consulting company in Troy, Michigan.

Eagles Glad to Have Santo Back on Floor

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

Welcome back, Gerson Santo.

The 6-foot-10 Brazilian with the sweet jump shot and a knack for drawing charges finally looked like himself this weekend in the College of Southern Idaho's home sweep of Salt Lake CC and Snow College.

Santo, who had offseason knee surgery and sustained a concussion earlier this season, played a season-high 19 minutes against Snow College, scoring seven points and grabbing a game-high 11 rebounds. He also took a charge, blocked a shot and had one rim-rattling dunk in the second half with the Golden Eagles up by 25.

"He looked really good out there," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "He's worked really hard with his physical therapists and trainers to get back, get that knee feeling better and playing like we know he can. ... We need him. If we're going to be the team we want to be, which is a national championship contender, we need him. It was good to see him play well."

Santo was a key cog in last year's championship team, averaging 8.4 points and 3.8 rebounds off the bench in 36 games, but got off to a slow start this season with a sore knee. He's played in just 10 of the team's 16 games, failing to score in half of them. He missed five games in early December after sustaining a concussion.

"It was a lot of fun tonight," said Santo after Saturday's win. "It felt good to get back and feel healthy. I just want to help the team win."

The former Cincinnati Reds shortstop was chosen on 495 of 573 ballots (86 percent) in voting announced by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, well above the necessary 75 percent. Larkin was on the ballot for the third time after falling 75 votes short last year.

He will be inducted July 22 in Cooperstown along with the late Ron Santo, elected last month by the Veterans Committee.

"I am so humbled by the experience and so excited about being the newest member of the Hall of Fame," Larkin said on a conference call.

NEW ORLEANS • Jeremy Shelley kicked five field goals and Trent Richardson broke a 34-yard touchdown run late in the fourth quarter as No. 2 Alabama beat No. 1 LSU 21-0 on Monday night — the first shutout in BCS title game history.

down between the Southeastern Conference rivals in more than 115 minutes of play and one overtime period.

Alabama (12-1) had put it away before that as Shelley kicked field goals of 23, 34, 41, 35 and 44 yards in the first three quarters to make it 15-0, matching an all-bowl record. He also missed two field goals and an extra-point attempt.

But this time, the missed kicks didn't matter

The Tigers (13-1) and Tide met on Nov. 5 in what was dubbed the Game of the Century, and the Tigers won a touchdown-less, defensive standoff, 9-6 in overtime. Alabama went 2 for 6 on field goals in Tuscaloosa.

Richardson, the Heisman Trophy finalist, ran for 96 yards on 20 carries and offensive player of the game A.J. McCarron passed for 234 yards as the Tide had no problem moving against LSU's second-ranked defense in the nation — just not into the end zone.

Alabama's top-ranked defense didn't need much help. With All-American linebacker Dont'a Hightower leading the way, the Tide held LSU to 92 total yards and five first downs.

For the Tide, it's the second BCS championship in the last three years under coach Nick Saban, who also won a title at LSU in 2003.

In a bowl season filled with high-scoring games, the top two defenses in the nation set the tone at the BCS title game. And much like the first meeting, special teams were pivotal.

The Tide's defense was dominant and linebacker C.J. Mosley had the first takeaway of the game in the third quarter, his last play of the game as it turned out.

LSU's Jordan Jefferson started to scramble toward the line, but at the last second flipped the ball toward Spencer Ware. Problem was, Ware had turned to block and Mosley snagged the ball and set up Alabama at the Tigers 27.

ARCHIE MANNING: LSU, ALABAMA ARE TWO BEST

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • Archie Manning has considerable respect for Oklahoma State. He thinks that Oregon and Stanford had fine seasons, and were both deserving of playing in BCS bowl games.

Just not the BCS title game.

The first father of NFL quarterbacks said Monday that top-ranked LSU and No. 2 Alabama were the best two teams in college football. "Without a doubt," he added.

"I like a lot of teams out there," Manning said after presenting the Liberty Mutual Coach of the Year awards at an upscale hotel in the French Quarter. "I don't know who the third-best team is — it might be Arkansas for all I know — but I will say this, they're a distant third."

Manning said he felt badly that LSU coach Les Miles would have to knock off the Crimson Tide twice to win the crystal football given to the champion, but he also reasoned that doing so just might elevate the Tigers among the greatest teams in the history of college football.

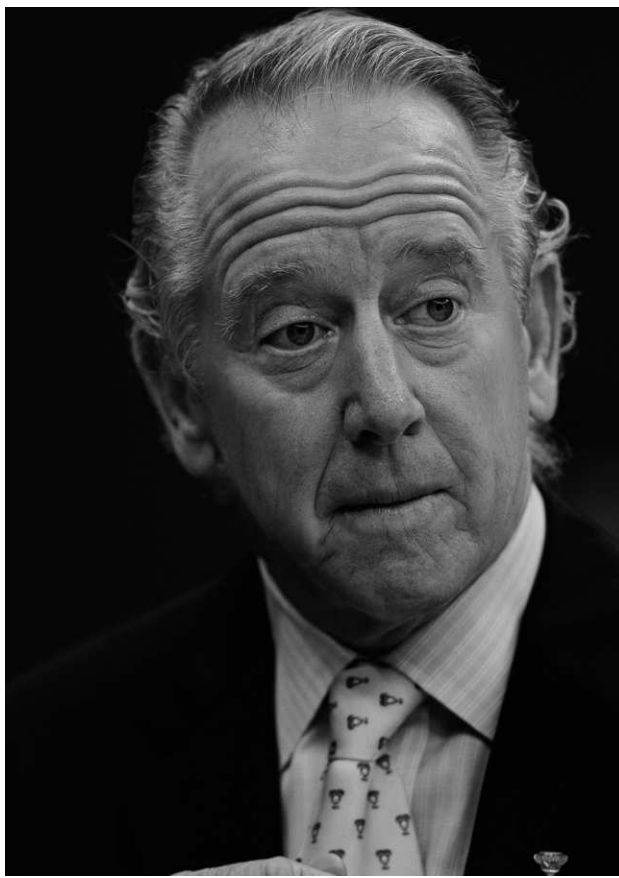

Bowl Records

The all-SEC matchup ensures the conference will lose a BCS title game for the first time after eight perfect appearances. And with nine BCS championships the SEC has more titles in the 14-year history of the title game than all the other conferences combined.

The SEC's overall record in BCS games will be 16-7, giving it the most overall victories and the second-best percentage at .696.

The Mountain West has the best winning percentage at .750. The Big Ten has the second-most total BCS victories at 12, to go with 13 losses.

with Conference USA and the Mid-American Conference having the best winning percentage at .800. Both finished 4-1.

The Big 12 was next at 6-2 (.750) and the SEC at 6-3 (.667).

Crimson Saints

Former Alabama safety Roman Harper has had a purple and gold LSU wind breaker hanging in his locker at Saints headquarters since early November, when the Tigers defeated the Crimson Tide in Tuscaloosa.

"I've got to pay my debts to society. I lost the last time," Harper said, adding that he was happily taking bets with Saints teammates — including former LSU receiver Devery Henderson — on Monday night's rematch between his Tide and the Tigers in the Su-perdome.

"Just understand Devery will be dressed real cute after we win this game," Harper said.

Winging It

Tigers punter Brad Wing joined some elite company on Monday when he was voted to the Football Writers Association of America's Freshman All-America team.

He was the only player from LSU or Alabama picked to the 26-man roster.

Wing has generated quite the cult following in Baton Rouge after his booming kicks helped the Tigers to the BCS title game. One of them, a 73-yarder in the first meeting with Alabama, dramatically changed the field position in a nip-and-tuck game that wound up going to overtime.

Changes Coming For BCS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • The Bowl Championship Series as college football fans have come to know it is going away.

Over the next six months, the people who oversee the much-maligned postseason format will talk about how to reconstruct the system for crowning a national champion. In the tumultuous 14-year history of the BCS, the appetite for change among college football's leaders has never been stronger.

"It's my impression that ... there will be meaningful discussion about possible changes to the BCS," Southeastern Conference Commissioner Mike Slive said last week as SEC rivals LSU and Alabama prepared to play in the title game Monday night at the Superdome.

The 11 conference commissioners and Notre Dame's athletic director will meet Tuesday in New Orleans to exchange ideas.

What the changes will be is hard to say because it's all open for debate, from eliminating automatic bids to top-tier bowl games to creating a four-team playoff — an idea that's known as the plus-one model.

What's not a realistic option is exactly what many football fans are clamoring for, a full-scale playoff that would require numerous teams to play additional games.

"Whatever we do we have to protect the regular season," BCS executive director Bill Hancock said Monday at a meeting of the Football Writers Association of America. "I think the larger the playoff field the more damage to the regular season."

Still, there is likely to be a BCS extreme makeover in the 2014 season.

"Everything you can imagine will be discussed," Hancock said. "Everything from format, who plays who, to where they play, to the business aspect of it ... it's all going to be on the table."

The last time changes were considered was 2008. That's when Slive, with the support of Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner John Swofford, made a push for the plus-one model to the rest of the group.

Slive's proposal was unceremoniously shot down. Simply put, the plus-one would match the No. 1 team in the BCS standings after the regular season against the No. 4 team in a bowl game, and No. 2 against No. 3 in another, creating two national semifinals.

The winners would play in a championship game the following week.

It's a format that Alabama coach Nick Saban has always liked.

"I just feel that only having two teams sort of takes a lot of teams out of it," he said during media day in New Orleans.

Currently, the top two teams in the BCS standings after the regular season, including conference championships, advance to the title game. It's a format that's led to frequent debates about whether the right teams were getting a shot to play for a national title.

This year's controversy involved whether Alabama (11-1) should get a second chance at undefeated LSU or if Big 12 champion Oklahoma State (12-1, including its bowl victory over Stanford) had earned a shot to play for the national title.

Standing in the way of the plus-one last time were the Big Ten, Pac-10, Big East and Big 12.

Since then, the Pac-10 has become the Pac-12 and it has a new commissioner, Larry Scott, who has quickly established himself as one of the most forward-thinking leaders in college sports. Previous commissioner Tom Hansen was adamantly against a plus-one. Scott is willing to listen.

"We don't have a definite opinion on that or any other model yet," he said. "It's a little premature. Those conversations are going to start in earnest this spring and I'll have opportunities to talk to other people informally within our conference and with other conferences between now and then."

The Big 12 has an interim commissioner, with Chuck Neinas replacing the ousted Dan Beebe, who was a vocal opponent of any type of playoff. The embattled Big East has a new commissioner, too. John Marinatto has been busy trying to save his league, and it's doubtful the conference is in a position to be a force in the upcoming BCS negotiations.

What hasn't changed is the Big Ten's stance, led by its influential commissioner, Jim Delany.

Delany is steadfastly against a full-blown playoff and has said his biggest fear with the plus-one would be that once a four-team playoff becomes a reality it would inevitably grow.

Messi Wins FIFA's Top Honors Again

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ZURICH • Already considered one of soccer's greats at age 24, Lionel Messi on Monday became the first to win FIFA player of the year three times in a row.

The Barcelona and Argentina forward received the FIFA Ballon d'Or award for 2011, beating club teammate Xavi Hernandez and Real Madrid's Cristiano Ronaldo.

"It's a huge honor," Messi said after accepting the trophy from retired Brazilian great Ronaldo.

The only other three-time winners are Ronaldo (1996-97, 2002) and Zinedine Zidane (1998, 2000, 2003). The FIFA award was renamed last year when it merged with France Football's Golden Ball.

On a night of Barcelona dominance, Pep Guardiola was honored as men's coach of the year. He was chosen ahead of Real Madrid's Jose Mourinho and Manchester United's Alex Ferguson.

Among the women, Homare Sawa of Japan ended Brazilian forward Marta's five-year reign as the top player. American Abby Wambach was a finalist. Sawa led Japan to win the 2011 Women's World Cup and adds the FIFA prize to those as the tournament's best player and top scorer.

Heavy Minutes

The sophomore quartet of Tayllor Gipson, Chakala Carthen, Kylee Schierman and Mechela Barnes did some heavy lifting for the Golden Eagles offense in their win over Salt Lake, scoring all but three of the team's 69 points.

They also played some serious minutes.

Gipson and Carthen played all 40, Schierman hardly had a break, playing 39 and Barnes played 37. Megan Tanner was the only bench player to log significant minutes, going for 18.

On Saturday, the trend continued, as Gipson again played all 40. Barnes went the distance too, while Carthen logged 34 minutes and Schierman 31.

Tanner played well in her 19 minutes, scoring eight points and Gabriela Borges logged six minutes off the bench, but overall the four sophomores are having to carry this team right now.

How long can the heavy minutes last?

"That's a good question," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers. "I don't know how long we can afford to let them play that many minutes, but at the same time, I don't know if we can afford to get them off the court. We're trying to bring Jessy (Saint-Felix) along. Megan did a nice job for us, but we need more from our bench."

The Golden Eagles are sorely missing freshman guard Adriana Dent, who is expected to be out of the boot on her right foot next week and could possibly start practicing the following week.

A Look at the SWAC

Finally, the Scenic West Conference season started in earnest this weekend.

The North Idaho men (16-1, 2-0) stand atop the SWAC standings with CSI (14-1, 2-0) after beating Snow College 63-60 and Salt Lake CC 74-66. The Cardinals led Salt Lake by as many as 23.

USU-College of Eastern

Utah (13-2, 1-0) beat Colorado Northwestern 76-58 in Price, Utah, Friday. Colorado Northwestern (5-9, 0-1) went 0-15 in league play last season and hasn't won a SWAC game since January 2010, an 88-79 win over Snow College.

Just as the men, the Salt Lake women (9-6, 0-2) stumbled on their Idaho road trip, falling to North Idaho 62-57 Saturday, after losing to CSI. North Idaho (13-2, 2-0) beat Snow College (8-8, 1-1) 87-72 on Thursday.

USU-College of Eastern Utah (9-7, 1-0) beat Colorado Northwestern (9-5, 0-1) 77-54.

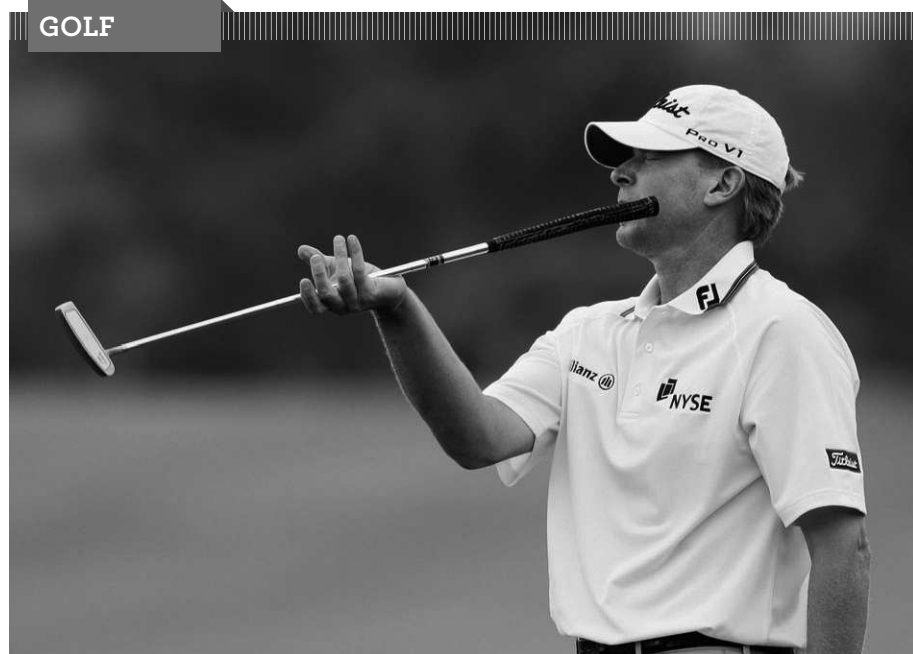

CSI travels to Couer d'Alene to play North Idaho on Saturday.

NJCAA Polls

The new men's NJCAA poll will be released today, which is the first since Dec. 13, where the Golden Eagles were ranked No. 12. CSI should jump back into the top 10 after beating No. 5 Salt Lake CC (13-4, 0-2) last Thursday.

KAPALUA, Hawaii • Steve Stricker has a bad habit of losing big leads. He managed to slip back into his old habit of winning.

Despite losing most of his five-shot lead in only six holes, Stricker steadied himself in time to kick off the new PGA Tour season with a three-shot victory in the Tournament of Champions on Monday.

Right when it looked as though Stricker was coming unglued, he made back-to-back birdies at the turn. That restored his lead to three shots, and no one got closer than two shots the rest of the way.

Stricker birdied his last hole for a 4-under 69 for his 12th career win, which moved him to No. 5 in the world ranking.

Stricker held back tears — they usually flow freely after a win — perhaps a sign that he's getting used to this business of winning. It was his ninth PGA Tour win since he turned 40, and his eighth title in his last 50 tournaments.

As usual, he didn't make it easy on himself.

Stricker had a five-shot lead going into the Monday finish on Maui, and it was just about gone when he muffed a flop shot and took bogey on the sixth hole.

Martin Laird, Webb Simpson and Jonathan Byrd each got within one shot of Stricker on the front nine, but not for long. Stricker rolled in a 25-foot birdie putt on the par-3 eighth, pitched to tap-in range at the par-5 ninth and was on his way.

Heavy Minutes

The sophomore quartet of Tayllor Gipson, Chakala Carthen, Kylee Schierman and Mechela Barnes did some heavy lifting for the Golden Eagles offense in their win over Salt Lake, scoring all but three of the team's 69 points.

They also played some serious minutes.

Gipson and Carthen played all 40, Schierman hardly had a break, playing 39 and Barnes played 37. Megan Tanner was the only bench player to log significant minutes, going for 18.

On Saturday, the trend continued, as Gipson again played all 40. Barnes went the distance too, while Carthen logged 34 minutes and Schierman 31.

Tanner played well in her 19 minutes, scoring eight points and Gabriela Borges logged six minutes off the bench, but overall the four sophomores are having to carry this team right now.

How long can the heavy minutes last?

"That's a good question," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers. "I don't know how long we can afford to let them play that many minutes, but at the same time, I don't know if we can afford to get them off the court. We're trying to bring Jessy (Saint-Felix) along. Megan did a nice job for us, but we need more from our bench."

The Golden Eagles are sorely missing freshman guard Adriana Dent, who is expected to be out of the boot on her right foot next week and could possibly start practicing the following week.

A Look at the SWAC

Finally, the Scenic West Conference season started in earnest this weekend.

The North Idaho men (16-1, 2-0) stand atop the SWAC standings with CSI (14-1, 2-0) after beating Snow College 63-60 and Salt Lake CC 74-66. The Cardinals led Salt Lake by as many as 23.

USU-College of Eastern

Utah (13-2, 1-0) beat Colorado Northwestern 76-58 in Price, Utah, Friday. Colorado Northwestern (5-9, 0-1) went 0-15 in league play last season and hasn't won a SWAC game since January 2010, an 88-79 win over Snow College.

Just as the men, the Salt Lake women (9-6, 0-2) stumbled on their Idaho road trip, falling to North Idaho 62-57 Saturday, after losing to CSI. North Idaho (13-2, 2-0) beat Snow College (8-8, 1-1) 87-72 on Thursday.

USU-College of Eastern Utah (9-7, 1-0) beat Colorado Northwestern (9-5, 0-1) 77-54.

CSI travels to Couer d'Alene to play North Idaho on Saturday.

NJCAA Polls

The new men's NJCAA poll will be released today, which is the first since Dec. 13, where the Golden Eagles were ranked No. 12. CSI should jump back into the top 10 after beating No. 5 Salt Lake CC (13-4, 0-2) last Thursday.

The women's poll will be released Wednesday second to disguise the thin pass coverage; dare him to throw the ball.

Denver coach John Fox faced similar schemes more times than he cares to count, but for the first quarter against the Steelers, the Broncos failed to complete even one pass. Pittsburgh safeties Troy Polamalu and Ryan Mundy kept creeping close to the line with almost every snap, leaving wide-open spaces behind them. The novelty of the "read-option" offense the Broncos adapted from the college game for Tebow's sake appeared to have the shelf life of a carton of raspberries. Then the second quarter rolled in and Tebow looked like Steve Young, completing four passes of 30 yards or better, something that hasn't been done in the NFL in 50 years.

A day later, Fox struggled again to explain the transformation.

"You know, football is football," he said.

But the fact that his offense worked so well at some times and so poorly at others still seemed a mystery. Fox finds himself defending the scheme as often as opponents do.

Bruins Coach Stadelmeir Wins Regional Award

Twin Falls High School baseball coach Tim Stadelmeir was recently awarded the Northwest Baseball Coaches' state coach of the year and Merit Award recipient, which recognizes on-field success while representing the right values and standards as a positive role model in the coaching profession. Stadelmeir will officially be presented with the award at the NBC coaches' clinic in Portland, Ore., this weekend. He is the second Bruins coach to receive this award. Former head coach and current Twin Falls High athletic director Mike Federico also won the award. "To see Tim get the award is special because he works his butt off and he's a good guy," Federico said. "It's a bit of a validation for him that what he's doing is right in the eyes of so many people." Stadelmeir quickly spread around credit for his honors. "When they first contacted me about it, I was real excited about our program," Stadelmeir said. "I think it's a big honor, not just for myself ... but the fact that our kids had done an exceptional job on and off the field." Stadelmeir credited the Twin Falls administration and his assistant coaches - Todd Phillips, Mark Schaal, Mitch Stachowsky and Tim Mealer. "It's not just an individual award, but a group effort," Stadelmeir said. The Bruins begin defense of their Class 4A state title on March 16 against Highland.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JANUARY 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Unsettled conditions will settle down in six to eight weeks, so you can concentrate on achieving your career or business aspirations. If you have been praying for help or need a job, stay alert in April when your prayers could be answered. Any opportunity that shows up at your doorstep in late April will fulfill your needs, even if you don't think so at the time. Good relationships

DEAR ABBY: "Friend of a Lonely Child" (Nov. 7) complained his wife didn't like him befriending the neighbor boy, "Donny," whose father is terminally ill.

Many years ago, I was that child. My home life was a mess, and the neighbors ended up raising me and teaching me about life. I am positive the only reason I didn't end up in prison was the concern of those people.

Mr. and Mrs. P. taught me manners and work ethic, Mr. and Mrs. M. schooled me in kindness and compassion, and the local store owner, Mr. R., taught me economics. He'd never let my credit go over $3, and he'd charge me a quarter a week if I didn't pay it off! Here I am at 51, having never made a credit card interest payment or taken a loan to term, thanks to him. I loved those neighbors more than I loved my own family.

"Friend," your wife is right. You CAN'T save everyone, but a little kindness and mentoring can change a child's life. And all it will cost you is a little time.

— THANKFUL FOR OHIO NEIGHBORS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR THANKFUL: Like you, many readers encouraged this man to continue in his role of father figure. My newspaper readers comment:

DEAR ABBY: I have two daughters who are now grown. Many of their friends spent a lot of time in our home and at our dinner table. Many of them were from troubled backgrounds. Sharing our home with others never deprived our daughters of love and attention. Instead, they learned the importance of giving.

After the friends grew up I was surprised and touched when they told me how much the time we shared had meant to them. I never realized I was making a difference.

Abby, "Friend's" wife is blessed to have such a caring husband. Yes, sometimes we ARE our brother's keeper.

— CHRIS IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: As a single mom of a son, I was fortunate to have men around who took him under their wings. They provided friendship, male bonding and examples of how a true man treats a woman. I never fail to express my thanks to their wives and family members for allowing their husbands and fathers to spend time with my son. Because of it, he has become a better man and future husband. Maybe "Friend" and his wife can set predetermined times at which Donny can visit for male companionship.

— PROUD MOM IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR ABBY: As the mother of two daughters, I didn't have a great deal of interaction with 10-year-old boys until my nephew came to stay with us for an entire summer. His father was gravely ill and succumbed while the boy was living with us. As his mom dealt with the issues concerning his father's death, our nephew became a member of our household. It ended up being a tremendous experience.

"Friend's" wife needs to open her heart. She'll be given a wonderful gift and help a child in the process.

— PHYLIS IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR ABBY: Big Brothers/Big Sisters is an excellent organization, but it cannot replace the more frequent contact of a neighbor who recognizes and empathizes with the boy's fatherless situation. If "Friend's" heart leads him to mentor the neighbor boy, he should continue to build that friendship. Whether or not his wife feels the same shouldn't guide his actions. One makes many commitments to one's spouse, but closing one's eyes and heart to those in need isn't one of them.

— DENNIS IN KANSAS

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The good things of life are not to be had singly, but come to us with a mixture."

— Thomas Lamb

Deals from actual play are somehow more satisfying than constructed deals. No one has rung a bell to let the player know that the critical moment has come and that he must focus on the problem at hand before it is too late.

Today's deal came up on OK Bridge and the auction shown was typical. After South took a shot at three no-trump, West led a heart to East's ace, and East returned the heart eight to West's jack. West saw that the missing hearts were the nine and queen, and since East would have returned the nine had he been left with the 9-8 at trick two, South must logically hold both of those missing cards. A shift was called for, and West had the choice of playing his partner for the club ace or any two spade honors. Most guessed well by playing a spade. (On a club shift, declarer would be likely to succeed by ducking the trick.)

But at our featured table, declarer, Tim Bourke, could see this scenario about to present itself to West. To prevent him from finding the winning play, Bourke cold-bloodedly sacrificed the heart nine on East's eight at trick two!

Now there were no inferences available about the small hearts. From West's perspective, he needed to cash the hearts immediately or declarer might be able to scamper home with nine tricks. (Give declarer any one of East's black-suit honors, and that would be true.) So he cashed the heart king and set up Bourke's ninth winner for him.

ANSWER: Your partner's cue-bid suggests a good hand, and you certainly have extras — enough to suggest that game is possible. Neither a call of two hearts nor three hearts really describes your hand; a repeat cue-bid of three diamonds by you should suggest extras with no clear direction in which to go.
