Idaho Voter Numbers Lagging Early On

The number of registered voters in the state hasn't kept pace with Idaho's growth since the last presidential election.

BY BRADLEY GUIRE bguire@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With 10 months left until the general election, Idaho needs nearly a quarter-million residents to register to vote, if the state is to boast the same number of registered voters it had during the November 2008 election.

That year, which saw the election of President Barack Obama, nearly 79 percent of Idahoans age 18 and older had registered by the time polls closed. But if a presidential vote were held today, only about 64 percent of voting-age Idahoans would be prepared to go to the polls.

Certainly, more Idahoans will be encouraged to register as what should be a hotly contested election between Obama and a GOP candidate plays out.

Idaho is now about 126,000 registered voters shy of its November 2008 mark.

But consider this: Idaho has grown since then. To get 79 percent of Idaho's 18 and older population registered, the state needs an additional 242,943 people to sign up by the end of this year's election.

What's on This Year's Ballot?

A number of government posts will be up for election during the May primaries and November general election. Here's a look at the types of races that may show up on your ballot. Learn how to register to vote at www.ida-

In Ethics Tit-for-tat, GOP Blasts Idaho Dems

BY JOHN MILLER Associated Press

BOISE • The House's top Republican on Friday suggested Democrats' charges that Idaho's dominant GOP has fostered a "culture of corruption and cronvism" could damage efforts by the two sides to create an independent ethics commission.

"Incendiary language crafted by the Democrats, like culture of corruption, will make it difficult for the two sides to work together for the betterment of our constituents and to ensure the integrity of the Idaho Legislature," House Speaker Lawerence Denney wrote in a letter to Idaho newspapers.

No Funding Rescue for Mental Health?

After Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter's address omits mention of Medicaid cuts, lawmakers, advocates wonder about the fallout for mental health patients and counties.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN AND KIMBERLEE KRUESI Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Last January, when Bill Aldrich first saw Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's 2012 state budget proposal, he couldn't help but notice what wasn't included.

Aldrich owns the Community Support Center, a Twin Falls facility that relies on Medicaid funding to provide services for people with mental disabilities, including bipolar disorder, schizophrenia and severe depression. He's spent the last year struggling to keep the center open through another round of funding cuts. He had hoped next year would be different.

He doesn't hope as much now.

"It appears Otter isn't in tune with the importance of mental health services," he said. "I would like to stay open as long as possible, but at this point I don't know how much longer we can do that."

On Monday, Otter presented his budget recommendations for fiscal 2013. While his proposal included $45 million in tax cuts and $60 million to replenish state reserve accounts, Otter didn't mention replacing the almost $35 million cut from the Medicaid budget during last year's legislative session. Those cuts, coupled with previous budget reductions, have forced the Department of Health and Welfare to reduce services for adult mental health patients.

That doesn't mean mental health isn't on the governor's mind, said Otter's office.

"While we understand and are empathetic to the concerns that have been raised ... we are still working on this issue with constituents, lawmakers, stakeholders and the public, ever mindful of the limited resources available, which has impacted every corner of state government," said Jon Hanian, spokesman for Otter, in an email to the Times-News. Still, some lawmakers are worried.

Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, said the omission in Otter's State of the State address stood out to her, and that cuts to mental health services put Idaho's most vulnerable at risk. Jerome Republican woman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, has expressed concern about the long-term costs of cutting state funding for Medicaid. Those who may have previously received mental health services through centers funded by Medicaid may begin to show up more in emergency rooms and jails, for example.

That means taxpayers are still footing the bill on the county level, but the exact impact is hard to measure, said Tony Poinelli of the Idaho Association of Counties. Each county handles mental health emergencies differently, he said. Some may pay for mental health costs with indigent funds, while others pay through Please see MENTAL HEALTH, A2

I'm a new mom and my daughter is 3 months old. I'm using a borrowed car seat. Is it safe to use? — Tammie, Filer

f you know the person who you borrowed the car seat from, it would be good to get a history of the car seat.

Was it in an accident, is it on a recall list, or is it expired? To find out this information, you can also look on the car seat itself. There is a sticker on the car seat that should have expiration date, a manufacture date, or you can find out if there are any recalls on that particular car seat.

You can call Safe Kids Magic Valley or go online to your manufacturer's website to find out if your car seat has been recalled.

In terms of car seat safety, when your baby is newborn to 2 years of age, always have them ride in a rear-facing car seat in the back seat. The American Academy of Pediatrics says that children 2 years of age or up to 30 pounds need to ride in a rear-facing car seat in the backseat for maximum safety.

Also check the height and weight requirements of your specific car seat to ensure that your child is within the limits of its specification. Many car seats have different height and weight requirements.

If your child is older than 2 years of age and/or weighs more 30 pounds, it is time to use a front-facing car seat that uses a harness system. These car seats can be used until children reach 40 pounds.

Once a child has outgrown this type of car seat, they are ready for a booster seat. Make sure the booster seat uses both a lap and shoulder-style seat belt. If only a lap belt is used, your child could be thrown from the car seat in an accident.

When a child is 13 years old or reaches 4 feet, 9 inches, they can use a traditional lap/harness seat belt combination, and are able to ride in the front seat of the car.

the prosecutor's budget. Statewide, counties pay between $5 million and $6 million annually for involuntary mental health commitments.

Idaho mental health holds - where police responding to an emergency determine a mental health evaluation of a subject is necessary - have increased 19 percent from 2008 to 2011, according to the Department of Health and Welfare.

Numerous factors attribute to that, said spokeswoman Emily Simnitt, including continued economic stresses, high unemployment and Idaho soldiers returning from war.

At the Twin Falls County Jail, the holds cost $400 a month, plus $200 an hour to pay a local psychiatrist to oversee inmates, paid with county tax revenue.

"The number of people with mental illnesses in our jail has always been high and the county is picking up the tab," said Lou Probasco, the jail's nursing director. "It costs thousands of dollars every year to get them on the right medications and find out what they really need."

Last year, Jerome County paid more than $136,100 in hospital bills that went to cover emergency care for adults with mental illnesses. The county used to pay more, but as the bill continued to escalate, the county changed its payment process.

It's cause for some concern as the state heads toward its first major election cycle under a new rule that closes May's Republican primaries to only GOPregistered voters.

For the first time, all Idaho voters - regardless of if they registered this year or decades ago - must declare some political affiliation when they show up for this May's primary election.

The Secretary of State's office estimates that 742,000 currently registered voters were not affiliated with any political party as of last July.

Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock is concerned about potential problems that could arise for voters and poll workers alike this May.

"I hope the primary closure doesn't discourage voters," she said. "It can be confusing."

to a judge who decides if the county will cover the hospital bill.

"We used to just pay for everything," said PJ Lindsay, social services director for the county. "But we've changed it over the past year. We only pay if the judge tells us to."

Ultimately, those most affected by Idaho's dwindling pool of mental health funds are those working through mental disorders to maintain their place in society.

Twin Falls resident Orion Odendhal struggles with severe bipolar disease. He relies on the Community Support Center to keep him from slipping into severe depression. Before attending sessions at the center and working in its thrift store, he said it wasn't unusual for him to stay at home by himself and, at times, he attempted suicide.

"This is my opportunity to connect," he said. "If I don't have this resource, I don't know where I'll go."

 Idaho Treasurer Ron Crane, whose use of a state gas card is being investigated by a county prosecutor.

In Friday's response, Denney, R-Midvale, cited what he termed Democrats' own ethical lapses that show neither party is immune to scrutiny, including a reference to Rep. Senators will include Dean Mortimer, R-Idaho Falls, though others aren't yet public.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, said Denney's letter calling out Chew's May 12 emails underscores the need for an independent ethics panel, because restoring faith in government is an issue both sides should embrace.

"If there are things that we (the Democratic Party) are doing that impacts people's confidence in government, then we should be called to account," Rusche said. "This isn't about individuals; this is about institutions and government, and how we serve our people?"

Rusche added he admonished Chew not to send such emails from her state account.

Senate President Pro Tem Brent Hill, R-Rexburg, said Friday he's willing to work with Democrats – if they don't resort to name calling. The working group's first meeting, which isn't yet scheduled, will set the tone for what happens next, he said. "If there is rhetoric that trashes individuals or parties, there will not be a second meeting," Hill said. Still, some Democratic lawmakers think the strident tone they've struck has borne fruit. Sen. Elliot Werk, a Boise Democrat among the most vocal of his party's GOP critics, contends tough language has spurred Republicans to recognize the need for reforms. "The Republican Party has created this culture (because) they've been in complete control of state government for two decades," Werk said. "In order to get the attention of those people, sometimes you have to use language that might be upsetting to help them recognize that there could be an issue." Minority Leader Edgar Malepeai, D-Pocatello, said he can't control what individual members of his Senate caucus say or how they say it, but he'll urge them to mind their manners to not to poison the bipartisan mood.

TWIN FALLS • The trial of an accused killer has been postponed until June. Lane Alan Buddenhagen, 20, was scheduled to go on trial Feb. 6 for causing the death of a 3-year-old boy in August. The trial has been rescheduled for June 4.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said the trial was postponed because Buddenhagen's attorney, Douglas Nelson, needs time to meet with an expert witness who is not available until then.

Buddenhagen waived his right to a speedy trial in a Jan. 4 hearing.

The Twin Falls man was indicted by a Twin Falls County grand jury on firstdegree murder on Aug. 24, 2011. If convicted, Buddenhagen could face life in prison or the death penalty.

He is accused of causing severe head trauma to the young boy, whose identity was not disclosed in court documents. According to court documents, emergency personnel responded to an apartment complex at 512 Jefferson St. in Twin Falls at about 7:30 a.m. Aug. 6, where officers found Buddenhagen in an apartment with the child lying on the floor of one of the bedrooms.

Buddenhagen allegedly told police the boy had been taking a bath. He said he had left the bathroom and heard a loud sound, returning to find the boy on the floor. Buddenhagen, who is not related to the boy, said he moved the child to a bedroom and called 911.

Later, a doctor at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center told police he believed the child was shaken, based on bruises on the child and the results of a CT scan, and called the "severe child injuries abuse."

The child was later taken to a Boise hospital, where he died on Aug. 7.

TWIN FALLS • The trial for a Twin Falls man accused of sexually exploiting a 16year-old girl has been delayed until March.

Robert Benjamin Brackett, 43, has been charged with eight felony counts of possession of sexually exploitative material which uses a child, six counts of sexual battery on a child by making lewd acts and one count of sexual battery on a child by making a photograph or recording.

In a nearly five-hour hearing Monday, Brackett's attorney made several motions to dismiss charges against him, including claiming double jeopardy, but all were denied by the judge.

"Sometimes it just takes a long time to talk about things," Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said of the hearing.

Brackett was arrested and charged with sexual battery in January 2011. Investigators claim to have found pictures of the alleged victim, a 16-year-old girl, on a digital camera at Brackett's residence.

According to court documents, Brackett allegedly engaged in sexual activity with the minor in his Twin Falls home on multiple dates in December 2010 and January 2011. He also allegedly detained the female at his home during a Jan. 9, 2011, argument.

A jury trial was rescheduled for March 5.

Bliss Man Sentenced in Federal Meth Bust

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • One of several people arrested in Jerome last February was sentenced to do time in federal prison earlier this week.

Francisco Garcia, of Bliss, was sentenced Wednesday to 30 months in prison, three years supervised release, a $100 special assessment fine and 100 hours community service. His sentence was handed down in U.S. District Court in Boise.

Garcia, 49, was charged with conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine. Five counts of distributing methamphetamine were dropped by prosecutors as part of a plea deal.

Garcia and six others were arrested in February at a residence near Jerome High School, as Idaho State Police and various federal agencies served search warrants for firearms and narcotics. The seven had been indicted along with three others by a federal grand jury a week prior.

Several of Garcia's codefendants have already been sentenced to federal prison on drug charges, while Celia Ivonnie Loya, 31, is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 27.

The arrests and indictments were the results of a 14-month investigation led by ISP and assisted by 11 federal, state, county and municipal agencies.

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's public school system earned a C- overall in a national education survey.

The state fell three notches from last year and was ranked No. 47 in Education Week's annual "Quality Counts" report, which analyzes performance and policies.

Idaho's Department of Education says one reason the state did so poorly is because the survey was based on 2011 data and didn't include changes states were making going forward. For example, the agency says Idaho scored very low in areas such as teacher incentives and college preparation for students.

N. IDAHO MAN, CONVICTED OF HIS PARENTS' MURDER, RELEASED

LEWISTON (AP) • A northern Idaho man convicted of murdering his adoptive parents in the late 1980s was released on parole Thursday after serving nearly 22 years behind bars.

Bradley Ryan Thomasson, 39, was ordered to remain within a four-county region in southwestern Idaho and not to contact the extended family of his victims under the terms of his release on parole, the Lewiston Tribune reports (http://bit.ly/wTT3Nq).

Thomasson was a 17year-old high school senior when he shot Judith Ann Thomasson, 50, and Ray E. Thomasson, 57, on Sept. 22, 1989 at their Lewiston home, police said. The teen initially told police he had argued with his parents over the use of the family's car.

During the alleged argument, Thomasson said his father started hitting him. The teen told police that's when he picked up a .22caliber rifle and pointed it at the man, who responded: "I don't think you have guts enough," Thomasson told police.

"And I pulled the trigger," the teen said during a recorded interview with officers that was later played in court.

Thomasson told police he then went into his parents' bedroom and shot his mother. But authorities reported that evidence found in the home conflicted with Thomasson's story, and blood stains indicated both the mom and dad were shot in their bed.

Bradley called police earlier that morning to report he had found the bodies after spotting an intruder leave the house. The teen changed his story later that day.

Silver Valley Mine Closure is Major Blow

MULLAN (AP) • The yearlong closure of the Lucky Friday Mine looks like to will be a major blow to Idaho's Silver Valley, which was already struggling with high unemployment.

The federal Mine Safety and Health Administration earlier this week ordered that the walls of the miledeep shaft that is the main entrance to the mine be scrubbed to remove sand and concrete material that can break off and endanger miners and hoist equipment.

Hecla Mining Co., which operates the mine, estimated it will take about a year to complete that job, throwing hundreds out of work.

"It's going to kill this valley," Chuck Reitz, a city councilman in Mullan, told the Coeur d'Alene Press. (http://bit.ly/z21fmk) Meanwhile, an MSHA official said conditions in the Lucky Friday's main shaft have parallels to problems at a Nevada gold mine where a 2010 shaft accident claimed the lives of two workers.

"We're not in the business of putting miners out of work; we're in the business of making sure that the conditions they work in are safe," Joseph Main, assistant secretary of labor for mine safety and health, told The Spokesman-Review (http://bit.ly/x4b4QI).

Phil Baker, Hecla's chief executive officer, said Wednesday that company officials believe the shaft is safe. However, federal inspectors found loose rock in the Lucky Friday's shaft and several leaks in a pipe that transports sand and cement into the mine, said Neal Merrifield, MSHA's administrator for metal and non-metal safety.

"Our concern is that we really don't have a good idea about the total condition of that pipe," he said.

If the pipe were to burst, or if concrete deposits from the leaks were to tear loose from the shaft's walls, workers traveling in the shaft could be killed, Merrifield said.

"You can imagine what would happen if one of these rocks would fall 6,000 feet and hit somebody or strike the cage," Merrifield said.

The situation at the Lucky Friday's shaft is similar to the 2010 accident at Barrick Gold's Meikle Mine in Nevada, he said. In that accident, two workers were trying to unplug a pipe in the mine shaft. The 24-inch pipe burst and the falling pipe and other debris struck and killed the workers, the accident report said.

The Dec. 20 inspection that found problems at the Lucky Friday's shaft was a "special emphasis" inspection developed by MSHA after the Upper Big Branch Mine explosion, which killed 29 coal miners in West Virginia in 2010. Mines with recent accidents and fatalities get additional attention from inspectors.

The Lucky Friday fits that category because two workers died in separate accidents last year, and seven others were injured after a rock burst in December, Main said.

The closure means 185 of Hecla's workers at Lucky Friday have been laid off, along with up to 100 workers employed by contractors who work at the mine. Miners average $100,000 a year in pay and benefits, pay that is nearly impossible to replace in this area.

Don Kotschevar, a teacher in Mullan, said the news was devastating. Instability at home affects student performance, he said.

"When things aren't good at home, children bring those problems to school," he said.

If a miner has to leave the area to find work, that leaves the other parent raising the kids alone, he said.

Sara Lamson, supervisor at the Kellogg office of the Idaho Department of Labor, said the office was bustling with laid off miners filing for unemployment benefits, she said.

"They just want to go back to work," she said. "They have a lot of pride."

"Some are looking at heading to the oil fields in North Dakota for work," Lamson said.

EPA: Low Asbestos in Wood Chips from Libby, Mont.

BY MATTHEW BROWN Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • Test results from huge piles of wood chips that were be-stepped in last year to halt the practice.

The Environmental Protection Agency found no asbestos in recent air tests designed to mimic human ex-finding Thomasson guilty in 1990 of first-degree murder in the death of his parents. He was ordered to serve 10 years to life in prison for each of the deaths, with the sentences to be served consecutively.

Matthew Thomasson was also adopted by the Lewiston couple, though he was living near Tacoma, Wash., at the time of their deaths. He expressed disappointment with legal system Thursday after his adopted brother was released from prison.

"But we knew the day would come eventually," said Matthew Thomasson, of Lewiston. "I hope that he has learned something while he was in there. We really have nothing to do with him. I'm hoping for the best. I hope things work for him."

Bradley Thomasson will be on parole for at least five years. ing sold from a Montana Superfund site for use in landscaping show they contain some asbestos, but at levels so low federal officials said they posed no danger to humans.

The results obtained Friday by The Associated Press appear to offer a rare bit of relief for the town of Libby, where widespread asbestos contamination has killed an estimated 400 people and sickened 1,750.

The testing followed concerns raised by local officials, residents and business owners who bought loads of the material to spread around their homes, in parks and for use as erosion control. Prior tests indicated the presence of asbestos in the piles, but not how much.

Thousands of tons of the wood chips were shipped out of the Libby area for retail sales across the country. The sales went on for years before federal regulators posure from spreading the wood chips. The agency previously had said a "very low level" of asbestos had been found in tests of the wood chips themselves.

"It was all good news," said Rebecca Thomas of the EPA's regional headquarters in Denver. "There simply is no measured exposure."

No further EPA actions were planned on the wood chips, Thomas said.

But one city official said he was still wary of the wood chips despite the results.

It remained uncertain whether sales will resume. The head of the local economic development agency that had sold the material said no decision had been made, citing lingering uncertainties over the dangers posed by Libby's asbestos.

The EPA has yet to complete its risk assessment for the town, considered the deadliest Superfund site in the nation.

Test results from huge piles of woodchips, similar to Olsen's, that were being sold from a Montana Superfund site for use in landscaping show they contain minimal levels of asbestos, according to a report Friday. The findings appear to offer a rare bit of relief for the town of Libby, where widespread asbestos contamination has killed an estimated 400 people.

LAWMAKERS APPROVE FIREFIGHTING BILL ON STATE LANDS

BOISE (AP) • Idaho budget writers have approved $4 million to pay for the costs of fighting fires on state lands last year.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee voted unanimously to approve the amount this week.

It also marks the first chunk of money approved by lawmakers in the 2012 Legislature.

Each year, the committee signs off on payment for costs that accrued in the previous year battling forest and range fires on state lands.

The Spokesman-Review (http://bit.ly/iRcJJ) reports that the $4 million sum for 2011 is low compared to previous years. The 2011 fire season was 59 percent of the 20-year average for the total number of blazes.

The number of acres burned last year totaled 981, which amounts to just 11 percent of the 20-year average.

NO CHARGES FILED IN WHEELCHAIR COLLISION

LEWISTON (AP) • Police in Lewiston say no charges will be filed in a fatal traffic crash last month where a man in a wheelchair collided with a sport utility vehicle at a city intersection.

Police say an investigation, including witness statements, found no charges were justified against the driver of the SUV.

The Lewiston Tribune (http://bit.ly/yO2hRN) reports witnesses told police they saw a person in dark clothing maneuvering a wheelchair in an out of traffic just prior to the Dec. 13 collision that killed 34-year-old Jacob Vernon of Clarkston, Wash.

The wheelchair didn't have any reflectors or auxiliary lighting and was in the middle of the northbound lane when it was struck.

Police say it also appeared the driver tried to swerve onto the shoulder, but didn't see the wheelchair in time.

Hoku Gets Stock Warning

HONOLULU (AP) • The Nasdaq Stock Market has warned Hoku Corp. the company faces delisting because its stock continues to trade below $1 a share.

The Honolulu-based commercial solar power company says Nasdaq sent it a notice saying the company has until July 10 to maintain a minimum bid closing price of at least $1 for 10 straight business days.

A Hoku subsidiary is disputing unpaid power bills with Idaho Power.

Idaho Statesman

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare sent a letter Nov. 3 to the federal government asking for another year to work on a state-run health insurance exchange.

The exchange would be a state-run marketplace for people and small businesses to buy health insurance plans in a larger pool, and a way to steer people who qualify to Medicaid or subsidized health care.

The deadline for Idaho to get its own exchange up and running is Jan. 1, 2014 with open enrollment happening a few months before that. Idaho asked to move the deadline to Jan. 1, 2015.

"We have assessed the complexities of the federal requirements and find the current timeline to be unreasonable and unrealistic," said Richard M. Armstrong, director of Health and Welfare, in the request to U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius.

Armstrong chalked up the request to lack of timely information.

He said the federal agency didn't tell states what they'd be required to do on some key health insurance issues until last July and August. Then, states had to wait until the 75-day comment period ended before learning what the final rules would be.

Idaho also sought details on the federal exchange which is Idaho's option if it doesn't create its own exchange — to "determine our best alternatives," Armstrong said. But the agency hadn't come through with those details by November.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

How the Major Stock Indexes Fared on Friday

NEW YORK (AP) • Banks led the market lower Friday after JPMorgan Chase posted a rare disappointment in its quarterly earnings. Reports that European governments were about to have their credit ratings cut drove the euro down and sent Treasury prices up. Markets were little changed after France's finance minister confirmed that Standard & Poor's had stripped the country of its AAA credit rating. After the market closed, S&P lowered the credit ratings of France, Austria, Italy and Spain. Germany kept its AAA rating. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 48.96 points, or 0.4 percent, to close at 12,422.06.

The S&P 500 index fell 6.41, or 0.5 percent, to 1,289.09. The Nasdaq composite index fell 14.03, or 0.5 percent, to 2,710.67.

Apple Discloses Suppliers for the First Time

NEW YORK (AP) • Apple has disclosed a list of its suppliers for the iPhone, iPad and other popular gadgets for the first time amid growing criticism over labor and environmental practices, especially in China.

The list for years has been strictly and fervently protected. Even a glimpse of an Apple iPhone or its components before a public release became a source of intrigue and controversy. Apple disclosed its list of its suppliers responsible for 97 percent of its procurement expenditures worldwide. Some examples are Intel Corp., Broadcom Corp., Amphenol Corp. and Sanyo Electric Co. The transparency may be a sign of changes coming to the Cupertino, Calif. company in the post-Steve Jobs era under CEO Tim Cook.

S&P Cuts Credit Ratings for France, Italy, Spain

BY JAMEY KEATEN Associated Press

PARIS • Ratings agency Standard & Poor's dealt a setback Friday to Europe's ability to fight off a worsening debt crisis by downgrading the government debt of France, Italy, Spain and Austria. But it kept Germany's at the ered Italy's and Spain's by two notches and did the same for Portugal and Cyprus. S&P also cut ratings on Malta, Slovakia and Slovenia.

"In our view, the policy initiatives taken by European policymakers in recent weeks may be insufficient to fully address ongoing systemic stresses in the eurozone," S&P said in a statement. France's downgrade to AA+ lowers it to the level of U.S. long-term debt, which S&P downgraded last summer. S&P had warned 15 European nations in December that they were at risk for a downgrade. France is the second-largest contributor behind Germany to Europe's financial rescue fund. The fund still has a rating of AAA. That means that it can borrow on the bond market at low rates. Some analysts downplayed the impact of the downgrades.

"It's going to create bad headlines for a day or two," said Jacob Funk Kirkegaard, research fellow at the Peterson Institute for International Economics. But "there's no underlying new information ... This will be quickly forgotten."

Still, the cut in the French credit rating may lead bond traders to raise borrowing costs for the financial rescue fund, said Guy LeBas, chief fixed income strategist at Janney Montgomery Scott, a financial firm.

BALMY WINTER BRINGS PLENTY OF ECONOMIC SURPRISES

BY JONATHAN FAHEY

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK • Out of a relatively balmy winter have sprung some economic surprises. People have more cash in their pockets because they aren't turning up the thermostat. Airlines don't have to de-ice planes or battle blizzards. And shoppers are finding great deals on coats and boots.

But there are also disappointments. Merchants are stuck with unsold shovels and snow blowers. Drugstores say customers aren't buying cold medicine or getting as many flu shots.

The weather has been so mild that at some hardware outlets, rakes are flying off the shelf, and grass seed is outselling ice-melting salt.

"I haven't seen this mix of sales since I can remember," said David Ziegler, whose family owns nine Ace Hardware stores in the northwest Chicago area. "They're buying rakes ... just because it's warmer and people are not holed up."

This winter has been remarkably tame, especially in regions accustomed to a three-month tussle with freezing temperatures, snow, sleet and ice. In the Northeast, only four Decembers in the last 117 years have been warmer, according to the National Weather Service.

CHEERS & JEERS

CHEERS to the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Commission and the Magic Valley Canine Social Club for their efforts to create a dog park in Twin Falls.

This is the third time the city's Parks and Recreation Department has looked into opening of a dog park, a fenced space where dogs owners can let their four-legged friends run off-leash. The temporary park being considered would be located in Frontier Park starting this month through mid-March. The Parks and Recreation Commission has thrown its unanimous weight behind the idea.

The Twin Falls City Council still has to approve opening the temporary park at its Tuesday meeting, but we're encouraged by the progress so far. Places such as this create fun places for people to meet and play with their dogs, and opening a temporary park will demonstrate that they're not the wild, unregulated operations some have feared in the past.

If you would like to fill out a short questionnaire about the usefulness of a dog park to you, visit www.tfid.org.

JEERS to Idaho Senate Republicans who, in a private meeting, determined that fellow Republican Sen. John McGee should retain his leadership position as caucus chairman after he pleaded guilty to drunken driving last year. During the incident that led to the charge, McGee also stole a sport utility vehicle with a trailer and then jackknifed it in a driveway.

Before the session, McGee said, "I really messed up. I showed poor judgment." We agree. But now his fellow Republicans are showing poor judgment by not seeking the slightest hint of disciplinary action. McGee shouldn't lose his job as senator, just step down from his leadership position.

Respect and trust can be earned, but only if steps are taken to show that it is deserved.

CHEERS to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office and all those involved in the search and rescue of Matthew Williams and his daughter, Taylor, from the desert near Kimama.

What began as a simple question "Where is there a hot meal being served to the hungry on Christmas weekend?" - grew into a plan to serve, when organizers discovered that there was no hot meal planned in Twin Falls. With the connections of this closeknit community, an abundance of baked potatoes, chili, cheese, cookies and cakes were provided in a newly cleaned warehouse. Fruit, toothbrushes, coffee, hand sanitizer, paper products, tables, chairs, dumpsters and chemical toilets were donated. My wife and I have never written a letter to the editor, but we felt it was necessary to let our friends, neighbors and the entire Magic Valley know of our wonderful buying experience with Con Paulos Volkswagen in Twin Falls.

We were treated with such respect and kindness by these folks that it was the best buying experience we have ever enjoyed. Linda and I had a wonderful time working with Con Paulos; our salesman, Tyler; general manager, James; and the finance team of Verna and Costa. These are good and decent people, and they understood our needs and made it possible for us to purchase our new vehicle.

We wish to say thank you to Con Paulos and his team for going above and beyond and making this a great experience for us. They have become our friends. I encourage all of you to find out for yourselves that this is a great group of people who will treat you right. Now, if you will excuse us, Linda and I are going to support Con Paulos by driving to lunch at Subway in our new vehicle.

Cassia Regional and Minidoka Memorial hospitals would like to thank the following Mini-Cassia businesses and individuals for their support and generosity in making the Second Annual Diabetes Expo a success. Woman Who Attacked a Boise Toddler in 1995 Gets Another Chance at Parole

BY PATRICK ORR Idaho Statesman

BOISE • When Annie Hickerson looks at her daughter Mary, she sees a strong, confident 18-year-old high school senior with limitless potential.

When Annie Hickerson thinks about Rae Ann Leach, she thinks of the woman who almost snuffed out Mary's life. She sees a woman so severely mentally ill that she slashed Hickerson's then-20-month-old daughter's throat with the intent to kill.

Annie Hickerson doesn't think society will ever be safe from Leach, and she plans to tell the Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole as much on Jan. 26.

"I have no doubt she will have thoughts about killing again.... She will always have those thoughts," Hickerson said. "I believe (Leach's family) is going to say she is an elderly, frail woman, but that is very deceptive. She will always be dangerous?

Hickerson's argument later this month will be the same one she made at Leach's previous parole hearings: There is no guarantee Leach will take her medicine every day or that Leach's family can be trusted to provide the 24hour-a-day scrutiny they failed to provide when she was free on probation in the late '90s.

"I think what happened to Mary could have been prevented if her family was being forthright about (Leach's) condition (in 1995)," Hickerson said.

"Mental illness is not a ticket to be above the justice system. (Leach), without a doubt, thought she killed Mary. She is absolutely dangerous and always will be."

Shocking Attack

It was during a psychotic episode at her North End home that Leach committed the act that changed the lives of two families.

The Hickersons and Leaches were neighbors. Leach invited Annie Hickerson and her three kids over to feed squirrels in July 1995. She took Mary inside the house for a treat.

Inside, Leach slashed the toddler's throat, then went back outside and told Annie Hickerson that she'd just killed her daughter.

But little Mary wasn't dead. She lost almost half her blood and almost died but quick medical response saved her life.

Leach, who has been diagnosed with both mood and thought disorders, including schizophrenia and manic depression, eventually pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated battery in 1996.

Fourth District Judge Daniel Eismann gave Leach a 15-year prison sentence but suspended that prison time and placed Leach on probation with strict conditions that she not be in public by herself and that she be supervised 24 hours a day.

But he ended up revoking revoked her probation.

Leach repeatedly violated the terms she was seen three separate times at a water aerobics class at the YMCA without supervision as well as walking alone down a neighborhood street.

Leach has been in prison since 1999.

Second Try at Release

When Leach asked for early release from prison in 2006, she told the Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole she was sorry for hurting Mary.

She blamed the attack on her mental condition.

"Mental health is a strange thing ... there is no reason (for the attack)," Leach said in 2006. "I had a psychotic episode. I'm so sorry for it. It was a terrible thing I did."

Leach told the Parole Board she "trusted herself" and, if released, she planned to be an "instrument of love and peace?

Leach's husband and two psychiatrists argued at that hearing that Leach wouldn't be a risk to society and that she would benefit from getting better medical treatment than she could get in prison.

Dave Leach, head men's basketball coach at Boise State from 1980 to 1983, told the parole board his wife would be confined to the family's 3-acre North Boise property, be monitored with a GPS bracelet, have constant supervision to make sure she took her medication, and have regular visits from mental health professionals.

'Some Mistakes'

Dave Leach said in 2006 family members "did make some mistakes" the first time his wife was on probation but have since learned how important it would be for her to follow all restrictions.

Hickerson, however, told the board that Leach's family couldn't be trusted to provide the oversight she required, pointing out what happened in 1999.

Case officers told the board in 2006 that there was evidence Leach heard voices and had violent thoughts about wanting to harm one of her cellmates as recently as two years before.

The Parole Board ultimately rejected Leach's request in 2006, determining she was too dangerous to release from prison.

Dave Leach's attorney did not return Statesman phone calls seeking family comment, so it is unclear whether the family will make the same arguments later this month.

What's Next?

Whether she's paroled or serves her full prison sentence, Leach's sentence is complete on June 27, 2014. She will be 75 and on no kind of parole, with no restrictions on where she can live and no parole officer around to ensure she takes appropriate medication or gets treatment.

That job will be up to Leach's family, which has Hickerson concerned.

A New Law?

Hickerson would like the Legislature to create a new law to require anyone convicted of a violent crime against a child to register publicly for the rest of his or her life.

"We have 'Megan's Law' for sex offenders, so why not a similar law for those who've hurt children?" Hickerson said. "Don't people deserve to know if they are living next-door to someone who would commit a violent crime against a child?'

Hickerson admits that the prospect of approaching the Legislature is daunting but says that she plans to do it anyway.

Hickerson says she feels "incredibly thankful" that her daughter has recovered fully and is now a thriving teenag-

"I am just so blessed. ... Mary is kind and loving and beautiful," Hickerson said. "I just don't think the next person might be so lucky. ... I don't want this to happen to anyone else."

COEUR d'ALENE • How important are the rights and the dignity of others? Is it important enough to risk your life?

Fifth-grade students in Coeur d'Alene and Post Falls learned about people who responded affirmatively to those challenges during the 27th annual Human Rights Celebration on Friday at North Idaho College.

While the bulk of the program featured an interactive play on the 1960s civil rights movement, both the presenter and moderators reminded students that respecting and helping those who are bullied or discriminated against remains important today.

"If we see others put down, we have a responsibility to take a stand, in our words and in our actions," said Sharon Hanson, principal at Borah Elementary, during her introduction to the play.

Dior Davenport, a performance artist with The Living Voices group of Seat - tle, presented "The Right to Dream," a 45-minute program that combined audio and video footage of civil rights demonstrations in Mississippi and Alabama with the fictional story of Ruby Hollis.

Before portraying Hollis, Davenport asked students about Rosa Parks and explained that her refusal to give up her seat to a white bus rider sparked a bus boycott, sit-ins and demonstrations which ultimately led to the passing of the Voting Rights Act in 1965.

"As you're watching, think about what would be important enough for you to fight for," Davenport said.

The play portrayed how blacks like Ruby were forced to attend separate schools, endured segregated public facilities like movie theaters and lunch counters, and were prevented from voting due to unevenly applied voter registration tests.

As Ruby grows up in the 1950s and 1960s, she becomes involved in SNCC the Student Nonviolent Coordination Committee which organized civil rights voter registration drives.

Ruby's family members and friends are woven into the history of the civil rights movement, and the play concludes with Ruby's father, a World War II combat veteran, being killed back in his Mississippi hometown after he marched from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., in 1965.

While Ruby mourns for her father, she also is proud that "he did not die as a broken man."

Friday's program included a musical interpretation of the song, "Don't Laugh at Me," by 19 students from Skyway Elementary School.

The song tells the story of kids who have been bullied or embarrassed by being different, said Teri Hamilton, the Skyway physical education teacher who directed the performance.

Friday's event, held each year in conjunction with Martin Luther King Jr. Day, is co-sponsored by the Coeur d'Alene and Post Falls school districts, the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations, the Human Rights Education Institute and North Idaho College.

STUDENT AFFAIR

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) • A former American Falls High School teacher faces 45 days in jail for having a sexual relationship with a student. Zenna Galeria was sentenced Thursday by 6th District Judge Stephen Dunn. Galeria, who is 23, pleaded guilty in November to sexual battery of a minor 16 to 17 years old.

Power County prosecutors allege the relationship between Galeria and the student developed in early 2011, when he was 17 years old.

Dunn said the first 14 days of Galeria's sentence would have to be served consecutively, while the remainder could be served during her first year of a five-year probationary period.

She will be required to register as a sex offender for at least the next 10 years.

WOLF ATTACK ON DOGS REPORTED IN N. IDAHO

WALLACE (AP) • The Shoshone County sheriff says two dogs were attacked by four wolves near the northern Idaho town of Wallace

Sheriff Mitch Alexander told The Shoshone News Press (http://bit.ly/wabT59) that one dog died and another sustained a facial bite in the attack Wednesday evening, and that there were many wolf tracks in the area.

The newspaper reported that Idaho Fish and Game officials told residents in the area that it is legal to shoot the wolf pack. Idaho Fish and Game official Josh Stanley didn't return a call for comment.

Exhumation Begins Search for Identity

BY SANDRA L. LEE The Lewiston Tribune

LEWISTON • Four small yellow flags were the only indication of what lay below the frozen grass at Normal Hill Cemetery.

Using a square-bladed shovel, Greg Morton of Wilbert Precast quickly cut the sod into strips, setting it neatly to one side. With plywood protecting the grass, the bucket on a front-end loader, exactly the width of a grave, carved a hole the length and width of the concrete vault buried several feet down.

It was a sizable crowd that gathered to watch the grave of an unknown young man being reopened Wednesday morning: Nez Perce County deputies who obtained the $2,000 grant that will pay for the costs associated with exhumation, city police officers, the county coroner and his deputy, the grave diggers, a mortician and the news media.

Exhumation only occurs around here once every 10 or 15 years, and then most often because a family wants a grave relocated, said Jason Harwick of Vassar-Rawls Funeral Home.

The action requires a permit from the Idaho Bureau of Vital Statistics, and that a licensed mortician be at the scene, said Coronor Gary Gilliam.

In this case, it also necessitated the presence of sheriff's evidence and investigating deputies who will establish a chain of evidence in the event a homicide case can be pursued in the future.

Shovels completed the job of removing the last of the brown earth that had been undisturbed for more than 29 years. Four 2-inch-thick concrete slabs — the top of the vault — were removed, exposing a rusty metal container inside.

That container was lifted out by four men and placed in the back of the coroner's pickup truck for a short journey to Vassar-Rawls Funeral Home.

That's when events started resembling an old comedy routine.

A plastic tarp had been placed beneath the box because it didn't look very sound, Gilliam said. When they picked it up, the bottom of the metal box gave way and the contents — bones fell into the plastic tarp.

The femur, the largest of the leg bones, was taken for testing, and the rest of the skeleton was bundled up, put back in what remained of the box and within an hour everything was reinterred at the cemetery, Gilliam said.

When the body of a young man was found 291/2 years ago on the Idaho side of the Snake River just upstream from Heller Bar, DNA testing wasn't a tool available to law enforcement. Now, samples of DNA can be readily recovered from bones. The femur was taken to the Lewiston FBI office, which has a sterile dryer for evidence. It will be dried, packaged and sent, probably via United Parcel Service, to the University of North Texas at Denton, which will do the analysis at little or no cost.

The results will be run through all the DNA databases available, said Nez Perce County Sheriff's Sgt. John Hilderbrand, the chief investigator in the case that started a year before he entered law enforcement. That could take a couple months.

For a match to be made, a near relative will have to be somewhere in a database probably a parent or grandparent or sibling, Hilderbrand said.

Investigators in 1982 were able to determine the make and model of the gun that created the wounds in the man's neck and left shoulder. But they were never able to determine where he went into the water, probably two to three weeks before a fisherman found him on June 26, 1982.

No one ever claimed him, or came forward with a name. His description was placed on national missing persons websites. Eventually, he was buried in an unmarked grave in the cityowned Normal Hill Cemetery.

He was estimated to be 18 to 22 years old, 5 feet, 11 inches tall, about 150 pounds, with straight brown or black hair. He had a 2-inch scar on his right ankle. He was wearing blue swimming trunks with red and white stripes underneath designer jeans.

He had been shot with a Smith & Wesson .38 caliber 36 Centennial Model revolver manufactured no later than 1967.

When testing is completed, the bone will be cremated and returned to the young man's grave.

People interested in the far-flung wanderings of Oregon's celebrity wolf, OR-7, can keep up with his progress on a new website.

The California Department of Fish and Game put up a map Friday showing the wolf's path since leaving Oregon and heading into the Cascade Range of Northern California.

In the interests of the wolf's safety, the department will delay posting locations on the map.

The most recent one puts OR-7 about 35 miles south of Alturas, Calif., heading toward Nevada.

The 2-year-old wolf was born in northeastern Oregon.

CSI men seek Scenic West's first in-conference road victory tonight against North Idaho

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

smeyers@magicvalley.com

No team in the Scenic West Athletic Conference has really done anything significant yet.

All the home teams won last weekend by an average score of 74-63, highlighted by the College of Southern Idaho's 20-point win over Snow.

CSI would like to buck that trend tonight in Coeur d'Alene.

The Golden Eagles (16-1, 2-0) square off against North Idaho (16-1, 2-0) at 8:30 MST for the first of three matchups this season.

"Every team has done what they were supposed to. We've just held at home," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "Of course there's still the entire conference season left. You have to win on the road if you want to win this league."

CSI at North Idaho At Coeur d'Alene

Women's game 6:30 p.m. Men's game 8:30 p.m. Both times MST Listen live at 1450 AM KEZJ or watch online at www.nicathletics.com

Looking at statistics, the CSI-North Idaho matchup should be fascinating to watch. CSI has won 14 in a row. North Idaho is on a seven-game winning streak.

CSI ranks first in the conference in scoring (89.9) and field goal percentage (.487). North Idaho ranks first in scoring defense (64.2) and opponent's field goal percentage (.360).

CSI narrowly leads the conference in total rebounds (46.9), but North Idaho has the advantage in rebounding margin (13.2-11.1). North Idaho is blocking a conference-leading 9.3 shots per game, CSI records 9.6 steals per game. "They're a team that definitely has some length and athleticism. There's a reason why they've won 16 games," Gosar said. "They're very similar to us in a lot of ways. They've got a lot of size, but so do we. We'll see. It will be a real test for us to execute against a solid team."

Freshman point guard Keon Lewis leads North Idaho with 14.1 points and 4.4 assists per game and he has a 6-9 big man he can dish to in the paint in Michael Middlebrooks, who averages 12 points and 9.4 boards.

Burley Girls Hit a Growth Spurt

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The label "young" no longer applies.

The Burley girls basketball team finally grew up a little Friday night.

In a hostile road environment against the Great Basin Conference co-leader, the Bobcats fought back from an eightpoint fourth-quarter deficit to upset Jerome 69-61 in overtime.

"This game meant a lot tonight," said Burley's Chelsee Baker, who scored 16 points. "We really owed them. They made us lose at home so we had to take it to them."

Burley "owed" Jerome for the Tigers' one-point win at Burley back on Dec. 7.

The Bobcats (7-8 overall, 3-4 GBC) were led by Aubrie Vale, who scored 22 points along with a handful of assists. Post players Stephanie McGill and Brooke Bowers each scored nine.

Jerome (12-3, 5-2) dropped its second straight conference game, but remained tied atop the GBC standings courtesy of Minico's victory against Twin Falls.

Jerome's Haylee Burnham scored 24 points through the first three quarters, but had only a single free throw the rest of the way. Burley outscored the Tigers 9-1 in overtime.

"We focused on our defense because we knew our defense would win the game," said Baker. "We focused on (Burnham) so that she wouldn't get the shots that she wanted."

Kylie Bright, who finished with 11 points for Jerome, had her own personal 7-0 run to finish the fourth quarter, putting the Tigers up 51-43.

Merrill, Minico Both Lucky and Good

BY STEPHEN MEYERS smeyers@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With the clock winding down in the first half, Minico's Micaela Merrill secured a loose ball after it went through the hands of several players.

She looked up at the clock ticking down, dribbled full steam ahead and squared up for a running 3-pointer which she drained to give the Spartans a two-point halftime lead and momentum which they never relinquished the rest of the game.

"It was just dribble, dribble, shoot," said Merrill after Minico's 47-43 road win over Twin Falls. "I glanced over at the clock, saw that there was four seconds, my dad (head coach Terry Merrill) yelled and so I ran and threw up a shot. It was lucky. I don't know what happened with that one."

She was better than lucky in Minico's Great Basin Conference win. The senior guard scored 23 points, including 7-of-8 free throws to seal the win in the fourth quarter when Twin Falls was forced to foul.

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. • For his latest trick, Tim Tebow is making threetime Super Bowl champion Tom Brady disappear from the headlines.

Now, with Tebowmania in full force, the Denver Broncos hope to make the New England Patriots vanish from the playoffs when they meet Saturday night.

Photos of the devout, much doubted Denver sensation kneeling on the turf in prayer are a weekly occurrence. There are plenty of shots of him with arms thrust in the air after a scoring play.

But where are those pictures of Brady posing with supermodel wife Gisele Bundchen or with the Patriots title trophies?

That's what happens when Tebow leads the Broncos to four overtime wins in one season, capped by last Sunday's wild-card victory over Pittsburgh. For Brady, coming off one of the best of his 12 seasons, greatness is expected and not often celebrated.

"I'm never surprised at what gets talked about anymore," Patriots left tackle Matt Light said with a smile. "I think I saw a seven-minute (video) piece on a girl that ate M&Ms while doing a handstand. That was interesting. I mean, I got into it for a while.

"I think it's just any time there's anything new — he's obviously new (and) he's done some incredible things this season. I think the hype is justified."

If Tebow can stun the odds makers who have made the Broncos 13 1-2point underdogs, the attention will grow heading into the AFC championship game. Forecasters are predicting the coldest day of the winter with temperatures in the single digits Saturday night.

Martinez's Return Inspires Wood River

BY DAVID BASHORE dbashore@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Wood River didn't have a firm game plan coming into Friday night's game with Canyon Ridge.

The Wolverines were just happy to have Kaitana Martinez back. And that was all the game plan they ended up needing.

Just short of six months removed from major knee surgery, Martinez scored 15 points and calmed Wood River with merely with her on-court presence as the Wolverines romped to a 52-21 win.

"It's a moment I've rehearsed in my mind for five months, three weeks and a day. It's like a fairytale," said Martinez, who added four rebounds, four assists and a steal in 12 1/2 minutes. "Even since last season I've just wanted to get back playing in front of this community, which gives us so much support."

Cheyenne Swanson also scored 15, pulling down nine rebounds to anchor the block, where Wood River (6-8, 3-4 Great Basin) dominated, pulling down 48 rebounds to Canyon Ridge's 29.

The Wolverines flirted with a 30-point lead for most of the third quarter, but they didn't get it until Martinez hit a driving layup early in the fourth. "I was a little surprised to begin with that we had so much success," said Swanson. "We didn't really have a game plan more than we just wanted to get (Martinez) back in the flow. It couldn't have gone much better."

While Wood River got its talisman back, Canyon Ridge had to battle down low with a limited top post, Breyana Burk (ankle), and without the team's second post, Colleen Joslin (knee).

Still, it might not have mattered on a night where there was little doubt it was going to belong to the Wolverines.

"I think team morale was up. They never gave up," said Canyon Ridge coach Trudy Weaver. "It's tough, but with the hand we were dealt tonight I thought we did well. We hit some of our goals and that's all I can ask."

Brinley Miller led the Riverhawks (4-12, 0-7) with seven points and eight rebounds.

"I know they're going to be anxious to get us back, like Monroe (N.Y.) was earlier this season. We have to play together and we'll come out with a win," said CSI guard Fabyon Harris, who is expected to play with a sore wrist.

CSI swept the season series last year with North Idaho not having beaten the Golden Eagles since January of 2010.

The roles are reversed on the women's side. The Cardinals swept the CSI women last season en route to their NJCAA national championship and the Golden Eagles haven't last weekend, beating the latter 62-57 after trailing by 15 in the second half. The Cardinals and Golden Eagles play at 6:30 MST.

"They're not as strong as they were last year, but they really do shoot the ball well," said CSI women's head coach Randy Rogers. "They have a lot of confidence after last weekend. It's going to take a great effort on our part defensively to slow them down."

North Idaho's Korina Baker is one of the best point guards in the SWAC, averaging 11.7 points and 3.5 steals. CSI will also have to slow down Julia Salmio (10.9 ppg.) and Angela Woods (10.2).

tonight and we played some hard defense the whole time," said teammate Marlee Chandler, who scored nine points. "We had some struggles a few times, but we were able to come through. When you play good defense, it helps the offense."

Minico (11-5, 5-2) led 19-17 at halftime, 29-26 after three quarters and pushed its lead to 39-31 with three minutes left on a Merrill free throw. Twin Falls then put on the press, which frustrated the Spartans, who hadn't seen a full-court press all season Merrill said.

The Bruins (10-6, 5-2) forced four turnovers off the press and got to as close as 45-41 with 40 seconds left on a Hannah Meyerhoeffer jumper, but didn't score again until a meaningless Mikayla Harris shot at the buzzer. Josie Jordan finished with just nine points and Harris also had nine to pace the Bruins.

"I actually think the last four minutes of the game was the best we played whole half, when it got down to the wire," said Twin Falls coach Nancy Jones. "Teams hit highs and lows and we didn't play particularly well against Wood River, I thought we played down to their level somewhat. For whatever reason I still think we're trying to come out of that low and it showed tonight."

Both teams are back in action Tuesday, with Twin Falls traveling to Jerome and Minico back in Twin Falls to play Canyon Ridge. With Jerome's loss to Burley Friday night, the Tigers, Spartans and Bruins are all in a three-way tie for first in the GBC at 5-2.

Tebow, who played four seasons at Florida, hasn't been in many games below 20 degrees.

"I'd say probably a handful," he said, "not as many as Mr. Brady has, probably."

The Patriots, winners of eight straight games but losers of their last three in the playoffs – the last two at home – beat the Broncos on Dec. 18 in Denver, 41-23.

New England (13-3) gave up 167 yards rushing in the first quarter and trailed 16-7 early in the second. But three Denver turnovers in that quarter were costly. Defensively, the Broncos controlled receiving stars Wes Welker and Rob Gronkowski, but were hurt by the Patriots' other tight end, Aaron Hernandez.

The Patriots gave up the second-most yards in the league this season, but, with Brady, they scored the third most. So pass rushers Von Miller and Elvis Dumervil must get to him early and defensive backs must cover as long as necessary.

Tebow won't have leading receiver Eric Decker, who hurt his left knee against Pittsburgh. But Willis Mc-Gahee ran for 1,199 yards and Tebow added 660 this season on the NFL's top rushing team.

"We can learn a little bit from our last game against them, but this is a whole new deal," Patriots coach Bill Belichick said. "They're a tough team to prepare for. They give you a lot of looks on both sides of the ball?

Tebow brought the Broncos (9-8) back from a 1-4 start all the way to the playoffs despite completing 46.5 percent of his passes with a flawed motion and losing the last three regular-season games.

But the hype soared after last Sunday's playoff victory.

On the very first play of overtime, Pittsburgh had no deep safety. All Demaryius Thomas had to do was catch Tebow's 18-yard pass over the middle and run the rest of the way for an 80-yard touchdown and a 29-23 win.

That cranked up the Tebowmania volume on postgame shows but not among his teammates.

"For the most part, it's not like it's something that you ask for," Tebow said. "You care about going out there and trying to get better every day and trying to be a great teammate?

And his teammates don't focus on the hype.

"It's nowhere in the locker room," safety Quinton Carter said. "Everybody else outside of here can have fun with that. We're here to work. We're here to win. We don't think about it."

Tebow also has gotten plenty of attention for displaying his religious views by Tebowing – the description for his kneeling - and referring to his faith.

Patriots special teams captain Matthew Slater also is deeply religious.

"I think he's doing the right thing," Slater said. "I think that he's challenging other believers across the league to maybe be more open about their beliefs as well."

Brady rarely discusses his personal feelings. He prefers to focus only on football. But there are similarities in how he and Tebow began their careers, both facing doubts about their NFL prospects.

Tom Brady has the attention-grabbing stats, supermodel wife and Super Bowl rings, but that isn't enough to overcome his runner-up status in media celebrity to his Denver counterpart, quarterback Tim Tebow.

the Heisman Trophy at Florida but wasn't drafted until the 25th pick in 2010 and started just three games as a rookie amid doubts about his passing skills.

Court's Comments on Gays Condemned

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia

• Nearly 40 years after she won the last of her 11 Australian Open singles titles, Margaret Court is back in the news at Melbourne Park for her opposition to gay marriage.

Her stance has spurred the creation of a Facebook group, "Rainbow Flags Over Margaret Court Arena," which is urging spectators to display rainbowcolored gay pride banners at the show court that bears her name during the Australian Open, which begins Monday.

"Politically correct education has masterfully escorted homosexuality out from behind closed doors, into the community openly and now is aggressively demanding marriage rights that are not theirs to take," the 69-year-old Court said in a December interview with The West Australian in Perth, where she lives.

"The fact that the homosexual cry is, 'We can't help it, as we were born this way,' as the cause behind their own personal choice is cause for concern," said Court, who became a Pentecostal minister in the 1990s.

Rennae Stubbs, an Australian who has won four Grand Slam doubles titles, backs fans who want to show their support for gay rights at Margaret Court Arena.

"Margaret has said her feelings and it's public, and it has leverage," said Stubbs, who has been open about her homosexuality. "So I think this is the only way the people feel that they can be heard, through a sign of solidarity. As long as it (a protest) is done tastefully, that's the most important thing for me."

Court's stance has put her at odds with former WTA Tour stars Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King.

Navratilova told Tennis-Channel.com that "seems to me a lot of people have evolved, as has the Bible. Unfortunately, Margaret Court has not. ... Her myopic view is truly frightening as well as damaging to the thousands of children already living in samegender families."

Judge: John Edwards Has Serious Heart Condition

LOS ANGELES TIMES

DURHAM, N.C. • A cardiologist for former presidential candidate John Edwards says he has a life-threatening medical condition that will require surgery next month, a federal judge disclosed Friday as she postponed Edwards' campaign corruption trial for at least two months.

Saying the 58-year-old Edwards suffers from "a serious condition," U.S. District Judge Catherine Eagles delayed the trial until at least March 26. The judge said she had read two letters from Edwards' cardiologist but she did not disclose details about the former senator's condition.

Eagles quoted the cardiologist as saying that Edwards' condition is treatable, with a good chance of recovery.

"Clearly the ends of justice are served by continuance, given the seriousness of his medical condition," Eagles said. The trial had been scheduled to begin Jan. 30.

Edwards is a one-term U.S. senator who ran as a vice presidential candidate with Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts on the 2004 Democratic ticket and twice ran for president. He is charged with six felony and misdemeanor counts.

Prosecutors say Edwards violated campaign finance laws while attempting to cover up an illicit affair with a campaign videographer who later gave birth to his daughter. He faces up to 30 years in prison and $1.5 million in fines if convicted on all counts.

Obama Takes on Big Government: 'It Has to Change'

BY BEN FELLER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Seeking more power to shrink the government, President Barack Obama on Friday suggested smashing six economic agencies into one, an election-year idea intended to halt bureaucratic nightmares and force Republicans to back him on one of their own favorite issues.

"The government we have is not the government we need," Obama told business owners he'd gathered at the White House. Lawmakers seemed willing to at least consider his ideas. Sounding like a manager of a disorganized company, and looking like one by pointing to slides as he spoke, Obama asked Congress to give him a kind of reorganization power no president has had since Ronald Reagan. It would guarantee Obama a vote, within 90 days, on any idea he Republican presidential candidate, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, picks up nine-week-old Laura Ensley of Augusta, Ga., as her mother, Mary Ensley, watches at center, as he campaigns Friday at the University of South Carolina Aiken, in Aiken, S.C.

Romney's Record at Bain Capital Dominates Another Campaign Day offers to consolidate agencies, provided it saves money and cuts the government.

His first potential target: Merging six major trade and commerce agencies into a one-stop-shopping department for American businesses. The Commerce Department would be among those that would cease to exist.

Attacking senseless duplication across the executive branch he runs, Obama said: "Why is it OK for our government? It's not. It has to change."

Politically, Obama is seeking advantage on the turf often owned by Republicans: Smaller government.

He is attempting to directly counter Republican arguments that he has presided over the kind of regulation, spending and debt that can undermine the economy - a dominant theme of this year's debate and one often cited by his potential re-election rival, Republican Mitt Romney.

Obama said he would use his expanded authority to recommend the collapsing of other agencies across the government, not just in the business field, without getting specific. Congress would keep the final say over any proposal. But fast-track power would give Obama a stronger hand to skip much of the outside lobbying and turf battles and get right to a vote.

Congressional reaction was mixed, but generally followed a pattern from both parties — support for making government more efficient, and wariness about how Obama's plan could upend the trade American trade agenda or undermine the prerogatives of Congress.

Republicans skeptically pointed to Obama's past promises as the size of the nation's debt keeps growing.

"It's not often that we see real proposals from this administration to make government smaller," said Rep. Fred Upton, the Michigan Republican who is chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. "I look forward to reviewing the proposal and hope that it will be the first of many to unravel the red tape."

Indeed, Obama promised more plans to shrink things if given more power.

BY WILLIAM DOUGLAS McClatchy Newspapers

COLUMBIA, S.C. • With the Republican presidential race in South Carolina tightening Friday, front-runner Mitt Romney launched a TV ad that portrays his tenure as the head of a private equity company positively, while Newt Gingrich unveiled a Web spot mocking Romney's ability to speak French.

The nastiness that usually accompanies this state's presidential primaries continued to bubble to the surface as three polls released Friday showed a two-man contest shaping up, with Romney holding thin leads over Gingrich with little more than a week before the vote Jan. 21.

A South Carolina survey by the American Research Group showed Romney and Gingrich in a statistical tie. Romney led Gingrich among likely Republican voters by 29 percent to 25 percent, but the poll had a 4 percentage point margin of error. None of the other candidates was close.

A poll by Rasmussen Reports had Romney ahead of Gingrich by 28 percent to 21 percent, while a survey by the Democratic-leaning Public Policy Polling had Romney up 29 to 24 percent over Gingrich, with a 3.5-point error margin.

Romney, in his second day of battling to beat back charges from his GOP rivals that he's an uncaring "vulture capitalist," cued up a 30-seond ad that touts his work at Bain Capital, a private equity company that sometimes laid off workers while attempting to turn companies around.

"This is a business Mitt Romney helped start," a female narrator says as the name of the Staples office-supply store appears on the screen in red letters. "And this one. And this steel mill," as the names of "Sports Authority" and "Steel Dynamics" appear.

Without naming Bain, the ad says, "Mitt Romney helped create and ran a company that invested in struggling businesses, grew new ones and rebuilt old ones, creating thousands of jobs."

Tensions High, US Warns Iran Not to Block Shipping

BY ANNE GEARAN Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Tensions rising by the day, the Obama administration said Friday it is warning Iran through public and private channels against any action that threatens the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf. The Navy revealed that two U.S. ships in and near the Gulf were harassed by Iranian speedboats last week.

Spokesmen were vague on what the United States would do about Iran's threat to block the strategic Strait of Hormuz, but military officials have been clear that the U.S. is readying for a possible naval clash.

That prospect is the latest flashpoint with Iran, and one of the most serious. Although it currently overshadows the threat of war over Iran's disputed nuclear program, perhaps beginning with an Israeli military strike on Iran's nuclear structure, both simmering crises raise the possibility of a shooting war this year.

"We have to make sure we are ready for any situation and have all options on the table," Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said, addressing a soldier's question Thursday about the overall risk of war with Iran.

Navy officials said that in separate incidents Jan. 6, three Iranian speedboats — each armed with a mounted gun briefly chased after a U.S. Navy ship just outside the Gulf near the Strait of Hormuz and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter in the northern Gulf. No shots were fired and the speed-boats backed off.

For several reasons, the risk of open conflict with Tehran appears higher in this election year than at any point since President Barack Obama took office with a pledge to try to bridge 30 years of enmity. A clash would represent a failure of U.S. policy on several fronts and vault nowdormant national security concerns into the presidential election contest.

Marines Name General to Handle Video Probes

BY ROBERT BURNS Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Marine Corps on Friday laid the groundwork for deciding what, if any, disciplinary action will be taken in the case of an Internet video purporting to show Marine snipers urinating on dead bodies in Afghanistan.

The top Marine officer, Gen. James Amos, appointed three-star Gen. Thomas Waldhauser to oversee the case. Waldhauser named another officer to do an internal Marine Corps investigation, which is in addition to a criminal probe under way by the Naval Criminal Investigative Service.

Waldhauser will decide what to do as a result of the investigations.

commander issued a letter to all personnel in the international coalition that is fighting the war, explicitly reminding them of the need to respect the dead. The letter from Army Lt. Gen. Curtis M. Scaparrotti, commander of the International Security Assistance Force Joint Command, reflected the depth of concern about fallout from the video.

"Defiling, desecrating, mocking, photographing or filming for personal use insurgent dead constitutes a grave breach of the LOAC (laws of armed conflict), violate basic standards of human decency and can cause serious damage to relations with the Afghan government," Scaparrotti wrote. He ordered all commanders to remind their subordinates of their duty to comply.

No one has been charged in the case, which triggered widespread outrage with the appearance Wednesday on YouTube of a brief video that appears to show four Marines in full combat gear urinating on the bodies of three dead men lying on the ground.

Marine Gen. John Allen, the top U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan, condemned the behavior and said in a statement Friday while he was traveling in the U.S. that the facts in the case should be determined swiftly.

"These actions are in direct opposition to everything the military stands for," Allen said after viewing the video. "Such acts in no way reflect the high moral standards and values we expect of our armed forces on a daily basis."

Pentagon officials worry that the actions depicted in the video will tarnish the reputation of the entire military. Some officials have expressed fear that it could undermine prospects for exploratory Afghan peace talks.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta and military leaders have promised an exhaustive investigation and sought to contain the damage at home and abroad.

U.S. and other officials speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss intelligence matters. The killing on a Tehran street followed the deaths of several other Iranians involved in the nuclear program, a mysterious explosion at an Iranian nuclear site that may have been sabotage and the apparent targeting of the program with an efficient computer virus. Iranian officials accuse both Israel and the U.S. of carrying out the assassination as part of a secret operation to stop Iran's nuclear program. The killing came a day after Israeli military chief Lt. Gen. Benny Gantz was quoted as telling a parliamentary panel that 2012 would be a 'critical year'' for Iran – in part because of "things that happen to it unnaturally." Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and Panetta made a point of publicly denying any U.S. involvement, but the administration tied itself in knots this week over how far to go in condemning an action that could further the U.S. goal of stalling Iranian nuclear progress. The U.S. position remains that a military strike on Iran's known nuclear facilities is undesirable.

U.S. to Normalize Ties with Myanmar

America's move rewards democratic reforms by a government it previously treated as a pariah.

BY MATTHEW PENNINGTON Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The United States is restoring full diplomatic relations with Myanmar, a landmark in the Obama administration's drive to reward democratic reforms by a government the U.S. previously treated as a pariah.

The decision announced Friday to exchange ambassadors with Myanmar for the first time in two decades followed the release of hundreds of political prisoners, but Washington probably will be looking for fair conduct in coming elections and an end to ethnic violence before it lifts sanctions.

The U.S. also wants Myanmar to open up to U.N. nuclear inspectors and sever illicit military ties with North Korea because of concerns that Pyongyang has sold Myanmar defense hardware, including missiles, in defiance of international sanctions.

Myanmar President Thein Sein pardoned 651 detainees on Friday, among them leaders of brutally repressed democratic uprisings, heads of ethnic minority groups, journalists and even a former prime minister who had been blamed himself for incarcerating activists.

President Barack Obama, in a statement, described the pardons as "a substantial step forward for democratic reform." Aung San Suu Kyi's party swept elections but was barred from power by the military.

Myanmar's own diplomatic representation in Washington also currently is a step below the level of ambassador.

Clinton cautioned that exchanging ambassadors is a lengthy process — any candidate for U.S. ambassador requires Senate confirmation — and that the process would depend on continued progress toward reform.

The U.S. limits diplomatic relations with several countries for political reasons. In countries without a U.S. ambassador, such as Venezuela, or even an embassy, such as Cuba, a charge d'affaires is usually entrusted with directing diplomacy. The diplomat would lack the same standing as an envoy appointed by the president and confirmed by the U.S. Senate.

The situation is different in countries with which Washington has broken off diplomatic relations, such as Iran, where no American diplomats are posted. Clinton said the U.S. also would identify further steps it could take to support reforms, but she gave no specifics.

chip down the road.

Time is short, with Iran making several leaps toward the ability to manufacture a nuclear weapon if it chooses to do so. Iran claims its nuclear development is intended for the peaceful production of energy. Meanwhile, several longstanding assumptions about U.S. influence and the value of a targeted strike to stymie Iran's progress toward a nuclear weapon have changed. For one, the White House is no longer confident it could prevail on Israel not to launch such a strike.

An escalating covert campaign of sabotage and targeted assassinations highlighted by this week's killing of an Iranian nuclear scientist may not be enough to head off a larger shooting war and could prod Iran to strike first.

The brazen killing of a young scientist by motorcycle-riding bombers is seen as almost surely the work of Israel, according to

The U.S. decision follows a historic visit by Hillary Rodham Clinton in December, the first by a secretary of state in 56 years, as a way to deepen engagement and encourage more openness in the country. That is part of a broader administration policy to step up U.S. involvement across the Asia-Pacific region as well as a way to counter the growing influence of China, which has remained Myanmar's core ally during its decades of isolation.

"As I said last December, the United States will meet action with action," Clinton said at the State Department. "Based on the steps taken so far, we will now begin."

The highest-level U.S. diplomat based in Myanmar, also known as Burma, has been a charge d'affaires rather than an ambassador. Washington downgraded its representation in 1990, when opposition leader expected the Obama administration to put free markets on trial, but as The Wall Street Journal said, 'Mr. Romney's GOP opponents are embarrassing themselves by taking the Obama line.'"

Gingrich, in an interview taped Thursday night in Miami for the Spanish-language network Telemundo's show "Enfoque" Sunday, said his attacks on Romney weren't attacks on the freemarket system. Several Republicans, including influential South Carolina Sen. Jim DeMint, have said the Bain-bashing by some Republican candidates makes them sound like Democrats.

"Well, let me say, first of all, the criticism is not of capitalism. It's not of free markets. It's not even of Bain as a company," Gingrich said, according to a transcript supplied by Telemundo. "The question is, Gov. Romney said he created 100,000 jobs. ... I've been challenging him to share with us the details. I mean, why should we believe his claim if he's not willing to actually tell us what happened at Bain?"

Bain, a privately held company, hasn't provided documentation to back up Romney's claim to have created 100,000 jobs on balance when he ran it.

While Romney chastised his GOP critics in a TV ad, Gingrich blasted the former Massachusetts governor in a 60-second Web ad titled "The French Connection." The spot compares Romney to two former Democratic presidential nominees from Massachusetts, former Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. John Kerry.

Romney isn't the only candidate who's bilingual. Gingrich spoke with Telemundo in Spanish.

Courage to Match Our Fear

It wouldn't be accurate to say that heights make Kathie nervous. Terrified would be more accurate. So would apoplectic. Or just plain "scared to death?

But nervous? No way. Nervous doesn't begin to tell the story.

But if that is true – and it is – what on earth was she doing on top of a 50-foot rappelling tower not too long ago? I mean, besides screaming.

The answer isn't easy, but it is surprisingly simple. What it comes down to is this: Kathie was part of a team, and she refused to let them down. With their support, she was all of the screaming and flailing (and that was just from the rappelling instructors). But she did it. And that was the important thing.

The next day I asked Kathie if the experience helped her to overcome her fear of heights.

"Define 'overcome," she said.

"Well, are you less afraid of heights now?" I asked. "Is bungee jumping up next for you?"

that I could do something despite my fear." "Even though you're still

"Exactly," she said. "It turns out that the height of the tower wasn't really the issue. Fear was the issue. And my team gave me the courage I needed to handle the fear."

"And that's something you'll remember next time you're up on a rappelling tower?'

She shuddered.

"Hopefully," she said confidentially, "there will never be a next time."

OK, so maybe she isn't exactly a profile in courage. Or is she?

Most of us would probably afraid. Real courage is the ability to overcome fear in order to do what needs to be done.

For some people, such courage comes quite naturally, while others have it thrust upon them by time and circumstance. Some, like Kathie, are motivated to courageous action by friends and family. Others take courage from their faith and from cherished values. Different people are inspired by different things in different situations. The important thing is finding the right foundation upon which to build a courageous response - and then responding.

It wasn't pretty, what with

"You've got to be kidding," Kathie said, laughing. "I'm just as afraid as I ever was."

"So basically, this experience didn't really do anything for you," I observed.

"Sure it did," she said. "It didn't eliminate my fear. But it helped me prove to myself

Former Turkish Cypriot Leader Denktash Dies at 87

BY MENELAOS HADJICOSTIS Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus • Rauf Denktash, the former Turkish Cypriot leader whose determined pursuit of a separate state for his people and strong opposition to the divided island's reunification defined a political career spanning six decades, has died. He was 87.

Dr. Charles Canver, who treated Denktash for his heart condition, said he died late Friday of multiple organ failure at Near East University Hospital in the Turkish Cypriot north of Nicosia. He had been in poor health since suffering a stroke last May. Denktash was hospitalized last week with diarrhea and dehydration. Canver said Denktash's weakened heart contributed to his organ failure.

Turkish Cypriot leader Dervis Eroglu said: "We as Turkish Cypriots won't forget (Denktash's) selfless struggle for our freedom."

Denktash's son, Serdar, said his father was no longer with his people, but that "he is now among the fallen heroes and soldiers."

Denktash's death comes in the middle of yet another diplomatic drive to reunify Cyprus, which has been split along ethnic lines since 1974 when Turkey invaded the island in the aftermath of a short-lived coup by supporters of union with Greece.

Denktash had maintained the Turkish Cypriots needed a separate state to preserve peace and avoid a return to what he called massacres of Turkish Cypriots at the hands of the majority Greek Cypriots.

His dedication to the partitionist cause made him a hero to many Turkish Cypriots, just as Greek Cypriots saw him as their arch-villain the standard-bearer of all they opposed.

That image began to be molded in the late 1950s when Denktash helped found the Turkish Resistance Organization or TMT as a counterweight to EOKA, a Greek Cypriot group waging a guerrilla campaign against the island's then colonial ruler Britain to achieve union with Greece.

"Greek Cypriots saw him as the cynical adversary," said Cyprus University History Professor Petros Papapolyviou. "He was seen as the man who put the interests of Turkey above those of Cyprus."

Born in Paphos, Cyprus, on Jan. 24, 1924, the London-trained lawyer known for his wit rose to prominence as a leading figure in the Turkish Cypriot community during the tumultuous period in the 1960s and 1970s when intercommunal conflict claimed hundreds of Cypriot lives.

He blocked efforts to reunite the island, claiming that unification would open the way for Greek Cypriot domination and raise the threat of renewed violence.

After the Turkish invasion, he was chosen as leader of what was then the selfdeclared Cyprus Turkish Federated State. He proclaimed the independence of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus (TRNC) in 1983, but the breakaway state failed to gain recognition from any other country other than Turkey, which maintains some 35,000 troops there.

"He was Mr. TRNC," said Eastern Mediterranean politics professor Erol Kaymak. "He was very much a man of is time ... you could rely on him to stick to the ethnonationalist line that he believed in?

A series of United Nations-backed talks to end the island's division through the 1980s and 1990s went nowhere.

Most of these negotiations pitted Denktash against a familiar adversary – Glafcos Clerides, who was Denktash's Greek Cypriot counterpart for much of his time in power.

Clerides, like Denktash, is a lawyer, and the two men knew each other from the 1950s when they locked horns in the courtroom with Denktash prosecuting EOKA fighters and Clerides defending them.

Authorities Say Missing Mont. Teacher Is Dead

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Authorities said Friday that two men in the Dakotas are being questioned in connection with the death of a Montana math teacher who vanished last weekend when she left her house for a run.

Sidney police Chief Frank DiFonzo said a 47year-old man is in custody in the Williams County jail in North Dakota while a 22-yearold man is being questioned in Rapid City, S.D. He did not identify them and declined to answer any questions about the investigation. Sidney Public School officials posted a statement online saying they learned of Sherry Arnold's death Friday morning. The statement did not provide details. "I think we are starting to find some closure in the whole deal," Sidney Mayor Bret Smelser said. "The news is not good, and as far as I know we don't have a body yet?' FBI Special Agent in Charge David J. Johnson, of Salt Lake City, said a tip from the public led to the two men. The FBI hasn't confirmed Arnold's death. The popular 43-yearold math teacher from the oil boom town of Sidney near the North Dakota border had been missing since last Saturday morning. The only clue to her disappearance that had been publicly released was that one of her shoes was found along her running route.

Tricky Transfer Awaits Tanker Inching to Alaska

BY MARY PEMBERTON Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska • A Russian tanker has muscled its way through hundreds of miles of Bering Sea ice several feet thick to deliver fuel to Nome. Now comes the tricky part: Getting more than a million gallons of diesel and gasoline to shore through a mile-long hose without a spill. The problem is that Nome's harbor is iced-in, preventing the 370-foot tanker from getting to the city dock. It will have to moor offshore to transfer its 1.3-million-gallon payload across the ice and to fuel headers at the dock. "I think all of the precautions have been addressed," Nome Harbormaster Joy Baker said Friday. "I think everything that should be done has been done?" For days, operations officials have looked at how best to lay the segmented fuel hose across the shore-fast ice for the transfer. The idea is to get the tanker in as close as possible to reduce the chance of a spill. There has been lots of anxious waiting since the ship left Russia in mid-December. It picked up diesel fuel in South Korea before traveling to Dutch Harbor, Alaska, where it took on unleaded gasoline. A Coast Guard icebreaker escorted the tanker through the Bering Sea pack ice, the two vessels at times barely crawling along as officials looked for new techniques to get the tanker free of shifting ice.

Late Thursday, the Coast Guard Cutter Healy and the Renda stopped six miles offshore to wait for daylight and figure out how to get the tanker within about a mile of the harbor so its hose will reach the dock.

Nome Mayor Denise Michels sat in her car Friday morning in record-breaking low temperatures and gazed past the harbor entrance. Her eyes focused on the lights coming from the tanker and the icebreaker just before dawn. have its own spill containment area, and extra absorbent boom will be on hand in case of a spill.

The state is requiring that the fuel transfer be done only in daylight hours. Nome's northern latitude leaves it mostly hidden from the sun this time of year, meaning that after the 11:39 a.m. sunrise, there would be just 5 hours and 4 minutes of sunlight Friday.

If successful, the transfer

"It is right out there. You can see it," she said. "We are pretty excited."

The Coast Guard icebreaker began moving again late Friday morning, said University of Alaska Fairbanks researcher Greg Walker, who is in Nome providing information about ice conditions near the harbor.

A lot remains to be done before the fuel transfer can occur, Walker said. The tanker needs to get positioned securely in the ice and moored so it won't move during the transfer. Crews also need to finish removing large boulders of ice in a rubble field and leveling large pressure ridges to create a flat surface for the transfer hose.

Once the tanker gets as close as it safely can to the city dock, the ice will have to be allowed to refreeze to keep the ship stable. Then, the hose's segments will have to be bolted together and inspected before the fuel can begin to flow.

Personnel will walk the entire length of the hose every 30 minutes to check it for leaks. Each segment will would mark the first time fuel has been delivered by sea to a Western Alaska community in winter.

The cutter Healy, left, breaks ice around the Russian tanker Renda in the Bering Sea on Tuesday, 97 miles south of Nome, Alaska.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Cole," and I have been together since college - several years now. We have a loving relationship, but the problem is distance. My job sometimes requires me to take short-term (two- to five-month) contracts in other cities and overseas.

Even though it is difficult to be apart, I handle longdistance relationships relatively well while Cole does not. This began in college when I studied abroad for a semester. Cole tries to be supportive and wants me to be successful, but he takes it personally when I have to leave. For me, it's just about a job, but Cole doesn't see it that way.

I would support Cole wherever and in whatever he needed. Although it would be ideal to be together all the time, I realize that sometimes it isn't possible. Am I being selfish, or do we simply need different things out of a relationship?

- GLOBE-TROTTER IN DES MOINES

DEAR GLOBE-TROT-TER: Are you being selfish, or is Cole being selfish? Are you willing to give up a career you have prepared for and work in so that he will no longer suffer separation anxiety? While your relationship is a loving one, the two of you have serious differences, and you must rationally decide which is more important to you. After that, everything will fall into place.

DEAR ABBY: My wife died nine years ago after a long illness. We have a son, a daughter and seven grandchildren.

I met "Lucille" two years ago at a basketball game that involved both our grandsons. Slowly, we began dating. Lucille has been a widow for many years and has five children. We are now engaged and planning a wedding for about 60 people after Lucille retires next year. We want to include our families in the ceremony.

Lucille's two eldest sons plan to give her away. Two of her granddaughters will be flower girls. I asked my son to be my best man and he refused. He said he is happy for us and will attend the wedding, but he prefers not to stand up for me. He feels it would be disloyal to his 25 BEET SHARES mother's memory. He is adamant.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

I never imagined my son would act this way. I didn't mean to offend him. I'm not trying to replace his mother. We just want to bring both families together. Abby, your opinion, please.

-WELL-MEANING

DEAR DAD: It's a shame that your son feels unable to support you as you enter this new phase of your life. If he is offended at the idea that after nine years you would want to remarry, the problem is his. Do not make it yours. I'm sure your late wife would want your life to be fulfilling. Ask your daughter or a close friend to stand up with you and let nothing spoil your day. You and Lucille have earned your happiness. Bless you both.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me the proper etiquette for gift-giving. My in-laws often leave the price tags on gifts, especially if the gift was expensive. I believe price tags should be removed. Shouldn't a gift come from the heart and not be a monetary statement?

- OFFENDED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR OFFENDED: Yes, it should. Leaving a price tag on a gift implies that the giver is also "giving" the recipient a burden of gratitude. And the burden of gratitude can weigh so heavily that it diminishes the pleasure of receiving a gift.

Times News

IF JANUARY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Every cloud has a silver lining - so although the year ahead may hold challenges, you will gain valuable experience. Expect that the year ahead will offer new friends, new goals and that you will develop a more-tolerant and openminded viewpoint. Blessings in disguise could appear in May when you find yourself at a crossroads. Be sure to get advice from trusted advisers before you make any life altering decisions. It is not advisable to begin anything mew until early August when the limitations and pressures you are saddled with seem to roll away.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lust and love don't go hand in glove. As the weekend unfolds, you will find willing hands to handle your heart with tender-loving care. Trust that companions know best where matters of taste are concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Timely treasures await you. True-blue companions are content just to be by your side if you have waited patiently for just the right time to begin a new relationship. Make financial decisions now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Togetherness is an allimportant factor this weekend. Plan to spend time with loved ones – but if you are single, find a special someone. Money spent on entertainments and fun-filled activities will be well spent.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unwind. All the tensions of the past few days retreat when you take time for a hot bath, a massage, or some time relaxing in front of the TV. This could be a good time to look for love in all the right places.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A sense of discontent is receding. You will find others exhibit much more willingness to cooperate with you. If you have been waiting to make your amorous moves, this could be the right time to go for it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Timeless treasures always satisfy. You can find just the right gift or perfect card when shopping today. The gift-giving holidays are over but generosity is still in style.
