The students attended the Business Professionals of America regional competition, with top performers moving on to the state level in March in Boise. BPA is a national organization where students from middle school through college can learn about life in the business world, said Gayle Bean, the coordinator for Monday's competition and business teacher at Canyon Ridge High School.

Canyon Ridge High School junior Ana Pelayo worked for three weeks on a Power-Point, poster and speech in the management presentation category for the event, complete with pictures and music.

"Last year I scored one point away from going to nationals," she said.

A year later, Pelayo said she felt more organized, knew better what judges expect and hoped to make it to the national competition in Chicago this April.

"I've done it enough, but it still gets on your nerves," she said.

Participating in the business club has helped Pelayo with her social and business skills, and she hopes to open her own psychiatry practice one day.

Adair Tello, a Canyon Ridge High School sophomore, plans to become a medical doctor and also wants to open his own practice.

Tello took a test in medical office procedures which included medical term definitions and questions about what to do if someone calls a

Help for Health and Welfare

Rising demand for services and increasing employee turnover has left state Health and Welfare officials searching for new answers.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Idaho must develop new ways to handle changing health care needs and programs, according to Richard Armstrong, director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

During his Monday morning presentation to the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, Armstrong praised the Legislature for their handling of a difficult budget situation. But cost management tools that have worked in the past have been exhausted, he said.

"We need new tools and fresh ideas," he said.

The combination of a difficult economy, limited resources and a jump in Idahoans who use Health and Welfare services has stretched the department.

Armstrong cited food stamp enrollment as one example of the load. In 2007, there were 10,665 applications or reevaluations for food stamps. By November 2011, 24,881 cases were tallied for that calendar year. In 2007, each full-time employee handled 167 of those cases. That increased to 555 cases per employee last fall.

In November, a record 235,000 people received food stamps through the department, according to the Associated Press.

Armstrong also encouraged the committee to provide a raise for Health and Welfare employees, citing increased pay as crucial for employee retention.

FINANCES, ACADEMIC READINESS HAMPER COLLEGE HOPES

State investigators say many students lack the resources to attend college, as well as the understanding of why it's important.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Finances and simply being unprepared for college are the main barriers for Idaho students pursuing post-secondary education, a legislative committee heard Monday.

The Office for Performance Evaluation gave a presentation to the Joint Legislative Oversight Committee on barriers to post-secondary education enrollment in Idaho.

Amy Lorenzo and Bryon Welch of the OPE said they found three main barriers for students continuing past high school: ability to pay, academic readiness and affordability. They also found there is no standardized baseline for current education levels, and there aren't enough counselors who can focus on post-secondary education for high-school students.

Many students don't see the clear link between education and future employment, Lorenzo said. And many of those who do want to go to college or trade school don't have the resources to do so, or don't know how to find them.

Dog Park Proposal Poised for T.F. Council Vote

If it wins council approval, a temporary place for untethered dogs to play would be designated at two softball fields near CSI.

BY ERIC LARSEN
elarsen@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Imagine a world that stretches in every direction, where you're free to play with those you love and run alongside exciting new friends.

For Twin Falls dogs, such a place has been relegated to the leg-pumping dreams that owners watch with amusement. But one will become reality — at least temporarily — if a proposal to test the idea of an off-leash dog park finds favor with the Twin Falls City Council during its meeting today.

City Parks and Recreation officials hope to turn two gated fields at the Frontier Field softball complex into a place for untethered dogs to run, at least until mid-March, when the fields will be converted back for softball use. The idea is to see how the temporary sites are received as a step toward creating a permanent

Please see DOG PARK, A2

At a Glance Dog Park

Here's what you need to know about today's proposal:

What: Twin Falls Parks and Recreation officials would convert two gated softball fields into temporary areas where dog owners could let their pets run unleashed. Currently, dogs must be leashed in all parts of the city.

Where: Frontier Field softball complex, east of the College of Southern Idaho campus. The two fields closest to Falls Avenue would be used — the larger field for dogs 35 pounds or larger and the smaller Carter Gibb Field for dogs 35 pounds or lighter.

When: A start date isn't outlined in the proposal, but the parks would be closed to dogs on March 14 so they could be converted back for spring and summer softball use.

Rules: The proposal includes a list of 15 rules for the areas. Among the most important: a $300 fine for handlers who don't immediately clean up after their dogs; two dogs maximum per handler; and all dogs must be legally licensed, vaccinated, and must wear a visible dog license.

Prosecutors Want Tougher Drive-by Murder Penalties

BOISE (AP) • Prosecutors are asking for a chance to levy tougher sanctions against people who kill bystanders during drive-by shootings.

The Spokesman-Review reports the Idaho State Prosecutors Association aims to add drive-by shootings to an existing “felony murder rule.”

The modification would allow deadly shootings to be charged as first-degree murder — even if the shooter didn’t intend to kill.

Right now, the intent requirement is waived only in certain instances, including arson, rape and acts of terrorism.

Holly Koole, a lobbyist with the prosecutors association, told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Monday the rule should be expanded to include drive-by shootings.

Under existing law, Koole says a drive-by shooter who unintentionally killed a bystander can only be charged with involuntary manslaughter.

She says that’s insufficient, when innocent life is taken.

off-leash dog park in the city.

Previous efforts to create such an area at Teton Park and the Oregon Trail Youth Complex were nixed due to neighborhood concerns. But this time around, the city has heard from only four residents on the matter — all opposed to the idea.

Neighbors expressed concerns about sanitation and an ongoing problem of dog owners allowing their pets to run free on the nearby College of Southern Idaho fitness trail. But the fields, according to a city report, were chosen in part because they’re completely fenced and already used by owners training their dogs.

If approved, the temporary site will include a host of rules for owners to follow, and sign-in sheets will be placed at each field to gauge their use. An online survey that received 272 responses showed that nearly 75 percent of respondents said they’d use an off-leash dog park.

The city already has one doggie bag dispenser at the ready to help deal with the byproduct of all the off-leash fun, and would ready another if the proposal passes. Council members are expected to vote today on the location, rules, and a city ordinance that would allow dogs to be unleashed in designated areas.

“I didn’t know what Mr.

Canyon Ridge was, at first,” Hoffmeyer said of the presentation, adding that Pelayo did well.

Participating in the competition helps students prepare for the business world, Youree said. How each person handles running the computer and what information they decide to put up on the PowerPoint or poster go into the final score along with speaking skills.

There’s also paperwork like getting releases if the students do interviews for their project, Hoffmeyer said.

The competition and club are a good chance for students interested in business to see what aspect they enjoy most, Bean said.

The non-athletic competition is a bit different than many students are used to.

Idaho’s Road-killed Wildlife May Become Fair Game

BOISE (AP) • Idaho’s road-killed wildlife could become fair game.

The Senate Resources Committee on Monday got a glimpse of a proposed rule allowing legal recovery of big-game species run over by cars.

Right now, animals that draw the short straw during vehicle-wildlife encounters belong to Idaho.

With proposed changes, drivers or anybody else who happens upon a clobbered critter could recover it, provided they report their serendipitous find to the Department of Fish and Game.

The changes are a response to northern Idaho Republican

Rep. Dick Harwood’s efforts to legalize harvest of valuable fur-bearing animals like bobcats, foxes, bears and mountain lions run over by cars.

Fish and Game’s Sharon Kiefer reminded lawmakers this would be for accidental collisions only — they’re not opening the door for drivers to just hit wildlife.

S.E. IDAHO COUNTIES UPSET OVER POLYGAMIST MAILINGS

REXBURG (AP) • A polygamist in prison for sexual assault has been bugging southeastern Idaho officials with a flurry of letters and information packets.

The Rexburg Standard Journal reports the materials from Warren Jeffs and his supporters have been arriving at local government offices in Madison and Fremont counties for several weeks.

Jeffs is leader of a sect called the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He is serving a life term, plus 20 years, in a Texas prison for sexually assaulting two young girls he claimed as his wives.

South Dakota county officials have reported receiving similar letters and packages from Jeffs and his supporters.

In Idaho, Fremont County Commission Chairman Skip Hurt says most of the documents have gone unopened and were thrown in the garbage.

Idaho Leaders Search for New Jobs for Aberdeen

POCATELLO (AP) • Eastern Idaho leaders say they’re still working to find a new purpose for the J.R. Simplot potato processing plant in Aberdeen.

The Simplot company announced last fall that it would close the plant in 2014, eliminating about 290 jobs.

Former Pocatello Mayor Roger Chase told the Idaho State Journal that the importance of the plant to the town of less than 2,000 people can’t be overstated.

Chase is one of several working on the issue. He says the first step is for workers to keep doing a good job at the plant in the hopes that Simplot will decide to keep the business open. Officials are also talking with Idaho State University to see if there are classes they can bring to Aberdeen to teach new job skills.

Idaho House Drafting Measure to Boot Occupy Boise

BOISE (AP) • Some Idaho lawmakers want to bid adieu to “Occupy Boise,” whose campers erected tents on state-managed land surrounding the old Ada County Courthouse starting in November to protest social and economic inequality.

On Monday, House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said a bill to for-bid camping on the Capitol Mall and nearby state property could be up for consideration as soon as Wednesday.

Bedke says it’s modeled after a Boise ordinance outlawing camping on city property, adding that the right place for people to exercise free speech is on the Capitol steps, not a permanent tent city on taxpayer-owned land.

Even so, Occupy Boise’s police liaison Dean Gunderson fears Bedke’s proposal is designed to quell his movement’s right to speak its mind, something protected by the U.S. and Idaho constitutions.

Lawmakers Weigh Fully Funding Catastrophic Health Care

The state’s indigent health care fund needs $17 million just to pay its current bills.

BY CLARK CORBIN
Post Register

BOISE • The chairman of the state’s Catastrophic Health Care Program asked the Legislature’s budget panel for $17 million in emergency funding Monday to overcome budget manipulation tactics employed a year ago.

Roger Christensen said the program, also known as the CAT Fund, will go bankrupt as early as next month if lawmakers don’t intervene by supplementing funding.

The CAT Fund is Idaho’s indigent health care program, which covers the costs of catastrophic treatment for residents who don’t have insurance, don’t qualify for Medicaid, aren’t on welfare and cannot pay their emergency medical bills.

Last year, Christensen estimated the program’s expenses would be nearly $32 million. Although the state is legally obligated to pay bills incurred under the program, lawmakers budgeted only $22.2 million for the CAT fund — allowing them to leave Boise last year under the auspices that they had passed a balanced budget.

Lawmakers knew they would need to backfill the CAT Fund with supplemental funding this year, and Christensen told members of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee it’s time to pay those bills.

“By the time we (CAT Fund board members) hit our February meeting, we won’t be able to pay the bills we approved,” Christensen told lawmakers.

Although the budget panel did not take formal action Monday, Co-Chairman Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said lawmakers would fast-track a funding request. It was not, however, er, immediately clear whether legislators would pay the entire $17 million or free up a smaller amount of money needed for board members to pay bills coming due this month and next.

Under the program, the county where residents who received emergency care live pays the first $11,000 of their medical costs each year. After that, the state picks up the tab.

Sen. Dean Mortimer, an Idaho Falls Republican who sits on JFAC, said budgeting for the CAT Fund can be especially difficult because there is no way to know how many residents will become sick or injured. However, Mortimer applauded efforts by the CAT Fund board to reduce state costs through medical review and screening applicants for eligibility for other forms of coverage.

Sixty percent of the program’s expenses originated from the state’s six most populated counties. The statewide average amount paid per claim last year was more than $24,000. Accidents, cancer, heart disease and other illnesses are among the most common reasons for claims.

“We still see a fairly significant increase in case loads, and I think that’s due to the economy,” said Christensen, a Bonneville County commissioner.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s 2013 budget would again undercut CAT Fund expenses. Christensen asked for about $34.5 million in funding, while Otter recommends $19 million from the general fund.

Rep. Fred Wood, a Burley Republican who sits on JFAC, called for lawmakers to stop intentionally lowballing the CAT Fund budget.

“I think we are in a position certainly to take care of our legal obligations as a state first,” Wood said. “Not fully funding the CAT Fund for fiscal year 2013 ... I’m not sure is something I think this committee should do.”

Programs Would Help Fostered Teens Grow into Responsible Adults

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Idaho teenagers in foster care may soon have more support as they transition to adulthood, thanks to two initiatives from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

During a presentation Monday to the Legislature’s Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, Robert Luce, administrator for the department’s Division of Family and Community Services, said children who turn 18 while still in foster care are ill-prepared to become self-sufficient adults. Without stable families to turn to or continued support from foster families, young adults who have aged out of the system are at a high risk of becoming pregnant, homeless and incarcerated.

Luce and his staff hope to address those concerns by spearheading two programs: The One Church One Child Initiative and the Scholarships and Trust Account Initiative.

the support, which will include volunteers who will act as go-betweens for the churches and child welfare workers. Currently, 31 states have similar programs, Luce said.

The other program would set up scholarships and trusts for teenage foster children. The department would work with the Soroptimists of Boise to decide who receives those scholarships.

In 2011, the Department of Health and Welfare received 18,857 child protection referrals and placed 2,826 children in foster care, handled through the Division Family and Community Services. This year, that division is requesting $93.5 million from the state as part of Health and Welfare’s budget request of $2.4 billion. The division’s money would be used for expenditures like child welfare, foster and assistance stipends, the Southwest Idaho Treatment Center and service integration.

Idaho’s Gas Discoverers Still Trying to Sell Wells

Talks coincide with the start of lawmakers’ review of oil and gas industry rules.

BY ROCKY BARKER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Bridge Resources’ geologists turned an idea about the natural gas that underlies southwest Idaho into a budding industry, but financial difficulties in its previous developments got in the way.

Natural gas has not yet begun to flow into the pipeline, but Bridge is in talks with a buyer for its Idaho natural gas properties, said Chairman of the Board Nick Clayton. The company that discovered commercial quantities of natural gas in Idaho has been trying to sell off its assets near New Plymouth to pay off more than $60 million in debt.

Its Western Idaho Project includes the Willow and Hamilton fields, which it owns in partnership with Paramax Resources.

This afternoon, the House Resources and Conservation Committee will begin reviewing the rules approved this fall by the Idaho Oil and Gas Conservation Commission. Those rules include regulations for the controversial practice of hydrolic fracking, which drillers say they won’t employ.

Lawmakers also are expected to debate other legislation this session to guide oil and gas development in Idaho.

Earlier this month the Idaho Statesman reported that a lien had been filed against Bridge and Paramax and that they were scheduled to close on a deal with a buyer last week. But Clayton was not available to comment at the time because he was in the jungles of Asia. Now, he said, he wants to clarify the company’s position.

Before the company closes on its deal it will have to take it to the board of directors for approval, Clayton said, adding that he is committed to ensure that everyone owed is paid.

These are the wells where commercially viable natural gas discoveries were made in 2010 and Bridge was seeking to put them into production in 2011. But the company’s financial problems caught up with it last fall.

That’s when it became evident that Bridge did not get enough in the sale of its North Sea properties to pay off its debt to a consortium of banks led by Royal Bank of Scotland, Clayton said in a telephone interview.

“We were in a tricky position,” he said.

Clayton was brought in to sort out the matter and to restructure the $44 million in secured debt and $20 million in subordinated debt. This was done so Bridge could “emerge a stronger company,” he said.

Bridge is seeking a separate deal for 80,000 acres of leases in Idaho and Oregon beyond the two fields. It controls these leases alone and wants to partner with another company that wants explore and develop them.

Clayton, a self-employed corporate financial consultant, has provided strategic and corporate finance advice to a number of oil and gas companies globally. He started his career with BP and serves on several oil and gas company boards.

At least one other company — Snake River Oil and Gas, a subsidiary of Arkansas drillers Weiser Brown — holds thousands of acres of the area under lease.

increased, the department has lost 330 workers, or 11 percent of its filled full-time positions since 2007.

Another upcoming task, Armstrong said, is readying the state to become Medicaid-ready to comply with the federal health care reforms. Currently, Medicaid is primarily for children, people with disabilities, pregnant women and the elderly. But starting in 2014, all adults who come in at lower than 133 percent of the poverty level will be Medicaid-eligible.

This change will make an estimated 100,000 more Idahoans eligible for Medicaid starting that year, Armstrong said. His department is requesting $3.48 million in state funds and $35 million in spending authority to cover costs associated with Medicaid readiness, including changing its online eligibility system determination to meet federal requirements. If the state isn’t ready in time, it may receive lower federal payments for Medicaid services, Armstrong said.

One other key change the department is seeking this session: Spreading out food stamp payments throughout the month. Currently, food stamp recipients receive payments at the first of the month, putting a strain on grocery stores as everyone goes shopping at the same time.

The department is pushing to spread out the payments throughout the month, Armstrong said, at an estimated annual cost of $110,000 in general funds beginning in 2014. That money would provide additional employees to answer participant questions about date confusion and date change requests, along with embossing new cards with the date changes.

awards are merit-based, as opposed to need-based scholarships. But the OPE found that need-based scholarships are more effective in getting more kids to college, because merit-based scholarships are often earned by those who can already afford college, Welch said.

The investigation also examined employment in Idaho. The state continues to grow in low-wage, low-skill jobs, Lorenzo said. That is a problem, said Michael Rush, executive director of the Idaho State Board of Education.

average income,” Rush said.

OPE recommended the state departments of Education and Labor work together to identify and address training needs for jobs that are available in Idaho now and in the future. Having a cohesive plan may help attract high-paying, high-skill employers to the state.

The committee voted to hear a follow-up report in a year.

WEIRD GADGETS AT CES: MOTORIZED UNICYCLE, ANYONE?

BY PETER SVENSSON
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • A motorized, seat-less unicycle, a video game you control with your eyes, and a mind-reading headset that serves as a game controller were among the more bizarre gadgets being shown off at this year's International Consumer Electronics Show.

Some 3,100 exhibitors attended the show, and although there were plenty of mainstream technologies on display, the show attracted a fair share of off-beat gadgets. Here's a roundup of some of the weirdest devices:

Solowheel

Picture a unicycle without a frame or saddle, and you have the Solowheel. Not working for you? Ok, add this to the picture: footboards that fold out from the wheel. To ride it, you stand on the footboards and straddle the wheel. Lean forward, and the wheel engages a battery-powered electric motor that can send it —and hopefully its rider— zooming along at 10 miles per hour. The wheel has a gyroscope that helps keep the rider upright. In other words, it's like a Segway with only one wheel.

Because of the rechargeable battery, which has a 15- to 20-mile range, the Solowheel weighs 26 pounds. That's as much as a folding bike, but the Solowheel is more compact. It's sold by Inventist LLC for $1,800. Its creator is a serial inventor, Shane Chen, previously came up with the AquaSkipper, a human-powered hydrofoil.

Who's it for? Brave people with a good sense of balance, who want to utterly surprise everyone they meet.

Foam Fighters

Toy companies are eager to link their products with smart-phone and tablet games, creating toys that are an amusing blend of virtual and real. Foam Fighters are made of two sheets of thin foam, painted and shaped like World War II fighter planes such as the famous Mitsubishi Zero. Toss them in the air, and they fly like paper airplanes. Better yet, you can attach them to a plastic arm with a suction cup that, in turn, sticks to the back of an iPhone, iPad or Android phone, right next to the camera. The airplane shows up on screen, and if you download a free app, the fighter plane will look like it's zooming around in war-torn skies, controlled by the movement of the phone or tablet. Foam Fighters go on sale in April. A pack of two, with a stand, will cost $10.

Who's it for? AppGear is aiming at kids, ages 8 to 12, but it could appeal to frustrated fighter pilots of all ages.

Haier Brain Wave

The Chinese appliance company brought this wireless mind-reading headset to the show, and demonstrated how it could be used to control a TV set. It holds one sensing pad to the wearer's forehead and another that clips onto an earlobe. The big limitation is that the mind-reading capability (actually just measurement of brain waves) is crude. The set can only be used to sense if the user wants something to go up or down. For any other direction, you need the remote. In a demonstration of a simple maze-like game, the wearer guided a figure up or down with his mind, and right and left with the remote. Haier said it's developing something that lets the wearer change channels by thinking about it.

Haier is selling the set in China, but has no plans to bring it to market in the U.S.

Who's it for? No one outside of China, yet. Eventually, this could be a dream come true for the laziest of couch potatoes.

Eye Asteroids

Continuing on the theme of controlling electronics without moving, Swedish company Tobii brought its eye-controlled arcade game to the show. To play, you stand in front of it and look at a screen, where asteroids hurtle toward your battle station. It shoots laser beams at the asteroids you look at, destroying them. So yes, looks can kill.

The game cabinet contains cameras that track your gaze. The arcade game is really just a technology demonstration. What Tobii really wants is to have these gaze-tracking cameras built into laptops and other computers, so we can dispense with the mouse. But it does sell the game for $15,000.

Who's it for? Arcade owners who want the latest.

Signa Powertrekk

This New York company showed off an alternative to batteries: a fuel cell the size of a big sandwich, powered by small, light "pucks" of a silicon-based material that produces hydrogen when water is added. The fuel cell is expensive, at $200, but the pucks are cheap, at $12 for three. Each puck will produce the equivalent of six AA batteries of electricity. That means it can charge an iPhone twice, through the included cables.

SiGNa will be selling the cell through outdoor retailer REI this spring.

Who's it for? Campers, hermits and others who need to go a long time without electricity.

Wal-Mart Taps CBS Web Exec to Lead E-commerce

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) • Wal-Mart has named an executive from CBS Interactive as its new head of online operations. Neil Ashe, 44, will take the job as president and CEO of global e-commerce for Wal-Mart Stores Inc. He replaces Eduardo Castro-Wright, who announced in September that he plans to retire.

Ashe was previously president of CBS Interactive, based in San Francisco. Its sites include CNet and CBS.com.

Wal-Mart has made the expansion of online sales a priority. It has recently started to turn around stagnating sales at its stores.

Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, Ark., is the world's largest retailer. Internet Retailer magazine estimates it is the sixth-largest online seller.

New Stores Headed to Magic Valley Mall

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Shopaholics rejoice — the Magic Valley Mall's shopping options are expanding.

Four new women's clothing stores will open by early summer, filling up the few remaining empty spaces the mall has left.

"This is the first time we've had so many construction projects at once," said Shellen Gilliland, spokeswoman for the mall.

The mall is also preparing to open a renovated movie theater by June 1, operated by Cinema West.

The new clothing stores will include rue21, Crazy 8 and Chico's. Gilliland declined to share the name of the fourth, saying the mall must finalize a few remaining details before announcing it.

Chico's, a women's clothing and accessory store, will open next to Coldwater Creek in the strip mall outside the main building. Once the clothing store opens, the area will no longer have any empty business spaces.

"We've been courting Chico's for some time now," Gilliland said. "... We're really excited about it."

Once the remaining stores open, the mall will be 98 percent full. The only remaining vacant space will be a location within the food court and a former hair salon.

"It appears consumers are figuring they can enjoy shopping again," Gilliland said. "Sales are up and we're trying to meet the demand."

LL Bean Celebrates 100th with a Boot on Wheels

BY DAVID SHARP
Associated Press

FREEMPORT, Maine • Back in the days before retailers like Gap, J. Crew or American Eagle Outfitters, there were guys like L.L. Bean, Eddie Bauer, David Abercrombie and Ezra Fitch.

In Maine, L.L. Bean found success without consumer research, focus groups or fashionistas to tell him what to sell. He sold only products that he personally used and tested. He backed them with a money-back satisfaction guarantee. And his larger-than-life personality was projected in his catalogs, where he came across as someone customers could trust.

"The important part of L.L. was his personality. He was a hardy, enthusiastic, outgoing guy. He shouted most of his conversations because he was hard of hearing and assumed everyone else was, too. He was a genuine presence," said his grandson, Leon Gorman, chairman of the board.

The retailer that celebrates the outdoors with Leon Leonwood Bean's Yankee sense of value is kicking off its 100th birthday celebration this week with the unveiling of a giant version of its iconic hunting boot set on four wheels. It'll be rolling into New York City on Wednesday.

A century later, the family-owned retailer that started with Bean's hunting shoe in 1912 has grown into a business with $1.5 billion in projected sales in its 2011 fiscal year.

Along the way, the company has successfully expanded from a catalog retailer to an online retailer and a bricks-and-mortar retailer, and has managed to create a customer loyalty that's envied by others, said Kevin Lane Keller, a branding expert at the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth University.

"They had an iconic catalog that they had figured out. Now they're having to look at other ways to sell. That's part of modern retailing: You have multiple channels," he said.

The company has recovered lost ground during the recession, but consumer confidence remains a concern as retailers continue to discount merchandise to entice consumers.

Long term, the nation's sedentary lifestyle is as big a concern as competitors ranging from outdoors retailers like Cabela's to catalog merchandisers like Lands' End. "For us the challenge is people spending less time outside and engaged in traditional activities," said company spokeswoman Carolyn Beem.

While economic growth is slow, consumer behavior is changing rapidly, and it's a challenge to stay ahead.

Hay Prices Surge, but Idaho Potato Growers Worried

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • Last year's high hay prices has many in Idaho's agricultural community optimistic about 2012, while potato growers are wary about new infestations.

Idaho Hay and Forage Association Executive Director Rick Waitley told the Post Register that prices are at an all-time high, with the market averaging about $240 to $260 a ton.

"I don't remember any time we've seen hay sell at prices this high," he said.

Waitley credits the market to increased demand from Idaho cattlemen and dairymen, higher out-of-state demand and a good spring cutting in 2011. For prices to remain high in 2012, growers will need a good first cutting this spring, he said.

Potato prices dropped last year, down from record highs in the 2010. They stabilized slightly above average at year's end, with Burbank and Norkotah potatoes averaging between $14 and $18 per hundredweight for 70-pound cartons, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Growers expect similar prices this year.

"Prices could always be a little bit better, but they are better now than they have been," said Travis Blacker, president of the Idaho Growers Shippers Association. "Overall, prices are remaining pretty consistent. We haven't seen the extreme swings we've seen in the past."

Still, potato growers and state and federal agricultural officials are worried about new infestations of the potato cyst nematode. The microscopic wormlike pest attacks the root of potato plants. Officials said they aren't harmful to humans and don't affect the potatoes themselves, but they can reduce crop production by 80 percent.

Three new eastern Idaho infestations were discovered last year near Shelley. So far, the state has 12 quarantined fields covering about 11,000 acres. Most of them have been quarantined since 2006.

The Chamber of Commerce sign in Sidney, Mont. offers prayers as friends, law enforcement and volunteers search the area around Sidney for high school teacher Sherry Arnold, 43, who went missing on Jan. 7. Authorities say no solid evidence has emerged to indicate Arnold was kidnapped. But an FBI spokeswoman said the possibility of abduction was under investigation.

Landowners Help Search for Mont. Teacher’s Body

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLISTON, N.D. • Authorities renewed calls Monday for landowners near the northern North Dakota-Montana border to look for signs of a missing Montana teacher’s buried body, while documents revealed one of the two suspects in her disappearance has spent time in prison.

At a news conference Monday, authorities asked that “landowners and landowners only” help look for the body of 43-year-old Sherry Arnold, a math teacher from Sidney, Mont., who has been missing since Jan. 7 and is presumed dead.

“We don’t want the public out there running around in the countryside,” Williston Police Chief Jim Lokken said. “The landowners know their land and their property. If they see anything that has been disturbed, we want them to check it out.”

Authorities said little of the two men believed to be involved in Arnold’s disappearance: 47-year-old Lester Vann Waters Jr. and 22-year-old Michael Keith Spell, both of Parachute, Colo.

Waters was arrested in Williston, and Spell was arrested in Rapid, City, S.D., The Billings -Gazette reported.

The two are being held on aggravated kidnapping charges in the Williams County jail pending extradition to Montana, the newspaper reported.

Prison records in Florida show Waters has a criminal history in that state and has served prison time. Florida records show Waters has felony convictions for driving without a valid license and leaving the scene of an injury crash. He also served time for a weapons offense, and records show he has used numerous aliases.

Waters was released from a minimum-security corrections facility in August 2010, after serving about 18 months. He also was incarcerated between September 2002 and December 2003, and again between August 2007 and March 2008.

Court records show Spell was arrested in Colorado in May 2007 on state charges of drug possession, contributing to the delinquency of a minor and sexual contact without consent — but the charges were dropped five months later. The records do not say why the charges were dismissed.

Spell also faced charges of careless driving and driving without a license in 2007, but that case also was dropped.

Investigators offered few new details on the investigation Monday, a day after the FBI issued a statement suggesting Arnold’s body might be buried in a shelter belt, or line of trees that protects farmland from the region’s strong winds.

The agency put out a call to property owners in far northeastern Montana and in the North Dakota counties of Williams, McKenzie, Mountrail and in southern Divide County. It asked that they check vacant farmsteads for signs of disturbed soil or matted grass, especially in areas with lines of mature or rotted trees that serve as windbreaks.

Landowners who discover something unusual should not disturb the area, but call authorities, the FBI said.

Williams County Sheriff Scott Busching said the two suspects have made court appearances or are in the process. However, the closure of court offices for the weekend and the holiday Monday have confounded efforts to track legal documents filed in their cases. Busching said it’s up to prosecutors to determine whether charges will be filed at the state or federal level.

Elko County’s First Woman Judge Was Court Janitor

ELKO, Nev. (AP) • Nancy Porter used to clean the courtroom where she’ll soon mete out justice as the first female district judge in Elko County history.

Porter was sworn into office on Friday. She said she can’t wait to begin carrying out a long-standing family tradition in the county.

Her father, Dale Porter, served two terms as a city councilman and three terms as a county commissioner before his death early last year. Her mother, Janet Strickland, is a retired court administrator.

“I can’t imagine doing this job anywhere but here,” she told the Elko Daily Free Press after Gov. Brian Sandoval appointed her to fill the vacancy on the bench left by Judge Mike Memeo’s retirement on Nov. 1.

The new judge remembers visiting the Elko County courthouse for the first time at the age of 4 accompanied by her mother. Her father was testifying in a case at the time in front of Judge Taylor Wines in the same courtroom where Porter now will preside.

“From the time she was a little girl she was very focused on what she wanted to accomplish in life,” Strickland said. “She just has worked very hard.”

During college, Nancy Porter worked as the courthouse gardener during the summer months. When the janitor would take vacation, she would spend the days cleaning the courtroom.

When she found out she’d been appointed to the bench, she went directly to her mother’s house to share the news.

“I just looked at her and she said ‘I did it,’” Strickland said. “We just hugged. I felt so strongly that she would get it.”

“To marry and have children during all of this is not an easy feat for any woman who knows what it’s like to work and have children and raise them and have a career,” Strickland said of her daughter. “You have to remain dedicated and focused on what you’re doing.”

Porter said a strong support system helps, crediting husband Jeff Hanley for assuming responsibilities at home for the children.

Mont. Hunters Want More Wolves and Bears Killed

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) • Hunters in Butte want more wolves, black bears and mountain lions killed to increase deer, elk and moose numbers.

Hunters told Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks biologists last week that more predator control is needed so more game species are available for hunting.

The Montana Standard reports that the agency has been holding meetings to discuss the 2012-2013 hunting season proposals the Montana Fish Wildlife and Parks Commission adopted earlier this month.

Aunt Betty,” Thom said, pointing to a group photo.

Young came to the gathering eager “to make this connection that I’ve never had in my life.”

She said she was thankful to realize that they all had been raised in good homes and been able to successfully raise their own children, breaking the cycle set by their biological mother.

“We’re going to get to be sisters,” she said, “for the rest of our lives now.”

Billings Sisters Reconnect after 50 Years Apart

BY DONNA HEALY
The Billings Gazette

BILLINGS, Mont. • Mary Parr Young was raised as an only child.

But in 1978, she and two sisters she never knew walked the same hallways at Billings Senior High.

After more than 50 years of separation from her family, she connected with those sisters Friday evening at a Billings restaurant. Their story surpasses many a TV talk show adoption tale.

“This is just .... Wow,” Young said.

On Friday, Young saw a photograph of her birth mother, Ruby, for the first time.

In the photo, Ruby is a fine, dark-haired woman wearing a plain, v-neck dress with buttons down the front. She stares fiercely at the camera, her lips pursed, seemingly ill-at-ease against the studio backdrop.

Ruby was an alcoholic who frequently brought her infant daughter along when she drank. Wesley Parr was a bartender at the Yukon Bar in downtown Billings, a bar Ruby frequented after Young was born in November 1959.

One night, Parr told Ruby he was taking her 7-month old daughter home to save her from a life on the street. He and his wife, Ardys, raised Young as their own.

Until Young was 21 and about to be married, she never knew the Parrs weren't her biological parents. Young and Ardys were particularly close. When her adoptive mother broke the news, they both cried. Ardys asked if knowing the truth made Young hate her.

wanting me,” Young answered.

At the time, Young felt it would be a betrayal of her adoptive mother to search for her biological family.

Years later, she ran across her birth mother's maiden name, but Young avoided one opportunity to meet her. In 1994, Ruby died and Young spotted her obituary. The newspaper write-up listed three sons, who had a different last name, and three daughters. Two of the daughters lived in Billings. After listing the survivors, the obituary included a plea from Ruby asking “for forgiveness from her children and grandchildren for putting them through much hurt and pain.”

Young considered going to the funeral, but “chickened out.” She tucked the newspaper clipping away in her jewelry box, where it stayed for 18 years.

A little over a week ago, Young was looking for some jewelry, saw the obituary, and decided to search for her sisters on Facebook.

She plugged in the name Janet Thom.

“I looked at her picture and it was almost like looking in the mirror,” Young said. “Her smile, her facial features. When she smiles, she has a little bit of a squint to one eye, like I do.”

Young's first message asked only if Thom was Ruby's daughter. Young's second message revealed that they were sisters. The next day, Young called their younger sister, Sandra Gonzales.

“This is your older sister, I said. And we both started crying,” Young said.

Thom and Gonzales were raised by their aunt and uncle and knew from childhood that they were adopted. They saw their biological father at some family gatherings.

On Friday, the sisters met Young for the first time at a dinner they arranged at the Pizza Hut in the Heights. They shared hugs and tears by the restaurant's salad bar.

“Oh, I missed you,” Young said, weeping openly.

“It's like a dream,” uttered Thom, who was also crying.

Thom and Gonzales brought their large, extended families to the reunion, including five of Thom's seven grandchildren. A poster, held by one child, read, “You have always been in our heart. Now you're in our lives.”

Young brought a full box of Kleenex, along with a red rose for each of her sisters. Later, she held her birth certificate up to the light, to show them how the Parrs had altered it. They looked at pictures in her 1978 Billings Senior High yearbook showing Young as a senior, Thom as a junior, and Gonzales as a sophomore. All three women have spent nearly their entire lives in Billings.

“It's weird. We could have passed each other in the halls,” Gonzales said.

She and her sister had heard over the years that their biological mother might have had as many as 14 children with different fathers.

“We knew we had siblings, but we didn't know who they were,” Gonzales said.

Later, she and Thom pulled out family photo albums.

“This is Aunt Martha. Thelma's right there. That's

Q. Many adult children have returned from holiday visits to parents realizing that it is time to begin helping their aging parents manage their health, finances and future. Work closely with your parents to start collecting and organizing helpful information. Why and how?

A. Accurate and readily available information will help in many ways. You will better understand issues your parents face. Everyone will be more prepared to respond to routine or crisis situations. During the process you can bring up topics and issues that have you concerned. Your parents may recognize areas where they need help and may feel more comfortable talking about them. Develop a master binder or file box (divided into sections) to keep lists and important papers. Begin with a medical section. Include the names and contact information of doctors, dentists, pharmacists and other professionals; add health care proxies/living wills; a health history for both parents; current medications, including dosages, purpose, prescribing doctor, pharmacy; identify hospitals and home care agencies of choice; and list Medicare and Medicaid numbers. This is an important start! Other key sections of the master binder will be discussed next week.

OUR VIEW

Don't Overcorrect or Overexpect with New Education Ranking

The Idaho State Department of Education had a lot going in its favor when it created a new accountability plan while applying for a waiver from the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) of 2001. ESEA — better known to us all as the No Child Left Behind Act — was flawed at its inception and created benchmarks for adequate yearly progress (AYP) that are set to doom most schools to the status of “failure” within the next couple of years.

No Child Left Behind focused on a “one size fits all” solution geared to have every student in the country reach an identical level of proficiency. The five-star scale now being recommended by the Idaho State Department of Education focuses on progress; on having definitive metrics that measure improvement from one year to the next.

According to the education department's blog, “A Five-Star School is performing excellent in key areas — proficiency, academic growth, and post-secondary and career-ready metrics. A One-Star School, on the other hand, is struggling to meet the state's goals in these areas and will receive additional technical assistance from the state.” We would have preferred the state admit in this explanation that in order to be successful on one end, there has to be the very real possibility of failure at the other.

Our problem with NCLB has always been that it eventually relegates all schools to “failure” status. Our caution on a five-star system is that we don't overcorrect and strive too hard to classify all schools as successes. A one-star school, like a one-star restaurant or a one-star hotel, is not “struggling.” It is merely bad; a “failure,” for lack of a better word. That's the thing about a five-star system; it differentiates based upon outcomes.

And let's not forget that all we're talking about here is a new system for accountability, a new yardstick by which progress is measured. A small story in the Saturday Times-News reported that Idaho received a grade of C- in Education Week's annual “Quality Counts” national education survey. That ranks us 44th out of the 50 states and District of Columbia.

A new accountability system does not change that; it does not improve classroom performance, increase average ACT scores or high school graduation rates, nor ensure that a higher number of Idaho students attend college or attain a bachelor's degree. At best, it creates a better mechanism for facilitating those outcomes.

The Neanderthal Cure to Health Spending

It turns out that there is a way to control health spending: clobber the economy. When unemployment rises, people lose health insurance. They see doctors less often; they put off elective surgery; they cut back on drugs. Even people with insurance behave similarly, because their pay may be down, they worry about job security or they want to avoid out-of-pocket costs for deductibles or co-payments. Of course, almost no one advocates this as a deliberate policy. But it does seem to work. Call it the Neanderthal Cure to Health Costs.

Just last week, new government figures provided fresh evidence. In 2010, U.S. health spending rose a modest 3.9 percent, about equal to 2009's increase of 3.8 percent. These were the lowest annual increases in the half-century of government estimates. As a result, health spending has stabilized as a share of the economy (gross domestic product). It was 17.9 percent of GDP in both years. In 2010, this amounted to $2.6 trillion, roughly $8,400 for each of the 309 million Americans.

Analysts at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) attributed the spending slowdown directly to the weak economy. One reason was a steep decline in private health insurance coverage, which dropped 10.9 million people, or 5.5 percent from 2007 to 2010. Another was weak family income (“the lowest median inflation-adjusted household income since 1996”).

The government's new estimates trace the daunting contours of health spending. Consider:

- Led by Medicare and Medicaid, government health spending ($1.164 trillion in 2010) now represents 45 percent of the nation's health bill, up from 41 percent in 2007.
- Direct household spending on health care ($726 billion) accounts for 28 percent of the total, a historic low. (Household spending includes payroll taxes, insurance premiums, deductibles, co-payments and other out-of-pocket costs.)

- Hospitals ($814 billion) and doctors ($689 billion) represent the largest shares of health spending. Drug costs ($342 billion) are a distant third.

Naturally, there's skepticism that the spending slowdown will continue. Still, some downward pressures on spending might persist. In 2010, visits to doctors' offices dropped 4.2 percent, according to IMS, a market research firm. Perhaps patients will learn that some needs are better handled through a phone call or email.

Another source of lower costs is the expiration of drug patents and a shift to cheaper generic drugs. Finally, the Affordable Care Act (aka, Obamacare) forces some spending cuts. For example, it annually curbs Medicare's hospital reimbursement rates. However, some experts think Congress will relax Medicare's reimbursement rules if hospitals complain too much.

Against these downward pressures stand three powerful counter-forces: a reviving economy that eases people's anxieties about elective spending; an aging society that automatically raises the need for health care; and the start of Obamacare's insurance mandates in 2014 that expand coverage by 30 million people or more. Those with insurance routinely use more health care than do the uncovered.

Health care poses a dilemma. On the one hand, we all want — for our families and ourselves — the best care available without artificial limits imposed by government regulations or private insurers. On the other, we don't want soaring health spending to crowd out other government programs or depress take-home pay. The latest spending figures delude if they suggest we've overcome that dilemma. The Neanderthal Cure is an ugly stop-gap, nothing more.

Conservative Issues Advance

While most attention is focused on the presidential race and Republican hopes to oust President Obama from office, some significant steps were taken last week on issues dear to the hearts of conservatives.

In Texas, a federal appeals court upheld the state's sonogram law, which requires that women seeking abortions view a picture of their baby before having the procedure. The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a lower court ruling, which had issued an injunction, preventing the law from taking effect. The decision allows the state to begin enforcing the law, mandating doctors to give pregnant women “truthful, non-misleading and relevant” disclosures before they have an abortion.

Then there is the Supreme Court's unanimous decision in Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School v. EEOC. At issue was whether a church or religious organization could hire and fire ministers according to their theological beliefs and teachings. The Obama administration had argued that the plaintiff, Cheryl Perich, a teacher, was discriminated against when she tried to get her job back at the church's school in Redford, Mich., following a medical leave. When the school refused to dismiss Perich's temporary replacement and rehire her, she filed an employment discrimination claim, which violated Lutheran doctrine that says, “disputes over ministry should be resolved (internally) ... and not by civil courts.”

The Supreme Court did not rule on whether Perich was wrongfully terminated, but instead on whether she had the right to sue at all for employment discrimination. In ruling, the Court upheld what is known as a “ministerial exception,” which allows religious bodies to make their own personnel rules in order to promote their religious beliefs without government interference. The Obama administration had argued the church enjoys no special protection under anti-discrimination laws. In its unanimous ruling, the Court rejected that argument as “untenable.”

It will be interesting to see if the “ministerial exception” can be extended to the Obama health care law in the event it withstands constitutional challenge. As Matthew J. Franck wrote last week in the Catholic scholarly publication First Things, “The only ‘religious exception’ offered so far by the Department of Health and Human Services to its contraceptive coverage mandate is an exemption so narrow, for religious organizations that employ and serve only their own coreligionists, that even the ministry of Jesus would not qualify.”

S.C. Rally Marks MLK Day with Voting Rights Message

BY JEFFREY COLLINS
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. • Thousands commemorating the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday Monday outside South Carolina's capitol heard a message that wouldn't have been out of place during the halcyon days of the civil rights movement a half-century ago: the need to protect all citizens' right to vote.

A similar tone was struck at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, where King preached from 1960 until his death. There and in South Carolina, speakers condemned the voter identification laws they said are meant to suppress black voter turnout.

For most of 13 years in South Carolina, the attention at the NAACP's annual rally has been on the Confederate flag that still waves outside the Statehouse. But on Monday, the civil rights group shifted the focus to laws requiring voters to show photo identification before they can cast ballots, which the group and many other critics say is especially discriminatory toward African-Americans and the poor.

South Carolina's new law was rejected last month by the U.S. Justice Department, but Gov. Nikki Haley vowed to fight the federal government in court. At least a half-dozen other states passed similar voter ID laws in 2011.

"This has been quite a faith-testing year. We have seen the greatest attack on voting rights since segregation," said Benjamin Todd Jealous, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

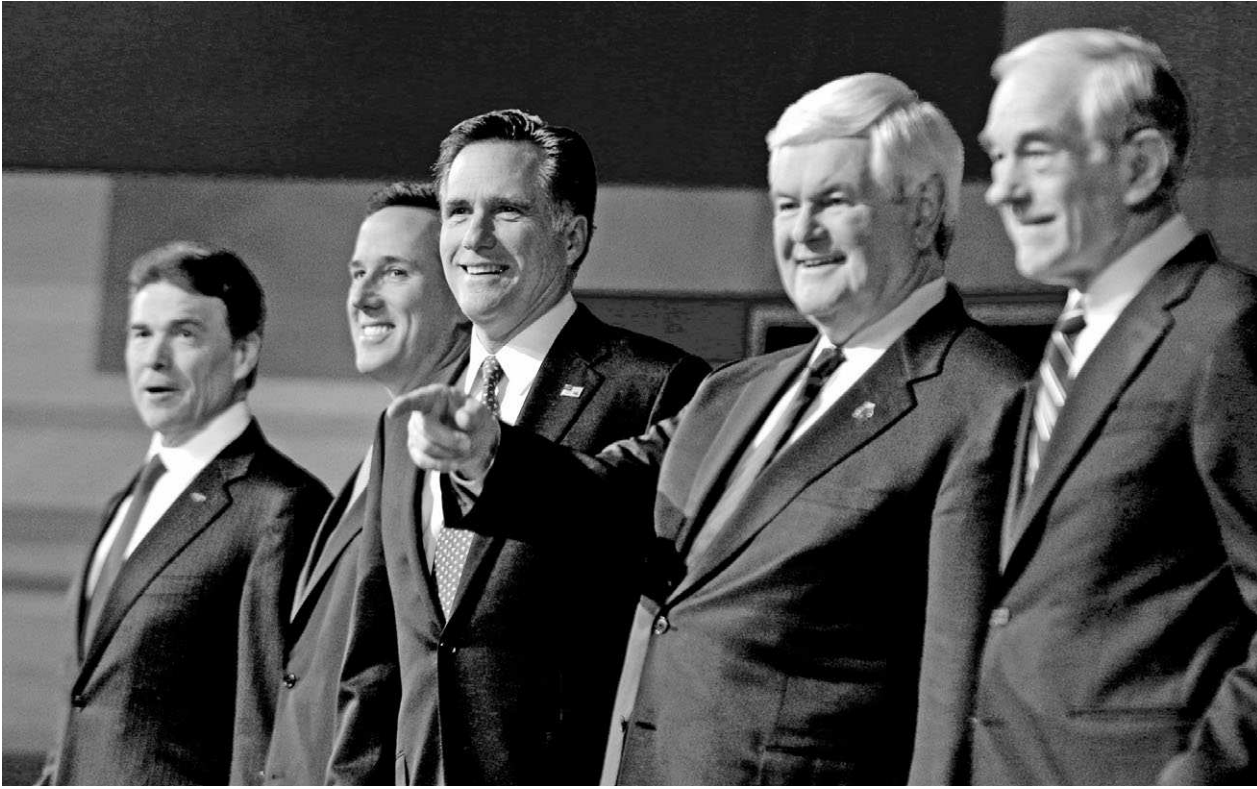

The shift in tactics was also noted by the keynote speaker, U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder. Last month, Holder said the Justice Department was committed to fighting any laws that keep people from the ballot box. He told the crowd he was keenly aware he couldn't have become the nation's first African-American attorney general without the blood shed by King and other civil rights pioneers.

"The right to vote is not only the cornerstone of our governance, it is the lifeblood of our democracy. And no force has proved more powerful, or more integral to the success of the great American experiment, than efforts to expand the franchise," Holder said. "Let me be very, very clear — the arc of American history has bent toward the inclusion, not the exclusion, of more of our fellow citizens in the electoral process. We must ensure that this continues."

U.S., Pakistan Collaborating Again on Drone Strikes • Two apparent U.S. drone attacks last week on militant targets in Pakistani tribal areas bordering Afghanistan very likely signal the resumption of joint counterintelligence operations by the CIA and Pakistan's military spy agency, security analysts here said Monday.

Paul Fights Washington Spending, Flies First Class • Republican presidential candidate Ron Paul has been spending large amounts on airfare as a congressman, flying first class on dozens of taxpayer-funded flights to his home state. The practice conflicts with the image that Paul portrays as the only presidential candidate serious about cutting federal spending. — The Associated Press

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. • Under heavy debate pressure from his rivals, Republican presidential front-runner Mitt Romney defended his record as a venture capitalist, insisted he bears no responsibility for attack ads aired by his allies and grudgingly said Monday night he might release his income tax returns this spring.

"I have nothing in them that suggests there's any problem and I'm happy to do so," he said. "I sort of feel like we're showing a lot of exposure at this point," he added in an apparent reference to the campaign to come against Democratic President Barack Obama.

Romney came under criticism from the opening moments of the debate, the first of two in the run-up to this weekend's first-in-the-South primary in South Carolina. The former Massachusetts governor won the first two events of the campaign, the Iowa caucuses and last week's New Hampshire primary, and leads in the pre-primary polls in South Carolina.

One of his rivals, Newt Gingrich, has virtually conceded that a victory for Romney in South Carolina would assure his nomination as Obama's Republican rival in the fall, and none of the other remaining contenders has challenged that conclusion.

That only elevated the stakes for Monday night's debate, feisty from the outset as Gingrich, Texas Gov. Rick Perry and former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum sought to knock Romney off stride while generally being careful to wrap their criticism in anti-Obama rhetoric.

"We need to satisfy the country that whoever we nominate has a record that can stand up to Barack Obama in a very effective way," said Gingrich.

The five men on stage also sought to outdo one another in calling for lower taxes.

Paul won that competition handily, saying he thought the top rate should be zero.

And in a state with a heavy military presence, the tone seemed more aggressive than in earlier debates.

Gingrich drew strong applause when he said: "Andrew Jackson had a pretty clear idea about America's enemies. Kill them."

The debate began hours after Romney reaped an endorsement from former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman, who suspended his own candidacy and urged the remaining contenders to stop attacking one another for fear it might benefit Obama in November.

The former House speaker and Perry led the assault against Romney's record at Bain Capital, a private equity firm that bought companies and sought to remake them into more competitive enterprises, with uneven results.

"There was a pattern in some companies ... of leaving them with enormous debt and then within a year or two or three having them go broke," Gingrich said. "I think that's something he ought to answer."

Images Could Be Lasting Problem for Cruise Business

BY DOUGLAS HANKS, HANNAH SIMPSON and JANE WOOLDRIDGE
McClatchy Newspapers

MIAMI • Veterans of the cruise-line industry can't remember an accident more dramatic than the one that captivated the world's attention this past weekend.

An Italian ocean liner capsized onto its side, half the ship submerged in the shallows of the Mediterranean Sea. The Costa Concordia had rolled so far over that a steam stack looked nearly eye-level in photos taken from the shores of a rugged Tuscan island where passengers fled after the grounding. Six passengers were confirmed dead, with 29 missing. Passengers jumped from the ship as it listed toward 80 degrees.

The images from the Concordia present a major challenge to South Florida's cruise-line industry, which attracts millions of tourists to the region and employs thousands of workers. Carnival, Miami-Dade's eighth largest private employer, owns Costa, making the financial fallout a direct concern for the world's largest cruise company and its 3,500 local employees.

But beyond the sinking of a major ship and the deaths of at least six passengers, the unfolding Concordia incident injects a new worry for those considering any vacation at sea.

"Obviously there's going to be that gut reaction, like after Sept. 11," said Simon Duval, a South Florida-based home agent with Expedia CruiseShipCenters. "I think there's going to be a short-term hit to the industry. ... I pray it's not long-term."

The Concordia accident delivered a particularly disturbing narrative. The crew hadn't held evacuation drills by the time the vessel with 3,200 passengers struck an underwater rock two hours into the voyage on Friday along Italy's western coast. Images showed the ship resting what looked like a stone's throw from the Isola del Giglio, a lighthouse framing many of the photos.

Passengers described chaos after the ship struck ground around 10 p.m. and began leaning toward the sea. One couple recalled a mother handing them an infant as the boat turned. With the ship listing so severely, some life rafts couldn't be lowered. By Saturday evening, reports had three passengers dead, 70 missing and the captain under arrest on suspicion of abandoning ship.

Huntsman Departs Race, Impact in S.C. Unclear

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT and KASIE HUNT
Associated Press

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. • Days before the South Carolina primary, Jon Huntsman dropped out of the presidential race Monday and endorsed Mitt Romney for the party's nomination, becoming the latest Republican to call the GOP front-runner the strongest candidate to beat the Democratic incumbent.

"I believe it is now time for our party to unite around the candidate best equipped to defeat Barack Obama," Huntsman said at a news conference, his family by his side. "Despite our differences and the space between us on some of the issues, I believe that candidate is Governor Mitt Romney."

The development added to the aura of inevitability Romney has worked to create in South Carolina and the race at large.

But Huntsman's departure and endorsement of Romney seemed unlikely to clarify the overriding question of the Republican campaign: Whether conservative voters could or would unify behind Rick Santorum, Newt Gingrich or Rick Perry to create a strong conservative challenger to the former Massachusetts governor.

It also prompted at least one Perry backer to urge the Texas governor to abandon his bid in hopes of preventing conservative voters from dividing their support among several candidates and handing Romney a win.

"There are a lot of conservatives who were happy to see him get in and now who would be happy to see him get out," state Sen. Larry Grooms, an early Perry supporter, said. "When conservatives have split in the past, we end up nominating a moderate, and that's not good for our party."

In South Carolina, the eventual impact of the Huntsman endorsement is unclear.

He barely had a campaign organization here and he was all but broke, with big donors fleeing long ago. Huntsman, considered the moderate in the race because of his support for civil unions and other positions that don't sit well with the right flank, was in the low single digits in polls.

New state $1 notes go in a hurry

Idahoans have just 48 hours to get them for face value

UMS – With only 48 hours to get your hands on these new Idaho state $1 notes for face value, you’d better do it today.

And don’t even bother calling your local bank or credit union because they don’t have them.

That’s because the never-circulated U.S. Gov’t issued notes are being released and overlaid with the Idaho state design exclusively by the World Reserve.

One thing is certain, residents who don’t call right away to order the protective estate wallets can’t get the new notes at face value.

That’s why a Toll Free Hotline has been set up and residents are being urged to call 1-866-964-2854 starting at precisely 8:30am this morning.

“Those lucky enough to get the new notes are saying it feels like hitting the lottery,” said Chris Mayle, Director of Operations.

“My advice is don’t wait to call. Pick up the phone right now and UMS – The Toll Free Hotlines are ringing off the hook.

That’s because the only Idaho state $1 notes in existence are actually being handed over with numbered certificates of authenticity for just face value to Idaho residents who find their zip code printed in today’s publication.

The only thing residents need to do is beat the 48-hour deadline by calling 1-866-964-2854 to instantly be awarded the collection of twelve new Idaho state overlaid $1 notes for face value just by covering standard shipping and the protective estate wallets for only $15 per wallet to protect each note’s valuable collector condition.

“I’m advising everyone in Idaho who finds their zip code on today’s distribution list to get to their phones right now because the new Idaho state $1 notes are only being released to the first 6,049 callers,” said Jefferson Marshall, Executive Director of the private World Reserve.

Remember, these are the only Idaho state overlaid $1 notes in existence featuring potatoes and the Boise cityscape and President George Washington on the front and once they’re gone, they’re gone. Even if you don’t consider yourself a collector, as an Idahoan this is the one collection you really need to get.

Just imagine how thrilled your children and grandchildren would be if you gave them one of these impressive collections for their birthday or any special occasion. Just be absolutely sure to keep the new notes and numbered certificates of authenticity together inside the protective estate wallets.

Here’s why the protective estate wallets are so important. The new Idaho state $1 notes being released today are the only ones in existence. They are in absolute pristine collector’s condition without a blemish, crease or fold. That’s why the World Reserve is only releasing these Idaho state notes in the protective estate wallets.

These stunning estate wallets are custom made to hold, secure and protect both the note and the numbered certificate of authenticity in a heavy-duty transparent viewing sleeve that allows the notes to be viewed without ever being touched by human hands, thus preserving their pristine collector’s condition.

The outer skin of the estate wallet is made of a thick, padded dark grain and graced by an official gold seal. To further enhance the security features of the estate wallets, they’ve been sized perfectly to fit into a personal safe or bank safety deposit box.

I can say two things for sure. At just $15 each the custom estate wallets are a real steal and if you’re lucky enough to be one of the first 6,049 callers who beat the 48-hour deadline, you’ll instantly be awarded the collection of twelve new Idaho state $1 notes in valuable collector condition for just face value. ■

Everyone who does is instantly being awarded the collection of twelve new Idaho state $1 notes for face value just by covering the protective estate wallets for only $15 each to protect the note’s valuable collector condition.

Practice was sharp on Monday, said head coach Randy Rogers, and there was no sulking from the players following a crushing 67-66 loss Saturday night.

"It was our closest game there in a couple years. Our kids believe. They didn't walk out of there, thinking, 'Oh we're never going to get this team.' I think they know they can beat that team and are excited to have another shot at them," Rogers said.

CSI and North Idaho play Feb. 4 in Twin Falls and Feb. 25 in Coeur d'Alene.

The Golden Eagles were swept by the eventual NJ-CAA champions last season, losing 83-76 and 63-55 at home, 76-49 in Coeur d'Alene and once more in Twin Falls, 84-72 in the Region 18 Tournament.

The last CSI win over North Idaho came Feb. 19, 2010, a 59-53 triumph in Twin Falls.

On Saturday, Rogers was impressed with how his team prepared for and executed the team's game plan.

"They played extremely well. I liked the scout that we had on them and had a good feel for what they like to do, and and our kids executed that plan nicely," Rogers said. "This year, I really have to coach and find ways to create wins. Find ways to stay in games. I'm happy. We could be 3-0, we could be 0-3. We've been in every league game we've played, which makes us feel like down the road we have a shot."

CSI (9-9, 1-2 Scenic West) beat Salt Lake 69-63 and lost 67-62 to Snow before this weekend's loss to North Idaho. The Golden Eagles travel to Colorado Northwestern and USU-College of Eastern Utah Friday and Saturday.

A LOOK AT THE SWAC Snow College and Salt Lake both swept its homestands over USU-College of Eastern Utah and Colorado Northwestern.

Salt Lake's Gabe Kindred hit a 3-pointer off the glass from just inside half court to lift the Bruins over USU-College of Eastern Utah 79-76. He finished with 24 points and Deshaun Wiggins led the Golden Eagles with 34.

Salt Lake beat Colorado Northwestern 94-70.

The Badgers easily took care of the Golden Eagles 94-81 and Colorado Northwestern 79-58.

Who's The 'Elite' Quarterback Now?

GREEN BAY, Wis. • It doesn't get much more "elite" than that.

On the road, facing the defending Super Bowl champs, and limited for three quarters by a running game that couldn't get out of its own way, Eli Manning vaulted himself back into the conversation about the best quarterbacks in the league by engineering a 37-20 win over the Green Bay Packers.

Mocked before the season began for putting himself in the same elite class as New England's Tom Brady, then skewered when New York stumbled through the middle of its schedule, the youngest member of the Manning quarterbacking clan played the position Sunday night as if it were his birthright instead of a burden. And what better place than Lambeau Field?

Three years ago, when the Giants came to town on another improbable playoff run, they paved the way with a bruising rushing attack and a fierce, opportunistic defense. Back then, Manning's pre-game instructions could have been summed up this way: "Just don't screw things up."

This time around, though, he took control from the opening drive, almost single-handedly managing the Giants' transition from a run-first offense to a multi-faceted passing attack — a necessity in the new, points-a-plenty version of the NFL. By the end, Manning had rolled up 330 yards on 21-of-33 passing for three touchdowns and a nifty 114.5 QB rating.

"The offensive line did a great job. We had time to get the ball off," Manning said.

He can be self-effacing to a fault. You could almost see him reviewing a roster of his teammates to make sure he didn't leave anyone out.

"We kept our tight ends in. We kept our backs in," he added. "They gave me time to sit back there and wait for guys to get open."

It wasn't nearly as simple as he made it sound, though. Seven of those catches and two TDs were claimed by receiver Hakeem Nicks — including his stunning, jump-ball grab of a rainbow in the end zone to close out the first half — but Manning spread the wealth around to seven different receivers.

"He understands the defense. He understands what we can see on every single down and every single coverage," receiver Victor Cruz said. "He's just making the

Mott, Hansen Win at Eclipse Awards

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. • Bill Mott won trainer honors at the Eclipse Awards on Monday night, capping a year in which he swept the top two races at the Breeders' Cup.

Mott earned his third career Eclipse over fellow Hall of Famer Bob Baffert and Todd Pletcher, who led the nation's trainers in purse earnings with $16.8 million.

Mott saddled Royal Delta to victory in the BC Ladies' Classic in November and the next day his Drosselmeyer pulled an upset in the BC Classic. Last year, the East Coast-based Mott won 15 graded stakes races, including six in November. Mott had purse earnings of more than $10.5 million.

"The competition was pretty deep and this is a real honor," Mott said in thanking his assistant trainers, his horses and his family.

Breeders' Cup Juvenile winner Hansen won the trophy for 2-year-old male at the 41st annual awards honoring the top horses and humans of 2011.

Hansen beat out Union Rags, winner of the Saratoga Special and Champagne and runner-up in the Juvenile.

Ken and Sarah Ramsey were chosen owner of the year. Their horses earned more than $4.8 million, fourth-best in the nation.

Adena Springs Farms, based in Kentucky and Canada and run by Frank Stronach, was chosen breeder of the year for the fourth time.

Ireland-bred Cape Blanco earned male turf honors. He flew to the U.S.

and won the Man o' War, Arlington Million and Turf Classic Invitational for trainer Aidan O'Brien. French-bred Stacelita took the female turf award.

In the sprinting categories, Amazombie won male honors and Musical Romance took the female trophy. Amazombie, who was never worse than third in nine starts last year, capped 2011 with a win in the BC Sprint. Musical Romance won the BC Filly & Mare Sprint.

Havre de Grace (HA'-vur-duh-grays), who took on the boys with mixed results last year, won older female. She won the Woodward against male horses, then challenged them again and finished fourth in the BC Classic for owner Rick Porter and trainer Larry Jones.

"She did everything Larry and I asked of her and then some," Porter said. "She's an owner's dream come true. She's made racing for me and many others so thrilling. She is the best."

California-based Acclamation received older male honors, winning five of his seven starts last year, including the Pacific Classic.

"Wow, after only 55 years in the business, I think that's pretty great," co-owner Bud Johnston said.

My Miss Aurelia, who won all four of her races, including the BC Juvenile Fillies, received 2-year-old filly honors. She is co-owned by Stonestreet Stables, the racing operation of Jess Jackson, who named the filly before he died of cancer last year. Black Jack Blues of Ireland was chosen top steeplechase horse.

SANTA CLARA, Calif. • Any cold-weather garments Vernon Davis owns are getting tossed aside as quickly as he changed San Francisco's playoff fortunes with a game-winning touchdown catch against the favored Saints.

"I was ready for whatever," Davis said Monday. "Now I don't need it. Throw it away. See ya."

Instead of gearing up — literally speaking — for a trip to frigid Green Bay, the 49ers (14-3) get to stay right at home in the much-warmer and friendlier Bay Area to host the New York Giants in the franchise's first NFC championship game since the 1997 season.

The NFC West champion Niners already beat New York 27-20 at Candlestick Park in November, and both teams have come far since Justin Smith battered down Eli Manning's last-ditch pass to seal it in the waning moments.

The Giants stunned the defending Super Bowl champion Packers on Sunday to give San Francisco the home field. The 49ers are one victory from their first Super Bowl since capturing the franchise's fifth championship after the 1994 season.

"It was a great feeling. We don't have to go nowhere. We can just go out back, go out back and throw the football around," Davis said. "The opponents, they come to us. And that's always good, having home-field advantage, and having the team come to you. We get another shot, another home game. Amazing feeling."

Alex Smith hit Davis for a 47-yard completion on a cross to the left sideline with 31 seconds left Saturday, then again for the game-winning score from 14 yards on which Davis ran over safety Roman Harper to cross the goal line on the way to a 36-32 win. The play was called "Vernon Post."

Tears streamed down Davis' face and he fell into the arms of first-year coach Jim Harbaugh after the victory in San Francisco's first playoff game in nine years.

In January 2003, the 49ers rallied to stun the Giants 39-38 in the NFC wild-card game at Candlestick.

Davis, who also had a 49-yard TD reception in the first quarter, finished with seven catches for 180 yards — the most yards receiving by a tight end in a playoff game.

His last-second TD immediately became "The Grab," a fitting nickname to follow a couple

Burnham Will Play Next at College of Idaho

BY DAVID BASHORE

dbashore@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The Jerome girls basketball program keeps churning out college-level talent.

Senior guard Haylee Burnham signed a letter of intent on Monday to join the College of Idaho next season, becoming the fourth Jerome player in the last three years to move on to the college level.

"I really liked the environment there, how it was a smaller school, and I just knew right away that it was the place for me," Burnham said Burnham, who added that she wasn't told whether she was recruited to play point or shooting guard. "Their style of play is one that I really like: they like to run, and coach (Reagan) Rossi said that they needed someone who could pull up and shoot (3-pointers)."

Burnham is averaging 13.6 points through 15 games, with Jerome sitting at 12-3 and tied for first in the Great Basin Conference.

After playing a supporting role for two seasons behind standout guards Aubree Callen (Seattle Pacific) and Carrie Thibault (Oregon Tech), both at the college level now, Burnham has stepped out and become the face of the 2011-12 team. She noted quickness and speed of her shot as two things she'll need to improve in order to make an impact at the next level.

"Haylee has improved a lot in the last year and a half. I think once she gets adjusted to that level she'll fit in fine," said Jerome coach Brent Clark. "She's a great athlete, participates in three sports (track and volleyball), but when she gets there and it is basketball season year-round, I think she'll get even better."

On the women's side, USU-College of Eastern Utah's Priscila Santos led the Golden Eagles to two road wins, scoring 32 points in the team's 58-44 win over Salt Lake and 30 in the 79-65 victory over Snow in Ephraim, Utah. The Golden Eagles remain undefeated in Scenic West play at 3-0 and sit atop the standings with North Idaho.

JACKSON NAMED BIG 12 ROOKIE OF THE WEEK

Former CSI guard Pierre Jackson has electrified audiences with his play as Baylor's sixth man this season and on Monday, the 5-9 guard was named Big 12's Rookie of the Week.

Jackson, a finalist for the Bob Cousy award as the nation's best point guard, averaged 14 points, four rebounds, 8.5 assists and 3.5 steals in 31 minutes off the bench for undefeated and No. 3 Baylor in its two road victories over Kansas State and Oklahoma State last week.

He recorded his first double-double at Baylor with 10 points and 11 assists at Kansas State, and followed that with 18 points and eight assists in Baylor's 41-point win over Oklahoma State.

The diminutive guard ranks second on the team in scoring (12.3 ppg), while leading the squad in 3-point percentage (49.2), assists (5.1) and steals (1.9).

right reads and really hitting people when the time is right."

With these Giants, that means most of the time.

Leading 20-10 early in the fourth quarter, New York was desperately trying to hold on to its momentum and faced a third-and-1 at the Packers 46-yard line — a situation that begged for a power back like Brandon Jacobs or Ahmad Bradshaw to plow a route somewhere between the tackles. At that moment, though, with 13 attempts between them, the duo had exactly 42 yards.

In a fitting postscript, just as his running backs rediscovered their legs late in the game, Manning switched from driving the offense to getting behind the car and pushing. As Jacobs headed toward the right sideline on what would turn out to be a 14-yard TD run, Manning threw a block to buy his runner a few yards of space.

"It might not have been the best technique, but it got the job done. I'm sure I'll get some heat from the guys when we watch it on film tomorrow. Doesn't matter," he said. "I'm still saying I'm proud of my block."

Maybe so. But before Manning gets carried away, he should remember that the fat paycheck the Giants send him every week is for being an elite quarterback, not a pylon.

IF JANUARY 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: March and April are a poor months in which to begin any enterprise. Life may seem tedious, as you seem to work hard with very little appreciation. If you must make changes, wait until late spring when your social life revives and problems fade into the background. You may receive the answer to a heartfelt prayer in late May or very early June. Lady Luck and good fortune should both smile on you, making this a great time to make important decisions and changes. Anything and anyone that comes to you then is probably beneficial.

HOROSCOPE
 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Flow right along with the status quo. Stepping up the pace just to relieve monotony can have unpleasant consequences. It is wise not to initiate important commitments or projects during the next few days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Play it where it lays. You can't improve upon end results by changing the playing field in the middle of the game. As a matter of fact, any changes you instigate could cause troublesome complications.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your current state of indecision and confusion may actually be a blessing in disguise. Delay decision-making or signing paperwork for the next several days until all the facts are in your hands.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your crystal ball must be in the shop for repairs. Don't make important changes, financial commitments or business decisions during the next several days unless you can safely predict the outcome.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cosmic conditions are temporarily confounding. This isn't the time to make your move or to take risks. Delay meetings for key discussions; avoid making new commitments and significant purchases.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't play pinball with your pennies. Although you could score points and even win the game, you could also lose everything due to a lack of judgment. Economy is wise if not taken to extremes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22.): Remain content with the status quo. Stirring up the pace just to relieve the monotony can have unexpected consequences. It is wise not to initiate any important business agreements or projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stay tuned to the right channel. You might yearn to check your email for a message from that special someone, but the boss might notice that you're fooling around on company time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Risky business is brisk. For the next few days, you would be wise to keep both your wallet and your mouth closed. You are much too gullible and very likely to be taken in by advertising.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be as cautious as a cat strolling past the doghouse. Don't give anyone any reason to criticize your actions. Suspicions may be aroused by circumstances outside your control you think you can control.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Acorns, they say, don't fall far from the tree, but it is usually walnuts used for a shell game that often fools even expert viewers. Experience might help you avoid slippery slopes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Grass always is greener on the other side of the fence. You might be attracted to someone completely unavailable and unattainable while a more-appropriate person is sitting right there right under your nose.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 23, the only child of a controlling, paranoid, hermit-like and hyper-religious mother and a peace-loving, passive father. I graduated from college last year. Shortly after, my boyfriend and I accepted dream jobs in the same town several hours away from my parents.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Mom was appalled. She "warned" me that I wouldn't last and would come home. Instead, I have embraced my new city and job. Mom is at her wits' end. When I mentioned that my boyfriend had recorded a movie for me, she said he was controlling me via technology. If I tell her about a project I initiated at work, she says my employer is taking advantage of me.

Mom pays for a landline in my apartment that I don't want, but she insists because she's convinced that cellphones cause cancer. She calls me constantly, and if I don't answer she leaves frantic messages about how "disrespectful" I am, and how she and Dad are "praying for my soul."

This has gotten out of control. I try talking to her, but she won't listen and laughs at the idea of counseling. She says it's her "job" to tell me what to do. My father agrees that her behavior and approach are wrong, but says she has good intentions and I need to "work with her."

Abby, I don't know what to do. She's becoming increasingly controlling and worried about my soul. I'm worried that my distance is affecting her health. Some advice, please!

— WANTS A HEALTHY RELATIONSHIP WITH MOM

DEAR WANTS: If you return home because you're afraid having moved away and asserting your independence is negatively affecting your mother's health, you will never have a life of your own. Because she laughs at the idea of counseling doesn't mean that YOU shouldn't get some in order to help you separate yourself from her constant efforts to manipulate you.

Her dependence on you is not normal. That's why you should enlist the help of a mental health professional. It will give you some insight in how to deal with her. If you try to "work with her" without that help, she will suck you in and you will never be free.

DEAR ABBY: I have very nice neighbors who believe in leaving the wild and natural growth on their property. They have posted a sign that claims it to be a "certified natural habitat." They never weed or cut anything back. At first, it was cared for, but now it has become an eyesore, and people who visit our house have made comments.

I have tried to grow border plants to hide the mess, but nothing seems to help. I believe it affects the value of our home. My husband doesn't want me to say anything for fear of hurting their feelings. They're nice people, but we don't live in a rural area where this might be more acceptable. Have you any suggestions?

— THORN IN OUR SIDE

DEAR THORN: Yes. Who certified your neighbors' yard as a "natural habitat"? The city? If so, call City Hall and find out if their yard still qualifies. What you have described may be a fire hazard, so some investigation may be in order. If there is a homeowners association in your neighborhood, it should also be contacted to ensure their house is in compliance with the codes, covenants and restrictions. If necessary, someone who is close to these neighbors should volunteer to "help" them with their yard. A natural landscape can be beautiful, but only if it's properly maintained.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The people are like water and the army is like fish."

— Mao Zedong

Today's deal from the old days was played by Dr. John Fisher of Dallas, one of my great friends within the community of Texas bridge players. He was the winner of the McKenney trophy for the most masterpoints earned in a year in 1973, and was a great doctor as well as a bridge player. He was one of Barry Crane's regular partners, and together they formed a fearsome pair.

After a strong jump response, Fisher played four spades, but he had reached that contract in an informative auction that got West off to the best attack. The incisive lead of the diamond king saw East encourage and West continue with his second diamond. East won his ace, cashed the queen, then played a fourth diamond. Fisher ruffed high and cashed the spade ace and king.

When the spade 10 fell, he decided to play East for the two remaining trumps. He took the heart ace and king; then the heart queen, which he ruffed in hand, the start of a grand coup.

The club queen to dummy's king left a three-card ending where South had the Q-7 of spades and the club ace, while East had the 8-6 of spades and the 13th diamond. When Fisher led a winning heart from dummy, what could East do? If he ruffed in, declarer would overruff and draw trump. He chose to discard, so Fisher pitched his club ace and led another heart to achieve the trump coup at trick 12.

ANSWER: Once partner shows a club suit, you can describe your big club fit and spade shortage by jumping to three spades. This is a splinter raise, putting your partner in position to decide on the appropriate level and strain in which to play. One caveat: Will your partner know that this is what the call means? Yes — with hearts and spades, you would just bid two spades now, wouldn't you?
