Glanbia's $15 Million Investment in Twin Falls

The Idaho cheese giant will announce today plans to build its corporate headquarters and research facility in Twin Falls, bringing 100 jobs downtown.

Logged On to Learning

While an online learning mandate for Idaho public schools is still a year away, a handful of classes are already being offered only through the Internet in Twin Falls schools.

TWIN FALLS • Idaho public schools' shift toward providing more online classes is a learning experience for students and school administrators alike.

For the first time, each Twin Falls middle and high school is providing one required class online this year.

At Vera C. O'Leary Middle School, eighth-grade students are taking one semester of science online through the Idaho Digital Learning Academy, while the other semester is taught in a traditional classroom setting.

Anna Scholes, a parent of two O'Leary students, said she supports technology in education, but is concerned about requiring the online format.

"In middle school, some students just aren't equipped with the skills for taking online classes," she said.

In addition to the off-site IDLA teacher of each online class, a coordinator is in the classroom with students.

Scholes, president of O'Leary's Parent Teacher Student Organization, presented her concerns to the school board this fall. She said her daughter is earning an "A" in the class this semester, but doesn't have the same enthusiasm for science.

TWIN FALLS • Big cheese is bringing big money to downtown Twin Falls.

Twin Falls-based Glanbia Foods will formally announce today its plans to build an up to $15 million corporate headquarters and innovation center in the area.

Plans include a three-story, 35,000-square-foot office complex and nearby 14,000-square-foot research center at the former Kruger's Nightlife property between Shoshone Street South and Hansen Street in downtown Twin Falls.

According to the project developer, Twin Falls-based Uptown Developers, the site will employ 100 workers initially, with plans to expand to 150. The facility would be occupied by March 2013.

Travelers, New Industry Among Defense Firm's Potential Benefits

TWIN FALLS • A counterterrorism training facility planned for Twin Falls has some people hopeful it'll help persuade larger weapon factories to move to Idaho.

On Wednesday, LMS Defense Inc., a defensive training firm that specializes in serving the U.S. military, law enforcement and private security professionals, announced it would move its corporate headquarters to Twin Falls.

The move is a step forward in bringing a private weapons industry to the state, said Jan Rogers, director of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization.

"We're hopeful it'll be attractive to companies looking to relocate or expand to this area," she said. "Most companies are looking for nearby sites to test their products in the field before they hit the market."

The announcement was made at the NSSF SHOT Show in Las Vegas. Announcing the move at the event was an added bonus to get the manufacturers' attention, she said.

T.F. Council to Hear Zip Line Permit Appeal

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A prominent Twin Falls attorney has appealed the decision by the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission to allow a commercial zip line business to operate in the Snake River Canyon.

The P&Z voted 7-1 on Dec. 28 to grant a permit for the zip line to Magic Valley Flight Simulation. The zip line would sit near Canyon Springs Golf Course.

John T. Lezamiz, who lives on Canyon Springs Road, appealed the decision on Jan. 11, according to documents provided by the city. Lezamiz gave three reasons for his appeal, including an alleged lack of notice to all affected property owners and an alleged conflict of interest by a member of the P&Z. Lezamiz also argued that the decision violated city code regarding special-use permits, specifically a requirement that the zip line “be served adequately by essential public facilities and services” including streets, police and fire protection, and other amenities. Debate at the P&Z meeting included whether Canyon Springs Road, the sole route into the canyon that would access the zip line, could handle additional traffic.

The appeal now goes before the Twin Falls City Council, which will hear it at its meeting Monday. The council’s options include upholding or rejecting the P&Z’s decision, placing additional conditions on the approved permit, or sending the matter back to the P&Z for reconsideration.

Shoshone Announces Newly Appointed Mayor, Councilwoman

TIMES-NEWS

SHOSHONE • Changes have come to Shoshone with the new year, as the city now has a new mayor and a new member of its City Council.

According to a city release, Councilman David J. Wendell has been appointed the city’s new mayor. He succeeds Mayor J.R. Churchman, who resigned from the position to retire halfway through his latest four-year term. Churchman had served in public office for more than 30 years, including on the council and on the city Planning and Zoning Commission.

Wendell, two years through his own term on the council, will be succeeded by Jann Thomsen, who had served one four-year term on the council but lost a race for re-election in 2009 to Wendell and Councilman Dan Pierson. The council ratified Thomsen’s appointment on Tuesday.

The council also appointed two people to the P&Z: Anne Eschliman is new to that commission, while Gerald Wallace was appointed to another term.

In the release, Wendell gave an open invitation for people to stop at City Hall and visit with him daily between 9 a.m. and noon. He also invited the public to participate in city meetings:

- City Council: 7 p.m. on the first and third Tuesdays of each month at City Hall.
- P&Z: 7 p.m. on the last Tuesday of each month at City Hall.
- Library Board: 7 p.m. on the last Tuesday of each month at the city library.

Castleford Council Accepts Mayor’s Resignation

The town is now seeking a mayor again after the latest to hold the post resigned, citing an issue with retirement benefits.

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

CASTLEFORD • Castleford is again operating without a mayor after its latest volunteer resigned over an issue with her public retirement benefits.

On Wednesday, the Castleford City Council accepted the resignation of Rita Ruffing, marking the end of Ruffing’s short-lived return to Castleford politics.

Ruffing served as Castleford’s mayor from 2002 until she resigned in November 2009.

The town’s mayor last year, Ryan Blick, decided not to seek re-election and resigned from the post late in the year. Trouble was, no one filed to run to replace him.

“Ruffing offered to volunteer and the council appointed her,” said City Clerk Susan Guinn.

That lasted until Wednesday, when council President Twila Crawford read Ruffing’s letter of resignation, which the city received last week. Ruffing did not attend the meeting.

It wasn’t that Ruffing didn’t want to be mayor. But serving as mayor again would have apparently interrupted her ability to collect her existing benefits from the Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho. Under Idaho Code, PERSI retirees elected to full-time public office are able to collect benefits, but only if elected to a different position.

Ruffing cited “misinformation from PERSI” regarding her retirement account as reason for her sudden departure.

“We were hopeful that Rita would be able to serve because she is so knowledgeable and has the residents and city’s best interests at heart,” Guinn later said.

For now, the city will continue to function with Crawford at the helm. But the council hopes to find someone willing to give their time as mayor. The mayor is paid $75 a month.

Don Acheson, an engineer with Riedesel Engineers in Twin Falls, said the city’s ongoing wastewater project will continue unimpeded.

Castleford is currently testing its wastewater lagoon system. That’s the first step in bringing the aging infrastructure into compliance with Idaho Department of Environmental Quality standards.

“I just don’t think it benefited our kids as much as it could have,” she said.

Soon, though, taking online classes will be more of a norm. Statewide, high school students starting with the class of 2016 will be required to take two online credits in order to graduate, assuming the Legislature approves that plan.

O’Leary Vice Principal Danielle Barzee said online learning has been implemented into the middle school’s curriculum in small increments. As for this year, changes have been made to address concerns with the eighth-grade science class.

“We have done a whole host of things to improve upon the efforts during first semester,” Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said, and changes may be made next year about which classes will be provided online.

Changes included providing better headphones with classroom computers, providing office hours with the online instructor, online study sessions, extended computer lab hours and hard copies of the class textbook.

O’Leary isn’t alone in its new online class requirement. At Robert Stuart Middle School, keyboarding is now taught online.

Freshmen at Canyon Ridge High School have to take an online social studies class, while seniors at Twin Falls High School are taking English online.

Decisions about which classes to move to an online format were made “on a very tight timeline,” Dobbs said.

Classes with retiring teachers or those who left at the end of the last school year were considered for the new online format.

This year, the district saw a 1.67 percent cut — about $400,000 — in “salary-based apportionment” money from the state, which is used to fund employee salaries. Dobbs said there are two fewer teachers at each of the middle and high schools this year — and thus, online classes were required in their place.

Dobbs said state legislators made budget decisions last year around the time when school class schedules were being put together.

“I think we had to act more hastily than we would have liked,” he said.

New State Program to Smooth Protection Order Violation Allegations

The Hope Card, unveiled Thursday by Idaho's attorney general, is expected to provide law enforcement with quick information about abuse victims and their tormenters.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Idaho victims of domestic violence and other abuse now have an easier way to identify their abusers for law enforcement.

During a Thursday press conference, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden unveiled the Hope Card program, a state service that will provide a laminated, wallet-size card that outlines the basics of a person's civil protection order against their abuser. The card will smooth communication between victims and law enforcement officers during allegations that an order has been violated, Wasden said.

Individuals with standing civil protection orders can obtain a card from the attorney general's website. On one side, the card will list who is covered by the protection order, along with the order's effective and expiration dates. The other side will provide a photo and description of who the order is against.

"Normally, when you and I walk around, we don't walk around with court-ordered documents stuffed in our pockets," Wasden said. "This will allow abuse victims to easily carry basic information with them at all times."

Civil protection orders are different than no-contact orders, Wasden specified. Civil protection orders are obtained in civil court, while no-contact orders are handed down by judges in criminal cases. The cards apply only to the former.

When law enforcement responds to an alleged violation of a civil protection order, the victim can show officers the card. Officers will then call dispatch to verify the information, Wasden said. The card will decrease confusion during the often chaotic situations, since victims won't have to search for the court paperwork.

The attorney general's office worked with the Idaho Sheriffs' Association to put the program in place. Law enforcement officers, who are already well-versed in protection orders, will receive information on the new cards, said Vaughn Killeen of the Idaho Sheriff's Association.

Estimated turnaround time for the cards, which are currently available, is within four weeks.

WATER DEAL ONE STEP CLOSER TO COMPLETE

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • The Idaho Water Resource Board is actively securing the financing for a $34 million buyout of three Thousand Springs fish farms by a group of Idaho water districts.

A bond sale to fund the deal is set to conclude Feb. 8, after which the water board will loan the proceeds to the districts making the purchase, Brian Patton, planning bureau chief for the Idaho Department of Water Resources, told state legislators Wednesday.

The Aberdeen-American Falls, Bingham, Magic Valley and North Snake groundwater districts plan to purchase the Blue Lakes Trout, Clear Lakes Trout and Rim View Trout fish farms and their associated water rights. That will give the water districts the resources to solve current and future water calls by senior water users.

The districts will repay the $34 million to the water board over the next 20 years, Patton said.

"It's been a monumental effort to get to this point," Patton said.

One last buyer may still join the deal. Members of the Southwest Irrigation District are set to vote on their participation on Feb. 7.

During Wednesday's presentation before the House Resources and Conservation Committee, interim IDWR Director Gary Spackman praised the efforts of the water board and all the players involved in securing the deal.

Panel: Medicaid Cuts Have Not Saved Money

Former state chief economist, Boise police sergeant say they only shift costs.

BY MIKE BUTTS
Idaho Press-Tribune

BOISE • Idaho's $35 million cuts in Medicaid have not saved the state money, have eliminated thousands of jobs, put pressure on law enforcement operations and hurt individual residents, according to a panel that met Wednesday to discuss impacts of the cuts.

The panel in Boise included the state's former chief economic analyst Mike Ferguson, Boise police Sgt. David Cavanaugh, advocates for the disabled and recipients of Medicaid.

Ferguson, now executive director of the Idaho Center for Fiscal Policy, estimates the cuts to Medicaid cost Idaho 4,000 jobs. He said the state's projected revenues allow for the reinstatement of much of the cuts, but lawmakers have no plans to do so.

Ferguson said 2,000 of the jobs are those directly related to Medicaid services, and another 2,000 are a ripple effect from money out of the economy when the 2,000 jobs were lost.

"We've cut public services worse than proved to be necessary," Ferguson said. "We're in a situation where we're in pain. The question is who bears the brunt of that pain."

Idaho has $147 million in revenue growth projected for fiscal year 2013 and a carry-over of $103 million from this fiscal year, Ferguson said. He said the state could spend part of that to reverse Medicaid and public education cuts.

Often recipients of Medicaid mental health care whose services have been cut end up in the hands of law enforcement, Cavanaugh said. And police are not trained to deal with them on more than a superficial basis. He said suicide calls have been up in Boise.

"It just rearranges where the money is spent," Cavanaugh said about Medicaid cuts. "If anyone thinks these folks are going to get better with less medication and less support, they're just deluding themselves."

Advocacy groups for Idahoans with disabilities sponsored the panel. They also presented the booklet "Medicaid Matters in Idaho: Real Stories, Real Impacts, Real Communities" that included two people from Caldwell, Kathy McNary and Retta Green.

Green, 71, is a retired truck driver who was diagnosed with colon cancer in June. She said she can barely eat without new dentures, which she can't get because of the cuts.

"Without Medicaid I would not be able to afford the medications I am taking. I would die," Green said in the "Medicaid Matters" publication.

Failing WRV Road Seal Project Investigated

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • The Idaho Transportation Department announced Thursday that it's investigating the reasons behind the recent failure of a micro-seal project of Idaho Highway 75 between Hailey and Ketchum.

The seal project failed to adhere to the asphalt surface, and ITD is working with the project contractor Knife River Corp. of Boise, subcontractor Valley Slurry Seal of Sacramento, Calif., and industry experts to determine the failure's probable cause.

According to ITD, micro-seal is similar to a traditional road-protecting seal coat, but is premixed and applied as a slurry. Such a seal has been applied between Hailey and Ketchum in the past.

Plans to apply the micro-seal, which was approved by ITD and passed a quality control test at the time of application, on the remainder of the project are in place for later this year.

"ITD wants to ensure the citizens of Idaho that we take our role as stewards of taxpayer money very seriously," project engineer Scot Stacey said in a written release. "ITD will take appropriate action based on the findings of our ongoing investigation."

Legislation Would Change Election Schedule

New bill would push state primaries back to August, though it's not connected to Wednesday's redistricting ruling.

BY CLARK CORBIN
Post Register

BOISE • Rep. Tom Loertscher introduced a bill Thursday that would move Idaho's primary elections back from May to August.

The Iona Republican included an emergency clause in the bill, which would make the change effective this year if the bill is passed into law. The change would apply to elections held in even numbered years — when legislative races are held.

It would not affect the scheduling of local city elections.

Loertscher said existing election laws lead to unnecessarily lengthy state campaign seasons that stretch from the March filing deadlines to the November general elections.

Moving the primaries back would also help prevent lawmakers from being distracted by campaigns while they serve in the Legislature — which doesn't typically adjourn until late March or April, he said.

"The biggest reason is it seems like (candidate) filings are getting earlier all the time around here," Loertscher said. "It's particularly difficult to have to file while we're in session."

Members of the House State Affairs Committee — of which Loertscher is the chairman — voted unanimously to introduce the bill and advance it for a hearing.

Bonneville County Elections Supervisor Bobbie Jockumsen said the schedule change could drain county resources.

"The biggest reason is it seems like (candidate) filings are getting earlier all the time around here. It's particularly difficult to have to file while we're in session."

Tom Loertscher, R-Iona

In Idaho, county officials are responsible for running elections.

"It would be very, very hard because we are already in August getting ready for the November election, especially when it is a presidential election," Jockumsen said.

Elections take time to plan, supervise and certify, Jockumsen said. By moving a primary election within three months of the general election, county officials could be hard-pressed to finalize the primaries, print new ballots and have them prepared in time for the general election, she said.

By coincidence, Lo-ertscher's proposal came the day after Wednesday's Idaho Supreme Court ruling, which threw out the redistricting maps approved last year. Justices ordered the citizen-led redistricting commission to draw new maps — a development that has left most every detail of this year's state elections drenched in uncertainty.

The redistricting process — which already failed once in 2011 — governs the size, shape and location of the state's legislative and congressional districts. It also affects where residents go to vote and which races they would be allowed to participate in.

Jockumsen said the court decision is leading to great frustration as officials scramble to prepare for school district elections March 13.

"We had just on January 17 had all of our (newly drawn) precincts changed and accepted by the commissioners," Jockumsen said.

Last year, Idaho lawmakers adopted other new elections laws that will lead to new "closed primaries" for Republican contests — another change voters will need to accommodate.

Rep. Erik Simpson, an Idaho Falls Republican, said Wednesday's Supreme Court redistricting ruling likely means Loertscher's election bill will spark a dramatic debate in the House.

"The timing of (Loertscher's) draft legislation is impeccable," Simpson said.

T.F. MAYOR NAMED TO STATE TRAFFIC COMMISSION

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls Mayor Greg Lanting has been appointed to serve a three-year term on the Idaho Traffic Safety Commission, the city announced Thursday.

The commission works with the state Office of Highway Safety to develop plans to improve highway safety at both the state and local levels. It also makes recommendations on funding for state and local traffic safety programs, and on future traffic crash prevention activities. It meets two or three times a year, with the next meeting set for May in Boise.

A city press release cited Lanting's work on a ban on texting while driving and his efforts to provide more awareness and protection for bicyclists among his local contributions to traffic safety.

"I'm honored to accept this nomination," Lanting said in the release. "I will be the first representative of Idaho cities on the commission and will provide a city perspective to the commission's work. I'm looking forward to the task."

Cervical Cancer Prevention

What You Need to Know NOW

Cancer is when cells in your body grow out of control. Cancer that grows on your cervix is called cervical cancer. Your cervix is located inside your body where your uterus (womb) narrows into your vagina (birth canal).

You can reduce your risk of cervical cancer:

- Get regular PAP tests from your doctor starting age 21.
- Get the HPV vaccine if you are under age 26: Human papilloma viruses (HPV) are the main cause of cervical cancer.

You may be more likely to get cervical cancer if:

- You smoke cigarettes.
- You have an HPV infection.
- You have an HIV infection.
- You have used birth control pills for more than five years.

Warning signs of cervical cancer may include:

- Abnormal vaginal bleeding.
- An unusual discharge from the vagina.
- Pain during sex.

These warning signs can also be associated with many other health conditions. If you have any of these symptoms, discuss them with your doctor.

Ask your health care provider if you need a PAP test or any other cancer screenings.

Taking care of yourself is the best way to prevent cancer or find it early.

For help finding a doctor, Call St. Luke's at (208) 381-9000. For information regarding financial assistance for pap tests, call (208) 452-8746.

Lawmaker Takes Issue with College Barriers Study

BOISE • A state lawmaker is taking issue with a new report that suggests Idaho could help more students go to college by boosting the ranks of high school counselors.

Republican Rep. Stephen Hartgen of Twin Falls countered Wednesday that some tough medicine may be in order.

Hartgen says students have a record amount of scholarship available to them and instead of hiring more counselors, the state should require kids to take a course entitled: "How to raise yourself up by your own bootstraps."

Hartgen's comments followed a presentation to the House Education Committee on a report that identified barriers to students continuing their education in Idaho, including a lack of academic readiness, ability to pay and affordability.

But the study also found students aren't taking full advantage of scholarship money available.

Idaho Family Mourns Death of 20-year-old Marine

BOISE • The family of an Idaho soldier killed during combat in Afghanistan says he and his "bubbly personality" will be greatly missed by those who knew him.

The U.S. Department of Defense confirmed 20-year-old Lance Cpl. Kenneth Cochran, of Wilder, died Sunday in Helmand province. He was killed during combat operations along with 22-year-old Cpl. Jon-Luke Bateman, of Tulsa, Okla.

Military officials didn't detail how the Marines died.

Cochran's family issued a statement Tuesday, saying he is survived by his father George Cochran, a former Marine, and his mother, U.S. Army Captain Julia Cochran. He also had two sisters and a brother.

Cochran graduated from Parma High School in 2010. He was assigned to the 9th Engineer Support Battalion, 3rd Marine Logistics Group, III Marine Expeditionary Force in Okinawa, Japan.

E. Idaho Man Charged with Shooting Cat with Arrow

POCATELLO • Authorities in Chubbuck say they have cited a man with a misdemeanor for allegedly shooting a domestic cat with an arrow used to hunt fish.

Police filed charges against 38-year-old Justin Guinn earlier this week for injuring a cat named "Romeo" with an arrow used when bow hunting for carp.

The cat's owner tells the Idaho State Journal that Romeo is recuperating and is expected to have staples removed Thursday.

Guinn was cited by police for misdemeanors for cruelty to animals and violating a city ordinance for use of a projectile weapon.

Guinn was cited Sunday and is expected to appear in court Jan. 31.

2 Bodies Found after Mobile Home Fire

BLANCHARD • Bonner County officials say two people are dead after a mobile home fire in northern Idaho.

A neighbor reported seeing flames coming from the house in Blanchard at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Homeowner Robert Sands told responding sheriff's deputies he believed his 52-year-old wife Mary and 23-year-old daughter Angela Sands may have been trapped inside.

After the fire was knocked down, detectives found two believed to be Mary and Angela Sands.

Robert Sands told authorities he believed the fire started when the door of the wood stove was left open.

Officials say there is no suspicion of wrongdoing.

Fugitive Shot by Officers in Nampa

NAMPA • A 30-year-old man wanted on drug and domestic violence charges is hospitalized in Boise after being shot by a Canyon County deputy.

Caldwell Police Chief Chris Allgood says a violent fugitives task force set up surveillance at a Nampa house where Michael Lance Davis was believed to be hiding. Davis and a woman walked out at about 8 p.m., Tuesday but he fled when officers tried to stop him.

Canyon County SWAT joined the foot pursuit behind a high school. Davis was confronted by the officers, who tried to subdue him with a stun gun.

Allgood says Davis displayed a weapon before he was shot, but he did not say what kind of weapon. Three officers were placed on routine administrative leave.

Allgood says Davis was hospitalized in serious condition Wednesday.

Lawmakers Advance Online Learning Rule with Caveat

BOISE • State lawmakers advanced a rule requiring high school students to take at least two credits online to graduate, but with the understanding that education officials will remove a stipulation on how the courses are delivered.

The Senate Education Committee voted Wednesday to approve the rule, which as written, requires one of the two online credits be taken in the form of an asynchronous course, where students move at their own pace and interact with their teacher as needed.

With a synchronous course, students and their instructors are online together at a scheduled time.

But groups like the Idaho School Boards Association urged lawmakers to leave the delivery of the online courses up to school districts. Public schools chief Tom Luna told lawmakers Wednesday he would be comfortable with that change.

OUR VIEW

New Approach to Mental Health Care Could Have Bumpy Transition

Assuring a firm network for mental health throughout the state, coordinated by local governments, nonprofits or other groups, will be no easy undertaking.

On Wednesday, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare drew a line in the sand.

The cash-strapped department, facing growing demand for its many services and the need to adapt to a federal Medicaid expansion in coming years, can respond to mental health cases that become crises. But local communities will have to provide the foundation for mental health care in the future, not the state, said Ross Edmunds, administrator of the Division of Behavioral Health.

Edmunds’ testimony solidifies a shift that’s already begun.

As Health and Welfare’s obligations have grown and budgets have shrunk, mental health was already in trouble — and in some cases, other organizations were already stepping in.

Twin Falls has seen several efforts in recent years to intercept both teens and adults before they get to crisis stage. In 2009, a behavioral health clinic operated as a joint effort by Family Health Services and St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center opened its doors. That’s the same year that Twin Falls County also opened its Treatment and Recovery Clinic, intended to streamline and improve the counseling services offered to low-income county residents and those going through the county’s specialty courts.

If this new approach to Health and Welfare’s services improves both ends of the spectrum, all the better. But this long-term plan may linger on before it can truly function.

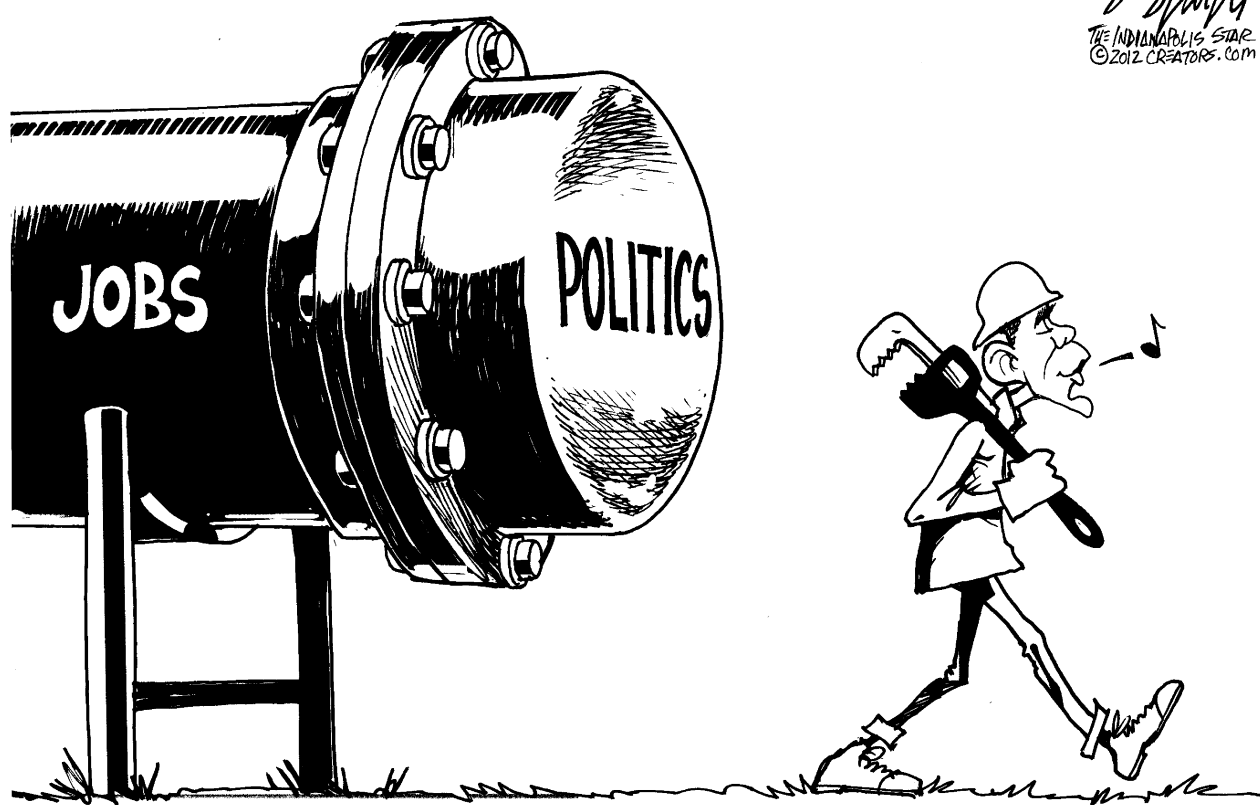

To his credit, Edmunds has made clear that he doesn’t intend the change as a cost shift from the state to the local level. And he’s said he wants to make sure communities are ready for the transition before he hands off frontline care.

But there’s no money proposed to help communities absorb the change. Assuring a firm network for mental health throughout the state, coordinated by local governments, nonprofits or other groups, will be no easy undertaking. The challenge will be especially harsh in remote, rural areas that may have the fewest services but see some of the greatest needs. And even without the change, local costs are already increasing, with counties paying $5 million to $6 million annually for involuntary mental health commitments.

Until Edmunds’ transition happens, how will the Division of Behavioral Health function? Are we stuck with years of spotty services, chasing to ensure our most troubled neighbors get the care they need?

Barring some sudden statewide collaboration on the subject, we fear that we will be in for a bumpy ride.

THEIR VIEW

The following editorial appeared Thursday in the Chicago Tribune:

Obama Rejection of Oil Pipeline is Misguided

It’s going to be a long, long year in Washington.

The Obama administration announced Wednesday that it will deny a permit to build the Keystone XL pipeline, an important link between a U.S. market that’s thirsty for energy and a rich source of petroleum in nice, stable, neighborly Canada.

But, the administration said, this doesn’t necessarily mean the president is against the Keystone pipeline.

What Obama doesn’t like is the Republican tactic to force him to decide now on the pipeline. So, no pipeline. For now.

Yeah, it’s going to be a long year until something, anything, gets settled in the November election for the White House and Congress. Until then, we’re going to see a lot of this kind of shadow boxing.

In December, Republicans insisted on imposing a deadline for Keystone as part of a deal with Democrats to approve a short extension of payroll tax cuts. Obama wasn’t ready to move on Keystone, and Republicans were trying to force his hand. They did, and given the acrimony in Washington, it’s no surprise that Obama refused to give Republicans a political victory.

The problem is, Keystone should be approved. This is a good project. It will give us energy and give us jobs. You want stimulus? This is a $7 billion deal to be done with private-sector funding.

Keystone is designed to stretch 1,711 miles down through the Plains from oil-sand deposits in the Canadian province of Alberta to U.S. refineries and terminals along the Gulf Coast. It would make the vast network of pipelines already crisscrossing the central states significantly more efficient.

Labor unions rightly supported the project. But it ran into opposition from environmentalists.

Blocking construction of the Keystone pipeline became the No. 1 objective of the green lobby, which raised concerns that construction and operation would pollute aquifers and destroy wildlife habitats. There just isn’t much evidence for those threats, though. Pipelines are the safest way to transport oil. The designers of this particular pipeline engineered it with lavish safeguards. No one need worry about crude gushing out of their shower heads. But you never would have known it from the signs at anti-Keystone protests, which touted slogans such as, “U can’t drink oil OR money!”

Gleeful Republicans thought they’d put Obama in a tough spot, choosing between labor and environmentalists. He chose the environmentalists, though we suspect the decisive factor, again, was that he just wasn’t going to let Republicans force his hand.

Long year. The administration says it will review the deal again after sufficient time for appropriate environmental reviews. That likely pushes a decision past the November election.

Of course, two things might happen before then.

Voters might find an alternative for president.

And Canada might find alternative markets for its oil.

An Opportunity for Progress

Halfway into the 112th Congress, we have work yet to do to get America on a more productive path. However, we have every opportunity to work together to make progress. As the Senate begins this month, I will continue to press for the following priorities.

Getting our nation’s fiscal house in order remains our most critical challenge. With our national debt exceeding $15 trillion, our country can no longer mortgage our future with out-of-control deficit spending. We must control unsustainable healthcare and entitlement spending, including tackling Medicare’s unfunded liabilities and repealing the health care law. As a member of the National Commission on Fiscal Reform and Responsibility, and as a member of the Gang of Six whose ongoing efforts strive to reduce the deficit by at least $3.7 trillion, I recognize that a multifaceted approach of discretionary and mandatory spending cuts with comprehensive tax reform promoting fiscal stability and economic growth must be advanced.

We would be hard pressed to create a more expensive to comply with, complex, unfair, burdensome, inefficient and anti-competitive tax code than our current code. Proposals, such as the Gang of Six proposal, have called for pro-growth tax reform that lowers all tax rates, simplifies the tax code and reforms our corporate tax code to make U.S. businesses more competitive. Tax reform, such as this, focused on growth, through lowering rates and compliance costs, will better enable job creation.

Mike Crapo
U.S. Senator

New jobs come from turning ideas into successful businesses. To encourage job growth and innovation, barriers impeding businesses from obtaining capital, rather than imposing new mandates, such as the flawed health care law and Dodd-Frank and Environmental Protection Agency overreach, must be removed. We can do more to expand economic activity by removing unnecessary restrictions on capital formation to promote investment in American job growth while protecting investors. Reducing over-regulation will also decrease spending and restore the constitutionally-established balance of power.

Enactment of the trade agreements with Colombia, Panama and South Korea are important steps for job creation, but expanding market opportunities for U.S. industries and ensuring trading partners adhere to trade commitments must be a continual focus to improve our nation’s global competitiveness. Maintaining technical manpower through access to high-quality education and addressing development and infrastructure needs is also crucial to compete successfully. Preserving Idaho’s priorities in the comprehensive transportation reauthorization will help maintain the transportation infrastructure necessary for shipping Idaho products and accessing markets.

Many challenges, especially environment and public lands issues, are best addressed through collaboration to achieve locally-driven solutions that are better than the status quo for all stakeholders. The Owyhee Initiative, started by the Owyhee County Commissioners, utilized a collaborative model to address challenges in Owyhee County. The result was a landmark legislative compromise, and work continues to implement all facets of the agreement. Work also continues to advance efforts of the Clearwater Basin Collaborative (CBC) Work Group, an advisory group I helped establish to find solutions to contentious land management and wildlife issues in Idaho’s Clearwater Basin. The CBC has spawned new discussions of job creation through timber harvesting and landscape improvements, which could benefit habitat for wildlife.

Additional critical issues include Secure Rural Schools and Farm Bill reauthorizations; border security and immigration reform; renewable energy promotion; Endangered Species Act improvements; wolves and other species concerns; fire management; water, timber and mining complexities; 2nd Amendment rights; domestic violence prevention; addressing veterans’ needs; housing finance reform; education improvements; and more. I will continue to advocate for Idahoans and their priorities on these and other issues that come before the Senate. We can make progress, and I look forward to the work ahead.

Company Repays Government for Costs of 2010 Blaze

BOISE (AP) • Federal prosecutors say they have collected $270,000 as part of a legal settlement with an Idaho company over costs of battling a wildfire in 2010.

U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson says the sum paid by Sunroc Construction Co. helps defray the costs of suppressing a fire that started in August and burned more than 13,000 acres on the Idaho National Laboratory.

Investigators say the blaze ignited when an overheated joint detached from one of the Idaho Falls company's dump trucks and rolled off U.S. Highway 26 and into nearby grasses.

More than $200,000 of the settlement sum will be directed to future fire suppression efforts.

Idaho Man Gets Life in Prison for Molesting Child

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • A 43-year-old Idaho Falls man has been sentenced to life in prison without parole for molesting a 5-year-old boy.

A jury found Jonathon Folk guilty of lewd conduct with a minor under the age of 16 after a retrial earlier this month. The Post Register reports 7th District Judge Darren Simpson handed down the life sentence on Wednesday.

Folk's first conviction on the charge was thrown out by the Idaho Supreme Court last summer after the high court found that Folk's right to represent himself was violated when he was only allowed to cross-examine the victim using written questions.

S.W. Idaho Man to Be Arraigned in Infant Son's Death

BOISE (AP) • A southwestern Idaho teen charged in the slaying of his infant son is expected to be arraigned Friday in 4th District Court.

The Idaho Statesman reports a grand jury from Ada County indicted 19-year-old Reynaldo "Lucas" Sanchez of Boise last week on a charge of first-degree murder. If convicted, Sanchez faces up to life in prison.

Report Says INL Radiation Exposure Was Preventable

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An accident at the Idaho National Laboratory that exposed 16 employees to plutonium radiation could have been prevented, according to a new report from the U.S. Department of Energy.

Inadequate safety measures and ineffective training contributed to the November contamination and lab officials missed several opportunities to make changes, states a report released Wednesday by the Energy Department's Office of Health, Safety and Security.

The accident happened in a building that once housed a nuclear reactor. Workers had been taking plutonium fuel out of storage when they came upon two containers marked with labels stating they held radioactive materials and were in abnormal condition. After talking to supervisors, they removed the wrapping and a radioactive black powder spilled out.

The workers had on lab coats and a few had gloves, but none had respiratory gear or other protective clothing, according to the 123-page report.

It's too early to tell how much radiation the workers were exposed to, said Sharon Dossett, the lab's director of environment, safety and health. She said she expects to find that the doses were so low that they won't cause health problems.

However, at least one worker is believed to have inhaled the plutonium contamination. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says on its website that internal exposure to plutonium poses an "extremely serious health hazard" because it stays in the body for decades and increases the risk of cancer.

Officials suspect the container had been damaged years ago, and that long-term exposure to oxygen and moisture caused some of the plutonium to deteriorate into powder.

The investigation found that a series of problems led to the accident and that lab managers were aware of some of the dangers.

At least seven years ago information was lost that would have detailed the condition of the fuel plates containing plutonium-239, according to the report.

Also, lab officials — including Phil Breidenbach, the director of nuclear operations — received recommendations for safe handling of the fuel plates in January of 2009 and June 2011. But the guidelines were not followed on either occasion, investigators found.

Deputy laboratory director Riley Chase told the Post Register the lab is looking into Breidenbach's apparent failure to act on the recommendations.

The report also provides details of the accident that raise safety questions.

On Nov. 8, the report states, workers removed four small boxes containing plutonium fuel plates from a vault. Two were labeled with warnings about radioactive contents and abnormalities in their conditions.

About 10 minutes later, a shift supervisor called a manager to discuss the labels, according to the report, and the two worked out a plan to open them. Shortly after, the workers — none wearing protective clothing except for a few with gloves — placed the containers on a "confinement hood" and a worker started to open one of them.

One worker, not named in the report, told Energy Department investigators claims to have asked supervisors what to do in the event of a fire or if a powder was found. The worker said the supervisor responded that it was "not a valid question."

The supervisor does not remember such a conversation, investigators said.

Minutes later, according to the report, black powder spilled out of one of the containers as a worker cut through the plastic covering. The workers conducted tests to see what they had found, remaining in the room for more than four minutes until a radiation alarm sounded.

Chase, the deputy lab director, said management underestimated the hazard posed by the plutonium fuel plates, which were at least 30 years old, and that if they had predicted the accident they would have used a "glove box," which provides much more protection than a standard confinement hood.

The investigators recommended that the company that holds the lab management contract, Battelle Energy Alliance, should reinforce proper work procedures and improve self-assessments at the complex.

The Energy Department also said in the report that local DOE officials knew about the safety problems at the site, accepted that risk and didn't put interim controls in place to help prevent any accidents.

IDAHO'S STATE HOSPITALS SEE INCREASE IN ADMISSIONS

BOISE (AP) • A state health official says two Idaho hospitals that care for severely mentally ill patients have seen big increases in admissions over the past five years. The Lewiston Tribune reports that State Hospital North in Orofino has seen a 50 percent increase in admissions, yet its state funding has dropped 11 percent. In eastern Idaho, State Hospital South has had a 90 percent increase in admissions and a 22 percent funding decrease. Division of Behavioral Health Administrator Ross Edmunds told members of the Legislature's joint budget committee on Wednesday that admission increases are partly because of greater demand for services and partly because of improved cooperation with community support groups. Edmunds said the hospitals are keeping patients for shorter periods of time before turning them over to community organizations.

Fish, Wildlife and Parks Agency Considers Using Hunters to Kill Stray Bison

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Montana officials gave their initial approval Thursday to a plan that would let hunters kill bison that stray beyond designated areas north of Yellowstone National Park and from the Fort Peck and Fort Belknap Indian reservations.

The plan is to remove bison that wander outside of defined "tolerance areas" beyond the park and where wild Yellowstone bison have been slated for transfer, such as the two northeastern Montana reservations.

The proposal by Montana's Fish, Wildlife and Parks agency comes as state officialists seek to ease the stiff resistance to bison being allowed to roam in more parts of the state. FWP Director Joe Maurier said the tolerance areas recently have been enlarged by 75,000 acres into the Hebgen basin north of Yellowstone.

"We've been working hard to find more tolerance for bison in Montana," Maurier said. "Essentially what we've done is move the line, and we are trying to figure out how we manage bison past that line."

Neighboring farmers and ranchers fear the bison will spread disease and destroy their property.

A lawsuit filed last week in state court by property rights groups and landowners aims to block the relocation of 68 Yellowstone bison to Fort Peck and Fort Belknap, which the FWP approved in December. Two other lawsuits are pending over bison in the Hebgen basin, where the animals are being allowed to wander as they seek food at lower elevations in the winter.

The commission voted 4-1 to tentatively approve the hunting measure, which now goes out for public comment before a final vote in February.

Commissioner Ron Moody, who voted against the plan, said he believes state regulators are improperly using hunters to kill wildlife that cross a containment line. At that point, an animal ceases to be game and becomes vermin, and that does not fit the concept of a fair hunt, he said.

"A moral onus falls on the people who are slaughtering bison who stray over a line. I want that moral onus to fall where it belongs and not where it shouldn't belong, which is on this thing that we call fair-chase hunting," Moody said.

Stephany Seay, representing the advocacy group Buffalo Field Campaign, said the agency should consider the bison's wildlife status in Montana instead of proposing to kill more of the animals.

"You can't just keep killing wildlife and confining wildlife because their presence is a minor inconvenience to a few. I think we need to learn how to coexist in a more meaningful way and a more sustainable way," she said.

Maurier said the agency is open to discussion and any ideas that people may have on managing the bison that wander beyond those designated areas.

WINTER STORM BLASTS ROCKIES

BY PAUL FOY
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A winter storm sweeping over the Northern Rockies is bringing the season's first significant snowfall to Utah and hammering parts of Wyoming and Montana.

Northern Utah ski areas reported getting as much as 15 inches by early Thursday. The National Weather Service said the storm will continue into Friday, then pause briefly before another blast over the weekend.

Officials reported 100-mph wind gusts in the Wyoming Range. In Montana, a foot of snow fell on Helena, Missoula and in the Billings area. The storm triggered avalanche warnings near Yellowstone National Park and sent temperatures plummeting below zero in places.

High winds and drifting snow closed Wyoming Highway 22 Thursday morning between Jackson and the Idaho state line. Snow was piling up in the region and could total 4 feet by Friday.

Avalanche warnings were issued throughout the Northern Rockies.

The Utah Avalanche Center advised skiers to stay out of the backcountry for at least several days. Officials said the wet, heavy snow piling up in the Wasatch mountains was almost certain to slide on steeper slopes, with or without a kick from skiers.

Another wintry blast is expected to sweep through the Northern Rockies Saturday into Sunday.

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich reacts to a question at the start of the Republican presidential candidate debate Thursday at the North Charleston Coliseum in Charleston, S.C., denying that he ever asked his ex-wife for an open marriage and angrily denouncing CNN's John King, moderator of the debate, for raising the issue.

U.S. MILITARY CHIEF VISITS ISRAEL TO DISCUSS IRAN NUKES

BY JOSEF FEDERMAN and DAN PERRY
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • The top U.S. general, visiting Israel at a delicate and dangerous moment in the global standoff with Tehran, is expected to press for restraint amid fears that the Jewish state is nearing a decision to attack Iran's nuclear program.

Thursday's arrival of Army Gen. Martin Dempsey, just four months after he took office as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, underscores Washington's concern about a possible Israeli military strike.

It also spotlights key questions at the center of the global maneuvering to prevent an Iranian bomb:

• How effective are the current economic sanctions in pressuring Iran's leadership? Israel wants a far tougher regime, while the Americans seem confident the current path will suffice.

• Could aerial bombardment or missile strikes, the expected Israeli military toolkit, damage nuclear installations deep underground enough to be worth a counterstrike from Iran? Some think Israel is mainly saber-rattling to scare governments into tougher sanctions.

• Might covert activity suffice? Iranian scientists and military officials have been killed, computer viruses unleashed, a missile

Gingrich Scolds Media for Spotlighting Ex-wife's Claim

Former House Speaker rails at news media for "destructive, negative" reporting — drawing loud cheers and applause from the audience at Republican debate in South Carolina.

BY STEVEN THOMMA and DAVID LIGHTMAN
McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. • Newt Gingrich lashed out angrily at the news media Thursday night for fresh reporting on his failed second marriage, in an extraordinary opening to a high-stakes debate two days before a pivotal GOP presidential primary in South Carolina.

"Trash," the former Speaker of the House of Representatives called it, as he was asked to respond to media reports at the very moment when he's gaining support and has pulled into a neck-and-neck contest in the state with Mitt Romney, the former governor of Massachusetts.

"I am appalled that you would begin a presidential debate on a topic like that," Gingrich said, his face flush with anger, when asked about an ABC interview with his ex-wife in the opening question of a two-hour debate on CNN.

In the ABC report, Gingrich's second wife, Marianne Gingrich, broke a long silence to say that he had asked her to grant him an "open marriage" so he could maintain an extramarital relationship with a House aide, Callista Bisek, who later became his third wife. He divorced Marianne in 2000 and married Callista shortly after.

Gingrich railed at ABC News for airing it, at CNN for asking about it, and at the news media generally for "destructive, negative" reporting — all drawing loud cheers and applause from the Republican audience of about 2,500.

"To take an ex-wife and make it two days before the primary a significant question is as close to despicable as anything I can imagine," he said, voice rising.

When CNN moderator John King insisted he was only asking about a report aired by another network that was dominating the day's news, Gingrich turned on him as well. "It was repeated by your network, don't try to blame someone else," he said. "You chose to start the debate with it."

"The destructive, vicious negative nature of much of the news media makes it harder to govern this country," he said. "I am tired of the elite media protecting Barack Obama by attacking Republicans."

Asked to comment, former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum said it was a legitimate issue of character for voters to weigh.

"I am a Christian, too, and I thank God for forgiveness," Santorum said. "But these are issues of our lives ... issues of character for people to consider ... those are things for everyone in this audience to consider."

Romney brushed it aside. "Let's get on to the real issues, that's all I've got to say," he said. Moments earlier, he'd introduced himself by noting his marriage of 42 years and his extensive family. Rep. Ron Paul of Texas appeared to empathize with Gingrich, saying, "Too often all of us are on the receiving end of attacks by the media." He added, however, "I'm thankful my wife of 54 years is here with me tonight."

Moments later, Santorum lashed out at Gingrich for suggesting that Santorum should drop out of the race.

"Grandiosity has never been a problem with Newt Gingrich," Santorum said, noting that he bested Gingrich in both Iowa's caucuses and New Hampshire's primary. "I don't want a nominee that I have to worry about going out and looking at the paper the next day and...worrying about what he is going to say next."

Santorum blasted Gingrich and Romney on health care, saying that for years, "these two guys were playing footsie with the left." As governor, Romney signed legislation requiring nearly everyone in Massachusetts to obtain health care coverage.

Santorum called it "a government-run system that was the basis of Obamacare and it has been an abject failure." Romney has maintained the plan was right for his state, and each state should choose what works best.

Gingrich, Santorum charged, also supported a version of government-mandated health care for years.

"The core of Obamacare is an individual mandate," he said. "You can't run rings around the fact, Newt, you supported the primary, core basis of what President Obama's put in place."

"Of course you can," Gingrich replied. "I was wrong and I figured it out."

World Not Quite as Hot in 2011; Ranks 11th Warmest

La Nina helped cool off the central Pacific Ocean, which made 2011 milder than recent years in terms of temperature.

BY SETH BORENSTEIN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The world last year wasn't quite as warm as it has been for most of the past decade, government scientists said Thursday, but it continues a general trend of rising temperatures.

The average global temperature was 57.9 degrees Fahrenheit, making 2011 the 11th hottest on record, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said. That's 0.9 degrees warmer than the 20th century average, officials said. In fact, it was hotter than every year last century except 1998.

One reason 2011 was milder than recent years was the La Nina cooling of the central Pacific Ocean. La Ninas occur every few years and generally cause global temperatures to drop, but this was the warmest La Nina year on record.

And 2011 also was the warmest year on record for Spain and Norway, and the second warmest for the United Kingdom. In the United States, the average temperature of 53.8 was just 1 degree above normal, making last year only the 23rd warmest on record. But 17 cities — including Houston, Miami, Trenton and Austin — had their warmest years.

A woman walks down a fog-covered trail in October 2011 at Montie Beach Park in Houston. The world last year wasn't quite as warm as it has been for most of the past decade, government scientists said Thursday, but it continues the general trend of rising temperatures. In the United States, it was only 1 degree above normal, which made it the 23rd warmest on record. But 17 cities — including Houston, Miami, Atlantic City, Trenton and Austin — had their warmest years.

This marks the 35th straight year that global temperatures were warmer than normal. NOAA's records for world average temperatures date back to 1880.

"It would be premature to make any conclusion that we would see any hiatus of the longer-term warming trend," said Tom Karl, director of NOAA's National Climatic Data Center. "Global temperatures are continuing to increase." NASA, which calculates global temperatures in a slightly different way, announced essentially the same temperature for the year. But NASA's record-keeping calls it the ninth warmest ever.

Both NASA climate scientist James Hansen and University of Victoria's Andrew Weaver said they expect that in the next few years the world will set yet a new record high temperature. 2010 tied for the hottest on record.

NOAA also released new figures for extreme weather. The agency recalculated the number of billion-dollar weather disasters in the U.S., bumping the total from 12 to 14. Officials added Tropical Storm Lee, which dumped rain from Maryland to New England in September, and a July hail and wind storm in Colorado to the list.

Sex Poses Surprisingly Low Risk to Heart Patients

BY LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press

CHICAGO • Good news: Sex is safe for most heart patients. If you're healthy enough to walk up two flights of stairs without chest pain or gasping for breath, you can have a love life.

That advice from a leading doctors' group on Thursday addresses one of the most pressing, least discussed issues facing survivors of heart attacks and other heart patients.

In its first science-based recommendations on the subject, the American Heart Association says having sex only slightly raises the chance for a heart attack. And that's true for people with and without heart disease.

Surprisingly, despite the higher risk for a heart patient to have a second attack, there's no evidence that they have more sex-related heart attacks than people without cardiac disease.

Many heart patients don't think twice about climbing stairs, yet many worry that sexual activity will cause another heart attack, or even sudden death, said Dr. Glenn Levine, lead author of a report detailing the recommendations and a professor of medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

base blown up. Fingerprinting and denials abound; evidence about who's behind it all does not.

• Could Israel really surprise Washington, its main ally and protector, with a military move that could affect America itself, in an election year to boot? Israeli officials have not pledged to give advance warning.

In the background, rarely openly discussed, is the somewhat prickly relationship between the Obama administration and the rightist government in Israel. The antipathy, born largely of disagreements on the Palestinian front, may not be helping navigate a situation as delicate as Iran.

But the main thing for Israel is the acute sense that a Rubicon is about to be crossed — that a nuclear-armed Iran, whose President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad calls for Israel's destruction, is a direct existential threat.

Most of the West does agree with Israel that Iran, despite denials, is developing nuclear weapons technology. But the United States is clearly concerned that a military attack could backfire, fragmenting international opposition to Iran and sending oil prices skyrocketing.

Beginning Friday, Dempsey is set to meet with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and much of Israel's political and military leadership. Israeli officials involved in the preparations for the meetings said they expected Dempsey to urge restraint as the U.S. tries to rally additional global pressure on Iran. They spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the visit.

In a joint statement, the U.S. and Israel said the visit would focus on "cooperation between the two militaries, as well as mutual security challenges."

Israeli Cabinet Minister Dan Meridor, whose responsibilities include monitoring the Iranian nuclear program, said there was broad agreement with the Americans and the West on the need to stop the Iranians. "If the sanctions work, then all the other options will remain strictly theoretical," he said.

An air raid on Iran would require flying over potentially hostile Arab airspace and could well trigger a response from Iran, which possesses an arsenal of missiles capable of striking Israel. The Iranians could also encourage their proxies, Hezbollah in Lebanon and Hamas in the Gaza Strip, to heat up Israel's northern and southern borders.

American soldiers based in the Persian Gulf might come under fire. Islamist backers of Iran could target civilians all over the world.

It also remains unclear how much damage an attack could inflict. Iran's nuclear facilities are scattered throughout the country and buried deep underground. Israeli officials concede that any attack could set back, but not destroy, Iran's nuclear ambitions.

Speaking with The Associated Press, a senior military official said Thursday that the threat is real. "If you are talking about the use of power against Iran, any kind of power, and create any damage over there, yes, it can be done," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity under military guidelines.

Israel has attacked nuclear sites in foreign countries before. In 1981, Israeli warplanes destroyed an unfinished Iraqi nuclear reactor. In 2007, Israeli aircraft destroyed a site in Syria that the U.N. nuclear watchdog deemed to be a secretly built nuclear reactor.

While Israel is unlikely to strike without coordinating with the Americans, who maintain thousands of forces on aircraft carriers and military bases in the Gulf, Israeli officials will not make any promises to Dempsey, the officials said.

This week, Netanyahu told lawmakers that four rounds of international sanctions "have harmed the Iranians but not in a way that would stop their nuclear program." His deputy prime minister, Moshe Yaalon, expressed disappointment in a radio interview that the U.S. has delayed plans to expand sanctions, suggesting election-year considerations were to blame.

And in an interview published Thursday, the recently retired Israeli military intelligence chief claimed Iran already has all the components to build a nuclear bomb. "If the Iranians get together tonight and decide to secretly develop a bomb, then they have all the resources and components to do so," Amos Yadlin told the Maariv daily.

In a balancing message, Defense Minister Ehud Barak said Wednesday that Israel was "very far" from deciding whether to strike. And Israel and the United States this week postponed a major military exercise.

Israelis generally assess that Iran is close to acquiring the expertise and know-how to build a bomb but a year or two away from being able to build and deliver an atomic weapon.

In a possible preview of Dempsey's message, a senior U.S. State Department official convened Israeli journalists on Wednesday and insisted American sanctions have been effective, Israeli newspapers reported.

The official, who was not identified, reportedly said sanctions were gradual to avoid a sudden jump in oil prices but could be ramped up to include an embargo on Iran's central bank — and were already having a harsh effect on Iran's economy.

POPULAR FILE-SHARING SITE MEGAUPLOAD SHUT DOWN

One of the world's most popular file-sharing sites was shuttered Thursday, and its founder and several company officials were accused of facilitating millions of illegal downloads of films, music and other content. An indictment accused Megaupload.com of costing copyright holders at least $500 million in lost revenue.

The report says sex is something doctors should bring up with all heart patients. Yet few do because they're uncomfortable talking about it or they lack information, Levine said. The new guidance is designed to fill that gap.

Heart patients should get a doctor's OK before engaging in sexual activity. Many may be advised first to do cardiac rehab — exercise while being monitored for heart symptoms, to improve heart strength and increase physical fitness. But the heart association says most eventually will be cleared to resume sexual activity.

The doctors' group offers advice for heart patients based on scientific research involving sometimes provocative sex-related topics:

- Who's most at risk for sudden death related to sex? Married men having affairs, often with younger women in unfamiliar settings. Those circumstances can add to stress that may increase the risks, evidence from a handful of studies suggests.
- Sex may be OK as soon as one week after a relatively mild heart attack, if patients can walk up a few flights of stairs without discomfort.
- Viagra and other drugs for erectile dysfunction are generally safe for men with stable heart disease.

"The risk of having a heart attack during sexual activity is two to three times higher than when not having sexual activity. However, this increased risk of heart attack during sexual activity represents only a very small part of a person's overall risk of having a heart attack, and sexual activity is the cause of less than 1 percent of all heart attacks," Levine said.

Among heart attack survivors, average risks for another heart attack or sudden death are about 10 in 1 million per hour of sexual activity; having sex increases that to about 20 to 30 in 1 million per hour, the new report says. People without heart disease face lower overall risks for a heart attack, but similar risks for a sex-related attack.

The updated advice was released online Thursday in the heart association journal, Circulation.

Dr. Keith Churchwell, chief medical officer of Vanderbilt University's Heart and Vascular Institute, said the guidance is important for patients, and that questions about sex are the most common ones he hears from heart patients.

Ohio State University heart specialist Martha Gulati praised the recommendations for emphasizing that sexual counseling is important not just for patients but also their partners, who she says are often just as nervous about resuming sexual activity.

Day-care operator Tammy Collins of Reynoldsburg, Ohio, one of Gulati's patients, says the advice is reassuring.

She had a heart attack last year on Sept. 11, during a trip to Cincinnati to celebrate her wedding anniversary.

Collins' mother died of a heart attack at the same age, on her 51st birthday. With high blood pressure and high cholesterol, Collins knew she was at risk. She developed symptoms a few hours after having sex. She dismissed it at first, until she felt a sharp pain in her upper back and had trouble breathing. She was rushed to the hospital and doctors used stents to open blocked arteries.

Collins said she wasn't embarrassed to ask Gulati about sex, who told her it was unlikely that her night of romance had caused the heart attack. After several weeks of cardiac rehab, she was cleared to resume sexual activity — advice that surprised her friends. But Collins said the exercise sessions have made her feel fitter than ever.

"A heart attack does not have to be the end of living," Collins said.

Chicago cardiologist Dan Fintel, a professor of medicine at Northwestern University, said he routinely gives heart patients a sex talk on their last day in the hospital, knowing that it's likely on their minds.

"Resuming sexual activity is safe and emotionally part of the healing process, with a few caveats," he tells patients.

Those caveats elicit nervous chuckles when he explains that includes no philandering, given evidence about that causing extra stress.

Johnny Otis of 'Willie and the Hand Jive' Dies

BY ROBERT JABLON

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Johnny Otis, the "godfather of rhythm and blues" who wrote and recorded the R&B classic "Willie and the Hand Jive" and for decades evangelized black music to white audiences as a bandleader and radio host, has died. He was 90.

Otis, who had been in poor health for several years, died at his home in the Los Angeles foothill suburb of Altadena on Tuesday, said his manager, Terry Gould.

Otis, who was white, was born John Veliotes to Greek immigrants and grew up in a black section of Berkeley, where he said he identified far more with black culture than his own. As a teenager, he changed his name because he thought Johnny Otis sounded more black.

"As a kid, I decided that if our society dictated that one had to be black or white, I would be black," he once explained.

His musical tastes clearly reflected that adopted culture and even after he became famous, his dark skin and hair often led audiences and club promoters to assume he was black like his band mates.

Otis was leading his own band in 1945 when he scored his first big hit, "Harlem Nocturne." In 1950, 10 of his songs made Billboard Magazine's R&B chart. His "Willie and the Hand Jive" sold more than 1.5 million copies and was covered years later by Eric Clapton.

He later wrote "Every Beat of My Heart," which was a hit for Gladys Knight & the Pips.

But the influence of Otis was felt most through his ability to recognize and promote talent. He wove into his bands such diverse and legendary R&B vocalists as Etta James, Hank Ballard, Big Mama Thornton and The Robins, the latter a group that would evolve into the Coasters.

He produced Thornton's original recording of "Hound Dog," a song that would later become an even bigger hit for Elvis Presley.

"His band shows a different style on pretty much every new recording," said Piero Scaruffi, author of "A History of Rock Music, 1951-2000." "... Otis did not force his personality on others but worked with the personality of the others. He may not have been a great composer or performer himself, but he was an impressive conductor."

Otis launched his professional music career as an 18-year-old drummer for bawdy barrelhouse pianist Count Otis Matthews, although he had never played the drums until then.

Matthews instructed him to simply pound out the syncopated "shave and a haircut, six bits" beat that would become the backbone of early rock 'n' roll. His mastery of it soon proved his ticket to other bands and eventually to headlining his own group.

Otis saw himself as curator of black popular music, which for him represented much more than a diversion or livelihood. His cross-country R&B reviews and his radio and television appearances were dedicated to delivering black music to white audiences.

"The music isn't just the notes, it's the culture — the way grandma cooked, the way grandpa told stories, the way the kids walked and talked," he once said.

Body Parts Found Near Hollywood Sign in L.A.; Police Seek Answers

LOS ANGELES (AP) • It's the perfect secluded hiking spot for those in the know, celebrities trying to keep clear of the paparazzi and others seeking a close-up view of the "Hollywood" sign or sweeping panoramas of downtown.

This week, someone apparently thought Bronson Canyon, a twisting, tiny warren of narrow streets just a mile up a hill from the studio where the TV show "Wizards of Waverly Place" was filmed, could also be the perfect place to hide a dismembered body.

A head. Feet. And hands. Whoever it was that left the gruesome scene may be long gone now. That's one mystery, in a town that thrives on them and often rings up millions of dollars making up tales filled with gory scenes just like the one discovered Tuesday.

The other, more pressing mystery: To whom do the body parts belong?

So far, police believe the unidentified man is between 40 and 60 years old.

They also believe the body, found by a dog walker who let one of her animals off the leash, had been there only a short time. Just a few days at the most.

They note that the coyotes that roam rugged Bronson Canyon Park in packs at night — their howls are the only sounds people hear after dusk — would have destroyed the remains if they had been there longer than a few days.

"If it had not been for the dog walker, we might never have found it," police Cmdr. Andrew Smith said Thursday at the park.

As if to make Smith's point, a coyote strolled by a hillside at that moment, stopping no more than 30 yards away and turning its head curiously toward the assembled reporters as the officer continued to speak.

As 120 officers and firefighters on foot and horseback fought their way through 7 acres of brush this week looking for the victim's torso, some searchers used ropes to rappel into a steep drainage culvert. The Los Angeles County Coroner's Office, meanwhile, was attempting to identify the remains.

Smith said they would try to identify the man through fingerprints first and, if that doesn't work, search DNA databases and dental records.

THE DIGIT

$2.7 billion

Google's 4Q earnings • What was supposed to be a celebration of the most prosperous quarter in Google's 13-year history instead turned into a major letdown. The disappointment came with Thursday's release of fourth-quarter earnings that showed the Internet search leader fetched less money per click on its ubiquitous online ads. The company earned $2.7 billion, or $8.22 per share, in the fourth quarter. That's just a 6 percent increase from $2.5 billion, or $7.81 per share, at the same time in 2010.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Add to Steady Climb; Dow Gains 45

NEW YORK (AP) • Strong corporate earnings reports and the lowest unemployment claims in almost four years gave investors more reasons Thursday to take risks on stocks, and the market continued its quiet but solid January climb. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 45.03 points to close at 12,623.98. The Standard & Poor's 500 index added 6.46 points to close at 1,314.50. Both averages are at their highest since July. Volume was slightly above average. The market has been subdued this year: The S&P has moved up or down 1 percent or more only twice.

Kodak Workers, Retirees, Investors Brace for Pain

Bankruptcy filing raises specter that the 132-year-old trailblazer could become the most storied casualty of the digital age.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) • The ripple effect from Eastman Kodak's bankruptcy filing Thursday extends in many directions: Employees are bracing again for layoffs, retirees are fretting over health care coverage, and the photography pioneer's biggest creditors and stakeholders — from movie studios and big-box retailers to the CEO — are preparing to take a hit financially.

Mayor Tom Richards portrayed the decision to seek Chapter 11 reorganization as more of a psychological blow than an economic one to Rochester, where Kodak had been the engine of commerce for most of the company's 132 years. Its payroll in the medium-size city along Lake Ontario has slipped below 7,000 from a peak of 60,400 in 1983.

"We have a broader-based economy which is no longer dependent on one industry and one company," Richards said. "We're better off for it. Not what I wish this would happen, but it has happened, and we're just going to need to deal with it."

Kodak, the company that brought photography to the masses at the dawn of the 20th century and was known all over the world for its Brownie and Instamatic cameras and its yellow-and-red film boxes, was brought down first by Japanese competition and then by its inability to keep pace with the lightning shift from film to digital technology over the past decade.

The company said it has secured $950 million in financing from Citigroup and expects to continue operating and pay its employees while in bankruptcy.

In the meantime, Kodak will try to execute its plan for recovery. Since 2005, it has poured hundreds of millions of dollars into new lines of inkjet printers that are finally on the verge of turning a profit. Home photo printers, high-speed commercial inkjet presses, software and package printing are viewed as Kodak's new core.

Kodak's executives are hoping the printer, software and packaging businesses will more than double in size by 2013 and account by then for 25 percent of its revenue, or nearly $2 billion. The rest of the company's revenue comes mainly from traditional film, disposable cameras, photographic paper and chemicals.

Kodak got out of the business of making film cameras years ago, and its digital cameras are losing money.

The long-expected move to seek protection from its creditors was "a necessary step and the right thing to do for the future of Kodak," CEO Antonio Perez said.

One strength Kodak can take into a restructuring effort is its powerful brand name, said Eli Lehrer, who heads the nonprofit Heartland Institute's Center on Finance, Insurance and Real Estate in Washington. However, "that doesn't necessarily translate to people keeping their jobs, or stockholders keeping anything," Lehrer added.

Photographer Steve McCurry said the prospect that Kodak might soon fade into history is upsetting to huge numbers of Americans who remember not that long ago when its dominance in film photography was indisputable.

"That's just the nature of the world we live in," McCurry said. "We all die. Civilizations all die and famous corporations, too. Yeah, it's a sad occasion, but there's great, great respect for American brands that have endured for so long."

Best known for a Kodachrome portrait of a green-eyed Afghan refugee girl that landed on the cover of National Geographic in 1985, McCurry relied heavily on "probably the best color film ever made" for all but the last five years of a 36-year career and was entrusted with the very last spool of Kodachrome manufactured in 2009.

Veteran employees said they are scared the crisis could sink careers that somehow dodged so many previous cutbacks. And Kodak's 25,000 retirees in Rochester fear that already diminished health benefits could disappear altogether.

"Because it's unfunded and discretionary, Kodak can actually say tomorrow that we're going to drop health care," said Bob Volpe, who runs a Kodak retiree association with 3,000 members.

The company did not rule out the possibility of layoffs. It also resolved to "fairly resolve legacy liabilities," which suggests that it may try to cut its retiree health care costs, estimated at $132 million in 2011.

Kodak stock dropped in over-the-counter trading Thursday and closed at just 30 cents per share after the bankruptcy filing prompted the New York Stock Exchange to delist the securities. Perez alone owns 6 million shares.

Exxon Reaches $1.6M Spill Settlement

BY MATTHEW BROWN

Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Exxon Mobil agreed Thursday to pay $1.6 million in penalties to the state of Montana over water pollution caused by a pipeline break last summer that fouled dozens of miles of shoreline along the scenic Yellowstone River.

Montana Department of Environmental Quality director Richard Opper said the penalties in the case mark the largest in the agency's history.

The Texas oil company will pay $300,000 in cash and spend $1.3 million on future environmental projects, according to a copy of the document obtained by AP.

Also Thursday, Exxon increased its estimate of how much crude spilled into the river during the July 1 accident near Laurel to 1,509 barrels, or more than 63,000 gallons.

That's up from earlier estimates of 1,000 barrels spilled — a number that Gov. Brian Schweitzer had disputed as too low.

Schweitzer said Thursday that the settlement and revised spill estimate came only after the state pressured Exxon to be more accountable in the aftermath of the spill.

"You're not prepared to give you any accurate information if you don't hold their feet to the fire," the Democratic governor said.

In an emailed statement, Exxon spokesman Alan Jeffers reiterated that the company "takes full responsibility" for the accident.

Flurry of Economic Data Paints Rosy Picture

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The economy is off to a fast start in 2012.

The outlook for hiring has brightened as applications for unemployment benefits near a four-year low.

Adding to the optimism, inflation remains low, business travel is up and the home market is showing slight gains after three dismal years.

That's the picture sketched by a flurry of data Thursday. It followed other reports that show the economy began the year with vitality: Companies are hiring more, consumer confidence is up, more people are buying cars and factories are making more goods.

Even bank lending, which all but froze during the depths of the financial crisis, is on the rise.

Many economists caution that it's too early to conclude that the recovery is accelerating.

"There's no doubt that the economy is getting better; we just shouldn't get carried away," Mark Vitner, an economist at Wells Fargo, said. "We haven't shifted into a higher gear."

Despite six months of solid job growth, unemployment remains painfully high at 8.5 percent. And inflation-adjusted wages fell over the past year.

Housing is still slowing the economic recovery. And a recession in Europe would weaken growth in the United States and elsewhere.

Still, Thursday's reports were encouraging:

- Fewer people sought unemployment benefits last week than at any time in nearly four years. The seasonally adjusted drop was the steepest in more than six years. It reduced the week's total to just 352,000. The four-week average dropped to 379,000. When applications fall consistently below 375,000, it usually signals that hiring is strong enough to lower the unemployment rate.

- Manufacturing expanded in the Northeast in January, according to surveys by the Federal Reserve banks of New York and Philadelphia. That followed a report from the Fed that U.S. factory output surged in December by the most in a year.

- Inflation appears to be peaking after surging last year. Consumer prices were unchanged in December, in part because gas is cheaper. Lower inflation gives consumers more spending power. It also gives the Fed leeway to keep interest rates low to help the economy.

- Spending on business travel rose 7.6 percent last year, the Global Business Travel Association said last week. More business travel benefits companies like Southwest Airlines, which reported higher fourth-quarter net income and revenue.

TWIN FALLS • As an 18-year-old college student, Matthew McGregor quickly admits his pockets aren't flush with cash. That doesn't mean he gives up a good time.

Between frames of his fast-paced, single-man game at the Bowladrome alley in Twin Falls, McGregor explained that after snagging a free game during a recent promotion, he could afford to come back again.

"I watch for deals because every penny counts," said McGregor, a College of Southern Idaho student.

When a game and shoe rental can put you back $5, an hour spent in a bowling alley can ring up the charge.

So whether you're a strapped-for-cash college kid, a single parent, a retiree or someone who simply seeks the most bang for your buck, you'll appreciate this guide to south-central Idaho's best bowling deals.

BUHL: Sunset Bowl

1020 Burley Ave., 543-6835
Open: 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 5:30-11 p.m. Mondays-Fridays; and 1-11 p.m. Saturdays-Sundays.
Shoe rental: $1.25.

Deal: Dollar Bowling seems to bring in the bowlers best here, and owner Dirk McCallister decided to bring back the promotion. From 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays, bowlers will pay just $1 per bowler per game (regularly $2.95). "Sometimes we got 40 to 50 bowlers in here during Dollar Bowling; it was fun," McCallister said.

BURLEY: Snake River Bowl

725 Minidoka Ave., 679-2695
Open: 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays-Thursdays; 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays; and 2-8 p.m. Sundays.
Shoe rental: $2.95.

Deal: You'll save nearly 50 percent by taking advantage of Snake River Bowl's weekly discount. Instead of shelling out $24.95 per lane, per hour for up to eight people, you'll pay just $14.95 per lane, per hour from 9 to 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. That's when the alley replaces its fluorescent lighting with black lights and cranks up the music for Cosmic Bowling.

"It's pretty popular with families and the younger crowd, those in their 20s and high schoolers," owner Justin Studer said.

Parties for a Cause

If you choose your entertainment with your conscience, you have a couple of causes competing for your attention this week: A high school student organized a Saturday-night poker tournament and prime rib dinner to benefit Twin Falls' senior citizens center. And the Twin Falls Optimist Club's wine tasting on Wednesday is a fundraiser for a childhood cancer campaign.

The Met in HD

Can't make it to New York for the Metropolitan Opera? No worries. You can watch a live broadcast in HD of the Met performing a contemporary fantasy, in a Hailey theater on Saturday. It's a fantastic experience, according to Susan Waters of Twin Falls. She called a recent live Met showing on the big screen "truly a visual feast. The music was gorgeous and the staging and set design were magnificent. It was more than worth the trip!"

African A Cappella

Too poor at first to buy instruments, four siblings in Chad developed a distinctive a cappella style that lifted them to a touring career. H'Sao, now with six musicians, will perform in Sun Valley on Saturday. You can expect a large a cappella repertoire but also numbers with keyboards, djembe, drums, guitar, bass and African dance. H'Sao draws inspiration from gospel and traditional African music but blends in other genres, too.

Nordic Festival Puts Tons of Fun into Cross-country Skiing

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • The Sun Valley Nordic Festival casts a party-like atmosphere around the sport of skinny skiing that you would be more apt to find in Europe, where skiing is as revered as football in America.

The third annual nine-day festival starts Jan. 28 and runs through Feb. 5 with a lot of skiing, a lot of partying and even a few educational, informative lectures tossed in to the mix.

And the price is right. For $49 you can ski all the Nordic trails from Hailey to Galena Lodge, including those at Sun Valley Nordic Center, for the full nine days.

The event includes live music, a film festival, a twilight ski, even a German smorgasbord — all designed to entice people to explore as many aspects as possible of the cross-country trails ranging as far north as Smiley Creek Lodge.

“We moved the Alturas Lake ski to Sunday so more people can attend. And we’re going to have live music during Thursday’s sprints to bump up the tempo,” said Jim Keating, director of the Blaine County Recreation District.

Last year’s festival saw a 40 percent uptick in participation from the previous year as more people from outside of the Sun Valley area found out about it, said Janelle Connors, a spokeswoman for the BCRD. And festival directors hope to build on that this year as a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee visits Sun Valley to gauge the area’s suitability as an official Olympic Nordic training site.

“We have the best Nordic conditions in the country,” said Keating, who has been monitoring snow conditions across the country. “All systems are go. The Nordic Festival is going to rock and roll!”

Susan Gianetto, who moved to Hailey from Boise last year, said she tries to participate or spectate at as many of the festival’s events as possible.

“The Nordic Festival is the summation of why we chose to live here,” she said. “We could have moved to Bozeman or some other place. But none had the quality of Nordic skiing that we do here. And the festival puts that on display.”

Here’s the schedule:

Saturday, Jan. 28

- The festival gets under way with a free Ski the Rails and Hailey Music Celebration. Adults, children and dogs are invited to hop a free bus at the Sun Valley Brewery in Hailey beginning at 9:30 a.m. to head to the start of the event at Serenade Lane in Ketchum. Participants will ski down the bike path at a leisurely pace, stopping at refreshment stands along the way. Live music at the brewery awaits skiers upon completion of the course. Skiers can also do just part of the path, catching the bus at various points along the way.
- A Skin It 2 Win It Randonee Race at 10 a.m. will challenge teams of up to four skiers to skin 600 vertical feet from the base of Dollar Mountain in Sun Valley to the summit. There they will remove their skins and ski back the 1.3 miles to the start to hand off their baton to the next teammate. The winning team will complete the most laps in five hours. Entry is $50 a person, with proceeds going to the Sawtooth National Forest Avalanche Center.

KAREN BOSSICK • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

The sprints and the accompanying music attracted hundreds of spectators at last year’s Sun Valley Nordic Festival.

Drinks and food will be provided for racers. Costumes are required, and there will be a prize for the best costume.

- All Night Diner will provide dance music for the Galena Lodge Benefit Dinner and Auction at 5:30 p.m. in the Sun Valley Inn Limelight Room. Tickets are $95, at 578-5455.

Sunday, Jan. 29

Skiers are invited to ski the Alturas Lake Trails through the meadows to Alturas Lake 40 miles north of Ketchum on Idaho Highway 75. A small donation is requested to ski the trails. Tuesday, Jan. 31

- High-intensity sprint races will be held at noon at Quigley Nordic Center at the end of Fox Acres Road in Hailey. The event includes raffle prizes.

- The Idaho Conservation League will host a free snowshoe hike around Galena Lodge, 24 miles north of Ketchum on Idaho Highway 75, at 3:30 p.m. Snowshoes are available for rent at the lodge. Information: 726-7485.

- Galena Lodge will serve a Twilight Dinner and Ski at 6 p.m. Reservations: 726-4010.

Wednesday, Feb. 1

- The inaugural WinterSun Classic will take place at 10 a.m. at the Sun Valley Nordic Center at the Sun Valley Golf Course. The 10- and 5-kilometer mass-start races are a precursor to the 2013 U.S.

National Masters Championships, which will be held in Sun Valley. Entry fee: $15 for the 10k and $10 for the 5k, with registration beginning Tuesday and ending at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Nordic Center. Information: 622-2250 or 721-8340.

- The second annual Sun Valley Ski Hall of Fame Induction will be held at 4 p.m. at the Ketchum/Sun Valley Ski and Heritage Museum at First and Washington streets in Ketchum. This year’s honorees are Dick Durrance, Warren Miller, Janette Burr Johnson, Pete Patterson, Michel Rudigoz, Bill and Annie Vanderbilt, N’tala Skinner, Charley French, Hans Muehleger and Jenny Busdon. Live music and drinks will accompany the event.

- An evening of tall tales — “Experiences in the Fast Lane of Cross Country Skiing” — will be presented at 7 p.m. at The Community Library in Ketchum.

Thursday, Feb. 2

The high-energy Nordic-TownUSA Downtown Jam and Sprints will start at 4 p.m. in the empty lot at Fourth and Second streets in Ketchum, across from the Ketchum Post Office. Tim Snider and Sound Society will play a blend of American roots, world beat and Latin music as Olympic-caliber athletes and kids alike sprint around a tight course in front of spectators. Refreshments will be available for purchase around a bonfire.

Friday, Feb. 3

The Banff Mountain Film Festival will feature some of the world’s best outdoor films beginning at 7 p.m. at the nextStage Theatre, 120 S. Main St., Ketchum. Tickets are $13 if purchased in advance at Backwoods Mountain Sports, The Elephants Perch or Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum. They’re $15 at the door. Saturday, Feb. 4

Eight-hundred racers are expected to compete in the 32-kilometer SWIX Boulder Mountain Tour, one of America’s longest-running cross country ski races. The racers start at Galena Lodge and end across from the Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters where spectators are invited to cheer them on.

The Banff Mountain Film Festival returns for a second night of outdoor films at 7 p.m. at the nextStage Theatre.

Sunday, Feb. 5

The Festival concludes with the 2012 SWIX Boulder Mountain Tour Demo at 10 a.m. at the Sun Valley Nordic Center. This event attracted hundreds of adults and children last year with the opportunity to try the latest ski equipment for free.

GOODING: Ranch Bowl

1730 Main St., 934-4034

Open: 5-10 p.m. Tuesdays; 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesdays-Fridays; noon-midnight Saturdays. Closed Sundays-Mondays.

Deal: If you typically arrive to bowl in an minivan (or two) filled with family and friends, then Ranch Bowl has the deal for you. Owner Wayne Bellamy found it best not to mess with discounts unless they could lure in a crowd.

"We offer $3 games for groups of 12 or more anytime; come in and you'll get the rate," Bellamy said. "We found it popular for birthday parties to church parties, but it applies to anybody."

The regular game rate is $3.50 per person with shoe rentals included in the price.

FILER: Cedar Lanes

15 U.S. Highway 30; 326-5902

Open: 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays-Thursday; 11 a.m. to midnight Fridays and Saturdays.

Shoe rental: $2.75.

Deals: What Hector Rosas likes about Cedar Lanes is that there's always something on sale. "It doesn't seem to matter when we come but they're able to work something out," he said after a recent visit with his family.

You'll find an array of deals from 5 p.m. to closing on Mondays, including the cost of bowling with pizza discounts.

However, the all-round best deal is on Tuesdays. From 5 p.m. to closing, customers get half-priced bowling and shoe rentals and half-priced baskets of fries, tots and fountain Pepsi products. This makes games $1.80 for adults and $1.58 for

Buy-one-get-free bowling and shoe rentals are available from 5 p.m. to closing on Thursdays.

JEROME: Bowling Center

159 W. Ave. A; 324-5292

Open: 2-10 p.m. Mondays-Thursday; and noon to 10 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays.

Deal: The current promotion is $8 per game, for up to four people, per lane; includes shoe rental. Regular price is $12 per game.

SHOSHONE: Mountain Lanes

608 N. Greenwood; 886-2020

Open: 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays-Saturdays.

Shoe rental: $1.25.
Deal: Instead of just one day or a few hours of discounted bowling, Mountain Lanes is simply lowering its game fee by 50 cents. Owner Sharon McClure said the ongoing promotion lowers the game charge to $2.50, from $3.

"We're pretty cheap anyway," McClure said.

She didn't know when the game rate would change and suggests people call the alley beforehand. When the alley hosts several bowling leagues during the week, it doesn't have lanes available to the public.

TWIN FALLS: Bowladrome

220 Eastland Drive; 736-8510

Open: Noon to 10 p.m. Sundays; 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays; 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesdays; 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays; and 9 a.m. to midnight Saturdays.

Shoe rental: $1.50

Deals: Pizza-n-pins, available 1-8 p.m. Sundays, is regular-priced bowling for up to six people, with a free pizza and soda. At $30, it's a money saver if dining at the alley is part of the outing anyway.

From 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays, Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, the alley offers discounted games, at $2. Regular-priced games are $3.25 for juniors and $3.75 for adults.

TWIN FALLS: Magic Bowl

340 Second Ave. E.; 733-2566

Open: Open until 6 p.m. Mondays-Fridays; call ahead. Open 10 a.m. to a flexible closing time on Saturdays; noon to a flexible closing on Sundays.

Shoe rental: $1.25

Deal: The trick to bowling affordably at Magic Bowl may not be about catching a sale but simply catching the lanes open. With league several evenings of the week, it can be hard to schedule promotions, owner Mary Murray said.

"We stay open as long as there are bowlers here," Murray said. "But that can make it difficult to know if we are open some nights or not because there are some nights we just aren't here. It's best to call."

However, by offering up to six bowlers an hour on a lane for $15 anytime, the alley is quite affordable.

CHEESE EXECUTIVE IS FIRST UP IN LECTURE SERIES

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A cheesemaking executive will give the first lecture in the Magic Valley Arts Council's 2012 Brown Bag Lecture Series, from noon to 1 p.m. Jan. 27 at the Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

The popular, free lectures are a chance to learn about some aspect of the community while munching your lunch. This year the series takes its theme, "The Way We Worked," from the name of a Smithsonian Institution traveling exhibition that will make a stop in Twin Falls from March 24 through May 3 at the arts center.

At the Jan. 27 lunchtime lecture, you'll hear Jeff Williams speak on "The Way We Were — Glanbia Foods?"

Twin Falls-based Glanbia Foods Inc. is a producer of cheese and whey-based ingredients, and it calls itself the largest barrel cheese manufacturer in the world. The company's four locations throughout Magic Valley collectively process more than 12 million pounds of milk every day, resulting in more than 400 million pounds of cheese and 110 million pounds of dairy ingredients annually, an arts council press release said.

Glanbia Foods is a division of Glanbia plc, an international food and ingredient company based in Kilkenny, Ireland.

Williams' presentation will cover company history: what brought it to Magic Valley, where it started, its present and its plans. You'll learn what the funny circle in the Glanbia logo means and how many cows the company needs every day to supply its cheese production.

Williams has more than 20 years' experience in the dairy industry and has been president and CEO of Glanbia Foods since 2005. He joined the company in 1989, and in 2004 he was promoted to COO after spending a number of years overseeing the company's supply chain and strategic development as executive vice president.

In his current role, Williams also has management responsibilities for Glanbia's joint venture Southwest Cheese LLC in Clovis, N.M., serves on the National Cheese Institute Board and is a member of Dairy Marketing Inc.'s food safety committee.

The company has more than 650 employees in south-central Idaho and sales revenues of more than $1.4 billion, the arts council said.

The lecture is free; bring a brown bag lunch. Information: 734-2787.

turtles, lizards, spiders and scorpions that are available for the public to meet. If they're courageous enough, visitors can wrap a snake around their bodies.

People, especially children, thrive on hands-on learning, said Thornborrow, the Herrett Center's education facilitator.

"They learn and are stimulated in a way that they might not be in the classroom," she said. "We know that well over 90 percent of all science learning in a lifetime is done outside the classroom."

Depending on the night, patrons might hear about camouflage, evolution or whatever comes up through questions.

Wilson's vestigial hips and remnants of claws are proof that his ancestors once had legs, Thornborrow said. It's a great way to introduce the concept of evolution to youngsters.

Some patrons don't show up to "Mingle in the Jungle" to learn about science — they come for therapy. The program provides a chance for people to face their ophidiophobia, the abnormal fear of snakes.

During the 14 years that the Herrett Center has hosted the program, Thornborrow has met many people who attend with the goal of conquering their fear in a safe environment.

"They know we're not going to throw a reptile at them," Thornborrow said. The reptiles "are not venomous. They're not going to hurt them. This is a program that's tried and true. We've never lost a customer."

Once in the museum's tree-filled Jungle Room, no one is forced to touch a snake. If they want to simply get a glimpse, that's OK.

"I hope that people who spend time in the presence of reptiles realize that they're not such horrible, fearsome creatures," she said.

In fact, snakes fill an important role on this planet, Thornborrow pointed out. They eat rodents and keep down the population. Thornborrow explained it to the Cub Scouts this way: "You wouldn't want to walk in your house and see a mouse eating your birthday cake, would you?"

"Mingle in the Jungle" has a loyal following of regulars. Curtis Long, a Filer Intermediate School sixth-grader, has attended "too many times to count." He used to own a snake, but, sadly, his cousin let it go. "I think they're actually quite fascinating," he said. "They have no legs, which kind of creeps me out." His sister, Amber Chisum, doesn't share his affection for snakes. "She hates them," he said. "So she doesn't come?"

Guitarist Kris Hartung, percussionist Jared Hallock and saxophonist Brent Jensen will present an evening of spontaneously improvised music Feb. 9.

Trio to Perform Evening of Improvised Music

TWIN FALLS • Three musicians will perform before an audience in the CSI Fine Arts Recital Hall on Feb. 9, but they don't know what they'll play. They won't have notes, music or guidelines. They'll just improvise. Together.

A concert of freely improvised music is the objective of guitarist Kris Hartung, saxophonist Brent Jensen and percussionist Jared Hallock. Jensen, CSI music professor, said the group will offer a brief explanation to the audience about the process of improv, and the audience will be able to ask questions.

The show itself will be spontaneous, each musician listening to, reacting to and anticipating the others' performance. It'll never happen quite that way twice.

Hartung is the founder and artistic director of the Boise Creative and Improvised Music Festival. He has worked to raise awareness of avant-garde and creative music in Boise and has produced 15 CD projects, including his most recent live improvisational project, "On the Fringe."

Hallock graduated from the University of Idaho in percussion performance and has since played with many artists in Boise and elsewhere. He has performed in jazz combos and funk bands, to orchestras and avant-garde installations. His work as a composer includes movie scores, dance compositions and theatrical collaborations. In 2010, he was commissioned by the city of Boise to create a public performance arts collaboration, Unity in Diversity.

Audio and videos of the trio can be found at www.boisemusicians.com/jensen-hartung

The performance will be at 7:30 Feb. 9. Admission is free, but organizers suggest a $5 donation to the CSI Music Scholarship fund.

Information: Jensen at bjensen@csi.edu or 420-7066.

CSI Men Seek About-face on the Road

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

TWIN FALLS • Time to turn it around.

Coming off a tough 75-71 loss to North Idaho in Coeur d'Alene, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team aims to rebound on this long, wild road trip to Rangely, Colo., and Price, Utah.

"We're going to make up for last weekend," said CSI guard Fabyon Harris. "That was a tough loss and we paid for it this week too."

After a couple tough practices this week, the Golden Eagles (16-2, 2-1 Scenic West) now take to the road to play Colorado Northwestern on Friday and USU-College of Eastern Utah on Saturday.

"It's going to be a long trip," said CSI reserve guard Kevin Attila.

They'll get started 7:30 p.m. Friday against Scenic West doormat Colorado Northwestern (5-11, 0-3) which has been blown out in all three of its SWAC games to start the season.

Garrett Wilkins leads the Spartans in scoring at 12.4 per game and Michael Willie pitches in 9.2, but they don't have much size — no player averages more than 4.4 rebounds per game — so the athletic Golden Eagles forwards could have huge games Friday night.

"They're better this year. They're guards are improved and they're more athletic on the perimeter than they've been," Gosar said. "We have a lot more size though and this past weekend I thought our post guys just played OK. Many times our guys were posting up outside the lane and then we'd get them ball. Then there were times when they were posting up inside the lane we didn't give them the ball. We weren't on the same page and we'll have to clean that up."

CSI tips at 5 p.m. Saturday against USU-College of Eastern Utah (13-4, 1-2) which lost 79-76 to Salt Lake and 94-81 to Snow last weekend. CSI lost by 10 in Price last year. Dashaun Wiggins leads the team in scoring at 15.6 per game.

BRUINS DO JUST ENOUGH TO WIN

RYAN HOWE • TIMES-NEWS

BY RYAN HOWE

BURLEY • The Twin Falls girls basketball team didn't look like a first-place team for all 32 minutes against Burley on Thursday night, but that's what the Bruins are after their 50-39 Great Basin Conference victory.

Despite a few lapses offensively, Twin Falls played solid defense and got balanced scoring, getting 12 points from Mikayla Harris and 11 from Kaitlyn Merritt.

"We're a defensive team. If we play as a team defensively it will convert over to our offense," said senior Josie Jordan, who scored eight points.

Twin Falls (12-6 overall, 7-2 GBC) took a half-game lead in the league standings ahead of Minico and can lock up at least a share of the regular season title and a first-round bye for the district tournament when it hosts Canyon Ridge on Tuesday.

Burley (8-9, 4-5) seemed to lack the energy, cohesiveness and sense of urgency that had propelled it through its now-ended three-game winning streak.

Roddick Down and Out Down Under

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia • Andy Roddick lunged for a shot by Lleyton Hewitt and felt a sharp pain in his right leg. He stayed down on his hands and one knee for a few seconds, wondering if his Australian Open was finished.

He played the next two points, falling behind 3-0 in the second set, before taking a medical timeout to treat his hamstring.

Still, Roddick played on. Clearly restricted, he didn't bother to chase down some shots and walked slowly between points with his head down.

Finally, after 16 more games, Roddick called it quits. He retired with Hewitt leading the second-round match 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

"It's a miserable, terrible thing being out there compromised like that," Roddick said.

The 29-year-old American knew he wouldn't be able to fool an opponent he was playing for the 14th time, one of the few players on the tour older than he is, somebody who

Canadian Freestyle Skier Burke Dead at 29

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Sarah Burke was an X Games star with a grass-roots mentality — a daredevil superpipe skier who understood the risks inherent to her sport and the debt she owed to it.

The pioneering Canadian freestyler, who helped get superpipe accepted into the Olympics, died Thursday after a Jan. 10 crash during a training run in Park City, Utah.

Burke, who lived near Whistler, in British Columbia, was 29.

Tests revealed she sustained "irreversible damage to her brain due to lack of oxygen and blood after cardiac arrest," according to a statement released by her publicist, Nicole Wool, on behalf of the family.

A four-time Winter X Games champion, Burke crashed on the same halfpipe where snowboarder Kevin Pearce sustained a traumatic brain injury during a training accident on Dec. 31, 2009.

Wool said Burke's organs and tissues were donated, as she had requested before the accident.

"The family expresses their heartfelt gratitude for the international outpouring of support they have received from all the people Sarah touched," the statement said.

MANNING RETURNS TO PRACTICE AFTER ONE-DAY BUG

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. • Tough luck, Frisco fans. Eli Manning's tummy is just fine.

The New York Giants quarterback was back at practice Thursday after missing part of the previous day's workout with "a stomach bug."

"I'm 100 percent," Manning said after practicing for Sunday's NFC title game against the 49ers in San Francisco. "I had a full practice today, did everything, took every rep. I feel good."

Manning felt sick after waking up Wednesday. He "toughed it out" and attended team meetings and took part in the walk-through portions of practice before letting backup David Carr handle the live snaps.

"It wasn't going well so I tried to be smart," said Manning, who received intravenous fluids after leaving practice Wednesday. "It was fortunate it happened on a Wednesday and not later in the week."

Manning texted coach Tom Coughlin late Wednesday evening and told him he was feeling better.

"When he got to work today, he had a nice breakfast and seemed to do fine," Coughlin said. "He is not quite himself, but almost."

There was almost no chance Manning would miss the game because of a stomach virus. After all, his streak of 128 straight starts, including playoffs, is tops in the NFL.

PSU Trustees Fired Paterno Over Lack of Action

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • Penn State trustees say they decided to oust Joe Paterno in part because the football coach didn't meet a moral obligation to do more to alert authorities about a child sex abuse allegation against a retired assistant coach.

Trustees interviewed Thursday by The Associated Press also cited statements from Paterno in the days and hours leading to his dismissal Nov. 9 — after nearly a half-century of leading the Nittany Lions — that they felt challenged the Board of Trustees' authority. Board members saw that as inappropriate, particularly at a time of intense scrutiny over the case of former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky.

Sandusky was charged with dozens of child sex abuse counts four days before Paterno was pushed out. The head coach had testified before a state grand jury about a 2002 allegation against Sandusky that was passed on to him by a graduate assistant.

A day after the graduate assistant, Mike McQueary, came to see him, Paterno relayed the accusations to his superiors, one of whom oversaw campus police. Board members didn't think that was enough.

"There's an obligation, a moral responsibility, for all adults to watch out for children, either your own or someone else," trustee Mark Dambly said. "It was in our opinion that Joe Paterno did not meet his moral obligation and for that reason — me, personally for that reason, I felt he could no longer lead the university and it was unanimous."

But Dambly and three other trustees interviewed Thursday on the Penn State campus said they still intended to honor Paterno's accomplishments and contributions to the school. He won a Division I record 409 games over 46 seasons and the Paterno family has donated millions of dollars to the school.

"Obviously Joe Paterno is a worldwide icon and has done a tremendous amount for the university," trustee Joel Myers said. "We have sorrow and all kinds of emotions, empathy, sympathy for what has occurred. That's universal.

"But the university, this institution is greater than one person."

An attorney for Paterno on Thursday called the board's comments self-serving and unsupported by the facts. Paterno fully reported what he knew to the people responsible for campus investigations, lawyer Wick Sollers said.

"He did what he thought was right with the information he had at the time," Sollers said.

The trustees spoke out ahead of Friday's board meeting, their first gathering since November and the frantic week after criminal charges were filed against Sandusky, once heralded as the architect for the storied program's "Linebacker U." defense.

The trustees described the long deliberations in the days leading up to Paterno's ouster as emotional and nerve wracking, echoing the confusion and anguish also felt among students and alumni as the scandal unfolded. They were shocked by the lurid details that had emerged about the case that week, after having been given a short briefing about Sandusky months earlier by school President Graham Spanier and general counsel Cynthia Baldwin. That session lasted roughly 7 minutes and provided few insights, trustees said.

Paterno was dismissed the same day Spanier also departed under pressure. The board initiated an internal investigation into the Sandusky case and the role of Penn State officials.

Since then, some alumni and former players have been questioning the actions of the trustees. The criticism boiled over in three town hall-style meetings last week hosted for alumni by new school President Rodney Erickson.

According to Dambly, trustees had been advised not to speak because of the ongoing investigations but changed their minds following the town halls.

They began a series of interviews this week with media outlets. Also sitting in Thursday's interview with the AP was Lanny Davis, a prominent Washington attorney who has been retained by Erickson and the trustees as an adviser.

"They have some good, athletic guards and will challenge us on the perimeter," Gosar said of Eastern Utah, which is coached by Brian Edelstein. He took over before the season started after the sudden death of head coach Brad Barton, who died of complications from diabetes. "We have to find a way to bounce back this weekend."

The CSI women (9-9, 1-2) have the great challenge of stopping the nation's leading scorer and reigning NJCAA player of the week for this past week, Priscila Santos.

Santos, a sophomore from Brazil, is averaging 30.7 points for the 11-7, 3-0 (other) Golden Eagles. Last weekend, she had 32 points and 12 rebounds in USU-College of Eastern Utah's win over Salt Lake and the night before, scored 43 to lead her team over Snow.

She also set a USU-College of Eastern Utah single-game scoring record earlier this season, dropping 50 in a 102-32 win over Stone Child (Mont.) College. She takes about half of the team's shots, said CSI head coach Randy Rogers, who plans on having Kylee Schierman defend the combo guard.

"She's legit. She's an older gal, experienced. We did a good job on her last year with Felicity Jones. They really look for her and try to get the ball to her in a good position," said Rogers. "She's very good around the basket and real even-tempered. She doesn't get too excited, doesn't show a lot of emotion, just plays the game."

Before they head to Price, the Golden Eagles have to get through an improved Colorado Northwestern team, which at 9-8, 0-3 has more wins this season than the last four seasons combined.

"They've been in all those games," Rogers said. "Like I've said at the beginning of the season, it isn't an automatic win this season when we go to Rangely."

NOTES: The Golden Eagles have signed guard Shawn Nottingham out of Durham, N.C. He is enrolled at CSI this semester and working out with the team. Gosar said he wanted to get a head start on college. Nottingham will be eligible to suit up for the Golden Eagles in 2012-13.

Bruins

"We knew that with their home court they would have more fans and their band, so we knew we needed to come out more aggressive than they did," Jordan said.

The Bruins' win capped the regular-season sweep of Burley, adding to their 36-29 win on Dec. 15.

Burley took its first lead of the game with 4:12 remaining in the third quarter when Hannah Stanger stole the ball and assisted Kaci Carpenter for a layup.

But Twin Falls answered with a 7-0 run to regain the lead and momentum.

Aubrie Vale led Burley in scoring with 11 points, but the Bruins largely held the Bobcat leading scorer at bay.

Burley starting forward Chelsea Baker went down with an injury with 5:30 remaining in the game and did not return.

Burley travels to Buhl for a nonconference game Saturday.

Big M Middlekauff's Quote of the Day
 "We will open the book. It's pages are blank. We are going to put words on them ourselves. The book is called Opportunity and it's first chapter is New Year's Day."
 Edith Lovejoy Pierce

One day after a stomach bug knocked him out of practice, Giants quarterback Eli Manning was back at practice and feeling "100 percent."

Manning

didn't sideline him and a foot injury two years later couldn't keep him off the field. Manning took over as the active leader in consecutive quarterback starts at the beginning of the season when his brother, Peyton, was sidelined after neck surgery. Manning downplayed his illness and the fuss it created. It marked the first time this season that he was listed on the team's injury report. "I didn't watch too much TV so I didn't see the attention it was getting," he said. "You know, when you get into big games like this any little thing that pops up people make a big deal about. We can put it behind us now and focus on the game." Kevin Gilbride said that Manning took great offense when the offensive coordinator told him he looked pale before practice Thursday. Manning shot back that's the way he always looks in the winter. "We did everything with him," Gilbride said. "Maybe we slowed down a couple of the drills between our work sessions, where the defense is up and we normally do a lot of drills. We did a couple, not quite as many. For the most part. He participated in everything and did everything we normally do." Tackle David Diehl said there has been a little bug going around.

King Learns to Make Peace With Tennis

MELBOURNE, Australia • By 17, Vania King had won her first WTA title and cracked the top 50 in the rankings. There was just one problem — she wasn't sure she actually liked playing tennis. "I came up pretty fast when I was 16½, 17 and I didn't really know why I was good," the American said after her second-round win over 15th-seeded Russian Anastasia Pavlyuchenkova at the Australian Open on Thursday. "I didn't find enjoyment for myself. I was finding enjoyment because I was winning and other people were happy about it." In early 2007, she ended her coaching relationship with her father and went into a "downward spiral." She contemplated quitting tennis and enrolling at Stanford. She stuck with tennis but lackluster results sent her ranking plummeting. Then, at the end of 2008, she started working with Tarik Benhabiles — Andy Roddick's former coach — and everything changed. "He was the first one to say, 'Look, you know, if you want to play, you play. And if you don't want to play, you should stop now,'" she said. Three years later, the 22-year-old King is finally enjoying what she's doing, and succeeding. In 2010, King won the Wimbledon and U.S. Open doubles titles with Yaroslava Shvedova. Her singles ranking is up to No. 66 and she has achieved her best result by reaching the third round at the Australian Open. She next plays former French Open champion Ana Ivanovic. King's relationship with her father is on the mend as well. "I think that helped me a lot with my tennis to have peace, to be balanced in my life, to be balanced off the court," she said.

Vania King of the U.S. hits a forehand return to Russia's Anastasia Pavlyuchenkova during their second round match at the Australian Open in Melbourne, Australia.

Roddick

was ranked No. 1 before he was and someone with one more Grand Slam title. "He's a tough guy to play," said Roddick, now 7-7 against Hewitt for his career. "You can try to ham and egg it against a lot of guys. But he's really intelligent. He knew what was going on." Roddick's limitations were obvious in the second and third sets. He threw his racket into the wall and argued with the chair umpire over a line call. He bristled when a woman shouted, "Come on Lleyton," just as Roddick was about to serve. Roddick had his chances.

He converted the only break-point chance in the first set and even had opportunities after he injured his leg. But when he knew he needed to win two more sets to advance, he called the trainer, then walked over to shake Hewitt's hand. "I was hitting the ball as well as I could from a compromised position and still felt like I was just hanging on," he said. "I don't know that it would have been smart to do that for two more sets. And if somehow you pull a rabbit out of the hat, I don't think you play in two days. If I'm looking at timelines, I think there's three weeks or so before I have to play again. I like those timelines a lot more than two days."

Today is Friday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 2012. There are 346 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight:
On Jan. 20, 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first chief executive to be inaugurated on Jan. 20 instead of March 4.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1265, England's first representative Parliament, which included officials from districts, cities and boroughs, met for the first time.
In 1649, King Charles I of England went on trial, accused of high treason (he was found guilty and executed by month's end).
In 1887, the U.S. Senate approved an agreement to lease Pearl Harbor in Hawaii as a naval base.

In 1936, Britain's King George V died; he was succeeded by Edward VIII.
In 1942, Nazi officials held the notorious Wannsee conference, during which they arrived at their "final solution" that called for exterminating Jews.

In 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard Nixon were sworn in for their second terms of office in a private Sunday ceremony (a public ceremony was held the next day).

In 1961, John F. Kennedy was inaugurated as the 35th president of the United States.

In 1981, Iran released 52 Americans it had held hostage for 444 days, minutes after the presidency had passed from Jimmy Carter to Ronald Reagan.

In 1986, the United States observed the first federal holiday in honor of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

In 1992, an Air Inter Airbus A-320 crashed near Strasbourg, France, killing 87 of the 96 people on board.

In 2001, George Walker Bush became America's 43rd president after one of the most turbulent elections in U.S. history.

In 2009, Barack Obama was sworn in as the nation's 44th, as well as first African-American, president.

Ten years ago: Two Marines were killed, five injured when a U.S. military helicopter crashed in Afghanistan. "A Beautiful Mind" was named best drama and its star, Russell Crowe, the top dramatic actor at the Golden Globe Awards; Sissy Spacek was named best dramatic actress for "In the Bedroom" while "Moulin Rouge" was awarded the Globe for best musical or comedy.

Five years ago: Twenty-five U.S. troops were killed in Iraq, including 12 in a helicopter crash in Baghdad and five in a sophisticated sneak attack in Karbala. Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., launched a trailblazing campaign for the White House, saying in a videotaped message on her Web site: "I'm in, and I'm in to win." Sen. Sam Brownback of Kansas began a long-shot bid for the Republican presidential nomination (he withdrew in October 2007).

One year ago: In a luncheon speech to American business executives in Washington, Chinese President Hu Jintao denied his country was a military threat despite its arms buildup and pressed the U.S. for closer cooperation between the global powers.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"How very weak the very wise, How very small the very great are!"

— William Thackeray

A month or two ago I gave you a story of a hand played by Roger Trezel where he fell into the right line almost by accident. To redress the balance, the following deal, played in Paris by Trezel, has a very different theme.

Trezel had arrived in a great contract (five clubs), but still had to make it. He suspected the spade ace was with East, given West's diamond-king lead from a passed hand. It is hard enough to try to make this contract looking at all four hands, and of course declarer did not have that advantage.

Trezel ruffed the opening lead with a high trump, led the club six to dummy, and ruffed another diamond high. He re-entered dummy by leading the club seven to the 10 and ruffed a third diamond high. This was followed by the heart ace-king and a heart ruff with dummy's last trump. Then came a fourth diamond ruff, again with a high trump.

At this point Trezel had reduced his once proud trump holding to just the club two, accompanied by three little spades. Dummy had king-third of spades and a winning diamond, while East had A-Q-10 of spades along with a "high" trump: the five!

Trezel exited his hand with a trump, discarding a spade from the table. Poor East could do no better than take his club five and his spade ace, but then had to concede the last two tricks to dummy's spade king and winning diamond.

ANSWER: This is the sort of deal that is duck soup if you play inverted minors, whereby a response of two diamonds is forcing for one round and shows at least a limit raise in diamonds. Failing that, your choice is a slightly antipositional invitational call of two no-trump, or a limit-raise to three diamonds, hoping partner does not have precisely three diamonds. I prefer the former action.

DEAR ABBY: I caught my 16-year-old daughter, "Krista," smoking marijuana. I punished her for it, but never told my wife because I was afraid she'd force me to make a decision that I don't want to make.

I have been married to my second wife for three years. For much of that time, Krista has been a nightmare. When she goes to school, more often than not she's in the principal's office for bad behavior. At home she's worse. She doesn't listen to anyone. We have tried every type of punishment we can think of and nothing has worked.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Recently, my wife brought up the idea of sending Krista to a boarding school for troubled teens. At first, the suggestion made me angry, but after the marijuana incident I am more receptive to it. I am wracked with guilt. Sending my daughter away makes me feel like a failure as a father. But there may be no other choice. How does a parent know when enough is enough?

— FED-UP FATHER IN MINNESOTA

DEAR FATHER: Do not send your daughter away to a boarding school for "troubled teens" without first having a psychologist identify what is troubling her. If you do what your wife is suggesting, your daughter could return home with more problems than she left with. Sending her away should be a LAST resort. Some family counseling should be tried first.

DEAR ABBY: A friend has been confiding in me, telling me her husband abuses her. She says it has gone on the entire 12 years they have been together. He does it in front of the kids, sometimes even while she's nursing or holding their youngest. He also threatens to shoot her. I'm afraid for her safety.

She left him once, but went back after he promised to change and temporarily became the charming man she wishes him to be. She knows she needs to leave again, and I have told her I'll help her in any way I can to make it happen. She's trying to hold out until she finishes her degree and can financially support the kids on her own. I'm afraid she won't make it that long.

I feel so helpless. I worry that by standing by and not taking some kind of action, I'll be partly responsible for anything that may happen to the kids. On the other hand, she tells me these things in confidence. What can I do to help?

— TERRIFIED FOR MY FRIEND

DEAR TERRIFIED: Continue encouraging your friend to leave. A man who abuses, terrorizes and threatens to shoot his wife — in front of the children, yet — would have no hesitation about hurting all of them.

By now she should have realized that her abuser will never be the man she imagined him to be. The time to leave is while things are calm — before his next outburst. In order for him to control her, he needs to keep her dependent. If he senses that she's nearing a point where she can support herself and the children without him, he could explode.

Make sure she knows how to contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline. The toll-free number is 800-799-7233. The experts there can help her formulate as safe an escape plan as possible.

IF JANUARY 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Smooth sailing and sunny celestial skies are something to be grateful for in the year to come. Even so, there might be a few obstacles in the road to prevent you from realizing your growing ambitions between now and April. Optimism and a feeling of overall well being will instill a fresh sense of purpose during June. That is a fine time to seek greener pastures, start something of importance or ask for favors. If there is something you truly need, such as a job, better health or a friend, the universe will probably provide it. Remain discreet, respectful and diligent in August for the best results.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mold yourself into a model of mentality. You might be rough around the edges in some areas of etiquette, but your brain is a finely tuned engine that lets you grasp the facts with acuity. Set a good example.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Overcome objections by opening the doors to frank discussion. You don't need to hide the truth or facts. Emphasize the mutual benefits rather than pointing out the weaknesses when dealing with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Uncover a cover up of the salient facts. It is time to expose the truth even if it might jeopardize your position. Once all the cards are on the table, you will find that everyone breathes a bit easier.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Penny pinchers never panic. All of your careful hoarding will pay off when you find the sale of a lifetime. It could be that someone offers you exactly what you need at a reasonable price today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Everything that goes up must come down. Yesterday's "downers" may act as a springboard to an uplifting experience. Study hard and gain an education in areas where you have found a weakness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This might be an opportune to ask for a favor. Someone might be willing to make an exception so that you can fit family activities into a busy schedule. You could be granted an extension on a due date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There could be a misunderstanding. It may take time for the chill of antagonism to recede if there was an argument during the last few days. Don't let stubbornness keep you and a loved one apart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accentuate the positive. You might benefit by sharing inspirational affirmations and your wisdom with others. If you have offended someone inadvertently, you can offer an acceptable apology.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Admit to your faults and own up to your mistakes. A sincere attitude will win respect; your errors will be forgiven and quickly forgotten. Cultivate a forgiving, generous attitude for the best success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look at every stumbling block as an opportunity. It is time to show off your leadership abilities. If you hold up your end of the bargain, others will do likewise. Worries and concerns will dissipate quickly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might fall prey to wishful thinking. Don't ignore the people who support and appreciate you — even if you think you can do better elsewhere. It is in your best interest to go along with the crowd.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you ask for forgiveness it will be granted, but don't take it for granted that you deserve forgiveness. You should never be too casual in a formal situation. Make it a point to avoid off-hand remarks.
