Charter Schools Eye Future Growth

As their open enrollment periods approach, a group of Magic Valley charter schools have different ideas to grow and evolve.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Starting a charter school from the ground up isn't easy. Plus, there aren't any guarantees of how many students will show up on the first day. It's a situation that rings true for Heritage Academy in Jerome, a public charter school in its first year of operation. "We were a little concerned last summer when we opened our doors," Principal Randy Reddington said, since only 130 students were registered — fewer than expected. Heritage Academy uses a schoolwide enrichment model that's designed to identify each student's talents. As part of the model, students are divided into small clusters based on their interests. Midway through the year, enrollment is now near the 150-student cap allowed in the school's charter, and expansion is on the horizon. Reddington plans to seek the Idaho Public Charter School Commission's permission next month to increase Herigate's enrollment.

Next year, the goal is to have separate fifth- and sixth-grade classes, which are combined this year. Ultimately, Reddington said he'd like to have two classes per grade level with about 350 students total. The school isn't alone in looking to the future. Public charter schools across the Magic Valley are either currently accepting applications for new students for next year, or will soon.

Xavier Charter School
At Xavier Charter School, enrollment has remained fairly static at about 635 students. But the Twin Falls school is looking to expand its programs for older students. "We hope to see an increase in enrollment at the high school level," Lead Teacher Thad Biggers said. This year, 16 seniors will graduate from Xavier. Despite plans to expand at the higher grade levels, there's a waiting list for the lower grades. Also, Interim Administrator Mel Wiseman said he thinks the school building is near capacity. Open Enrollment Area charter schools are already accepting enrollment applications for next year, or will start doing so soon. To learn more: • Xavier Charter School (Twin Falls) — Applications will be accepted from Feb. 1-March 31. A lottery will be held April 16 for open positions and parents will receive notification letters within 10 days. For more information, call the school at 734-3947 or visit www.xaviercharter.org. • Wings Charter Middle School (Twin Falls) — Open enrollment begins in February and continues through March.

For more information, visit the school at 771 North College Road or visit www.wingscharterschool.org. • Heritage Academy (Jerome) — Applications are being accepted until April 2 and openings will be filled using a lottery system. To receive an application packet, stop by the school at 500 S. Lincoln Ave. in Jerome or visit heritageacademyid.org. • North Valley Academy (Gooding) - Open enrollment continues until April 3 and a lottery will be April 7. A Maverik of an idea: Does a Maverik convenience store at the north-west corner of Addison Avenue and Eastland Drive sound like a good idea to you? Find out what the Twin Falls city Planning and Zoning Commission thinks of the proposal during its 6 p.m. Tuesday meeting at Twin Falls City Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E. If approved, the C-store would be the first part of a two-phase commercial development. CSI gears up for the Legislature: It's college and university budget presen-

Since President Jerry Beck will head to Boise this week, CSI's board of trustees will meet at 11:45 a.m. today in the President's Board Room in the Taylor building. On the agenda: The bid for a new Head Start center in Jerome and the first reading of an item regarding the board's self-evaluation.

Twin Falls Council to Weigh In on Size of Rec. Center

Go big or go home, or play it safe? The city's recreation center committee is seeking help in determining the size of the proposed facility.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls' proposed recreation center could be a modest collection of basketball courts, batting cages and a few specialized areas. Or, it could be a sprawling, $30 million temple of fitness, possibly including interest-specific areas like weight rooms, a spinning area, and topic-specific studios for everything ranging from Zumba to Pilates. The question of which recreation center is right for Twin Falls is one the folks behind the proposal want the Twin Falls City Council's help to answer. More than a year ago, the city formed a 17-member committee to discuss the possible facility. Now, with a couple ideas and a potential site in hand, the committee says it needs help. This much is known: The bulk of committee efforts have gone toward a potential 50,000 square-foot facility that would be located along Maxwell Avenue, south of the railroad tracks and Depot Grill in downtown Twin Falls. The potential site and building are nothing but ideas right now, but such a recreation center would meet the city's current needs, according to the committee. It would cost about $5 million to $6 million to build, and would include four basketball courts, two batting cages, a climbing wall, a running track and various other rooms. The smaller facility is seen as potentially more reasonable than a 130,000 square-foot facility similar to those in Nampa and Coeur d'Alene. Please see REC CENTER, A2

Greek Yogurt On a Growth Spurt

The long-term investments point to a widespread belief that Americans will continue to prefer their yogurt a little thicker than normal.

BY MICHAEL HILL
Associated Press

SOUTH EDMESTON, N.Y. • Chobani is making Greek yogurt as fast as Americans are eating it. Its plant here in upstate New York farm country already pumps out 1.5 million cases of the thick yogurt every week, and pallets are stacked four stories high in the chilled warehouse. But like other Greek yogurt makers, Chobani is expanding. Greek yogurt now accounts for a quarter of the total yogurt market after a dizzying growth spurt that is especially apparent here in the heart of upstate New York. The nation's No. 1 and No. 2 Greek yogurt brands — Chobani and Fage, respectively — are both expanding plants within 60 miles of each other, and another company is building a plant in western New York. The expansions come as the big U.S. yogurt makers are focusing on Greek products, too. Greek yogurt is made a bit differently than the thinner, more watery product that dominated U.S. supermarket shelves for decades. The whey is strained off, leaving a creamier yogurt high in protein and low in fat. While the quick growth has some hallmarks of a food fad — think cupcakes or bubble tea — the long-term investments point to a widespread industry belief that many Americans will continue to like their yogurt a bit richer. "I personally do not believe that the yogurt story has started yet. I believe the yogurt story in this country is about to start," Chobani's founder, Hamdi Ulukaya, said during an interview in his office. "The magnitude hasn't started yet."

Ulukaya has harnessed the Greek yogurt boom more successfully than anyone. In 2005, he bought an old Kraft Foods plant southeast of Syracuse with plans to make the kind of yogurt common in his home country of Turkey. He believed the standard yogurt found on many supermarket shelves "wasn't made right." His company, Agro-Farma, started by making yogurt for Stonyfield Farm and other companies before launching Chobani in 2007 with limited runs to stores in the New York City area. The Chobani plant today bustles with 14 production lines mechanically squirting yogurt into plastic cups that zip down conveyor belts. The company said production will increase from 1.5 million cases a week to more than 2 million when the current $134 million expansion is completed this year. Another $128 million Chobani plant being built 2,000 miles west in Twin Falls will add still more. Please see CHOBANI, A2

About 60 miles north-east, the Greek company Fage is in the early stages of doubling the capacity of its 3-year-old plant in Johnstown, N.Y. to about 160,000 tons of yogurt annually.

By multiple accounts, the seeds of the Greek yogurt boom were planted years ago through Fage imports to New York City. Fage opened its U.S. plant in 2008 to keep up with growing demand. Russell Evans, Fage's marketing director, said sales have grown on average of 50 percent a year for a decade.

"It's going up exponentially every year," he said. "It's constantly expanding."

Though often pricier, Greek yogurt is increasingly becoming a refrigerator staple as consumers seek healthy, "authentic" foods. Kate Winnebeck, a 30-year-old Rochester, N.Y., resident, likes its tanginess, but said it was nutrition that initially attracted her.

"I was looking for ways to get even more protein in to my diet," she said. "And I didn't want to, at the time, eat a lot of eggs in the morning. I don't have time for that. I work full-time."

The NPD Group, a consumer marketing research firm, reports that Greek yogurt appeals most to adult females and that it's more popular in smaller and higher-income households.

The Chobani and Fage two plants are a boon to upstate New York's ailing economy, not only for the more than 1,240 full-time jobs combined, but because of their voracious demand for milk from New York's dairy farmers (it takes roughly four gallons of milk to make one gallon of Greek yogurt). Fifty or more tanker trucks make daily deliveries to the Chobani plant alone.

Little wonder Gov. Andrew Cuomo's administration chipped in $16 million in state incentives for the Chobani expansion, and the governor became personally involved in ironing out a local intra-community dispute that was holding up the Fage expansion.

"It's been very good for the dairy industry," said Greg Wickham, chief executive officer of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., which supplies milk for Chobani.

Another manufacturer, Alpina, plans to open a plant to the west in Batavia this summer that will make both Greek and Swiss-style for a yogurt and granola product.

At least initially, Greek yogurt zoomed to popularity without a lot of attention from the major yogurt makers. Citigroup Global Markets in an analyst report last month said its growth to $1 billion in annual sales — out of total yogurt sales of $4.1 billion — caught the major U.S. yogurt makers "flat-footed." The result: Chobani had 53 percent of the Greek yogurt market, followed by Fage with 17 percent, France's Danone (its subsidiary Dannon makes Oikos) with 14 percent and General Mills (Yoplait Greek) with 5 percent, according to Citigroup.

The big players have clearly taken steps to grab some of the market back. General Mills added capacity and Dannon is in the process now, according to representatives of the two companies. General Mills this winter will introduce Yoplait Greek Parfaits with granola and new flavors of Yoplait Greek yogurt in multi-packs.

"I think that you're going to see a very high level of innovation in the yogurt category generally and in Greek yogurt specifically over the next 6 to 12 months," General Mills chief executive officer Kendall J. Powell told a conference call with analysts last month.

General Mills and Dannon also began TV advertising this past summer. Oikos took direct aim at Chobani with a TV ad claiming their Greek yogurt was preferred 2-to-1 in a taste test.

UBS analyst David Palmer said Greek yogurt's momentum continues and the market shift to Chobani has accelerated.

Still unclear is where the Greek market will top out, or whether it will crash back to earth like the old low-carb craze. Few expect a drop off anytime soon.

"We believe it is not a fad but rather a part of the market that is here to stay," said Dannon spokesman Michael Neuwirth said. "At what level, I can't predict."

One note of caution comes from one of Greek yogurt's U.S. pioneers, outgoing Stonyfield CEO Gary Hirshberg, who said he's noticed "a little bit of a rebound" for regular yogurt recently. He said just recently some supermarkets that swapped out regular Stonyfield yogurt for its Greek Oikos yogurt (Danone owns a majority share of Stonyfield) have asked to swap back.

"It's hard to tell where this is going," Hirshberg said.

Xavier — which has students in kindergarten through 12th grade — uses a European, classical model of education. The school also has an emphasis on the arts and offers a variety of dance and music classes.

North Valley Academy

Enrollment at North Valley Academy in Gooding has grown a bit each year. However, Board Chairwoman Deby Infanger said there's still room for growth.

This year, about 260 students are enrolled in the K-12 school. Many students, Infanger said, used to be home-schooled or live outside the Gooding area.

A few students are participating in a new blended program, in which they complete schoolwork online from home and still participate in school activities at least once per week.

Classes are offered through an online provider. In the future, though, the goal is to put North Valley Academy's own class material online instead.

Infanger said the academy's focus is to create patriotic and educated leaders. She also cited the school's full-day kindergarten and orchestra program as strengths.

Wings Charter Middle School

Wings Charter Middle School in Twin Falls is also looking toward expansion. This year, there are about 175 students in grades 6-8.

Administrator Letha Blick said she'd like to see more students and teachers, since the school's charter can accommodate up to 240 students.

Looking to the future, the lease on the school's current North College Road facility will be up in another two years. After that, Blick said school officials look for a site to build a new campus.

There's a wide variety of students who attend the school — gifted students who like to do independent projects, those who struggle with certain academic subjects and some who used to attend private schools or were home-schooled.

Blick said students are able to participate in extracurricular activities, such as music and sports, through the Twin Falls School District.

1 Dead, 1 Injured in SW Idaho Shooting

NAMPA • Nampa police say they are investigating what appears to be a murder followed by an attempted suicide at the Evergreen Mobile Home Park.

Police Chief LeRoy Forsman says a 35-year-old woman died Saturday from an apparent gunshot wound.

He says a 35-year-old man in the same room was alive but unresponsive. He also had an apparent gunshot wound. He was transported to a local hospital.

Police say they are investigating the shooting as a murder-attempted suicide based on information from family members in the home at the time of the shootings.

Rec Center

Such a facility could cost more than $25 million.

While the committee has discussed that option, it hasn't gone into great detail, fearing the time would be wasted if a larger facility failed to gain the council's interest.

The council won't be asked to approve any plans tonight — just to give the rec. center idea an identity going forward. Once the size of the facility is agreed upon, the committee says it will move forward to figure out maintenance and operating costs, and potential revenue sources and partnerships.

The rec. center committee says it can have a final recommendation for the council within four months after receiving council direction.

In Other Business

Here's a look at what else the Twin Falls City Council will tackle during its 5 p.m. meeting tonight at Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E.

- The council will consider lawyer John Lezamis's appeal of the city Planning and Zoning Commission's decision to grant a special use permit for Magic Valley Flight Simulation's zip line aerial tour business near Canyon Springs Golf Course (for more, visit bit.ly/xQVqiG online or read last Friday's Times-News).
- Consideration of awarding a nearly $850,000 bid to Stutzman, Inc., of Twin Falls for the 2012 Northeast Sewer Stage 2 Project. The three-stage sewer expansion would afford the city further residential, commercial and industrial growth on 550 acres.

- Consideration of a $2.8 million contract from CH2M HILL, for operation and maintenance of the city's waste treatment plant, industrial pre-treatment program and associated sewer lift stations. The contract, which has been amended since 1985, represents no cost increase from the prior fiscal year, according to city documents.
- A 6 p.m. public hearing will be held on a request for a zoning change for 12 1/2 acres of the Fieldstone Subdivision along Cheney Drive West. The mixed-use development proposal was denied, 4-3, during a Dec. 13 P&Z hearing.

TRIPLE A: ACADEMIC, ATHLETIC AND ARTISTIC ACHIEVEMENT

Magic Valley's Students of the Week

Academic • Twin Falls John Loeb

Loeb is a bright, mature, and ambitious young man. He has had a 4.0 grade-point average throughout high school while taking an array of rigorous courses, including Advanced Placement and dual-credit. John is also learning German online from home. Academics seem to come easily to John, but that's a result of his consistent study habits and hard work. Besides a rigorous academic schedule, John has played piano for most of his life, is a debate captain, a member of the National Honor Society and the VP of Junior State of America. In his free time John enjoys traveling, exploring different cultures and reading.

Artist • Shoshone Scott Kerner

Scott, a junior, has a gift: He can draw what he sees. Put a pencil in his hand, give him an interesting photo or still life, come back an hour later and you will marvel at Scott's gift. He is motivated, almost driven, to create. He can do amazing things with shading using pencils. His rendering skills are excellent and he can work in any medium with pleasing results. The staff and students of Shoshone are always amazed at the quality of his artwork.

Study: Idaho Ranchers, Farmers Had Good Year

With prices rising, Gem State farm income rose to $2.6 billion in 2011

LEWISTON (AP) • A study by the University of Idaho has found that 2011 cash receipts for Idaho's farmers and ranchers rose 29 percent from the previous year.

The university's College of Agricultural and Life Sciences recently released the report called The Financial Condition of Idaho Agriculture: 2011 Projections. The report, backed by state agricultural research and extension service funding, said net farm income rose to $2.6 billion in 2011.

"The prices of almost all major commodities in the state are higher than they were the year before," Paul Patterson, one of the authors of the report, told the Lewiston Tribune.

Hay prices are at an all-time high, averaging $240 to $260 a ton, said Rick Waitley, executive director of the Idaho Hay and Forage Association. He said increased demand from Idaho cattle-men and dairymen, higher demand from out of state, and a good spring cutting in 2011 are some of the reasons for the increase in farmer's revenues.

Patterson said countries in Asia, which are consumers of Northwest exports, have bounced back faster economically, adding to the good year for Idaho growers.

The good year for farmers appears to be spreading to other parts of the economy.

"I know people are buying more equipment because they don't want to pay much in taxes and buying new equipment allows them to depreciate that," said Kevin Dainty, a farm loan officer with Farm Credit Services in Lewiston.

"They're definitely doing better, especially in this region with decent prices and yield being so strong," he said. "That definitely helped out. A lot of them saved that cash in case something does pop up and some people are still holding on to their crops for tax purposes, keeping their product on hand rather than selling (all at once) and having a huge tax bill."

Dennis Guettinger, manager of Pape Machinery Inc. in Moscow, said a lot of factors go in to whether farmers and ranchers buy new equipment.

"We have a presidential election coming up, and the largest winter wheat planting in the U.S. is in the ground," he said. "And we never know what fuel prices are going to do."

Bus ridership up in WRV

KETCHUM (AP) • The Mountain Rides Transportation Authority in central Idaho says the number of passengers it carried in 2011 is second only to 1994.

Mountain Rides officials say ridership for 2011 is listed at 482,259, up 15 percent from 2010. The only year Mountain Rides had more passengers was 1994 with 495,783.

The Idaho Mountain Express reports that the high number in 1994 is attributed to a higher skier count at Bald Mountain.

Idaho Tax Commission Chief Bob Geddes Considers an Exit Strategy

The Monsanto Co. geologist from eastern Idaho, asked by the governor to lead the state's embattled tax commission, says he hasn't grown passionate about the Gem State's tax system.

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Last January, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter called on Idaho Senate President Pro Tem Bob Geddes to take the reins at the State Tax Commission, after complaints its former chairman had inappropriately assisted friends and family.

Geddes agreed, saying that while his background was rocks, not tax tables — he's a geologist from Monsanto Co.'s eastern Idaho phosphate mines — he'd do his best to help revive the agency's reputation. In case it didn't work out, Geddes and Otter negotiated a deal: He'd take a year's leave of absence from Monsanto, an arrangement that would allow him to return to his employer of 26 years, if he chose.

One year later, Geddes' leave has expired. After missing out on a job to run the company's mining operations recently, the 56-year-old concedes he's open to other options. The fact is, he simply hasn't grown passionate about Idaho's tax system and would like to move on — either somewhere else in state government or at his former employer, if another job opens up.

Even being the longest-serving Idaho Senate leader — Geddes was pro tem for a decade — hasn't made that existential question of "What comes next?" any easier to answer.

"I'm a geologist," Geddes said, in a recent interview. "I thrived on challenges and aspects of being engaged with science, and that's where my life occupation took me. Never once did I ever dream or aspire to be in charge at the Tax Commission. Quite honestly, taxes, the nature of taxes, the management of taxes, still does not really light up my life."

Geddes' chairmanship expires April 1, 2013. In an interview, he left open whether he'll finish it, but said for the time being he doesn't have any other offers.

He said his toughest challenge hasn't been learning about taxes, as he'd originally expected, rather figuring out how to retain valuable employees at a time when their pay was frozen or cut amid a state budget crisis. Geddes also said his 12-month stint has opened his eyes, even more than 16 years in the Legislature did, to the hard work and dedication of state employees.

Tax Commission employees were shocked Friday to learn that he's considering greener pastures. They think he's done a great job, especially in restoring a convivial office atmosphere.

"He's done great," said David Langhorst, a former state senator from Boise and a Democratic tax commissioner. "The attitude and atmosphere is 180 degrees different than it was. We are working together so much better than before, and frankly, from a personal standpoint, Bob is managing the agency just like I would. I have no fault with Bob; even if he intended to come here short-term, we needed that kind of sea change."

When Geddes arrived at the Tax Commission on Jan. 18, 2011, it was in turmoil. Royce Chigbrow, Otter's previous appointee, had just resigned after falling out with his employees and other commissioners.

There were internal complaints that Chigbrow had involved himself in tax cases involving his son's accounting firm, inappropriately handled taxpayers' money and disclosed what should have been confidential information about an Idaho company's tax problems to an old friend who had been fired from that company. However, a county prosecutor investigation didn't produce any charges, in part because the statute of limitations had expired.

Otter looked to Geddes, saying he needed somebody with the Soda Springs Republican's reputation to help remove the Tax Commission from an uncomfortable media spotlight. He agreed to let Geddes try it out, based on the understanding that they'd discuss the situation in a year.

"What we were trying to do was straighten it out," Otter told The Associated Press last week. "We figured Bob was the best person to get the confidence of the Legislature back. Knowing it was the possibility of only being a year, I was willing to accept that, being the quick study that Bob is."

Geddes said he took the Monsanto leave without pay or benefits, rather than retire, because he wanted to keep his prospects alive if the Tax Commission gig didn't pan out.

"I tried to make myself a little safety net that, should I not fall in love with the Tax Commission, that I would have some recourse to go back to," Geddes said.

His leave of absence at Monsanto ended Wednesday.

The job he wanted there, to head the St. Louis-based agricultural company's mining business, would have been a big promotion, compared to his previous Monsanto position. "I didn't get it," Geddes says, the disappointment in his voice palpable.

Now, he hopes to meet with Otter again soon to discuss what's next.

Returning to eastern Idaho isn't out of the question, he said, describing with fondness the seemingly endless snows that blanket the region's mile-high landscape for months.

But such a move also represents logistical challenges: Geddes several years ago sold his home in Soda Springs, in the district he represented for nine terms, and bought a house west of Boise, so he and his wife, Tammy, could be nearer their children.

"The bottom line is, I need to be able to continue to keep my options open," Geddes said.

1 DEAD, 2 INJURED IN SIX-VEHICLE CRASH

BONNER COUNTY DAILY BEE

COCOLALLA • One person was killed and several others injured after a multi-vehicle accident Saturday morning on U.S. 95 near Cocolalla Creek closed that portion of the highway for more than 10 hours

Idaho State Police said the accident happened after Zachary B. Henager of Temple, Texas, was southbound on U.S. 95 near milepost 459 where the southbound passing lane ends and the northbound passing lane begins when he lost control of his 1994 Mazda coupe at about 8:40 a.m.

Henager went left of the center line, striking head-on a 2012 Mack tractor driven by Richard D. Walston, 58, of Colville, Wash., who was towing an empty flatbed trailer. The coupe was pushed into a ditch on the south side of the highway. Walston lost control of his rig, went left of the center line into the southbound lanes, striking a 2006 Freightliner tractor towing a flatbed.

The trailer of the vehicle, driven by James M. Mady, 49, of Creswell, Ore., was flipped onto its side, blocking both southbound lanes as well as the northbound passing lane while the semi tractor went off into the southbound ditch of U.S. 95. Mady was killed in the accident.

Brian M. Fendos, 39, of Bonnerr Ferry, was southbound in a 2004 Peterbilt tractor towing an empty gasoline tank trailer when Henager lost control, and took evasive measures to miss Henager as he went off the southbound shoulder. According to the ISP press release, Fendos struck a northbound 2005 Volvo semi tractor towing a livestock trailer driven by Pavlo P. Shevchuk, 21, of Manitoba, Canada. Shevchuk lost control and drove into a northbound ditch.

Henager was taken by MedStar to Kootenai Medical Center in Coeur d'Alene, where he was listed between serious and critical condition.

Walston was taken to Bonner General Hospital in Sandpoint and then flown by MedStar to Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane. He was in serious condition.

Rep. Giffords to Resign This Week

Giffords was shot in the head and grievously wounded last January as she was meeting with constituents outside a supermarket in Tucson, Ariz.

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Rep. Gabrielle Giffords of Arizona announced Sunday she intends to resign from Congress this week to concentrate on recovering from wounds suffered in an assassination attempt a little more than a year ago that shook the country.

“I don’t remember much from that horrible day, but I will never forget the trust you placed in me to be your voice,” the Democratic lawmaker said on a video posted without prior notice on her Facebook page.

“I’m getting better. Every day my spirit is high,” she said. “I have more work to do on my recovery. So to do what’s best for Arizona, I will step down this week.”

Giffords was shot in the head and grievously wounded last January as she was meeting with constituents outside a supermarket in Tucson, Ariz. Her progress had seemed remarkable, to the point that she was able to walk dramatically into the House chamber last August to cast a vote.

Her shooting prompted an agonizing national debate about super-charged rhetoric in political campaigns, although the man charged in the shooting later turned out to be mentally ill.

In Washington, members of Congress were told to pay more attention to their physical security. Legislation was introduced to ban high-capacity ammunition clips, although it never advanced.

Under state law, Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer must call a special election to fill out the remainder of Giffords’ term.

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said he saluted Giffords “for her service and for the courage and perseverance she has shown in the face of tragedy. She will be missed.”

In a statement, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi of California said that “since the tragic events one year ago, Gabby has been an inspiring symbol of determination and courage to millions of Americans.”

Democratic officials had held out hope for months that the congresswoman might recover sufficiently to run for re-election or even become a candidate to replace retiring Republican Sen. Jon Kyl.

Open for Business

IRAN’S GULF SMUGGLERS FEEL BLOWBACK FROM TENSIONS

Even as sanctions squeeze Iran ever tighter, there’s one clandestine route that remains open for business: A short sea corridor across the Persian Gulf connecting a rocky nub of Oman and the Iranian coast about 35 miles away.

BY BRIAN MURPHY

KHASAB, Oman • By dawn, the unmarked speedboats from Iran pull into port. By dusk, they are racing back across the Strait of Hormuz loaded with smuggled consumer goods ranging from Chinese-made shoes to cut flowers from Holland.

Even as sanctions squeeze Iran ever tighter, there’s one clandestine route that remains open for business: A short sea corridor across the Persian Gulf connecting a rocky nub of Oman and the Iranian coast about 35 miles away.

Yet even this established smugglers’ path is now feeling the bite from the pressures on Iran over its nuclear program.

Business is sharply down, the middlemen and boat crews say, as the slumping Iranian currency leaves fewer customers for the smuggled wares. At the same time, the risks of interception are higher as Iranian authorities step up patrols near the strategic oil tanker lanes at the mouth of the Gulf.

The strait, which is the only access in and out of the Gulf, has been the scene of Cold War-style brinkmanship between Iran and the West after Tehran last month threatened to block the passageway for about one-sixth of the world’s oil in retaliation for new U.S. sanctions.

“We used to make two or three trips across every day. Now, it’s maybe one,” said an Iranian middleman, who gave only his first name, Agheel, to protect his identity from authorities in his homeland.

He watched crews load up a pickup truck with bolts of fabric from Pakistan and table-size boxes of cut flowers from the Netherlands, before the trucks headed off through the treeless mountains to Khasab port.

The operation smuggles in merchandise to avoid Iranian tariffs and to bring in American and European products that have disappeared from Iranian markets because of international sanctions. Experts note that the consumer items pose no real challenge to efforts to block material with military or nuclear uses.

“Still, it shows you can’t close off all channels into Iran no matter how hard you try,” said Paul Rogers, who follows security affairs at Bradford University in Britain.

Yemen’s President Leaves for U.S., Hands Over Power

BY AHMED AL-HAJ
and BEN HUBBARD
Associated Press

SANAA, Yemen • Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh left his battered nation Sunday on his way to the U.S. for medical treatment after passing power to his deputy and asking for forgiveness for any “short-comings” during his 33-year rein.

But in a sign that Saleh’s role as Yemen’s top power broker is likely far from over, he said he would return to Yemen before the official power transfer next month to serve as the head of his ruling party.

Saleh’s departure marks a small achievement in the months of diplomatic efforts by the U.S. and Yemen’s powerful Gulf neighbors to ease the nearly year-old political crisis in the Arab world’s poorest country. An active al-Qaida branch there has taken advantage of the turmoil, stepping up operations and seizing territory.

After months of diplomatic pressure and mass protests calling for his ouster, Saleh signed a deal in November to transfer authority to his vice president in exchange for immunity from prosecution. Still, Saleh continued to exercise power behind the scenes, sparking accusations he sought to scuttle the deal and cling to power.

His departure could help the deal go forward.

Presidential spokesman Ahmed al-Soufi told The Associated Press that Saleh left Yemen’s capital Sanaa late Sunday on a plane headed for the Gulf sultanate of Oman. He did not say how long Saleh would remain there, but added that he would make “another stop before heading to the United States of America.”

Health Care Overhaul Lags in Many States

If problems continue, it will mean disparities and delays from state to state in carrying out expansion of health insurance scheduled for 2014.

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Here’s a reality check for President Barack Obama’s health overhaul: Three out of four uninsured Americans live in states that have yet to figure out how to deliver on its promise of affordable medical care.

This is the year that will make or break the health care law. States were supposed to be partners in carrying out the biggest safety net expansion since Medicare and Medicaid, and the White House claims they’re making steady progress.

But an analysis by The Associated Press shows that states are moving in fits and starts. Combined with new insurance coverage estimates from the nonpartisan Urban Institute, it reveals a patchwork nation.

Such uneven progress could have real consequences.

If it continues, it will mean disparities and delays from state to state in carrying out an immense expansion of health insurance scheduled in the law for 2014. That could happen even if the Supreme Court upholds Obama’s law, called the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

“There will be something there, but if it doesn’t mesh with the state’s culture and if the state is not really supporting it, that certainly won’t help it succeed,” said Urban Institute senior researcher Matthew Buettgens.

The 13 states that have adopted a plan are home to only 1 in 4 of the uninsured. An additional 17 states are making headway, but it’s not clear all will succeed. The 20 states lagging behind account for the biggest share of the uninsured, 42 percent.

Among the lagging states are four

Detective in Simpson-Goldman Murder Investigation Dies at 70

Philip Vannatter also investigated and arrested Roman Polanski, touching off an international legal saga over child sex charges.

BY CHRISTOPHER WEBER
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Philip Vannatter, the Los Angeles police detective who served as a lead investigator in the 1994 murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, has died in Southern California, according to his brother. He was 70.

Vannatter died Friday at a Santa Clarita hospital of complications from cancer, his brother Joe Vannatter told The Associated Press on Sunday.

He was among the first detectives on the scene at former football star O.J. Simpson's mansion in June 1994, following the stabbing deaths of Simpson's wife Nicole and her friend, Ron Goldman. Vannatter testified at the murder trial, at which Simpson was acquitted.

In 1977, Vannatter conducted the investigation that led to the arrest of film director Roman Polanski on charges he drugged and had unlawful sex with a 13-year-old girl.

A 28-year veteran with the LAPD, where he spent most of his career as a homicide detective, Vannatter retired from the force in 1995 but continued on as a consultant for cold case murders.

"He was a very devoted detective," Joe Vannatter said, adding his brother worked some 250 murder cases in his career. "The last time I saw him he had gotten a call from LAPD that they solved a homicide he was involved in 30 years ago. He took great pride in that."

Vannatter arrested Polanski in the lobby of the Beverly Wilshire hotel in Beverly Hills, kicking off an international legal saga that escalated when the director fled to France after he was convicted. As he put the cuffs on, Vannatter said he found Polanski was clutching a Quaalude, the drug he was accused of giving his young victim.

Vannatter had planned to retire in late 1994 but instead spent more than a year in the middle of the Simpson trial. Along with fellow detective Mark Furman, Vannatter's name often featured in headlines and his face was a common sight on cable news shows.

Defense lawyers took aim at Vannatter's truthfulness, suggesting police set out to get Simpson as soon as his ex-wife was found slain.

The defense argued that the search of Simpson's estate was illegal and that all evidence seized — including a bloody glove, bloody socks and bloody drops — should be thrown out.

On the witness stand, Vannatter sharply defended the actions of detectives at for the equivalent of about $1,350 under current exchange rates. The truck pulling out of the warehouse represented a potential return of about $4,500.

"If we don't get caught," he added.

The smugglers have their ways of avoiding Iranian authorities.

Spotters off the coast — on the island of Qeshm and near the port of Bandar Abbas — call in coast guard movements to Khasab. The speedboat drivers keep close attention to the water conditions on the Strait and try to approach the Iranian coast just after sunset. The trip can take as little as 90 minutes in calm seas and up to four hours in rough water in the stripped down stripped-down 16-foot fiberglass boats.

Agheel's truck passed through the Khasab customs station at midday and then down a strip of hard-scrabble road.

At the port — almost in the shadow of a Costa cruise ship making a day stop — dozens of boats were being packed and secured for the trip. There were no names or markings on the speedboats. But the items loaded on carried familiar logos: LG 42-inch flatscreen TVs, Discovery Channel DVDs, Panasonic microwaves, Yamaha motorcycle parts. Also in the stacks were textiles, satellite dishes and Chinese-made clothes and shoes.

One boat driver, who gave his name only as Aziz, had a breakfast of eggs, beans and Mountain Dew as he waited for the day's shipment to be loaded for the return run to Qeshm, a long arrow-shaped island near the Iranian coast and a main waystation for the smugglers.

Months ago, he could make as many trips as possible because the merchants in Iran were demanding goods.

But now the struggling Iranian rial — dragged down partly by U.S.-led sanctions that could target Iran's Central Bank — has put many things out of reach for Iranians, he said.

"No one wants to buy because the (rial) rate is not stable," he said.

He also said the Iranian coastal patrols have been boosted amid the escalating tensions over the Strait.

the crime scene. Two judges upheld the search on the basis of Vannatter's and other detectives' testimony that they were trying to inform Simpson of the death and that it became an emergency after blood was discovered on Simpson's Bronco and they feared people in Simpson's house might be injured.

"I don't think anybody's ever been in the news like that. ... It's history now. Obviously we're disgusted about what happened," Vannatter said in 1995 of Simpson's acquittal.

Joe Vannatter said his brother took the spotlight — and the criticisms — that came with the Simpson trial in stride.

"He was very upbeat and he knew he did the right thing," Joe Vannatter said.

with arguably the most to gain. Texas, Florida, Georgia and Ohio together would add more than 7 million people to the insurance rolls, according to Urban Institute estimates, reducing the annual burden of charity care by $10.7 billion.

"It's not that we want something for free, but we want something we can afford," said Vicki McCuiston of Driftwood, Texas, who works two part-time jobs and is uninsured. With the nation's highest uninsured rate, her state has made little progress.

The Obama administration says McCuiston and others in the same predicament have nothing to fear. "The fact of states moving at different rates does not create disparities for a particular state's uninsured population," said Steve Larsen, director of the Center for Consumer Information and Insurance Oversight at the federal Department of Health and Human Services.

That's because the law says that if a state isn't ready, the federal government will step in. Larsen insists the government will be ready, but it's not as easy as handing out insurance cards.

Someone has to set up health insurance exchanges, new one-stop supermarkets with online and landline capabilities for those who buy coverage individually.

A secure infrastructure must be created to verify income, legal residency and other personal information, and smooth enrollment in private insurance plans or Medicaid. Many middle-class households will be eligible for tax credits to help pay premiums for private coverage. Separate exchanges must be created for small businesses.

"It's a very heavy lift," said California's health secretary, Diana Dooley, whose state was one of the first to approve a plan. "Coverage is certainly important, but it's not the only part. It is very complex."

No Return for Evicted Detroit Woman, 101

DETROIT (AP) • The federal government now says a 101-year-old Detroit woman it promised could move back into her foreclosed home four months ago can't return because the building's unsanitary and unsafe.

Texana Hollis was evicted Sept. 12 and her belongings placed outside after her 65-year-old son failed to pay property taxes linked to a reverse mortgage and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development foreclosed on the home.

Two days later, the department said she could return. But now, HUD said it won't let Hollis move back in because of the house's condition. She had lived there about 60 years.

"Here I am, 100 years old, and don't have a home," Hollis said, rounding off her age. "Oh Lord, help me."

Housing spokesman Brian Sullivan told The Detroit News that an inspection determined the house "was completely unsuitable for a person to live in."

HUD doesn't want to pay to fix up the house, but Sullivan said the department's seeking other agencies that might help with the work and get Hollis back into her home.

"We're not giving up," Sullivan said.

coverage, more than half of the 12.7 million uninsured in the states with a plan. An estimated 2.9 million Californians would gain coverage, according to the Urban Institute's research, funded by the nonpartisan Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Democrats who wrote the overhaul law had hoped that most states would be willing partners, putting aside partisan differences to build the exchanges and help cover more than 30 million uninsured nationally. It's not turning out that way.

Some states, mainly those led by Democrats, are far along. Others, usually led by Republicans, have done little. Separately, about half the states are suing to overturn the law.

Time is running out for states, which must have their plans ready for a federal approval deadline of Jan. 1, 2013. Those not ready risk triggering the default requirement that Washington run their exchange.

Yet in states where Republican repudiation of the health care law has blocked exchanges, there's little incentive to advance before the Supreme Court rules. A decision is expected this summer, and many state legislatures aren't scheduled to meet past late spring.

The result if the law is upheld could be greater federal sway over health care in the states, the very outcome conservatives say they want to prevent.

"If you give states the opportunity to decide their own destiny, and some choose to ignore it for partisan reasons, they almost make the case against themselves for more federal intervention," said Sen. Ben Nelson, D-Neb.

A conservative, Nelson was on the winning side of a heated argument among Democrats over who should run exchanges, the feds or the states. Liberals lost their demand for a federal exchange, insulated from state politics.

"It's pretty hard to take care of the states when they don't take care of themselves," said Nelson, who regrets that the concession he fought for has been dismissed by so many states.

OPINION

"I think that's what appealed to people, aside from the fact that her personality on and off the stage was so huge and irrepressible. She was ribald and raunchy and dignified, classy and strong and vulnerable all at the same time, which is what us as women really relate to."

Bonnie Raitt after the death of R&B icon Etta James at age 73.

THEIR VIEW

If Taxpayers Paid What They Owed, Deficits Would Vanish

The following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Wednesday:

American wage-earners soon will begin receiving W-2 forms from their employers, signaling that the annual rite of paying income taxes is upon us. Most of us, anyway.

On Jan. 6, the Internal Revenue Service released an estimate of the so-called "tax gap," the difference between how much is owed to the government and how much actually gets paid. In tax year 2006 (it takes a while for the IRS to comb through the statistics, so the job is done only every five years) Americans owed $450 billion more in income taxes than they actually paid.

Assuming this figure is roughly the same every year and allowing for inflation, that would be a $4.5 trillion over 10 years — an amount that exceeds what the Simpson-Bowles deficit-reduction committee said is necessary to bring federal deficits under control.

According to the IRS, 83.1 percent of American taxpayers paid what they owed in 2006, down slightly from the 83.7 percent compliance rate in 2001, the last time the tax gap was estimated. The IRS figures it eventually will track down and collect $65 billion of the $450 million shortfall from 2006, bringing the compliance rate to 85.5 percent.

The tax gap is a separate issue from tax equity, the lack of which allows billionaires like Warren Buffett and millionaires like Mitt Romney to pay taxes at roughly the same 15 percent effective rate as middle-income Americans. This may be wrong, but it's not illegal. Tax evasion is.

Depending on your political persuasion, the $450 billion gap suggests that (a) patriots are managing to keep 14.5 percent of their money that the government otherwise would "confiscate," or (b) tax cheats are shorting the government one out of every seven dollars owed for what Justice Holmes called "the price of civilization."

Odds are that if you're a wage-earner or executive who has taxes withheld from his paycheck, you're likely to be in compliance. While some wage earners cheat on taxes — usually by taking deductions to which they're not entitled — the threat (however remote) of an audit keeps most people honest.

The biggest part of the tax gap comes from black-market or gray-market businesses — everything from a shade-tree mechanic who takes $100 in cash for a brake job to millions of dollars in diamonds changing hands.

Non-compliance (such a nice name for stealing) also is prevalent with pension and investment income. Pension funds and brokerage houses report payments to the IRS, but they don't withhold taxes. The weaker the reporting requirements, the more cheating is found.

And then there are our Swiss friends. Since a 2009 scandal involving the Swiss bank UBS — it admitted to helping account holders evade $780 million in U.S. taxes — the IRS has waged a well-publicized campaign to crack the traditional secrecy of Swiss and other offshore banks.

The idea is that average citizens might not complain so much about taxes if they know that the IRS is zealously prosecuting fat cats. The IRS could do more of this if tax-averse congressional Republicans didn't keep cutting its budget and staffing.

Some 30,000 U.S. citizens took advantage of IRS amnesty programs in 2009 and 2011, coming forward with information that helped the IRS recover more than $3 billion from banks and account holders.

The IRS says there won't be any more amnesty programs. It has prosecuted dozens of U.S. tax cheats and their Swiss bank enablers, usually settling for fines and payments of back taxes. Cases are continuing.

People rich enough to have secret Swiss bank accounts usually can afford good lawyers, so most of the cases have ended with plea agreements. That's too bad; the sight of a few dozen millionaire tax cheats being hauled off to prison in handcuffs could go a long way to closing the tax gap.

Paula Deen's Moderation Mantra Won't Beat Diabetes Epidemic

Susan Levin

Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine

It's not the sweet tea. It's the butter, the beef, and the bacon. Paula Deen has finally confirmed rumors that she has diabetes and laid out a plan to fight it — and she even wants to serve as a role model for the millions of other Americans battling this disease. But as a dietitian, I have serious doubts that Deen's plan will put even a dent in our nation's diabetes epidemic.

Deen's main mantra is moderation. You can have that bacon-doughnut burger, the idea goes, as long as you accompany it with a side of pills to counter the effects of this egregiously unhealthy meal. Deen's personal lifestyle changes include cutting down on her sweet tea intake, taking to the treadmill, and signing a lucrative contract to promote an expensive diabetes drug.

Can we get real? I grew up in Alabama, eating Southern cooking. I like Deen, and I'm sorry about her diagnosis. But it's time to admit that modest reforms to profoundly unhealthy eating habits will not rescue anyone from diabetes and obesity — even if you throw in a heaping helping of expensive pharmaceuticals.

Sugary drinks and sedentary lifestyles may contribute to diabetes risk — but if Deen wants to get serious about beating this disease, she needs to take a close look at her own cookbooks. From Deep Fried Lasagna to Bacon Cheeseburger Meatloaf, her recipes are loaded down with high-fat foods that increase the danger of diabetes. Conclusive scientific research shows that people who consume more animal products — more meat, cheese, butter, eggs, milk — have a higher incidence of diabetes.

There's good news though. By removing these same foods from her recipes, Deen may be able to reduce the symptoms of type 2 diabetes — and could even potentially reverse the disease. Studies find that diets free of meat, dairy products, and eggs may help control blood glucose more effectively than a standard diabetes diet and may be more effective than diabetes drugs.

This is bad news for Novo Nordisk, the pharmaceutical giant that has made a deal with Deen. But it could actually save Deen's life. In a clinical study our organization conducted, participants with type 2 diabetes who switched to a vegan diet saw pounds melt away. Their LDL ("bad") cholesterol dropped, and many were even able to reduce — or even eliminate — their diabetes medications.

Deen seems to realize that her diagnosis is not just a personal matter since so many Americans suffer from type 2 diabetes — and since so many look to her for cooking guidance. More than 100 million Americans have either diabetes or prediabetes. But so far, Deen is offering poor guidance to other Americans fighting this debilitating disease.

On her new Diabetes in a New Light website, Deen has rolled out "healthier" versions of some of her recipes, including Lasagna in a New Light. The new recipe contains eggs, beef, and seven kinds of cheese.

Below the recipe, visitors find indications and usage information for the side dish, an injectable drug that may improve blood sugar.

Diabetes drugs come with a long list of potential risks. Studies show that the drug Avandia has serious cardiovascular risks and also doubles the risk of bone fractures in women with type 2 diabetes. Vegan diets have only positive side effects. According to the American Dietetic Association, vegetarians and vegans are less prone to heart disease, cancer, and obesity than meat-eaters.

Many people initially balk at the idea of setting aside meat and cheese. But Southern classics actually translate very well into hearty, delicious vegan dishes. I hope Deen will consider canceling the diabetes drug deal and instead encourage Americans to substantially change their diets — filling up on more black-eyed peas and collard greens and steering clear of fried chicken — to fight this deadly disease.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Asbestos Threat is Overstated

Why am I still here?

An article in the Times-News stated that the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center construction was delayed because they found vinyl asbestos tiles in the north hallway.

That article prompted me to ask myself, "Why am I still here?" Growing up, we had asbestos shingles on our house. We had a large sheet of asbestos on the wall behind the wood stove to keep the wall from catching fire, and I laid a lot of vinyl asbestos tiles in my homes over the years. No one in our large family ever had cancer. Possibly too much of anything will cause cancer in a rat. I'm sure working in a mill grinding up asbestos and breathing the dust for a long period would be bad for anyone.

As kids, we rubbed mercury on dimes to make them really shine. I didn't die from that. I wiped up PCB oil on occasion for three years with a rag and wrung it into a pan. I didn't die from that either. Maybe I didn't know I was supposed to die.

God help us if someone should force feed chocolate to rats until they die. Too much of anything is bad for most people. Let's get on with our lives and get the job done.

Today (Jan. 19, 2012), I was reading an article, "Pharmacy hits home run with diet pill that really works."

Well, being today is rainy and cold and I had nothing else to do, I started looking into this pill. What I found out was they use lots of big fancy words and percentages to tell you that in their tests they have found that treating mice and rats with Wakame (that's seaweed, in case you're interested); well, by treating these animals, they were able to reduce their weight 5 percent to 10 percent.

I'm what you call overweight, so naturally I was interested in this miracle. Trouble is, I'm not a mouse or rat. For sure, you can lose weight by eating properly and exercising properly and taking this pill just might help. But me, I think I'll save my money and try to lose weight the way my doctor has it set up for me.

I can't believe the Times-News would waste a half page on this kind of advertisement, but they paid for it, so guess I can't complain; not my paper.

All smiles in South Carolina

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich walks off stage with his granddaughter Maggie Cushman after speaking to a Republican presidential primary night rally, Saturday in Columbia, S.C.

Gingrich’s Amazing Victory in S. Carolina Also Vindication

Painting himself as a no-holds-barred attack dog who will go after President Barack Obama, Gingrich revived his hopes of a GOP nomination in the state that for decades has picked the eventual Republican hopeful.

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. • To say Newt Gingrich capped an extraordinary comeback with a South Carolina victory doesn’t quite capture what happened. It was more like vindication.

The former House speaker came from behind to overtake Mitt Romney on Saturday in a state that for decades has chosen the eventual Republican nominee. On the way there, Gingrich triumphed over months of campaign turmoil and at least two political near-death experiences as well as millions of dollars of attack advertisements and potentially damning personal allegations.

He did it by finding his voice and rallying conservatives with a populist defiance.

“The American people feel that they have elites who have been trying to force us to stop being Americans,” Gingrich told cheering supporters in Columbia after he was declared the victor. “It’s not that I am a good debater. It’s that I articulate the deepest-felt values of the American people.”

It was on the debate stage that the pugnacious Gingrich arguably revived his presidential campaign, not once but twice in the past year, by giving a tea party-infused GOP exactly what it’s hungering for — a no-holds-barred attack dog willing to go after President Barack Obama with abandon. If Gingrich wins the nomination, his confrontational attitude against all things Obama likely will be a big reason Republicans choose him over chief rival Romney.

Gingrich, a political strategist in his own right who has a knack for understanding precisely what the GOP electorate wants, has aggressively taken it to Obama since the moment he entered the race last spring determined to turn his nationwide grassroots network of support that he’s cultivated for a decade into a front-running White House campaign.

But he stumbled early, including by disparaging the House Republicans’ Medicare proposal as “right-wing social engineering” and was all but forced to apologize after the conservative outcry. His campaign nearly imploded over strategy squabbles, with virtually his entire senior staff abandoning him before the summer even began. And he was broke after spending lavishly.

Gingrich spent the next six months running his own campaign on a shoestring. The former college professor used a series of debates in the fall — and the free media they afforded him — to show Republican voters his political and oratory skills. Their adoration ended up catapulting him back into contention in Iowa. He vowed to stay positive and focus on Obama — even as his rivals, sensing a very real threat, went on the attack with a barrage of negative TV advertising.

His rivals and allied groups — primarily the pro-Romney Restore Our Future political action committee and Texas Rep. Ron Paul — castigated him for a tumultuous speakership and career in Washington after Congress, knocking him way off course and nearly bludgeoning him to political death.

It turned out Gingrich didn’t have the money to respond on TV. And his standing slid as the new year began, and he ended up coming in a distant fourth place in the leadoff caucuses on Jan. 3.

He was but an afterthought in the next state to vote, New Hampshire, where he spent a full week on the attack against Romney while complaining about the beating he took in Iowa on the air. But the cash-strapped Gingrich didn’t have money to take his criticism of Romney to the TV airwaves. He seemed completely off his game, losing big in the first-in-the-nation primary state.

Then Sheldon Adelson came to the rescue.

The billionaire casino magnate and longtime Gingrich backer ponied up at least $5 million for an outside group — made up of former Gingrich aides — to help put his buddy back in the game. It wasn’t long before the group — Winning Our Future — was exacting payback on Romney for his allies pummeling Gingrich in Iowa. And the group started raising questions about Romney’s time at the helm of a private equity firm, Bain Capital, putting Romney on the defensive for the first time during the campaign.

When the race turned to South Carolina, it didn’t take long for Gingrich — a former Georgia congressman — to hit his stride. The state had always been a campaign fire-wall for him. He had visited often, built his biggest staff of any of the first three early-voting states and spent $2.5 million on advertising.

Over the past 10 days, he raised questions about Romney’s private business experience while Winning Our Future reinforced the message by financing millions of dollars in South Carolina advertising characterizing Romney as a corporate predator who dismantled companies while running Bain Capital. Gingrich also started working to undercut Romney’s strength — the notion that the former Massachusetts governor was the Republicans’ best chance to beat Obama in the fall.

“What you are seeing him doing is convincing people first that he can win,” senior Gingrich adviser David Winston explained at one point. “He’s in the process of crossing that threshold.”

It was his performance in two debates last week that may have helped him seal the deal with undecided Republicans who were questioning his viability as a candidate.

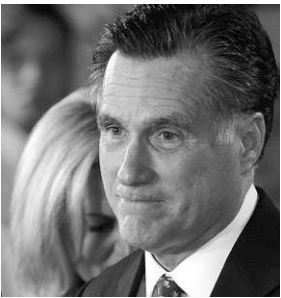

He turned his vulnerabilities — a comment some interpreted as racist and an allegation by an ex-wife that he had wanted an “open marriage” — into moments of strength by answering questions about those issues with nothing short of a character assassination on the national media. In both instances, he clearly tickled his conservative audience — many of whom are skeptical of a media industry they view as left-leaning.

In Myrtle Beach last Monday, Gingrich lashed out when FOX News Juan Williams had asked him if comments he made urging poor minority children to work as janitors were racially insensitive.

“The fact is that more people have been put on food stamps by Barack Obama than any president in American history,” Gingrich retorted.

Romney to Release Taxes, Gingrich Is Ready for Obama

Gingrich, echoing Obama circa 2008, bangs the drum of change as presumed frontrunner Romney looks to cut his losses after South Carolina’s GOP primary.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney speaks at his South Carolina primary election night reception Saturday at the South Carolina State Fairgrounds in Columbia, S.C.

WASHINGTON • Newt Gingrich worked to capitalize Sunday on his upset victory in South Carolina’s Republican presidential primary, while Mitt Romney moved quickly to cut his losses before the next contest with a promise to release his income tax returns within 48 hours.

Gingrich said in a round of television interviews that his win, both unexpected and unexpectedly large, showed he was the Republican best able to go toe to toe with President Barack Obama in the fall.

“I think virtually everybody who looks at the campaign knows I represent the largest amount of change of any candidate, and I think that’s why they see me as representing their interest and their concerns, not representing Wall Street or representing the politicians of Washington,” he said.

Romney argued that point, but not another, agreeing in a television interview that he had made a mistake by refusing to release his tax returns before the South Carolina vote.

“If it was a distraction, we want to get back to the real issues in the campaign — leadership, character and vision for America, how to get jobs in America, and how to rein in the excessive scale of the federal government,” he said.

The former Massachusetts governor, who made millions in business, said he will make his 2010 return and an estimate for 2011 available online on Tuesday.

The decision marked a concession, as if one were needed, that Romney had stumbled on his way through South Carolina, a state where he led hand-somely in the polls several days before the primary.

Florida votes next, on Jan. 31, a 50-delegate contest in one of the most expensive campaign states in the country, and one that Romney can ill afford to lose.

The former governor was an easy winner in the New Hampshire primary earlier in the month. Before that, he was a close runner-up behind former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum in Iowa caucuses where the vote count was so confused that he was originally announced the victor.

Despite his loss on Saturday, Romney remains the contender with the largest and best-funded organization. “Three states in now, we got 47 more to go,” he said, adding he was looking forward to the rest.

For all the political momentum gained in South Carolina, Gingrich made it immediately obvious that he is short on funds. He urged supporters via Tweet Saturday night to donate money, and then announced the name of his campaign website while making a nationally televised victory speech.

With their comments, both Romney and Gingrich indicated the race was a two-way competition, likely to go into the spring if not longer.

Santorum had other ideas.

“We’re going to Florida and beyond,” he said. As he did in a pair of debates in South Carolina, he criticized both Gingrich — calling him a “very high-risk candidate” — and Romney, whom he called a moderate ill-suited to appeal to conservative voters.

Texas Rep. Ron Paul, the fourth contender, has already said he will skip Florida and focus on Nevada and other caucus states.

Gingrich won South Carolina despite being outspent. But in addition to the prohibitive cost of campaigning in Florida, a long-term shortage of funds can cripple efforts to compete in the fast-paced series of primaries and caucuses ahead.

Aides say the former speaker raised $9 million in the final quarter of 2011.

Romney has reported taking in $24 million over the same period.

Italian Islanders Ache for Victims of Cruise Tragedy

BY FRANCES D'EMILIO
AND TRISHA THOMAS
Associated Press

GIGLIO, Italy • Natives of the tiny Italian island of Giglio come from hardy stock whose distant ancestors were accustomed to surviving ruthless raids by pirates and where today many eke out a living from often perilous seas.

But when islanders gaze out on the capsized wreck of the Costa Concordia, lying lifelessly on its side just outside their port like some giant beached creature from the sea, they pray and sigh in sorrow.

“Mamma mia, please excuse me, it makes me so emotional. Mamma mia,” said Ornella Monti, whose house on Giglio, near the customs police station at the port, looks squarely out at the shipwreck.

“I had it all in front of my house,” a weeping Monti said Sunday, as she lit electric candles in San Lorenzo church. “Dear God, help us.”

“Let’s give a lot of light for this girl,” said Monti, lighting another candle and referring to a 5-year-old Dayana Arlotti, an Italian girl, who along with her father, is among the missing in the Jan. 13 accident.

Many of the 1,500 islanders, a tough breed of fishermen and their families who repair fishing nets by hand in the winter and take tourists out in painted wooden boats after a night of fishing at sea, were still shaken by the tragedy which unfolded in front of their eyes.

Women rushed out with blankets when shivering survivors stepped off lifeboats or staggered up rocks after swimming ashore when the evacuation of the 4,200 passengers and crew turned chaotic. Islanders offered children milk and biscuits, and invited stunned families into their homes to warm and calm themselves.

On a table in the church where Mass was celebrated Sunday were an array of items that surviving passengers had brought into San Lorenzo the night of the shipwreck — reminders of the precarious nature of life at sea that islanders, 11 miles across from the mainland, know well.

Monti’s apology for her tears contrasted sharply with the unabashed gawking of hundreds of mainlanders who hopped ferries in Porto Santo Stefano on the Tuscan coast to visit Giglio, renowned for its crystal clear waters and beauty as far back as ancient Roman times, over the weekend. Clambering over portside rocks, they snapped photos and made videos of the wreck to bring back home with them macabre mementos.

“They called us jackals,” said Silvana Pasqualetti, of the islanders after she and her family set foot on the dock to view the wreckage.

“It’s something you don’t see every day,” said her son, Massimo Menghini, 29, as the family caught an evening ferry back to the mainland.

“Your jaw drops open when you see it in person, because it’s history,” he said.

Arab League Extends Syria Mission 1 Month

BY BASSEM MROUE AND HADEEL AL-SHALCHI
Associated Press

BEIRUT • A clash between Syrian forces and army defectors erupted Sunday in a suburb of the tightly held capital of Damascus, adding urgency just as the Arab League was extending an observers’ mission that so far has failed to end long months of bloody violence.

The two events outlined how an uprising against President Bashar Assad that started with mass popular protests is moving now toward an armed conflict that could draw international intervention — an outcome the Arab League is trying to avoid.

Arab League foreign ministers, meeting in Cairo, extended the much-criticized observers mission for another month, according to a statement from the 22-member organization.

The League decided to add more observers and provide them with additional resources, the officials said.

The observer mission is supposed to be the first step toward implementing an Arab League plan to end the Syria crisis. Other points are pulling heavy Syrian weapons out of cities, stopping attacks on protesters, opening talks with the opposition and allowing foreign human rights workers and journalists in.

Death Toll Rises to 150 in Nigeria Attack, Stuns Leader

BY JON GAMBRELL
Associated Press

KANO, Nigeria • People in this north Nigeria city once wore surgical masks to block the dust swirling through its sprawling neighborhoods, but swarming children hawked the masks for pennies apiece Sunday to block the stench of death at a hospital overflowing with the dead following a coordinated attack by a radical Islamist sect.

The Nigerian Red Cross now estimates more than 150 people died in Friday’s attack in Kano, which saw at least two suicide bombers from the sect known as Boko Haram detonate explosive-laden cars. The scope of the attack, apparently planned to free sect members held by authorities here, left even President Goodluck Jonathan speechless as he toured what remained of a regional police headquarters Sunday.

Unrest continued across Nigeria as unknown assailants in the northern state of Bauchi killed at least 11 people overnight Saturday in attacks that saw at least two churches bombed.

Friday’s attacks by Boko Haram hit police stations, immigration offices and the local headquarters of Nigeria’s secret police in Kano, a city of more than 9 million people.

JOSEPH VINCENT PATERNO: 1926-2012

Amid Scandal, A Legend Passes On

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • Happy Valley was perfect for Joe Paterno, a place where “JoePa” knew best, where he not only won more football games than any other major college coach, but won them the right way: with integrity and sports-manship. A place where character came first, championships second.

Behind it all, however, was an ugly secret that ran counter to everything the revered coach stood for.

Paterno, a sainted figure at Penn State for almost half a century but scarred forever by the child sex abuse scandal that led to his stunning dismissal, died Sunday at age 85.

His death came just 65 days after his son Scott said his father had been diagnosed with a treatable form of lung cancer. The cancer was found during a follow-up visit for a bronchial illness. A few weeks later, Paterno broke his pelvis after a fall but did not need surgery.

Mount Nittany Medical Center said in a statement that Paterno died at 7:25 a.m. MST of “metastatic small cell carcinoma of the lung.” Metastatic indicates an illness that has spread from one part of the body to an unrelated area.

The hospital says Paterno was surrounded by family members, who have requested privacy.

Paterno had been in the hospital since Jan. 13 for observation after what his family called minor complications from his cancer treatments. Not long before that, he conducted his only interview since losing his job, with The Washington Post. Paterno was described as frail then, speaking mostly in a whisper and wearing a wig. The second half of the two-day interview was conducted at his bedside.

His family released a statement Sunday morning to announce his death: “His loss leaves a void in our lives that will never be filled.”

Federer Strolls Into Aussie Quarterfinals

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia • The crowd was still buzzing about the comeback victory by “Aussie Kim” Clijsters, and the fans dressed in canary yellow were now in full voice for another one of their own.

Then along came Roger Federer to flatten their hopes.

Federer has won four of his record 16 Grand Slam singles titles on Rod Laver Arena, and on Sunday night he more or less held a clinic — a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Bernard Tomic to reach the quarterfinals for a 31st consecutive major.

He played the 19-year-old Aussie at his own game, but raised it a level: mixing soft, angled drop shots that just cleared the net with crisp groundstrokes that hit the lines and — for good measure — a leaping, backhand overhead.

“It was like boxing in the beginning. You don’t want to take too many chances,” Federer said, explaining why there weren’t any service breaks until the ninth game, when he produced two drop shots for winners with Tomic stranded in the backcourt.

“Had one game when I was starting to feel better, next thing you know I’m up a break. Maybe I broke his will there a bit.”

Federer’s quarterfinal will be his 1,000th tour-level match. He plays 2009 U.S. Open champion Juan Martin del Potro, whom he once expected to rise to No. 1.

Clijsters, the defending champion, won despite limping on a badly sprained left ankle. She saved four match points in a tiebreaker en route to her 4-6, 7-6 (6), 6-4 win in a rematch of the 2011 final against Li Na. That put the four-time Grand Slam winner on course for a quarterfinal against Caroline Wozniacki, who has held the year-end No. 1 ranking the last two seasons without winning a major.

Wozniacki is desperate to end her Grand Slam title drought, and improved her credentials marginally with a 6-0, 7-5 win over former No. 1 Jelena Jankovic in the last match Sunday night.

“My confidence is high, my fitness is good, my play is improving and I’m very positive,” Wozniacki said. “If I play like I did today, Kim will have to really play well to beat me.”

SUPER BOWL XLVI: PATRIOTS VS. GIANTS

OK, Here’s The Kicker ...

Ravens kicker Billy Cundiff walks off the field while the Patriots’ Niko Koutouvides celebrates Cundiff’s missed kick that allowed New England a spot in the Super Bowl.

Fate of Patriots, Giants determined by field goals — one that missed, one that split the uprights.

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. • Tom Brady got all the help he needed to get the New England Patriots into the Super Bowl.

Thank you, Billy Cundiff.

The Baltimore Ravens kicker shanked a 32-yard field goal with 11 seconds left and the Patriots escaped with a 23-20 victory in the AFC title game on Sunday.

Usually, vintage Brady doesn’t need much assistance in championship settings, but the Patriots’ much-maligned defense came through, and Brady’s 1-yard touchdown dive with 11:29 left proved to be the winning points.

“Well, I sucked pretty bad today, but our defense saved us,” Brady said after throwing for 239 yards, with two interceptions and, for the first time in 36 games, no TD passes. “I’m going to try to go out and do a better job in a couple of weeks, but I’m proud of this team, my teammates.”

Brady waited out the tense moments, then celebrated with the rest of his team when Cundiff’s attempt went wide left. The Ravens looked on in stunned horror.

Next up as the Patriots (15-3) chase their fourth Super Bowl trophy in Brady’s and coach Bill Belichick’s tenure in New England is the New York Giants on Feb. 5 in Indianapolis.

SAN FRANCISCO • Kyle Williams put his hands on his helmet and dropped his head in disgust. A second big mistake by its backup punt returner did in San Francisco at the worst possible time.

Williams fumbled in overtime to set up Lawrence Tynes’ 31-yard field goal, and the 49ers lost the NFC championship game to the New York Giants 20-17 on Sunday.

Williams, returning kicks in place of the injured Ted Ginn Jr., muffed one punt early in the fourth quarter to set up a go-ahead touchdown for New York, then was stripped by Jacquian

Williams in overtime to give the Giants the ball at the 24.

After three runs and a kneelown, Tynes kicked the game-winner, and Williams slowly made a dejected walk back to the locker room as the 49ers missed out on a prime chance to go to the Super Bowl.

Penn State football coach Joe Paterno acknowledges the crowd during warm-ups before a 2005 game against Wisconsin.

“He died as he lived,” the statement said. “He fought hard until the end, stayed positive, thought only of others and constantly reminded everyone of how blessed his life had been. His ambitions were far reaching, but he never believed he had to leave this Happy Valley to achieve them. He was a man devoted to his family, his university, his players and his community.”

Paterno’s death just under three months following his last victory called to mind another coaching great, Alabama’s Paul “Bear” Bryant, who died less than a month after retiring.

“Quit coaching?” Bryant said late in his career. “I’d croak in a week.”

Paterno alluded to the remark made by his friend and rival, saying in 2003: “There isn’t anything in my life anymore except my family and my football. I think about it all the time.”

Two police officers were stationed to block traffic on the street where Paterno’s modest ranch home stands next to a local park. The officers said the family had asked there be no public gathering outside the house, still decorated with a Christmas wreath, so Paterno’s relatives could grieve privately. And, indeed, the street was quiet on a cold winter day.

Paterno’s sons, Scott and Jay, arrived separately at the house late Sunday morning. Jay Paterno, who served as his father’s quarterbacks coach, was crying.

Paterno built a program based on the credo of “Success with Honor,” and he found both. The man known as “JoePa” won 409 games and took the Nittany Lions to 37 bowl games and two national championships. More than 250 of the players he coached went on to the NFL.

“He will go down as the greatest football coach in the history of the game,” Ohio State coach Urban Meyer said after his former team, the Florida Gators, beat Penn State 37-24 in the 2011 Outback Bowl.

Paterno roamed the sidelines for 46 seasons, his thick-rimmed glasses, windbreaker and jet-black sneakers as familiar as the Nittany Lions’ blue and white uniforms.

The reputation he built looked even more impressive because he insisted that on-field success not come at the expense of high graduation rates.

But in the middle of his 46th season, the legend was shattered. Paterno was engulfed in a child sex abuse scandal when a former trusted assistant, Jerry Sandusky, was accused of molesting 10 boys over a 15-year span, sometimes in the football building.

Outrage built quickly when the state’s top cop said the coach hadn’t fulfilled a moral obligation to go to the authorities when a graduate assistant, Mike McQueary, told Paterno he saw Sandusky with a young boy in the showers of the football complex in 2002.

At a preliminary hearing for the school officials, McQueary testified that he had seen Sandusky attacking the child with his hands around the boy’s waist but said he wasn’t 100 percent sure it was intercourse. McQueary described Paterno as shocked and saddened and said the coach told him he had “done the right thing” by reporting the encounter.

When the scandal erupted in November, Paterno said he would retire following the 2011 season. He also said he was “absolutely devastated” by the abuse case.

“This is a tragedy,” he said. “It is one of the great sorrows of my life. With the benefit of hindsight, I wish I had done more.”

But the university trustees fired Paterno, effective immediately. Graham Spanier, one of the longest-serving university presidents in the nation, also was fired.

Paterno believed success was not measured entirely on the field. From his idealistic early days, he had implemented what he called a “grand experiment” — to graduate more players while maintaining success on the field.

The team consistently ranked among the best in the Big Ten for graduating players. As of 2011, it had 49 academic All-Americans, the third-highest among schools in the Football Bowl Subdivision. All but two played under Paterno.

PATERNO COULD BE LAST OF HIS KIND IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

ASSOCIATED PRESS

There will never be another coaching career like Joe Paterno’s.

His time at Penn State started long before coaches were pulling down multimillion-dollar salaries, before fire-so-and-so.com web sites and win-now-or-else attitudes at programs that have rarely contended for championships.

No Division I coach won more games (409) or had a longer run at one school than Paterno.

It’s hard to fathom a coach staying at a power program such as Penn State for even 20 years these days, let alone the 46 seasons Paterno led the Nittany Lions.

Coaches who come to define not just a team but a school, Hall of Famers such as Bear Bryant, Tom Osborne, Bo Schembechler, Bobby Bowden and Paterno, seem to be going the way of the wishbone and tear-away jerseys in college football.

“Look what’s happening,” Bowden told The Associated Press on Sunday, hours after Paterno died at the age of 85. “Coaches getting fired in two years. Coaches making a million dollars here and they get $2 million and they leave. They break a five-year contract. You’ve got unloyalty at both ends.”

The 82-year-old Bowden was nudged into retirement two years ago after 34 seasons at Florida State. Paterno was fired during a chaotic week in November after his former defensive coordinator, Jerry Sandusky, was charged with sexually abusing children.

He found out about Paterno’s death when he arrived home Sunday morning after coaching a charity game between former Florida State and Miami players. Former Hurricanes coach Howard Schnellenberger, who retired from Florida Atlantic after this past season at the age of 77, was coaching the Miami squad.

Bowden and Paterno became friends over the years partly because, as they grew older, they could relate to each like few other coaches could.

“We’d sit and talk and discuss a lot of NCAA questions,” Bowden said. “Those were great memories. My wife Ann and Sue (Paterno’s wife) got along real good together too.”

Bowden said he’d written a letter to Paterno “not too long ago,” but hadn’t spoken with him for some time.

“Bobby always thought so much of Joe,” Ann Bowden said. “He was just a unique character. Joe was very strong and outspoken. He and Bobby were different in a lot of respects. He’d been there a longer time and he was stronger, more forceful, said what he thought. Bobby guards himself a little bit when he says something.”

With Schnellenberger’s retirement, Kansas State’s 72-year-old Bill Snyder is the oldest active coach in major college football.

Snyder has spent 21 seasons with the Wildcats, but even that was interrupted by a three-year retirement when he hit a rough patch.

After Paterno was fired, Virginia Tech’s Frank Beamer became the longest-tenured coach working in the highest level of Division I football.

“College football will miss Joe Paterno,” said Beamer, who is 65 and has been leading the Hokies since 1987.

The next-longest continuous tenure among current coaches belongs to 60-year-old Mack Brown, who has been at Texas since 1998.

“I think that the changes in communications and media (changes that of course accelerated Joe’s termination once the grand jury indictments were issued) create a level of scrutiny and pressure that will make 10 years at the same FBS school rare,” Notre Dame Athletic Director Jack Swarbrick said in an email.

Some of Notre Dame’s greatest coaches (Frank Leahy, Ara Parseghian and Lou Holtz) only lasted around a decade, but lately the storied program has been emblematic of the revolving door many schools have on the football coach’s office.

Brian Kelly is Notre Dame’s fourth head coach since 1997; its fifth if you count the days-long tenure of George O’Leary. As for Kelly, Notre Dame is his third job since 2004, though he was climbing the ladder from Central Michigan to Cincinnati to one of the most celebrated football schools in the country.

Even elite top-notch programs get used as steppingstones these days.

Alabama’s Nick Saban left Michigan State for LSU, where he won a national title in 2003. He then bailed on the Tigers for the Miami Dolphins before landing at Alabama and winning two national championships for the Tide in five seasons.

“I think the cycles for head coaches will be shorter, much as we’ve seen in pro sports,” West Virginia Athletic Director Oliver Luck said.

Patriots

In their last trip to the big game, the Patriots had an 18-0 record when they were stunned by the Giants four years ago. They won the NFL championship for the 2001, 2003 and 2004 seasons. This time, they head to the Super Bowl with a 10-game winning streak.

“We’re going to try to go out and kick some butt in a couple of weeks,” said Brady, whose fifth trip to the Super Bowl will equal John Elway’s achievement with Denver.

On his touchdown, Brady took a huge hit from Ravens star linebacker Ray Lewis, then emphatically spiked the ball as he walked away. Earlier, Brady showed his fire by barking at Lewis following a hard tackle on a 4-yard run.

“It’s a pretty mentally tough team,” Brady said. “There’s really some resiliency, we’ve shown that all season. Even in the games we’ve lost, the three games we lost, we fought until the end. We’re always going to fight to the end. It’s great to be a part of a team like this.”

Before Cundiff missed, the Ravens had a chance to go ahead two plays earlier, but wide receiver Lee Evans was stripped of the ball in the end zone by backup cornerback Sterling Moore, who earlier was victimized for a touchdown that gave Baltimore (13-5) the lead 17-16.

When Cundiff misfired, and the Patriots stormed off their sideline in celebration as the chilled crowd roared, and Ravens coach John Harbaugh appeared to say “He missed it.”

“It’s a kick I’ve kicked probably a thousand times in my career,” Cundiff said. “I went out there and didn’t convert. That’s the way things go. There’s really no excuse for it.”

Baltimore had the touted defense in this matchup, but New England’s unit, ranked 31st overall, was just as powerful.

The fact that turnovers did in San Francisco was truly surprising. The 49ers tied an NFL record with just 10 giveaways all season — including none on special teams — and had a plus-28 turnover margin in the regular season. They took advantage of five New Orleans turnovers to win 36-32 last week but were on the wrong end in this game because of Williams.

Williams, the son of Chicago White Sox general manager Ken Williams, did not look smooth fielding punts after doing it just twice in the regular season.

He made a dangerous, sliding catch on one return and called a fair catch on another with room to run. He then made his first big miscue after San Francisco forced a punt early in the fourth quarter while protecting a 14-10 lead.

Steve Weatherford hit a short, bouncing punt that Williams came up to try to field. He backed away at the last minute, but the ball glanced off his right knee and was recovered by Devin Thomas at the San Francisco 29. The play was originally not ruled a fumble but was overturned by instant replay.

Six plays later, Eli Manning threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Mario Manningham, who beat backup cornerback Tramaine Brock on third-and-15. Brock was playing in place of starter Tarell Brown, who left late in the third quarter after a violent collision with teammate Dashon Goldson.

Williams helped atone for his miscue when he returned the kickoff 40 yards to help set up David Akers’ tying field goal late in regulation.

But on his second return in overtime, Williams gave the ball away again. He fielded the punt at the 19 and was stripped by Jacquian Williams. Thomas once again pounced on the ball at the 24, setting up the Giants’ winning kick and ending San Francisco’s most successful season in years.

Vegas Makes Patriots Early Three-point Favorites

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Las Vegas casinos say the New England Patriots are favorites to win the Super Bowl thanks to their national following, a decade of winning and the playoff success of quarterback Tom Brady and coach Bill Belichick.

Race and Sports Director Mike Colbert says the Patriots opened as three-point favorites over New York in odds posted Sunday night after the Giants beat San Francisco 20-17 in overtime in the NFC championship game.

New England beat the Baltimore Ravens 23-20 for the AFC title.

Executive Race and Sports Director Jay Kornegay of the Las Vegas Hotel & Casino says an injury to Patriots tight end Rob Gronkowski is a factor that could swing the line up to one point. Colbert says the 2008 Super Bowl rematch could break wagering records. The Patriots were 12-point favorites four years ago, but the Giants earned a 17-14 win.

The South 35 feet of the North 210 feet of the East 71 feet of Lot 18, "Delong Addition", Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the plat thereof recorded in Book 1 of Plats, page 57, records of said County

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 215 Heyburn Avenue West, Twin Falls, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Frances V. Revai, as her sole and separate property, as Grantor(s) with Royal Mortgage Partners, a California LP dba RMB Financial Services as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded February 3, 1999, as Instrument No. 1999-002164, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to Manufacturers and Traders Trust Company, as trustee, on behalf of the holders of the Home Equity Loan Pass-Through Certificates, Series 1999-1, recorded June 16, 2006, as Instrument No. 2006014662, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $668.67 for the months of September 2011 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $75,233.29 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 7.9% from August 1, 2011, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

Dated this 11th day of January, 2012.

The Successor Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Successor Trustee has been informed that the street address of 1523 "K" Dr., Rupert, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by VERN STAKER, JR. and JAMY STAKER, Husband and Wife, Grantor, to Ryan M. Fawcett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of BANK OF IDAHO, recorded August 4, 2006, as Instrument No. 485989, Mortgage records of Minidoka County, Idaho; and assigned to the IDAHO HOUSING AND FINANCE ASSOCIATION by Assignment of Deed of Trust recorded on October 12, 2006, as Instrument No. 487178, Mortgage records of Minidoka County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR IS NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated August 2, 2006, in the amount of $686.00 each, for the months of June through December, 2011, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement. All delinquent payments are now due, plus accumulated late charges, plus any costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The accrued interest is at the rate of 5.85% per annum from May 1, 2011. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $91,364.33, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.85% per annum from May 1, 2011.

DATED This 28th day of December, 2011.

RYAN M. FAWCETT, a Member of the Idaho State Bar, SUCCESSOR TRUSTEE

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

IF JANUARY 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your optimism and generous nature make the next six to eight weeks a happy time. Since you see the glass as half full, you will never worry where your next drink will come from. New friendships and participation in group activities will brighten your social life. April is a poor time to make financial or business decisions. Your wisdom and leadership abilities will win you admiration and bountiful rewards by the end of June when sincere prayers may be answered in a very surprising and providential way.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are ready, willing, and able. Be prepared to meet the type of people who skate on the cutting edge and think outside the box. There are times when you lead best by following the ideas of someone else.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lambs can turn into lions. During today's new moon, you might think that authority figures or partners are kindhearted and thoughtful, but never forget that material gain is the main objective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take a bow. You deserve a pat on the back for your loyalty and applause for your efforts. The new moon creates a new monthlong phase of experience in which you can change opinions for the better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new moon might not be noticeable in the material world. However, it does herald a time when new starts are possible and designates a shift in your consciousness that could last for almost a month.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fan the flames of faithfulness. Relationships take center stage as this new moon begins a fresh cycle. You can be popular and hold conversations with new contacts without being disloyal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Say a little prayer. Set intentions on this new moon and then wait as things unfold over the next month. Everything you really need will be delivered to your doorstep at precisely the right moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give it your best shot. When estimating how long a job will take, overestimate; when you finish faster than expected your captain will boss be impressed. Look good to others without even trying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a second chance when it is offered – or at least try to be the type of person who gives one. Today's new moon might bring family connections into sharper focus over several weeks. Be generous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Project poise. "Like attracts like" so join with those share your interests. Like striking a match, a new relationship could flare up only to quickly burn out once the novelty wears off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Turn on a new channel, but don't program it into your remote control permanently. You could be attracted to the unusual or absorbed by the latest passing craze. Experiment with the exotic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The new moon in your sign might mean a new perspective in the month ahead. A sense of well being might grow as the next few weeks unfold; develop faith in the future and basic human kindness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Weave new concepts and people into the fabric of your life. This will broaden your horizons and serve to invigorate, inspire and change your perspective – even if some new friendships don't last long.

It pays to read the fine print.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this because I hope you will tell your readers to learn the signs of a stroke. I wish I had known.

I was visiting my grandma seven years ago. During dinner she had a stroke. I knew something was wrong, but wasn't sure what it was. My sister and I asked her if she wanted to go to the hospital, but she said no. We respected her wishes and didn't insist. We finally took her two days later.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Abby, my grandmother never spoke again. She spent her last seven years aware of what she wanted to say, but unable to say it. The guilt I carry is hard to live with.

Please tell your readers to make sure they know the signs of a stroke and to remember that while most people don't want to go to the hospital, the first three hours after a stroke are CRITICAL. If you suspect that your loved one is having a stroke, get that person to a hospital FAST, even if they don't want to go! You can't take back the damage a stroke causes.

My grandmother is gone now and I miss her terribly. She was a loving grandparent, and I hope she'll forgive me.

— MISSING HER IN UTAH

DEAR MISSING HER: What happened to your grandmother was tragic, but you were no more at fault than the millions of others who are also unaware of the signs of stroke. In your grandmother's memory, I'll describe them.

The most common stroke symptoms are: sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg — especially on one side of the body. Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding. Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes. Sudden trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination. Sudden severe headache with no known cause.

Other important but common symptoms include: sudden nausea, fever and vomiting — distinguished from a viral illness by the speed of onset (minutes or hours versus several days). And brief loss of consciousness such as fainting or convulsions.

If you see or have any of these symptoms, call 911! Every minute counts, and treatment can be more effective if it's given quickly.

DEAR ABBY: My 20-year-old goddaughter is pregnant. She is beautiful, smart and talented. Her boyfriend is wonderful to her and they are very happy together. My problem is people who frown on her happiness. I am regularly asked if I'm disappointed in her. My response is usually: "It's unexpected, but we will make the best of it. She and her boyfriend both work and have a great support network and a huge family."

I think it's rude of people to assume that this is bad news. How do I respond to those who are so oblivious?

— OFFENDED AUNT IN SCRANTON, PA.

DEAR OFFENDED: The way you are answering them is appropriate, positive and polite. You need no help from me.

TO MY ASIAN READERS: This is the Year of the Dragon, a symbol of power and good fortune. Those born in the Year of the Dragon are confident, brave and fearless. A symbol of strength in Asian culture, the dragon once symbolized the emperor of China. I wish a healthy, happy and prosperous New Year to all of you.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"The way is all so very plain
That we may lose the way."*

— G.K. Chesterton

When you end up in game, but wish you were in slam when you see the dummy, it often happens that you get careless. Such was the case in this deal from the finals of the national pairs, played at the Gold Coast, where all this week's deals come from.

You might argue that all that was required was basic technique, and I would not disagree with you. But that proved surprisingly beyond many of the pairs here.

If North-South had an unopposed sequence, they might well have gotten to six hearts. On a black-suit lead, South might be able to come to 12 tricks via six plain-suit winners, four trumps and two spade ruffs. But on a red-suit lead, South would probably need the club finesse.

Let's forget all that; you play four hearts on a diamond lead and count 10 top tricks. You win the diamond ace and cash the heart king ... oops! What is the best way to recover? The answer is surprisingly simple: Cross to the diamond king and run diamonds; when East ruffs in, you simply overruff and draw trump. That is 10 winners without relying on clubs at all.

So now are you ready to take the challenge: With the board played in four hearts 190 times, how many players went down? Would you believe one-quarter of the declarers? I admit that from the North seat on a club lead, you have more of a challenge, but still, this was probably not the field's finest hour.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
4 ♥	All pass

Opening lead: Diamond five

LEAD WITH THE ACES

South holds:

♠ K 8 3
♥ 10 6
♦ A Q 8 6 3 2
♣ J 2

South	West	North	East
2 ♦	2 ♥	Pass	1 ♣
Pass	3 NT	Pass	2 NT
		All pass

ANSWER: With the clubs and hearts appearing to behave decently for declarer, the question is whether to go for the surprise attack in spades or to lead your long suit, even though declarer has announced a stopper. Personally I'd vote for the diamond, but I can certainly see the case for the spade lead.

Today is Monday, Jan. 23, the 23rd day of 2012. There are 343 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:

On Jan. 23, 1962, Jackie Robinson was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. Tony Bennett recorded "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," by George Cory and Douglass Cross, in New York for Columbia Records.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, Georgetown University was established in present-day Washington, D.C.

In 1812, the second New Madrid Earthquake struck, with an estimated magnitude of 7.5, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

In 1845, Congress decided all national elections would be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In 1937, 17 people went on trial in Moscow during Josef Stalin's "Great Purge." (All were convicted; all but four were executed.)

In 1943, critic Alexander Woollcott suffered a fatal heart attack during a live broadcast of the CBS radio program "People's Platform."

In 1950, the Israeli Knesset approved a resolution affirming Jerusalem as the capital of Israel.

In 1960, the U.S. Navy-operated bathyscaphe Trieste carried two men to the deepest known point in the Pacific Ocean, reaching a depth of more than 35,000 feet.

In 1964, the 24th amendment to the Constitution, eliminating the poll tax in federal elections, was ratified.

In 1968, North Korea seized the Navy intelligence ship USS Pueblo, charging its crew with being on a spying mission. (The crew was released 11 months later.)

In 1973, President Richard Nixon announced an accord had been reached to end the Vietnam War.

In 1981, American composer Samuel Barber died in New York at age 70.

Ten years ago: Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl was abducted in Karachi, Pakistan, by a group demanding the return of prisoners from the Afghan campaign; he was later murdered. John Walker Lindh, a U.S.-born Taliban fighter, was returned to the United States to face criminal charges that he'd conspired to kill fellow Americans. Kenneth Lay stepped down as chairman and chief executive of Enron Corp.

Five years ago: In his State of the Union address, President George W. Bush implored Congress to give his plan to send more U.S. troops to Iraq a chance to work. A new rule requiring U.S. airline passengers to show a passport upon their return from Mexico, Canada or the Caribbean took effect. E. Howard Hunt, who'd helped organize the Watergate break-in, leading to the downfall of Richard Nixon's presidency, died in Miami, Fla., at age 88.

One year ago: Allies and adversaries of President Hugo Chavez took to the streets of Caracas by the thousands, staging rival demonstrations to commemorate the 53rd anniversary of Venezuela's democracy. Fitness guru Jack LaLanne died in Morro Bay, Calif., at age 96.
