Legislators Hear Tearful Testimony on Budget Cuts

Preserving care for Idaho's most vulnerable was the topic that dominated Friday's public hearing on the state budget.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Tears and frustration marked Friday's public testimony on how recent state budget cuts have affected Idahoans' lives. With the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee accepting public input on the state's budget, the message received was clear: Funding cuts, especially to Medicaid, have led to devastating results for vulnerable Idahoans.

JFAC Co-chairman Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, started the session by thanking those who began lining up early Friday morning in hopes they'd have a 3-minute audience with state lawmakers.

"I still remember many of the faces and testimony from last year, and I want you to know they had an impact on our deliberations," Cameron said.

Most of the approximately 60 people who testified Friday spoke of how cuts to Medicaid services have affected them and their families, including Dana Demeule-Benkula, who traveled from Twin Falls to speak on behalf of her Delta Developmental Services clients who receive Medicaid.

"I've watched people lose their dental services, their nursing services, their behavioral services, their mental services," she said.

Boise resident Noll Garcia, who has cerebral palsy, said Medicaid services allow him to live safely and independently.

"I am very concerned that my budget will be cut, resulting in less staff to help keep me safe in my apartment and my community and do the things that are meaningful in my life," he said.

John Kuhara of Pocatello testified that severe depression landed him in the hospital for three weeks, at a cost of $48,000 to the state. It's cheaper to fund preventative services, like psychosocial rehabilitation, than it is to provide the emergency care that he required, he claimed.

"My PSR hours were decreased in June of this year to three hours a week, down from five," Kuhara said. He believes that decrease, a direct result of Medicaid cuts, led to

Planned Parenthood Holds on to Komen Funds

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • After a week of flip-flopping, it's likely several women's health organizations may need funding to help check for whiplash.

On Friday, the Susan G. Komen Foundation reversed its plans to halt funding to Planned Parenthood. The decision came on the heels of an earlier announcement that the foundation would no longer provide financial support for the family planning organization, on the grounds that it doesn't fund groups in the middle of a federal investiga-

If the foundation had decided to go withhold funding, the impact would have been significant to many Idaho health centers operated under Planned Parenthood, said Kristen Glundberg-Prosser, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of the Greater Northwest.

Last year, the Twin Falls health center relied on a $23,000 grant from the Komen foundation to perform breast screenings and distribute mammogram vouchers to low-income women.

Chronic physical pain has haunted Erickson over the past 50 years. A deteriorating back and slipped disk eventually forced her to give up driving three years ago. And up until a few weeks ago, she was unable to sit or stand up for any extended period of time.

"My husband put a mattress in the backseat of the car," she said. "That's how I got around." But in a few weeks, those days may be behind her. On Thursday, Erickson underwent surgery that implanted a small device in the middle of her back. The device - called AdaptiveStim with RestoreSensor — is designed to distract her brain from receiving pain messages by sending a tingling sensation throughout her lower back and right leg instead.

The medical community has been using the device for years, but a technology upgrade has improved its practicality.

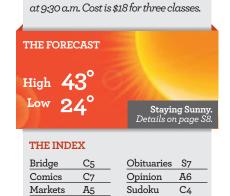

"Before, the device only worked correctly if you remained in one position," said Sondra Thompson, a pain management specialist who has offices in Boise and Twin Falls. "If you moved, the device didn't know what to do and Could Growing Mole on Back Be Cancerous?

ASK ST. LUKE'S

I have a mole on my back that I'm concerned may be cancerous. It has gotten bigger the past couple of months. What should I do?

- Tim, Murtaugh

Answered by Dr. Phatama Padavanija, St. Luke's Clinic Medical Oncology:

here are three types of skin cancer. Basal cell and squamous cell skin cancer, which are rarely life-threatening, are treatable by removal. Melanoma is the most serious kind of skin cancer, which left untreated, can be lethal. Melanoma can go deep into the skin tissue or possibly spread into the lymph nodes or other

The American Cancer Society reports that melanoma is the fifth most common cause of cancer in men and the sixth most common cause of cancer in women. That statistic has been rising over the past 10-15 years, largely due to genetics and sun

Children are especially susceptible to skin cancers in later life if they have experienced a serious sunburn or burns throughout childhood. Fair-skinned and redhaired individuals are also more susceptible to melanoma. Using sun block of SPF of 15 or higher is recommended to protect your skin against the damaging rays of the sun.

To determine whether your mole has the potential for some type of skin cancer, take a look at it and take the ABCDE test. A stands for asymmetry: See if the spot is not even on both sides. B means border: Is there an irregular border surrounding the mole? C is color variation: Is your mole two or three different colors? D means diameter: Is the

School Bus, Pickup Truck Collide near Twin Falls section of 3800 North Road TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A school bus carrying about 47 students collided with a pickup truck on Friday, but none of the children were injured, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

The crash — still under investigation – happened at about 2:45 p.m. at the interand U.S. Highway 93, southwest of Twin Falls, said sheriff's office spokeswoman Lori Stewart.

The bus was headed west on 3800 North, while the pickup was southbound on U.S. 93, Stewart said. Though the students weren't hurt, the driver of the pickup was taken by ground ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries.

The event grossed about $34,000 before expenses, Skeem said. "It was the largest, most well attended Death by Chocolate we had."

How many people made the rounds of the chocolate tables Thursday, filling their plates with dainty delectables?

"Over 1,000 people," Skeem said Friday morning. "We don't have an exact number yet but we had 1,000 ballots and programs printed and ran out. That has never happened. So, I would say around 1,100."

Last year, 817 people came to the fundraiser, not including children under 12 and Rotarians.

Wendell, Region IV Development Ink Deal

WENDELL • In 2006, the city of Wendell tapped the nonprofit Region IV Development Corp. to help it seek grant funding and administer loan paperwork tied to its wastewater project.

On Thursday, the Wendell City Council decided to continue its relationship with Region IV, approving a 2012 project administration contract totaling $92,500.

Mayor Brad Christopherson said the amount covers work the Twin Falls organization has already conducted for the city and includes additional duties expected now that the sewer project is moving forward.

Though unsuccessful, the city applied again for the grant in 2008 and Commerce put it on "standby" status while it secured land and worked through other delays, McCurdy said.

With those delays settled, the city "can now be considered for grant funding," Mc-Curdy said.

McCurdy will also help the city work with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development to secure low-interest loans for the project. Cost details will be available as the project's design is finalized.

Also Thursday, the council approved a contract for 2012 with France, Basterrechea, Wagner and Bunn CPAs of Gooding. The firm has helped the city get its finances in order for more than a year.

City Treasurer Deb Gibbs said the contract allows the city to use between $500 and $2,500 of services per month, as needed.

"The services cover everything from coming in and helping the library board with budgeting and training, to in the office for unexpected needs," Gibbs said.

whether Appleton, as CEO, should be engaging in a hobby as risky as stunt piloting.

Micron shares were up 23 cents at $7.95 Friday before trading was halted for the announcement.

"Steve's passion and energy left an indelible mark on Micron, the Idaho community and the technology industry at large," Micron's board of directors said in a prepared state-

Micron is one of many companies that make semiconductor chips for various devices, including computers, mobile devices, cameras, cars and industrial systems. It makes products under the Lexar and Crucial brands, and is one of Idaho's largest and most influential employers.

The company's shares have traded between $3.97 and $11.95 over the past year. In its latest fiscal year, which ended Sept. 1, Micron earned $167 million, or 17 cents per share, and had revenue of $8.8 billion.

The 51-year-old Appleton hadn't filed a flight plan and by all indications planned to stay in the area for a recreational flight, investigators said.

Zoe Keliher, air investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, said the crash happened during Appleton's second attempt to fly that morning. She said Appleton's first take-off ended abruptly - witnesses said the plane only got about 5 feet off the ground when he landed and returned to a hangar for about five minutes.

Keliher said witnesses reported that the plane then returned to the runway to take off again, but Appleton almost immediately told the tower he needed to turn around and re-land. His plane was about 100 or 200 feet in the air before witnesses say it crashed and caught fire. Appleton's body was thrown from the wreck-

Keliher said the remains of the pilot weren't immediately identifiable, but Appleton's wallet and other belongings were among the debris. She said the body was being fingerprinted by authorities.

The weather was clear. Keliher said investigators planned to look for any evidence of equipment failure or other problems. Airport spokeswoman Patti Miller said the aircraft was a fixed-wing prop plane Lancair, which is built from kits.

Federal Aviation Administration's records show the tail number of the wrecked plane was registered to Raleighwood Aviation LLC out of North Carolina. It was manufactured in 2007 and filed in the "amateur built" category. Appleton's death came one week after the company's president and chief operating officer, D. Mark Durcan, announced plans to retire in August. Mark W. Adams, Micron's vice president of worldwide sales, was named to succeed Durcan.

Micron spokesman Dan Francisco said Durcan is assuming the responsibilities of CEO until the company's board appoints Appleton's successor.

The board planned to meet over the weekend to discuss its next steps.

"We understand that resources are limited," said Shawn Bills of Idaho Falls. "We also understand that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Several also testified to the importance of establishing a suicide prevention hot line in Idaho. Idaho is the only state without such a hot line, said advocates from the Suicide Prevention Action Network. Darlene Root of Boise spoke of losing her son to suicide.

"Having someone to speak to in such a time of crisis might have made a difference for him," Root said.

Boise resident Rich Stover agreed, speaking of how he learned that his 19-year-old son had committed suicide while he was deployed with the Idaho Army National Guard 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team. Raj Sandou of Meridian spoke on behalf of nursing students at Idaho State University in support of a hot line.

"As future health care providers of these communities, we strongly believe that every single life lost to suicide is a preventable tragedy," Sandou said.

"We are so grateful to the Komen Foundation. So much of Idaho is very rural," Glundberg-Prosser said. "We reached 250 women who would otherwise not receive breast screenings or any sort of health care."

Reactions from Komen's decision reflect the often muddled politics concerning women's health. On one hand, anti-abortion groups admire Komen's dedication to promoting life, but refuse to fund the group because Planned Parenthood performs abortions.

The Komen chapter in Boise declined to comment. Emails and phone calls from the Times-News to the national Komen offices were not returned. However, in a news release, Komen leaders apologized for any doubt supporters might have of the foundation's dedication to women's health.

Planned Parenthood is currently being sued over allegations that federal funds were used to perform abortions in its clinics. According the release, the Komen Foundation will amend its giving criteria to allow Planned Parenthood to receive grants.

Anti-abortion group Idaho Chooses Life was preparing to raise funds for the Komen foundation before Friday's announcement, gued that preventive health care was the main concern at all Planned Parenthood health centers.

Romney Rallies Gold Country

BY ADELLA HARDING Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. • Republican presidential front-runner Mitt Romney told an enthusiastic crowd of at least 450 supporters on Friday that Elko is God's country and gold country.

"Some of what you have on the ground, that gold stuff, is good for you here now," he said.

Elko is the heart of goldmining country, where the economy is booming in comparison with the downturn in much of the state and nation. Romney said he is "heartsick" as he sees people struggling across the country, including retirees who are forced to take minimum-wage jobs "to put food on the table." He said the median income has dropped 10 percent nationwide in the past four years.

Young people graduating from college and wondering if they will have a job also trouble him, the former Massachusetts governor told the gathering at the El Aero hangar at Elko Regional Airport, where he flew in for the rally.

Romney said President Barack Obama stated three years ago on "The Today Show" that he would turn the economy around in three years or be a oneterm politician.

That remark drew cheers for the Republican contender who is hoping to win the most delegates in the Nevada Republican caucuses today.

Florida primary winner Romney didn't mention his opponents - Newt Gingrich, U.S. Rep. Ron Paul, who was in Elko Thursday, or former Sen. Rick Santorum – but geared his remarks to the battle against Obama.

"We have a president elected to lead. He chose to follow. Now it's time for him to get out of the way," Romney said.

Romney's win in Florida brought added enthusiasm to his campaign, Nevada Lt. Gov. Brian Krolicki said after the rally. Krolicki is cochairman of Romney's Nevada campaign. "The energy from Florida energized the troops here. You feel this," he said.

Romney also has an advantage in Nevada because he is a Mormon and has strong support from the state's Mormons - apparent at the Elko rally.

He said he would cut spending and come up with a balanced budget. He also wouldn't give bailouts to alternative energy companies that then go broke, he said, referring to the controversy over solar company Solyndra.

Romney also said the country needs to shrink government and "get out of our lives." He called for repealing the health insurance reforms known as Obamacare, and said the Obama administration "is making it harder and harder to get the energy and resources we need." While Obama looks at solar and wind energy, he "would take advantage of our oil, coal, our gas."

Although Romney's remarks aimed at Elko and the West were limited, Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter told the Elko audience that Romney understands the issues in Nevada and Ida-

Unemployment Drop Sends Stocks Soaring

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 156.82 points, or 1.2 percent, to close at 12,862.23.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index added 19.36 points, or 1.3 percent, to 1,344.90,

HIRING SURGES IN JANUARY

WASHINGTON (AP) • In a long-awaited surge of hiring, companies added 243,000 jobs in January – across the economy, up and down the pay scale and far more than just about anyone expected. Unemployment fell to 8.3 percent, the lowest in three years.

The job growth was the fastest since last March and April. Before that, the last month with stronger hiring, excluding months skewed by temporary census jobs, was March 2006.

The unemployment rate came down by two notches from December. It has fallen five months in a row, the first time that has happened since 1994, two economic booms and two recessions ago.

Titans Clash in Mexico's Fight Over Monopolies

MEXICO CITY (AP) • A technological revolution is pushing Carlos Slim, the world's richest man, into a battle with other powerful interests in Mexico, creating a billionaires' version of a schoolyard spat. To the wonderment of many Mexicans, companies accustomed to crushing competitors are now casting themselves as crusaders against monopoly.

The corporate titans have run full-page ads accusing each other of lying, cheating and conspiring to overcharge customers, allegations often bolstered by official studies finding that Mexicans pay far more than they should for many services because major businesses lack strong competitors.

Government said the U.S. economy added jobs in January • America's job market is starting to heal just as other major economies contend with rising unemployment and the threat of recession.

The unemployment rate fell faster in the United States in 2011 than it did in all but three of the 31 countries measured by the Associated Press' Global Economy Tracker. Only Germany, Russia and Turkey had faster declines. Unemployment fell to 8.3 percent, its lowest point in three years.

At the same time, Europe's economy has deteriorated over the past year and may already have slipped into recession.

Appleton Was the Company's Czar

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Steve Appleton personified Micron Technology Inc. He was more than its public face — he was its czar.

"It was ruled by one guy," said Mike Howard, a semiconductor analyst in Boise for IHS iSuppli and a former Micron employee. If Appleton said the company was going to do something, everyone fell in line, Howard said.

Appleton, the chairman and CEO of Micron Technology, was killed shortly before 9 a.m. Friday in a plane crash at the Boise airport. He was 51.

"We are deeply saddened to announce that Steve Appleton, Micron Chairman and CEO, passed away this morning in a small plane accident in Boise," the company's board of directors said in a news release. "Our hearts go out to his wife, Dalynn, his children and his family during this tragic

"Steve's passion and energy left an indelible mark on Micron, the Idaho community and the technology industry at large."

Appleton brought a deep history to the computer chip business and has been a driving force in consolidation that has surrounded the business, Howard said.

He was also a risk-taker. Micron's board was tolerant of Appleton's penchant for risky hobbies, said Parker. "Steve's hobby of flying airplanes is part of who he is, of his competitive and dynamic nature," said Dave Parker, a Micron spokesman, in 2004, after Appleton was injured in another plane crash.

"It translates well into his job as CEO of a major semiconductor memory company and the challenges that come with that responsibility," Parker said then. "The board understands this."

One question is what Appleton's death will mean to the future of Micron.

Appleton's death came just one week after Micron's No. 2 executive, Mark Durcan, 50, announced that he would step down as resident and chief operating officer in August after 28 years with the company. Mark W. Adams, Micron's vice president of worldwide sales, was named to succeed Durcan. He has an MBA from Harvard.

Appleton led the company through its downsizing in recent years. Amid continuing losses, Micron ended memory-chip manufacturing in Boise in 2009. The company now employs more than 5,000 people in Boise, half the number it had a decade ago.

Trading in Micron's stock was halted Thursday on the Nasdaq exchange.

When the Boss Dies Suddenly

Many companies don't adequately plan for the loss of their CEO.

BY JULIE HOWARD

Idaho Statesman

Editor's note: This story was first published July 18, 2004, after Micro CEO Steve Appleton was injured when he crashed his plane in the desert near Boise.

BOISE • It's a morbid issue, but one every board of directors has to address. What happens if the firm's CEO or chairman dies suddenly?

The issue came home to Micron Technology in 2004 when the man who held the company's top three titles chairman, president and CEO – smashed his small aircraft into the desert floor near Boise.

Steve Appleton survived, with only an overnight stay in the hospital and some stitches to his forehead, and - in any case — Micron executives said the firm had a plan in place that guaranteed it wouldn't be left without a leader.

"Micron's board periodically reviews the succession plan, and they are knowledgeable of the internal candidates, both for the CEO position, as well as other executive positions," said Micron spokesman Dave Parker.

CEO succession should occur seamlessly, whether it's a sudden or planned management departure, to ensure shareholder value and keep speculation at a minimum, said management assessment consultant Ted Bililies.

But that doesn't always happen. "In U.S. corporations, there is a frightening absence of logical, rational planning in this area," said Bililies, a partner in ghSmart in Massachusetts. "I certainly hope Micron has someone, or several people, in the wings."

The smart plan, said Bililies, is for a current CEO and the board of directors to routinely review potential "stars" in the company and prepare them over time for leadership

According to the Business Roundtable, an association of CEOs of 150 large U.S. companies, it is the board of directors' responsibility to plan for management succession, including for the CEO and other senior managers. But a spokeswoman for the organization said that the issue hasn't been considered important enough to warrant much discussion by its members.

JEERS to the truck driver who knocked an interstate overpass near Burley out of commission until at least this summer.

The 850 West Road bridge was damaged Dec. 13 when the over-extended arm of an excavator traveling down Interstate 84 hit three of the bridge's four girders. The excavator was carried on a flatbed trailer, towed by a truck belonging to Lancaster Trenching Inc. of Filer.

Fixing the overpass will cost about $350,000, including replacing two of the damaged girders. The state is working with Lancaster's insurer to pay for CHEERS to Rick Kellum and the recertified Stepping Stones halfway house in Twin Falls.

Kellum spent roughly three decades abusing drugs and alcohol while the consequences caught up with him. He's now been sober for four years, and was picked to manage Stepping Stones, which had been decertified by the state following problems under its previous management.

As Kellum knows, freeing yourself from the grip of substance abuse is not a simple task. We wish the best to him and his tenants as they strive to become responsible citizens again.

"Honk if you love Jesus; text if you want to meet Him" may seem like a pithy message, but it lacks any sense of compassion. Inattentive driving, including texting, has been responsible for far too many accidents and deaths on Idaho roads - likely including 18-year-old Taylor Sauer of Marsing, who died just three weeks ago after she crashed into a slow-moving semitrailer. It is a serious issue; too serious to be relegated to punchline status on an outdoor sign.

THEIR VIEW

GOP Candidates' Immigration Fantasies

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday:

or months, Republican presidential hopefuls steadfastly avoided any discussion of immigration, except to rotely demand tougher and stricter border enforcement.

Now we know why: They have no answers. In the weeks leading up to Tuesday's Florida primary, the candidates finally addressed the subject, seeking to woo Latino voters with fantastical fixes that purported to address the immigration crisis but in fact would do nothing to resolve it.

Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, for example, believes that the 11 million undocumented immigrants in this country will simply "self-deport" after his stepped-up enforcement of immigration laws makes it too difficult to for them find work. Under his plan, a national identification card and broader use of an electronic database that lets employers verify workers' immigration status would encourage many to leave.

But that ignores the fact that the economic downturn has already made jobs scarce, yet few illegal workers have left.

an. 12 marked the second anniversary of the horrific earthquake that ripped Haiti apart. While we quite properly remembered the unthinkable loss of Haitian lives that day, less well remembered were the deaths that same day of more than 100 U.N. officials in the collapse of the building that housed the headquarters of the U.N. mission in Haiti.

They were there in an effort to help the process of nation building in Haiti and to assist with humanitarian relief efforts there. Their deaths remind us that the United Nations and its staff members serve in many difficult places working on the most difficult issues. Their efforts serve us all.

Today's national security challenges are global in nature. Threats like terrorism, nuclear proliferation and pandemic disease respect no borders. America, the most generous country in the world, must play its part in countering these challenges but, particularly in these times of increased austerity, we must have partners who will join us in this effort.

First and foremost, we need a strong, efficient, well-run United Nations that can expand our global reach. A strong United Nations can help provide that global reach and influence required in responding effectively to these threats, and also in preventing them from becoming major crises.

A truly unique body, the United Nations offers us the ability to communicate and collaborate with nearly 200 countries, our fellow members, on a breadth of issues.

Sometimes, the messenger matters, and a messenger that represents the collective global community stands a better chance of persuading people to take action than one from any particular country, even our own. Unfortunately, there are members of Congress who would have us cut our support for the United Nations.

They mock the United Nations because we sometimes disagree with our colleague member states on some highly contentious issues. They forget that the U.N. Charter, a remarkable document, is largely influenced by American values. They choose to pick on an easy target for scorn, and they do so without proposing any reasonable alternatives. That represents short-sighted and misdirected thinking.

Whether providing famine relief, staunching nuclear proliferation, creating arms embargoes, blocking the travel and financial support of rogue actors, establishing global standards to prevent money laundering, or curbing the spread of pandemics like Avian Flu, the United Nations' work enables the United States to reap real national security benefits that advance American interests and make us safer and stronger here at home.

The full range of U.N. agencies does the tough, thankless work frequently forgotten and left off the pages of our newspapers. Especially as we withdraw from Iraq and Afghanistan we need to remember that it will be international organizations like the United Nations that will pick up a significant amount of the slack on political, humanitarian and development processes.

Shareholders Sue Hecla Mining Co. after Deaths

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • Some shareholders have sued Hecla Mining Co. for stock losses they endured after the federal government shut down the Lucky Friday Mine for safety violations.

The Bricklayers of Western Pennsylvania Pension Plan this week filed the lawsuit in federal court in Idaho against Hecla, which is based in Coeur d'Alene.

Hecla announced on Jan. 11 that the mine will be closed for a year to make the changes ordered by federal regulators after two miners died in separate accidents last year.

The lawsuit contends the closure caused Hecla's stock price to fall 21 percent to $4.61 per share on Jan. 11 and that the company prior to that had made false and misleading statements that artificially inflated the price of its stock.

"Defendants lacked a reasonable basis for their positive statements about the company's operations and its expected silver production," the lawsuit said, accusing the company of Hecla officials did not immediately return a call seeking comment Friday.

The company's stock has since rebounded to more than $5.30 per share.

In January, Hecla announced that the Mine Safety and Health Administration had ordered it to remove sand and concrete material that had built up in the main elevator shaft of the Lucky Friday, one of the nation's deepest underground mines. The company said the work would take up to a year, and the mine would be closed during that time.

The closure prompted Hecla to reduce its estimated silver production for 2012 from more than 9 million ounces to about 7 million ounces, all from its remaining Green's Creek mine in Alaska.

Production is expected to resume in early 2013.

The mine has been shuttered since mid-December, when a rock burst injured seven miners.

Federal regulators have been conducting a close inspection of the mine because of the series of 2011 accidents. They decided they wanted the sand and concrete material removed because it can break off and fall down the shaft, injuring people or damaging the elevators.

The silver mine is located about 50 miles east of Coeur d'Alene in a region called the Silver Valley.

Miner Brandon Lloyd Gray, 26, was buried in rubble while trying to dislodge jammed rock last Nov. 17, and died two days

On April 15, miner Larry "Pete" Marek was crushed when his work area collapsed.

Rep. Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d'Alene, walks toward the Idaho Capitol in Boise on Jan. 30. After another Republican representative quit smoking last year, Nonini is the lone open smoker in the Idaho Legislature, a dramatic change from a quarter century ago when lawmakers smoked in caucus meetings and even during hearings on the floor of the House.

Idaho Rep Is Capitol's Last Cigarette Smoker

BY JOHN MILLER Associated Press

BOISE • Standing outside the Capitol on a brisk January afternoon, Rep. Bob Nonini cups his hand deftly to shelter a cigarette — not from the wind, but from a camera.

The Coeur d'Alene Republican and House Education Committee chairman has the distinction of being the lone Idaho lawmaker who still regularly, if bashfully, steps outside for a smoke.

"This is private," Nonini said, declining further comment this week.

His solo status in Idaho's Statehouse underscores a decadeslong transformation in American culture. But despite a near absence of smokers in the Republicandominated Legislature, don't hold your breath in anticipation of new anti-cigarette laws, even with about a quarter of lawmakers belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which forbids tobac-

Highlighting how deeply those sentiments run, Democrats last year failed to win even a hearing when they proposed raising cigarette taxes from 57 cents to $1.25 per pack.

Nonini is not alone among Idaho lawmakers in his use of tobacco, even if he no longer has anyone to catch regular smoke breaks with. In Idaho's House and Senate, there are a scattering of cigar aficionados, a few discreet chewing-tobacco users and at least one pipe smoker.

"Captain Black," says Twin Falls Republican Rep. Leon Smith, revealing his pipe tobacco of choice.

Still, far fewer legislators smoke than even the 16 percent of Idaho adults who puff cigarettes, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The Capitol's dwindling population of tobacco users today stands in stark contrast to the 1970s, when smoking was so prevalent even inveterate abstainers gladly suspended House Rule 40 - the one forbidding smoking on the floor - just to keep business moving.

Otherwise, smokers would rush for the exits, grinding the gears of public policy making to a halt, says former Democratic Rep. Russ Westerberg, who served from 1974 to 1978 and now lobbies, including for the Cigar Association of America.

"There wasn't hardly a place in the Capitol when you couldn't smell smoke," says Westerberg, a non-smoker.

Police: Men in Spandex Give Hug; Woman Calls Cops

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • A Rexburg woman was not amused when two men dressed in spandex body suits unlawfully went into her apartment near the Brigham Young University-Idaho campus and gave her a hug before fleeing.

The Post Register reports the woman called police late Tuesday to report two men had entered her apartment dressed in head-to-toe spandex and embraced her against her will. She was not injured.

Police have dubbed the suspects "snuggles" and say the men face potential charges of battery and unlawful entry.

Rexburg Police Capt. Randy Lewis says the spandex-clad men appear to have entered more than one apartment in the Mountain Pines Apartment complex, but officers only received the one complaint.

Judge Rejects Challenge on Sage Grouse Listing

BY BEN NEARY Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • A federal judge on Thursday rejected a challenge from environmental groups seeking to force the federal government to take immediate action to increase protections for the sage grouse. Had their request been granted, it could have curtailed new energy production on public lands across the West.

Judge B. Lynn Winmill of Idaho granted a request by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the states of Wyoming and Utah and others to rule against the groups, Western Watersheds Project WildEarth Guardians.

Although Winmill ruled for the federal agency, he had harsh words for Steve Guertin, regional director of the FWS in Denver, over his initial recommendation that sage grouse be listed as "warranted but precluded." That remains the bird's present ranking, which amounts to federal acknowledgment that the bird needs federal protections but that other species are in even worse shape.

"Guertin's recommendation ignored his agency's own guidelines, contained no scientific analysis and featured off-hand comments about the various political interests at play in the case," Winmill wrote. "Given that political meddling has already resulted in one reversal in this case, the court was frankly astonished at Guertin's cavalier recommendations."

Nonetheless, Winmill wrote that the Fish and Wildlife Service scientists later did the necessary work to support Guertin's recommendation to agency higher-ups. The judge upheld the agency's determination that the threat to sage grouse currently falls into the moderate category.

The Interior Department is under a separate federal court order to decide by the end of 2015 whether the birds ultimately should receive Endangered Species Act protections.

Pat Deibert, national sage grouse coordinator with the Fish and Wildlife Service in Cheyenne, applauded Winmill's ruling, saying the agency believes it's appropriate for the courts to defer to the agency's expertise.

"It doesn't mean we've quit working on the sage grouse," Deibert said. "It just gives us a more reasonable amount of time."

The sage grouse is a chicken-sized bird known for its elaborate mating display. It's found in Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, South Dakota, North Dakota Nevada, Utah, Washington, Oregon, eastern California and western Colorado.

Jon Marvel, executive director of the Idaho-based Western Watershed Project, said Friday he's disappointed in Winmill's ruling.

"I think it just delays the day of reckoning, but does not change the probable outcome," Marvel said. "It's clear the judge was disappointed and disgusted with the behavior of the regional director," Marvel said. "And that I think reflects poorly on this administration in that it simply is an extension of the political involvement that was carried out during the Bush administration, where recommendations for listing of species under the Endangered Species Act are interfered with by political considerations. So, it's a shame, but it appears to be a continuing reality." here's the magicvalley.com

Marvel said listing sage grouse as endangered would put a significant damper on oil, gas and coal development in sage grouse habitat in the West.

"The reality is that these groups have not proposed anything substantive to protect sage grouse habitat," Marvel said of energy interests. "Instead, they have chosen to avoid making commitments to protecting that habitat. And as a consequence, it seems to me they are in the process of digging their own graves."

Jay Tutchton, lawyer for WildEarth Guardians in Denver, said Winmill's ruling makes it clear that the sage grouse issue will get resolved by 2015.

"In the meantime, what you will see is a large amount of activity by various states and federal agencies trying to put in place some sort of protective regime that will allow the government not to list the sage grouse, and we will just have to wait and see if they can come up with an alternative that actually protects the bird," Tutchton said.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar has said sage grouse have experienced a 90 percent decline in their numbers and a 50 percent decline in their habitat over the last century. Populations have been relatively stable over the last decade.

Wyoming officials have been working for years to try to keep the sage grouse off the endangered or threatened list to avoid interrupting energy development, the state's bread and butter. The state has designated core sage grouse habitat where restrictions are in place on disruptions, including energy develop-

Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead said Friday that Winmill's decision allows the state to move forward with its own conservation plan.

"Our deliberate approach recognizes that the goal of the Endangered Species Act is not listing a species, but rather the goal is to avoid the need for a species to be added to the list," Mead said. "Wyoming is also working with other western states and the Bureau of Land Management to share our state-led strategy for sage-grouse management."

Salazar traveled to Cheyenne in December to applaud Wyoming's sage grouse conservation efforts, which he said could be adopted by other Western states.

Bruce Hinchey, president of the Petroleum Association of Wyoming, said Friday that he believes Wyoming's approach offers real protection for the birds. Considering what's already been done and reclamation efforts undertaken by energy companies, he said, "I think they're going to be hard-pressed to come up and say that the bird needs to be listed."

Jerome's Krumm Steps Down

BY STEPHEN MEYERS smeyers@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Gary Krumm is stepping down as Jerome High football coach. The head coach resigned this week, citing a need to spend time with his "It's mostly family-oriented stuff.

It's not like the cupboard is bare over there. We've got some starters coming back and I think we can be a successful program next season. It just felt like a good time to leave," Krumm said. "I talked about it with my sister and it seemed like the right thing to do. I needed to put my family and faith first. I felt a load lifted off my shoulders when I turned in my letter?

Krumm did not resign from his weight lifting instructor and English teacher positions, and is not seeking other coaching opportunities.

"I talked about it with my sister and it seemed like the right thing to do. I needed to put my family and faith first. I felt a load lifted off my shoulders when I turned in my letter."

Gary Krumm, former Jerome High football coach

Krumm accumulated a 30-27 record in his six seasons at Jerome, slumping to 2-6 this season without a playoff berth. The longtime coach took over a struggling Jerome program in 2006, a year after the Tigers suffered through an 0-9 season and in the midst of a 10game losing streak.

He immediately turned around the program, leading the Tigers to five consecutive playoff appearances, including a spot in the Class 4A state championship game in 2008. The Tigers beat Blackfoot, Nampa and Minico in the playoffs before losing 55-35 to Hillcrest in the title game to finish 9-3.

"That's going to be a tough position to fill," said Jerome athletic director Ty Jones. "Gary has done a great job putting us back on the right track and getting us to where we should be competing at the 4A level."

Jones said the search for a new head coach will begin soon.

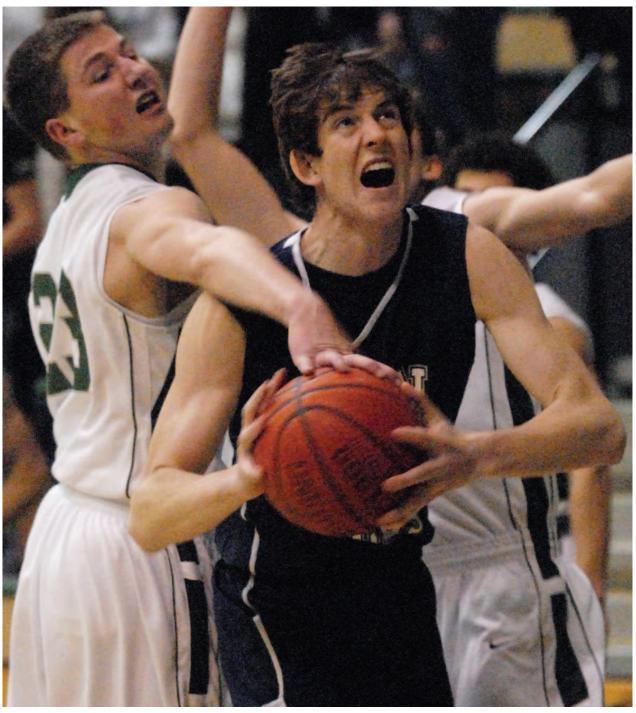

"I don't think we'll be short on applicants," he said.

Prior to coaching the Tigers, Krumm coached 16 years of high school football, with stops at Twin Falls, Burley, Kimberly, Wendell and Buhl.

BURLEY • The chasm in Great Basin Conference boys basketball continues to widen, and Burley is caught in the middle.

Top-ranked Twin Falls swept through Burley with a 61-35 win Friday, extending its winning streak to 17 games.

"We definitely want to be good at being good," said Twin Falls' Jared Allen. "We know we're on a winning streak and we know we're one of the top teams, so we're going to try our best to hold on to that position."

The Bobcats (10-7, 5-4 GBC) have proven themselves against the teams beneath them in the standings, but can't quite get over the hump. For the second time this season, Burley lost back-to-back games against the league's top two: Twin Falls and Jerome.

"We pretty much know we're third seed now. Going into (districts) we're going to work our butts off and overall we want to (upset) that one or two seed, maybe get in that play-in game and go to state. That's what we're hoping," said Burley senior Taylor Carson, who scored nine points after being awarded the Curtis Hall Memorial Scholarship prior to the game.

Twin Falls (17-1, 9-0) got balanced scoring, with five players registering eight or more points.

Allen led with 12 points, and the senior post showed his versatility while scoring eight points in the first four minutes. He started off with a three-point play inside, then stepped out to knock down a 3-pointer and added a pair of free throws.

Coach always says that anyone can win on any given night," Allen said. "I think the coaches do a good job getting us prepared and motivated for every game. We knew that Burley starts hot, so we had to step up and play at their

Wood River girls beat Minico, advance to Class 4A District IV championship game.

The Wood River girls basketball team did yet another thing it hadn't done before, beating Minico on the road Friday. The 54-40 victory put the Wolverines where most expected them to be: a game away from their second straight Class 4A District IV title.

'We joked about this career bucket list, like beating Jerome at home and now beating Minico at home," said Wood River forward Haylee Thompson said, referring to a couple of things this current crop of seniors had never done prior to the last week-plus. "The big goal for us is to win a state championship, and I think we're starting to find that drive to get there." Thompson had a game-high 17 points and nine rebounds for the Wolverines (12-9), who won their sixth straight and seventh in the last eight. Kaitana Martinez scored 13 and added nine assists and six rebounds, but her most key contribution came with 0.9 seconds left in the first half, when she delivered a ball-fake on an inbound pass to free up Hannah Belloli for a deep 2 at the horn. Wood River was already up 10 before the shot, but it effectively killed the Spartans (14-8)

"Kaitana just gave me a wink and I knew I was going to get the shot," said Belloli. "She saw (Minico guard Micaela) Merrill cheating off a little and made a great play." Though the final score was similar to Wood River's win over Twin Falls a night prior, the games were nowhere near mirror images. On Friday the Wolverines jumped on Minico from the opening tip and never trailed, stretching the lead to as large as 17 points after three quarters.

CSI Softball Extends Win Streak to Seven

TIMES-NEWS

A week after leaving Las Vegas with a 2-4 record, the Golden Eagle softball team continued its roll at Great Western Shootout in Yuma, Ariz., winning three games Friday, two in lopsided fashion while never trailing for a single inning.

Against Eastern Arizona, Lea Hopson's two-run home run in the first inning sparked a 5-0 CSI lead through two innings. Eastern scored two runs in each of the fourth and fifth innings, but Nellie Makings held down the opposition's bats and got some cushion with a run in the fifth for a two-run lead.

The bats broke out a little later against Arizona Western, but did enough damage to earn a mercyrule, six-inning victory. Nikki Brailsford hit a tworun home run in the sixth and Kelsie Webster's solo shot ended the game. Jessie Duncan pitched a two-hitter while striking out four.

Another run-rule victory followed against Golden West (Calif.) in a 9-1 victory. Alyana Watson went 3for-4 with three runs and an RBI, and Hopson added three hits while scoring twice.

CSI looks to extend its win streak with a pair of games today, starting at 10 a.m. against El Paso (Texas).

The College of Southern Idaho baseball team ran into the best pitcher it had faced thus far. By the time the Golden Eagles finally chased him, it was too late to rally for the win.

Louisiana Tech signee Richie Navari shackled CSI for six innings, allowing Scottsdale (Ariz.) Community College to provide him enough runs to eke out a 5-4 win in Henderson, Nev., on Friday.

Navari yielded one hit through six innings for the Artichokes, who built a 5-0 lead during that timeframe. CSI (4-4) knocked him out of the game during a four-run seventh, but the damage was already done.

Dustin Doucette took the loss, going 52-3 innings.

Minico's Lopez Inks With Waldorf

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • When Minico soccer standout Eddie Lopez crossed paths with a vagabond assistant coach four years ago, he never dreamed it would eventually be his ticket to college.

Lopez signed a letter of intent Friday to play soccer at NAIA Waldorf College in Forest City, Iowa.

Former Minico assistant coach Ben McArthur, who is now an assistant at Waldorf, reached back to Rupert to recruit the versatile Lopez.

"I'm nervous. I never expected that I could get this far," said Lopez. "Once (the coaches) got a hold of me, I knew this was a great opportunity."

Lopez was a four-year varsity player at Minico and was voted by his teammates to be the co-captain for his senior season. He helped the Spartans earn their first-ever trip to the state tournament last fall, which Lopez listed as his proudest high school soccer accomplishment.

"He's a very dedicated player. He's a leader," said Minico coach Armando Tapia. "He's shown potential since he was a freshman."

A three-time all-Great Basin Conference selection, Lopez played every position on the field for Minico, mostly at fullback and center midfield.

As a student-athlete on scholarship, Lopez said the Waldorf coaches plan to use him as a left defender, where he could see significant playing time as a freshman.

"I just want to get that college experience, to see how it is. If I feel good about it, we'll see how far it can take me."

JEROME • Hannah Stanger could hardly contain her

The Burley guard, known more for her defense than her offensive prowess, earned a trip to the free throw line with 50.9 seconds and her Bobcats clinging to a three-point lead over Jerome.

She calmly sank both, her teammates added 5-of-6 from the line the rest of the way and the Bobcats knocked the J.L.T. out of the Class 4A District IV Tournament and sent Jerome's Brent Clark home with a loss in his final game as head coach of the Tigers.

"Oh it was nerve racking. These games are never easy," Stanger said. "I just tried to clear my mind. I wasn't thinking about my family, I wasn't thinking about boyfriends. It was just me and my team and coaches and making these free throws to help win the game."

Clark steps down after five years as head coach of the girls team and 24 years overall at Jerome where he served as an assistant for the girls and coached the boys from 1994-98.

"I knew coming into this season that this would probably be my last," Clark said. It's been a long ride and I'm just tired. I've been a part of the X's and O's and the scouting and the long nights and I want to return to the teaching part of the game." Clark said he would strongly consider an assistant coaching position. "I'll still be on the bench, just a little further down the line," Clark said. "It's a disappointing finish for these girls, but I'm proud of this group and what they've done."

Clark's Tigers (15-7) started the game with careless turnovers and just three points in a lackluster first senior Haylee Burnham in the second. Burnham, who inked her quarter. So they turned to letter to the College of Idaho in January, scored 13 points in the second quarter, including a string of seven straight to give Jerome the 10-8 lead. The Tigers outscored Burley 18-12 in the quarter and took a 21-20 halftime lead.

Burley (12-11) held Burnham to just three points the rest of the way, however, frustrating her into contested shots. After the Bobcats took a 42-37 lead thanks to Stanger's free throws, Jerome was stymied on offense, failing to get Burnham a clean look.

"You can't go under those screens with Haylee. She's a really, really good player and can shoot the ball," Stanger said. "I just tried to make contact with her and not let her get in space."

While Jerome leaned on the offense of Burnham, Burley used a methodical approach through its forwards Chelsee Baker and Brooke Bowers, who combined for 24 points.

"I thought we did a really nice job (in the second half) finally being patient on the offensive end," said Burley head coach Roger Caresia. "Chelsee got some really good looks."

Burley was 15-of-23 from the free throw line. The Bobcats advance to play at Twin Falls tonight.

"We just have to play with a lot of teamwork, like we did tonight," said Bowers, who scored nine points. "It feels really good to knock out Jerome. Coach told us that they have been really good the past few years and to knock them out means we have a good team this year."

That's when Minico finally came alive, after being outshot and pulling down just four rebounds in the first three quarters to 20 from the visitors.

"We knew height was going to be a problem, but we were really tentative and didn't attack until the fourth quarter," said Minico coach Terry Merrill. "It took us a while to realize that we can play with them, and we battled, but it's tough to come back from down 17?

Chloe Bradford scored 13 to pace the Spartans. Minico will play Monday against the winner of today's game between Burley and Twin Falls.

The winner of that trav-

Otherwise the Wolverines will get to cross yet another item off the list: back-to-back district titles, something the girls program has never accomplished.

"Everybody in our district is a tough team to play, but I think we're just on this high right now," Belloli said. "We just know we'll do whatever it takes to get back to the state tournament."

Goodell: No Plans to Expand Anytime Soon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS • Sorry, Los Angeles. The only NFL expansion happening anytime soon is to next season's schedule of Thursday night games.

During his annual Super Bowl news conference, Commissioner Roger Goodell said Friday there hasn't been any discussion about adding to the league's 32 teams, and indicated he's not too keen about the idea of shifting a franchise, either.

"We have not talked about expansion in the league at all. It has not been on our agenda. It is not something we've focused on with our membership. And I don't see that in the foreseeable future," Goodell said. "We want to keep our teams where they are. We believe that's healthier for the league in the long term. We're working to get stadiums built and make sure we do whatever we can to make sure those teams are successful in those communities."

Los Angeles, the secondlargest market in the U.S., has been without an NFL team since the Rams and Raiders both left after the 1994 season.

"We would like to be back in Los Angeles, if we can do it correctly," Goodell said. "There are a lot of issues that have to be balanced there."

He announced that every club will appear on primetime TV in 2012, thanks in part to a new slate of Thursday games that now will be scheduled from Week 2 through Week 15. NBC will air a game on Thanksgiving night; the other 12 Thursdays will go on the NFL Network, which aired eight games in 2011.

"We think it's great for the fans, for the teams - and great for the network," Goodell said.

He discussed a wide variety of issues during his 45minute session with reporters, touching on topics such as concussions, testing players for human growth hormone, and games in England, Mexico and elsewhere.

Asked about an Associated Press story this week based on interviews with a dozen former players, including Hall of Fame member Tony Dorsett, who have filed lawsuits against the league related to concussions, Goodell said: "We have done a great deal to try to address issues that are specific to our former players. We will always make sure that player health and safety is the No. 1 priority in

"We will not quit. We are not done yet. We're going to do what we possibly can to help our retired players, the current players and future players, by making the game safer," Goodell said.

Two hours later, at another news conference down the hall from where Goodell spoke, Indianapolis Colts center Jeff Saturday said recent changes to concussion protocols are working.

the Giants faced the New England Patriots for the NFL title. "I don't know if that has ever changed. You know exactly what to expect from him and what he expects from you in return. Everybody can appreciate that or being comfortable because you know where you stand."

"Have I changed?" Coughlin asked rhetorically. "Probably, but I think it's important as the process of learning. You learn, develop, and change every year. You have to bring a fresh approach each year to your team, especially when you've been doing it a few years in the same place. If I've changed, it's been an attempt to motivate and put us in the best possible chance that we can be."

A history buff, especially military history, Coughlin acknowledges he's more patient now than earlier in his career. When a player did something wrong, the coach would be all over him immediately. Now, he picks his spots.

The one thing that hasn't changed is his open-door policy.

Have a problem? He wants to know about it and talk about it.

That's what he did when safety Antrel Rolle was unhappy with the defense earlier this season and when defensive captain Justin Tuck struggled with shoulder, toe and groin injuries.

Social Media Invades Super Bowl

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS • Attention, SB46 Looking for a celebrity? Need a parking spot or a bathroom? How about a place to eat without waiting for hours? The answers could be just a tweet away.

A year after Super Bowl 45 set a record 4,064 tweets per second during the fourth quarter of the game, organizers are aiming to make this year's game in Indianapolis the most connected Super Bowl

Dozens of volunteers are stationed along downtown streets, armed with tablets and walkie-talkies that connect them to the game's first-ever social media command center. There, volunteers mine Twitter, Facebook and othersocial networks for real-time news that can help fans avoid hassles that could ruin their Super Bowl experience.

More than 37,000 fans are following the host committee on Facebook and through the game's official Twitter account, SuperBowl2012, where pleas for trash removal mingle with requests for tickets to a Lucas Oil Stadium tour. Thousands more have texted SB2012 for weather, traffic and other information.

And yes, in case you're wondering, there's an app for that: The NFL also has created an official "SB XLVI Guide" app for iPhone, iPad and Android phones with a 3D map of Indianapolis that includes road closures and a parking restaurants and events guide. Ticket holders can also type in their seat section and see where they'll be sitting on game day.

"The bottom line is I'm going to need some work done," Calhoun told The Associated Press in a phone interview Friday. "In January the shooting pains were getting worse and after one plane ride I couldn't even get up. I tried to hide it. I'm taking medicine right now for the pain. They are waiting for things to quiet down, and I'll meet with the doctor next

As a result, Calhoun is taking an indefinite medical leave of absence, as he has been suffering for several months from spinal stenosis, a spinal condition that causes him severe pain and hampers mobility.

Calhoun said he told university President Susan Herbst about it but had hoped to gut out the final weeks of the season.

"But it's just so bad, even getting through practice," Calhoun said. "Now I'm going to see what the next step is. The bottom line is I'm Hamilton was suspended for more than three years for drug and alcohol use while in the Tampa Bay organization. Kansas head coach Bill Self argues a foul in a game last year against Missouri. With a border rivalry that dates to the Teddy Roosevelt administration just about to be shut down indefinitely, expect the intensity to reach fever pitch.

Kansas, Missouri Take Border Rivalry Up a Notch

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, Mo. • Any time Kansas comes to town, it's a big deal for Missouri. It seems a bit bigger this time around.

The border rivalry that dates to the Teddy Roosevelt administration is about to be shut down indefinitely as Missouri leaves for the Southeastern Conference. Oh, and both schools are in the top 10, too.

The fourth-ranked Tigers (20-2, 7-2 Big 12) have been a season-long surprise under first-year coach Frank Haith, who arrived from Miami as a relative unknown with a shaky track record. Now he's a contender for national coach of the year, getting the maximum from a sevenman rotation heavy on senior experience.

Once again, they're eighth-ranked chasing Kansas (18-4, 8-1), seeking its eighth straight conference championship and with a one-game lead in the Big 12 over Missouri and Baylor. Thomas Robinson is a candidate for national player of the year, and the only player in the conference averaging a doubledouble every night.

Missouri students began camping out Wednesday night, eager for Saturday morning's ESPN GameDay show ahead of that night's game. For the Jayhawks' final visit to Columbia for a Big 12 game, Robinson figures the taunting will be taken to a new level.

"I'm not letting anybody in that gym, stadium, state, stop me," Robinson said. "So they can say what they want. You're not listening to the crowd. Otherwise, wouldn't be no good."

Kobayashi Downs Record 337 Wings at Pa. Wing Bowl

Competitive-eating champ Takeru Kobayashi conquered Philadelphia's annual gustatory gorge-fest by eating 337 chicken wings in a half-hour before a crowd of nearly 20,000 at Wing Bowl XX. The Japanese phenom demolished the record of 255 set last year by Jonathan "Super" Squibb. The Friday morning extravaganza drew thousands to the Wells Fargo Center before sunrise to watch competitors stuff themselves with chicken wings. Kobayashi claimed a $20,000 cash prize for his victory. It was the six-time Nathan's Hot Dog eating contest champ's first time competing at Wing Bowl, though he consumed a cheesesteak in 24 seconds as part of an eating exhibition last year.

LAS VEGAS • A confident Mitt Romney accused President Barack Obama of failing to do enough to create jobs as he campaigned Friday ahead of GOP presidential caucuses this weekend in a state with sky-high unemployment and foreclosure rates. Newt Gingrich, who is fighting for a respectable showing here, rolled out a fresh line of criticism by comparing the former Massachusetts governor to Obama.

"It isn't good enough for the Republican Party to nominate Obama lite," Gingrich told a boisterous crowd at a rally at country music club in this entertainment hub. He argued that Romney "clearly is against the American ideal" and doesn't understand the free market.

IRANIAN LEADER WARNS U.S., ISRAEL AGAINST STRIKES

BY NASSER KARIMI and BRIAN MURPHY Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran • Iran's supreme leader pledged Friday to aid any nation or group that challenges Israel and said any military strikes over the Islamic Republic's nuclear program would damage U.S. interests in the Middle East "10 times over."

The nationally broadcast comments by Ayatollah Ali Khamenei staked out a hard line in apparent replies to suggestions that military strikes are an increasing possibility if sanctions fail to rein in the Islamic Republic's nuclear program.

It also may signal that Tehran's proxy forces - led by Lebanon's Islamic militant group Hezbollah could be given the green light to revive attacks on Israel as the showdown between the archfoes intensifies.

The West and its allies fear Iran could use its uranium enrichment labs – which make nuclear fuel – to eventually produce weapons-grade material. Iran insists it only seeks reactors for energy and medical research.

Israel has so far publicly backed the efforts by the U.S. and European Union for tougher sanctions that target Iran's crucial oil exports. But Israeli leaders have urged even harsher measures and warn that military action remains a clear option despite Western appeals to allow time for the economic pressures and isolation to bear down on Iran.

Although Israel has raised the strongest hints over a military campaign, Khamenei reserved some of his strongest comments for Israel's key U.S. ally.

"A war itself will damage the U.S. 10 times over" in the region, said Khamenei.

Khamenei claimed Iran, however, could only emerge stronger. "Iran will not withdraw. Then what happens?" asked Khamenei. "In conclusion, the West's hegemony and threats will be discredited" in the Middle East. "The hegemony of Iran will be promoted. In fact, this will be in our service."

On Thursday, Israel's defense minister, Ehud Barak, suggested the world is increasingly ready to consider a military strike if sanctions fail. The head of the country's strategic affairs ministry, Vice Premier Moshe Yaalon, also Please see IRAN, S7

2ND TEACHER FROM LOS ANGELES SCHOOL ARRESTED ON SEX CLAIM

BY ROBERT JABLON Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • A second teacher at an inner-city elementary school where a teacher is accused of committing lewd acts on 23 children was arrested Friday on suspicion of fondling two girls in his classroom.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Capt. Mike Parker said Martin B. Springer, 49, of Alhambra was arrested four days after allegations surfaced against the first teacher, but there was no known connection between the two cases. Springer was being held on $2 million bail.

The expanding case has shocked the nation and thrown a chill into its sec-

Parker said the victims in the second case were about 7 and 8 years old and were fondled once each in a classroom at Miramonte Elementary School during the past three years.

Obama Says His Policies Are an Extension of His Faith

BY JULIE PACE

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Blending politics and religion, President Barack Obama said his Christian faith is a driving force behind his economic policies, from Wall Street reform to his calls for the wealthy to pay higher taxes.

Obama's remarks Thursday at the National Prayer Breakfast were his most explicit account of how his personal religious beliefs factor into his decisionmaking on the nation's pressing problems. The comments came amid election-year criticism from Catholic groups and some Republicans that the president is waging a war on religion following his decision to require church-affiliated institutions to cover free birth control for employees.

Speaking to more than 3,000 people at the annual breakfast, Obama said "faith and values" should play as much a role in tackling the nation's challenges as sound decision-making and smart policies.

President Barack Obama gestures while speaking at the National Prayer Breakfast Thursday in Washington.

He said, for example, that his own call for fairness in the tax code — a central tenet of his State of the Union address and his 2012 campaign is both economically sound and consistent with the teachings of Jesus.

"If I'm willing to give something up as somebody who's been extraordinarily blessed, and give up some of the tax breaks that I enjoy, I actually think that's going to make economic sense," he said. "But for me as a Christian, it also coincides with Jesus's teaching that 'for unto whom much is given, much shall be required? It mirrors the Islamic belief that those who've been blessed have an obligation to use those blessings to help others, or the Jewish doctrine of moderation and consideration for others."

He also said the Wall Street reform he championed both "makes the economy stronger for everyone" and abides by God's command to "love thy neighbor as thyself" because it helped people who had been hurt or treated unfairly by financial institutions.

And Obama said he believed in a "biblical call" to care for the poor and to follow "the responsibility we're given in Proverbs to 'Speak up for those who cannot speak for themselves, for the rights of all who are destitute?"

The president's remarks came one day after Mitt Romney, the front-runner for the Republican nomination, created a flap with clumsy comments about the poor.

Romney said he wasn't concerned about the "very poor" because they have a safety net. He also said he wasn't concerned about the very rich and intended to focus his campaign on the middle class.

While the White House said the president's remarks were not meant to be political, his comments did fit neatly into the Obama campaign's effort to draw sharp contrasts between the president and Romney.

The former Massachusetts governor is among Republicans who have criticized the president for not exempting religious organizations from a requirement in the 2010 health care law that requires insurers to cover birth control for their employees. Romney said this week that the president was ordering "religious organizations to violate their conscience."

Van Curen Speaks on 'Being Humanist'

Van

Van Curen

Curen, president of the Humanists of Idaho. "Being Humanist" will start at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the CSI Fine Arts Recital

D.G.

As he grew up in Idaho, Van Curen recalls being a skeptic in matters of religion and eventually identified as an atheist. But while that described what he didn't believe in, it left him wondering what he did believe in until he discovered humanist philosophy. Ironically, the things that drew him to humanism – community and a sense of compassion – are the same qualities that often draw people to their religious beliefs. The difference, he says, is that humanism doesn't require supernatural beliefs or mandates of faith in ancient dogmas.

Van Curen's 2008 book, "Dissecting the Bible: A Critical Analysis of the Holy Scriptures," will be available for purchase at the discussion. Admission is free and open to the community.

The mission of the Secular Student Alliance is to organize, unite, educate and serve students and student communities that promote the ideals of scientific and critical inquiry, democracy, secularism and human-based ethics. Club meetings are held at 6 p.m. the first Tuesday of each month in the Fine Arts Recital Hall and are open to the public. Information: Brent Jensen at 420-7066 or bjensen@csi.edu.

Methodist Church Screens New Documentary Film

The Twin Falls First United Methodist Church will screen the 2009 documentary film, "Through My Eyes," at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the church, 360 Shoshone St. E. Admission is free, and the public is encouraged to attend.

Produced by the Gay Christian Network, this 46minute documentary film looks at life through the eyes of young Christians who wrestle with what to do when they discover themselves to be gay.

More than two dozen young Christians agreed to share their private feelings, struggles and experiences on camera. All of them have a personal stake in the debate. And all of them hoped that their stories might make a difference.

The film has been widely praised by all sides as an eyeopening look at what it's like to be a gay Christian in today's world.

facilitator Screening Phillip Grover said the screening is part of a larger plan to expand the church's outreach to the LGBTQIA (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer/Questioning, Intersex, Asexual) community. "Last fall, after screening the award winning documentary, 'For the Bible Tells Me So,' and an extended study of the issues raised, many of us felt that it was time to reach out to the LGBTQIA community and let them know that not only do its members have the support of many of us at Twin Falls First United Methodist Church in their personal struggles but we also felt the need to lend our voices to the ongoing conversation regarding sexual orientation and gender identity happening within the Magic Valley. It's our hope that no matter where one stands on the issues, through activities like the 'Through My Eyes' screening, we are able to better understand our LGBTQIA neighbors."

A short discussion will follow the screening.

In a related development, a lawyer filed a claim against the district stating that he intended to file a lawsuit alleging an unidentified girl ate a sugar cookie laced with the semen of the first teacher arrested, Mark Berndt.

this Earlier week, Berndt, who worked at the school for 32 years, was charged with committing lewd acts on 23 children, ages 6 to 10, between 2005 and 2010. He remains jailed on $23 million bail and could face life in prison if convicted.

Lawyer Raymond Boucher, whose Beverly Hills firm specializes in sexual abuse lawsuits against school districts, religious institutions and hospitals, said the legal claim of behalf of "Jane Doe 1" alleges the district did not take adequate steps to prevent Berndt from repeatedly abusing children after officials received complaints about him.

After news broke early Friday about Springer being removed from the classroom, several parents took their children out of the school.

Ida Santana said her sister called her and told her to pick up her nephew.

"It's hard to leave our kids here," Santana said. "We can't trust the teachers no more. Now there's another teacher."

Santana said the family is unsure where the boy will be going to school from

The development involving the second teacher was made public a day after authorities acknowledged that 18 years ago, a 10-year-old girl claimed Berndt tried to fondle her.

Prosecutors declined to file to charges against Berndt in the 1993 report, saying they didn't have enough evidence. Berndt, who denied the allegation at the time, was never arrested.

The details of that case and other claims by two former students about strange behavior by Berndt surfaced just three days after his arrest.

The allegations raised further questions about why he wasn't disciplined by school officials, who have been lambasted by some parents for waiting a year to reveal that Berndt was suspected of blindfolding children and feeding them his own semen in his classroom in what children were allegedly told was a tasting game.

School officials and investigators said proper procedures were followed to investigate and build a case against the teacher.

The investigation of Berndt began in the fall of 2010 when a film processor became suspicious about the photographs and turned them over to investigators who notified the school district.

Berndt was immediately removed from classwork in January and fired within the month.

BEIRUT • In a barrage of mortar shells, Syrian forces killed 200 people and wounded hundreds in Homs in an offensive that appears to be the bloodiest episode in the nearly 11-month-old uprising, activists said Saturday.

The assault in Homs, which has been one of the main flashpoints of opposition during the uprising, comes as the U.N. Security Council prepares to vote on a draft resolution backing an Arab call for President Bashar Assad to give up power.

Two main opposition groups, the British-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights and the Local Coordination Committees, said the death toll in Homs was more than 200 people in shelling that began late Friday. More than half of the killings - about 140 - were reported in the Khaldiyeh neighborhood.

"This is the worst attack of the uprising, since the uprising began in March until now," said Rami Abdul-Rahman, the head of the Observatory, which tracks violence through contacts on the ground.

The reports could not be independently confirmed.

It was not immediately clear what precipitated the attack, but there have been reports that army defectors set up checkpoints in the area and were trying to consolidate control.

Earlier on Friday, deadly clashes erupted between government troops and rebels in suburbs of the Syrian capital and villages in the south, sparking fighting that killed at least 23 people, including nine soldiers, activists said.

Wrong-number Call Helps Ohio Woman Having Stroke

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Ohio (AP) • A woman who called the wrong number when she suffered a stroke still found help a couple of time zones away.

Loretta Smith, of Cuyahoga Falls near Akron, felt her right side go numb and fell to the floor at her home last weekend.

The 70-year-old Smith said she was able to grab the phone with her left hand and thought she was calling her son. Instead, she was one digit off and reached a man in the Denver area who was originally from northeast Ohio and had kept the same number after he moved.

"It was a woman, and she said 'I may be having a stroke," said Kenny Crater, 28, a sculpture major at Metropolitan State University in Denver.

Crater asked for her name and address and offered to get help. His 911 call was answered by Broomfield, Colo., police, who transferred his call to Cuyahoga Falls.

day that Washington keeps "all options on the table and would be prepared to respond if we have to?" Khamenei answered by repeating Iran's declarations that it will never roll back its nuclear program, which he had earlier said was now part of the country's "identity" and a cornerstone of its technological endeavors. On Friday, Iran said it successfully sent a small satellite into orbit in the third such launch in recent years, state media reported.

"From now on, in any place, if any nation or any group confronts the Zionist regime, we will endorse and we will help. We have no fear expressing this,"

Khamenei, using the phrase widely used by Iran's leader to describe Israel.

Khamenei affirmed that Iran had assisted groups such as Hezbollah and the Palestinian Hamas - a wellknown policy rarely stated explicitly by Iranian leaders.

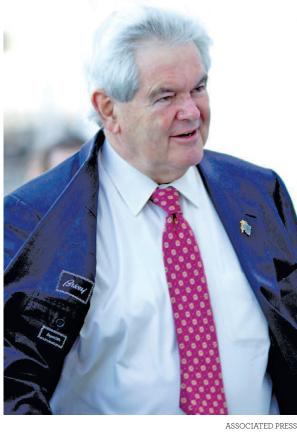

"We have intervened in anti-Israel matters, and it brought victory," he said, citing the 2006 war between Hezbollah and Israel and nearly three weeks of conflict in the Gaza Strip that began with an incursion by Israel in December 2008.

The Gaza battles ended in a cease-fire, with Israel claiming to have inflicted heavy damage on the militant organization. The war in Lebanon ended with a U.N.brokered truce that sent thousands of Lebanese troops and international peacekeepers into southern Lebanon to prevent another outbreak.

Khamenei called Israel a "cancerous tumor that should be cut and will be cut" - a remark he has made previously.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said he wasn't surprised by Khamenei's remarks. "It's the same kind of hate speech that we've been seeing from Iran for many years now," Yigal Palmor said.

Half of Khamenei's nearly two-hour speech was delivered in Arabic in a clear nod to the Arab world. Iran has applauded the victory of Islamist groups in elections that followed the toppling of authoritarian regimes in Egypt and Tunisia.

Republican presidential candidate, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich arrives for a campaign stop at Xtreme Manufacturing in Las Vegas, Thursday.

For the second day in a row, Gingrich castigated Romney for saying that he's not focused on the poor because they already have a safety net. Romney has said he misspoke, but Gingrich sought to use the moment to gain the upper hand, saying it's another instance where Romney and Obama are similar.

"Obama is big food stamp. He's little food stamp. But they both think food stamps are OK," said Gingrich. "I don't think food stamps are the future for America."

Invoking a deep-pocked donor to liberal causes, Gingrich added: "I don't think the Republican Party wants to approve a George Sorosapproved candidate. I think we want a candidate who represents Americans who work, pay taxes and believe in the Declaration of Independence – not somebody who clearly is against the American ideal?'

Gingrich, who has been on the defensive over his work for Freddie Mac, also sought to turn the tables on Romney, who invested in the housing giant that has been blamed for helping cause the housing melt-

"We did not create Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac so rich guys like Mitt Romney Goldman Sachs make money, Gingrich said.

Gingrich has kept a light schedule in Nevada as he fights for a respectable showing and looks for the GOP contest to turn to the South again in March.

Paul campaigned in Nye County, Nevada, the sole county he carried in the state's caucuses in 2008. The Texas congressman came in second behind Mitt Romney that year, but he hopes to win the state outright this time.

"They will listen to Nevada if we do well here," Paul told a raucous rally of a few hundred supporters in Pahrump. Paul was set to address a gathering of gun enthusiasts in Las Vegas before flying to Minnesota, where he will campaign ahead of that state's caucuses on Tuesday.

Santorum was in Missouri, which holds a nonbinding contest Tuesday. Gingrich is not on the ballot there.

To that end, Santorum cast Gingrich's effort as a decaying campaign and said that the former House speaker's decision to stay in the race was only helping "With Speaker Gingrich out of the race, almost all of the votes he has go to me," Santorum said in Hannibal, Mo., pointing to the upcoming Missouri contest as a chance to illustrate his point. "When we go head to head with Gov. Romney, we can beat him?"

Josef Houzvicka, 62, a homeless, man walks on rail tracks after spending the night in a large heated tent for displaced people arranged by city authorities in Prague, Czech Republic on Thursday. Central and eastern Europe are experiencing a severe and snowy cold snap with temperatures in Czech Republic plummeting to lows of minus 22 Fahrenheit.

Europe Attempts to Shield Homeless from Deep Freeze

BY MARIA DANILOVA Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine • Russia and Ukraine both took extra precautions on Friday to protect homeless people, ordering new facilities and medical care after scores of people have frozen to death on the streets of Europe during a brutal cold snap.

As the death toll from the past week rose to at least 175 on Friday, Russian Emergencies Minister Sergei Shoigu ordered the creation of facilities nationwide to feed and provide medical assistance to the homeless.

Russia has not reported casualty figures from the cold snap, which has gripped a large swath of the continent from Russia to Serbia and reached as far west as the Netherlands. But Russian Deputy Health Minister Maxim Topilin was quoted by the ITAR-Tass news agency on Friday as saying that at least 64 people died from the cold in all of January.

With tens of thousands of protesters expected on the streets of Moscow on Saturday, doctors advised those taking part in the demonstrations to protect themselves from the cold as their grandmothers used to do: by wearing felt boots and smearing their faces with goose or pig

Protesters also were encouraged to eat a big breakfast, preferably including meat, and refrain from drinking alcohol. While most will protesting against Vladimir Putin's government, others will attend a separate

In Ukraine, the hardest hit country, health officials have told hospitals to stop discharging the hundreds of homeless patients after they are treated for hypothermia and frostbite. The goal is to prevent them from dying once they are released into temperatures as low as minus 32 Celsius (minus 26 Fahren-

Authorities also have set up nearly 3,000 heating and food shelters.

Thirty-eight more fatalities were reported from frostbite and hypothermia in Ukraine on Friday, raising the nation's death toll to 101. Emergency officials have said many of the victims were homeless.

Mykola Blyznyuk of the Health Ministry told the Kiev Post newspaper that many of the victims of hypothermia had broken their legs in falls and spent a long time on the ground in freezing temperatures while waiting for help to

Of the Ukrainians who have died since the cold weather hit Jan. 27, 64 were found frozen on the streets, 11 died in hospitals and 26 in their homes, emergency officials said.

It was so cold there, that some 1,500 swans, sea gulls and ducks froze to the ice in a small harbor near Ukraine's Black Sea port of Odessa, forcing emergency workers to use ships to break up the surface and free the birds, officials said. The weeklong cold snap — Eastern Europe's worst in decades - is causing power outages, frozen water pipes and the widespread closure of schools, nurseries, airports and bus routes.

Bosnia reported its first deaths due to cold and snow. Five people died Friday in Sarajevo, most of them while shoveling snow, Dr. Tigran Elezovic said, and one person died in the southern city of Mostar, where ambulances could not reach the victim because of snow.

Rome — where Italians are usually spared from cold winter weather - experienced a rare snowfall on Friday, prompting officials to close the Colosseum, the Roman Forum and the Palatine Hill, the former home of Rome's ancient emperors, to prevent tourists from slipping and falling.

Northern Italy also has been gripped by snow and ice that is disrupting train travel.

Temperatures in the Italian Alps have fallen as low as minus 22 C (minus 7 F).

In the Netherlands, police in the eastern city of Wageningen reported that a homeless man found dead Thursday in a shed died of hypothermia, making him the first confirmed Dutch victim of the cold.

Traffic around the Netherlands was thrown into chaos Friday by snow. Trains ran with long delays and several flights in and out of Schiphol were delayed or canceled.

In Poland, the Interior Ministry recorded eight more deaths on Friday and said two other people died of asphyxiation from carbon monoxide-spewing charcoal

Bobby Wolff

"Man ... plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven As make the angels weep." - William Shakespeare

In today's deal, Hall-of-Famer Tommy Sanders declared an optimistic contract of four hearts, after West had overcalled in spades and East had cue-bid to show a strong raise.

After an opening diamond lead, the obvious thing to do was to win the ace and ruff a diamond. But then there would be no quick entry to the South hand for the second diamond ruff, and the contract would fail even if South made a winning guess in clubs.

Sanders instead played low from dummy at trick one and ducked East's diamond king. This neither gained nor lost a trick, but it created an illusion. West was now convinced that his partner held the diamond ace. East predictably shifted to a trump, and South won with the ace and ruffed a diamond. When he led a spade from the dummy, East could have saved his partner by putting up the king. When he played low and West won with the nine, West confidently led a diamond, and was discomfited to find that South could take two diamond tricks. Sanders then made the winning guess in clubs, since East was almost sure to have the club ace for his two-heart cue-bid.

Of course, West had assumed that if East had the diamond ace, South was bound to have the club ace and would be able to run the clubs if West continued passively with spades. However, if that were the position, South would have played on clubs not spades after ruffing the diamond.

ANSWER: The best action here depends on vulnerability and style. If I am vulnerable, wild horses could not drag an opening out of me; but at favorable vulnerability if my partnership style was to preempt aggressively, I might open three clubs. Passing is not wrong — it all depends on whether nonvulnerable preempts are designed more to obstruct the opponents than start a constructive dialogue.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 18 and my boyfriend, "Jordan," is 17. We have been together a year and a half and rarely fight. There is only one problem in our relationship - his mother.

DEAR \mathbf{A} BBY Jeanne Phillips

"Martha" has lupus and uses it to manipulate Jordan. When we plan dates, she'll tell him she feels sick and make him stay home to take care of her. As soon as the date is canceled, she's miraculously better. She complains that he doesn't spend enough time with her and lays guilt on him because she "could die any day," but says these things only when I'm around.

I don't believe that at 17 my boyfriend deserves the stress she puts on us, but I'm not sure what to do about it. Can you help me?

- STRESSED TEENS IN THE SOUTH

STRESSED DEAR TEENS: There is nothing you can do about it, so accept that as long as you're involved with Jordan, his mother is part of the package deal.

In another year your boyfriend will be legally an adult and able to decide if he wants to stay at home taking care of his mother, or leave to pursue his education or go to work. From your description, the family dynamics do not appear to be healthy. But if you're smart, you will not involve yourself in them. A girl who competes with her boyfriend's mother rarely wins that battle, so remember that.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 14 and a ballet dancer, although I just started dancing seriously at 12. I have been in some shows and my teacher has started me on pointe work. It has become my dream to dance professionally.

When I confided it to my mother, she told me it would be impossible. I take two classes a week, but I will be taking more – possibly five - this year. Should I continue with my dream or pursue something else? I know it's a tough profession to work in, but it is what I

- DANCING FOR JOY IN SAN DIEGO DEAR DANCING FOR

IOY: A career in dance requires strength, determination, discipline and sacrifice. These are all traits that will serve you well regardless of what profession you decide to pursue when you're older. The person you should ask this question of is your ballet teacher, who is better able to evaluate your talent than I can at a distance.

But I urge you to stick with dance as long as it interests you. Even if you don't eventually become a performer, you could become a choreographer, a teacher or find a rewarding career in some other capacity with a dance company.

Now is not the time to give up on this dream.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is an amazing man and I'm lucky to have him, but because he's in the military I don't see him very often. I recently met a guy in one of my college classes who has made it clear that he's attracted to me. I can't help but feel the same about him.

He often asks me to study and hang out with him. Am I being disloyal if I innocently study or hang out with this guy without telling my fiance?

- FRIENDLY FIANCEE IN COLORADO

DEAR FIANCEE: You say the attraction between you and your classmate is mutual. If you start hanging out with him without telling your fiance, then the relationship ISN'T innocent. If you can't handle the separations, then you don't have what it takes to be a military wife. So do both of you a favor and end the engagement.
