CSI, Chobani Discuss Training Plans for Recruits

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Even though the projected opening for Chobani's new yogurt processing plant is months away, a plan to train employees is in the works.

The College of Southern Idaho is working with Chobani and the Idaho Department of Labor to create a plan to train employees once they're hired.

But there won't be training sessions to help prospective employees get a job at the multimillion-dollar plant under construction in southeast Twin Falls. The plant is scheduled to open this summer.

"We are not anticipating there will be some immediate training programs to qualify people to work there," CSI Instructional Dean Todd Schwarz.

He said he couldn't share more details because CSI administrators signed a non-disclosure agreement with Chobani.

Information requested through Chobani about the company's plans wasn't received Wednesday in time for this report.

CSI plays a role in providing employee training when a major new employer comes to the Magic Valley. Training is paid for using Idaho Department of Labor workforce development training funds.

This time with Chobani, Schwarz said there will be a need for skilled workers.

"The operation here will be so much more highly automated than the plant in New York," he said. "The nature of the workforce will need to be very highly skilled in this operation."

CSI might also provide upgrade training to help Chobani employees advance their skills in the future. Plus, Schwarz said, there could be an impact on degree programs the college offers.

"I'm anticipating that we'll be creating some new programming," he said.

Chobani has started its hiring process, but it's not quite in full swing, Schwarz said.

Jerome Hospital Sees Merger's Benefits

New technology and a long-term strategy are in the works for St. Luke's Health System's newest Magic Valley location.

JEROME • Months after quietly merging with the state's largest employer, Jerome's hospital is set to receive some benefits from its new owner.

St. Luke's Health System has set aside $780,000 for the Jerome medical center — formerly St. Benedict's Family Medical Center — to be used for technological upgrades.

Before the integration, St. Luke's hospital administrators promised to set the Jerome location up to use electronic medical records. The health system is remaining true to its promise by setting aside $280,000 to be spent immediately on the technology.

Another $500,000 will be used to purchase a digital mammography system, a feature the hospital currently lacks, said Jim Angle, CEO for both St. Luke's Jerome and St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Irrigation District Approves Fish Farm Deal

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • Southwest Irrigation District water users unanimously approved a groundbreaking fish farm purchase on Tuesday.

SWID water users still have a few steps before completing their end of the deal, intended to resolve current and future water disputes in the region. But getting voter approval marks the last major hurdle for the district.

"If someone had a major problem with the purchase then I would have hoped that person would have voted no," said Randy Brown, SWID board member.

The Aberdeen-American Falls, Bingham, Magic Valley and North Snake groundwater districts have already purchased the fish farms, including the majority of Blue Lakes Trout Farm's production facilities and their associated water rights.

SWID must next secure a judge's permission to take on long-term debt. Then, the district will buy 15 percent of the farms and water rights from the groundwater users. Brown

Supreme Court Weighs Whether Company's Product Killed Calves

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • There's no question that 100 heifer calves died in 2005 at J&J Calf Ranch. The question: What killed them?

On Wednesday, the Idaho Supreme Court heard an appeal from Land O'Lakes, which had previously been found liable for the deaths after the Twin Falls County ranch's owners fed the calves the company's milk replacer. The company argued that owners Jesus Hurtado and John Reitsma hadn't proven that the milk replacer was the culprit.

In 2005, the ranch lost more than 100 heifer calves in a four-month period. The heifer calves had been fed a milk replacer produced by Land O'Lakes. Bull calves that had been fed another milk replacer didn't die.

When Hurtado and Reitsma switched the heifer calves to the other product, the deaths stopped. In 2007, a Twin Falls County jury found the company liable for the deaths.

Attorney David Maguire, representing Land O'Lakes, asked the court to reverse that decision, arguing that Hurtado and Reitsma hadn't sufficiently proven that the cause of death was the feed replacer. Maguire pointed out that fecal samples from the heifer calves showed evidence of scour, or severe diarrhea, which can be caused by cryptosporidiosis. Cryptosporidiosis can come from any number of sources, including flies, which Maguire contended were present on

Burley Golfers Offer Advice for Course

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Several Burley golfers shared their ideas Tuesday on improving the city's golf course, which continues to operate at a deficit.

City Councilman Russ Mallory asked the golfers to speak before the council after he received calls from some "irate" golfers when the city offered discounted season passes for new golfers.

Golfer Bill Morgan said the city should offer price reduction incentives to golfers who purchase season passes early. He said the city should budget from year to year for major capital expenses at the course.

Though she doesn't golf, Tracy Wallin said employees at the course are not "real friendly."

And Max Covington, a golfer, said the costs at the course have gone up each year for several years, corresponding to a decrease each year in the number of players.

When those two lines cross, business owners usually have to examine their business plan, he said.

the ranch in huge numbers. Without a necropsy, they couldn't prove the source.

Maguire also argued that there were no other reports of calf deaths from other dairies that used the milk replacer. It didn't make sense that the company was "producing a poison that goes to Twin Falls, Idaho, and nowhere else," he said.

Twin Falls attorney Harry DeHaan represented J & J Calf Ranch and argued that this is a case of circumstances. The only calves affected, he said, were the ones fed the milk replacer. And as soon as they switched products, the deaths stopped.

"I would submit the logical conclusion then was the crypto was carried by the milk replacer," he said.

estimated that process will finish in about 90 days.

The districts were given a $34 million bond from the Idaho Water Resource Board to pay for the fish farms and have 20 years to repay the board.

The purchase will be vital in resolving current and future water calls made by senior water users, including Clear Springs Foods and a coalition of local canal companies and irrigation districts.

"This kind of purchase is unbelievable," Brown said. "This is something that's going to solve water problems not just in my lifetime, but in my children's and grandchildren's lifetime."

Chobani

"They're not hiring too many positions now when they're not operational until summer," he said.

Job listings are posted on the Idaho Department of Labor's website.

An update on the hiring schedule through Labor wasn't available Wednesday, but positions posted online now include stainless steel workers and fabricators, with pay ranging from $15 to $32 per hour.

Those jobs will last from March through September, according to the job descriptions.

Job seekers who need assistance putting together a resume or working on interview skills can come by CSI's career center, Schwarz said.

Burley Praised for Budget

But the city's golf course was in the red, causing some issues in its general fund.

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • City of Burley officials were commended Tuesday night for running "a very tight ship" as they heard the results of their annual audit.

Though some city funds went over budget, its cash balances increased nearly $970,000 and its debt decreased more than $1.1 million. Increases to its utility funds, cash balances and capital assets added nearly $3.8 million to its net assets, said Ed Evans of Evans & Poulsen P.A.

"Mr. Mitton watches over that very closely and it was right on budget," Evans said, referring to City Administrator Mark Mitton.

The decrease in debt was due to payments made on the city's new well and storage tank, as well as the wastewater plant.

Burley collected $2.2 million in property taxes, which paid for the general fund, $1.5 million; the library, $351,110; and general obligation bond payments, $355,030.

"I want to make it clear to everybody that we are doing well," said Terry Greenman, Burley mayor. "And you can thank your lucky stars you live in Burley, Idaho."

There were a few weak spots. The fire department went over budget more than $60,000. The swimming pool exceeded its plan by nearly $14,000. The city's legal costs ran more than $11,000 above the mark, and the city's administrative budget went over by more than $8,000.

Most notably, Burley's golf course went over budget by $87,396 and required a transfer of more than $102,976 from the general fund. Councilman John Craner said all but a $15,580 shortfall was due to the course's debt payments.

The city paid off the course's clubhouse in 2011, so it will have to pay about $45,000 less in debt service in 2012.

Evans said the general fund operated within budget before transfers were made to the golf course.

The fund was about $8,000 under budget before the transfers and about $40,000 over budget afterwards.

Evans said the increases in the city's utility funds are healthy because the city is planning future upgrades.

"Overall it was a very good year. We stayed under budget except for the general fund, would have been under budget except for the transfers made at the end of the year that we talked about at the golf course," Mitton said.

FILER REZONE WOULD LET HOME PROJECT PROCEED

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • Officials in the city of Filer have decided to pursue changing the zoning of select property on the southeast end of Main Street from commercial to residential.

The decision was made Tuesday after Sheri and Larry Underwood came before the City Council with a plan to tear down their existing residence. But the current commercial zoning, except where fire or natural disasters clear the way for rebuilding, limits construction to remodeling the existing structure.

"What I want to do is take down a substandard house and put up a new house, and that's something that could be done in a lot of places all through Filer," Larry Underwood said. "I'm not asking for anything more than what was done when the house next door burned down."

Changing zoning requires that homeowners residing within 300 feet of the Underwood property be informed of the proposed change and be given an opportunity to comment during a public hearing tentatively scheduled for March.

"I'd rather see a new home in there and get it done right with a rezoning," Mayor Bob Templeman said. "The city will contact people in those four or five houses extending back along Main Street from Fair Avenue and work with them to bring it back to residential."

In other business, council members approved using $690,000 in remaining USDA Rural Development grant funding to complete the installation of collection pipe and close out phase three of the city's $15 million sewer plant project. Pipe boring under the railroad tracks north of town and on Ramsey Street still needs to be finished.

"We talked about maybe doing West Midway by the LDS Church first, because farmers will probably be out there working by April," said City Maintenance Director Bud Compher.

Milo Pleads Guilty in Child Abduction Case

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man accused of helping abduct a 4-year-old boy in November has changed his plea to guilty.

Kelvin Milo Jr., 21, pleaded guilty to child custody interference in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Wednesday. One count of burglary and a count of conspiracy to commit custodial interference were dropped by prosecutors.

Milo was accused of helping Stefanie Contreras enter the Pierce Street residence of her child's father on the morning of Nov. 30. Police say she entered to take her son, Brandon, while Milo and another man, Daniel D. Thomas, accompanied her. The father, Jason Bearce, told police Thomas shot at him when he went to confront Contreras.

Contreras, Thomas and another co-defendant, David Altes, all previously pleaded guilty and await sentencing.

Milo is scheduled to be sentenced April 16.

WOMAN TO PLEAD GUILTY TO STEALING $400K FROM EMPLOYER

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls woman accused of embezzling nearly $400,000 from her former employer is expected to change her plea to guilty.

Marie A. Watkins, 57, was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Wednesday on felony grand theft charges.

Watkins is a former employee of the Twin Falls branch of Alliance Title and Escrow of Boise. Investigators say company officials came to them with evidence of embezzlement in March after learning of the 2010 thefts.

According to court documents, company officials discovered $366,122.15 missing. Watkins allegedly told an independent accounting company she had taken the money throughout the past 10 years to pay for bills and her children's college expenses, but did not speak with police.

A change of plea hearing is scheduled for April 2.

on Wednesday to update the business community on the merger's progress.

He briefly mentioned that the hospital is in the middle of developing a three-year management plan for the Jerome location. Though Angle declined further comment to the Times-News about the plan, St. Luke's Health System spokesman Ken Dey said it will be a strategy on how best to manage the hospital in the long term.

"A lot of it will be determined by local focus groups we have scheduled to start later this summer," he said.

During his presentation, Angle did stress that the transition into the health system was continuing smoothly for St. Luke's Jerome.

One of the remaining decisions is whether St. Luke's

Jerome's foundation board will remain independent from the Magic Valley board, said Dawn Soto, a board member for the Jerome foundation.

Both the Twin Falls and Jerome foundation boards are volunteer-based entities that raise donations for the medical centers, she said.

"During a joint meeting, we discussed the benefits and challenges if we decided to combine the two," Soto said. "The benefits would be access to more resources. But a challenge might be one with perception. People may not want to give if they feel like their money won't be staying in the community."

The two boards don't have a deadline on when they have to make a decision, but Soto said she expects the two to merge.

"We're not in competition with the other board," she said. "I think we can overcome the challenge if we decide to integrate."

Crime Victims Program Moves to Senate

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • The Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee voted Wednesday in favor of funding a program helping victims of crime track those who committed it.

VINE, which stands for Victim Information and Notification Everyday, gives crime victims information on the custody status of the offenders. The program is currently funded with grant money that expires in December.

The bill funds the program by charging offenders $10 per conviction. That money would then go to a fund run by the state police for the program, said Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo.

Victim advocates testified in favor of the bill. Sen. Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls, spoke positively of VINE, saying it had helped him get information on the man convicted of murdering his son, Cameron, in 2003.

The committee advanced the bill to the Senate with a recommendation to pass it. Sen. Steve Vick, R-Dalton Gardens, voted against the bill, saying that while he appreciates the VINE program, he feels it should be supported by the general fund.

Heider's Hunting Amendment Clears Committee

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Hunting and fishing are integral parts of Idaho's identity. But should the right to participate be inked into Idaho's Constitution?

That's a question Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, would like to see on November's ballot. On Wednesday, he introduced a joint resolution that would allow Idahoans to vote on adding an amendment to the state Constitution that would protect the right to hunt, fish and trap.

When explaining his reasons for introducing the legislation, Heider recalled teaching his kids to hunt.

"This year I took two of my grandchildren and watched them shoot their first deer," he said. "All these things become memorable in our lives." And that right must be preserved for future generations, he added.

The two-sentence proposed amendment says the rights to hunt, fish and trap "shall forever be preserved for the people through the laws, rules and proclamations of the state." It also makes it clear that the amendment doesn't create a right to trespass on private property, divert water sources or infringe on other private rights.

Heider said his original proposal was much longer, but he pared it down to make it simpler and easier to understand. He based the amendment off other states' constitutions.

Committee members supported the idea, but took issue with some of the wording. Sen. John Tippetts, R-Montpelier, suggested the words "subject to" may create a more specific, viable law than "preserved"

Sen. Elliot Werk, D-Boise, gave a hypothetical scenario where a low-income person couldn't afford hunting tags.

"Then they are being denied what we have granted them as a constitutional right," Werk said. And if the person successfully sued using that premise, it could endanger the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's ability to manage wildlife, he said.

Heider said the wording that specifies "through the laws, rules and proclamations of the state" should protect the state from those legal actions.

After discussion, the committee voted to send the joint resolution to the Senate with a recommendation to pass it. Werk voted against the move.

Dietrich Home Invasion Trial Reset

TIMES-NEWS

SHOSHONE • The trial for the last of four suspects in a March 2011 home invasion in Dietrich has been rescheduled.

Donabedian Aaron Zachary Donabedian, 23, will face a May 1 jury trial in Lincoln County 5th District Court. Jury selection is scheduled to begin April 26.

The trial was originally scheduled for late January, but defense attorney Ted Larsen asked for a continuance due to new evidence.

Donabedian was also arrested in Twin Falls in mid-January when he allegedly threatened to kill his girlfriend and her children. In that case, he was charged with domestic assault and malicious injury to property and is scheduled for a Feb. 22 pretrial hearing.

In another Twin Falls case, Donabedian will be sentenced for theft by receiving stolen property on Feb. 28.

Donabedian and three others were accused of holding David and Colleen Conner in their home at gunpoint early on the morning of March 9, 2011, and taking items from the house. David Conner told police that one suspect took his shotgun, bound him with rope and placed him on the kitchen floor. Meanwhile, the suspects forced Colleen Conner to find money and other valuables.

Donabedian's charges connected to the case have varied over time. According to online court records, he currently faces a charge of criminal conspiracy.

The other suspects — Gabriel Baker, Jamie Taylor and Jeremiah Bennett — all pleaded guilty last summer to assorted felony charges and are serving time in state prison.

NATION + WORLD

SOURCES: NEW MILITARY ROLES FOR WOMEN

WASHINGTON (AP) • For the past decade women in the U.S. military have served, fought and died on the battlefields in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On Thursday, Pentagon rules will catch up a bit with reality, recommending to Congress that women be allowed to serve in more jobs closer to the front lines.

According to defense officials, the new rules are expected to continue the long-held prohibition that prevents women from serving as infantry, armor and special operations forces. But they will formally allow women to serve in other jobs at the battalion level, which until now had been considered too close to combat.

In reality, however, the necessity of war has already propelled women to the front lines — often as medics, military police or intelligence officers. So, while they couldn't be assigned as an infantryman in a battalion or company going out on patrol, they could fly the helicopter supporting the unit, or move in to provide medical aid if troops were injured.

The officials said the new rules will change that, and formally allow women to be assigned to a battalion and serve in jobs such as medics, intelligence, police or communications officers. The changes would have the greatest effect on the Army and Marine Corps, which ban women from more jobs than the Navy and Air Force do — largely because of the infantry positions.

It Took 8 Minutes to Send Cops to Powell Home

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) • Emergency call logs show that nearly eight minutes elapsed between the time a social worker called 911 to report that Josh Powell's children were in danger and when deputies were dispatched, and it took another 14 minutes for a deputy to arrive on scene.

The Associated Press obtained the logs Wednesday night under a public records request.

At one point during the call, the dispatcher tells the worker, "We have to respond to emergency life-threatening situations first."

A short while later, the house erupted into flames. Powell had killed himself and his two boys.

Authorities say the social worker's call could have been handled better. The agency that runs the 911 call center says it will review the matter and start a disciplinary investigation if necessary.

More Photos Found in Calif. Teacher Abuse Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) • The scandal embroiling an elementary school where two teachers were arrested last week on lewdness charges widened Wednesday with revelations of 200 more inappropriate photos of children and that one teacher sent warmly written birthday cards and presents to students who participated in his "games."

The case of a third-grade teacher accused of feeding children his own semen in his classroom over a five-year period has garnered international headlines.

It has also roiled the nation's second-largest school district, which has a sizable number of students who come from homes with illegal immigrants. Many parents at the school have said they have been reluctant to report suspicions about the teachers because of their immigration status.

The new developments came as Los Angeles Unified School District prepared to reopen Miramonte Elementary School on Thursday with an entirely new staff.

According to three lawsuits filed against the district Tuesday, teacher Mark Berndt sent birthday cards to some of the girls, asking how they were adjusting to the fourth grade. He also wrote warm notes such as "surely no teacher could ever have a more wonderful student than you!!" and "P.P.S. The Roaches Say 'Hi!'"

Fox's TV Medical Drama 'House' to End after 8 Years

Fox's medical drama "House" is ending its eight-year run this season. The show's producers, including Emmy-nominated star Hugh Laurie, said it was a "painful" decision but that the time had come to bring "House" to a close. The drama stars Laurie as Dr. Gregory House, a brilliant but troubled physician with a gift for unraveling medical mysteries. Omar Epps, Robert Sean Leonard and Charlyne Yi are part of the ensemble cast. In a statement Wednesday, Laurie and his fellow producers said they imagined Dr. House as an "enigmatic creature," and that it was best for him to vanish while there was still mystery in the air. The season finale date for "House," which airs 7 p.m. MST Monday, was not announced.

For Santorum, New Challenges Follow His Big Election Victories

BY BRIAN BAKST and JACK GILLUM

Associated Press

ALLEN, Texas • One day after Rick Santorum's startling breakthrough in the presidential race, his few aides decamped to distant states to start building campaign organizations from scratch. It was evidence of his challenge in converting sudden momentum into victories in the rush of contests ahead.

"We definitely are the campaign right now with the momentum, the enthusiasm on the ground," the former Pennsylvania senator said Wednesday, hours after capturing Republican caucuses in Minnesota and Colorado and a non-binding primary in Missouri.

"We feel like going forward we're going to have the money we need to make the case we want," he said.

To replenish his coffers, Santorum arranged a weekend of fundraising events in California. It's good timing, too: In the day since he won Tuesday's contests, Santorum raised more than $1 million as donors started to take a second look at his candidacy. He plans to start campaigning in Washington state on Monday, and then Ohio and Michigan in the following days.

At the same time, aides conceded he was making little or no effort in the caucuses in Maine that end this weekend, and they are still working on plans for competing in primaries in Michigan and Arizona on Feb. 28, as well as the delegate-rich, 10-state Super Tuesday a week later.

Santorum's caucus successes vaulted him ahead of Newt Gingrich into second place in the competition for Republican National Convention delegates. The Associated Press count showed Mitt Romney leading with 112

Romney's Tuesday Losses Show Conservative Doubts

ATLANTA (AP) • Mitt Romney still can't seem to win over the bulk of the conservatives who make up the bedrock of the Republican Party.

Despite primary victories that have established him as the GOP presidential front-runner, his stunning trio of defeats this week laid bare the difficulties that still could undercut his path to the party's nomination — and hamper him in the general election to follow.

Not that he would acknowledge as much Wednesday.

"I don't think the conservative base changes its mind day to day," Romney told reporters, dismissing the notion that he's got a problem with the party's core supporters. "The places where I campaigned actively, we got actually in some respects record support from the conservative base."

Such denials aside, Tuesday's three-state caucus sweep by Rick Santorum illustrated the degree to which many conservative voters remain skeptical of Romney's commitment to the GOP base's principles, especially given what some of them see as his history of shifting priorities. And he hasn't been able to sell them on his main argument — that he's the most likely in the primary field to beat Democratic President Barack Obama.

delegates, followed by Santorum with 72, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich with 32 and Texas Rep. Ron Paul with 9.

"I believe that conservatives are beginning to get it, that we provide the best opportunity to beat President Obama," Santorum said, a jab at both Romney and Gingrich.

Yet he came under fresh attack during the day from Romney as a supporter of earmarked federal spending, and a resumption appeared likely soon in the ad wars that so far have worked to the advantage of the better-financed former Massachusetts governor.

"We're always going to have a huge spending gap, but money can't buy people's hearts," said Ron Carey, an unpaid volunteer who was Santorum's chief adviser in Minnesota and whose car served as a travelling campaign office.

"He has a huge upside when people get to know him," added Carey, a former state party chairman.

Even so, an AP analysis of year-end spending reports showed Santorum may have to stretch to cover all the states that vote in the next few weeks.

While current figures are not available, he reported that at year's end he had a 10-member campaign payroll at a quarterly cost of $49,000 — the smallest of any of the Republicans in the race. He also is helped by paid consultants and unpaid volunteers, as are other candidates.

By comparison, Romney reported a 92-member staff and a quarterly payroll of $1.3 million. Gingrich said he had 23 paid aides, at a cost of $279,000, and Paul, who has yet to win a primary or caucus, paid $381,000 for a staff of 33.

President Barack Obama reported a 430-person campaign staff, which cost $4.7 million for the final three months of 2011.

Study Finds MDs Not Always Honest with Patients

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Trust your doctor? A survey finds that some doctors aren't always completely honest with their patients.

More than half admitted describing someone's prognosis in a way they knew was too rosy. Nearly 20 percent said they hadn't fully disclosed a medical mistake for fear of being sued. And 1 in 10 of those surveyed said they'd told a patient something that wasn't true in the past year.

The survey, by Massachusetts researchers and published in this month's Health Affairs, doesn't explain why, or what wasn't true.

"I don't think that physicians set out to be dishonest," said lead researcher Dr. Lisa Iezzoni, a Harvard Medical School professor and director of Massachusetts General Hospital's Mongan Institute for Health Policy. She said the untruths could have been to give people hope.

But it takes open communication for patients to make fully informed decisions about their health care, as opposed to the "doctor-knows-best" paternalism of medicine's past, Iezzoni added.

The survey offers "a reason for patients to be vigilant and to be very clear with their physician about how much they do want to know," she said.

The findings come from a 2009 survey of more than 1,800 physicians nationwide to see if they agree with and follow certain standards medical professionalism issued in 2002. Among the voluntary standards are that doctors should be open and honest about all aspects of patient care, and promptly disclose any mistakes.

A third of those surveyed didn't completely agree that doctors should "fess up about mistakes. That's even though a growing number of medical centers are adopting policies that tell doctors to say "I'm sorry" up front, in part because studies have found patients less likely to sue when that happens.

Not revealing a mistake is "just inexcusable," said Dr. Arthur Caplan, a prominent medical ethicist at the University of Pennsylvania. Beyond decency, "your care now has to be different because of what happened."

For College Bound, a Look at Financial Aid Changes

BY CANDICE CHOI

Associated Press

NEW YORK • The mad dash to cobble together college funding will soon be under way.

In the weeks ahead, colleges will begin mailing out their much-anticipated acceptance letters and financial aid packages. The notices will alleviate pent up anxiety and finally give high school seniors a clearer idea of what their futures will hold.

But amid all the emotions, students and families will also need to start sorting out how they'll pay for tuition. The average bill now comes in at more than $17,000 to attend an in-state public college.

The problem is that navigating the universe of financial aid can be confusing. That's because there's a vast patchwork of grants, scholarships and loans available. But a failure to properly compare the options and explore the alternatives could mean the difference in thousands of dollars in debt upon graduation.

Adding to that confusion is a spate of headlines in recent weeks regarding changes in financial aid. To help navigate this process, here's a look at what's behind the recent changes:

Comparing Costs

As part of his broad plans to make higher education more affordable, President Barack Obama recently said he wants to make it easier for families to size up the cost of college.

As it stands, there isn't a uniform template for financial aid award letters and officials say the forms can be difficult to decipher, even misleading. For example, schools usually provide a total "out of pocket" cost after subtracting aid such as grants and scholarships. But some schools also subtract loans from that figure, even though loans have to be repaid and actually push up costs because of interest charges.

In other cases, interest rates and other loan terms are not spelled out. Officials say this could lead to students taking on more debt than they realize.

To address the issue, the Department of Education and the newly created Consumer Financial Protection Bureau announced in October that they are developing a model financial aid form. There aren't any plans yet to make the form mandatory. But once a template is finalized, Congress could vote to require colleges to use it to maintain access to federal aid. The adoption of such a form has also been widely supported by student advocates.

Separately, Obama is pushing for a "college scorecard" that would require schools to disclose their graduation rates, rate of employment and debt repayment among graduates.

Interest Rates

Taking out a student loan to attend college has become the norm, with two-thirds of graduates leaving campus in debt. But not all loans are alike. So it might have caught your attention last month when Obama said in his State of the Union address that the fixed interest rates on student loans are set to double in July if Congress fails to act.

Before you panic, keep in mind that there are primarily two types of federal student loans: subsidized and unsubsidized. The difference is that the government doesn't start charging interest on subsidized loans until the student graduates. With unsubsidized loans, interest starts accruing right away.

The loans also come with different interest rates. Unsubsidized loans currently charge a fixed rate of 6.8 percent. The interest rate on subsidized loans was gradually lowered to its current fixed rate of 3.4 percent over the past few years. But the law that temporarily reduced the rate sunsets in July.

So unless Congress extends the reduction, the rate on unsubsidized loans will snap back to 6.8 percent.

This may affect even families that are relatively well off; not everyone who qualifies for a subsidized loan is from a low-income household. This could be the case for students who are attending expensive schools or have other siblings in college. Eligibility is based on financial need, which is determined by a formula on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

Then there are private student loans, which come with entirely different terms. These are widely considered to be an option of last resort since the interest rates tend to be higher and variable, meaning they rise and fall with a benchmark rate. And since benchmark rates are at record lows, the rates of private lenders are likely to rise in the years ahead.

Hardship Clauses

Another difference to note between private and federal loans is that the latter come with greater safety nets.

The issue came to light last week when Sallie Mae, a private student lender, said it was changing how it handles a fee it charges unemployed borrowers who seek to suspend payments.

Sallie Mae isn't cancelling the $50 fee, but said it will now apply the money toward the borrower's loan balance if on-time payments are resumed for six months in a row. The change came after an online petition asking the company to drop the fee collected more than 77,000 signatures on Change.org.

By contrast, borrowers who are unemployed or suffering economic hardship aren't charged to defer payments on federal student loans. In addition, they can apply for a program called Income-Based Repayment, which caps monthly payments at 15 percent of annual income above $16,300. Those who earn less don't have to make any payments; any remaining debt after 25 years is forgiven, or 10 years for those entering public service jobs.

For borrowers who take out at least one federal loan this year, the cap on monthly payments will be lowered to 10 percent of income above $16,300. Borrowers will also be relieved of payments sooner, with any remaining debt forgiven after 20 years.

Source: N.Y., California to Sign Mortgage Settlement

BY MICHAEL VIRTANEN

Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. • New York and California have agreed to sign the proposed settlement between U.S. states and the nation's biggest mortgage lenders over foreclosure abuses, according to a source close to the negotiations.

Bank of America, JPMorgan Chase, Wells Fargo, Citibank and Ally Financial agreed to the settlement — for an estimated $37 billion as of Wednesday for lowering homeowners' mortgage principal, refinancing, a reserve account, and checks to homeowners. However, they were seeking releases from further legal liability, which have been one subject of negotiations for the past several days with state attorneys general who wanted to pursue investigations.

The settlement grants immunity from civil lawsuits brought by the attorneys general against the lenders over narrowly defined "robo-signing" cases.

Feds Charge Chinese Firm with Trade Secret Theft

BY PAUL ELIAS

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • Federal prosecutors on Wednesday significantly expanded a long-running trade secrets case when they unsealed an indictment that accuses a company owned by the Chinese government of conspiring with a California couple to steal trade secrets from DuPont Co.

The indictment unsealed in San Francisco alleges Pangang Group, several of its subsidiaries and two others conspired with Walter Liew and Christina Liew to steal secrets on how to manufacture titanium oxide, which is used to whiten an array of products from paint to toothpaste. Last month, DuPont reported nearly $2 billion in quarterly revenue for the unit that makes the compound.

The case began in April when DuPont filed a civil lawsuit against the Liewes. The FBI began investigating and obtained a warrant to search the Liewes' Orinda home on July 19.

According to an FBI affidavit, agents found keys to a safety deposit box during the search. When agents asked about the keys, the Liewes looked at each other and, according to the FBI, Walter Liew said to his wife, "You don't know, don't know," in Mandarin Chinese. The FBI said one of the agents searching the Liewes' house that day spoke Mandarin Chinese, apparently unbeknownst to the couple.

The agents ultimately traced the keys to the Bank of East Asia, where an employee said Christina Liew had been in the branch on the same day as the search. The safety deposit box was also in Christina Liew's name. In addition to trade secret theft, the couple have been charged with lying to investigators.

Walter Liew has been jailed on a no-bail warrant, while his wife is free on $1 million bail. Lawyers for the couple didn't return phone calls.

The FBI says it seized several incriminating documents from the safety deposit box that that appeared to belong to DuPont and contracts tying the couple to Pangang, a steel manufacturer owned by the Chinese government in China's Sichuan province.

Senate: Give Occupy Boise Time to Claim Property

BOISE (AP) • Senators want to give Occupy Boise protesters up to 90 days to reclaim their property after they've been evicted from state land near the Idaho Capitol.

However, the chamber rejected replacing an immediate eviction notice with a new July 1 deadline.

In a vote Wednesday, the chamber approved the changes to a measure that's already passed the House.

It seeks to ban camping on state-managed land like the old Ada County Courthouse, where Occupy Boise tents have been erected since November.

Senate Majority Leader Bart Davis said giving protesters more time to reclaim their belongings would preserve their constitutional private-property rights.

After these changes, the Senate must vote on the full measure.

Should it pass, it must be returned to the House for another vote, if it's to take effect.

Idaho Revenue Exceeds Projections for February

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposed budget got a little boost from the latest tax revenue collections that were $6.3 million above projections.

Tuesday's release of figures for January point toward continued economic strengthening.

Otter aides have been roaming the Capitol with preliminary numbers recently — to make the case that Idaho revenue will be sufficient to support the Republican's 2013 budget proposal.

That includes a proposed $41 million raise for teachers and state employees, as well as a $45 million tax cut.

The sales tax beat its forecast for the second straight month, exceeding expectations by $7.6 million.

State economist Derek Santos says January's sales-tax performance is an important milestone because it's the month with the year's highest expected collections, on sales that took place during December's holiday shopping season.

U of I Defends Infrequent Use of Campus Alert System

MOSCOW (AP) • Officials at the University of Idaho defended their infrequent use of a campus emergency alert system, after it was not used when a gun was fired into a residence hall on the Moscow campus over the weekend.

The university also didn't immediately issue an alert last August, when a professor gunned down a graduate student at her off-campus home three days after resigning, the Lewiston Tribune (<http://bit.ly/x1IONP>) reported Wednesday.

There is no strict set of rules for how and when the system is used, said security director Matt Dorschel. His department considers using the system on a case-by-case basis, and the decision often centers on whether there is a clear and present danger, he said.

"It could be a weather event or a natural disaster, not just a crime, that would lead us to use the system," Dorschel said. "That's what we talk about when we bring our response group together to make those decisions."

In the most recent case, the university reported no one was injured when a single gunshot was fired at the Targhee Fine Arts residence hall around 11:30 p.m. Sunday. The bullet hit a lighting fixture then ricocheted into a cinder block wall.

An initial investigation suggested the gun may have been fired from a nearby street. Witnesses reported two men traveling in a white sport utility vehicle were in the area around the time of the shooting, though no suspects were named.

Authorities who responded determined the incident was most likely isolated and there was not enough information to prompt a campus alert, Dorschel said.

"Notifications need to be more than just an alert," he said. "We need to have a message that is informative but also instructive, so that we can give concrete actions that our campus community can take to mitigate the risks to themselves or others."

The university contracts a private company to provide the alert system. Faculty and staff are automatically subscribed to receive alerts through email, text messages and voicemail. Students are also included in the database of subscribers, but they can opt out and choose not to receive the messages.

Blaine Co. Man Faces Deportation

KETCHUM (AP) • A central Idaho man convicted of felony drunken driving likely faces deportation.

The Idaho Mountain Express (<http://bit.ly/xPQytC>) reports 26-year-old Raul Torres-Escobedo was sentenced Tuesday to 218 days in jail. District Judge Robert J. Elgee gave Torres-Escobedo credit for 215 days he'd already spent in jail, making him eligible to be released on Friday.

Court records indicate he will be turned over to federal immigration authorities for likely deportation.

Torres-Escobedo was arrested in Hailey on July 5 after a patrolman stopped him for having only one operating headlight.

Sali Mulls Another Election Bid, Seeks Idaho Plate

BOISE (AP) • As former state and U.S. Rep. Bill Sali considers another run for elected office, he's also seeking the Legislature's assistance in promoting a nonprofit foundation created by him and his wife.

The former Republican lawmaker on Wednesday asked the House Transportation Committee to help create an "In God We Trust" license plate, with proceeds benefiting the American Heritage Foundation.

He and his wife, Terry, founded it last month.

The committee agreed to vet Sali's plan — to use license-plate proceeds to promote discussion about America's founding and qualities he thinks exemplify proper citizenship.

Provider for Idaho Online School Accused of Fraud

BOISE (AP) • A private for-profit company hired to provide curriculum for Idaho's largest online charter school is the target of a lawsuit alleging federal securities fraud.

A complaint filed in Virginia last week alleges K12 Inc. officials made false and misleading statements regarding the company's business and financial results in order to inflate K12's stock price.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of investors who bought K12 stock between 2009 and last year. It alleges among other things that K12 used deceptive student recruiting practices and improper academic assessments to increase its enrollment and revenues.

K12 disputes the claims. A spokeswoman for Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna says the lawsuit is not related to any schools in the state. K12 provides curriculum to schools including the Idaho Virtual Academy.

MINE RESEARCH LINKS FISH DEFORMITIES TO SELENIUM

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

BOISE • A research team hired by the J.R. Simplot Co. has linked selenium discharged from the waste of the company's phosphate mining to high rates of deformities in trout, including cases of brown trout fry with two heads, missing fins and cranial deformities.

Those findings would appear to undermine the company's recent proposal to relax the water quality standards for two selenium-tainted creeks near Simplot's Smoky Canyon Mine in southeast Idaho's phosphate patch.

But to Simplot, the deformity data is just one component of a complex research project that when viewed as a whole supports setting a new standard for measuring selenium concentrations and cleaning up the polluted creeks.

And there is plenty at stake for both the company and environmentalists as the state Department of Environmental Quality begins its review of Simplot's request.

For Simplot, working with rules allowing for higher levels of selenium than currently allowed could save time and money devoted to cleanup and future monitoring.

For environmentalists, a change in standard could open the door to legal challenges or other mining companies seeking the same change in a region already impaired by decades of mining. And at least one federal agency has already weighed in, raising concerns about Simplot's research and claims the company is underestimating the potential impacts any change could have on fish.

Last week, Simplot, which has operated Smoky Canyon since 1984 in the forested mountains near the Idaho-Wyoming border, submitted paperwork seeking an exemption from federal water quality standards set for Crow and Sage creeks.

Simplot officials say the current standard — pegged to selenium concentrations in the creek water — is overprotective and sets un-

IDAHO GOP CERTIFIES 5 CANDIDATES FOR MARCH CAUCUS

BOISE (AP) • Idaho Republican Party officials say that five GOP presidential candidates have qualified for the March 6 caucus planned in every county around the state.

Party officials confirmed Monday that the five candidates making the ballot include: Texas congressman Ron Paul, former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney, former Pennsylvania senator Rick Santorum, former U.S. House Speaker Newt Gingrich and longshot contender Buddy Roemer.

The party's central committee approved last year the idea of moving Idaho's Republican nominating contest up from May to the so-called Super Tuesday date in March.

The goal is to bring more attention to the state and make its 32 delegates more relevant.

realistic cleanup expectations. Instead, the company is seeking to tie the standard to selenium levels in fish eggs, a change Simplot and some government scientists say more accurately measures toxicity.

The question for state and federal environmental regulators is whether approving Simplot's proposed standard will adequately protect the environment, fish and wildlife.

"From a scientific point of view, we have to ask if it's a standard that is appropriate. Does it protect aquatic life?" said Barry Brunell, administrator of the DEQ's water quality division.

Simplot is one of several companies that have been mining the region for decades, excavating rock to get the phosphate ore that is a key ingredient in farm-based fertilizers and other products. But mining has come at a cost to the environment, and Simplot and other companies are legally obligated to clean up selenium and other toxic mining wastes in a region dotted with 17 separate Superfund sites.

Since the 1990s, selenium has been blamed for wiping out trout populations in area streams and killing sheep and other livestock that have fed on selenium-laced grass.

In its petition to the state, Simplot argues that changing the water quality standard can be done without bringing any more harm to the environment.

To better understand selenium levels, researchers hired by Simplot compared in a lab setting brown trout fry spawned from eggs squeezed from fish captured from Sage and Crow creeks with eggs taken from hatchery trout.

Results show rates of mortality and deformities — including fry with two heads or severe mouth and cranial malformation — to be anywhere from 75 to 100 percent for the wild fish, depending on how close the wild fish were to the pollution source. The mortality/deformity rate in hatchery eggs is typically 15 percent, according to federal fish biologists.

Fudging the Numbers

The Obama administration is touting the latest unemployment numbers released last week by the U.S. Department of Labor as proof its policies are working. But a closer look at the actual number of able-bodied people who are willing to work, but are not, reveals a different picture.

As economist John R. Lott has written, not only is the drop in the unemployment rate from 8.5 percent to 8.3 percent still half a percentage point higher than when President Obama took office three years ago, the number of unemployed is higher. Compared to January 2009 when 11.6 million Americans were jobless, today, writes Lott, “there are 12.8 million unemployed and 43 percent have been out of a job for more than six months. The average length of unemployment has increased dramatically since the recovery started. Back in June 2009, ‘only’ 29 percent of the unemployed had been unemployed longer than six months.”

The way government counts things, slowing the rate of increased spending amounts to a cut and reducing the percentage of unemployed people by two-tenths of 1 percent counts as more people finding jobs, which then counts as progress.

Lott examined the Labor Department’s statistics and found nearly 1.2 million Americans no longer in the labor force. That means most have given up looking for work and are no longer counted as unemployed. That fact skews the statistics to make the employment picture appear better than it is.

Real unemployment is mostly ignored by the major media, which was happy to tout the latest jobless rate reduction as a boon to President Obama and a problem for Republican frontrunner Mitt Romney. Most reporting has focused on the impression voters might have of an economic recovery, or at least trending in the right direction. The opposite is true and it is up to Romney to make that case.

After an initial tepid reaction to the unemployment numbers, Romney rebounded, but it came a day late after the news cycle had moved on and the media cheerleading for President Obama had achieved the desired effect.

Many in the major media can’t be counted on to tell the truth about the economy if doing so makes Obama and his policies look bad. Consider how some in the media collectively claimed the recession had not eased as the 1992 election neared. After the inauguration of President Clinton, it was reported that, in fact, the recession had ended more than a year earlier. Through the election, the media completely accepted the Democratic line the recession had not abated.

This means the Republican nominee will have to go over or around the media to make his case. The best way to do this is not with statistics, but with real people. The Republican candidates for president should identify unemployed people who have lost their jobs, or who have given up looking for one. Have them tell their stories and let the candidates put the blame on the president and congressional Democrats whose plans to raise taxes, drastically increase spending and impose Obamacare on the country has added to the economic uncertainty and the reluctance of businesses to hire new workers.

Featuring real people who are out of a job and desperately want to work would help undermine the Democrats as the party of compassion, while simultaneously blunting the Republican stereotype as the party that doesn’t care about the poor.

Democrats seem eager to get more people onto food stamps than to adopt policies that would free them from addiction to government and give them the dignity of a real job and the self-sufficiency that goes with it.

Romney must be less reactive and more proactive, less responsive to Obama and the news of the day and more concerned with creating his own news every day. Going on the offensive about unemployment is a strategy that can work.

THEIR VIEW

Silence on Drones Could Backfire

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Tuesday:

When the London-based Bureau of Investigative Journalism released a report Sunday claiming that U.S. drone strikes have killed dozens of civilian rescuers and mourners in Pakistan, the American media scarcely noticed. Similarly, while other countries hotly debate America’s covert program of targeted assassination, its legality has never been considered by a U.S. court and is seldom discussed by Congress, which has ceded extraordinary authority over the drone program to the president and the CIA.

That silence could well come back to haunt this country.

The Bureau of Investigative Journalism’s findings are worth a look — not because they’re an ironclad assertion of facts on the ground in Pakistan’s tribal areas, where solid information is hard to come by, but because of the questions they raise about the drone program. The three-month investigation turned up evidence that at least 50 civilians were killed when they tried to rescue people injured in a drone attack, only to be hit with another round of missiles. If this is true, it’s a tactic that seems borrowed from the playbook of Islamist terrorists, who have been known to set off bombs in crowded areas, wait for rescuers to arrive and then explode more bombs to maximize the carnage.

Eyewitness accounts in such places as the tribal areas must be regarded with great skepticism; playing up alleged U.S. atrocities is a common recruiting strategy for terrorist groups. But claims of secondary drone strikes are so frequent that they call for further investigation. Meanwhile, Washington Post reporter Joby Warrick, in his recent book, “The Triple Agent,” describes a 2009 drone attack at the funeral of a Taliban operative that was aimed at a senior commander; he escaped, but dozens of civilians, including children, were reportedly killed in the strike. Are funerals appropriate targets, even when they provide an opportunity to lure dangerous terrorists out of hiding?

I want to thank so many wonderful people in Twin Falls County for the support, physical assistance and financial aid given me over the years. The tremendous amount of encouragement given me at the local level has made “being your

I am not finished. I still hope to be engaged with community projects as this great city continues to progress.

Focus on God Will Help Nation

Our nation is rapidly drifting from its biblical foundations of truth. The freedoms that our founding fathers lived and died for are threatened. We could lose it all unless we take seriously our responsibility to put God first in both our homes and our national affairs. This requires following a clear pathway to protect what is right in our great nation and change what is wrong.

In the scriptures, we are called to turn away from our wrong doing and pray for God to heal our land.

We return to the due process of God’s law for nonviolent moral, social and political change from our local communities to the halls of Congress and the White House. By learning and understanding the pathways of justice for all, we can follow the steps to preserve and maintain the growth of this great nation.

By working together, we can achieve our goals. It’s a matter of making that extra effort to do the good we know to do. Shoulder to shoulder, we can tackle our problems until we overcome them.

We don’t give up. We persevere until we win. America would have lost the Revolutionary War if George Washington had not persevered after many losses. Our Lord taught us to not give up or look back but to persevere and prevail.

The return of our trust to almighty God and his word will anchor our foundations in the enduring strength of his loving care.

When we faithfully build our homes, neighborhoods and workplaces with integrity and understanding, we can bring our great nation back to God. In serving one another with loving hearts, listening ears and helping hands, we find our meaning and purpose. God blesses America when we let him work through us.

Referee Had Conflict of Interest

If anyone connected to the high school referee hiring is reading this, listen up.

It is an unwritten rule that any referee who has a conflict of interest must decline to referee that particular game. It is not a written law but a moral law among themselves. Wonder what the majority of the referees with good morals would say to a ref from a “small” town refereeing a championship game when his “small” town is playing.

It happened on Saturday afternoon (Feb. 4) and was the most one-sided officiating I have seen in my 70 years. Hint: When you do this, tell your players not to talk to and call the referee by his first name during the game.

I feel sorry for both teams and both schools. Due to two “adults” in charge of teaching them to play to the best of their ability and then one side stacking the deck — neither team of teenage girls will ever know if their practice and hard work or someone’s dirty work got them where they are. We shouldn’t need to make this a written rule, but maybe we better?

P.S. Where was the host school on this one? You should always make sure there is not a ref refereeing his hometown team. It is sad because I have previously admired the pennants on the winning team’s wall; now I question how they got them. Sad! Didn’t your mommas ever teach you cheaters never really prosper?

Filer students participating in the 'Jump Rope for Heart' fundraiser raised money for the American Heart Association, and got some healthy exercise in for themselves.

Jump Rope Project Helps Heart and Student Health

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • Gymnasium walls and floors vibrated with youthful energy Friday during "Jump Rope for Heart" activities held at the Filer Elementary School and Intermediate School.

The annual jump rope event is a way for the district's 600 elementary student to put into practice lessons learned about improving their health with exercise and healthy eating.

"The kids have been preparing for this over the last three weeks," said physical education teacher Jodie Ferrell. "We make sure they practice jumping rope and I also teach them about nutrition."

Student moved in four-minute rotations among single and double Dutch jump rope, hopscotch, hula hoops, belly board racing, and the standing long jump. Sandy Lilya, one of the parent volunteers, encouraged kids at the long jump station to go for distance, making high-five gestures and calling out that their efforts were equal to Spider-Man or Spider-Girl.

Jump Rope for Heart is also a community service project. Students collected sponsorship money to help support the American Heart Association. Last year's fundraiser brought in $2,700.

"This is the first time I've been involved," Lilya said. "Hopefully it gets them excited about moving around and they get to see adults having fun as well!"

In Grizzly Country, Caution is Key

BY BECKY KRAMER
The Spokesman-Review

Grizzly bears are tucked away in their winter dens for at least another six weeks. But grizzly specialist Kim Annis is already embarking on northwestern Montana's rural talk circuit.

Hired four years ago by Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks, Annis speaks to hundreds of people each year at libraries, schools and community events about living in grizzly country.

At least 40 grizzlies — scientifically known as Ursus arctos horribilis, or "horrible northern bear" — inhabit the Cabinet-Yaak ecosystem of North Idaho and northwestern Montana. Annis wants to arm people with information so they can "coexist amicably" with the big bears, she said.

She runs electric-fencing workshops to show people how to keep bears out of chicken coops, pig pens and orchards. She tells people what to look for in a bear spray. And she teaches people about grizzly behavior so they can reduce their chance of injury during encounters.

"When you deal with bear conflicts reactively, you're already behind the curve," said Annis, who worked with black bears in Florida before moving to Montana. "We're trying to be proactive to prevent those conflicts from happening in the first place."

Last year, four grizzlies and one hunter were killed during bear-human conflicts.

A Porthill, Idaho, man shot and killed a grizzly that was near the family's pig pen. His children were outside at the time.

In another incident, a hunter mistook a grizzly for a black bear and shot it. The wounded bear attacked his hunting partner, and when the man shot the grizzly again, the bullet traveled through the bear and fatally struck the hunting partner.

In a separate incident, another grizzly was killed in the Cabinet Mountains by a hunter who mistook it from a black bear.

A fourth grizzly was killed on private property near Libby in an incident determined to be self-defense.

One of Annis' most recent audiences was employees at Revett Minerals' Troy Mine, a copper and silver mine in Lincoln County. Many of the mine workers hunt, fish and camp in Montana's backcountry, so Annis' talk was more than an academic lecture.

Annis encourages people to rehearse possible scenarios, so they'll act appropriately in adrenaline-charged situations.

Her first message: Avoid surprising bears by making loud noises, and be especially vigilant in areas such as creek bottoms, where the sound of the water and heavy brush make it difficult to hear and see.

Her second message: Cede ground. If people do see a grizzly, Annis tells them to back slowly away without drawing attention to themselves. People's instinct is often to try to scare the grizzly off, but that often escalates the situation, she said.

"Shooting at the ground or making loud noises or shooting over the bear's head can force the bear into a defensive position," she said. "Now they feel threatened, and they're going to do something about it."

Her talk, given with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist Wayne Kasworm, has become an annual event at the Troy Mine. Bruce Clark, the mine manager, thinks the sessions have helped reduce animosity toward the federally protected grizzlies.

"In our employees, we see less irritation with the grizzly bear," he said. "As we become more educated, we accept the bear more than we did in the past, and we accept some of the changes that are coming because of the bear?"

Clark, 56, grew up in Troy.

He recalls the economic hardships that resulted from the shutdown of logging operations in the 1970s and '80s to protect grizzly habitat, and local residents' resentment. But unless the Cabinet-Yaak grizzly population rebounds, the land-use restrictions will continue, he said.

Revett Minerals, which is based in Spokane Valley, has a vested interest in a healthy grizzly population. The company wants to open a second mine, which is still in the permitting stages. As part of the compensation for the proposed Rock Creek Mine, Revett Minerals pays part of Annis' salary for grizzly bear outreach.

Last year, the Troy Mine also began offering a bear spray check-out program for its workers. Austin Wilson, the mine's health and safety supervisor, encourages employees to carry canisters of the $50 bear spray when they're camping, fishing, hiking or hunting.

All of the canisters were checked out during hunting season. "I think the proof in the pudding is that we're now willing to use bear spray instead of guns," Clark said.

Kasworm, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist, has worked on grizzly issues in Northwestern Montana for nearly 30 years.

"I don't think the community is as polarized over grizzly bears as they've been in the past," he said. "I would say there is a greater acceptance of grizzly bears. It's harder to say why."

In other areas, research has concluded that intensive one-on-one education reduces human-wildlife conflicts. But Annis said it's too soon to assess the results of her outreach.

The number of bear conflict calls she fields each year is still increasing. That's to be expected, Annis said, as more people learn that she's available as a resource.

Trial Set for Window Shooting Incident

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A 23-year-old Twin Falls man will face a court trial without a jury for charges of using a deadly weapon and malicious injury of property.

In December, Daniel Williams was accused of using a .45 caliber handgun to shoot out the window of a friend's car in order to retrieve his cellphone when the woman refused to roll down the window.

Police say the woman called them at 7:45 p.m. Nov. 6, claiming that Williams used a handgun to shoot her red 2005 Cadillac CTS while she worked at Sidewinder's Bar in Murtaugh. But when a county sheriff's deputy arrived at the scene, she changed her story, saying Williams couldn't have done it because they're such good friends.

Later, Williams allegedly told police he had shot the window after he and the woman got in an argument.

The trial is scheduled for March 5.

Hailey Men Sentenced in Poaching

TIMES-NEWS

CHALLIS • Two Hailey men have received stiff penalties and fines after being caught poaching in Custer County, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game announced Wednesday. A total of 49 citations and 21 warnings were issued to seven individuals Monday by Custer County Magistrate Judge Charles L. Roos.

Juan Pasillas-Garcia, 44, of Hailey, was sentenced to 540 days in jail, but all but 40 were suspended. He also must pay $3,262 in fines and fees and his hunting, fishing and trapping privileges were suspended for 15 years. In addition, he forfeited two firearms to Fish and Game and was put on four years' probation.

Jose Pasillas-Garcia, 30, of Hailey, pleaded guilty to failing to produce game for inspection. He was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence and fined $570. In addition, he was put on two years' probation and will be required to complete 40 hours of community service.

In the same case two Phoenix, Ariz., men — Sergio Pasillas-Garcia, 39, and Bernardo Amaya, 38 — were each sentenced to serve 40 days in jail, received thousands of dollars in fines and lost hunting privileges. Martin Pasillas-Garcia, 45, of Torrance, Calif., was sentenced to 900 days in jail with all but 80 days suspended and must pay more than $8,500 in fines. He also lost hunting privileges for 30 years.

The men were caught after Fish and Game Regional Investigator Ryan Hilton hid in the brush at the Yankee Fork drainage area for nine hours after he watched two hunters leave their truck and hike up the mountain.

"It was a long, cold day, but by being out there I was able to hear the shots that we later confirmed illegally killed a six-point bull elk closed season and also took video of them loading an illegal deer into their truck," Hilton said in a statement released by Fish and Game.

Fish and Game reports their investigators worked around the clock to catch the poachers, who have been hunting illegally in Idaho for years.

ISP Steps Up Seatbelt Patrol

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Idaho State Police are in the middle of a two-week campaign to stop unbelted drivers in the Magic Valley region.

The enhanced patrols started Monday and will go through Feb. 20.

The Idaho Transportation Department provides periodic funding for extra patrols to crack down on impaired and other law-breaking drivers.

Since not wearing a seat belt is a secondary offense in Idaho, state troopers have increased their enforcement of speed limits and traffic laws in order to cite drivers and occupants who aren't wearing seat belts at the time.

According to Idaho law, everyone in a vehicle must wear a safety restraint. Violators older than 18 receive a $10 fine for failing to buckle up, while those younger than 18 also must pay $51.50 in court costs if they or anyone else under 18 in the car aren't wearing their seat belts. Adult drivers can also be ticketed for unrestrained children in the vehicle.

"Those occupants wearing a seatbelt during a speed-related crash increase their chance of survival greatly," Lt. Kevin Haight, ISP District 4 patrol commander, said in a press release about the patrols.

According to the release, 55 of the 163 vehicle occupants who were injured in accidents in the Magic Valley in 2009 were unrestrained. Statewide, 73 people who died in crashes in 2010 were not wearing a seat belt.

In a similar campaign in November, ISP ticketed 71 people for seat belt violations in the Magic Valley.

TWIN FALLS • It's the kind of show that gets you into the Valentine's Day spirit. In a twisted kind of way.

"This deals with your first date and how it warps you forever," said actor Tim Behrens of his one-man show, "McManus in Love," which is coming to Twin Falls Friday night.

"If parents bring their kids, we can pretty well guarantee those kids will delay their first date until age 27," Behrens joked.

Written by outdoors and humor author Patrick McManus, "McManus In Love" is one of five one-act shows the best-selling author from Idaho has

VIRGINIA HUTCHINS • TIMES-NEWS

Miles of groomed trails — and plenty of snow — open Craters of the Moon National Monument's dramatic scenery to snowshoers of any ability.

Solitude on Snowshoes

For some of southern Idaho's best winter scenery, try snowshoeing at Craters of the Moon. It's free, intriguing and as easy as walking.

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

CAREY • Roads and parking lots disappear, but even thick snow can't erase the rugged volcanic landscape. With protruding lava rocks offering dramatic contrasts, craters and cones become a study in black and white, a place of profound solitude.

That transformation was tardy this winter at Craters of the Moon National Monument. But in mid-January, park workers finally had enough snow to groom the monument's winter trails — one of southern Idaho's best destinations for snowshoers.

And the price? Absolutely free. The monument charges no entry fees from November to April. Don't have snowshoes? You can borrow a pair for the day from the visitor center for free, or pay a suggested $5 donation if you like.

If it's your first time on snowshoes — or you brought children along — start with the 1.5-mile loop trail that begins and ends at the visitor center. Its gentle grades are fine for all but the smallest children, and you'll see a lot of varied terrain in that strange and beautiful landscape.

The Ranger's Lessons

Choose a Friday afternoon in February for that loop trail, and you can make the walk in the company of interpretive park ranger Lennie Ramacher. The monument's guided snowshoe walks are also an engaging nature lesson on how the animals of Craters of the Moon escape, hibernate or adapt to survive heavy snows. With their slender legs, deer are among the escapers, Ramacher said, pausing last week's Friday tour to pull a laminated photograph of deer from his backpack.

"They'd be postholing all over the place," he said. So deer retreat to lower elevations or to south-facing slopes where snow cover is lighter. They bed down and burn fat reserves instead of looking far for food.

Ramacher helps his listeners on snowshoes think like deer: That unappealing can of spam in the pantry, or a delectable pizza down the icy road? "They're going to choose the can of spam every time."

Snowshoe Destination

The visitor center at Craters of the Moon National Monument is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. every day, except federal holidays. You can borrow a pair of snowshoes there for free — or donate the suggested $5. And park entry is free during winter.

Trails: 1.5-mile snowshoe loop trail; plus seven miles of groomed cross-country ski trails, also open to snowshoers. The winter trails are groomed a couple of times a week.

Guided snowshoe walks: 1-2:30 p.m. on Feb. 10, 17 and 24; free. You'll snowshoe with a ranger on the 1.5-mile loop, looking for fox or red squirrel tracks and learning about animals' winter survival. No snowshoe experience is required, but participants should be at least 8 years old. There's no need for reservations; meet at the visitor center and be prepared to spend an hour and a half outdoors.

Caution: Climbing cinder hills on snowshoes is fine, but don't roam across uneven lava flows. If you're interested in going off-trail, ask at the visitor center about the terrain under the snow.

Here's a Fun Way to See if Skiing Is for You

The last time I went skiing, my knees ached. I don't ski much anymore, but sometimes I miss the fun and serenity of being on a snowy mountain.

Your chance to experience the same things — minus the bum knees which, for me, were caused by something

Andrew Weeks
Trails and Tales

other than skiing — will occur this weekend at Magic Mountain Ski Resort. The High Desert Nordic

Association will teach people how to cross-country ski from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at the mountain. The event is open to all ages for free, said John Larimer, the association's secretary and treasurer.

"It's fun for the whole family," he said. "You can try skiing without actually renting any gear or buying anything."

The club will provide skis, poles and boots for people to try. What you do need to bring: "your shoe size," Larimer said.

Potential skiers will get a five-minute lesson before they set out on a trial run behind the lodge.

Last year, Larimer skied the loop helping people with their boots. One was a 3-year-old girl who decided she wanted to go around with him — and never let go of his hand.

"We ended up walking the trail," Larimer said.

For more info about the club or Saturday's event, call Brenda at 670-4761. I'm tempted to go myself, bum knees or no.

"It's really nice up there right now," said Larimer, noting that come March club members will ski at the resort under a full moon. The public will be invited then as well.

Let's just hope there won't be clouds.

The Facts and (Science) Fiction of Orbital Decay

It's a sci-fi staple: The ship's engines have failed, and its decaying orbit will spiral it into the alien planet's atmosphere like a shooting star. Since September three sizeable satellites (sans occupants, thankfully) have returned to Earth as flaming space junk. Is life imitating art?

Yes and no. Planetary atmospheres don't have an edge above which the vacuum of space begins. Rather, they simply get thinner the higher you go. At some point spacecraft orbit indefinitely, requiring only momentum to keep them circling the planet.

Chris Anderson

Even high-flyers like the Hubble Space Telescope (350 miles up — the shuttle's maximum) are subject to orbital decay: Shortly after its launch in 1990, Hubble was dropping over half a mile per month, due to Earth's atmosphere being swollen by solar activity.

Without periodic shuttle reboosts, Hubble would have been a man-made meteor by now.

Ten times higher, the LA-GEOS laser retroreflectors are expected to remain in orbit for 8.4 million years. So stable are their orbits that they serve as reference points for mapping Earth's precise shape and continental drift.

The atmosphere isn't the only thing that can disrupt an orbit, however.

Large objects — like moons — are stretched by tidal forces. This stretching energy must come from somewhere, so it tends to be stolen from the moon's orbit, causing it to slowly spiral (in or out, depending on how fast it spins on its axis). But satellites are too small to suffer from tidal drag.

So, it's safe to say the geostationary satellites will never come down.

At 22,236 miles up, they orbit once per day, remaining directly above a fixed location on the equator. It makes you wonder what Capt. Kirk and company (who, presumably, were in geostationary orbit to

"These meetings are a great chance for us to get some feedback from hunters on the preliminary proposals, and to discuss any concerns or new ideas sportsmen may have," said Regional Wildlife Manager Randy Smith.

Top priorities on management plans for the Billingsley Creek, Big Cottonwood, Carey Lake, Camas Prairie-Centennial Marsh, Hagerman and Niagara Springs WMAS, include:

- Public access management.
- Recreational use management.
- Waterfowl hunting on the Hagerman WMA.
- Pheasant release-and-harvest program.
- Dog-trials and other organized events.

The current Fish Management Plan can be found at fishandgame.idaho.gov/public/fish/planFisheries.pdf.

For more information about the meetings, or if you're unable to attend but would like to provide feedback, call 324-4359.

You also can comment on fisheries changes by sending an email to MV-Fishery@idfg.idaho.gov.

Hunters also may review proposals and provide comments online.

"It's a fun place to snowshoe, because it's very, very open. ... You can find a lot of solitude if you're looking for it."

Scott Wardrum of Los Angeles, who spent three hours snowshoeing at Craters last week on his way to rendezvous with skiing buddies in Montana

Snowshoes

His mini-lessons on animal behavior also offer beginners a chance to catch up or catch their breath. And they're interspersed with snowshoe pointers — like avoiding exposed rocks, or zigzagging up a slope, or stepping over cross-country tracks in deference to skiers.

Stopping at another well-chosen vista, Ramacher pulled out a photograph of the yellow-bellied marmot, better known to most Idahoans as a rock chuck.

"Not all of us can afford to winter in Tucson," he said. Marmots don't have the resources to migrate, either. So they spend September to March in pockets under the snow, huddled together in marmot balls of perhaps a dozen animals, with their body temperature — and calorie consumption — turned way down.

"These put all other hibernators to shame," Ramacher said.

And an adapter? Ramacher had one of those in his backpack, too: The weasel changes from gray-brown to white for winter, then hunts passageways under the snow for voles, mice and chipmunks.

Yes, winter's snows tax the plants and animals of Craters of the Moon. But without them, it would be hard for anything to live the rest of the year in this harsh environment of lava.

To make the point, Ramacher pulled one more lesson from his pack: a large but lightweight cinder and a water bottle. He invited a listener to pour water onto the rock and notice how little ran off. The rocks of Craters store winter's melt like sponges, to nourish life above and replenish the aquifer below.

Snowshoe Anytime

Ask him all the questions you like. Your nature lesson from Ramacher might be an almost private one.

Craters of the Moon this year moved those short, guided snowshoe walks from Sundays to Fridays, hoping to capitalize on some school districts' move to a four-day school week, he said. But participation so far has been light.

Longer-standing and more popular are Craters' two- to four-mile Saturday walks preceded by a classroom session. Those usually fill up in advance and often have a waiting list; of the three Saturday excursions remaining in February, only Feb. 18 still had room by Wednesday.

But you can come any day of the week to snowshoe either the 1.5-mile dedicated trail or the seven miles of groomed cross-country ski trails, including a 1.2-mile length of trail newly added this winter. Pick up a free, color-coded map at the visitor center that indicates where you'll encounter the easiest and most difficult grades.

"It's a fun place to snowshoe, because it's very, very open," said Scott Wardrum of Los Angeles, who spent three hours snowshoeing at Craters last week on his way to rendezvous with skiing buddies in Montana. You can see for miles, and there's enough trail to lead you away from anyone else who's out on the snow.

"You can find a lot of solitude if you're looking for it."

hunting and fishing, drew from his own life when writing the play.

"I had a lot of embarrassing dates," he said in a telephone interview, "and so I kind of worked them all together into this. Dealing with girls' fathers, that sort of thing. It's a funny show."

Behrens portrays about 15 characters during the two-hour show aimed at children and adults alike, including Rancid Crabtree and even a snake on a bike. His favorite character to play is Crazy Eddie.

"I like Crazy Eddie because he's the engine of the shows," Behrens said. "In a relationship, there's always a Crazy Eddie. They're the one who propels the relationship forward and comes up with the ideas and plans, like 'Let's go camping in the rain!'"

Behrens enjoys performing a one-act show because it forces the audience to fill in the blanks. There are few props and no costume changes.

"I just change the voice and posture," Behrens said of switching characters. "It's really up to the audience to see that character and create that character."

McManus said Behrens can be "absolute magic" on stage.

"One time I was walking behind three women after a show Tim did in Montana," said McManus, who now lives in Washington state. "One woman said, 'I could see cows and barns and streams and mountains, and all of a sudden it occurred to me, he's up there by himself!'"

Behrens has performed about 1,500 McManus shows, including "Scrambled McManus" and "A Fine and Pleasant Misery" during the past 19 years. The two met when Behrens was in grad school at Eastern Washington University. McManus was Behrens' writing professor and adviser.

Behrens loves doing the show because the laughter can get so loud, it hurts his ears, he said.

"I'm not kidding, there's a scene at the end when the whole date is unraveling, and the audience is there with me and Melba, and the laughter is so loud, I sometimes hear people, in between laughter, say, 'No, no more, no more,'" Behrens said. "I have this evil thing in my mind. I think, 'Yes, more!'"

3 Mont. Men Face Charges in Killing, Selling of Eagle

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • Three Montana men each face up to a year in prison on charges that two of them captured and killed an injured golden eagle then sold it to the third man for $100, authorities said Tuesday.

Curtis Foster, 58, Glenn Reum, 57, and Doug Standing Rock, 64, were released on special conditions after pleading not guilty in an arraignment before U.S. Magistrate Judge Keith Strong in Great Falls.

The defendants face charges of violating the Bald and Golden Eagle Act and the Migratory Bird Treaty. In addition to prison time, they could be fined up to $15,000 each if found guilty.

An affidavit filed by federal prosecutors alleges that Foster and Reum, both of Pablo, picked up the injured eagle last year after seeing it along a highway near Lincoln.

They packed the injured animal into a cooler then took it to the Budget Inn Motel in Havre, where the pair allegedly kept it in a bathtub for a week while they discussed what to do with it.

After first attempting to kill the bird by strangling it with a bungee cord, Reum killed it by hitting it in the head with a hammer, according to the affidavit signed by Assistant U.S. Attorney Jessica Betley.

In early 2011, Foster sold the dead bird to Standing Rock, who lives in Box Elder on the Rocky Boy's Indian Reservation. Foster wanted the eagle for ceremonial purposes, prosecutors allege.

Attempts by The Associated Press to locate the suspects were unsuccessful Tuesday.

According to prosecutors, Standing Rock told a special agent from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that he knew it was illegal to buy and sell eagles and acknowledged that he did not have a permit for the animal. The bird had been buried but Standing Rock provided its wings to the agent.

He started working on the Brackett Ranch at the young age of 9 and continued going back and working throughout all his years in school after his family moved back to Heyburn. LaDell enjoyed playing football and basketball during his high school years.

LaDell married Carol Nelson on Aug. 25, 1950, in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. They had three daughters. They moved to Twin Falls, where LaDell worked for Shelby's Foodliner and managed the meat department. They moved back to Burley when Shelby's expanded and built a store there. LaDell and Dale Shelby bought and ran numerous ranches in the Albion, Moulton and Malta areas, where they received the Idaho State Grass Man of the Year Award. They moved to the Pitchfork Ranch in King Hill after selling the grocery stores. There they ran a attle operation.

LaDell and Carol moved to Utah, where LaDell worked for Bell Meat Packaging and at Utah State University. They then moved to Jackpot, Nev., where LaDell ran and managed the W/D Ranch for JK Wheeler. Sam was born Sept. 15, 1934, in the Ozark Mountains in Carroll County, Ark., to Thomas Jefferson and Edith Farmer Overacre. At age 6, his mother moved to Sanger, Calif., with Sam and his younger sister to find work during The Depression. Sam joined the Air Force in 1951 during the Korean War. He served with the 98th Bomb Wing in Japan.

After attending Burley schools, Wes pursued his education in Logan, Utah, in mechanical drafting and Allison Aircraft Engine repair. While there, he received several welding certificates upon his graduation. Afterward, Wes went to work at Hill Air Force Base making drawings for special tools and parts for airplanes but disliked being indoors, which resulted in his enlistment in the U.S. Navy. This position resulted because of his welding certifications. After his return from the military, he worked for Burley Processing and for Walley Carrier Machine Shop. He had many opportunities to travel many places, building and installing food processing machinery for the J.R. Simplot Company, as well as others.

He loved the game of golf and was always looking for someone to play a round of golf with. He and Betty spent 28 winters in Rancho Mirage, Calif., so they could play golf year round. They met many wonderful people and played with and watched some of the world's best golfers. Wes lived his life working and golfing. From dawn till dusk, golf was a passion of his. plus years and a lifetime member of the BPOE Burley Elk's Lodge. Additionally, Wes served as president of the Burley Men's Golf Association. Wes was considered to all as a kind, gentle and generous husband, father, grandpa and great-grandfather, as well as a good friend to many.

Petitioner.

A PETITION by David Lee Kincheloe, born October 18, 1963, in the State of Idaho and now residing at 1413 Spring Road, Buhl, Idaho, proposing a change in name to David Lee Kincheloe Easter has been filed in the above-entitled court, the reason for change in name being as follow:

Petitioner's father passed away while Petitioner was an infant. Petitioner's stepfather's name is Easter, thus Petitioner has been going by the last name of Easter since the age of eight (8).

Petitioner requests the same last name as James Ray Easter, since that is what he has been going by in the past.

The Petition will be heard on Thursday, the 1st day of March, 2012, at 3:00 PM, and objections may be filed by any person who can, in such objections, show to the Court a good reason against such a change in name.

WITNESS my hand and seal of this court this day of January, 2012.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"We spend our midday sweat, our midnight oil; We tire the night in thought, the day in toil."

—Francis Quarles

Against four hearts, West leads the spade king. Good deceptive declarer play is to drop the spade eight on this trick, trying to persuade West that East's spade five is high, not low. But West was not born yesterday. He refuses to take the bait, instead switching to the diamond queen. Plan the play from here on.

The first key point to bear in mind is that since West passed as dealer and has already shown up with 10 points, East must have the club king. If you take an early club finesse, East will win his king and shift back to spades, setting up four winners for the defenders. How can you avoid the need for taking the club finesse?

The answer is rather subtle: Duck the diamond queen, win the diamond continuation, and play the heart king and a heart to the jack. Cash the diamond ace (discarding a club) and club ace, and take the ruffing club finesse.

It would not have done West any good to cash the spade ace at trick three, since you would have the rest of the tricks without needing to work hard. But note that West might have worked out to shift to the diamond jack so as not to give the show away. It would not matter if East was confused about the location of the diamond honors since he does not need to know what is going on.

ANSWER: With a maximum in the 12-14 range and a heart stop, a contract rates to play just as well with you as declarer, so I would bid one no-trump now. Conceivably, three no-trump might be better from your partner's hand, but you cannot afford to pass up the opportunity to bid no-trump now, or you may not get another chance.

British actor Ian Richardson, who portrayed immoral politician Francis Urquhart in the satirical TV drama "House of Cards," died in London at age 72.

One year ago: Thousands of workers went on strike across Egypt, adding a new dimension to the uprising as public rage turned to the vast wealth President Hosni Mubarak's family reportedly amassed while close to half the country struggled near the poverty line. Rep. Christopher Lee, R-N.Y., abruptly resigned with only a vague explanation of regret after gossip website Gawker reported that the married congressman had sent a shirtless photo of himself flexing his muscles to a woman whose Craigslist ad he answered. Lindsay Lohan pleaded not guilty in Los Angeles to felony grand theft of a $2,500 necklace. “If you’re still sleeping, I can try askin’ Daddy first.”

DEAR ABBY: I was recently diagnosed as gluten intolerant. My question is, when dining at a restaurant, while everyone else is eating the bread that is served, is it acceptable to discreetly take a few gluten-free crackers from my purse and snack on them so I’m not starving while waiting for dinner?

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

My husband thought it was inappropriate, so I didn’t take them. I did ask the waiter if he had gluten-free bread or crackers, but he didn’t. I have many medical issues. I try to eat only what is healthy for me and thought providing my own crackers was a minor deal. What do you think, Abby?

— GLUTEN INTOLERANT IN FLORIDA

DEAR G.I.: It’s good that you were diagnosed, because gluten intolerance can cause serious digestive issues. Your husband may have had a bad day when he criticized you, because I see nothing wrong with someone on a restricted diet taking emergency rations in case a restaurant can’t accommodate his or her special needs.

Gluten intolerance has gone undiagnosed in many people, but in recent years food manufacturers have created many products that are safe for them to eat. Accommodating a customer who is gluten intolerant shouldn’t be an insurmountable problem if the restaurant is asked in advance.

DEAR ABBY: I was standing in front of a restaurant with my mother-in-law and a group of relatives when she “felt up” my back and backside. We were facing the others when she put her hand around my back, first sideways and then all around until she got down to my rear end. It felt like she was searching for something, but the weather was warm and my blouse was very thin, so I couldn’t have hidden anything. When she reached my behind, she pressed her thumb hard on my hipbone and rubbed in a circular motion.

I feel extremely violated because her hand should not be anywhere near that region. My husband says I misinterpreted what she did, but he has no explanation. I think her behavior was incestuous! When she visits, she also insists on sleeping in the master bedroom. Am I overreacting?

— VIOLATED IN SOUTHERN CALIF.

DEAR “VIOLATED”: Unless your mother-in-law insists on sleeping between you and her son when she comes to visit, I do think you’re overreacting. What she did was give you a back rub. In most families, a gesture like that is one of affection. Lighten up!

IF FEBRUARY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: After this week when you are simply fabulous with every ambitious project, relax and put business interests on the back burner. During the upcoming six to eight weeks, you can let your fantasy life take charge. This might mean a vacation or spending more time on a hobby – but if you are single, it might mean a serious fling. Don't make crucial business decisions in June or July when your ambitions are high and your judgment is low. Wait for August when you will have the tiger by the tail.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Being a reliable friend is one thing, being a soft touch is quite another. Don't let others take advantage of friendship by putting you on the spot. Someone who shows up with a hand out might be a leech.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Clear the air. A bad situation can become worse if both sides don't reconcile quickly. Removing tensions will go a long way toward increasing productivity. Give yourself a treat later in the day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You've got the gift of gab. You are able to talk your way into achieving nearly anything. It is an excellent time for making presentations or unveiling new ideas. You can make new contacts or meet up romantically.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Give a little, get a little. Compromise makes the world go around. Don't expect to be given anything today without offering something in return. It is a poor time to decide on major financial endeavors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Beware the eye of the storm. It may seem like the crisis is past, but new pitfalls lurk on the horizon. It would be wise to stay on your guard. Earn karmic points by lending a sympathetic shoulder to a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Speak from the heart. There's no need to put on airs, as you will go the furthest simply by being yourself – whether the subject is business, romance or friendship. Share the wealth with those who deserve it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Whether you think you can, or you think you can't, you are correct. The right mental attitude is the difference between success and failure. Convince yourself that you're going to make it and you will.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Escape through creativity. Exercise the artist within in you by engaging in activities in which you can truly express yourself. Business is best left on the back burner, as judgment and intuitions may be slightly off.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Read carefully between the lines. There is more being said than is being spoken. To the careful listener, subtle messages can be heard. Don't be stingy with loved ones; give them what they want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you don't have it, don't spend it. Don't make a bad situation worse by flinging yourself into debt. Reassess your finances and find ways to cut costs. Remember that the best things in life are free.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Karma smiles back at you. All the thoughtful, selfless gestures you've made will be repaid to you, although generosity in itself is rewarding enough. Others value your friendship and reliability.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Sail the seas of romance. A significant other may require your time or a new acquaintance may wish to reveal their intentions. Matters of the heart will take precedence and business matters will keep until tomorrow.

CSI Men Tread Cautiously Toward Top Seed

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

TWIN FALLS • The Golden Eagles are sitting pretty right now.

Up two games in the Scenic West Conference standings, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team can protect its lead tonight as it sinks its teeth into the middle of a five-game homestand against USU-Eastern Utah at 7:30.

"If we can get these next four and do our work at home, it will set us up to take the first steps toward one of our goals, which is clinching that No. 1 seed done our work early, but we have to take it one game at a time and not look too far ahead."

The Golden Eagles (21-2, 7-1 SWAC) lead Salt Lake by two games and Snow College by three and the Bears and Badgers play each other on Saturday.

CSI, however, can't look past USU-Eastern (14-8, 2-6), which nearly knocked off CSI in double overtime last season in Twin Falls.

"They have some athletic guards and play a smaller lineup with an up-and-down game," Gosar said. "I thought their transition game gave us some

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

Merritt's Bombs Rescue Bruins

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With a comfortable lead whittled down to just two points in Wednesday's game with Jerome, the Twin Falls boys basketball team waited for someone to kick-start its great escape.

Casey Merritt made sure Bruins fans went home happy.

Merritt snapped Jerome's fourth-quarter mini-run with a backdoor layup, then stretched the lead back to five with a 3-pointer in the left corner as Twin Falls held on for a 39-29 win, earning the Bruins their 18th straight win and the outright Great Basin Conference title.

His second triple of the game put the game at 34-29 and gave the Bruins a precious two-possession lead.

"There were so many things going through my mind," said Merritt, who finished with eight points. "You see it go in and you're feeling good, but you're thinking you've got to get back on defense, get another good stop."

Merritt and Co. got the stop, alright. Jared Allen swatted Jake Hollifield's scoop effort away and Robert Sanchez went coast to coast to break the Tigers' backs.

Turns out the Bruins (18-1, 10-0) didn't need it, as the Tigers didn't score again after Merritt's long-range bomb.

"I felt pretty good after Casey hit his shot that they were going to have to start fouling us, and we make our free throws," Sanchez said, referring to the Bruins 11-for-14 effort from the foul line. "It was a weird game, with both teams kind of out of sorts."

Hollifield led all scorers with 13 points, including a coast-to-coast dunk in the early going that brought the Jerome fans to their feet.

But that was the extent of his first-half impact, as he picked up three quick fouls and the Tigers (16-3, 8-2) had to hang on until halftime by grinding the clock away with possession of the ball.

Twin Falls' Eric Harr shoots over Jerome's Spencer Geist (11) and Shaquille Kennedy (back) Wednesday night in Twin Falls. Visit Magicvalley.com/gallery to see more photos from Wednesday night's game.

The halftime score was 18-12, a product of shortening the game, along with physical defense and the resulting hesitancy with shot selection.

"There were bad shots, but great defense forces bad shots," said Hollifield. "You get a lot of steals and a lot of altered shots. These are the games that people get excited about, and seeing two good teams play makes the fans get even louder and that makes the games fun."

Both teams had already clinched first-round byes in the upcoming district tournament, but Twin Falls

CSI Baseball Adds Dozen For 2013

TIMES-NEWS

The 2012 campaign has just started, but the College of Southern Idaho baseball team has already secured a dozen players for the 2013 season.

CSI has submitted an NJCAA National Letter of Intent for 12 players: Nathan Ackerman of Langley, British Columbia; Kolton Brost of Monsa, Utah; Ryan Bush and Grant Kukuk of Reno, Nev.; Elijah Davidann of Kailua, Hawaii; Riley Hansen of Riverton, Utah; Charlie Hinson of Lacey, Wash.; Jordan McComb of Surrey, British Columbia; Kholeton Sanchez of Farmington, N.M.; and Andrew Dalaimo, Brandon Sherrier and Robert Wright II of Las Vegas.

Bush and Kukuk were part of a Reno High team that went 28-8 last season. Both were infielders that also pitched.

Hinson pitches and plays infield at Timberline High School, the alma mater of current CSI pitcher Cody White. Timberline went 19-4 last season.

Davidann played outfield for Kailua, which reached Hawaii's Division I semifinals.

Dalaimo played for Palo Verde, which scratched to a near-.500 record in 2011. Sherrier is an infielder and pitcher for Durango High School, which went 16-14 last year.

Sanchez, a catcher, helped Piedra Vista win New Mexico's 4A state championship.

Hope On The Horizon For College Football?

LSU fans had all but disappeared into the New Orleans night by the final minutes of last month's dreary BCS title game, leaving en masse when they figured out a team that couldn't get past the 50-yard-line wasn't going to magically find a way to cross the goal line. They weren't alone, with people across the nation abandoning their TVs in hope of finding something even remotely more interesting.

The cartel that runs the BCS got what it deserved in a rematch no one outside of Alabama wanted. A lopsided game with horrible television ratings seemed an appropriate way to cap an awful bowl season that generated less buzz than rapper M.I.A.'s extended middle finger at the Super Bowl.

How bad was it? So bad that it woke up some people who matter.

College football may finally get a playoff system of sorts, if the rumblings out of the Big Ten this week are any indication of the current thought process. The conference that helped spike the idea of teams actually earning their spots in the national title game when it was proposed four years ago, seems to be warming up to it now.

The four-team playoff proposal isn't perfect, and will invariably still leave some qualified teams out. But it's the first real step toward reform since the major conferences first banded together to anoint their national champion 14 years ago.

Filer Keeps Things Simple in Punching State Ticket

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • They took a different route this season, but the Filer Wildcats again clinched a spot Class 3A state tournament.

"I remember the feeling last year and it's the same. It's so exciting," said Filer senior Audrey Croy after her team's 63-43 win over Kimberly in the Class 3A District IV championship game at the College of Southern Idaho. "We came out with a ton of intensity and never let up. We didn't let it get to us when Kimberly started making some shots and pushed them right back."

Last year, the Wildcats shocked Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference leader Kimberly in the district tournament, forcing the second championship game and earning the state berth. Filer (15-7) opens the state tournament Feb. 16 at Middleton High School against the District V champion.

"We played the best game we've played all year," said Filer junior forward Cassidy Ferrell, who is making her first trip to state. "Going to state, that's been our goal all season and I'm really excited. My teammates said it will be really intense, but we're ready!"

The class of the SCIC all season, Filer smacked Kimberly in the mouth early, starting the game with an 11-0 run.

Jessica Hughes and Sierra Koyle made three straight steals, leading to six easy points and Koyle hit the team's only 3-pointer of the game to cap the run.

Kimberly (12-10) didn't get on the board until the 2:15 mark on back-to-back 3's from Heidi Funk and Halie Wilsey. Those were the only points of the quarter for the Bulldogs, who trailed 18-6 after the first eight minutes and 38-15 at halftime.

"They blitzed us. They did an incredible job pressuring us, disrupting our offense. That, and combined with the shooting woes, was a bad combination for us," said Kimberly head coach Brett Wright. "We didn't reach all our goals this season, but we have a young team and we'll improve and be back next year."

throughout the game as Koyle and Hughes harassed Kimberly's guards at halfcourt, and Croy, Ferrell and Jenna Jarolimek controlled the paint.

"That's defense. That's what we do. Everyone is moving. We harp and preach defense every single day. That's how you win ball games," said Filer head coach Kody Ketterling. "Sell out. That's been our motto all season. Come into the game and sell out on defense, sell out on offense and give everything you have on that basketball court."

Filer kept the lead at 20 for much of the second half and as large as 25 early in the third quarter. Ferrell led the Wildcats with 14 points and Cassidy Moon added 11 off the bench.

Kelsey Wright led Kimberly with 11 points, eight in the fourth quarter. Heidi Funk added 10.

Rivers Stuns Tar Heels at Buzzer

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. • Freshman Austin Rivers buried a 3-pointer at the horn to give No. 10 Duke an 85-84 win over No. 5 North Carolina on Wednesday night.

Rivers scored a season-high 29 points and hit six 3s, though the last will certainly live on in the lore on the fierce rivalry.

With the Blue Devils (20-4, 7-2) trailing by two, Rivers launched a 3 over 7-footer Tyler Zeller from the right wing. The ball swished through the net, sending Rivers running down the court in celebration while the rest of his teammates gave chase before mobbing him in front of a stunned UNC crowd.

Rivers' 3 capped a wild rally for the Blue Devils, who trailed by 10 points with about 2½ minutes left.

Harrison Barnes scored 25 points for the Tar Heels (20-4, 7-2), while Zeller finished with 23 points and 11 rebounds. But Zeller missed a free throw with 13.9 seconds left, setting up Rivers' winning shot.

NO. 7 KANSAS 68,

NO. 6 BAYLOR 54

WACO, Texas • Jeff Withey scored a career-high 25 points and Kansas went ahead to stay during a stretch without Thomas Robinson.

After a 14-3 run over the final 4½ minutes of the first half with Robinson on the bench to take its first lead, Kansas (19-5, 9-2 Big 12) scored 14 consecutive points early in the second half to take complete control of the game.

PREP ROUNDUP

Valley Clips Gooding to Claim Canyon Title

TIMES-NEWS

John Cauhorn was clutch when he needed to be, hitting 5 of 6 free throws in the final minute, and Justin Johnson did his usual thing in the preceeding 31 minutes, scoring a game-high 17 points, as Valley (16-2, 5-1) clinched the Canyon Conference title with a 56-53 victory against Gooding.

Gooding's last chance was a desperation shot from well past mid-court after Cauhorn's final free throw put the Vikings up by three points. He finished with 16 points.

Gooding (11-7, 3-3) had three players in double figures, led by Carter Flora's 13 points, but must now travel to Declo for the opening game of the District IV Class 2A tournament. Valley earned the top seed and will host Wendell. Both games are Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Love Preparing For a Ryder Cup Year

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. • There is plenty of evidence that this is a Ryder Cup year.

The U.S. players are starting to earn points from regular PGA Tour events, with Kyle Stanley atop the standings based on his runner-up finish and win in consecutive weeks. Davis Love III walks onto the range and players call him "captain."

Love, however, said the race to make the team really doesn't start until late May. That's when two dozen or so players begin getting fitted for uniforms.

"When I always played, you went to the Memorial, got measured for clothes, and you started choking on points," Love said Wednesday. "So that's probably the time that it's serious, when you get measured for your clothes and the points start settling out."

Love still hasn't announced his assistant captains, saying he will work with European captain Jose Maria Olazabal to find a good time when they can do that together. He thinks four assistants is a good number.

Love said he would consider past captains, and especially longtime friend Fred Couples, even though Couples could be a distraction because the players like him so much. Couples is 2-0 as Presidents Cup captain.

Harrington's Hope

Padraig Harrington has played on every Ryder Cup team for Europe since 1999, and he barely made it on the last team as a captain's pick. This year might be particularly difficult for the three-time major champion.

Europe is so strong at the top that many feel it will be the toughest team to make in history. That's especially true for Harrington, who is coming off such a poor season that he has fallen to No.

93 in the world. While his two majors in 2008 keep him eligible for the four majors, he is not in the two World Golf Championships over the next month.

Those are the short fields that, in short, offer free points.

"There's no doubt I'm behind the eight-ball at this stage," Harrington said. "I haven't got very many points. It's not going to be a year that I can play well and get into it. I'm going to have to play great to get into the team. I'm not going to be able to pick up easy points and qualify that way. I'm going to have to actually really play well to force my way in."

Mr. Anti-Gadget

Spencer Levin might be considered old school when it comes to technology.

He has an email account, but he hasn't checked it in about eight years. And he doesn't have a cell phone. He dropped his phone in the water during the off-season and hasn't replaced it.

Levin is not exactly losing sleep over this.

"I just haven't bothered to get a new one," he said. "I have no desire to. My girlfriend has got all my buddies' numbers, so I can talk to my friends through her phone. That's how I do it."

Hope

Back then it was all about money and television ratings. Still is, because the more the ratings go south the better a playoff looks.

"The reason for the sagging ratings is the fans are recognizing what these games actually are," said Matthew Sanderson, co-founder of Playoff PAC, a Washington, D.C., organization in favor of playoffs in college football. "They realize that these aren't anything other than glorified exhibition games that have little legitimacy."

BCS officials would surely disagree. They like to think they've gotten it right every year, using computer programs no one can explain and polls that defy explanation to pick the two most worthy teams in the country to play for the title.

It's a system laden with so many flaws that it can't be trusted. Even when the BCS does get it right, there's always a school that feels its been wronged.

The four-team playoff wouldn't eliminate that totally. But it's a lot easier to pick four qualified teams than just two, even if No. 5 if left fuming on the sidelines.

The format isn't terribly complicated. The No. 1 team in the rankings would play at home against the No. 4 team. The No. 2 team would host the No. 3 team, and the winners would meet, say, two weeks later on a neutral site.

Had the system been in place this past season, LSU would have hosted Stanford and Oklahoma State would have traveled to Alabama for a semifinal game. Those games would not only have sparked more interest in the title game, but could have changed the complexion of it entirely.

BCS Executive Director Bill Hancock said Tuesday there will be meetings later this month on a possible format change, with a goal of a final decision by summer, when negotiations are expected to begin on a new television deal with ESPN to replace the current one that runs through the 2013 season.

"The tricky part is our 11 conference commissioners and the Notre Dame AD may have 12 different opinions about the direction we should go over the next six to eight months," Hancock said.

Complicating the issue is how to deal with the major bowls, which now host the title game on a rotating basis. Other than the Rose Bowl, though, they've been so co-opted by corporate greed and the demands of television that they've become increasingly marginalized. Does the Orange Bowl really deserve the BCS title game next year after the West Virginia blowout of Clemson was the least-watched Orange Bowl in nearly two decades?

Sanderson said he is skeptical the BCS will follow through and actually implement a playoff system. If it does, he said, it likely will be a hybrid of the existing system, and not something that brings meaningful reform to the postseason.

"I'm not encouraged by talk, though I would be encouraged by them actually following through," he said. "For umpteen reasons, I doubt their motives for even engaging in this discussion."

With good reason, because the BCS was never about giving fans something they wanted. It was — and still is — all about big schools maintaining control of college football and reaping the profits that come with it.

That's worked well over the years for members of the cartel. They foisted a system on college football that no fan likes, excluded schools they didn't like and happily collected hundreds of millions of dollars from the TV networks.

Until they actually do change the model, it really is nothing more than talk.

Memphis Final Piece For Coast-to-Coast Big East

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Big East has acquired all the pieces needed to build a new coast-to-coast conference. Putting them all together, though, is going to take a while.

The conference wanted to rebuild itself into a 12-team football league that can hold a championship game, and Memphis officially became that 12th member on Wednesday when it accepted an invite it has long coveted.

But the new Big East isn't scheduled to be fully functional until the 2015 football season. As for the next three years, what the Big East will look like is anybody's guess.

Memphis is the seventh school, and fourth from Conference USA, to sign up since December for future membership in the Big East. The Tigers will compete in the Big East in all sports.

"It certainly is an historic day for us," University of Memphis President Shirley Raines said during a teleconference with Big East Commissioner John Marinatto and Memphis Athletic Director R.C. Johnson.

Memphis has been trying to upgrade its conference affiliation for years, and the Big East was always the most likely landing spot. The Tigers were snubbed during the Big East's last massive expansion in 2005 and lost a longtime rivalry with Louisville in the process.

Now with the Big East in need of replacements for West Virginia, Pittsburgh and Syracuse, there was finally room for Memphis.

Marinatto called Memphis a "perfect fit" "There were a number of contributing factors for our membership in making the decision to invite Memphis, including among other reasons its geography in the heart of our future membership make-up, its Central time zone presence, its top-50 media market, as well as its outstanding corporate and community support, quality athletic facilities and the overall brand and competitiveness of its athletic programs," Marinatto said.

Marinatto has traveled across the country in recent months to recruit new members. In December, the Big East announced Boise State and San Diego State from the Mountain West Conference would join in 2013 for football only, and Houston, SMU and Central Florida, from C-USA, would become members in all sports.

Last month, Navy football jumped on board, though that won't happen until 2015.

The Big East pitched Air Force and BYU on joining, but couldn't work out a deal with either. Temple was also being considered, but the Philadelphia school and former Big East member was passed over for Memphis because the conference wanted to bolster its new west wing.

Memphis gives the Big East 11 football teams committed for the 2013 season, still one short of the 12 needed under NCAA rules to hold a conference championship game. The league could ask the NCAA for a waiver to play a title game with less than 12, though Marinatto said there are no plans for that and the Big East championship football game will debut after Navy joins.
