Left Behind: 10 States Fleeing Ed Law

BY KIMBERLY HEFLING and BEN FELLER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama on Thursday declared that 10 states are free from the No Child Left Behind law, allowing them to scrap some of the most rigorous and unpopular mandates in American education. In exchange, the states are promising higher standards and more creative ways to measure what students are learning.

"We can combine greater freedom with greater accountability," Obama said from the White House. Plenty more states are bound to take up him up on the offer.

The first 10 states to be declared free from the landmark education law are Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, Oklahoma and Tennessee. The only state that applied for the flexibility and did not get it, New Mexico, is working with the administration to get approval.

A total of 28 other states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico have signaled that they, too, plan to flee the law in favor of their own plans.

Yet the move is a tacit acknowledgement that the law's main goal, getting all students up to speed in reading and math by 2014, is not within reach.

The states excused from following the law no longer have to meet that deadline. Instead, they had to put forward plans showing they will prepare children for college and careers, Please see NCLB, A2

What about Idaho?

Idaho is among the list of 29 states that, along with Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico, hope to be released by President Barack Obama from the most stringent mandates of the federal No Child Left Behind Law. On Thursday, 10 states received NCLB waivers in the first round of requests. The Gem State has until Feb. 21 to submit its waiver request in the second round.

tax commissioners and the Idaho Chamber Alliance.

Similar legislation has been attempted, but has died in the House every year since 2007.

The 78-page proposal adds new sections to the state's tax code, preparing Idaho to join the 24 states who already participate in the Streamlined Sales and Use Tax Agreement.

What's next: Idaho's application, developed with stakeholders and public input, will be presented to the Idaho State Board of Education for approval on Feb. 15. After that step, it will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Education.

What it's about: Remember that five-star school ranking system public schools chief Tom Luna touted in January? That system, based on key components of the Students Come First reform laws, would replace current NCLB mandates as public schools' new accountability system. BOISE • Sen. Jeff Siddoway has had enough of wolves.

On Thursday, the Senate Agriculture Committee voted to print a bill from the Terreton Republican that would expand ranchers' ability to hunt wolves that kill their livestock.

Siddoway cited his own experiences with battling wolves. In recent years, the eastern Idaho sheep rancher estimated he had experienced losses of between $30,000 and $50,000 because of wolves, even with a restitution program in place.

"This bill is a direct result of those losses," he said.

The legislation would allow ranchers to use a variety of currently prohibited tactics to take out problem Please see WOLVES, A2

Judge: BLM Ignored Its Own Policies

A successful challenge of grazing permits in Owyhee County may lead to similar cases in the Magic Valley.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

kkruesi@magicvalley.com

BOISE • A federal court has ruled the U.S. Bureau of Land Management failed to follow its own sage grouse protection policies when it renewed grazing permits in southern Idaho.

The lawsuit was led by Hailey-based Western Watersheds Project. It challenged the federal agency by selecting five grazing allotment permits renewed by the Owyhee and Bruneau BLM field offices.

According to court documents, U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill ruled that the BLM renewed grazing permits without tightening restrictions on permit holders or following its own environmental policies, even though the agency defined the areas as key habitats for sage grouse. "It's like the agency is so tied to the livestock industry that it refuses to address the wildlife issues. They're not addressing what's going on."

Katie Fite, WWP biodiversity director

"It's like the agency is so tied to the livestock industry that it refuses to address the wildlife issues," said Katie Fite, WWP biodiversity director. "They're not addressing what's going on."

The court's decision arrives on the heels of BLM's recent unveiling of a national plan to prove it can prevent sage grouse from being listed as an endangered species.

In 2010, U.S. Fish and Wildlife officials decided that the bird warranted protection under the Endangered Species Act. But they won't make a decision until 2015.

"The recent ruling by Judge Winmill is relevant in that it fits with what BLM is currently doing; assessing the impact of grazing on sage-grouse habitat, and determining how we can conserve sage-grouse, even if it means making some tough decisions on the multiple uses of our public lands," Jessica Gardetto, spokeswoman for the BLM office in Boise, said in an email.

Gardetto emphasized that part of the BLM's strategy is to focus on the impacts of grazing across each landscape and not just by each individual allotment.

WWP's victory leaves the organization hopeful that a judge will also rule in its favor regarding 600 other grazing allotments, Fite said. The allotments are spread across southern Idaho and Nevada, including across the southern Magic Valley.

"If decisions like this aren't a wake-up call, I don't know what is," Fite said. A 2 TN • Friday, February 10, 2012

House Panel Unanimously Clears Oil and Gas Bill

BOISE (AP) • The House from those who fear Resources and Conservation Committee voted unanimously to limit local governments' authority over oil and natural gas drilling, after energy-industry representatives raised concerns they could be regulated out of business by cities or counties.

BURLEY • Mini-Cassia Republicans will turn out on Super Tuesday to make their presidential candidate preference known in the state's first Republican caucus.

"Idaho will wield some influence in the presidential election this year," said Wayne Hurst, chairman of the Cassia County Republican Central Committee.

Republican officials confirmed earlier in the week that five candidates will be on the ballot, including Texas Congressman Ron Paul, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, former U.S. House Speaker Newt Gingrich and longshot candidate Buddy Roemer.

Last year, the party's central committee approved moving Republican Caucus the state's Republican nominating contest up from May to Super Tuesday on March 6.

Hurst said although Democrats hold caucuses, this will be a first for Idaho Republicans, who will convene throughout the state.

Idaho has been granted 32 delegates, compared to battleground states Nevada and Iowa's 28 delegates each, Hurst said.

"We'll definitely be part of the presidential scene," Hurst said.

Hurst said any 17-year-old person who will turn 18 before the November election will be able to vote in the caucus.

After speeches are completed, caucus voters will be given ballots, which will be voted upon privately, while results will be counted publicly.

The winning candidate will require a simple majority to win, so successive votes may be taken.

Hurst said if someone would like to attend the caucus who does not want to declare themselves Republican, accommodations can be made.

Geddes Resigns from Idaho Tax Commission

BOISE (AP) • State Tax Commission Chairman Bob Geddes resigned his state post this week and will return to Monsanto, his former employer.

Geddes is the former Senate president pro tem chosen by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in January 2011 to help restore the State Tax Commission's reputation.

That's after its former chairman, Royce Chigbrow, resigned amid complaints he helped family and friends and inappropriately handled taxpayer money.

Geddes says he'll be helping manage the company's electricity usage, including relations with utilities and regulators.

to update the law despite widespread agreement it needs to be fixed.

"We've offered every state the same deal," Obama said. "If you're willing to set higher, more honest standards than the one ones that were set by No Child Left Behind, then we're going to give you the flexibility to meet those standards."

Republicans have charged that by granting waivers, Obama was overreaching his authority.

The executive action by Obama is one of his most prominent in an ongoing campaign to act on his own where Congress is rebuffing him.

Obama called President George W. Bush's most hyped domestic accomplishment an admirable but flawed effort that hurt students instead of helping them.

No Child Left Behind was primarily designed to help the nation's poor and minority children and was passed a decade ago with widespread bipartisan support. It has been up for renewal since 2007. But lawmakers have been stymied for years by competing priorities, disagreements over how much of a federal role there should be in schools and, in the recent Congress, partisan gridlock.

For all the cheers that states may have about Obama's action, the move also reflects the sobering reality that the United States is not close to the law's original goal: getting children to grade level in reading and math.

Critics today say the 2014 deadline was unrealistic, the law is too rigid and led to teaching to the test, and too many schools feel they are unfairly labeled as "failures." Under No Child Left Behind, schools that don't meet requirements for two years or longer face increasingly tough consequences, including busing children to higher-performing schools, offering tutoring and replacing staff.

As the deadline approaches, more schools are failing to meet requirements under the law, with nearly half not doing so last year, according to the Center on Education Policy. Center officials said that's because some states today have harder tests or have high numbers of immigrant and low-income children, but it's also because the law requires states to raise the bar each year for how many children must pass the test.

In states granted a waiver, students will still be tested annually. But starting this fall, low-performing schools in those states will no longer face the same prescriptive actions spelled out under No Child Left Behind, but instead will face a variety of interventions determined by the individual states. A school's performance will also probably be labeled differently.

In Oklahoma, State School Superintendent Janet Barresi said Thursday that teachers in Oklahoma schools will be able to focus more on the growth of individual children.

"In order to be successful under the old system, you focused on getting the students to just pass the tests so the school would show improvement to get their AYP status," Barresi said. AYP, or adequate yearly progress, is a crucial measurement under No Child Left Behind.

Fordham Institute, an education think tank.

While the president's action marks a change in education policy in America, the reach is limited. The populous states of Pennsylvania, Texas and California are among those that have not said they will seek a waiver, although they could still do so later.

On Tuesday, Education Secretary Arne Duncan said states without a waiver will be held to the standards of No Child Left Behind because "it's the law of the land."

Some conservatives viewed Obama's plan not as giving more flexibility to states, but as imposing his vision on them. Rep. John Kline, R-Minn., who chairs the House Education and the Workforce Committee, said Thursday that, "This notion that Congress is sort of an impediment to be bypassed, I find very, very troubling in many, many ways."

Duncan maintained this week that the administration "desperately" wants Congress to fix the law.

In an election year in a divided Congress, that appears unlikely.

PARENTS TO HAVE SAY IN EDUCATOR EVALUATIONS

Though they're not required to yet, some school districts are already including parental input from surveys into their performance evaluations.

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS . Soon, parents will have a voice in evaluating their child's teacher.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter signed a bill last week clarifying the role parent input will play in teacher and school administrator evaluations.

New requirements for evaluations were passed last year under public schools chief Tom Luna's Students Come First public education reforms.

school employee's evaluation must be tied to growth in student achievement.

School districts are deciding how to factor in student growth and parent input components that aren't required for evaluations this vear.

Some districts, though, are trying out parts of the new system now. Others, McGrath said, have included parent input in teacher evaluations for years.

The Twin Falls School District is piloting the parent input piece this year.

Associate Superintendent Patti O'Dell said hard copies of survey forms will be provided during third-quarter parent-teacher conferences.

It's a good time, she said, since there's usually about a 95 percent turnout rate at conferences.

"We hope it's a process that will give teachers valuable information about parents' perceptions," O'Dell said.

"I think it's always good to hear what parents are feeling," she said.

In Jerome, a school district committee is working on both the parent input and student growth requirements for evaluations.

Superintendent Dale Layne said results from a parent survey will be included in teacher evaluations starting during the next school year, under a section that references how teachers work with parents.

The parent survey will likely be offered both online

Twin Falls Man Arrested for Alleged Spice Concotion

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls police say they have arrested a man they accuse of manufacturing an illegal version of the synthetic marijuana known as spice.

Joey Thomas Trevino, 21, was arraigned Thursday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on one count of manufacturing a controlled substance and one count of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver.

Police say they Trevino's searched house and vehicle Tuesday at about 7:18 p.m. after a probation officer found text messages on Trevino's cellphone asking to buy as many pills as possible. The officer also said Trevino was carrying about $1,600 in cash and had about $1,100 more in his car.

Trevino allegedly told officers he had so much cash because he had been selling spice.

More officers were called to Trevino's Washington Street South home. During the search, several items indicating drug abuse and sales were allegedly found including empty pill bottles for prescriptions that were recently filled, two digital scales, a box of plastic baggies, a white powder-like substance, and nearly a pound of a plant material police believed was spice. Police also opened a safe with $5,302 in cash in it.

Later, the white powder was tested at the Twin Falls Police Department. Police say it tested presumptively positive for an illegal stimulant commonly known as bath salts.

While legal versions of spice are sold in stores throughout the area, police say Trevino was adding the bath salts to the product. Mixing the two together causes users to hallucinate and act erratic and uncontrollable, police say.

In total, police seized just less than $8,000 from Trevino's house, along with the pound of spice and 11.9 grams of bath salts.

Trevino is held in the Twin Falls County Jail on $25,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 17.

Idaho State Department of Education spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said some school districts were uncertain of when the parent input requirement begins. The bill clarifies that point, saying the feedback must be included in evaluations after June 30.

"We want to make sure parents have a voice in the evaluation process," Mc-Grath said.

Another requirement is that at least 50 percent of a

Tax

Streamlined sales tax is a uniform effort to collect sales taxes from the point of purchase, Smith said. For example, if someone in Idaho were to place an online order from a Georgia-based business, the business would collect a 6 percent sales tax and deliver it to Idaho.

This isn't a new tax, Smith said, but a structure to collect a tax that Idahoans are already required to pay. Idaho's tax code says people must pay sales tax on Internet purchases and other kinds of remote sales, such as those made from catalogues. But if the business doesn't collect the tax, few people report the purchases on their tax returns, he said.

"This is a means to collect it," Smith said. That could add up to $35 million annually, he said.

Shawn Barigar, president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Idaho Chamber Alliance, said not collecting taxes on Internet sales puts local stores, which are required to collect sales tax, at a 6 percent disadvantage.

"Idaho business firms are being treated unfairly and the General Fund is being adversely affected each year because millions of dollars in sales taxes are not collected on Internet sales transactions," according to a release Barigar sent to the Times-News. "The Idaho Chamber Alliance supports efforts to collect Internet sales taxes." At a Thursday presentation to the Senate Local Government and Taxation committee, Idaho state tax commissioners came out strongly in favor of participating in Streamlined Sales Tax.

"Support is building on a federal level," said Commissioner David Langhorst. And if Idaho doesn't voluntarily participate, the state risks the federal government handing down a structure that may not fit our situation, he said.

Even Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said in January that he supported the concept of an Internet sales tax, though he added he wasn't sure this was the time to make the required changes.

Nesset, the bill's sponsor, said he is cautiously optimistic.

"Obviously, the governor's comments were very helpful," he said Thursday afternoon.

Tiffany Catmull, owner of MaRozie Clothing Boutique in Twin Falls, said she had never considered Internet sales tax. But after learning about it, she supported the efforts.

"I guess people don't realize how shopping locally affects business versus shopping online," she said.

Fewer School Days, Employees, a Reality for Kimberly Schools

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • In Kimberly, students and teachers alike have a shorter school year the result of the school district's budget situation.

It's one topic Superintendent Kathleen Noh brought up during a "State of the Schools" address Wednesday night at Kimberly Middle School. This year, the school district saw a $1.28 million reduction in funding.

Noh said federal Jobs Bill funding made up for some of that shortfall. However, the district was still left with $1 million less to pay for its operations this year.

"Of course, the biggest cut was the number of school days," she told more than 30 people at the community meeting.

The district cut seven days from this year's school calendar, but increased the length of school days.

"So in effect, we have more instructional time than before," Noh said.

The district has more inschool hours than the state requires. Noh said it's still hard, though, to get through the curriculum with fewer school days.

This year, there are also fewer school employees.

"There are 2 1/2 fewer staff members than our enrollment would warrant," Noh said.

At the beginning of the year, about 85 more students showed up than the previous year. As a result, the school district passed a $140,000 emergency levy in September.

Noh said the school district is preparing for the upcoming March 13 election, when voters will decide whether to renew a twoyear supplemental levy for $300,000 each year. She said the levy is "critical" for the district.

"We wouldn't want to cut $300,000 from the budget," she said.

She also gave an overview of statewide education changes this year – most of them, as a result of Students Come First reforms.

Changes include a new teacher evaluation system, a decline in state funding for teacher salaries, an increase in state funding for technology, more transparency with school district financial information online and requiring all high school juniors to take the SAT.

At a local level, the school district will offer a science, technology, engineering and math summer school program for fourth- through 12th-grade students.

During the Wednesday night meeting, attendees also broke into smaller groups to learn more about topics such as technology and the school district's long-term plan.

Idaho House Approves Bill on Early College Graduation

BY JESSIE L. BONNER Associated Press

BOISE • A program aimed at helping students complete one or two years of college by the time they graduate high school advanced Thursday in the Idaho Legislature.

Students who participate in the "8 in 6 Program" would take summer courses - with the state picking up a large portion of the tab - to finish their junior high and high school coursework early and then get started on college through dual enrollment courses.

The program aims to help students complete up to two years of college by the time they leave high school.

"It really depends on the willingness of students to take extra classes and do the extra work," said Republican Rep. Steve Thayn, of Emmett.

The idea is students could complete junior high, high school and two years of college in six years not eight, hence the name of the program. The Idaho House voted 58-12 on Thursday to approve legislation that would create Thayn's program.

Thayn predicts savings in the long run, with Idaho funding fewer students for four years of college, but some lawmakers voiced concerns over how the state will come up with the initial funding for the summer courses.

The program would be limited to 10 percent of students in grades 7-12, with each participant to take up to eight courses, estimated at $300 apiece. The state would pick up $225 of the cost, while students would pay the remaining $75.

Thayn estimates students would take between 10,000 and 13,000 courses during the first year of the program, which would cost the state $2.2 million to $2.9 million in the next fiscal year. The program is not included in a proposed public schools budget for 2013.

Thayn is working with the state Department of Education to secure funding for the program, he said.

Students would have to maintain at least a C grade average in each course they take as part of the 8 in 6 program, according to the bill. Students who get a D or F can continue taking classes the following year, but they would have to pay for it out of their own pocket, Thayn said.

"So there's some incentive for them to do a good job," said Thayn, who spearheaded a program in 2010 to reward kids who graduate from high school with scholarship money to an Idaho university or college.

Thayn's latest venture, to help students get a leg up on college coursework before they leave high school, would also be set up within the state Department of Education, which has testified in support of the plan.

The program relies on thinking outside the box, said Republican Rep. Mack Shirley, a Rexburg lawmaker who vice chairs the House Education Committee.

"It's a little unusual, but the concept is good," Shirley said.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Filer man has pleaded guilty to several charges related to a string of vehicle burglaries police say he and a woman committed October and November.

Jack Richard Cramer, 36, pleaded guilty in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Jan. 30 to charges in three different cases including burglary, forgery of a financial transaction card and theft by receiving stolen property.

Cramer was accused of stealing a 17-year-old girl's purse out of her grandfather's car during an early November night and using debit cards to purchase gasoline, soda and lottery tickets. He was also accused of stealing and using cards from two other Twin Falls residents' vehicles.

According to court records, in a Nov. 3 interview with sheriff's deputies, Cramer said he and Rebecca Ilene Vulgamore, 34, would pick a neighborhood to drive

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A D.L. Evans Bank employee accused of stealing money from customer accounts has pleaded not guilty.

Mylyn Rae Rodig, 39, of Twin Falls, pleaded not guilty Wednesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court to theft by unauthorized control or transfer of property with intent of depriving the owner.

Rodig was accused of stealing a total of $19,000 out of two customer accounts over several months.

According to court records, Rodig told police she faced mounting medical bills over the past three years and was afraid of being sent to collections, declaring bankruptcy and losing her job. Police say Rodig completed the withdrawals from the accounts when she worked at the teller line, then put the cash in her purse when she returned to her desk. The transactions allegedly occurred between Dec. 23, 2010, and Sept. 28, 2011.

A pretrial hearing is set for April 23, with a threeday jury trial scheduled to begin May 2.

BUHL MAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO RAPE

TWIN FALLS • A Buhl man has pleaded not guilty to raping a woman after a party in Twin Falls.

Daniel R. Ghormley, 25, pleaded not guilty to one count of rape in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Wednesday.

Ghormley was charged with the crime after Twin Falls police say forensic test results matched Ghormley's DNA to samples taken from his accuser the night of the alleged incident. Police responded to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for a report of a sexual assault on May 22, 2011. The victim told police she had been raped while sleeping after a party and woke up with Ghormley on the bed beside her. According to court documents, when the woman asked what happened, Ghormley told her she had a bad dream and he came to check on her. On Nov. 29, police say they received test results showing a DNA match between a blood sample given by Ghormley and evidence from the rape kit in the case. A warrant was put out for Ghormley's arrest on Dec. 22. A pretrial hearing has been scheduled for May 7 and a four-day jury trial is scheduled to begin May 15.

BOISE (AP) • A bill to modernize laws governing Idaho's growing population of canines won introduction in the Senate, where an almost identical measure passed unanimously in 2011 before stumbling on opposition from agricultural interests in the House.

Idaho Humane Society Executive Director Jeff Rosenthal said Thursday the state's existing dog statutes are no longer adequate, for an era when dogs live in increasingly close quarters with humans.

Among numerous changes, the measure would give courts more latitude on destroying Johnson, who is currently chief deputy at the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

hat we're about to propose will never happen. It can't. It just makes too much sense, and relies on too many counties and cities working together.

But it would make all the difference for southcentral Idaho's three airports.

Just this week, Burley city officials approached the Minidoka County commissioners to seek support for the city's latest effort to build a new airport. The J.R. "Jack" Simplot Airport, they argue, has no space to grow, its runways are too short and its design has led to several safety concerns.

Meanwhile, the attempt to replace Hailey's Friedman Memorial Airport has devolved back into a string of meetings, after the federal government concluded a site proposal developed in recent years was just too expensive. And while Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport south of Twin Falls isn't in need of replacement, it does have a full slate of costly upgrades and expansions proposed.

All of this once again leads us to wonder: Why should three different communities shoulder the burden of maintaining three separate airports when by working together, they could minimize costs and attract more air service?

We have to applaud Burley for its efforts this time around. Except for a snafu over how an airport committee proposed ideal sites — in the middle of prime county farmland — the city seems to have learned a lesson. Instead of spooking folks with talk of eminent domain, it's approaching its neighbors about supporting a site.

But there's a good chance other issues will trip up its attempt. It comes down to this: Blaine County already can't afford what its residents thought was a feasible plan to replace its airport. Will Burley have the same problem?

Passions and regional disagreements aside, the most cost-effective way to see the greatest improvement in local air service is for all of south-central Idaho to pool its resources.

Burley's existing airport still plays a role in economic development there, but many pilots are satisfied enough with it that they don't see a need to push for a new one. So, leave it in place and invest Mini-Cassia's assets in the broader partnership.

Building an airport is a difficult proposition at the best of times. When south-central Idaho is pulling itself out of recession, it may be that the only way to improve the region's airports is if we all pitch in. his was the week Mitt Romney should have sealed the Republican presidential nomination. He was expected to win Tuesday's caucuses in Colorado, to win or tie in Minnesota and to do credibly well in Missouri. Instead, the former Massachusetts governor managed to lose all three contests to Rick Santorum, a candidate who has spent most of the campaign stuck near the bottom of the polls.

OPLE.

Romney has done well in states such as New Hampshire and Florida, where moderate voters make up a significant share of the Republican electorate. But conservative states just aren't having him yet, especially those that hold caucuses, which tend to draw only the most committed voters. At this point, the GOP looks more like a collection of warring tribes than a cohesive political force. Fiscal conservatives don't have much use for social conservatives. Libertarians and moderates don't get along with either camp. "We are factionalized now as a party," lamented Rep. Michele Bachmann, R-Minn. "We have to come together." She's right. Why? Because the long and relentlessly negative campaign is making all the GOP candidates less likable to independent voters, who will probably determine the outcome of this fall's general election.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll released this week measured the phenomenon, asking voters: As you learn more about these candidates, do you like them more, or like them less?

In the case of Romney, 52 percent of voters said the more they knew about him, the less they liked him. That's not surprising after a month of unflattering revelations about Romney's business career and his investment accounts overseas, but it's not a good sign. Newt Gingrich fared even worse: 60 percent of voters said the more they learned about him, the less they liked. didn't think enough of Santorum's chances to include his name in the question. As recently as last month, 20 percent of Americans said they had never even heard of the former Pennsylvania senator. But among Republicans who recognized Santorum's name, the general impression was positive; unlike Gingrich, he does not draw automatic opposition from a big chunk of the GOP electorate. That can be attributed in part to the fact that up to now the other candidates haven't needed to attack him.

Now, in the wake of his victories, Santorum will be on the receiving end of some serious hazing at the hands of the Romney campaign.

It's already begun. In recent days, the Romney campaign dispatched one of its spokesmen, former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty, to warn GOP voters that Santorum is a Washington insider who liked the place so much that after he lost his Senate seat, he stayed in the hated capital as a lobbyist. 'Mr. Outsider' — was for government takeover in healthcare, was for government takeover of the private sector in the Wall Street bailout," Santorum said Wednesday on CNN. "So Mr. Private Sector was Mr. Big Government."

POOR

HE

IDON'T CAR

In the coming mud fight, there are reasons to expect that Santorum will make a better showing than Gingrich. But mud fights, whatever the outcome, don't tend to build party unity.

In a Fox News poll last month, GOP voters ranked Santorum first among the candidates as a "true conservative," well ahead of Romney and Gingrich. And in the ABC-Washington Post poll, they ranked him roughly on par with Romney as "honest and trustworthy" - well ahead of Gingrich, whom only 7 percent considered the most honest. (Even most Gingrich supporters said they didn't consider him the most trustworthy candidate.) Conservatives who want an alternative to Romney are still looking for the right champion. The month ahead is Santorum's chance to win that role.

Water Agency Is Doing Great Job

Your concern about Idaho Department of Water Resources budget reductions is well taken. We are all very concerned about one of Idaho's most important resources.

I think your concern about these reductions should be set in the perspective of a reduction of the entire budget. All state and federal agencies are going to have budget reductions if our state and the nation is going to survive. In the case of IDWR, the agency has been lead by Gary Spackman who has the ability to administer the agency well with fewer employees and a smaller budget. My business has dealings with IDWR practically every day and the service we get from the agency is markedly better than before Gary was the director.

This improvement in the service from IDWR is an example all agencies need to follow. We need good administrators and employees who have the people's interests at heart and not their ability to see how much money they can spend. I think IDWR is doing great with the money it has in its budget.

Thanks Is Why Veteran Served

When my wife and I were shopping at Costco on Saturday with all the other people, we were standing by the seafood display when I noticed a small boy looking up at me. He tugged on my pants and said, "Hey, Mister, thank you for serving!"

I had my Navy cap on with the name and number of the ship that I had served on. I shook his hand and said, "Thank you." I told him the picture and name on the cap was the ammunition ship that I was stationed on. He shook my hand again and said politely, "Thank you for serving," and made his way through the crowd. I stood up and looked in the direction he was going and saw his father and the rest of his family. I gave his father a thumb's up and he responded the same to me.

As I thought of this little boy's very sincere gesture later, I remembered the things that I had sacrificed when I joined the navy at 17 years old. This small boy made me remember that he and so many like him were why I did what I did.

I will keep doing my duty to honor our veterans. When I feel the tears in my eyes, I will think of this small boy saying, "Thanks for your service."

I didn't know this little lad or any of his family, but I would like to compliment his parents for teaching him respect and that such a small gesture is a really big compliment. Thank you. WAYNE GOETZ

UI Law School Program Draws Lawmaker Protest

MOSCOW (AP) • The University of Idaho law school is requiring students to take a workshop in professionalism and diversity next week amid criticism from some lawmakers.

House Speaker Lawerence Denney was among 21 lawmakers who objected when the law school told students that if they missed the workshop next week, and did not have an excused absence, a memorandum would be placed in their file stating that they did not attend.

The lawmakers wrote the school late last month, saying they understood the need for students to learn to work with people of different backgrounds, but they also felt the warning to students that they would have a note placed in their file if they didn't attend amounted to a threat.

"As a publicly funded institution, using the threat of a memo suggesting clearly that a student is unprofessional, bigoted or both for not attending an extracurricular activity not part of the University's course catalog is simply unacceptable," the lawmakers said in their letter.

Law school dean Don Burnett responded to lawmakers with a letter of his own this week.

The law school was urged to focus more attention on professionalism and diversity during a visit from an accreditation team with the American Bar Association and Association of American Law Schools, Burnett said. The accreditation team visited the Moscow-based law school in October for a review, which occurs every seven years.

The team made recommendations based on interactions with law school students, faculty and staff.

"During their exit briefings with me and with university administrators, the team referred to these interactions and stated emphatically that the College of Law needed to focus additional attention upon professionalism and diversity," Burnett wrote.

House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, of Star, countered that "encouraging is not mandating."

"It seems like a waste of time and public resources," said Moyle, who was among lawmakers to write the university about the workshop last month.

The 75-minute workshop titled "Dialogues on Professionalism and Diversity" was scheduled in response to concerns raised by the accreditation team, Burnett said. The program is also in accordance with the law school's diversity plan, an agenda Burnett touted in 2010 after hate speech incidents at the Menard Law Building.

In August 2009, a bulletin-board picture of a student activist with a lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender group and the American Civil Liberties Union had its eyes gouged out. In February 2010 on the same bulletin board, pins were found stuck in the eyes of two other photographs of student ACLU activists, one of whom is also a LGBT activist. A month later, fliers were posted that Burnett said could be construed as advocating violence against gay students.

The workshop on professionalism and diversity is "the right thing to do" because the school must prepare lawyers to work in a diverse society, Burnett said. Student attendance has been poor at previous workshops that were not mandatory, he added.

"You just get kind of an echo chamber of people with similar views," Burnett said.

In his letter to lawmakers, Burnett apologized for a "seemingly harsh tone" in his email to law students saying they could face a memorandum in their files if they did not attend.

Man Guilty of Defacing Federal Building in Boise

BOISE (AP) • A man who spray-painted the words "I'm not a terrorist" on a federal building in Boise has pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor.

The U.S. Attorney's Office says 42-year-old Charles Arthur Stark was sentenced Wednesday to serve five years of probation and complete 100 hours of community service for willful injury to government property. Stark also has to pay restitution. Prosecutors say Stark caused about $750 in damage when he painted the windows of the James A. McClure Federal Building and Courthouse on Jan. 2. A video of Stark committing the vandalism was posted online, where it was viewed by investigators.

Authorities have previously said Stark is from Washington state and has been living at a Boise shelter for the past several months.

All three fired on Payton when he pointed a gun at Hilderbrand and refused to lower the weapon even after being shot.

Payton was shot nine times but survived. He was sentenced to eight years to life in prison.

House Democrats pressure laboratory director on radiation exposure incident last November.

BY CLARK CORBIN

ccorbin@postregister.com

BOISE • Idaho National Laboratory director John Grossenbacher briefed members of the House, Environment Energy and Technology Committee on activities and goals for the lab Wednesday.

During his prepared remarks, Grossenbacher made no mention of the Nov. 8 incident in the desert that led to the exposure of 16 workers to uncontrolled radiation.

But committee Democrats didn't let Grossenbacher off the hook. More than 45 minutes after Grossenbacher took the podium, Boise Rep. Brain Cronin asked him to explain the accident and the INL's response.

"When something like this happens, first and foremost, our immediate concern is the health and safety of our people," Grossenbacher said.

Grossenbacher spent the next 10 minutes explaining the incident, subsequent investigation and future remedies. "(The) system controls we had... and training were not adequate to protect our people," he said. "(That's) why we underestimated the hazard. We did not think... it would lead to an airborne hazard."

INL workers were preparing to ship a small container called a clamshell that contained a plutonium alloy when the exposure occurred, Grossenbacher said.

Nobody had opened the container in about 30 years, and when workers did, they discovered the alloy plate was covered in plastic.

After consulting a supervisor, employees cut through the plastic to run a test and close the container if radiation was detected. Once they cut through, they discovered a powder-like substance. Shortly thereafter, a safety alarm went off.

The workers then evacuated the building, Grossenbacher said.

Judge: Idaho School Board Broke Membership Rules

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A 1st District Court judge has revoked the appointment of a Coeur d'Alene school board member because the board she was resigning last summer. The board then declared a vacancy and the members, including McLachlan, voted for her replacement. The Fourteen of the 16 workers were determined to have received "insignificant" exposure doses. They since have returned to working near radioactive materials.

Officials still are completing the dosing estimates of two workers, and Grossenbacher said officials will discuss the results and their meaning publicly once that process is completed.

"Let me be clear, the dose estimates have been ongoing ever since the day of the accident," Grossenbacher said outside the hearing. "We calculate how much dose they'll get for 50 years, and we treat it as if they got it all today. You need to do it very carefully in a very conservative, disciplined way."

He said he did not know when the dosing estimates would be finalized.

During his prepared remarks, Grossenbacher provided an overview of the lab's mission, deadlines for the associated cleanup projects and results of a federal Blue Ribbon Commission energy report, which was released last month.

Grossenbacher spoke at length about his desire for the government to find a new permanent or long-term storage facility for spent nuclear fuel after the commissioners recommended abandoning Nevada's Yucca Mountain repository site.

After the hearing, Grossenbacher said federal and state budget cuts did not in any way diminish INL's safety practices or contribute to November's exposure incident.

Grossenbacher also addressed the possibility that the Department of Energy would levy fines against the INL in response to November's incident.

"The specifics of that kind of action are really for the Department of Energy to talk about," he said. "We work for them, they are the owner. They have both the authority, and I would even say the responsibility, to take appropriate actions relative to ensuring we are accountable for our performance when we don't live up to our own expectations."

Worker: Josh Powell Told Son He Had 'Surprise'

SEATTLE (AP) • The Washington state social worker who was supposed to supervise a visit between Josh Powell and his young sons says Powell told his oldest boy he had a "surprise" for him moments before attacking and killing the children.

Elizabeth Griffin-Hall said in an interview to air on ABC's "20/20" on Friday that Powell slammed the door on her after he had the children inside the house on Sunday. Hall said she banged on the door to try to get inside and heard Powell tell 7year-old Charlie: "I've got a big surprise for you." She also heard 5-year-old Braden crying.

Authorities said Powell used a hatchet on his children, then set a house fire that killed them all.

Powell's wife, Susan, vanished in Utah two years ago. Josh Powell had long been a person of interest in the case but maintained that he had taken his boys - then 2 and 4 - on a midnight camping trip in freezing temperatures when she disappeared from their home.

On Sunday, the social worker drove the boys from their maternal grandparents' home to their father's house outside Puyallup, about 35 miles from Seattle. Josh Powell lost custody of the boys last fall, after his father, with whom they then lived, was arrested in a child pornography and voyeurism investigation.

Griffin-Hall said Charlie and Braden loved being with their father. "One of them said what he wanted to do was go home and live with his daddy," she told ABC, adding that the boys would "light up" during visits with Josh Powell.

After he got the boys inside and locked the door, Griffin-Hall called 911 and her supervisor to tell them what was going on. The 911 dispatcher's handling of that call has been criticized, and an investigation has been launched into the emergency response.

Logs show deputies weren't dispatched until eight minutes after Griffin-Hall's initial contact with authorities, though police say any delay would not have stopped what ultimately happened to the boys.

The social worker said she told her boss "something terrible is happening here, and I was on the phone with ... when the house exploded. "I wanted to get to the kids," she said. "I wanted to get to the kids. I would have broken in if I could."

But Griffin-Hall told ABC she doesn't think she could have saved them.

"How this happened is that Josh Powell was really, really evil. I couldn't have stopped him," she said. "I did everything I was supposed to do. I did everything right and the boys are still dead."

Music Group Lauds Utah's Anti-piracy Campaign

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • The Recording Industry Association of America is honoring Utah's aggressive campaign to stop music piracy.

The association presented the Utah Attorney General's SECURE Strike Force with a Gold Record award on Thursday.

Strike Force members have seized more than 50,000 pirated media items worth nearly $700,000 in the past year and a half. Fourteen people have been arrested for piracy, and forged music has been seized from stores in at least five different counties in Utah.

Utah Attorney General Mark Shurtleff says the illegal industry means lost jobs for businesses and lost taxes for the state.

Suspects in the arrests have been charged with forgery, racketeering and piracy. Agents have also seized guns, drugs, fake government documents and several thousand pirated movies in the raids.

Iran Reaches Top of U.S. Worry List

Ticking clock, rising Israeli fears and the price of gas contribute to Iran's rise to the top.

WASHINGTON (AP) • The United States and its allies believe the window to stop Iran from building a bomb is quickly closing, pushing conflict with the Islamic republic to the top of the Obama administration's national security worries in the midst of an election year.

After years of diplomatic deadlock, Iran's nuclear program has advanced to the point where experts say work on a bomb could begin within a year. That progress has moved the once farfetched possibility of a preemptive U.S. or Israeli strike on Iran's nuclear sites to the forefront of the urgent debate over how to prevent Tehran from joining the nuclear club.

The prospect of a military strike on Iran is still unlikely. The U.S. insists diplomacy and economic coercion are its main focus, and a military strike would be its last option to stop an Iranian bomb.

The United States has a "very good estimate" of when Iran could produce a weapon, President Barack Obama said this week. He said that while he believes the standoff with Iran over its nuclear program can still be resolved through diplomacy, the U.S. has done extensive planning on a range

L.A. School Reopens Amid Sex Abuse Scandal

BY CHRISTINA HOAG Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • School got off to a rough start Thursday with students returning to class for the first time since their entire elementary school staff was replaced after two longtime teachers were accused of lewd acts on children.

The teachers union president assailed the reassignment of teachers as a stunt, about 100 parents and students blasted the move, and some of the new teachers needed a bit of help from their charges.

United Teachers Los Angeles President Warren Fletcher said teachers were being "tarred and stigmatized for no reason" and that grievances would be filed against Los Angeles Unified School District on behalf of some 85 reassigned teachers.

"It is crystal clear that LAUSD doesn't have a plan," Fletcher said. "They're making this up as they go along, and students at the school are

Greece, Creditors End Talks without Full Deal

Euro ministers question whether Greek cuts go far enough to earn a $170 billion bailout.

BRUSSELS (AP) • Just hours after Greece gave in to painful new job and spending cuts, European ministers declared Thursday that Athens didn't go far enough and demanded more within a week in exchange for a $170 billion bailout to stave off bankruptcy. The ministers gave the debt-ridden country until the middle of next week to find an extra $430 million in savings, pass the cuts through a divided parliament, and get written guarantees that they will be implemented even after the elections of a new government in April, said Jean-Claude Juncker, the Luxembourg prime minister who paying the price?

The school had been closed for two days while the entire 120-member staff was replaced in an unprecedented move by the district.

Superintendent John Deasy said the makeover was needed to clear the school from a cloud of distrust and suspicion stemming from the arrest of former third-grade teacher Mark Berndt, 61, who has been charged with 23 counts of lewd acts upon children, ages 6 to 10. Berndt is accused of feeding his semen to some students during "tasting games'' in his classroom from 2005 to 2010.

A second teacher, Martin Springer, 49, was arrested last week after two girls said he had fondled them in class in 2009. Springer pleaded not guilty after he was charged with committing three lewd acts on one girl in 2009. The other girl has since recanted her allegation.

Springer was released from jail Thursday night after posting bond, according to the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department's website. He had been held on $300,000 bail. His next court date is scheduled for Feb. 16.

About 100 parents and children protested with signs saying "Give us our teachers back" and chanting "no new teachers" as TV cameras rolled.

Parents also attended a meeting with the new principal, but many emerged dissatisfied, saying the district went overboard.

"My son liked his teacher," said Jose Vargas, shaking his head.

Deasy said replacing the staff, from janitors to principal, was necessary to restore trust among parents in the largely poor, Latino neighborhood of unincorporated Los Angeles County.

Whether any of the previous staff will return to Miramonte will be determined after the district completes its investigation into how Berndt's alleged activities went undetected for so long, he said.

The teachers were told via a notice of administrative transfer that on Monday they will report to a nearby unfinished high school, where they will be interviewed while the investigation is ongoing.

BEIRUT • Between blasts of rockets and mortar fire, Syrians used loudspeakers to call for blood donations and medical supplies Thursday in the stricken city of Homs, where a weeklong government offensive has created a deepening humanitarian crisis.

Government forces are trying to crush pockets of violent resistance in Homs, the epicenter of an 11-month-old uprising that has brought the country ever closer to civil war. The intense shelling in restive neighborhoods such as Baba Amr has made it difficult to get medicine and care to the wounded, and some areas have been without electricity for days, activists say.

"Snipers are on all the roofs in Baba Amr, shooting at people," Abu Muhammad Ibrahim, an activist in Homs, told The Associatbird, is targeted. Life is completely cut off. It's a city of ghosts," he added.

As he spoke, explosions could be heard in the background.

"The bombardment has not eased, day or night," he said, asking to be identified by his nickname for fear of reprisals. "Do you hear the sound of the rockets? Children have been wounded, elderly with extreme injuries."

Hundreds of people are believed to have been killed since early Saturday in the heaviest at tack the city has endured since the uprising began in March, activists said.

"This brutal assault on residential neighborhoods shows the Syrian authorities' contempt for the lives of their citizens in Homs," said Anna Neistat, associate emergencies director at Human Rights Watch. "Those re-

Such weapons "are inherently indiscriminate when fired into densely populated areas," the New York-based group said.

The wounded have overwhelmed makeshift hospitals and clinics, and there were growing concerns that the locked-down city could soon run out of supplies.

"There is medicine in the pharmacies, but getting it to the field clinics is very difficult. They can't get the medicine to the wounded," Mohammed Saleh, a Syria-based activist, told the AP by telephone.

Baba Amr, he said, has been without electricity since Saturday.

The assault on Homs began after reports that army defectors and other armed opponents of President Bashar Assad were setting up their own checkpoints and taking control of some areas.

chaired Thursday's meeting of finance chiefs of the 17 euro countries.

The new austerity plan, which makes sharp cuts to the minimum wage and thousands of public-sector jobs, ignited fresh criticism from unions and the country's deputy labor minister, who resigned in protest after Greece agreed to the deal. Even debt inspectors conceded that the new measures would keep the country in a recession for a fifth straight year.

But Greece's finance minister warned that the alternative will likely be worse.

"Unfortunately the choice we face is one of sacrifice or even greater sacrifice – on a scale that cannot be compared," Evangelos Venizelos told reporters, after the meeting with ministers from the 16 other countries that use the euro.

FAMILY PLUCKED FROM PACIFIC AFTER BOAT CAPSIZES

HONOLULU (AP) • Three family members attempting their first voyage across the Pacific in a sailboat were left adrift in rough seas hundreds of miles from land when their mast broke in high winds.

Just when they thought they were being rescued, seven hours later, the swell from the arriving cargo ship capsized the smaller vessel, tossing the trio into the cold water.

As the sailboat was destroyed, 9-yearold West James prepared for the worst, "'We're gonna sink. We're gonna die," the boy said.

Brad James, 32, said Thursday he tried to keep his son calm as they were in the Pacific for about two hours. They were wearing lifejackets and were able to stay afloat as they awaited help.

The father and son, along with Brad's younger brother Mitch James, hit a series of storms while sailing from Mexico to Hawaii, and on Tuesday afternoon high winds snapped their mast and choppy water overheated their engine about 300 miles from their destination. The trio tried to work up a makeshift sail – but it blew away.

Oct. 3, 1937-Feb. 7, 2012

CHUBBUCK • Our loving Mother and friend passed away Tuesday, Feb. 7, 2012, at her home in Chubbuck, Idaho, at the age of 74.

Beth was born at home to Rullen Nells Aschliman and Thelma Marie Tanner on West 18th Street in Idaho Falls, Idaho, on Oct. 3, 1937. How proud she was that she was born in the same house her father built.

Mom was preceded in death by her parents, whom she adored; and her grandparents; her son, Norman Mark Butcher (age 32); her siblings and spouses, sister, Marvel (Roy) Williams; brother, Bob Aschliman; sister. Loris (Marvin) Campbell; sister, Carma (Nick) Nichols; brother, Gordon Aschliman (age 2); and her baby granddaughter, Tymarie Smith; in addition to eight other children who didn't live past birth.

Beth is survived by her three children, Michael Butcher of Jackpot, Nev., Melanie Smith and husband Jeff of Chubbuck, Idaho, and John Fickbohm of Twin Falls, Idaho; and her husband, Steven Fickbhom of Twin Falls, Idaho. She is also survived by 10 grandchildren, Nolan Michael and Justin Ryan Butcher of Salt Lake City, Utah, Austin Butcher of Spokane, Wash., Brandon, Justin, Alyssa, Tanner and Spencer Smith of Chubbuck, Idaho, Rain and Snow Fickbohm and their mother, Jennifer Hinkle of Twin Falls, Idaho; and a brother, Pat Aschliman of Washington State. She is also survived by many nieces and nephews whom she loved to interact with over the years both as children and adults.

We cannot remember our Mother without recognizing the importance of her precious friend in life, Joyce Butcher Ward of Idaho Falls, who have been best friends, sisters-in-law and confidants for more than 61 years. Seldom in this life does anyone have a sustaining friendship of this magnitude and longevity.

Her children and grandchildren were the focus of her life. Mom's career choice was that of being a devoted mother and grandmother. To support that endeavor, she oftentimes had to work many jobs to support her children. One of our favorite jobs she worked was at Winchell's Doughnuts, for obvious reasons. Mom was so proud of the fact that by selling Avon for more than 25 years, she was able to accumulate a complete set of Avon's china pattern and collectibles to pass on to her children.

Beth was known for her quick wit and unique sharp sense of humor. She enjoyed bowling over the years and spending time outdoors with her family. Her father taught her how to play Chinese checkers, which she loved to pass on how to play Chinese checkers, cards and board games. All of us growing up shared her love for board games and were raised with lively pinochle parties with aunts, uncles and friends.

Mom's passion for animals was surpassed by none. Her special calling was to take in any critters that needed to be treated special, including retired police drug dogs.

A service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 11, at the Wilks Funeral Home, 211 W. Chubbuck Road in Chubbuck; viewings will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 10, and 1 to 2 p.m. Saturday before the service at the funeral home. Interment will be in the Rose Hill Cemetery in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

For Pregnant Women with Cancer, Chemo Poses Minimal Risk

BY MARIA CHENG Associated Press

LONDON • Researchers have encouraging news for women who find themselves in a very frightening situation: having cancer while pregnant. Studies suggest that these women can be treated almost the same as other cancer patients are, with minimal risk to the fetus.

Only about 1 in 1,000 pregnant women face this dilemma, but doctors fear that more will because the risk of cancer rises with age, and more women are delaying having children until they're older.

Doctors have long worried about how to balance treating a pregnant woman with cancer and the need to protect her fetus from the effects of toxic cancer drugs and radiation treatments, and whether it is safe to continue a pregnancy in certain situations. A series of papers in the journals Lancet and Lancet Oncology published Friday make several key contributions:

• A Belgian-led study of 70 children in Europe exposed to chemotherapy while they were in the womb found they developed just as well as other children, according to tests on their hearts, IQ and general health. They were assessed at birth, 18 months, and every few years until age 18.

 Chemotherapy after the first trimester is possible, using extra ultrasounds to ensure the baby is developing properly. Radiation therapy is best done in the first two trimesters, when the baby is small enough to be covered with a lead blanket, according to a review of previous studies, led by Belgian researchers.

• Ending the pregnancy doesn't improve chances for the mother, the same study found.

• The type of cancer seems to matter: An Israeli analysis of past research suggested pregnant women with blood cancers might want to terminate an early pregnancy when chemotherapy can't be delayed.

"Many (doc-tors) aren't keen to give chemotherapy to pregnant women and may even recommend termination. But treating a pregnant woman with cancer doesn't have to be so different from treating a cancer pa-tient who isn't pregnant." Dr. Frederic Amant of the Leuven Cancer Institute in Belgium, an author of the papers on cancer treat-ture, and that was probably the primary cause of their delayed development.

ment for pregnant women

"Doctors will often err on the side of caution and deliver a baby early to avoid the effects of chemotherapy," said Dr. Catherine Nelson-Piercy, an obstetric physician and spokeswoman for Britain's Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists.

"These data don't say that chemotherapy is completely safe, but the baby is better off being in (the mother) as long as possible," she said. Nelson-Piercy was not linked to the Lancet series and often works with pregnant women diagnosed with cancer or other illnesses.

Dr. Richard Theriault, a professor of medicine at the MD Anderson Cancer Center in Texas, said he hoped the papers would change how doctors treat pregnant cancer patients.

"Terminating a pregnancy is not always necessary," said Theriault, who heads a program to treat pregnant women with cancer. He said a minority of pregnant women with cancer still get abortions.

The bottom line here is to be an advocate for your mother. The best way to do this is to be prepared! Bring a list of questions that you and your mother have developed together. Make sure that you know all the concerns your mother wants to address with her physician. If other siblings or caregivers are involved, ask them if they have questions you should ask. Bring a list of ALL medicines and supplements your mother is taking, with the dosage and schedule for each one. When the doctor asks a question, let your mother answer first. Do not have a two-way conversation with the doctor; always include your mother! Ask her doctor for suggestions about how ou can stay up-to-date on her health since you live so far away. If she is willing, your mother can sign a release form so you can talk with the doctor about her medical care even after you return home. You want to make the most of this visit, and with a little preparation you will!

Two Key Ford Leaders to Retire, Mulally to Stay

DETROIT (AP) • Two of the architects of Ford's remarkable turnaround are retiring, and their departures have intensified the guessing game over who will become the next CEO.

For now, Chief Executive Alan Mulally isn't going anywhere. The energetic, 66year-old Kansan is considered a hero for bringing the company back from finan- Booth cial disaster. He insisted on Thursday that he'll continue to lead Ford. But the retirements of two top lieutenants - CFO Lewis Booth and Product Development Chief Derrick Kuzak - on April 1 remove two of the five inside contenders for the CEO job.

Idaho Business, Farm Groups Promote Economic Incentives

Legislators gather suggestions as they consider Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposal to dedicate $45 million for tax cuts.

BY JOHN MILLER Associated Press

BOISE • Business and agricultural groups told House and Senate tax committees that restoring university research and development budgets, adding incentives for job creation and eliminating Idaho's $130 million personal property tax would all help boost Idaho's economy.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee and the Senate Local Government and Taxation committees met Wednesday in a rare joint session, to gather input as they consider Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposal to dedicate $45 million to tax cuts.

House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke told presenters to imagine they were in the tax policy store, hunting for the best product to stimulate the economy.

"I would like to drill down, from each of the industries, from your perspective, how is that going to move the needle on economic development in the state," said Bedke, R-Oakley. "We're on the cusp of setting tax policy here."

Clark Krause, of Jobs for Idaho, a group representing economic development groups across the state, suggested establishing a fund to reward companies that export over 50 percent of their goods and services outside Idaho's borders. According to his plan, they would be eligible for thousands of dollars' worth of incentives for creating jobs, with the money paid out over four years to ensure that they follow through on their commitments.

"Our idea is to please consider ... a job expansion fund, so that when a value-added job company is looking to grow jobs within the state of Idaho, we have the tools to make sure that they make a decision to keep those jobs here and grow those jobs here," Krause said.

Meanwhile, Food Producers of Idaho lobbyist Brent Olmstead said his group's No. 1 priority would be restoring research and development spending.

That's happening, at least in a limited way, with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter promoting his IGEM program that will direct $5 million toward universities to partner with private industry on new ideas that could eventually become commercially viable products.

Alex LaBeau, the top lobbyist at the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, told the panel that the Legislature's failure to eliminate the $130 million personal property tax on business equipment has been a drag on economic development. Dumping the tax would allow businesses to direct newly available cash to job creation, he said.

"This is a bad tax," LaBeau said. "It's the one that all the businesses talked to us about and said, 'This is a nightmare. It has to go away?"

And recently appointed Department of Commerce Director Jeff Sayer told the panel that one thing he's learned in his four months on the job is that Idaho should develop attractive incentives that go well beyond the state's traditional attributes of low energy costs, a flexible, affordable workforce and quality of life.

Sayer called it "window dressing" - the kind of knockout package meant to catch the fickle eye of head hunters hired by companies to negotiate the best relocation package possible. Without that, companies will consistently overlook Idaho's deeper qualities because the incentives in the store front aren't alluring enough, he said.

$25-billion Settlement Reached Over Home Foreclosure Abuses

BY DEREK KRAVITZ

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A landmark $25 billion settlement with the nation's top mortgage lenders was hailed by government officials Thursday as long-overdue relief for victims of foreclosure abuses. But consumer advocates countered that far too few people will benefit.

The deal will reduce loans for only a fraction of those Americans who owe more than their homes are worth. It will also send checks to others who were improperly foreclosed upon. But the amounts are modest.

It's unclear how much the deal will help struggling homeowners keep their homes or benefit those who have already lost theirs.

About 11 million households are underwater, meaning they owe more than their homes are worth. The settlement would help 1 million of them.

"The total number of dollars is still small compared to the value of the mortgages that are underwater," said Richard Green, director of the University of Southern California's Lusk Center for Real Estate.

Federal and state officials announced that 49 states joined the settlement with five of the nation's biggest lenders. Oklahoma struck a separate deal with the five banks. Government officials are still negotiating with 14 other lenders to join.

The bulk of the money will go to California and Florida, two of the states hardest hit by the housing crisis and the ones with the most underwater homeowners. The two states stand to receive roughly 75 percent of the settlement funds.

Of the five major lenders, Bank of America will pay the most to borrowers: nearly $8.6 billion. Wells Fargo will pay about $4.3 billion, JP-Morgan Chase roughly $4.2 billion, Citigroup about $1.8 billion and Ally Financial $200 million. The banks will also pay state and federal governments about $5.5 billion.

The settlement ends a painful chapter of the financial crisis, when home values sank and millions edged toward foreclosure. Many companies processed foreclosures without verifying documents. Some employees signed papers they hadn't read or used fake signatures to speed foreclosures an action known as robosigning.

President Barack Obama praised the settlement, saying it will "speed relief to the hardest-hit homeowners, end some of the most abusive practices of the mortgage industry and begin to turn the page on an era of recklessness that has left so much damage in its wake?"

The deal requires the banks to reduce loans for about 1 million households that are at risk of foreclosure. The lenders will also send $2,000 each to about 750,000 Americans who were improperly foreclosed upon from 2008 through 2011. The banks will have three years to fulfill terms of the deal.

The states have agreed not to pursue civil charges over the abuses covered by the settlement. Homeowners can still sue lenders on their own, and federal and state authorities can still pursue criminal charges

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)

• Eastman Kodak Co. said Thursday that it will stop making digital cameras, pocket video cameras and digital picture frames, marking the end of an era for the company that brought photography to the masses more than a century ago.

Founded by George Eastman in 1880, Kodak was known all over the world for its Brownie and Instamatic cameras and its yellow-and-red film boxes. But the company was battered by Japanese competition in the 1980s, and was then unable to keep pace with the shift from film to digital technology.

The Rochester, N.Y.based company, which filed for bankruptcy protection last month, said it will phase out the product lines in the first half of this year and instead look for other companies to license its brand for those products.

It's an especially poignant moment for Kodak. In 1975, using a new type of electronic sensor invented six years earlier at Bell Labs, a Kodak engineer named Steven Sasson created the first digital camera. It was a toaster-size prototype capturing blackand-white images at a resolution of 0.1 megapixels.

Through the 1990s, Kodak spent some $4 billion developing the photo technology inside most of today's cellphones and digital devices. But a reluctance to ease its heavy financial reliance on film allowed rivals like Canon Inc. and Sony Corp. to rush into the fast-emerging digital arena.

early fans made us including groups of four from Twin Falls

The Times-News caught up with the band by phone as it traveled east past Detroit for several rowdy performances in Michigan. Later this month the band will head west, toward a Feb. 24 concert stop at Diamondz in Jerome.

The band can't wait to reconnect with a fan base that continues to stay loyal.

'We were more popular in Twin Falls because our music was played on the radio there," said guitar player Taylor Richards, noting the band's budding professional friendship with a former local radio personality that helped launch the group.

That was in 2001, when Royal Bliss released its fourth CD, "King Size." Local fans still enjoy songs like "Fine Wine" and "Roll One" off that release.

"I've been a fan forever, I guess as soon as I heard them," said Patt Mort, 59, of Twin Falls. "And I love to watch them live. They don't just stand there like robots they're entertaining on stage."

Mort said it was Royal Bliss' unique sound that caught her attention, and she's glad the group hasn't gone mainstream rock pop.

"Mainstream bands are a dime a dozen," Mort said. "All of the songs on their albums sounds like the one that just stopped playing. They look the same, act the same. Humph?

Middleton said Royal Bliss chose musical integrity over profits with its newest release and went back to its roots.

Although melodic and moody, "Waiting out the Storm" has lyrics every blue-collar worker and overworked cubicle drone can relate to; Middleton found inspiration for "Crazy" in his being away from home and young family while touring. But Jake Smith's driving percussion lines keep Royal Bliss' true rock blood pulsing in your ears.

The band recorded some 80 songs for the album. But after back and forth with producers and Capitol Records which, under exclusive licensing, released the band's previous album, "Life In Between," in 2008 - the band decided to strike out on its own.

Royal Bliss self-released its newest tracks with its sound and integrity.

"We wrote so many songs for the album, and we'd take them in and be told, 'We're just not feeling it' Basically they wanted us to do generic crap, generic rock 'n' roll about doing cocaine. We don't do cocaine," Middleton said.

Twin Falls resident and Royal Bliss fan Kelly "Tank" Thompson, 44, said many original fans would have likely turned their backs had the band sold out.

"I'm a musician myself and tend to be judgmental when I see bands play, because I know what good music should be. And that's why I was impressed with Royal Bliss because not only are they very down-to-earth guys they are very good musicians and songwriters," Thompson said. "I have respect."

Hysterical, Smart Play Uncovers Humanity's Savage Nature

BY KAREN BOSSICK For the Times-News

HAILEY • Like son, like father.

The old adage may be backward here. But that's the way it goes in "God of Carnage," which opens Feb. 15 at The Liberty Theatre in Hailey. When their children get in a tiff on the playground, two sets of parents meet to settle things amicably, only to see their good intentions unravel as each becomes increasingly childish and even savage.

It's a spectator sport through and through as they submit to what one of the parents calls "the gods of carnage."

"Nothing is more delicious than to put two couples in a room like caged boxers. This play is hysterical and smart. And it's so much fun for audiences to watch and for actors to play. It's absolutely fun to be able to lose your stuff and give in to rant and rave," said Denise Simone, whose Company of Fools is producing the play.

Parisian playwright Yasmina Reza's play is among the top three most-produced plays in America right now, Simone said. And Roman Polanski just filmed the Ketchum, will play the other set of parents.

Gary Hopper, recently retired assistant chairman of the acting program at Virginia Commonwealth University, is directing the play.

"Yasmina is a great writer, and the subject matter is so dang funny and honest. She uses humor but keeps it authentic, organic. I find out the more truthful you keep it, the funnier it is," he said.

Joe Lavigne has created an imaginative set, in which he based his "urban playground" living room furniture on bike racks and playground fountains to reflect the story's genesis.

The characters include a mother who wants everything to be perfect - as in, "You're going to agree it's your son's fault and we'll sign the papers and it's a done deal" - to a husband whose attitude is, "I'll try to play nice, but why do we have to do this?"

"The play is a lesson to all of us, a story that asks us to look at what can happen to any one of us if we're not cautious," Glenn said. "It's a fascinating piece of work in that all four of us are getting to explore that savage part

In the early days, men spent years waiting for a club member to move or die in order for a coveted spot to open up.

In 1925, the Sixth Ward Glee Club, as it was first called, held a contest to rename itself. The result: Imperial Glee Club. The club performs its four-part male vocal music at 20-30 venues annually throughout northern Utah and southern Idaho. The Feb. 25 performance Sturman revisits the Kennedy assassination in 1963 with a twist of fiction. In his novel, Sturman paints a portrait of a world corrupted by violent men and shadow governments. The book, published in November, is a web of murder, intrigue and mystery and unravels to reveal how ordinary people can become heroes and villains. Sturman was born in Pocatello, worked in a cheese factory and married the woman who inspired him to finish his book. After seeing President Kennedy speak at his high school, Sturman became fascinated with the events involved in the assassination. Bloodinstreet.com.

Only 6th-most Disliked?

ineteen months after "The Decision" sent his personal stock plummeting, LeBron James is as desperate as ever to please and still clueless on how to go about it.

So maybe the only surprise about Forbes magazine's latest list of most-disliked athletes is that James hasn't demanded a recount. He came in at No. 6, a dozen percentage points behind co-leaders Michael Vick and Tiger Woods, both of whom polled 60 percent. Unlike either, James finds no slight too small to ignore and has so many public feuds running at any moment that it's hard to keep track of them all. But something James said recently is true about every one of them:

"I'm an easy target; if someone wants to get a point across — just throw Lebron's name in there. You could be watching cartoons with your kids and you don't like it, you say, 'Blame it on LeBron? If you go to the grocery store and they don't have the milk that you like, you just say, 'It's LeBron's fault?"

Fair point. And to be fair, he's a model citizen as pro athletes go and all five guys who finished ahead of him on the list were guilty of actual sins:

Vick headed up a dogfighting ring and Woods ran a stable of girlfriends while pretending to be married. Jets receiver Plaxico Burress did jail time for shooting himself in the thigh, which at the time seemed like punishment enough. Lions tackle Ndamukong Suh, who four months earlier topped the Forbes' poll of most-liked athletes, was on the fast track to becoming the NFL's dirtiest player when he paused to stomp an opponent last season and earned a two-game suspension. Nets forward Kris Humphries married Kim Kardashian — if only for 72 days. Even Kobe Bryant, who finished a notch below James at 45 percent, spent time in court defending himself against a rape charge that was later dropped.

Yet it's James who winds up in the public dock all the

Johnson in 3-way tie at Pebble; Tiger Starts Well

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. • Twenty months later, Dustin Johnson finally hit the drive he wanted at Pebble Beach. Ten years later, Tiger Woods must have wondered what kept him away from the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

On a spectacular day of scenery and scoring, Johnson blasted a tee shot on the third hole at Pebble Beach and then pitched in for eagle from 41 yards in front of the green. He added another eagle on his way to a 9-under 63 and a three-way tie atop the leaderboard Thursday.

Woods was five shots to par out of the lead, a solid start to his PGA Tour season. He had six birdies in a 4-under 68 at Spyglass Hill, the fourth-best score on that course. Spyglass was hardest of the three courses, though not by much. The weather was so pure that all three courses played about one shot under par.

Charlie Wi was over at Monterey Peninsula and had a shot at 59 without ever knowing it. Wi was 8 under after a tap-in birdie on the 13th hole, and needed only three birdies in the last five holes. Trouble is, he had no idea the Shore Course was a 70. He made one more birdie and had a 9-under 61.

"I was looking at the scorecard like, 'What's the par here?' I did not know it was a par 70," Wi said. "That 59 never crossed my mind. Not once."

Joining them was former U.S. Amateur Danny Lee, who holed a bunker shot for eagle at No. 2 and holed out from the 11th fairway with a wedge for another eagle to match Johnson at 9-under 63.

Johnson is turning into his generation's "Prince of Pebble." He won the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in consecutive years, and then had a three-shot lead at Pebble Please see PEBBLE, S4  HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

KIMBERLY • Leaning on the 3-pointer generally works for Glenns Ferry. On Thursday, the Pilots hit nine of them. They needed 10.

Riding the low block and a second-half backcourt surge, the Hagerman girls basketball team completed its gauntlet journey to the Class 1A Division I state tournament, beating Glenns Ferry 49-42 in overtime.

Jessica Regnier had six of her 13 points in the overtime period and threw in 14 rebounds for the Pirates, who knocked off Glenns Ferry, Challis, Raft River and Oakley after losing to district champion Grace in the opening round of the tournament.

"It's the most spirit-lifting thing we could have done," said Regnier. "It was a hard loss on the road at Grace, but we grew together as a team even stronger than we were before. Teams overlooked us a little bit but our goal was always to make it to state."

Hagerman (18-7) was the last seed out of the Snake River Conference's North Division but, as it stands, is the only team from the north in the state tournament field.

Aly Sauer had a team-high 15 points and also pulled in 14 rebounds. Hagerman outrebounded Glenns Ferry 40-21, using its patient zone defense to stymie the Pilots' attempts from Please see GLENNS FERRY, S2

AMERICAN FALLS • Valley's state playoff hopes ended early with a 41-33 loss to Malad in a play-in game Thursday at American Falls High.

Valley, the second-place team from Class 2A District IV, ends its season 15-8.

"This was our team. From the start we knew this was the team that was going to go places. We had so much potential. We've been preparing since summer ball and we knew we could progress each game, and we did," said Valley senior Gabby Beck.

Marlee Mussmann scored 10 points and Cheyanna Nelson chipped in with eight, but overall the Vikings were out of sync offensively.

"The energy came in spurts instead of being consistent," said Valley senior Gabby Beck. "That sense of urgency came in spurts. We had spurts where we had the fire in us and spurts where we were timid."

The College of Southern Idaho softball team rallied to earn a doubleheader split against College of Southern Nevada on Thursday, winning the nightcap 5-2 after dropping the first game, 7-5.

Jill Eckstein struck out nine and walked just two in going the distance in the Golden Eagles' victory. Tyler Wilkinson hit a solo home run and Nikki Brailford followed with a two-run shot to break the game open in the top of the sixth inning.

In the opener, Wilkinson's 3-for-4 game wasn't enough to keep the Coyotes from a late-game outburst at the plate. CSN scored two runs in the fifth and four more in the sixth to rally for the victory. Jessi Duncan, who came on in relief of Grace Combs in the sixth inning, took the loss.

CSI's record stands at 11-6 overall, 3-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference.

TWIN FALLS • It's not often a basketball team wins after committing 30 turnovers and its secondleading scorer doesn't score until midway through the second half.

But sometimes weird things happen on the basketball court.

The College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team dominated the rebounding battle, forced 32 turnovers and held the NJ-CAA's leading scorer in check to beat USU-Eastern Utah 69-52.

CSI returns to .500 overall and improves to 4-5 in the Scenic West. The Golden Eagles host Colorado Northwestern at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Both teams were careless with the ball throughout the game and early on. At one point, CSI (12-12, 4-5) had twice as many turnovers (eight) as it had points scored (four).

"I thought we made some bad decisions especially early in the game. A lot of those turnovers were just dropped passes and bad handling of the ball in the post," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers. "We did a better job in the second half and defensively, we pressured them well on the perimeter."

Leading by three at halftime, CSI pulled away from USU-Eastern (13-11, 5-4) with an 18-6 run fueled by Chakala Carthen and Megan Tanner. Each had two offensive rebounds and putbacks off missed free throws and Carthen made a steal near midcourt, diving to the floor and tapping the ball to Mechela Barnes for a layup to make the score 50-37.

Kylee Schierman, CSI's second-leading scorer at 11.4 points per game, scored her first points of the game the next possession with 10:30 left. She finished with just seven points, but her contribution was felt on the defensive end in guarding Santos.

Schierman stuck with the Brazilian forward wherever she went, denying her the ball and holding her to 22 points - down from her average of 30 - on 8-for-22 shooting.

"At least six of those points were from steals and in transition and another six were at the three free throw line, so she had only 10 in their halfcourt offense," Rogers said. "I thought Kylee did a great job on her, fronting her and not allowing the ball to get in her hands. When the ball isn't in her hands, the other players don't always know what to do in their offense and we took advantage of that."

CSI led 31-28 at halftime as Barnes and Tayllor Gipson combined for 25 of the team's points. Barnes led CSI with 20 points and Gipson had 16, an improvement from her 2point performance in the first matchup in Price. Carthen had 14 points and nine rebounds and Tanner had a double-double (10 points, 11 rebounds).

CSI won the rebounding battle, 48-31, grabbing 25 on the offensive end and limiting USU-Eastern to just 13.

"That was the biggest thing for us tonight. That's where we lost the game last time. They got too many easy points off the offensive rebounds," Rogers said. "We did a much better job tonight."

Micaela Adamson led all scorers with 16 points for Carey (15-7), while Jaide Parke scored 14.

Keegan Cenarrusa scored 11 and Sasha Kent netted 10 for Richfield (16-7), which trailed by 13 after three quarters but rallied to force overtime.

Carey opens state tournament play at 1:15 p.m. next Thursday at Nampa High School against Tri-Valley. Richfield moves to a state play-in game against the District III runner-up on Saturday in Glenns Ferry.

One such spurt came just after halftime when Malad went on a 6-0 run to take control 21-12.

After trailing by 13, Valley clawed back to make it a three-point game with 2 minutes, 22 seconds remaining. Four different Vikings scored during the rally.

But free throws were the difference down the stretch; Valley converted just 1 of 9 in the fourth quarter.

"The last couple games it's been kind of a struggle. We practice free throws a lot and we're usually on," said Beck. "Our goal is 70 or 80 percent and we usually hit the goal."

Hope Murray led Malad with 17 points. The Dragons got most their scoring via transition buckets and second-chance points.

"They have so much heart and they work hard," Valley coach Liz Thomas said of her players, "We don't have the height like other teams but Megan Bean scored 13, combining with Larissa Knight to key a massive third-quarter burst for the Pirates. Glenns Ferry led 14-10 at the break but Hagerman scored 21 points in the third to assume a lead it held for the majority of the game.

Pilot forward Sara Arellano hit two free throws with 2.7 seconds left to force overtime, and Glenns Ferry (14-10) took the lead at 42-41 shortly after the extra period started. But Hagerman ripped off the last eight points to take command.

"Our rebounding can be sketchy because we don't have a lot of height, so we really rely on shooting 3-points and shooting a high-percentage," said Karli McHone, who had a game-high 19 for the Pilots. "We're just so used to having the lead that when we fall behind we freak out a little bit, but we're going to work hard the next couple of days and make sure we can still get to state."

Hagerman opens up state tournament play at 8 p.m. next Thursday, against the District III runner-up at Columbia High School in Nampa.

Glenns Ferry has one more crack at getting there, playing Saturday in Mountain Home against the third-place team from District III.

After a conference, the referee crew called Harris for a flagrant foul, giving Wiggins two free throws and USU-Eastern the ball. Wiggins made both free throws and two possessions later, slashed to the hoop for a layup, bringing the visiting Golden Eagles within four at 74-70 with 2:19 left.

Harris and CSI responded, with the 5-9 guard sinking one of his patented floaters and two free throws as CSI pushed the lead back to 80-70.

"It was a night where it was intense and we got pushed back and the calls weren't going our way, but we stuck together," Guthrie said. "We have that team chemistry man. Really good chemistry that we earned on those road trips."

Harris nearly had a double-double too, scoring 21 points and dishing nine assists. Swilling finished with 19.

Gasol Blocks Celtics' Last Shot at Victory

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA

BOSTON • Pau Gasol blocked Ray Allen's putback attempt at the buzzer in overtime and the Los Angeles Lakers held on to beat the Boston Celtics 88-87 on Thursday night.

Kobe Bryant had 27 points, Gasol finished with 25 points and 14 rebounds, and Andrew Bynum added 16 points and 17 rebounds to help the Lakers snap a two-game losing streak.

Allen scored 22 points and Kevin Garnett had 12 points and 12 rebounds for Boston, which had won five in a row and nine of its previous 10 games. But Garnett was 6 for 23 from the field and Paul Pierce was 7 for 18, including a cleanlook jumper at the end of overtime. It rimmed out and Allen tried to push the rebound in, but Gasol got his fingertips on it and it floated away as the buzzer sounded.

The Lakers had lost six of their last seven games on the road.

ROCKETS 96, SUNS 89 PHOENIX • Luis Scola scored 16 points, Patrick Patterson added 14 and Houston outlasted Phoenix.

Chase Budinger and Kyle Lowry each scored 12 points, and the Rockets used a 57-13 edge in scoring from its backups to win their third straight and fourth in five games.

WARRIORS 109, NUGGETS 101

DENVER • Stephen Curry scored a season-best 36 points and Golden State handed fading Denver its fifth straight loss.

It is the longest losing streak in five seasons for the Nuggets, who have dropped seven of eight games overall and also have lost five in a row at home.

Klay Thompson added 19 points, Dorrell Wright had 15 and Monta Ellis 14 for the Warriors, who snapped a two-game skid and posted just their third win in nine road games.

MURRAY, Ky. - Robert Covington had 17 points and eight rebounds to lead Tennessee State to a 72-68 victory over No. 9 Murray State on Thursday night, handing the Racers their first loss of the season.

Isaiah Canaan had 31 points and six rebounds for Murray State (23-1, 11-1 Ohio Valley Conference), which was the last unbeat en team in Division I.

Murray State has won the last eight meetings against Tennessee State (16-10, 9-4) dating to 2008-09.

Covington hit a 3-pointer with 4 minutes left that gave Tennessee State a 65-62 lead.

The Tigers led 69-68 when a turnover gave Murray State the ball with 11.2 seconds to play. Tennessee State stole the inbounds pass. Covington was fouled with 9.7 seconds left but he missed both free throws.

Canaan turned the ball over and committed a foul with 3.5 seconds to play. Kenny Moore made two free throws to make it a three-point lead.

Murray State again turned the ball over on a long inbounds pass and Jordan Cyphers made one of two free throws to seal the upset.

NO. 20 MISSISSIPPI ST. 70, MISSISSIPPI 60

STARKVILLE, Miss. • Arnett Moultrie scored 18 points and Dee Bost dished a career-high 13 assists for Mississippi State.

Mississippi State (19-5, 6-3 Southeastern Conference) scored the first eight points and never trailed. Renardo Sidney added 14 points and Rodney Hood scored 10 for the Bulldogs.

Reginald Buckner had 15 points and nine rebounds for Ole Miss (14-9, 4-5).

NO. 21 WISCONSIN 68, MINNESOTA 61, OT MINNEAPOLIS • Wisconsin's Jordan Taylor scored 27 points for his first college win in his home state.

The Badgers (19-6, 8-4 Big Ten) failed to score over the last 7<sup>1</sup>/2-plus minutes of the second half while the Gophers (17-8, 5-7) dug out of a 13-point hole.

NO. 23 INDIANA 84, ILLINOIS 71 BLOOMINGTON, Ind. • Cody Zeller scored 22

points and Victor Oladipo and Christian Watford both had 18 for Indiana.

It was the third win in four games for the Hoosiers (19-6, 7-6 Big Ten).

Litke

"Dunk of the Year!" is how James began his tweet, "@blakegriffin just dunked on Kendrick Perkins so hard!!! Wow! I guess I'm No. 2 now. Move over #6."

Notice the not-so-subtle self-promotion, "I guess I'm No. 2 now;" plus James' evermore maddening habit of referring to himself in the third person, "Move over #6."

Perkins certainly did, cutting right to the quick in his response. "You don't see Kobe tweeting," he told Yahoo. "You don't see Michael Jordan tweeting. If you're an elite player, plays like that don't excite you."

Perkins knows that James is not just an 'elite' player; he easy to say that. If I had five rings and Kobe had none," James said blithely, "it'd probably be the other way around."

Until it is the other way around, James should pick his fights more carefully. Bryant spent much of his youth and most of his early NBA career mimicking everything Jordan did, from his maniacal work ethic and lack of conscience to the way Jordan walked and talked. Eventually, he figured out he was always going to suffer in the comparison. So he won and won and kept on winning until everybody else made the connection. Bryant is still far from being loved, as his No. 7 spot on the Forbes list proves, but he is universally feared by competitors and respected even by fans who don't much like him. James has taken the opposite tack and run into so many headwinds, it's hard to believe he hasn't changed course by now. Not long after "The Decision," Mavericks owner Mark Cuban, a shrewd marketer in his own right, reckoned that James lost a billion dollars in brand equity. So naturally, LeBron doubled down. He starred in a Nike spot retracing his steps from high school and tweaking his growing legion of critics at every turn, asking over and over, "What should I do?" In hindsight, it was the beginning of a pattern. All these squabbles later, the answer is the same now as it was then: Win a little and say even less until you do.

in the U.S. Open two years ago until he shot 82 in the final round. On the third hole of that round, he hit driver left into the bushes for a lost ball and made double bogey.

On Thursday, he smashed a driver nearly 340 yards over the trees to just short of the green, setting up eagle. Even now, he still thinks about that tee shot in the U.S. Open. Walking off the tee, he said to caddie Bobby Brown, "I could have used that in the U.S. Open."

"Walking off that hole, I told Bob, 'This hole owes me a few more than just that one?"

knows James is probably the best player in the league at the moment. But the subtext of what Perkins said - that for all his talent, James still has zero championships compared to Bryant's five rings and Jordan's six - is indisputable. Larry Bird touched on both points earlier this week when he said in an interview that if he could play alongside anyone for a season, "It would have probably been more fun to play with LeBron, but if you want to win and win and win, it's Kobe."

After all these years, you would think the Kobe-versus-LeBron debate is one that James would avoid. He hasn't.

"It's simple, he has five rings and I have none so it's cret to playing that course well. He had a 6-iron for his second shot at the par-5 second for an easy birdie, holed a 65-foot eagle putt on the sixth hole, got up and down from the bunker just short of the 14th for birdie, then cringed when his 40-foot eagle attempt on the 18th just turned away.

"I thought it was going in," Johnson said. "I was laughing. I made plenty of putts today." Woods made his share, too.

He opened with consecutive birdies, stuffing his approach on No. 10 and twoputting for birdie on the par-5 11th. He also holed a downhill, 8-foot birdie putt on the 17th that was good enough to elicit a small fist pump, and from behind the par-5 opening hole, hit a flop shot to 7 feet and made that.

One of his two bogeys was sloppy. It came on the short par-4 fourth, with a shallow green set among sand dunes and ice plant at a diagonal angle. Instead of going toward the middle of the green and letting the slope take the ball to the hole, Woods went at the flag. The ball bounced hard over the green and into a sandy patch of dunes, in a foot print.

Harry Browne

He did well to blast a wedge some 30 feet past the hole and had a good twoputt from there for bogey. Woods picked up another birdie on the par-5 seventh for his 68. He played the par 5s in 3 under.

"I don't know if it's a good sign or a bad sign," Woods said about his 68. "With the scores the way they are, I thought I could have it lower than I did. The guys are just tearing this place apart with no wind. I'm not too far away from posting a good number out here."

His partner, Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo, contributed pars on the holes where Woods made bogey, and Romo had a birdie on the par-5 14th when Woods missed the fairway and had to settle for par. As a team, they were tied for 25th.

Romo gets to play a forward tee, but he doesn't get any shots with a scratch handicap.

Phil Mickelson always entertains at No. 4 at Spyglass, a tee shot that gives him so much stress each year. He is determined to hit driver, and did again Thursday, this time relieved to at least be able to find it. And while he missed a 7-foot birdie putt after a splendid flop out of deep rough that ran 100 feet across the green, Mickelson was glad the hole was behind him.

As for his 2-under 70?

"The greens were perfect," Mickelson said. "They rolled so good, and that's why it was disappointing to let some of those go. I've been putting really well lately, and I expected to make some of those. Shot a couple under par, but it could have been a lot better."

U.S. Forest Service - Sawtooth National Forest Opportunity to Comment on a Proposed Non-Significant Forest Plan Amendment for a Forested Biological Community Wildlife Conservation Strategy

Opportunity to Comment

The U.S. Forest Service (Forest Service) is proposing an amendment to the Sawtooth National Forest Land and Resource Management Plan (Forest Plan) to establish a wildlife conservation strategy (WCS) for the Sawtooth National Forest, as required by the Forest Plan. The amendment would modify, delete, and add to current Forest Plan direction in response to new information and/or changed conditions concerning wildlife habitat through the WCS. These changes in direction would be a non-significant amendment to the Forest Plan. The Wildlife Conservation Strategy Environmental Assessment (WCS-EA) has been prepared to analyze the proposed amendment. The Responsible Official is Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Rebecca Nourse. The proposed amendment would affect all National Forest System lands within the Sawtooth National Forest.

The purpose of this comment period is to provide an opportunity for the public to provide early and meaningful participation on the proposed amendment prior to a decision being made by the Responsible Official.

The WCS-EA is available for review at the Sawtooth Forest Supervisor's Office - 2647 Kimberly Road East, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301. It is also available on the Sawtooth National Forest web page at:

http://www.fs.usda.gov/land/sawtooth/landmanagement

Additional information regarding this proposed amendment can be obtained from Bobbi Filbert at the Sawtooth National Recreation Area Headquarters Office (208-727-5003) or Sharon LaBrecque at the Sawtooth Forest Supervisor's Office (208) 737-3200

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® "But let us argue points in order, And reason the whole case carefully." Edgar Lee Masters

. . . . . . . . . . . . . .

After this relatively long auction to six spades, West knew enough to lead the heart three. How would you plan the play?

When trumps are 3-2 and clubs no worse than 4-2, you can make the contract by winning the heart ace, cashing the club king, drawing trumps ending in hand, and ruffing a low club. You will make four trumps, the red aces, five clubs and a club ruff.

However, with trumps favored to split, clubs rate to be 4-2 rather than 3-3, so you should try to protect against the expected as well as unexpected bad breaks. If one player has long spades, you hope it is East — but you still need to be careful.

After winning the heart ace and cashing the club king, you need to manipulate the trump suit. Suppose you carelessly play the spade ace followed by the six to your king. When you continue with a club ruff, you will be left with the bare spade 10 on the table. East will not cover when you lead it, and you will have no safe way to draw his last trump. One down!

The winning play after cashing the spade ace is to lead the spade 10 to the king. You ruff a low club with the nine, then play dummy's trump six, finessing the eight in your hand. Next, you draw the last trump with the queen and claim the contract.

ANSWER: If you are unwilling to pass, should you overcall, double, or bid one no-trump? The last option is unpalatable for more than one reason, and a two-level overcall in your weak diamond suit might have you banned from bridge. What's left is a canape one-spade overcall, or - my choice — a double. I'd be planning to convert a two-club response to two diamonds, pretending I have a little more than I do.

DEAR ABBY: There is an ongoing issue between my husband and me. It's his disregard for my personal safety. Our large city is known for its heavy, fast traffic and impatient drivers. "Jon" is a good driver. He likes to drive in the left (passing) lane on the highway or tollway, usually about five miles above the posted speed limit.

This is considered too slow for many drivers, who become impatient and aggressive having to be behind us in the fast lane. They flash their headlights and tailgate us, trying to get him to move over into the right lane so they can pass, but Jon refuses to yield. If they start to pass us on the right, he will speed up and race them so they can't get ahead of him. He says he's "teaching them a lesson."

I have told my husband repeatedly that these games are dangerous and they scare me. Not only could we get into an accident, but we could get into an ugly confrontation or worse. I am terrified in these situations and he knows it, but he continues. I try to drive as often as possible, but I can't see as well at night as I used to, so Jon drives at night or when we're going long distances. With the price of gas and considering the inconvenience and inefficiency, it doesn't make sense to go in separate cars. Do you have any suggestions?

- ON A COLLISION COURSE IN HOUSTON DEAR ON A COLLISION COURSE: Jon should be told that impeding the flow of traffic is a very dangerous practice. His childish behavior could incite road rage, and it is everyone's responsibility to minimize instances in which road rage can occur.

Contact the Department of Public Safety to get a copy the Texas Drivers of Handbook. That way you can show Jon in black and white that his behavior is not only wrong but dangerous. While some husbands are not receptive to a wife's comments about their driving, most will listen to what a state trooper has to say about good driving practices versus bad ones. Let's hope it doesn't come to that. And one more word of advice: Continue being the driver as often as possible. Your lives could depend on it.

DEAR ABBY: I was discussing with my 26-yearold daughter how parents punish their kids, when suddenly she told me that she hated that I would make her write "lines" when she was growing up. She mentioned that one day I made her do it when her friend was there to play with her. I felt really bad about this and wonder why she is bringing this up now.

- WONDERING DOWN SOUTH DEAR WONDERING: It

came up now because punishment was the topic of conversation, and she flashed back on how humiliating it was to have been punished in front of a friend. Clearly it made an impact – and it would be interesting to know if the infraction was repeated after that.

IF FEBRUARY 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have the upper hand during the week ahead if career, finances, business or ambitions are in question. Get as many irons into the fire as possible before your business aptitude evaporates. Once you get things launched, you can coast on easy street for the next two months. In June, you might become fascinated by something that will waste your time and resources; it might even mean a brief romantic fling. For best results, wait until August to further your career or update your financial portfolio.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A penny saved is a penny earned. The problem may not be that you're not making enough money, but rather that you're spending too much of it. You can have a good time without being extravagant.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Patience is a virtue. You won't find a flashing neon sign telling you which path will help you achieve your goal. Weigh your options carefully before making a commitment. Make social activities a priority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stay neutral. The latest office turmoil has factions trying to vie for your support. Remain outside the popularity contest; don't get involved. Beware of those who appear generous with ulterior motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Expand your horizons. Break the old routine by trying something new and exciting. It may not be your cup of tea, but a change of pace will do wonders to brighten your spirits by offering a new perspective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Bring a little extra. Be prepared for added expenses. An outing could turn sour if unexpected costs spring up and your pockets are empty. Certain problems may seem worse than they actually are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't accept anything at face value. Others may try to have you believe that you are getting the most out of a contract or proposal. Study the facts on your own to make sure you get the best deal.

Every Day

21): Put a premium on your time. Take steps to prioritize your schedule. Take care of the essentials first or else risk wasting a good part of the day on trivial issues. A significant other may need expensive tastes indulged.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't be too sure of vourself. You have what it takes to succeed, but you can't expect a lucky break. Plan for the unexpected and leave nothing to chance. Let experience guide you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A little criticism could be helpful. You shouldn't take offense at someone's critical remarks when the assessment is right on the mark. If people doubt your ability, go out of your way to prove them wrong.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's what you can't see that can hurt you. A new romantic interest may seem like all that you hoped for, but delving beneath the surface may reveal more than you bargained for. Proceed with caution.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Every battle is won or lost in the preparation. Don't start anything unless you are absolutely sure that you are ready. Hold off on starting new projects, entering new agreements, or signing important contracts.

Today is Friday, Feb. 10, the 41st day of 2012. There are 325 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Feb. 10, 1962, the Soviet Union exchanged captured American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Rudolf Abel, a Soviet spy held by the United States.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1763, Britain, Spain and France signed the Treaty of Paris, ending the Seven Years' War.

In 1840, Britain's Queen Victoria married Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

In 1841, Upper Canada and Lower Canada were proclaimed united under an Act of Union passed by the British Parliament.

In 1912, Joseph Lister, the "Father of Antiseptic Surgery," died in Walmer, Kent, England, at age 84.

In 1942, the former French liner Normandie capsized in New York Harbor a day after it caught fire while being refitted for the U.S. Navy. RCA Victor presented Glenn Miller and his Orchestra with a "gold record" for their recording of "Chattanooga Choo Choo," which had sold more than 1 million copies.

In 1949, Arthur Miller's play "Death of a Salesman" opened at Broadway's Morosco Theater with Lee J. Cobb as Willy Loman.

In 1962, Republican W. George Romney announced his ultimately successful candidacy for governor of Michigan.

In 1967, the 25th Amendment to the Constitution, dealing with presidential disability and succession, was ratified as Minnesota and Nevada adopted it.

In 1968, U.S. figure skater Fleming Peggy won America's only gold medal of the Winter Olympic Games in Grenoble, France.

In 1981, eight people were killed when a fire set by a busboy broke out at the Las Vegas Hilton hotel-casino.

In 1992, boxer Mike Tyson was convicted in Indianapolis of raping Desiree Washington, a Miss Black America contestant. (Tyson served three years in prison.) Author Alex Haley died in Seattle at age 70.

In 2005, playwright Arthur Miller died in Roxbury, Conn., at age 89 on the 56th anniversary of the Broadway opening of his "Death of a Salesman."

208-308-0808

Ten years ago: Snowboarder Kelly Clark won America's first gold at the Salt Lake City Olympics in women's halfpipe. Claudia Pechstein of Germany shattered her own world record in the 3,000meter speedskating event, crossing the line in 3:57.70. The Western Conference defeated the Eastern Conference, 135-120, in the NBA All-Star Game. Former U.N. ambassador Vernon A. Walters died in West Palm Beach, Fla., at age 85. Convict-author Jack Henry Abbott committed suicide in his cell; he was 58.

Five years ago: Less than a month after launching his presidential bid online, Democrat Barack Obama announced his candidacy in person, telling thousands outside the Illinois state capital in Springfield: "Let us transform this nation." Gen. David Petraeus took charge of U.S. forces in Iraq. The AFC defeated the NFC 31-28 in the Pro Bowl.

One year ago: Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak refused to step down or leave the country and instead handed his powers to his vice president, stunning protesters in central Cairo who waved their shoes in contempt and shouted, "Leave, leave, leave." (Mubarak resigned the next day.)
