'Add The Words' Bill Dies in Committee

Disappointed Magic Valley supporters join in protest against Senate committee's party-line vote.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Shock, anger and sadness reverberated through the Idaho Senate auditorium Friday morning after a party-line vote by the Senate State Affairs Committee killed legislation to add protections for gay, lesbian and transgendered individuals under the Idaho Human Rights Act.

Legislative committees don't hear testimony at print hearings, but that didn't stop 300 people from watching as the proposal fell, with only the committee's two Democrats voting to print the bill. Many attendees wore buttons or shirts stating their support for the legislation, referred to as "Add The

Twin Falls Soldier Severely Injured in Afghanistan

Terence Jones is recovering in a German hospital after stepping on an antipersonnel mine on Tuesday.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Timothy Jones is no stranger to improvised explosives. The former Army combat engineer spent years dismantling and detonating all kinds of bombs. When he heard this week that his son Terence had stepped on an antipersonnel mine while on foot patrol in southern Afghanistan, he feared the worst.

"I was just sick," Jones said.

Terence, 21, lost both of his legs in the Tuesday incident and nearly lost his left arm. But doctors at a German hospital were able to stabilize it enough that it will mostly likely be saved, Timothy said. The percussion from the blast shattered Terence's pelvis, and he's undergoing extensive surgeries to debris clear from his wounds.

The soldier's life changed in a flash, but Tim-

Jones othy called the ordeal a minor setback for his son.

"He's a tough kid," he said. Terence is a member of the 1/25th Stryker Brigade Combat Team based out of Fort Wainwright in Fairbanks, Alaska. He attended Magic Valley High School in Twin Falls.

He joined the Army in 2010, and was serving his first tour in Afghanistan. Timothy said his son was due home in April.

You Can Help Out

A fund for the family of Terence Jones has been set up at Wells Fargo Bank. Tellers at any branch can process a donation. The Nasty Habitz car club is planning a March 24 fundraiser for the family at Montana Steak House in Twin Falls.

Timothy said Capt. Phillip Anklin called to inform him about his son's injuries, but when contacted by the Times-News, Anklin said he could not confirm information about wounded soldiers. Other attempts to obtain Army comment were unsuccessful Friday.

Even under heavy sedation, Timothy said his son, who goes by Bo, has been able to respond when doctors ask him to move his arms.

"I've been told by doctors that they're impressed with his speed, going from the battlefield to now," he said. "They said he's absolutely amazing."

As father has worked day and night to learn more about his son's condition and keep the rest of his family updated, he said he's barely slept or eaten, but is impressed with the community support he has received. Still, he said he's relying on the kindness of friends and strangers to get by.

"I wake up confused and I go to sleep confused," he said.

While Terence is currently fighting a low-grade fever, the current plan is for his son to be flown back to the U.S., possibly as early as Sunday. The family is not yet sure where he'll be taken.

"They'll let us know and we'll start heading that way," Jones said.

Sun Valley Approved as U.S. Olympic Training Site

The new designation will help the central Idaho resort become a major destination for world-class crosscountry skiers and coaches.

BY KAREN BOSSICK For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • The familiar Olympic rings are about to be paired with Sun Valley Co.'s trademark sun.

The U.S. Olympic Committee has given initial approval of Sun Valley's bid to become the nation's first Nordic Olympic and Paralympic training site, according to Harry Griffith, director of the Sustain Blaine economic development group. The move could open the door for the central Idaho mountain community to become the training destination for other U.S. Olympians, including alpine skiers, snowboarders and mountain bikers, Griffith said.

The effort, spearheaded two years ago by Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation Executive Director Don Wiseman and adaptive ski instructor Marc Mast, still has a few steps remaining. Wiseman said some of the agreement's details, including a memorandum of understanding between the U.S. Ski and Snowboard Association and USOC, remain to be completed.

Former U.S. Olympian Dick Fosbury, a Ketchum engineer, said the designation recognizes the support of Nordic events offered by a community that boasts more than 45 Olympians in a county of just more than 20,000 residents.

"There's no bigger sports brand in the world than those Olympic rings," the Olympic gold medalist in the high jump said. "And to be related to them, to partner with them just makes the Sun Valley brand that much stronger. This tells athletes this is a good place to come and train."

Cross-country skier Morgan Arritola of Fairfield, who competed at the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver, said she was jazzed about the designation.

"I've been all over the world and I haven't found any place better," she said. "It's got great trails and a wonderful supportive community. And we had snow this year when no one else did. If people had known about us, the world would have been beating down our doors."

USOC Director of Athlete Services and Program Alicia McConnell took a whirlwind tour of local Nordic facilities last week, eyeballing the trails around Galena Lodge, the Sun Valley Nordic Center and the Harriman Trail, which stretches 18 miles from the Sawtooth National Recreation

Should I Get a Colonoscopy at Age 50?

ASK ST. LUKE'S

Is it important for me to have a colonoscopy done at age 50? How much do genetic factors play into my risk of getting colon cancer?

There are few obvious signs of colon cancer. You could experience iron deficiency anemia, which could mean you are slowly bleeding through your stool, but it may not be visible to you. College of Western Idaho Receives Candidacy Status for Accreditation

TIMES-NEWS

NAMPA • The College of Western Idaho in Nampa said Friday it received candidacy for accreditation.

In October, CWI hosted a team of evaluators from the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities. The commission conducted a review of the school's self-study report and ability to meet accreditation standards.

Since CWI opened several years ago, the College of Southern Idaho has served as the accreditation partner for Idaho's newest community college. That role will continue until CWI is fully accredited.

The Nampa-based college has delivered college credit instruction, certificates and degrees through its memorandum of understanding with CSI.

Now, candidacy status will allow CWI to implement systems to award financial aid, receive federal grants and use independent enrollment and student data systems.

Discrimination Vote a Touchy Statehouse Subject

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Caldwell Sen. John McGee believes that discrimination is wrong. And so do his fellow Republicans, he said.

So the reasons why the seven GOP members of the Senate State Affairs Committee voted against printing a bill to add protections for gay, lesbian and transgender people in the Idaho Human Rights Act aren't black and white. It's not that McGee believes it's OK for the LBGT community to be discriminated against - he just doesn't want to expand the act to include another group.

It's another layer in the emotional debate that's surrounded the movement to get the "Add The Words" legislation passed. The effort died Friday morning, with a party-line committee vote against printing print the legislation.

Sen. Edgar Malepeai, D-Pocatello, introduced the legislation to the committee, halting to compose himself when asking his fellow senators to print the bill. After the meeting, he

"I don't know if I've ever been this emotional about any issue," he said.

Though the morning was difficult, Malepeai said he held no ill feelings toward his colleagues across the aisle. "My relationship with each of those members is still intact," he said.

Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Meridian, said during the hearing he respected Malepeai's passion for the issue, but didn't say why he voted against printing the bill.

Later Friday, Senate President Pro Tem Brent Hill declined to give a reason for his vote.

"On this one, I ask not to make a comment," he said. Sen. Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls, said he didn't have time to discuss the legisla-McGee, the majority cau-

Boise Democrat Sen. Nicole LeFavour, the Legislature's only openly gay member, has worked on the legislation and on similar efforts in past sessions. She expressed frustration after the meeting, and speculated that the decision was political and didn't reflect most of the senators' personal beliefs.

"I think if people voted the way they believed, we would have had the votes we needed," she said. "It's a sobering commentary to so many people around the state that their lives are not worth what politics are worth."

None of the committee members spoke against the bill, though Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Boise, thanked Malepeai for his work.

"I appreciate your passion for this. I appreciate your sensitivity," Winder said. "I appreciate the way you treated me when we visited. I thank you and have a great deal of respect for you."

The senators then voted on whether to print the bill. The two Democrats on the committee, Malepeai and Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum, were the only ayes.

After the vote, the audience gasped. One man shouted "Have you no shame?" as Committee Chairman Curt McKenzie, R-Nampa, adjourned the committee.

As Sen. Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls, left the auditorium, Bliss resident Marley Luna tearfully approached him, asking for an explanation of his vote. He silently walked past her.

"I'm not surprised," Luna said after, but she was bitterly disappointed.

After the meeting, supporters stood in the hall outside the committee room and sang "We Shall Overcome." Some silently held their hands over their mouths in protest, and several wiped away tears.

Republican lawmakers on the committee did not offer immediate comment.

Jay Knutson and Jim Shaff traveled from Jerome for the hearing. Though Knutson had expected the legislation to die, "I'm surprised by such a landslide, I guess," he said. "I was hoping for fewer nays."

While frustrated, both men thought Idaho is heading in the right direction. There was a lot of support for the legislation, they noted, and they predicted that support will only get stronger.

"It gives us strength to come back," Shaff said.

They placed flyers for the event at several area schools,

Hamilton said, because they wanted to reach as many kids as possible.

Goettle said basketball — and today's clinic — is a great way to develop and strengthen relationships. "Like us," he said, referring to his buddies.

The boys who show up can teach their newfound skills to their friends who don't, Hamilton said.

The teens will teach dribbling, shooting, defense and other skills. They'll also encourage youth to use basketball as an exercise tool and to eat right so they can give the sport their best game.

"It's a good way to get outside," said Heath, an academic all-star who's been playing ball with Goettle since the fourth grade; they've been playing ball with Hamilton since seventh grade. "A lot of time, that's what we do for exercise."

The three will also hold one-on-one games and team competitions today. They hope to have at least 40 kids sign up, they said, noting they're grateful for Twin Falls Reformed Church hosting the event.

Between practice, games and recreation, the three friends are never far from each other — though a basketball is often between them.

On Thursday they were at Lighthouse playing with the school's sixth-graders, preparing for the clinic.

"We really enjoy playing and want to share it with the community," Heath said. "We want to teach kids how to develop their game and hopefully have as much fun as we have."

Police: T.F. Resident Helped Catch Conspicuous Thief

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls resident helped police catch an alleged thief last month after he said he heard loud banging and then watched a man carry a large square object and garbage bag out of his neighbor's apartment.

The banging turned out to be the man jumping from the stairwell to a third-floor balcony, and the black square turned out to be a television, police say.

On Jan. 25, Twin Falls Police responded to the Rivercrest Apartment complex in north Twin Falls for a report of a burglary in progress. They ended up arresting Aaron Scott Fuller for driving under the influence in the nearby Walmart parking lot. The neighbor had recorded the burglary suspect's license plate number.

An alleged female accomplice, Shelia Garcia, was arrested on a warrant for failing to appear at a court hearing.

Fuller allegedly told police he had entered his brother's apartment, with permission to take the television. Several hours later, police were able to contact the apartment's tenant, who said Fuller had never had keys to the apartment and did not have permission to enter or take items.

Fuller was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Thursday on a felony burglary charge. He is scheduled for a Feb. 17 preliminary hearing.

Kimberly DUI Suspect Had Record in 3 States

KIMBERLY • A Twin Falls man arrested Feb. 4 for driving under the influence has had his driver's license suspended in three states, police say.

Miles Patrick Barclay, 37, was arraigned Thursday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on charges of excessive DUI and driving without privileges.

A Kimberly police officer said he was driving on Polk Street West when he saw a vehicle driving in the middle of the road. The officer said he had to move his vehicle to the side of the road to avoid being hit.

During the traffic stop, Barclay showed a Montana identification card and allegedly told the officer his driver's license was suspended from a prior

The officer reported that Barclay failed several field tests and was placed under arrest for suspicion of drunken driving. After running his name through a police database, the officer said he discovered Barclay had suspended licenses in Idaho, Washington and Montana, along with a possible warrant in Twin Falls County for failure to appear for another alcohol-related offense.

Police say a breath test showed Barclay's blood alcohol level was .259, more than three times the legal limit.

Thursday.
Coupled with dwindling membership and support, the recent slow economy didn't help matters.

"We've had less and less in skiers and donations," said Sandy Doig, an organizer from the beginning. "People just don't have the money to donate."

Asking for donations has never been the group's favorite part of the event. But it always came together, with thousands of dollars provided to various community groups like Camp Rainbow Gold, St. Jude's, Wishing Star and the guardian ad litem program.

One person in particular stood out when it came to collecting funds. The group fondly remembers John Pohlman as being vital to the event's success.

Pohlman died in 2005. Organizer Henk Heeling said his passing was devastating to the organization.

"Because of the friends he had, we were able to keep it going awhile longer," Heeling said. "But slowly membership and donations started going down."

Doig estimates Pohlman raised 75 percent of the donations. One of the organization's hallmark years was when Pohlman raised $18,000 — that year really set the standard, Heeling said.

Mixed feelings were evident as the group laughed and reminisced Thursday.

With only eight organizers left — many around 40-

50 years old — the group is getting a little burned out, Heeling said.

"Younger skiers didn't want to go after donations and trying to get them involved in the organization was tough. We've all got our lives to lead," he said. "When it takes more and more out of you every year because others are leaving... you know, it's just a sign of the times."

Times have certainly changed. With the Internet, text messaging, social media and other forms of communication, people can meet and help out with a click of a button

"In the old days ... we didn't have all the distractions and different ways of communication," Heeling said. "Clubs and organizations were one way to go out and meet people."

While Freeze on Skis hasn't been held for two years, the group had one last donation to give — passing its remaining fund balance to one of its most faithful supporters, Twin Falls County Search and Rescue.

"Thankfully, we've never had to use them for more than helping get skiers out of there," Heeling said of the team. "But they've always been there no matter what

"This group has given a lot of funds to the community and different foundations. It's very disheartening," Brown said of Freeze on Skis' demise.

There's still hope that Thursday wasn't the end.

Heeling said that if members were approached about picking the event back up or promoting it, they would be glad to do it.

"It's the sign of the times, is primarily one of the reasons we're giving it up," Heeling said again. "Time really just ran us out. And it's no one's fault. It just happens."

Simpson said many of his constituents have expressed concern over the subsidies wind developers receive and the effect of the projects on property values.

He also referenced the federal Public Utilities Regulatory Policy Act or PURPA. The complex law encourages utility companies to buy renewable energy, which Simpson said some industrial wind developers exploit to their advantage.

"I don't believe the PUR-PA law was established in 1978 to benefit multimillion-and multibillion-dollar corporations," Simpson said. "It was originally established to allow smaller developers to utilize existing resources in their area."

Randy Gardner, a project manager with Ridgeline Energy, declined to comment on the proposal Friday. Gardner said he had not read the bill and would wait until he analyzed it before making any statement.

Ridgeline Energy partnered with BP Energy to develop the Goshen II wind farm east of Idaho Falls.

Simpson's new bill also would create a legislative task force assigned to study the wind industry and report its findings in early 2014. If passed into law, Simpson's bill would not affect wind projects developed by the U.S. government, Idaho National Laboratory or Bonneville Power Administration "for the purposes of providing power to the citizens of Idaho."

Finally, Simpson attached an emergency clause to his bill that would make it effective as soon as it is passed into law, rather than the traditional July 1 start to the new fiscal year.

Bill to Tweak Online Classes Approved

BOISE (AP) • A part of Idaho's new education laws that deals with online courses is getting a slight tweak.

The state is requiring high school students to take at least two online credits under changes lawmakers approved last year.

A bill that cleared the 2012 Idaho Legislature on Thursday would revise one of the new education laws, deleting language that defines an online course and says the instructor cannot be physically located in the same school in which the student is receiving the virtual instruction.

The provision aimed to ensure the state was providing distance education, as the new education changes intended.

Plane's Wreckage Found in Northern Utah

MOUNTAIN GREEN, Utah (AP) • Utah authorities have found the wreckage of a small plane that left the Morgan County Airport and crashed about nine miles away.

Officials say a Utah Department of Public Safety helicopter spotted the plane about 11:30 a.m. Friday in a heavily wooded and mountainous area.

The Utah Civil Air Patrol says the single-engine Cessna 210 took off from the airport Thursday night, and the Federal Aviation Administration says the plane was bound for Douglas, Wyo.

PORTLAND, Ore. • A hunter in Idaho has shot and killed a sibling of an Oregon wolf that became a celebrity by wandering hundreds of miles from Eastern Oregon and into Northern California looking for a mate.

BY NIGEL DUARA

Associated Press

Oregon Department Fish and Wildlife spokeswoman said the wolf shot in Idaho, tagged OR-9, came from the same parents as his famous brother, OR-7.

OR-9 was shot on Feb. 2, said Idaho Department of Fish and Game spokesman Michael Keckler.

"The hunter checked here after (the wolf) was harvested," Keckler said. "The hunter followed the proper protocol, brought the hide and skull to the Fish and Game office?'

The wolf was taken between Emmett and Banks. Its collar is being returned to Oregon.

OF LONELY OREGON WOLF

Keckler said the hunter's tag was out of date and he was given a warning. The hunter had valid tags through the end of 2011, but was incorrectly told he didn't need new tags in 2012.

Under new Idaho legislation, the hunter's name is not considered public record.

The wolf hunting season in most of Idaho lasts from Aug. 30 to March 31. The wolf was last seen in Oregon last summer, and is believed to have crossed into Idaho with two of his siblings, including OR-7.

OR-7, Oregon's famous wandering wolf, became a media celebrity while looking for a mate last year.

by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game or sold at auction. The two wolves are part of the Imnaha pack.

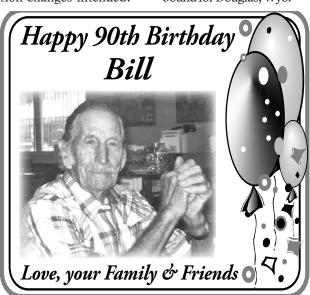

The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife has issued a kill order for two members of the pack, but a federal judge has blocked it. The Legislature is considering a bill backed by ranchers that would give the state explicit authority to kill the wolves.

The measure, opposed by conservationists, is in a state House committee and could be advanced Tuesday, but it would face an uphill climb in the full House and Senate.

A separate measure would create a new tax credit to feed money into an account that would compensate ranchers for livestock killed by wolves. That bill has been approved by one legislative panel and is now awaiting action in the House Revenue Committee, which oversees tax credits.

Wolves started moving into Oregon from Idaho in the late 1990s, from packs introduced into the Northern Rockies as part of a federal endangered species restoration program. From trail cameras, radio tracking collar data, and sightings, Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife figures the state has at least 23 wolves. All four packs are in the northeastern corner of the state. Two produced pups last year.

Readjusted fourth-quarter earnings for Netflix ullet It turns out Netflix's fourth-quarter earnings aren't quite as good as the video subscription service told investors a couple weeks ago. The company lowered its net income by 14 percent to account for a $9 million payment that will be made as part of a legal settlement reached after the Jan. 25 release of Netflix's results for the final three months of last year. Accounting for the payment lowered Netflix's fourth-quarter earnings from a previously reported $40.7 million, or 73 cents per share, to $35.2 million, or 64 cents per share. Netflix Inc. disclosed the change in a regulatory filing late Friday. The settlement covers claims made under the Video Privacy Protection Act, a law that prohibits rental services from sharing information about what their customers have been watching.

Electric Cars, No Longer an Oddity, Make Few Inroads on Market

BY JULIE WERNAU Chicago Tribune (MCT)

CHICAGO • In the early days of the electric vehicle, they called it "opportunity charging." You plugged in wherever you could.

"Laundromats, gas stations that have an outlet, car washes, hotels, churches, friends' houses ... everywhere and everything," said Todd Dore, a North Riverside, Ill., resident who converted his first gas vehicle to electric in 2003.

With the delivery of the all-electric Nissan Leaf and plug-in Chevy Volt to Chicago area early adopters in late 2011, Dore isn't the only pioneer getting around without gasoline.

Drivers can choose from more than 100 places to charge up in the area to eliminate so-called range anxiety (the fear of being stranded with no juice left in the battery). And for the first time, the charging stations in his downtown parking garage are frequently in use when he pulls up.

"Any given week there are more electric vehicles wanting to charge than there are charging stations," Dore said. "This is my nirvana. These are the days I've wanted to see for the last 10 years."

Take a spin around the Chicago Auto Show, which opened to the public Friday, and you'll find no shortage of vehicles getting an electric boost. There are hybrids that use gas engine to charge the battery, hybrids that have sockets for plugging in and, of course, totally electric vehicles. It's enough to make a formerly unique concept seem almost ordinary.

Even several tried-and-true models on the showroom floor now offer various levels of electrification.

The 2013 Ford Fusion — hitting the market this fall - comes available as a hybrid, electric plug-in or regular old internal combustion. Beginning this March, hybrid granddaddy Toyota Prius is offering a plug-in in some states rated at 95 miles per gallon (equivalent) that, when charged, would allow the vehicle to run on battery power longer and at higher speeds.

But if there's a full-blown revolution coming, it isn't here yet. While the hybrid market is growing, in 2012 it comprises just 2.46 percent of the overall market. Electric vehicle sales represent less than 1 percent, according to industry watcher Edmunds.com.

"We're in the covered-wagon days of this industry," said Michelle Krebs, a senior analyst with Edmunds. "We're in a pioneering time."

Electric vehicles are still a hard sell for the average consumer. The price tag is high, and the lower fuel costs don't immediately make up the difference. Charging stations are available but not on every corner, and most take hours, instead of minutes. Even the best-laid plans can leave some motorists doing just about anything to hold their battery's charge, particularly in cold weath-

Mexico Town Takes a Monetary Path Less Traveled

BY TIM JOHNSON McClatchy Newspapers

ESPINAL, Mexico • Organizers in this verdant hill town in Veracruz state have coaxed a tiny economic experiment on the citizenry: They created an alternative local currency. It's called the "tumin," which means "money" in the local Totonac language. Each tumin is the equivalent of one peso, but it can only be spent in the region.

The aim: Urge merchants to accept payment in a combination of pesos and tumin, which would spur more spending. After more than a year, about 100 storeowners, tradesmen, doctors, dentists, salon owners, pharmacists, butchers and food vendors are on board. It's also stimulated local handicraft makers.

But there's been a snag: Even though alternative currencies are used legally all over the world, including in towns in the United States, Canada and around Europe and Asia, the Bank of Mexico said that Espinal may have committed "monetary rebellion" in violation of the constitution, usurping a right of the state. Residents are flummoxed at the scrutiny of federal investigators into their town's little experiment. "It's not a substitute for the peso. It's a lie what the Bank of Mexico says," said Jose Perez Cruz, a 42-year-old electrician who reckons that the alternative money has increased economic activity.

Espinal hardly seems an incubator for conspiracy. Set in hills near the Gulf of Mexico, the region got sidestepped in the state oil development that took place elsewhere in Veracruz. The closest it's come to mutiny was back in the 17th century, when a Dutch mulatto pirate known as Laurens de Graff hid out among its

ry has been as unpretentious as the vanilla beans endemic to this region rather than piquant habanero peppers.

The brain behind Espinal's experiment is Juan Castro Soto, a graying community organizer who wanted to give community currency a stab.

Castro and fellow organizers decided to hand out 500 tumin to a group of citizens and set a rule that the local currency would be used for only 10 percent of the value of transactions. If a vendor had a kilogram of fruit to sell at 50 pesos, he or she would collect 45 pesos and five tumin.

Experts on alternative local currencies say they emerge with vigor during hardship, matching unused resources with people short on cash.

"These systems are countercyclical. When a global or national economy is in decline, then people naturally find these survival systems to help keep their businesses going," said Stephen DeMeulenaere, an expert in new currencies and executive director of the Complementary Currency Resource Center, a digital resource center for alternative currencies.

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to all the volunteers and supporters who are restoring the Historic Wilson Theatre in Rupert

A labor of love more than 11 years in the making, the project is in its final phase and only $500,000 away from completion. We're happy to see a historic building restored instead of neglected and eventually torn down, especially one with such meaning for the city it's in. Rupert is lucky to have such a dedicated group of people looking out for this landmark.

Many grants and donations received by the coordinating Renaissance Arts Center are often tied to actual renovation work, so a yearly fundraiser covers the center's $4,500 monthly operational costs. Get out and support this year's fundraising gala on Feb. 25.

JEERS to the House Resources and Conservation Committee, for its unanimous Thursday vote limiting local control over oil and natural gas drilling.

Regulating industries that affect our land and water is a fine line. Too many restrictions, and potential jobs are lost; too few, and an industry can harm the public.

We have concerns over the committee advancing an industry-supported bill so strongly opposed by the counties it directly affects. Legislators indicated they feel state regulators can guarantee oil and gas drilling doesn't harm local drinking water or cause other problems. But shutting out county influence is bad policy — look at Gooding County's regulation of large feedlots and dairies when officials felt they became too concentrated.

The safety of our groundwater and Idaho's quality of life are too important to treat this way. Once again, it seems legislators' talk of "local control" only applies when the state wants to assert itself over the federal government.

CHEERS to Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, for his 14 years of service in the Idaho House of Representatives.

Smith announced Tuesday he will not seek an eighth term. Long a voice on transportation and sales tax issues in the Legislature, his brand of moderate conservatism has become rare in recent years, to the point that it lost him a committee chairmanship last session.

In a letter to the Times-News, Smith wrote he plans to remain involved in community projects in Twin Falls. We look forward to his remaining active in local issues, and commend him for announcing his decision early enough for potential candidates to consider a run for the seat. It's refreshing to see a citizen politician serve well and then step aside so that others may do the same.

Food Drives Successful

Many thanks to all who supported Souper Bowl Sunday food drives to benefit the hungry in the Magic Valley.

Canned food collections from the Wednesday LO-GOS Christian Education program at First Presbyterian Church and parishioners at Ascension Episcopal Church and Our Savior Lutheran Church have filled the shelves of the Neighbors in Need pantry with almost 500 pounds of food. Thank for your generosity.

Souper Bowl Sunday is a national program focused on gathering food or cash donations for food banks, food pantries and hot meal programs in communities and performing service projects which are hunger related. It takes place on or around Super Bowl Sunday each year. Each local group participating chooses what local organizations their activities will support. It was the brain child of a church youth group in the Midwest more than 10 years ago and has grown each year, providing more than $9 million in donations in 2011. READER COMMENT must take issue with a recent editorial in the Times-News. This editorial took our county commissioners to task for declaring victory in the redistricting suit.

Mr. Loebs and our county commissioners sued and won another opportunity to sell their legislative map. Though the redistricting commission then rejected their map, their primary goal was achieved in the final map adopted by the commission. The final map gives greater influence to Twin Falls County and the entire Magic Valley. Here is why Twin Falls County, the Magic Valley and the State of Idaho benefited from Twin Falls County's suit:

The legislative map overturned in court would have essentially left just one district representing Twin Falls County, tying most of the Deborah population to other regions.
Silver

T.F.Co. Democrats

Now, we have one legislative district comprised of Twin Falls City, and another that population to other regions. Now, we have one legislative district comprised of Twin Falls City, and another that combines Jerome and the surrounding Twin Falls area. This map also puts Minidoka and Cassia County into one legislative district, and leaves the district comprised of Blaine, Lincoln, Camas, and Gooding largely unchanged. This means that Magic Valley legislators can now concentrate solely on Magic Valley interests, without being hampered by the demands of Power, Owyhee, or Elmore counties.

A map very close to this was proposed at the hearing held in Twin Falls before the first redistricting commission. I was one of several citizens from Twin Falls and Jerome who testified that Jerome County and rural Twin Falls would be a strong district for the Magic Valley. There were also a number of citizens testifying that a city district would best represent Twin Falls city. With the new map, the true voice of Twin Falls will be represented in the Statehouse.

The state and the commission also won because of this lawsuit. The redistricting process is only the second since the state of Idaho passed a constitutional amendment establishing the redistricting commission. Because of the unknowns of this new process, the first 2011 commission spent most of its time arguing over the basic rules. Now, the mandate of splitting the fewest counties is established, and the specific redistricting problems of 2011-12 will not likely arise again.

The new map has an upside for local Democrats, too. In the 2008 election, 35 percent of Twin Falls County voters voted for President Obama. Within the new city district, that number moves to 40 percent. Though this change strengthens the Twin Falls Democratic Party, a Democrat will not be elected just because the line was moved. The integrity of the commission remains intact.

With the redistricting question resolved, Twin Falls County can focus on the more important issues facing our great state. We should be thankful that our commissioners made these changes possible.

Deborah Silver, a CPA in Twin Falls, is chairwoman of the Twin Falls County Democratic Party.

On behalf of the Twin Falls Senior Center, I would like to thank Chelsea Fuchs for thinking of an amazing fundraiser, putting it together and then seeing it to fruition. Not only did you provide an evening of entertainment for the participants, you also doubled your expected proceeds. You are an inspiring young lady and your perseverance and hard work allowed you to accomplish a task that many adults could not achieve.

Thanks to you and those that you coordinated (volunteers and sponsors), your contribution of $6,055 was able to help reduce the outstanding debt of the Twin Falls Senior Center.

I hope you will keep your altruistic attitude throughout your life. You are an inspiration to others, and your family, friends and school should be very proud of you.

Again, thank you!

Comforter in Powell Unit Tests Positive for Blood

BY MANUEL VALDES AND MIKE BAKER

Associated Press

SEATTLE • Police in Washington state who searched a storage unit rented by Josh Powell found a stained comforter that tested positive for blood in initial exams, according to documents filed in court Friday.

Pierce County detectives reported finding a grayblue-pink comforter with a stain. The search warrant documents say the comforter tested positive for blood. Investigators planned to perform further tests.

Powell killed himself and his two young sons in a gasfueled inferno Sunday, and Pierce County authorities consider the murder-suicide an admission that he killed his wife.

Investigators had considered Josh Powell a person of interest since his wife, Susan Powell, disappeared in Utah in 2009. At the time, Powell said he took his two sons ice camping in subfreezing temperatures.

Also on Friday, the sheriff's department released a timeline that spans from Saturday, the day before the

This past week, investigators have tried to piece together Powell's last days, serving search warrants for his sister's cellphone and a local Bank of America branch where security cameras captured him withdrawing money.

Police also received tips from the public, such as a woman who noticed donated books had Josh and Susan Powell written in them.

On blood found on the comforter, Pierce County Prosecutor Mark Lindquist said presumptive tests are conducted with a field kit and that a determination of blood won't be confirmed until the item is examined in the lab.

"Field tests are not infallible," he said.

Lindquist said he expects the finding will be something law enforcement will share with colleagues in Utah who have been investigating Susan Powell's disappearance.

Officials Warn of Possible Hepatitis A Exposure at Boise Restaurant

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • An employee at the Cheesecake Factory on Milwaukee Avenue in Boise may have exposed some diners at the restaurant to Hepatitis A this winter, according to Central District Health Department.

Health officials said the exposure may have occurred between Dec. 13

The employee who was confirmed to have Hepatitis A wasn't involved in food preparation, and the risk to the public is "ex-tremely low" — but there was some possibility of exposure to diners, the health department said. The employee is said to have used good hand hygiene.

Hepatitis A is a liver disease caused by the hepatitis A virus. It is usually spread by eating or drinking food items that have been contaminated with hepatitis A from someone hasn't properly washed their hands after using the bathroom, but it is also spread easily when a person doesn't wash his or her hands after changing a baby's diaper.

Symptoms of the disease include: fever, loss of appetite, abdominal discomfort, jaundice, tiredness, nausea and dark urine. Anyone who ate at the Cheesecake Factory between Dec. 13. and Jan. 22 and has these symptoms is advised to see their doctor. Symptoms vary from mild to severe, lasting anywhere from a couple weeks to several months.

Some banks have also reported that the victims' accounts are being charged for very small amounts to make sure the accounts are active before they are used for larger purchases.

BOISE • The National Transportation Board has released its preliminary report on the plane crash that killed Micron CEO Steve Appleton last week, but it could be up to a year before the agency determines the cause of the Appleton's experimental Lancair aircraft crashed shortly after his second takeoff at the Boise airport on Feb. 3.

The NTSB report, released Thursday, said several witnesses saw Appleton take off, climb to 5 to 10 feet above the ground and touch back down at 8:46

He told the air traffic controller that "we're going to land here and stop ... we've got a problem," followed by, "I am going to taxi back and see if I can figure it out."

About seven minutes later, he told the controller he wanted to depart again.

The plane began to climb to about 100 to 200 feet then made a steep bank to the left.

In Appleton's last transmission, at 8:55 a.m., told controllers he would "like to turn back in and ... um ... land ... coming back in?'

The airplane rolled once, hit the ground nose first in a dirt area between two runways and caught fire.

The airplane's engine, engine accessories and three recording devices have been retained for further investigation, the NTSB said.

Appleton's family members told the NTSB Appleton bought the plane late last year and records show it was flown from Raleigh, N.C., to Boise on Dec. 30, the Idaho Statesman reports.

More than 400 people attended a private memorial service for Appleton, 51, on Thursday. A public memorial is planned for Feb. 23 at Taco Bell Arena at Boise Appleton was appointed chairman, chief executive officer and president of Micron in 1994. He dropped the president title in 2007.

Idaho Officials Ponder Future of State Institution

NAMPA (AP) · Idaho Department of Health and Welfare officials are looking for ways to use a 620acre campus that was once home to more than 1,000 people institutionalized at the Idaho State School and Hospital.

Now only about 50 people with developmental disabilities and medical or mental health problems live at the Nampa site, which was renamed the Southwest Idaho Treatment Center last year. "We don't actually use all the buildings on the campus, so our role here and our presence here is becoming less and less," department spokesman Tom Shanahan told the Idaho Press-Tribune (http://bit.ly/xBUX4k). The department is asking the legislature's budget committee to approve $250,000 to have a civil engineering firm come up with three new plans for the land.

The treatment center itself only uses about 20 percent of the campus. About half of the land is used by Nampa's Centennial and Ridgecrest golf courses. The rest of the property houses cell phone towers, the Job Corps, the Idaho Department of Juvenile Correction and work release facilities.

The leases for the cell phone towers and golf courses expire in the next two years. If the legislature approves the budget, the department will work with The Land Group of Boise to come up with the new plans, and the public will have a chance to comment on the options, Shanahan said.

The number of people who live at the center has dropped dramatically since the 1950s, when institutionalization those with developmental disabilities was common. Administrator Susan Broetje said that now the center's mission is to help residents transition back into their own communities. The Department of Health and Welfare has focused its efforts in the last five years to keep people with disabilities close to family and in the community, and department officials hope to open smaller facilities in northern and southeastern Idaho so residents can stay closer to their homes.

"Most of the people with development disabilities who receive services receive them from private providers," Broetje said. "There's a very, very small percentage that are getting it from our facility."

WI OPENS UP 3-SHOT LEAD AT PEBBLE

BY DOUG FERGUSON

Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. • On a day when sunshine gave way to a light rain, two things stayed the same Friday at the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. Charlie Wi was still atop the leaderboard, and Tiger Woods didn't hole enough putts to make up ground.

Wi escaped most of the rain at Pebble Beach, where he holed a wedge from the 13th fairway for eagle and limited the damage to a bogey on his final hole for a 3-under 69 that allowed him to open a three-shot lead.

Dustin Johnson was caught off guard by the rain in the worst way. He stood in the fourth fairway at Spyglass with a short-sleeve shirt, hands thrust in his pocket, as his caddie sent a friend running up the hill to the parking lot to retrieve his rain gear. His short game let him down, and the two-time Pebble champion had to settle for a 72 that put him three back. Padraig Harrington had a 66 at Pebble Beach and was among those tied for third. Harrington had five birdies in a sixhole stretch early in his round, the exception coming at the par-5 sixth.

Woods, meanwhile, again looked poised to make a move over at Monterey Peninsula. He missed a 5-foot birdie putt on No. 9 and failed to make birdie on the par-5 10th when he pulled his second shot into the gallery. He had to settle for a 2-under 68, leaving him six behind.

Along the way, he stung his wrist hitting out of a divot and said he had to pop it back into the joint.

"No big deal," he said.

The bigger deal was putting. Woods took 33 putts on the Shore Course, which he attributed to leaving the ball in the wrong spot — mostly above the hole and struggling with greens he felt were getting slightly more bumpy as a mist turned into a light rain.

"It's very close," said Woods, playing this event for the first time in 10 years. "I got my ball-striking to where I feel very comfortable hitting the shots. I just need to make a couple of putts to get on a roll."

Phil Mickelson struggled in sunshine. In rain, he ran off five birdies for a 65 at Monterey Peninsula that put him five shots behind. "I don't know what happened, but I started to play a lot better and make some birdies," said Mickelson, a three-time winner at Pebble. "In the perfect conditions, I struggled. But to play these golf courses in such great condition either way has been a lot of fun."

Wi was at 12-under 130 and now heads to Spyglass Hill, which has played slightly tougher than the other two courses.

In these shifting conditions, Spyglass played about two shots harder than it did Thursday, while Pebble Beach and Monterey Peninsula were about one shot more difficult than the day before.

Only 56 players broke par, compared with 87 in the opening round.

That would explain what was going through Wi's mind when he set off at Pebble Beach, knowing the course gave up a pair of 63s in the opening round. It sure didn't feel that easy.

"I thought Pebble played really difficult today," Wi said. "The greens were very firm, and the guys that shot 8 or 9 under out there, I was very surprised how well they played."

But a little halftime pep talk from head coach Dick Simpson reminded what was at stake for the Panthers, and they responded with a more consistent second half in posting a 58-50 victory in claiming the Northside Conference title and the No. 1 seed at the Class IA Division II District IV tournament, which begins next week at Castle-

"Everybody was tight tonight and it was a big game for both sides," Simpson said. "I don't think either team played with the rhythm they normally play with.

"I know we didn't."

Carey (14-6, 8-0) did enough in the first half to establish a 10-point lead, but Dietrich (15-2, 6-2) couldn't take advantage of foul trouble that saddled most of the Panthers' starters. The Blue Devils missed six straight free throws to close the second quarter, and for the game, shot just 16 of 32 from the stripe.

"We missed 16 free throws and a half a dozen little putbacks," lamented Blue Devil coach Wayne

Carey quickly extended its halftime lead to 14 points before Dietrich made its best threatening push, stringing together an 11-2 run that featured points from five different players and cutting the deficit to five points.

But Carey ended the quarter with a flourish, going on a 12-6 run to take an 11-point lead going into the fourth quarter. Dietrich never got within fewer than nine points until the final minute, with the game out of reach.

"We loosened up quite a bit," Carey forward Baley Barg said after leading his team with 17 points. "We started off the game (thinking) we had to beat them by too much."

A little reminder as to what was really important got Barg and his teammates' focus.

"Coach told us at halftime that we want to go into districts number one and into state number one ... We just went out there and played our hardest, loosened up a bit and that helped us out," Barg said.

The game had a postseason feel to it, adding to the rivalry that already exists between the two schools located a few country miles apart from one another. With the district tournament forthcoming, it's likely these two teams will meet again. Carey earned the top seed in the district tournament, while Dietrich slid to third. Host Castleford, which won a bid to host the tournament, is the No. 2 seed.

WALPOLE, N.H. • A 14-year-old shot himself in the face in a New Hampshire elementary school cafeteria filled with dozens of students eating lunch, officials said

The teen, identified by a relative and fellow students as Hunter Mack, was hospitalized after shooting himself around 11 a.m. at Walpole Elementary School in southwestern New Hampshire. Police locked down the school for several hours, but no one else was in-

"Our hearts go out to the family of this young man and our thoughts go out to all of the students that were in the school at this time,"

Cheshire County Attorney Peter Heed said at a news conference. He did not say what kind of gun the student used or where he might have obtained it. He also did not offer any information on why the student shot himself.

As of Friday afternoon, the student was in serious condition in the intensive care unit.

"We're all just waiting to hear about our little boy," said Cindy Mack, whose cousin is the boy's father. "He's a wonderful little boy. He's an avid hunter - like his name. He is very smart. He won prizes at school. He shot his first deer last year. He's a great, great kid."

Ethan Symonds, a seventh-grader who was sitting at a table near the boy in the cafeteria, said he heard something "a little bit louder than a chip bag popping." He said he did a double-take, saw blood, and ran.

Seventy of the school's approximately 170 students were in the cafeteria at the time. Nick Phillips, an eighth-grader in the student's home room, said he had been passing notes during the week saying he was depressed, but it wasn't clear why.

Parents received automated calls about the lockdown at about 1 p.m. They were allowed to come to the school to pick up their children, some of whom were interviewed by "The state of New Hampshire is offering whatever assistance it can to the community, along with all of our thoughts and prayers," Gov. John Lynch said in a statement.

Syria: Suicide Bombers Kill 28 People in Aleppo

ALEPPO, Syria • Two suicide car bombers struck security compounds in Aleppo on Friday, killing 28 people, Syrian officials said, bringing significant violence for the first time to an industrial center that has largely stood by President Bashar Assad during the 11-month uprising against his rule.

Anti-Assad activists denied any involvement and accused the regime of setting off the blasts to smear the opposition as government forces pummel rebels in one of their main strongholds, Homs. State media touted the bombings as proof the regime

The military stepped up its siege of Homs, where hundreds have reportedly been killed over the past week. Soldiers who have been bombarding the central city made their first ground move, storming into one of the most restive neighborhoods.

Troops and security forces opened fire on antiregime protesters who streamed out of mosques after Friday prayers nationwide. At least 27 civilians were killed, according to the London-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

President Barack Obama pauses while announcing the revamp of his contraception policy requiring religious institutions to fully pay for birth control, Friday at the White House in Washington.

Under Fire, Obama Adjusts His Birth Control Policy

Under new plan, religious employers will not have to offer contraception and will not have to refer employees to places that provide it.

BY BEN FELLER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Under fierce election-year fire, President Barack Obama on Friday abruptly abandoned his stand that religious organizations must pay for birth control for workers, scrambling to end a furor raging from the Catholic Church to Congress to his re-election foes. He demanded that insurance companies step in to provide the coverage instead. Obama's compromise means ultimately that women would still get birth control without having to pay for it, no matter where they work. The president insisted he had stuck by that principle even in switching his approach, and the White House vehemently rejected any characterization that Obama had retreated under pressure.

Yet there was no doubt that Obama had found himself in an untenable position. He needed to walk back fast and find another route to his goal.

Social Issues Rule Busy Day in Presidential Campaign

BY CHARLES BABINGTON Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Social issues dominated the 2012 presidential race Friday, as President Barack Obama tried to calm a storm over religion and birth control and the Republicans vying to replace him jockeyed to outdo each other in proving their conservative fer-

There was little time left for talk of iobs and the economy, subjects still expected to dominate the fall election. In that sense, the day's events may become little more than a footnote.

But Democrats hope the unusually intense focus on social issues, even if temporary, will help them portray Republicans as out of step with middle America on matters such as access to birth control, equal treatment of men and women, and government philosophies that put problem-solving ahead of ideological purity.

Three of the four GOP presidential candidates addressed the Conservative Political Action Conference, emphasizing their fealty to activists on the right. Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney declared himself "severely conservative."

That wasn't enough for former Sen. Rick Santorum, who surprised Republicans by winning this week's caucuses in Colorado and Minnesota. Even if Romney goes on to defeat Obama this fall, Santorum told the CPAC crowd it would be a "hollow victory" because Romney isn't conservative enough.

Romney used his 24-minute speech to say he proved his conservative mettle as Massachusetts governor.

"I know conservatism because I have lived conservatism," he said.

Romney said he would cut federal spending like he cut state spending, although he vowed not to touch military budgets.

"I was a conservative governor," he said. "I fought against long odds in a deep blue state. I understand the battles that we, as conservatives, must fight because I have been on the front

Catholics, Contraception and the Heretic Faithful

BY DAN RODRICKS

The Baltimore Sun One of my most conservative friends is Catholic, but he is "conservative Catholic." In my book, he'd only be a conservative Catholic if he opposed the death penalty (he supports it), opposed abortion (he believes women should have the right to chose) and engaged in natural family planning (he appreciates the fact that all women he's had sex with, including his wife, used the Pill or another artificial contraceptive to avoid unwanted pregnancy).

His opposition to the legalization of same-sex marriage puts him in agreement with the leadership of his church. He also attends Mass each weekend.

But otherwise, his contrary views make him a heretic and, in the eves of the strict adherent, no Catholic

Of course, he's not alone. There are millions of other American Catholics who do not adhere to the teachings of the Magisterium. We have been branded "cafeteria Catholics" by those who consider themselves more "faithful."

Cafeteria Catholics select, as we move through life, which church teachings we follow and which we don't.

Use of the term goes back to the late 1960s and the publication of "Humanae Vitae," the encyclical that reaffirmed the church's opposition to artificial birth control and declared use of contraceptives a sin. That issue, perhaps more than any other, drove American Catholics into the cafeteria. Over the last 25 years, surveys by sociologists at Catholic University have shown that only a small percentage of Catholics -10 percent to 13 percent was the range since 1987 – grant the church moral authority on birth control.

Which is why many Catholics, including my conservative friend, look at the current controversy over federal law, health insurance and contraceptives and again see a church leadership out of step with most of its mem-

I refer to a report titled, "Catholics in America: Persistence and change in the Catholic landscape," resulting from the work of sociologist William D'Antonio. His team has conducted five surveys of American Catholics since the mid-1980s. He's found the classic clash of old school versus new school, and the fight is in the cafete-

"Catholic identity, no longer a matter of simply knowing the Baltimore Catechism and having particular ethnic ties, has become part of the national dialogue between those with a more conservative vision and those who define the church more in terms of the Second Vatican Council (1962-65) and its documents," Mr. D'Antonio reported last fall.

The survey found that Catholics maintain their core beliefs in Jesus' resurrection, in Mary, in the sacraments and in helping the poor. We have high regard for the rituals and traditions of the church and appreciate the sense of community that comes with parish life.

But far fewer (only about 30 percent) seem to care about Vatican authority the rest say it is either "somewhat important" or "not important at all."

"American Catholics are more likely to stress the personal importance to them of the church's theological beliefs and helping the poor while seeing the Vatican's teachings on contraception, same-sex marriage and abortion as less important," the Catholic University report said.

Only 21 percent of American Catholics in the survey said they think maintaining the celibate priesthood is important. Only 35 percent regard the opposition to samesex marriage as a priority. Opposition to abortion came in at 40 percent, well behind prayer, the sacraments, helping the poor and belief in the resurrection in importance.

Fifty-seven percent of Catholic women and 46 percent of Catholic men think it's kind of cool that they can belong to a church while disagreeing with its doctrine.

Of course, the Vatican isn't keen on that at all. Pope John Paul II said you can't be a "good Catholic" if you don't adhere to church teachings. Millions of Americans — the faithful heretics – disagree.

Prayer Let's Us Interact With God

The greatness of the Divine does not manifest itself only in prayer but in all aspects of our lives. We can see the magnificence and beauty of life and the world around us. The scientist might experience the greatness of God in God's creation and the wonders of science that God has created. A physician may experience Gods' greatness in human anatomy or in the function of the heart or the function of eyes and ears. A parent can see it in the growth of his or her child.

Allah the Great manifests himself to us in many ways and forms. We might experience God's greatness in the most awkward places or most frightening situations.

Do you imagine the difficulty Mary experienced in carrying baby Jesus? But she never thought that God had abandoned her. Can you imagine how the Pharaoh's wife believed in God regardless of the disbelief that her husband displayed?

But there is value in prayer. Instead of simply being amazed or awed from a distance, we can interact with the Divine. We can worship and praise him, ask his aid, repent to him and seek his guidance.

It is the mercy of God that sends our way signals to believe in him and to worship him. The lucky ones are those who can see the opportunities God gives us and act upon them. The unfortunate ones are those who ignore these signals and throw themselves into hellfire.

- Rushdy El-Ghussein, former president of the Islamic Society of Greater Kansas City

Prayer Is Just a Temporary Path to Awareness

In Hinduism, the Divine is an all pervading supreme being who is both immanent and transcendent, which cannot be limited by doctrine or dogma or by claiming its exclusivity.

To experience the Divine requires constant awareness of the Divine. Prayers in everyday religious practice do help one to remember the Divine; however, when prayer ends, one's mind goes back to worldly thoughts.

To cultivate constant awareness of the Divine requires recognizing one's divinity and seeing the divine presence in all of creation. In the Bhagavad Gita, Sri Krishna says: "I am ever present to those who have realized me in every creature. Seeing all life as my manifestation, they are never separated from me."

To manifest one's divinity, the Gita explains the spiritual disciplines of four primary yogas. (Yoga means the union of individual soul with the universal soul.) In Bhakti Yoga of devotion, prayer is an expression of one's love for God. In Jnana Yoga of knowledge, one discriminates between real and unreal. In Karma Yoga of selfless work, one offers the fruits of all labors to the Divine. And in Raja Yoga of meditation, one strives for stillness of the mind to experience the Divine.

Therefore, the goal of all spiritual practice, with or without prayer, is to cultivate purity of heart and to recognize the greatness of the Divine in all of creation.

Gordon Al Youngblood

Aug. 3, 1953-Feb. 7, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Gordon Al Youngblood passed away Tuesday, Feb. 7, 2012. He will be greatly missed by his friends and Gordon was born Aug. 3, 1953, in Seattle, Wash. After graduating high school in 1971, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy, joining the crew of the USS Kitty Hawk.

After serving his country for four years, he was honorably discharged in 1976. He settled in San Diego, Calif., where he attended college and earned a degree in psychology. In addition, he became certified in medical administration, governmental bookkeeping and accounting. He began his career with the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center as a file clerk in 1978. By the time he took early retirement at age 48, he had become the budget analyst and lead account techni-

He chose to move to Twin Falls, Idaho, after retirement to be closer to his family, especially his baby sister, Gay. They both shared many interests such as reading, politics, wine and the occasional trip to Jackpot, Nev. He was a private man and he thoroughly enjoyed his time to himself. However, he did commit to spending the holidays with family and always brought his poker chips so that could play Texas we Hold'em. He was our card dealer and a good partner to have in pinochle, too. We will miss you, Gordo, and keep you forever in our hearts.

Gordon is survived by his mother and stepfather, Bill and Velma Olson of Olympia, Wash; his brother, Gary Hendry of Cheyenne, Wyo.; his sister, Edith (Dave) DuVall; nephew, Darren Lay; and niece, Loretta Lay, all of Olympia, Wash.: his sister, Gay (Ed) Blunt; nephew, Eddie (Michelle) Blunt, and their children, Jackson, Jenna and Joseph Blunt, all of Jerome; nephew, Reynold Blunt, and his children, Bailey, Courtney and Abby Blunt of Brazil, Ind.

Carl William Trail

March 9, 1943-Feb. 8, 2012

JEROME • Carl William Trail passed away Wednesday, Feb. 8, 2012. He was a 33year resident of Jerome. He passed away from ongoing complications from an infection after a heart valve replacement. Carl's memorial service will be held at 10 a.m.

Monday, Feb. 13, at Rost Funeral Home, McMurtrey Chapel in Mountain Home. A reception will follow at noon at the Carmela Winery in Glenns Ferry.

Carl was born in Payette on March 9, 1943. He was the youngest child of Bill and Rose Trail and younger sibling of Carolyn Groehler (nee Trail). The son of a cattle rancher and farmer, Carl became a member of the 4-H club where he raised several championship steers. His favorite 4-H project was a Hereford steer by the name of Butch. Carl loved the steer like a pet and taught it to lead in the show ring, cared and groomed the animal and even used to head butt the steer as a fun game. Carl was heartbroken when the steer had to be sold but learned a hard lesson of ranching life.

An avid athlete, Carl excelled at all high school sports, especially football, playing for the Glenns Ferry Pilots. He also lettered in track, basketball and the Glee Club. He was voted best looking and best dancer in high school and never had a shortage of female admirers. During his senior year, Carl was offered a full-ride football scholarship to Idaho State University. After attending Idaho State University, Carl worked on the family farm in the Pasadena Valley from 1963 to 1967. After the family farm was sold, Carl moved to Mountain Home.

In Mountain Home, Carl took a job at Sawtooth Lumber. While working at Sawtooth Lumber and during the height of the motorcycle era of the late 60s and early 70s, Carl raced motorcycles semi-professionally. He entered and won many racing competitions and loved to joyride around southern Idaho on his prized Harley Davidson motorcycle. During these years, he rekindled a childfriendship hood with Janet Walker (nee). They would later go on to marry in June of 1972 and have one son, Carl William Trail Jr. "Will," and one daughter, Amy Elizabeth Trail.

In the late 70s, Carl started a career as an insurance salesman for Farm Bureau Insurance. After doing well in Boise, he was transferred to the Magic Valley to work that region. Both of his children were raised in the town of Jerome and lived there for a total of 33 years. Carl left Farm Bureau to create his own insurance agency, Trail West Insurance, in the mid-80s and maintained the agency for a decade. It was during this time that Carl also became an avid golfer. Carl entered and won many golf tournaments and even received several holes-in-one. He was a 33 member of Jerome Country Club.

In the early 2000s, Carl started a new career as a truck driver and drove a route from the Magic Valley up to Alberta, Canada. It was during these trips that Carl saw and met interesting people from all over the world. He also got to experience new cultures and see new territory. Carl was known for his charming wry sense of humor, warm personality, generosity and natural athletic abilities. It was impossible to have a conversation with Carl without cracking a joke or, at the very least, a smile. He knew a million jokes and prided himself in reciting them with a straight face.

He was preceded in death by both of his parents, Bill and Rose Trail (nee Jimerson). He is survived by both of his children, Will and Amy Trail; his beloved sister, Carolyn Groehler (Herman); favorite niece, Christine Johnson (Willie); nephew, Norman Groehler (Iody); great-nephew, Daniel Hunter (Lynette); and great-niece, Sarah Stansill.

Detroit-area Author Zaslow Killed in Car Accident

BY COREY WILLIAMS Associated Press

DETROIT • Best-selling author Jeffrey Zaslow was killed Friday when he lost control of his car on a snowy road after promoting his latest book in northern Michigan. He was 53. Zaslow, co-author of the million-selling book "The Last Lecture," was also a former columnist for The Wall Street Journal and former advice columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times.

Zaslow, who had an affinity for stories of heroism and resilience, worked on memoirs of U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords and airline pilot Capt. Chesley "Sully" Sullenberger.

"Jeff was a beautiful writer, wonderful collaborator, loving husband, father and friend," Sullenberger, who was praised for his skill after safely ditching a plane in the Hudson River in 2009, said in a written statement Friday. "Our whole family loved him dearly and he will be sorely missed."

Zaslow was killed in an accident Friday morning in Warner Township, about 160 miles northwest of Lansing, according to the Antrim County sheriff's office. Zaslow's car slid into the path of a semitrailer. He was killed on impact.

The sheriff's department did not release the name of the victim, but literary agent and friend Gary Morris confirmed Zaslow's death. Morris said he was told of Zaslow's death Friday evening by the author's wife.

Zaslow was in northern Michigan speaking about "The Magic Room: A Story About the Love We Wish for Our Daughters." The book, based on a Michigan bridal shop, was published in December.

"His great talent was to find stories that had heart that people could relate to," Morris said.

Morris said Zaslow's first book was based on a 2007 column he wrote for The Wall Street Journal. "The Last Lecture' was published in 2008 and has been translated into 40 languages. It was inspired by Carnegie Mellon Univerprofessor Randy Pausch's "last lecture" of his life's lessons. Pausch died in 2008 of pancreatic cancer.

"He was the most industrious and hardest working author I know," Morris said. "He never turned anything in late. He turned in the cleanest copy. It really was ethics. He was completely selfless in the writing of his own books and collaborations with others." Zaslow was a writer for

The Wall Street Journal when he was selected by the Sun-Times in 1987 to write a column to replace Ann Landers. Zaslow and Diane Crowley, daughter of the original Ann Landers, wrote side-by-side columns. Zaslow wrote the column, called "All That Zazz," until Zaslow, a native of Philadelphia, lived in the Detroit area. He is survived by his wife, Sherry, and three daughters, Alex, Eden and Jordan.

Republican presidential candidate, former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney addresses the Conservative Political Action Conference (CPAC) in Washington, Friday.

Republicans

But Romney skated past details of his administration that trouble some conservatives, including requiring state residents to obtain health insurance.

Santorum, who spoke ahead of Romney without saying his name, said the former governor's health care record would make it impossible for him to draw needed contrasts with Obama. He said Romney had created "the stepchild of Obamacare."

Obama-backed 2010 health care law "will crush economic freedom;" Santorum said. He urged Republicans not to nominate "someone who would simply give that issue away in the fall?

Even if Romney could win it all, Santorum said, "we will no longer abandon and apologize for the policies and principles that made this country great for a hollow victory in November."

CPAC often brings out edgy comments from candidates. Still, if Republican voters see Santorum's remarks as a hint that he thinks it's more important to be ideologically pure than to beat Obama, it could cause problems in the days ahead.

Romney tried to reassure the audience that antipathy to Obama will energize millions of voters this fall. It was an indirect way to say the lukewarm reception he gets from some conservatives isn't Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich regaled the CPAC audience with his promises to slash government spending painlessly, through business-tested efficiency techniques.

Like Romney and Santorum, he blasted Obama's contraception policies without delving into details of the latest changes.

"This administration is waging war on religion," said Gingrich, who grew up as a Protestant but converted to Roman Catholicism. "I frankly don't care what deal he tries to cut," he said of Obama. "He will wage war on the Catholic Church the morning after he's elected. We cannot trust him."

Santorum, a Catholic with a strong record of fighting legalized abortion, said Obama is "telling the Catholic Church that they are forced to pay for things that are against their basic tenets and teachings?

"It's not about contraception, it's about economic liberty," he said.

Romney, a Mormon who once supported legalized abortion, vowed to reverse "every single Obama regulation that attacks our religious liberty and threatens innocent life."

His critics cite a 2005 interview in which Romney said rape victims deserved either access to or information about socalled morning after pills that some see as a form of abortion.

All three GOP candidates restated their standard criticisms of Obama. Romney called him "the poster child for the arrogance of government?

dozens of hooded youths and police in riot gear. Police said eight officers and two members of the public were injured, while six suspected rioters were arrested.

The violence broke as more than 15,000 people took to the streets of the capital after unions launched a two-day general strike that disrupted transport and other public services and left state hospitals running on emergency staff.

Scores of youths, some in gas masks, used sledge hammers to smash up marble paving stones in Athens' main Syntagma Square before hurling the rubble at riot police.

Debt-stricken Greece does not have the money to cover a (euro) 14.5 billion bond repayment on March 20, and must reach a vital debt-relief deal with private bond investors before then.

itors would return Greece to growth next year, and deliver a 4.5 percent primary surplus in 2012 - better than an earlier official prediction of 1.1 percent of gross domestic product.

"A disorderly default would cast our country into a catastrophic adventure. It would create conditions of uncontrollable economic chaos and social explosion," he warned.

"Greeks' standard of living in the event of a disorderly default would collapse, and the country would be swept into a deep vortex of recession, instability, unemployment and penury. These developments would lead, sooner or later, to exit from the euro?"

Syria

The morning blasts in Aleppo, Syria's most populous city, ripped apart the facades of the local headquarters of the Military Intelligence Directorate and a barracks of the Security Preservation forces.

At the Directorate, windows were shattered and a large crater was torn into the pavement outside the entrance. A weeping correspondent on state-run TV showed graphic footage of at least five corpses, collected in sacks and under blankets by the side of the Security officials said suicide bombers in explosives-packed vehicles tried to smash through the entrances of both sites. At the barracks, Brig. Firas Abbas told an Associated Press reporter on a governmentguided visit to the scene that the vehicle made it through one roadblock before detonating near the gates. A head lay on the ground and security officials said it belonged to a suicide attacker.

State television cited the Health Ministry as saying 28 people were killed in the two blasts and 235 wounded. The dead included 11 security personnel killed at the barracks, 13 military personnel killed at the military intelligence building and four civilians, security officials said. State TV blamed "terrorists." But anti-government activists accused the regime of setting off the blasts to discredit the opposition and avert protests that had been planned in the city on Friday.

Capt. Ammar al-Wawi of the Free Syrian Army, a rebel group that wants to bring down the regime by force, denied involvement. He said fighters from his group had a short gunbattle with troops several hundred yards (meters) from the Directorate about an hour before the explosion but did not carry out the bombings.

"This explosion is the work of the regime to divert world attention from the crimes it is committing against the people of Homs," he said.

for any of the attacks

The blasts were the fourth such dramatic suicide attack since late December. All occurred on Friday mornings against various security headquarters and prompted the same exchange of accusations. The earlier attacks, in the capital Damascus, killed dozens of security forces ed." and civilians, according to Syrian officials. Nobody has claimed responsibility

Birth Control

The controversy over contraception and religious liberty was overshadowing his agenda, threatening to alienate key voters and giving ammunition to the Republicans running for his job. It was a mess that knocked the White House off its message and vision for a second term. Leaders from opposite sides of the divisive debate said they supported the outcome — or at least suggested they probably could live with it. Cardinaldesignate Timothy Dolan of New York, the head of the nation's Roman Catholic bishops and a fierce critic of the original rule covering hospitals and other employers, said the bishops were reserving judgment but that Obama's move was a good first step.

At least one Republican who is hoping to oust Obama from the White House was conceding nothing. Though not mentioning the birth control issue, Newt Gingrich assailed the president's views of religious rights and said "I frankly don't care what deal he tries to cut.... If he wins reelection, he will wage war on the Catholic Church the morning after he's re-elect-

Obama, acknowledging he wanted a resolution to the controversy, ordered advisers to find a middle ground in days, not within a year as had been the plan before the uproar. He said he spoke as a Christian who cherishes religious freedom and as a president unwilling to give up on free contraceptive care. "I've been confident from the start that we could work out a sensible approach here, just as I promised," Obama said. "I understand some folks in Washington may want to treat this as another political wedge issue, but it shouldn't be. I certainly never saw it that way? Under the new plan, religious employers such as charities, universities and hospitals will not have to offer contraception and will not have to refer their employees to places that provide it. If an employer opts out of the requirement, its insurance company must provide birth control for free in a separate arrangement with workers who want it.

"Very pleased," was how Sister Carol Keehan, president of the Catholic Health Association, reacted in a statement distributed by the White House. Her trade group represents Catholic hospitals that had fought against the birth control requirement, and Keehan said the new arrangement addresses the concerns it had.

In searching for a way out of the crisis, Obama also had to be mindful not to anger many women and fellow Democrats

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"When the truth entails tremendous ruin.

To speak dishonorably is pardonable."

— Sophocles

Today's deal shows how you can achieve remarkable results with smoke and mirrors.

Even if North had passed, you might still reach a delicate fourspade contract from the South seat. Looking at the East and West cards, you would assume the contract was doomed, but West gives you a respite when he leads a club at trick one. It does not appear at first glance that this will be enough assistance.

If you win the trick cheaply and cross to a top heart in dummy, you can next take the spade finesse. West wins, and knowing you have the missing club and spade honors, rates to shift to a diamond, doesn't he? East can help his partner in the decisionmaking process if his side is playing suit preference in trumps. He would then follow with the spade two on the first round to emphasize diamonds over hearts.

But now see what happens if you take East's club jack with the ace at trick one, then cross to dummy with a heart for the losing spade finesse. If West can resist underleading the club king for his partner to make the diamond switch, then he is certainly a better man than I. Of course, if the spade finesse succeeds, you still make 10 tricks by pitching a diamond on the hearts.

Incidentally, the same sort of play can arise when you have the A-K-J in the suit they lead. Winning East's 10 with the king can create the same illusion.

ANSWER: With everyone bidding, your partner is probably the player who has stretched to act, but you cannot afford not to invite game here. Cue-bid three diamonds to show a high-card limit raise or better, but don't hang your partner any higher. If he signs off in three hearts, accept his word for it and let him play there.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11. My mom is engaged to a man who I think is a wonderful person, but she always questions whether he's cheating on her. She's 37. Personally, I think she won't get another chance like this. Their wedding has been postponed three times because she thinks he's lying to her.

I don't think she realizes what she's got. When I ask her if everything is OK between them, she says, "Everything is fine, and if it wasn't, it would be too complicated for you to understand." I just want them to live happily together. What should I do?

- OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW IN ALABAMA

Jeanne

DEAR OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW: You may be old enough to know, but if your mom doesn't feel comfortable sharing certain personal information with you, that should be her privilege. Her suspicions may be the result of having been hurt in past relationships, or she may have caught her fiance being less than truthful at some point. Your mother should not marry ANYONE - regardless of how great a catch he may seem to you - unless she is certain she can trust him. The fact that their wedding has been postponed three times sends me a message that she thinks she has reason for concern in that department.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 16 and want to have my ear pierced a second time. Despite my mother's reluctance, she took me to get my ears pierced when I was 9. My friends have all gotten multiple ear piercings. All I want is to get the cartilage on my right ear pierced, but Mom and Dad refuse.

Mom says that any piercing other than one in each ear looks "trashy" and people will think unfavorably of me. I don't see the big deal. It's not like I want my nose or navel pierced. I just want one little stud, and I'd pay for it myself. I'm a respectful and honest girl. I have always brought home good grades. Mom says I'll have to wait until I'm 18 and out of her house. I don't understand why she won't let me get this done. My best friend's mother, who is stricter than mine, let her get her cartilage pierced. What do you think? - NOT ASKING FOR MUCH IN ILLINOIS DEAR NOT ASKING FOR MUCH: I think that as a minor living in your parents' house, you should obey their rules. If you want to get multiple piercings in your ears when you're 18 and on your own, the choice will be yours. But until then, respect your mother's wishes. "Because everyone else is doing it" is not a valid reason for doing anything.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy theater very much, but can't afford to attend all the performances I would like, so I work at my local theater every week. In exchange, I am "paid" in tickets. The ticket prices are generally $60 and up, so it's a win/win for both the theater and for me. My question is, when I invite a friend to use the extra ticket, is it unreasonable to expect him or her to drive and pay for the treat at intermission? The ticket was not "free" to me - I worked for it. Or, because I issued the invitation, am I responsible for the entire evening? THEATER LOVER someone to an evening at the theater, it would certainly be gracious of your guest to offer to reciprocate in some way. However, because your friends don't have ESP, this is a subject you should raise at the time you issue the invitation.

IN ATLANTA THEATER DEAR LOVER: If you're treating

IF FEBRUARY 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have both the ambition and the skill to succeed at anything you start in the next week. Concentrate on getting your finances and business matters into apple pie order before the planets shift. You could be somewhat obsessive about getting your way this year, but the first half of March will offer you a chance to be wiser than usual. That is a good time to make promises or commitments and to take advantage of any luck that comes your way. From mid-March through the end of July, simply rest on your laurels and don't launch anything new. August offers better conditions for business, career and financial ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go your own way. You are better suited to tackling projects on your own rather than by committee. You'll get infinitely further by going at your own pace rather than waiting for the approval or aid of others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your sword sheathed. Just because you have adequate ammunition to knock someone down a peg doesn't mean that you should. Release pent-up energy by finding physical outlets to occupy your time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be diplomatic in social situations. Not everyone sees eye to eye on certain topics. You may want to add your two cents to prove your argument, but there's really no benefit. Avoid creating ill will.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A poor start is overcome by a strong finish. The morning may offer tension that makes you want to head back to bed. Find positive ways to occupy your time and by evening earlier problems will be forgotten.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If a project has you frustrated, go take a walk around the block to clear your head. You may find that engaging in physical activity may be more to your liking than racking your brain today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't let a molehill build up into a mountain. A minor problem can be easily rectified. Just make sure to catch the error before it snowballs into something bigger. Find constructive ways to unleash energy. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you don't bend a little, you may break. You won't get anywhere today by being stubborn about an issue. Compromise is the only way to diffuse a tense situation. What has worked in the past will work for you now. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Fix what needs fixing. Little tasks around the house may seem impossible to overcome all at once. Tackling jobs a little bit at a time will gradually erode the workload until there's nothing left to do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): No one wins in a fight. If you encounter a differing opinion, simply agree to disagree and walk away. You're not going to change anyone's opinion and no one else is going to change

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Learn from mistakes. Don't let one minor error destroy your confidence. Use what you have learned from the experience to ensure you don't do it again. Hold off on making major purchases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Failure is not an option. Doubt might be your own worst enemy. Tackle tasks with determination and confidence. Give those you love the space they need, as sometimes they need to learn lessons on their own.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't let things get you down. The dice might not roll in your favor right now, but your luck is due to change. Be positive and generous to everyone you meet and karma will pay you back in spades.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
