SALES TAX BILL STALLS AGAIN

Once again, Idaho lawmakers kill a bill to allow the state to collect the tax on Internet and catalog purchases.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • After at least five years of debating, refining and tweaking, Idaho's lawmakers still aren't comfortable passing Streamlined Sales Tax.

On Wednesday, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee killed a bill that would have established a system to collect the state's 6 percent sales tax on Internet and other remote purchases its residents make. Committee chairman Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, said it was the fifth or sixth time the committee has considered the measure.

A motion to pass the bill failed on a 9-9 vote. When there is a tie, the motion fails.

Most who testified Wednesday encouraged the committee to pass the legislation, saying the system would level the playing field for small businesses who must collect the tax, and establish a way to collect a tax that Idahoans are already required to pay.

Shawn Barigar, president and CEO of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, testified in favor of the bill.

"I've heard from many of our members ... that they are at a competitive disadvantage when it comes to competing with out-of-state remote sales," he said.

Barigar shared one example of a Twin Falls retailer who told him about customers coming to his store, writing down details and model numbers of expensive saddles, and then going home to buy them online so they didn't have to pay the sales tax.

Twin Falls Schools Tune Up Tutoring

Twin Falls schools are taking advantage of Title I funding to increase tutoring time for elementary and middle school learners.

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • Lincoln Elementary School students attend tutoring sessions for a variety of reasons.

Some are referred by their teachers and need help with reading or math. Others are looking for a quiet place to do homework.

For those and other reasons, the school has expanded its tutoring programs to give students more chances to get academic help.

"We saw a need for kids to have the opportunity to get work done at school," Principal Beth Olmstead said.

With more Twin Falls families living in or near poverty, Lincoln Elementary has seen more students qualify for free and reduced-

The Twin Falls School District distributes Title I money to elementary and middle schools to provide extra academic support for students who attend schools with a high poverty rate.

"We can come up with a plan that meets the needs at our school," Olmstead said.

Snow Leads to Outages across the Magic Valley

Bales of cornstalks along Golf Course Road in Jerome County are coated Wednesday with a layer of snow on their west-facing sides.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Wednesday's short but heavy snowstorm resulted in power outages for some Magic Valley residents.

Idaho Power Co. reported late-morning outages in Jerome, Paul and Twin Falls that affected a combined 1,637 customers.

The largest outage affected 1,389 customers in Jerome, as the outage spread across many parts of the city. Customers were without power from 10:25-10:55 a.m. The outage was caused by weather conditions, said Brad Bowlin, a spokesman for the utility company.

Tuesday's snowfall also knocked power out to about 130 customers in Paul from shortly after 11:20 a.m. until a little after 1 p.m.

The only outage not directly caused by weather was in Twin Falls. Power was cut to about 100 Twin Falls customers shortly before 11 a.m. after a car hit a power pole.

New Water District Will Monitor Judged Rights

State officials plan to create a new water district along the Snake River to monitor water rights resolved by the court.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Idaho water officials are only weeks away from forming a water district that stretches between the Milner and Swan Falls dams.

The new district is being proposed by the Idaho Department of Water Resources and will encompass 520 water rights along the Snake River.

The district is scheduled to officially form in mid-March, but water users will have up to two years to appoint a watermaster and submit individual measurement plans, said Tim Luke, IDWR's water compliance bureau chief officer.

Creating a water district helps IDWR officials monitor water use. More importantly, it brings water-right disputes out of the courtroom and into an administrative process, Luke said.

For the past 25 years, water right claims have been settled through the Snake River Basin Adjudication — a court specifically set up to resolve water ownership across most of Idaho.

The SRBA was created as a result of a 1980s agreement involving Idaho Power's water rights at Swan Falls. After

What's a Water District?

IDWR creates water districts to maintain an accurate record of water rights. Knowing who owns each water right allows IDWR to monitor unauthorized water use and make sure that water is properly diverted. Eventually, a watermaster will be appointed and will provide annual water delivery reports and expenses to IDWR. The goal is to provide a measure of accountability to prevent water-right disagreements from ending up in court.

settling hundreds of thousands of water claims, the court has come close to resolving those few that remain. And that means the Swan Falls/Milner water district can finally form.

“Even at this time, people are moving water rights around,” Luke said. “The use might not have changed, but just the location. As an agency, we need to stay on top of it and water districts are a way to do that.”

Nate Jones pumps water near Glens Ferry. When contacted by the Times-News, he wasn't aware IDWR planned to form the water district. Though he's interested to see how the district could affect his pumping, he said he can see why IDWR would want to create a district for the area.

“There isn't a water-master in the area but there's only so much water you can take,” Jones said. “We've become more efficient in our pumping by switching over to pivots. We actually save water, but I don't know who else knows that.”

IDWR is requiring that all users in the district submit a measurement plan to the department by 2014. The costs of measuring each water right falls onto the user.

“We are getting comments from people who view this as an unfunded mandate,” Luke said. “But people have been doing this for years. The law requires that they pay.”

Tutor

educator-led tutoring sessions each day. The noon hour and after-school sessions are new this year.

The additions are in line with a district trend toward helping students outside regular school hours instead of pulling them out of class.

“The thinking is that kids will benefit the most by extra time and help that's individualized in addition to regular classroom instruction,” Associate Superintendent Patti O'Dell said.

Students can still receive smaller group assistance throughout the school day. But schools can also decide to provide after-hours tutoring.

Some children come to a tutoring session every day, while others just come occasionally.

The school has offered tutoring in the morning for years. Students can read or do homework. Then, they're taken to the school cafeteria for breakfast.

For the new noontime session, teachers assign students to come.

“A lot of that is missing assignment completion,” Olmstead said.

Also, it's a chance for students to complete their required reading time, especially if it's a challenge to get it done at home.

The after-school session draws the most students — about 25 or 30 daily.

At Harrison Elementary School, the tutoring program is structured a little differently.

The school has two eight-week after-school sessions each year for students who need help with reading and math. About 40 students participate in each session and they're recommended by their teacher.

Families also get involved during a social event at the beginning of the session, and a celebration on the last day.

“It's been a really positive thing,” Principal Chris Gillette said of tutoring. “The kids are actually sad to have it end.”

Kimberly-Hansen Wastewater Study Could Wrap in 3-4 Months

BY DAVE WILKINS

For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • Community leaders in Hansen and Kimberly will soon find out whether construction of a joint wastewater treatment plant would be a smart move.

Forsgren Associates Inc. of Boise is conducting a feasibility study.

Company representative Brad Bjerke told Kimberly City Council members on Tuesday that the study will be completed in three to four months. He urged people in both communities to keep an open mind.

“Maybe it makes sense for you to do your own plant and for Hansen to do its own, but I think it's smart for you two (communities) to consider merging that wastewater treatment together,” he said. “You're close enough from a standpoint of distance.”

Hansen is exploring the possibility of replacing an aging wastewater treatment plant. Kimberly doesn't have a system of its own; its wastewater is piped to Twin Falls for treatment.

The cost of that service could increase when Kimberly's contract with Twin Falls is renewed in the next few months, so city officials are looking at other alternatives.

Also on Tuesday, the Kimberly council approved an engineering contract for a recreational vehicle dump that will be connected to the city's wastewater collection system.

The planned RV dump will be built near the city park and will include a surveillance camera to guard against illegal dumping.

Kimberly's wastewater agreement with Twin Falls could be jeopardized if substances such as carpet-cleaning chemicals or dairy industry pharmaceuticals were ever dumped, city officials said.

“Under a worst-case scenario, I think you would be looking at a cancellation of the contract,” Public Works Director Rob Wright told the council.

It's possible that the new RV dump could be constructed with a holding tank or vault to prevent any such contamination. Design work hasn't begun yet.

“Once the (engineering) contract is signed, we will be jumping right into design,” Ivan McCracken, an engineer with J-U-B Engineers, told the council.

The RV dump will not add substantially to the city's total wastewater flow, he said. The typical recreational vehicle dumps about 20 gallons of wastewater at a time, while the average house discharges about 350 gallons a day.

The new RV dump was made possible by a $310,000 state grant. Bids for the project will be put out in June and construction is expected to start in July.

Kimberly's next council meeting will be held March 13 at the new city hall at 242 Highway 30 E.

Prison Ordered for Buhl Child Injurer

Police say Scott Beede violated his probation on an injury to a child conviction.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Buhl man convicted of injury to a child has been sentenced to spend time in state prison after violating his probation.

Scott Lee Beede was sentenced Tuesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court to five to 10 years in prison. In 2008, he was charged with 10 counts of injury to a child. He eventually pleaded guilty to one of the charges, while the other nine were dropped by prosecutors.

Beede was accused of victimizing five children aged 5-16. Police say he shot a BB gun at two of them, forced another into a hot bath that resulted in burns, and kept two girls inside a cooler while sitting on the lid.

Police say they found BB's lodged in two of the boy's bodies.

Beede was ordered to serve probation, which prosecutors called “a huge opportunity” for him to prove he could live in society. But he couldn't, as police say he violated probation by consuming alcohol and failing to obtain work and ordered treatment.

At Tuesday's sentencing, prosecutor Suzanne Craig asked that Beede's original jail sentence be imposed. Beede's attorney, public defender Sam Beus, admitted Beede had violated his probation.

Beus said Beede's actions showed a man who struggled with unemployment, consumed alcohol, didn't get mental health treatment, got scared and then tried to avoid his probation officer, all because of mental health issues. Despite this, his actions did not reflect a return to prior behavior, Beus said.

Beus argued Beede should be placed in the state's retained-jurisdiction treatment program rather than be sent to prison.

“I was given a huge opportunity and I messed up,”

Beede said in court. “I'm sorry for that. I drank and got scared of going back to jail.”

Beede said he wanted to complete a treatment program and use the tools he'd receive there to be a productive member of society.

Judge G. Richard Bevan reviewed the case and said since Beede had completed drug and alcohol treatment in the past, retained-jurisdiction programming wasn't a good choice. Bevan also said Beede wasn't achieving the goals he needed to make while on probation.

“Today this has been weighing heavy in my mind,” Bevan said, before revoking Beede's probation and sentencing him to the prison term.

Backyard Intruder Convicted

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A St. Anthony man has been convicted by a Twin Falls jury of indecent exposure and unlawful touching of an officer.

The jury found Randy Scott Hill not guilty of a count of battery on an officer during a Feb. 23-24 trial.

Hill, 42, was charged with the crimes in late December after Twin Falls police received an early morning report on Christmas Eve of a stranger masturbating in the backyard of a man's Second Avenue West home.

The resident told police he grabbed his shotgun and challenged the suspect, who then jumped over the fence and ran. The two responding officers said they searched the area and found Hill across the alley, again masturbating in an open garage.

When one officer approached Hill to arrest him for indecent exposure, Hill allegedly began trying to hit the officer in the head. After Hill's thick coat blocked shocks from both officers'

Tasers, the officers said they used their collapsible batons as Hill continued to fight.

Police say the scuffle ended when Hill fell while trying to throw a lawn chair at them, allowing one officer to use his Taser and arrest Hill. Police say Hill has an extensive criminal history, including prior arrests for battery on a police officer, driving under the influence and indecent exposure.

A sentencing date has not yet been set.

Taxes

“That's unfair to these business folks,” Barigar said.

Wayne Hoffman of the Idaho Freedom Foundation was the only person to testify against the legislation. Hoffman told the committee that sales tax makes sense when customers buy from a brick and mortar business. On the way to the store, he said, those customers receive government services in the form of streets and police. The same isn't true for Internet sales tax, he said.

“I can sit there in my living room, in my underwear, and buy a teddy bear from Vermont and never use state services,” Hoffman said.

Not all committee members bought it. Rep. Dell Raybould, R-Rexburg,

At a Glance Streamlined Sales Tax

What's the problem? Idaho law already requires residents to pay the state's 6 percent sales tax on purchases made online or from catalogs. But the state lacks a way to collect the taxes other than trusting people will pay up on their annual tax forms.

What's the solution? Sponsors of a bill to update the tax code say joining a multi-state coalition will streamline the process of gathering sales taxes from across the country.

Is this a new tax? No. However, most people don't pay it right now, so if approved, Idaho residents would likely see a difference when buying items online.

pointed out that Idahoans are already required to pay sales tax on remote purchases, and that opposing this legislation is condoning breaking the law. And Rep. Bill Killen, D-Boise and the bill's co-sponsor, said that even sitting in his living room, he still has the protection of the fire department, paid for by the government.

While most dissenters agreed with the principle of fairness, they had problems with the structure of the law.

House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, challenged supporters to explain why they were pushing the 79-page bill when they acknowledged there were flaws, and didn't accept the argument that legislators could make tweaks before the law would have come into effect in 2013.

After the vote, Barigar said the committee seemed hung up on the law itself rather than the concept of fairness.

“I am surprised that something didn't move forward,” he said.

Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls and a co-sponsor of the bill, agreed.

“We figured (it would pass) 10-8,” Smith said, adding he thought Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, would have voted for it. During the hearing, Bedke had moved to establish an interim committee to tweak the legislation. When that motion failed, Bedke voted against sending the bill to the House floor.

“We put in a lot of work,” Smith said. “So it's a disappointment.”

But, he added, “the Legislature is full of disappointments.”

Donabedian Gets Probation in Stolen Gun Case

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Jerome man accused of terrorizing a Dietrich couple while robbing their home last year has been sentenced to probation for an unrelated charge of grand theft by receiving stolen property.

also must pay $500 in public defender fees and a $165 court compliance fee. Donabedian recently pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace and malicious destruction of property when he was accused of threatening his girlfriend and her children with a two-foot-long wooden dowel and damaging items in her home on Jan. 15. He is scheduled to be sentenced in that case March 20. Donabedian pleaded not guilty to the Lincoln County home invasion charges, and a jury trial is scheduled to begin May 1.

According to court records, Aaron Zachary Donabedian purchased a gun he knew had been stolen after the alleged March 9, 2011, home invasion.

On March 22, 2011, Twin Falls police spoke with a man about a Smith & Wesson Hi-Point .40 caliber rifle that had been stolen from his home in a burglary.

On April 21, police spoke with Donabedian's girlfriend while investigating the home invasion in Dietrich because they believed he might have been staying at her home. Police say the woman told them he had brought a gun into the home and she didn't like having it there.

According to court records, the serial number on the Hi-Point rifle found at the apartment was the same as the one reported stolen.

In an interview with police, Donabedian allegedly said he bought the gun for $100 sometime after March 9, 2011, for personal protection and took it to his girlfriend's apartment.

Donabedian was sentenced in Twin Falls County 5th District Court to four years' probation in place of a two- to six-year prison sentence. He was also given a $1,000 fine, of which $700 was suspended. He

PAUL • Joshua Daniel Lloyd, husband, son, brother, missionary and friend, passed away Monday, Feb. 27, 2012, in the arms of his loving wife, surrounded by his family, due to a courageous fight against cancer.

Josh was born in Provo, Utah, on Oct. 28, 1987, to Dan and Cindy Lloyd. Josh was born with a zest for life. He loved spending time with his family. He loved spending time in the outdoors, biking, soccer, rock climbing; the list could go on and on. He spent many hours riding with his biking buddies. He graduated from Minico High School in 2006. He was a student at BYU-Idaho. He found great joy in serving in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He faithfully served a full-time mission in the Canada Nova Scotia Halifax Mission. On Aug. 22, 2009, Josh married his sweetheart, Megan Stucki, in the Rexburg Idaho temple. You could tell how happy and in love they are just by looking at them.

Josh will be remembered for his fine example of service, love, a soft spoken voice, good humor and obedience.

Clara Davis

Feb. 12, 1917-Feb. 25, 2012

JEROME • Clara Davis, 95, of Jerome, passed away Saturday, Feb. 25, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls from complications of pneumonia.

Clara Lena Anderson was born to Leah Southam and Leelen Anderson on Feb. 12, 1917, in Drummond, Idaho, as the middle child in a family with six brothers. The family moved from Shelley to Gooding, where Clara graduated from high school and worked for the Farmers Home Administration.

Harvey Davis spent many months courting Clara by ice skating on the Main Canal from Jerome to Gooding, which eventually led to their 52-year marriage. They were married in Las Vegas, Nev., in 1941. While living in Glendale, Calif., their daughter, Carolyn, was born. They moved to Jerome in 1945, where they farmed in the Grandview area. Clara has lived in her current residence for 62 years.

Living on a dairy and row-crop farm, Clara demonstrated a strong work ethic. Her family benefitted from her large garden, raspberry patch and endless canning skills. She was active in the Farmer's Union, Grandview Women's Club, Home Demonstration Council and Pleasant Plains Precinct Election Board. Clara served in many capacities in the LDS Church, including Relief Society homemaking teacher and ward librarian. Adventure led Clara to many exotic places. From 1970 to 1980, Clara and Harvey traveled to all 50 states and 55 countries, including India, Turkey, Egypt, Israel, Switzerland, Mexico and the Philippines. After Harvey's death in 1993, Clara traveled to many more places with friends and family. She always enjoyed a drive, whether it be "around the mile" to look at the crops or across the country to see new sights.

Clara has always been a "stickler" for detail. She enjoyed working with numbers and solving all kinds of puzzles. Harvey and Clara enjoyed playing canasta and pinocle with friends for many years. She was an avid bridge player and bowled for many years in various leagues, traveling to many tournaments with teammates. Her math and calculation skills really helped with bargain shopping and her yard sale quests.

After suffering a stroke in 1998 that partially disabled her left side, Clara continued to drive to town to do her own grocery shopping. She could still calculate the sale in her head as fast as the checker could ring it up. Clara often commented, "There are so many nice people that help me," and she wants to thank especially the folks at Ridley's, Burger King, her hairdresser, her housekeeper, the staff and doctors at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, and the many strangers, young and old, who offered a hand to fetch an item on a shelf too high or low, or help her load a cart of groceries into the car.

Clara is preceded in death by her husband, Harvey; her parents; her stepmother; five brothers, one son-in-law; and one great-granddaughter. She is survived by her brother, Keith Anderson (Winona) of Salt Lake City; her two daughters, Carolyn (John) Miller of Cascade, Idaho, and Sharon Meeks of Twin Falls; her two sons, Tom (Connie) and Keith of Jerome; eight grandchildren; 11 great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

At Clara's request, there will be a private family graveside service when the daffodils bloom this spring. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

TWIN FALLS • Geraldine (Geri) R. Joslin, of Twin Falls, passed away peacefully in her sleep early Friday, Feb. 24, 2012, at Highland Hills Assisted Living in Pocatello, Idaho, after an extended illness.

Ray was a transport driver for United Oil and Geri was a homemaker. Ray preceded Geri in death in 2005.

Geri had a love for the outdoors, especially the Sawtooth Mountains and the South Hills, and would go there as often as possible. She shared with her children this love of the outdoors, teaching them the different species of plants and animals and an appreciation for nature. She had a talent for art and would spend hours painting mostly landscapes, but especially her beloved South Hills. For many years, she taught oil painting for Twin Falls Parks and Recreation. While being a mother and homemaker was her first love, she also held many part-time positions throughout her lifetime, including

Her family is grateful to and thankful for the staff and their friendships at Highland Hills Assisted Living and the recent assistance of Guardian Hospice. They loved her and cared for her and made her final days comfortable.

Though in later years her memory failed, she maintained her sense of humor, always had a joke to tell, and gently teased those around her. Geri is remembered by those who knew or loved her as a strong, sweet, gentle lady who will be truly missed.

A celebration of Geri's life will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 7, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

$506 Billion

Apple's Current Market Value • Apple's market capitalization topped $500 billion Wednesday, climbing to a mountain peak where few companies have ventured — and none have stayed for long. Apple was already the world's most valuable company. The gap between it and No. 2 Exxon Mobil Corp. has widened rapidly in the past month, as investors have digested Apple's report of blow-out holiday-season sales of iPhones and iPads. And, more recently, Apple has raised investors' hopes that it might institute a dividend. The company's market capitalization was near $506 billion in late-morning trading as the shares rose $7, or 1.3 percent, to $542.41. On Tuesday, the Cupertino, Calif., company sent out invites to reporters for an event in San Francisco next Wednesday, apparently to reveal its next iPad model.

Brand-name Deals to Mix with Facebook Friend Posts

New, potentially lucrative advertising opportunities are coming to Facebook as a prelude to its initial public offering of stock. The idea is to lure big brands with the promise of effective, precisely targeted ads that reach the social network's 845 million users.

BY BARBARA ORTUTAY

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Messages from brands such as Walmart and Starbucks may soon be mixed in with your Facebook status updates and baby photos from friends and family.

Facebook unveiled new advertising opportunities Wednesday to help the world's biggest brands spread their message on the world's largest online social network.

Facebook executives outlined a long-term vision to move from advertisements to stories. Brands you've endorsed by hitting the "like" button will now be able to push deals and other updates right into the news feeds that show your friends' updates, photos and links.

These posts could also show up if one of your friends has interacted with a brand, such as by liking it or commenting on a photo on that brand's page.

The changes come ahead of Facebook's initial public offering of stock, expected this spring. The IPO could value the company at as much as $100 billion. That means Facebook has to prove it can bring in real advertising revenue from the likes of Wal-Mart, Procter & Gamble and other massive brands.

"Facebook is making serious money from ads right now, but they are not making serious money from major brand advertisers. That's where the ad money is," said Rebecca Lieb, an analyst with the Altimeter Group. "They currently have rather low-rent, shoddy ads on Facebook."

This could now change as Facebook moves to integrate brands' messages into its 845 million users' pages.

Facebook made the announcement at the American Museum of Natural History in New York in a rare East Coast appearance for a Silicon Valley is now seriously courting Madison Avenue.

"We are in a way going back to the future," said Chris Cox, Facebook's vice president of product.

Rather than bombarding people with flashy ads, Facebook is urging companies to integrate themselves into what people are already doing on the site — talking to their friends and family, commenting on photos or posting news links.

"The definition of the word 'advertise' is to draw attention to," Cox said. "The definition of a story is narration, which you'd think is what people prefer."

Facebook has a vast trove of information about its users' lives, hobbies, likes and dislikes, yet the company has kept advertising fairly unobtrusive to date. Ads for teeth-whitening, wineries and laundry detergent and the like are relegated to the right side of users' Facebook pages. Over time, Web-savvy users have grown to used to ads and many are tuning them out.

Those ads are not going away, but brands will now be able to push updates — or as Facebook likes to call, "stories" — right into the news feeds. Facebook's challenge will be to keep these ads as unobtrusive as possible so that users are not alienated or driven to "unlike" brands.

The company will collect feedback and test out how its users respond to the changes. It will also roll out the changes slowly. At first, users may see just one message from a brand inside their news feed, or even less. And they won't see messages from random companies they are not connected to in some way — directly or through a friend.

"Facebook has certainly backed down on things," Lieb said. "But they are not just going on what people say. They are going on what they do."

WILL HIGHER GAS PRICES DERAIL THE ECONOMY?

BY MATTHEW CRAFT and CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

NEW YORK • The price of gas has jumped 45 cents since Jan. 1 and is the highest on record for this time of year, an average of $3.73 a gallon. On Wall Street, talk has turned from the European debt crisis to another worry: Will higher gas prices derail the economic recovery?

Not yet, economists say. They argue that the United States is in much better shape than early last year, when a similar surge in fuel prices weighed on economic growth by squeezing household budgets. Americans spent less on clothes, food and everything else.

Rising gas prices hurt less when an economy is improving than when it's slowing down. So economists expect other spending won't be badly hurt, at least for now. If gas breaks its record of $4.11 a gallon, however, all bets are off.

"Can the economy withstand the increase we've seen so far? The answer is yes," says David Kelly, chief market strategist at J.P. Morgan Funds.

The reasons:

- Jobs. The country has added 2 million over the past year. Those 2 million people with paychecks will spend them, which helps the economy. Lower unemployment also makes people feel better about the economy — and less likely to cut other spending way back.

- Job security. Unemployment claims, the best measure of layoffs, are at a four-year low. Fewer Americans are worrying about losing their job, so they can take the punch of higher gas prices and move on.

- A steadier housing market, the Dow Jones industrial average's clearing 13,000 and other signs of an improving economy also help. Add them together and consumer confidence is the highest in a year. More confidence makes people more likely to keep spending on other things even if gas goes up.

- Gas wasn't the only thing getting more expensive last year. Prices for milk, meat, bread and other foods were rising because of higher prices for grains and other farm goods. Natural gas prices were also on the rise, making it more expensive for Americans to heat their homes.

This year, natural gas prices have plummeted. Unlike last year, filling up the car's tank is about the only thing getting dramatically more expensive. Last year, when Americans were feeling it from all sides, they made tough choices, like cutting out expensive dinners.

The key is what impact gas prices have on other spending in the economy. All consumer spending isn't equal. A dollar spent on gas has less of an impact on the U.S. economy than a dollar spent in a restaurant or at a baseball game. The U.S. is an oil-importing country, so many of the dollars spent on gas ultimately leave the country.

Faster Growth Last Quarter Bolsters Hopes for 2012

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Stronger hiring and higher pay and savings should support solid growth for the economy in coming months.

That was a key message that emerged Wednesday from a report on economic growth in the final three months of 2011. The economy grew at a 3 percent annual rate in the October-December quarter, up from a previous estimate of 2.8 percent, the Commerce Department said.

Most of last quarter's growth stemmed from a jump in company restocking. That happened because businesses rebuilt inventories that had been depleted last summer. Stockpiling is expected to slow sharply this quarter. And as it slows, economic growth could, too.

But economists stressed that the fundamental drivers of the economy — incomes, consumer spending and business investment — are rising. They will likely sustain modest growth this year.

Expectations for growth this quarter are slightly better than they were a month ago. Economists expect the economy to expand at a roughly 2 percent annual pace in the current quarter and about 2.5 percent for the full year, according to the National Association for Business Economics. That would be faster than last year's 1.7 percent growth.

In its first report in January on fourth-quarter growth, the government had estimated that incomes rose only slightly. That estimate was revised Wednesday to show incomes grew much more than previously thought.

After taxes, inflation-adjusted incomes rose 1.4 percent in the fourth quarter. That's nearly double the first estimate.

And in the third quarter, incomes rose 0.7 percent, compared with earlier estimates of a 1.9 percent drop.

Economists had worried that growth wouldn't be sustainable without more income gains. Wednesday's report showed that households were in better financial shape than many had expected.

Some economists detect signs of a self-fulfilling cycle in which more jobs fuel more spending and pay, which spark further hiring and spending.

"Today's figures give encouraging evidence of a virtuous cycle developing where incomes and consumption move up together," said Nigel Gault, an economist at IHS Global Insight.

Higher incomes should also make it easier for consumers to absorb higher gas prices and keep spending on other items.

"The consumer is in a better position to weather higher gasoline prices than appeared to be the case prior to these revisions," said Joshua Shapiro, chief economist at MFR Inc., in a note to clients.

A big reason for the higher estimate of growth in the October-December quarter was that consumers and businesses spent more than first thought.

Imports, which subtract from the gross domestic product, rose by a smaller amount. GDP is the broadest measure of the nation's output of goods and services.

The savings rate was revised higher. Americans saved 4.5 percent of their incomes in the October-December quarter. That was down slightly from the third quarter. But it topped the previous 3.7 percent estimate for the fourth quarter.

Consumer spending rose 2.1 percent in the fourth quarter, powered by a jump in spending on autos and other long-lasting goods. That's an improvement from the third quarter. And it's much better than spending during the spring, when high gas prices nearly brought consumer spending to a standstill.

Police: Nampa Woman Charged in Mom's Death

NAMPA • A southwestern Idaho woman has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of her 69-year-old mother.

Police say officers went to a Nampa home late Tuesday to investigate a reported disturbance and 40-year-old Kelly Singh answered the door with blood on her clothing. When they went inside, officers say they found Singh's mother in a bedroom with head injuries.

The injured woman, Ruth Collins, died at a Boise hospital on Wednesday.

A coroner determined Collins died from blunt force trauma to the head and ruled death a homicide.

Court documents show Singh is accused of attacking her mother with a hammer. She was arraigned Wednesday on the murder charge and is being appointed a public defender. A preliminary hearing in the case has been scheduled for March 14.

Panel Advances Sex Offender Delisting Bill

BOISE • Senate lawmakers are trying to give young men convicted under an older definition of statutory rape an opportunity to clear their name from the sex offender registry.

The Judiciary and Rules Committee advanced a bill Wednesday that applies to young men who were convicted of statutory rape before 2010.

In 2010, the Legislature cleared statutory rape charges in cases of consensual sex when a man is within three years in age of his 16 or 17-year-old partner. Previously no girl under 18 could legally give consent.

Sen. Les Bock of Garden City says many offenders convicted under the old law might not be found guilty under the new definition.

His bill would give those offenders a chance to petition a judge to lift their sex offender label.

Senate Chooses Fulcher as Leader after McGee Exit

BOISE • Idaho Republican senators chose Russ Fulcher in closed session as majority caucus chairman to replace former Sen. John McGee, who quit last week amid sexual harassment allegations from a young female staffer.

The 27 Senate GOP members chose Fulcher, R-Meridian, on Wednesday, hoping to put what's become a painful issue for the chamber's majority behind them as quickly as possible.

Fulcher actually held the No. 4 Senate post until last year, but lost it when he unsuccessfully campaigned for the Senate president pro tem post.

Idaho Utilities to Senate: Give Us Energy Credits

BOISE • Idaho utilities began what's likely a tough legislative fight to force small alternative power projects to hand over their renewable energy credits.

Idaho Power Co., Avista Corp. and Rocky Mountain Power on Wednesday began pushing lawmakers on the Senate State Affairs Committee to award them these so-called "green tags" that result when they buy renewable projects' electricity.

Currently, alternative power developers that include agricultural giants Simplot Co. and Cargill can keep the credits, which are worth up to $1 million annually when they're sold to utilities in states with renewable portfolio standards that Idaho doesn't have.

Developers say the credits sometimes make the difference in their small projects' economic viability.

Bill Marking IEA Milestone Put on Fast Track

BOISE • Legislation recognizing the 120th year of the Idaho Education Association is being fast-tracked in the Idaho House.

The House Education Committee voted Wednesday to introduce the measure marking the March 3 milestone for the statewide teachers union. The committee bypassed a hearing on the measure, sending it onto the full House for consideration.

Democratic Rep. Shirley Ringo, a retired teacher from Moscow, brought the bill to the committee on behalf of the IEA. Ringo recalled how the group was formed in 1892, after then State Superintendent of Public Instruction Judge J.E. Harroun called for the teachers of the state to organize a permanent association.

The IEA now has 12,000 members.

Man Turns Self in On Charge of Embezzlement

IDAHO FALLS • An Idaho Falls man faces a felony charge after prosecutors allege he embezzled more than half-a-million dollars from a business while he worked as its chief financial officer.

Police say 51-year-old Stanley William Mills turned himself in Tuesday and was arrested at the Bonneville County jail on a charge of felony grand theft.

The warrant for Mills' arrest stemmed from an investigation into the alleged embezzlement of more than $550,000 from Environmental Management Inc. between 2002 and 2008.

Company officials contacted police last June after discovering the alleged theft.

Bill Could Force Idaho to Sell Storage Business

BOISE • House lawmakers' unease with an endowment trust-owned storage business in Boise shined through in a 15-1 committee vote that could force the state Department of Lands to sell the operation.

The Resources Committee voted overwhelmingly Wednesday for the measure requiring the Land Board to sell or lease all improvements on endowment-owned ground, and sell all business operations.

In August 2010, the Land Board's purchase of Affordable Self Storage in Boise drew free-market advocates' fiery critique.

They argued the endowment trust that benefits public schools was encroaching on the private sector by buying a business, rather than merely grazing, timber or commercial buildings, like it's owned for a century.

$8,000 in Drugs Taken from Driggs Pharmacy

DRIGGS • The Teton County Sheriff's Office is seeking help in identifying whoever is responsible for taking narcotic painkillers and stimulants from a pharmacy in southeastern Idaho.

Deputies tell KIFI-TV nearly $8,000 worth of drugs were taken from Corner Drug in Driggs at about 6 a.m. Friday. Officers responding to an alarm found a door to an adjoining business open and discovered a large amount of prescription narcotics were missing along with the stimulant Ritalin.

Surveillance footage shows a suspect wearing a dark hooded sweat shirt, sweat pants, ski mask and gloves.

Leap Day Splits Boise Twins' 21st Birthdays

BY PATRICK ORR
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Adam Filicetti might have a unique job today — designated driver for his twin brother, Nick.

That job will last just one day — Feb. 29, 2012.

That's because Nick is 21. Adam is not. He won't be 21 until March 1.

Nick, you see, was born at 11:49 p.m. on Feb. 28, 1991. Adam was born at 12:04 a.m. March 1, 1991.

It's Adam's bad luck that this rite-of-passage birthday happens to fall on a leap year.

In the past, the Filicetti family tried to have extra fun on Feb. 29 — kind of like a three-day birthday block. And this year, Nick plans to have a little extra fun himself, with an extra day to take advantage of the older-brother psychology stuff.

"I'm definitely going to make sure he knows that — I'm studying hard right now so I can go out tonight and make him drive, or at least make him pick me up," Nick Filicetti said Tuesday afternoon. "In junior high, I used to do stuff like call him 'little bro' or 'baby brother,' which is fun because he has always been a little bigger than me. I am going to have some fun with this."

Adam Filicetti has a slightly different perspective on Feb. 29, 2102.

"Everyone else just thinks it's hilarious. ... It's mostly my parents that are giving us such a hard time over it, but it's not that big of a deal," Adam said Tuesday, taking a break from studying for midsemester tests at BSU, where both brothers go to school. "I've known it's been coming for a long time now. I just have to wait an extra day."

Besides, he said, Nick has two tests. "So I doubt he will be doing much celebrating until that is over, anyway," Adam said.

IDAHO STATESMAN • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boise twins Nick and Adam Filicetti were born 15 minutes apart at midnight on Feb. 28 and March 1, 1991. Nick gets to celebrate his 21st birthday a full day before his younger brother this leap year.

Most leap year birthday stories are about how those lucky — unlucky? — few get to celebrate their birthday just every fourth year. But the Filicettis have a leap-day twist to their birthday without either being born on leap day.

They were never going to be Dubblemint-type twins.

"We had twin babysitters, and they said the worst thing about being twins is that they didn't have their own birthdays," said father, Joe Filicetti, a Boise lawyer. "Our boys were born about 15 minutes apart, on different days, so we have been able to celebrate those birthdays."

Adam and Nick are fraternal twins who "don't even look related," Adam said. They have different color hair and eyes. They are not the same size. They are close and hung out with the same friends in school, but have different interests.

Adam is majoring in biology and eventually wants to go to medical school. He said he had enough skiing accidents in his youth to get him interested in a career in medicine, possibly as a surgeon. Nick is an international business major with an emphasis on China. His plan is to pursue a master's of business administration, with the goal of eventually moving to China.

Nick's plan for Wednesday is simple — have a little bit of fun at his younger brother's expense.

"We are complete opposites. I am more laid back. He is more aggressive, which is great because he is so much easier to (irritate)," Nick said. "I figure this is the only day I can do this, so why not?"

Spokane Police Officer Fired after Woman's 911 Call

SPOKESMAN-REVIEW

SPOKANE • A senior Spokane police officer has been fired for misusing city equipment to obtain the home address of a woman he met at a bar.

Alan D. Edwards, 47, had recently returned to the police force from an unrelated suspension when the new complaint was lodged, this time after a woman called 911 in the pre-dawn hours of Dec. 16 reporting someone at her door.

It turned out to be Edwards, whom she'd met several hours earlier while at the Sullivan Scoreboard tavern in Spokane Valley.

Edwards, who was off duty, contacted an on-duty officer and said he was investigating a theft and needed the woman's address. He told the officer, whose name has not been released, he was at a bar when the woman stole his friend's credit card. But police say Edwards was not investigating a crime; he simply wanted information about the woman for personal purposes. He also identified himself as an officer to the woman while at the bar, police say.

"At no time did you advise the Officer that this information was for your own use and not for a legitimate law enforcement purpose," according to a termination letter sent Wednesday to Edwards by Interim Police Chief Scott Stephens. "After you obtained the information, you went to the woman's home at 3:00 a.m. on December 16, 2011 to make contact with her."

Edwards, a 21-year veteran who is married, is fired effective today.

"We...must hold our officers to a higher standard than the behavior exhibited," Stephens said in a prepared statement. "It is our priority to show citizens of Spokane that this behavior will not be tolerated."

"We didn't win by a lot, but we won by enough."

Mitt Romney to cheering supporters after a hard-won, home state triumph in the Michigan primary

Leave Afghanistan Now

Most wars have a turning point that either signals the road to victory or the ditch of defeat. In Vietnam, the 1968 Tet Offensive by communist troops against South Vietnamese and American forces and their allies is regarded as the turning point in that conflict. Though communist forces suffered heavy losses, which would normally define defeat, CBS News anchor Walter Cronkite and others in the U.S. media portrayed the operation as an allied loss, thus encouraging not only the anti-war movement, but North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops who believed all they had to do was hang on until America grew tired of the war and quit.

Since the Obama administration appears to care more about not offending those Afghans who want to kill Americans and since it has announced the deadline for the withdrawal of surge-level troops in Afghanistan for later this year, despite the fact that they have stymied the efforts of Taliban insurgents to destabilize the country, maybe it's time to pull all U.S. forces out and leave our puppet, Hamid Karzai, to his fate.

The latest affront comes courtesy of the burning of Korans by U.S. soldiers on a military base near Kabul. Military officials maintain the Korans were being used by imprisoned jihadists to pass messages to other prisoners and were confiscated and destroyed. A spokesman for the NATO-led force said the troops, "...should have known to check with cultural advisers to determine how to dispose of religious material properly." For this unintended action, however, Karzai wants the soldiers to be put on trial and has asked NATO commanders to allow it. If they do, they will have disgraced their uniform.

Does writing in a Koran desecrate it? One might expect it would, but the outrage is over the burning, not the writing. More than 1,700 Americans have died in and around Afghanistan and more than 14,000 have been wounded since the United States invaded shortly after Sept. 11, 2001. And this is the thanks we get? How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless puppet.

When do jihadists apologize for mass murder or religious persecution? Two years ago in Rasht, Iran, Youcef Nadarkhani, a Christian pastor who converted from Islam, was arrested on charges of apostasy. He has been sentenced to hang for his religious conversion. Anyone hear any apologies from "moderate" Muslims about that, much less attempts to shame the ayatollahs, or label them apostates?

The New York Times reported recently that President Obama's three-page apology letter to President Karzai contained these sentences: "I wish to express my deep regret for the reported incident. I extend to you and the Afghan people my sincere apologies." This will only serve as further evidence to our enemies in Afghanistan of America's weakness and lack of resolve in what is likely to be a very long and global war. American impatience, fatigue and a desire not to offend, does not bode well for an American victory or for Afghan liberation. No one worried about offending our enemies during World War II. That's why the forces for good won.

Can Afghanistan be stabilized so as not to pose a threat to America and American interests? Probably not, if the surge forces pull out on schedule and America continues to fight under restrictive and self-imposed rules of war while the enemy does not.

So what's the point? Are we to stay only until after the election so President Obama won't be asked, "Who lost Afghanistan?" If our troops are coming out anyway and if the administration can't define victory, or commit the resources necessary to achieve it, waiting longer only ensures more casualties. As with Vietnam, that is a waste of blood and treasure. Ask the ghosts of the more than 58,000 fallen whose names appear on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall in Washington, or the ghosts of the politicians who are responsible for putting them in their graves.

Welfare Reform Worked

Peter H. Schuck
and Ron Haskins

Los Angeles Times

The primary election campaign has intensified a justified concern about inequality in America: People at the top are rising much faster than everyone else. Even low-income Americans consider relatively high levels of inequality acceptable if they have a decent opportunity to improve their condition. But because they may work fewer hours and at stagnant wages, their gains are very limited.

Among the poor, surprisingly, never-married mothers have gained the most in recent decades. Their story shows the best way to reduce poverty and inequality: by encouraging individuals to work more and by supplementing their earnings with tax credits, child-care subsidies and other benefits for low-income working parents.

Until the mid-1990s, never-married mothers seldom worked outside the home, had poverty rates of over 60 percent and were at least five times more likely than married-couple families to be poor. Then in 1996, congressional Republicans and President Bill Clinton collaborated on a welfare reform law requiring adults on welfare, including never-married mothers, to work.

When Clinton signed the law, many of his strongest political supporters reviled him for entering into "a pact with the devil." They predicted that poor women and their children deprived of welfare would die in the streets. Any employment gains, they insisted, would vanish in the first economic downturn.

The data refute these dire predictions. In fact, according to Census Bureau data, between 1996 and 2000, the percentage of never-married mothers in jobs increased by about a third (to 66 percent), while the poverty rate for these mothers and their children declined by about a third (to 40 percent). For the poorest of the poor, this large an improvement based on their own efforts was unprecedented. Since then, two recessions have reduced these gains somewhat; their employment rate is down to 58.7 percent (still better than for women generally) and their poverty rate is up to 49.3 percent.

Yet even in the worst recession since the Depression, more are employed and they are less poor than they were before the 1996 law. In fact, researchers Bruce Meyer of the University of Chicago and James Sullivan of Notre Dame have found that if all the work-based benefits given to low-income workers were included — such benefits are mostly ignored by the official poverty measure — the incomes of these mothers and children would be even higher and their poverty rate even lower.

The reasons for this policy success are clear, suggesting some lessons for the future. The 1996 law created strong incentives, both positive and negative, for the most uneducated, untrained and unpromising welfare recipients to join the workforce. As shown by their high employment rates, poor mothers responded to these incentives even more resourcefully than most policymakers had expected despite their often chaotic domestic circumstances. The federal law meshed well with many experimental state and local welfare-to-work programs, helping states pay for job search and readiness, health insurance, child care and other vital work support services.

Most politicians did not cave in to the intentionally inflammatory "dying in the streets" rhetoric; instead, they figured that the program could hardly be worse than the status quo of welfare dependency and that many of the poorest of the poor would end up better off.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Romney Is the One

Rick Santorum complained about the federal land of Idaho. Santorum wants to sell off the acreage of Idaho. I wonder who Santorum had in mind. There's a lot of history in Idaho deserts. There is a lot of wagon wheel trails in the desert. My grandfather had a freight wagon business in Silver City. They called it teaming back then; they had two freight wagons and one passenger's coach with a six-up team of horses. You can still see the wagon wheel tracks today in the desert. I'm just one who lives here, an Idaho woman.

I think national forests of Idaho are great, too. I wish we could go back to logging again to create jobs so we can buy some lumber from Idaho, not all from Canada. I like Canada, but I love Idaho. The Idaho houses need the lumber to build.

Rick Santorum's speech about people's beliefs, faith and religious groups was about who is a Christian or who isn't. Is her or her religion important?

Here are questions of what if:

What if you are involved in an accident on the highway? A policeman reaches out his hand to help you, and you say, wait, what is your religion?

What if your house is on fire? The fire department comes to help you to put out the fire, and you say, wait, what is your religion?

What if you had an accident and broke your arm and the doctor was going to fix it and you say, what is your religion?

Idaho has people that can handle accidents. I would reach out for their hand if I need help. No questions asked.

America is made up of many different religions and faith.

My vote is for a man that would help build America and keep it safe. Mitt Romney for president.

Good Grade Behavior?

For the past 25 years, I have enjoyed walking the Canyon Springs Grade. As David Clark pointed out in his recent letter of Feb. 23, "There has been a large increase in the number of pedestrians using the grade for exercise." When I drive down the grade during the daytime, it is clear to see why Mr. Clark described it as an obstacle course. Many of the pedestrians walk three to four abreast (walkie-talkies). Others try to control three to four small dogs (ankle biters). Still others listening to their music would not be able to hear a dump truck or its horn if it were right behind them.

I walk the grade most mornings from 5:30 to 7 a.m. During the winter months, I and other walkers, wearing reflective vests and lights, walk or run in a single file. Many of the drivers we see on their way to work at the golf course or the treatment plant we know on a first-name basis. Most of us try to be respectful and conscientious of our surroundings.

Losing access to this amazing hill would be a great loss to those who use it. I would ask our city leaders to please consider pedestrian access from 3 to 7 a.m. April through September, with complete access the rest of the year. These hours avoid the heavy traffic heading for the golf course, park and zip line.

Filer Mennonite Church Hosts Hunger Talk

FILER • The Filer Mennonite Church will host Angela Boss from the Foods Resource Bank, today at 7 p.m. at the church, 109 Fifth St.

Boss will explain the agricultural work Foods Resource Bank supports overseas and how people in United States can get involved.

Foods Resource Bank, a non-profit organization that began in 1990, works to "grow lasting solutions to hunger" by raising money to support agricultural development overseas. It currently supports 55 programs in 32 countries in Africa, Asia, Central America, South America, the Caribbean, Eastern Europe and the Middle East. Support comes from volunteers who participate in 200-plus U.S. projects to raise money.

Hunger affects about a billion people worldwide, and 75 percent of that billion are rural people who rely mainly on agriculture to support them. Foods Resource Bank addresses their needs through long-term grassroots agricultural development. These programs build on the existing capacity, knowledge and assets of the community to improve its agriculture, which in turn improves the livelihoods of the participants. Success is being achieved through farming, which improves not only food security but also allows families to send more children to school, to buy medicine and supplies.

Mentors — CSI Office on Aging's Mentoring Children of Prisoners program needs volunteers to mentor children who have a parent in prison. Mentors must undergo a background check and be willing to mentor a child for a minimum of four hours each month for one year. # Man Pleads Guilty to Disturbing Peace in House Wrecking

SANDPOINT (AP) • A northern Idaho man who tried to tear down a rental home while a woman and two children were inside has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor disturbing the peace.

Paul Fagerlie Finman, 56, reached a plea agreement Monday with prosecutors after the family declined to testify against him.

Finman was ordered to serve 180 days in jail, though the judge suspended all but two days of the sentence and gave him credit for 48 hours already served. He was ordered to pay more than $400 in fines and court costs.

Prosecutors initially charged Finman with three counts of felony assault for using a tractor to start dismantling the rental house on his property in October 2010. He pleaded not guilty, and his case was scheduled to go to trial this week in 1st District Court.

Finman claimed the family had been evicted from the home and he didn't know anyone was still in the house when he started tearing it down Oct. 8, 2010. He said the family had told him they would move by Sept. 30, 2010.

"It was a very bizarre situation," Finman told the Bonner County Daily Bee.

A judge last year denied a motion seeking to dismiss the case, noting that an eviction order gave the family until Oct. 31, 2010, to leave the home.

A deputy testified during a preliminary hearing that Finman acknowledged he had heard voices from inside the home after he threw a rock through a sliding glass door and it shattered. Finman still proceeded with the demolition, authorities said.

No one was injured during the attempted demolition.

As part of the plea agreement, prosecutors dismissed two of the felony charges against Finman and amended a third to a misdemeanor. Finman's conduct was "reckless, criminal and inappropriate" but no one suffered injuries as a result, said Bonner County prosecutor Louis Marshall.

"They were simply scared," Marshall said.

Alexander Duncan Campbell refused to allow his wife or children to testify because he does not recognize the legitimacy of Idaho's government, Marshall said. Campbell is wanted in Kootenai and Nez Perce counties on arrest warrants stemming from alleged vehicle and weapons violations.

The family's whereabouts were unknown at the time of Finman's hearing earlier this week, authorities said.

Wolf Population Up 15 Percent in Montana

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • The number of wolves in Montana increased by at least 87 last year despite the state's efforts to reduce the population with an extended hunting season.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks said Wednesday that 653 wolves were counted at the end of the year, a population increase of about 15 percent from 2010.

FWP had authorized a quota of 220 wolves in the first hunt since Congress passed legislation last year removing endangered species protections for the gray wolf in the Northern Rocky Mountains except for Wyoming.

The agency had aimed to reduce the population to 425 animals with the hunting season. But only 75 percent of the quota was filled and fewer wolves were killed last year than in 2010 in response to livestock predation.

Snow Box Derby Planned Saturday

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • Boys and girls, men and women: Start your cardboard.

The Hailey Kiwanis Club is hosting the annual Snow Box Derby at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Rotarun Ski Hill three miles west of Hailey.

Adults and children alike are invited to compete for medals awarded for fastest, most creative and most inspiring for the 11th annual derby, said Cathy Tyson-Foster, spokesperson for the event.

Past creations have included pirate ships, unidentified flying objects, corn dogs, dinosaurs, race cars, tanks and even giant cardboard toilets.

The event can be not only fun but educational. Just take a note from Belinda Forgeon, whose sons Travis and Jesse made a Red Baron.

“Not only did we have to figure out the design for it but we had to go on the Internet to find the symbols to paint on the Red Baron’s wings,” she said.

Construction material is limited to cardboard, paint, tape and glue, said Eric Wesley, a member of the Rotarun staff. Sledders must go feet first and wear helmets for safety purposes.

The derby is open to anyone 5 years and older. Entry fee is $10 per individual or $25 per business. Registration will be at Rotarun Ski Area from 9:30 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. the day of the race.

Spectators are welcome, as well.

The ski area is at 25 Rodeo Drive just off of Croy Creek Road. To get there, turn west on Bullion Street in Hailey and follow this across the bridge over the Big Wood River.

Annual ski event aims to draw families and their dogs to Sun Valley this weekend.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • It’ll be a three-ring circus on Sunday when the Animal Shelter of the Wood River Valley holds its 27th annual Happy Howlin’ Paw’n Pole.

Adults and kids alike are invited to dress themselves and their hounds up in circus garb and participate in short cross-country ski and snowshoe races with their leashed dogs, as well as best costume and silly pet trick contests.

The event starts at 10 a.m. at the Sun Valley Gun Club on Sun Valley Road just past the Sun Valley golf course.

Those without dogs are welcome to partner up with a shelter dog, said Brooke Bonner, a volunteer with the shelter.

Ketchum resident Doran Key hasn’t missed a single Paw n’ Pole. “It’s the most fun a dog can have with his or her owner!” she said.

“It’s an event where expert ski racers and children both can have a good time,” echoed Nancy Smith. “No one takes themselves seriously. They’re all in costume and having a good time.”

Race entry fees are $5 for children, $10 for adults and $20 for families. Entry fees include lunch and a raffle ticket that will be entered into a drawing for a 2012 North Valley Trails pass.

Proceeds benefit the Animal Shelter, the first “no kill” shelter in Idaho. The shelter served more than 1,200 animals during 2011, said Bonner.

For information, call the Shelter at 788-4351.

Can you handle a harpoon? Primitive skills classes in Twin Falls can help you get in touch with your inner survivalist.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • “If carp are farther away you’ll need to throw it,” said Joey Heck, standing on the bank of a small stream on the College of Southern Idaho campus, a harpoon in his hands. “Otherwise you’ll...”

Heck jabbed the end of the harpoon into the water where it made a splash. He didn’t catch any fish — there weren’t any — but was demonstrating how to use a harpoon in the wild, like the area’s Native Americans used to do.

Heck, exhibits manager at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, on Saturday will teach the first of eight classes aimed to get people in touch with their inner survivalists. The harpoon segment, “Salmon Jabbin’ 101,” is part of the lineup of three primitive-fishing classes.

The first class Saturday will teach students how to make fish traps and weirs.

“Basically, we’ll be making a replica of a willow fish trap found here locally and fish traps from around the region and world, even,” Heck said. What students learn in class is more art and survival tactic than practical skill.

“You have to be super careful with traps because the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has lots of regulations with trapping,” he said. (Find trapping information on page 44 of the 2011-12 Fishing Rules Brochure or online at fishandgame.idaho.gov/public/fish/rules/generalFish-Info.pdf)

In other classes, students will learn how to build their own fishing kits using native plants, local stones and animal parts; how to make long darts; and how to build fire.

So can you actually do this stuff on Idaho’s public lands?

“The bottom line is, anything that involves taking a fish out of the wild ... you must have a fishing license and are subject to all the rules associated with it,” said Gary Hompland, regional conservation officer for Fish and Game.

Harpooning for non-game fish, such as carp, and for bullfrogs is allowed; and for game fish at times during fish salvage, Hompland said. Crawfish can be trapped, but there are some restrictions, so check with Fish and Game first. (Find spear fishing information on page 43 of Fish and Game’s fishing brochure or at fishandgame.idaho.gov/public/fish/rules/generalFish-Info.pdf)

Throwing darts and spearing big game animals is not allowed, Hompland said. Fish and Game has had requests to make spear hunting legal, he said, but it’s something the department hasn’t looked at seriously.

“Survival is a little different situation than fishing (or hunting) for sport,” he said. “But to use those techniques recreationally is not allowed.”

Just the same, the classes are informative and fun, Heck said.

In case you’re ever in survival mode, Heck teaches how to throw a long dart using an atlatl — a primitive handheld dart thrower used to achieve greater velocity and distance.

Standing on a grassy hill Feb. 24 near the Herrett Center, Heck gently thrust the atlatl above his head, pushing the long dart into the air. It sailed across the field for several yards before embedding itself in the

There’s Still Time for Late-winter Fun

As I look out a window at the Times-News on Wednesday morning, I see snow falling in a frenzy.

It reminds me that winter isn’t over yet. There’s still time to hit the slopes.

Read Karen Bossick’s stories in today’s Outdoors section for an overview of the many things planned this weekend in Sun Valley. Among them, you’ll have the chance to dress your pooch in costume for a ski run. What’s more fun than that?

And look southward to find some fun at Pomerelle Mountain Resort. On Saturday, Pomerelle will host its popular Hot Iron Night Rail Jam. Purchase tickets, which cost $15 (plus a $10 bib fee), at the ticket office that day from 2 to 5 p.m. Practice runs begin at 4:30 p.m., with competition at 6 p.m. It’s the first of several events planned at the mountain in March.

On March 6 and 8, bring in two cans of food and get a Pomerelle lift ticket for $5. Besides getting a discount, it’s for a good cause: Food goes to the Helping Hands pantry in Burley.

A slope-style competition will begin at noon March 10. Register that day from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Pomerelle lodge. As with the rail jam, tickets cost $15 plus a bib fee.

Lastly, don’t forget Ladies Nights every Tuesday in March. For $95, ladies get four full-day lift tickets, four 90-minute ski/snowboard lessons tailored to your ability, and four lunches. For information, call Pomerelle at 673-5599.

As I glance outside again, I see the snowfall slowing. But as the week crawls toward the weekend, I can tell that the fun is just beginning. See you on the slopes!

Gun Maintenance Tools of the Trade

In my last column, I made the suggestion that with the proper tools and training, anyone could learn to clean and maintain their firearms to provide several lifetimes of service.

Follow these simple tips and suggestions today and years from now your descendants could be entering the game fields with your current pride and joy tucked into the crock of their arm.

Let's begin. The first order of business, if you're unfamiliar with the inner workings of your firearm, is to carefully review the disassembly/assembly resources we discussed previously. Next, arrange the appropriate tools, cleaning chemicals, and several loose parts bins on a large working surface in a well-lighted and ventilated work space.

Before the first screw is loosened or bottle of solvent opened, I shield my eyes from the inevitable wayward spritz or splashes of chemical cleansers with a pair of clear safety glasses. Because most of our popular action/bore cleaners are serious skin irritants, my hands and upper arms are always protected by a pair of medium-weight latex gloves. They provide ample dexterity and won't tear through on a sharp screw head, spring or action surface.

Rich Simpson
Shooting The Bull

The mechanic's mantra — "the right tool for the right job" — certainly holds true here. If you've ever permanently damaged a delicate screw head or watched helplessly as your undersized screwdriver carved a lightning bolt scratch into your gun's receiver, you'll understand the importance of having a set of true gunsmithing screwdrivers, punches and wrenches.

An adjustable torque screwdriver has often proven invaluable for locking internal and external action screws in place, joining actions to stocks, and buttoning down scope mounts and rings. Though you can find every smithing tool imaginable at brownells.com, I'm partial to Midway USA's excellent line of Wheeler Engineering tools. For servicing shotguns, which are the primary focus of this article, I prefer stout single piece cleaning rods. They flex less than the jointed varieties and won't scratch the bore as you run them back and forth under load.

Here's a nifty trick: to remove really stubborn fouling, such as plastic wad buildup in the chamber's forcing cone and choke tubes, attach the forward section of a jointed cleaning rod to a hand-held power drill and spin your troubles away. While conventional bronze bristle brushes continue to do a fine job scrubbing loose fouling from the barrel, I've found shotgun patch jags to be far superior to the slotted tips for effectively pushing all the fouling and residue from the bore.

Sporting goods stores offer an astounding variety of bore and action cleaning chemicals and, truthfully, all of them serve well for casual and detailed cleaning chores. I happen to prefer Gun Slick products, but if you are sensitive to harsh or toxic chemicals, you might want to give MPro-7 cleaners and CLP lubricants a try.

In my next column, I'll have you peek over my shoulder as I refurbish and pattern my father's trusty Ithaca 37 for the upcoming turkey season.

Good shooting!

pierced the metal armor of a warrior.

Heck handed over the atlatl, showing me how to secure a dart and then throw it.

"Don't be surprised if, when you throw it, you also throw the atlatl," he said. "Most people do on their first try."

I took aim and released the dart — but the atlatl remained in my hand.

"Look at that, you're a natural," Heck said.

Maybe not. My dart went but a few yards, while Heck's had sailed across the grassy landscape.

Times-News photographer Ashley Smith and I also tried our hands at using the harpoon. We both caught a plastic soda bottle floating in the stream before throwing it into a recycling bin.

Back inside the building, Heck taught me how to make twine-like cordage using the natural fibers of dogbane plants.

All of the materials used to make fishing tackle in class are found locally, he said.

Heck said last year's classes drew many different people — young people and senior citizens, folks interested in the arts and outdoors buffs. Those younger than 12 years must be accompanied by a parent or guardian, he said.

Visitors to Rockies Parks Spend More Than $1B

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Recreation in the Rocky Mountains' national parks has provided a boon to their surrounding communities as the economy struggles to recover from recession, with visitors spending $1 billion in the region's four biggest parks in 2010, a new study found.

More than 11 million people who visited Yellowstone, Grand Teton, Rocky Mountain and Glacier national parks also supported 15,412 jobs, according to the study released Tuesday by the National Park Service.

The biggest beneficiaries were gateway towns in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho within 60 miles of Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks. Those parks drew 6.3 million visitors who spent $758 million in 2010.

"We're not always in a position to really point to some solid figures of that economic impact," Yellowstone spokesman Al Nash told the Bozeman Daily Chronicle. "(But) when you look at these kinds of figures and realize that every visitor means over $90 to the area economy, it reinforces the significant role that visitors to the park play."

The study was conducted by a Michigan State University researcher for the park service and analyzed 2010 economic data from 394 parks across the country. It found that nationwide, 281 million visitors spent $12 billion in so-called "local gateway regions" within about 60 miles of the parks.

A little more than half of that spending went toward lodging and meals and 19 percent toward gas and local transportation. The rest went to retail spending, amusements and groceries.

Those numbers were not broken down by park, but Chuck Curtis, who owns four businesses near Yellowstone's northern entrance at Gardiner, Mont., said they sound about right for Yellowstone.

He estimates that park visitors make up about 70 percent of his business.

"Everybody's very busy in the summertime," Curtis said. "That's when you make your living."

The study found that visitors to all national park units — which includes the parks and historic and national landmarks — spent a total of $610.6 million in Wyoming; $292.7 million in Colorado; and $291.4 million in Montana.

F&G Commission Increases Steelhead Limits in Upper Salmon

SALMON • The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has increased the bag limits for steelhead in part of the upper Salmon River, effective immediately.

The daily limit is six steelhead, 18 in possession and 40 for the spring 2012 steelhead season. The increase affects river sections 15 through 19 on the upper Salmon River from Long Tom Creek — about three-quarters of mile upstream of the Middle Fork Salmon River — to a posted boundary about 100 yards downstream of the Sawtooth Hatchery.

All other seasons and rules remain unchanged.

Steelhead anglers must have a valid 2012 Idaho fishing license and steelhead permit. Steelhead anglers may use only barbless hooks, and may keep only steelhead marked with a clipped adipose fin. All other steelhead must be released unharmed.

Consult 2011-2012 fishing rules brochure for exceptions and special restrictions. For more information on steelhead fishing in Idaho, fishandgame.idaho.gov.

Montana Approves Bison Tolerance Zone Expansion

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Montana officials have approved a plan to expand so-called bison tolerance zones north of Yellowstone National Park by 75,000 acres for migrating animals in search of food.

Fish, Wildlife and Parks and the Montana Department of Livestock issued a joint decision Tuesday approving adjustments to the Interagency Bison Management Plan.

The areas where bison will be allowed to wander will be expanded to the mountain ridges between the Paradise Valley and the Gardiner Basin on the east side of the Yellowstone River. The boundary to the west of the Yellowstone will be the ridgeline between the Tom Miner Basin and the Gardiner Basin.

The agencies say they hope the expansion will decrease the need for hazing stray bison because the animals will seek out the new suitable habitat.

A Fond Farewell to 'Big Mike'

I mentioned a couple of weeks ago that this year could be considered the dawn of a new era for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. Several Magic Valley conservation officers in the Baby Boomer generation will be retiring and moving on to new adventures.

District Conservation Officer Mike Stoddard will be retiring this month after 29 years as the conservation officer field supervisor in Twin Falls.

Mike Stoddard began his career earlier than most department employees. During his teenage years in Twin Falls, Mike was a member of the Fish and Game-sponsored Boy Scout Explorer Post. Under the tutelage of wildlife research biologist and Explorer Post leader Robert Autenrieth, Mike worked on several Fish and Game research projects, mostly centered on sage grouse.

As a conservation officer, Mike has been a POST-certified law enforcement firearms instructor and worked for a number of years as a field training officer, helping to train new conservation officers. During his career as a field supervisor in Twin Falls, Mike helped guide and develop the careers of more than 10 new conservation officers in the Magic Valley region.

One of Mike's most notable contributions is his excellent public service. Whenever someone needed help, whether from the Twin Falls County Fair to youth fishing clinics, Mike volunteered. He also was active with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office's search and rescue and back-country or rural operations.

Gary Hompland
Ask the Officer

Mike worked closely with Sawtooth National Forest and Shoshone District BLM staff. His assistance varied from law enforcement to help with training and resource monitoring. In one instance, Mike's involvement resulted in him breaking a leg and getting a helicopter ride out of the South Hills.

Mike's personal mission involved active support for the National Wildlife Turkey Federation. In 2006 he was selected as the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Conservation Officer of the Year and represented Idaho at the NWT National convention in Memphis. As the current president of the Idaho State Chapter, Mike has assisted the department and turkey hunters in Idaho with numerous turkey habitat and trapping and relocation projects. He also has assisted the local chapter, the South Hills Strutters, with several youth-mentored hunting events and youth fishing clinics.

Mike has been known to be a relentless investigator striving for the truth. He also has a soft spot for young hunters and anglers.

Sportsmen owe Mike a debt of gratitude for his efforts to protect Idaho's most valuable resources. Conservation officers like Mike help remind us of how important it is to maintain a conservation ethic.

Mike's wisdom, experience and guidance will be missed in the Magic Valley. The desert and South Hills will seem eerily empty without "Big Mike," its long-time protector.

Rock climbing classes a hit with I.F. youngsters

BY RACHEL EATON

Post Register

IDAHO FALLS • Winter may not be ideal for rock climbing, but that didn't stop these seven determined youngsters.

They recently completed a six-week rock climbing class with instructor Jerry Painter at the YMCA's Rock Climbing Gym. Painter is also an employee with the Post Register.

Most of the children had busy schedules but still managed to find time for the class.

"One of the biggest challenges to getting kids to take up climbing is that they are involved in so many other things like soccer, ballet, swimming, baseball or whatever," Painter said. "I realize that parents want to expose kids to a bit of everything, but this is an activity that they can do their entire life."

Student Erin Smith, 9, is an avid bicyclist, snow skier, swimmer and soccer player. She finished her first rock climbing class with Painter and said she'd make time to continue this sport, too.

During class, assistant instructor Abby Bohrer, 15, taught students to use their legs more than their arms, stick their feet on a hold and commit to every rock they grab.

"I learned not to hang-dog — it's when you just sit around and do nothing," Erin said. "It's OK to just think about the run, but it's really not OK to just sit there. If you hang-on to the wall too long, your hands get tired and you fall."

Erin's favorite walls are the most difficult ones, including an upside-down bowl-shaped structure.

Over the weeks of training, she's come up with her own trick to climb difficult and scary walls quicker.

"When I get really high, I just pretend like a chocolate cake or something is waiting for me at the top," she said.

Student Emily Stuart, 10, worked rock climbing into her busy schedule, which includes hockey, soccer, ballet, tennis and piano lessons.

For Emily, rock climbing isn't only an athletic hobby

— it's mind-stimulating.

"It's hard when you're in a tough spot and there's a bunch of not-as-easy holds and you have to choose a smaller hold that's not as good," she said.

Flag-football player and climbing student Nathan Franck, 8, sometimes gets in tough, scary spots when he climbs, he said. In those situations, Painter will climb alongside him upside-down and help Franck know where to grab next.

"I think I'm brave about doing rock climbing," Nathan said.

Rock climbing was the first sport and class Jeni Williams, 9, ever took. She said it was physically difficult, but she pushed through.

"It's fun to have a feeling when you get to the top and your like 'Yes, I did it,'" she said. "You get home and you're like 'Wow, I'm really glad I did that! It was worth it."

Return of Salmon to San Joaquin River Comes at Cost

BY MAREK WARSZAWSKI

McClatchy Newspapers

FRESNO, Calif. • Few people, if any, know the San Joaquin River as well as Louis Moosios.

The 36-year-old fishing guide, whose family owns 400 acres on the Madera County side, has been fishing, boating and swimming in the river since he was a boy.

Piloting his 14-foot aluminum skiff up river, Moosios keeps the 40-horsepower outboard's throttle steady through a series of bends and side channels, and even across a small weir.

"I've snorkeled the entire river from (Freeways) 41 to 99 — that's how you get to know every little turn, every little bush, every big rock and fish hiding spot there is," Moosios says.

Moosios picks me up below Riverside Golf Course, and it's a 10-minute run to one of his favorite spots: a reclaimed gravel quarry connected to the river. We're here to fish and talk about the river restoration, especially aspects of the project that have received scant attention even though they'll affect nearly everyone who uses the river for recreation.

By now, everyone should be aware Chinook salmon are slated to be reintroduced to the San Joaquin, perhaps as soon as this year. And like in other California rivers where salmon have been re-established after a long absence, those fish will either be off limits to anglers or strictly catch and release.

But what seems to be lost in all of this, even though it's spelled out in the Draft Environmental Impact Report, is that the presence of salmon will also mean the end of all trout fishing and, potentially, bass fishing.

No more trout fishing in the San Joaquin? It says so right in Section 3.3 of Chapter 21, which quotes California Fish and Game Commission policy: "Domesticated or nonnative fish species will not be planted, or fisheries based on them will not be developed or maintained, in drainages of salmon waters, where ... they may adversely affect native salmon populations by competing with, preying upon or hybridizing with them."

Think about what that means for a moment.

No more trout plants at Lost Lake Park or North Fork bridge, the two most popular spots on the river.

No more trout derbies at the Fresno County Sportsmen's Club.

Thousands will have to go elsewhere.

The report states that 18,000 anglers use Lost Lake Park every year. What are all those people supposed to do now? Simple, it concludes: They'll just have to go to the Kings River instead.

Even though the report lists the impact on trout fishing as "potentially significant," I'll bet this is the first you've heard of it.

By the time the San Joaquin flows into Fresno, where Moosios and I are spending the afternoon, it becomes a warm-water fishery inhabited by bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish. And, yes, the fishing for those species will be affected as well.

Most of the best bass fishing takes place in reclaimed gravel quarries. But the report states these ponds, and there are many of them, must either be filled in or separated from the river so that juvenile salmon don't get swallowed by predators.

T.F. Temple 'Posthumously Baptized Slain Journalist'

BY RICARDO LOPEZ
Los Angeles Times (MCT)

LOS ANGELES • In yet another public relations embarrassment for the Mormon Church, a Utah researcher has discovered that slain Jewish journalist Daniel Pearl was posthumously baptized last year in a serious breach of church protocol.

According to records, Pearl was baptized "by proxy" last summer in the Twin Falls temple — much to the surprise of his parents, who learned of the event this week.

Twin Falls temple officials were looking into the matter Wednesday evening and could not confirm or deny Pearl's baptism.

Reached by phone, Pearl's mother, Ruth, said she and her husband were dismayed when informed of the ceremony by a reporter from the Boston Globe, which first reported the news. According to the paper, the researcher is Helen Radkey, an excommunicated Mormon who combs through church archives.

"We realize that the Mormon ministers who baptized our son posthumously meant to offer him salvation in the most honorable way they know how," she said in statement. "To them we say: We appreciate your good intentions but rest assured that Danny's soul was redeemed through the life that he lived and the values that he upheld. He lived as a proud Jew, died as a proud Jew and is currently facing his creator as a Jew — blessed, accepted and redeemed."

Pearl, who was raised in Los Angeles, was working as a Wall Street Journal reporter when he was kidnapped and killed by terrorists in Pakistan in 2002.

In a video that his captors forced him to record just before his execution, he professed his faith, saying: "My father's Jewish. My mother's Jewish. I'm Jewish."

His parents later released a book titled "I Am Jewish," which contains a collection of essays by Pearl.

Posthumous baptisms are common in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, generally referred to as the Mormon Church. The purpose of the sacrament is to ensure that ancestors can join church members in the afterlife.

Individual Mormons submit to the church the names of persons they wish to have baptized. Then a baptism is performed "by proxy," meaning another person stands in for the dead.

Names are supposed to be submitted with the permission of family members, said Del Traveller, area spokesman for the church. If Pearl's name ended up at the Twin Falls temple, it could have been because the submission was made elsewhere, processed in Salt Lake City and then sent to Twin Falls to disperse the volume.

The practice has long stirred controversy, leading to a 1995 agreement between Jewish faith leaders and the Mormon Church that was supposed to prevent the baptisms of Holocaust victims.

Church rules stipulate that only direct descendants of the dead can submit their names for the sacrament.

Times-News writer Andrew Weeks contributed to this report.

North Korea Says It Will Halt Nuclear Activities

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • North Korea raised hopes Wednesday for a major easing in nuclear tensions under its youthful new leader, agreeing to suspend uranium enrichment at a key facility and refrain from missile and nuclear tests in exchange for a mountain of critically needed U.S. food aid.

It was only a preliminary step but a necessary one to restart broader six-nation negotiations that would lay down terms for what the North could get in return for abandoning its nuclear weapons program. Pyongyang pulled out of those talks in 2009 and seemingly has viewed the nuclear program as key to the survival of its dynastic, communist regime, now entering its third generation.

But the announcement, just over two months after the death of longtime ruler Kim Jong Il, also opened a door for the secretive government under his untested youngest son, Kim Jong Un, to improve ties with the United States and win critically needed aid and international acceptance.

It also opened the way for international nuclear inspections after years when the North's program went unmonitored.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said the agreement, which was announced at separate but simultaneous statements by the long-time adversaries, was a modest step but also "a reminder that the world is transforming around us."

"We, of course, will be watching closely and judging North Korea's new leaders by their actions," Clinton told a congressional hearing.

Twisters Devastate 2 Small Towns, Kill 12 in Midwest

Scientists say the tornado that blasted Harrisburg, Ill., killing six, was 200 yards wide with winds up to 170 mph.

BY JIM SUHR AND JIM SALTER
Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Ill. • A pre-dawn twister flattened entire blocks of homes in a small Illinois town Wednesday as violent storms ravaged the Midwest and South, killing at least 12 people in three states.

Winds also ripped through the country music mecca of Branson, Mo., damaging some of the city's famous theaters just days before the start of the busy tourist season.

The tornado that blasted Harrisburg in southern Illinois, killing six, was an EF4, the second-highest rating given to twisters based on damage. Scientists said it was 200 yards wide with winds up to 170 mph.

By midday, townspeople in the community of 9,000 were sorting through piles of debris and remembering their dead while the winds still howled around them.

Not long after the storm, Darrell Osman raced to his mother's home, arriving just in time to speak to her before she was taken to a hospital with a head injury, a severe cut to her neck and a broken arm and leg.

"She was conscious. I wouldn't say she was coherent. There were more mumbles than anything," he said. "She knew we were there."

Mary Osman died a short time later. The twister that raked Branson seemed to hopscotch up the city's main roadway, moving from side to side.

As sirens blared, Derrick Washington stepped out of his motel room just long enough to see a greenish-purple sky. Then he heard the twister roar.

"Every time the tornado hit a building, you could see it exploding," he said.

At least 37 people were reported hurt, but most suffered only cuts and bruises. After the start of Branson's peak season in mid-March, up to 60,000 visitors would have been in hotels on any given day.

Just six guests were staying at J.R.'s Motor Inn, and all of them escaped injury by taking refuge in bathtubs. Engineers deemed the building a total loss after the second floor, the roof and all windows were destroyed.

Manager Lori McGauley choked back tears thinking about what might have been.

"We had 25 people booked for next week," McGauley said. "If this happened a week later, we would have lost some people."

At the 530-room downtown Hilton, intense winds sucked furniture away. Hotel workers were able to get all guests to safety.

Looking at the city's main strip, it was difficult to believe there weren't more serious injuries. A small mall was nearly completely demolished. The Legends Theater, the Andy Williams Moon River Theater and the Branson Variety Theater all sustained significant damage.

The Veterans Memorial Museum was in shambles, and a small military jet that sat in front of the museum was blown apart.

Ohio Shooting Suspect Described as 'Fine Person'

BY THOMAS J. SHEERAN AND ANN SANNER
Associated Press

CHARDON, Ohio • The teenager suspected in an Ohio school shooting struggled with a broken family and did poorly in school, then appeared to turn himself around once he was taken in by grandparents and began to attend an alternative school, longtime neighbors and friends said Wednesday.

To a person, they expressed disbelief at how the quiet but friendly boy could now be a suspect in a shooting that left three people dead and appears to have involved a gun that disappeared from his grandfather's barn.

"T.J. was a very fine person," Carl Henderson, a longtime neighbor of the suspect's grandparents, Thomas and Michelle Lane, said Wednesday. "Nice-looking man, very friendly, spoke to you, carried a conversation with you."

The gun, a .22 caliber revolver, was noticed as missing after Monday's shootings and fits the description of the pistol that reportedly was used to kill three students and wound two others at Chardon High School, said Henderson, a retired police officer and former Geauga County sheriff. He said he has spoken to the grandfather, Thomas Lane, about the gun.

The suspect's grandfather believes the gun is the same, "because the gun was there the day before, in the barn," said Henderson, 74, who says he's been friends with the boy's family for nearly 50 years.

A law enforcement official familiar with the investigation said the gun used in the shooting, a Ruger .22-caliber Mark III target pistol, was bought legally in August 2010 from a gun shop in Mentor, Ohio.

The official, who spoke to AP on the condition of anonymity because of the ongoing investigation, said Lane told authorities he stole the gun from his uncle. It wasn't clear Wednesday whether the gun might have been the same one missing from the grandfather's barn. Henderson said he isn't aware of an uncle's involvement with the gun.

Lane, 17, admitted taking a pistol and a knife to the 1,100-student Chardon High and firing 10 shots at a group of students sitting at a cafeteria table, prosecutor David Joyce said.

Singer Davy Jones of The Monkees Dies in Fla. at 66

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) • Davy Jones, the diminutive heart-throb who rocketed to the top of the 1960s music charts by beckoning millions of adoring fans with the catchy refrains of The Monkees, died Wednesday. He was 66.

His publicist, Helen Kensick, confirmed that Jones died of a heart attack near his home in Indiantown. Jones complained of breathing troubles early in the morning and was taken to a hospital where he was pronounced dead, said Rhonda Irons, spokeswoman of the Martin County Sheriff's Office.

Jones' moppish long hair, boyish good looks and his British accent endeared him to legions of screaming young fans after "The Monkees" premiered on NBC in 1966.

Aspirations of Beatles-like fame were never fully achieved, but The Monkees made rock 'n roll history as the band garnered a wide American following with love-struck hits such as "Daydream Believer" and "I'm a Believer" that endure to this day.

DEAR ABBY: For years, I suffered from high blood pressure and diabetes. I never had a clue that they are the two leading causes of kidney failure.

When I attended their free screening through the Kidney Early Evaluation Program (KEEP), I found out that high blood pressure can damage the kidney's filtering units, that diabetes is the No. 1 risk factor for kidney disease and how important it is to keep them both under control.

Tens of millions of Americans are at risk for kidney disease. Won't you please remind your readers again how important it is to be screened? For me it was a lifesaver.

DEAR JERRYDEAN: I'm pleased that my column alerted you to your risk for kidney disease, and that you caught it in time.

Readers, March 8 is World Kidney Day. The National Kidney Foundation is again urging Americans to learn the risk factors for kidney disease and be screened so you can prevent damage to these vital organs.

DEAR ABBY: Someone gave a very inappropriate eulogy for someone my family cares about dearly. Is it worth it to say something to him? "Alton" lost his mother, a really good person who was loved by many, and he attacked her during his eulogy.

Alton shared quite a few details about his mother's life that no one needed to know. But the bottom line is, she was a good person who made some mistakes toward the end of her life.

People are still talking about the eulogy. There were individuals at the service who called him names, and a few walked out in tears.

Is it worth pointing out to an arrogant jerk that his eulogy was appalling and has caused a lot of anger? Should one of us step forward and say something to him, or just chalk it up to "once a jerk, always a jerk"?

DEAR COULDN'T BELIEVE MY EARS IN ARIZONA: I vote no, because I seriously doubt that anything you could say would shame an arrogant, mean jerk into admitting he made a mistake by speaking disrespectfully of his mother at her funeral.

IF MARCH 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your nose won't be far from the grindstone for the next several weeks. In May, be on the lookout for a chance to permanently brighten your life. That is an excellent time to make business decisions or to put financial affairs in order, because you seem to have better judgment when dealing with the outside world of commerce. Stick to friendships this summer — and don't expect a fling to turn into anything permanent. In August, you might be sidetracked by a person or situation that is not what it seems, but by December, your personal guardian angel will help you make a wise decision.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Even the least-important transactions may run smoothly. Expect to receive a helping hand just when you need it from someone who anticipates your needs. Make purchases of items of taste or beauty.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your fair share might last a lifetime. Find ways to show solidarity and support for those who put their money or their time on the line for your benefit. Romantic moments can multiply under these stars.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are smarter than you think. What some people view as evasiveness might work in your favor. In some instances, it is better to escape from a difficult situation instead of facing it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): When you have made your bed, sleep in it. The story of the princess and the pea may bring home a message for you. Too much sensitivity to peer pressure can cause turbulence or misunderstandings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You offer a desirable package just as you are; no plain brown wrapping paper is needed, as you have nothing to hide. It is quite easy for singles to find a congenial partner under these stars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A bed of roses shouldn't have thorns. Add some whimsical decorating touches to your home and turn it into your castle. A relationship matter that has caused doubts or worries will clear up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends and lovers should not be confused. Consider it a privilege to meet new acquaintances or to offer help to a stranger. Group activities, however, could distract you from key one-on-one moments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Groups or organizations can eat up your social calendar. It may be difficult to have some one-on-one time. Someone might prove understanding or intuitively say the perfect thing to put doubts to rest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Bridges can be built. You might finally understand another person's point of view. A financial investment technique that has been fuzzy might come into focus. Extend a firm hand in friendship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Charity begins at home. Acts of kindness can make you feel that you are living on top of a pedestal. Take time to approach others with ideas or heart-to-heart talks. Buy items that must be durable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Beauty lies in the eye of the beholder, so give those eyes something to see. Pay attention to your appearance. Shine your shoes, get a haircut or put together an outfit that tells the world you have arrived.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can never have too much money or too many friends. The problem might be that the friends want too much of your money. The more you share with others, the more you will receive in return.

Braun's Actions Were Despicable

One thing that's always struck me about elite athletes is the great sense of entitlement many of them seem to have.

Tiger Woods certainly had it while cavorting around the world and winning majors by the handful, and Barry Bonds displayed it even as his head swelled up along with his home run count.

And then there's Ryan Braun, whose performance — and, yes, it sure seemed like a performance — before reporters last week in Arizona could be used in future textbooks on the subject. In just a short period of time he reminded everyone that he's the National League MVP and the guy with the new $105 million contract, and to question what he has to say about anything would be foolish.

He declared himself innocent, despite scientific evidence to the contrary. Said the truth was on his side, when there was no evidence of that at all.

Then he threw a poor urine collector under the bus because, well, he was just a poor urine collector and he was the National League MVP and the guy with the megamillion contract.

Well, guess what? The urine collector isn't going to go easy.

Dino Laurenzi Jr. has never been paid a penny to hit a baseball. Dozens of fans don't line up to get his autograph every time he comes out of a big league locker room toting yet another cardboard specimen box with tamper resistant seals. It's something he's done hundreds of times before.

But he's got a reputation to protect, too. A family that, like Braun's, is proud of what he does. A career as a former teacher and athletic trainer and, currently, the director of rehabilitation services at a health care facility.

To infer, as Braun did last week, that Laurenzi did something fishy with the urine sample wasn't just wrong. It was a despicable attempt to divert attention from the sample itself to the collector of the sample. Equally troubling — that it was mentioned when there was no suggestion from anyone, other than Braun, that there was tampering.

And it targeted the wrong guy.

"He's a straight shooter. Never been in trouble," his father, Dino Laurenzi Sr., said last week.

Dino Jr. came to his own defense Tuesday, issuing a statement because his only other alternative would be to idly sit by while his reputation was shattered by Braun.

Senior leadership and experience is important, but this year is showing that area's top teams are just as reliant upon sophomores as they are upperclassmen.

TWIN FALLS • Chances are prep boys basketball diehards have at least once this season been wowed by the high-flying athleticism of twins Connor and Alec Meyerhoeffer at a Twin Falls game.

Or found themselves slack-jawed at Jerome deadeye Garrett Leavitt's range. Or impressed by the chemistry and basketball savvy of Filer twins Logan and Austin Beard.

Not one of the five is the standout player for his respective team — that belongs to a bunch of upperclassmen, Eric Harr at Twin Falls, Jake Hollifield at Jerome, Austin Tews and Ryan Karel at Filer and Jakob Howard at Dietrich.

By Any Other Name, Dietrich's Howard Twins Are a Force

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

DIETRICH • You can call them the Twin Towers or maybe the Bash Brothers.

But the twin brothers Jakob and Andru Howard on the Dietrich boys basketball team already have nicknames: Superman and Batman.

"During football season, we all picked nicknames and those just stuck for some reason," said Andru (Superman). "That's what everybody calls us!"

teamed up on occasions in the comic books, but Jakob and Andru have been a team for life, and together, the 6-foot-11 brothers terrorize their opponents with aggressive defense and tenacity on the boards for the 18-5 Dietrich Blue Devils.

They also have that twin telepathy thing going on too.

"I always know where he is on the court and know what he's going to do when he gets the ball, but it's not like when I pass him the

Valley's Back and Aiming for Better

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

HAZELTON • Day by day, game by game, this group of Valley Vikings has gotten better and better.

Valley's six seniors went from a 2-18 record as sophomores, to winning the Class 2A District IV tournament championship last year, to a 19-2 record this season.

And now for their final act, the Vikings hope to accomplish what no Valley team has been able to do for more than a decade: Win a state tournament game.

Last year, Valley earned its first state berth in eight years, and the inexperience showed. The Vikes went two-and-out, with double-digit losses to Melba (the eventual state champion) and McCall-Donnelly. Valley hasn't won a state tournament game since taking state in 2001.

As Valley enters today's first-round game versus Cole Valley Christian (20-2), it will know what to expect.

"It's going to be nice not to have the deer-in-the-headlights look," said Valley coach Steve Hunter. "We won't play as tentative as we did last year. We've been there and we have that mental image of what's going to go on."

All but two players return from last year's squad, and the team has improved significantly in its shooting, confidence and court savvy.

"Their basketball IQ (is better)," Hunter said. "They understand when they see mismatches on the floor and they make adjustments without us having to tell them to do it."

Although the six seniors are its core, junior Justin Johnson leads Valley in scoring and rebounding, averaging 18 points and 7.9 boards per game.

Several players are capable of stepping up, like senior Austin Shawver, who scored 20 points in Valley's district championship win against Declo. Shawver averages 12.4 points and 7.4 rebounds per game.

The Vikings' biggest obstacle is a small one — as in, they are small. Each Valley starter gives up four inches across the line to the Chargers.

"We haven't focused so much on what the other teams are, but more on just emphasizing what we do well," Hunter said.

What they do well is quickness, which results in 12 steals per game on the defensive end. Offensively Valley uses its quickness in transition and dribble penetration.

"They're a funny group; they're great to work with," said Hunter. "We look forward to coming to practice every day. They enjoy competing and they enjoy helping make each other better" ball, I know he's going to make a shot," Andru said. "We always have discussions on the court and tell each other stuff."

Said Jakob: "It's pretty great playing with my brother. We have a good connection when we're on the court. Basketball is something we've always done together."

Together, these Howard brothers clean up the glass. Jakob averages a double-double of 13 points and 11 rebounds. Andru chips in 10 and nine.

Both said defense is their favorite part of the game.

"I actually like rebounding. That's like the best thing for me (getting a rebound)," said Jakob. "I've always been a defense-first guy. Getting a blocked shot or a rebound feels awesome. You box the guy out, get the rebound and protect the ball and it helps your team."

With the Howard twins owning the boards, Dietrich has been able to push the tempo offensively, letting sophomores Vance Perron and Steven Kent score from the wing. The Blue Devils punched their ticket to state by beating Tri-Valley in double overtime last weekend, marking a return to the state tournament after a one-year absence.

Andru and Jakob got a taste of state their sophomore years, both getting called up from the junior varsity team after the district tournament.

"It was a really good experience. My brother and I both got called up and we got to play some minutes," said Andru, whose team plays Sho-Ban at 6:15 tonight in Caldwell. "The gyms all felt pretty big. I haven't really been in big gyms like that before."

The Blue Devils missed out on the tournament last season, losing to Murtaugh in the district tournament, but Andru said the team won't be intimidated by the state experience this time around.

"We're all getting pumped for state and just getting ready. Practice has been good this week and I think we're ready to go," he said. "This senior year has been pretty great for us. We have a really good team and I'm excited to see how the season is going to finish."

Sophomores

But each of the sophomores has played a critical role in his team still playing basketball this deep into the season.

"I really felt the pressure to start the season," said Leavitt, who's started 17 of Jerome's 25 games, is the team's second-leading scorer (9.7 ppg) and has connected on nearly 37 percent of his 3-point attempts. "But over time I started getting used to everything and really worked on my role, which is to play good defense and hit the open shot when I have it."

Adding in Buhl's Kade Crossland, Burley's Brandon Hosteen, Dietrich's Vance Perron, Hagerman's Kade Kress and Austin Funkhouser, and Hansen's Devon Fitzsimmons and Seth Williams, among others, the roster of sophomores is as skilled as it is long.

It's not unusual to see a handful of teams play a sophomore up to the varsity level. After all, if you're good enough, you're old enough.

But this year has seen more sophomores start to steal the show on an accelerated timetable, as they find themselves sufficiently equipped to beat out older players for key roles.

"During the summer I play with a lot of the kids, and we just have a pretty strong sophomore class," said Connor Meyerhoeffer. "There's quite a bit of talent in the sophomore class, and maybe the older classes aren't quite as deep. But really, the sophomore class is just really talented."

All are skilled, but some were the stars on their respective teams. As it happens, the ones that are still playing have also had consistent senior leadership to rely on while they kept focus on playing sound basketball.

"I think playing alongside these seniors and leaning on them let us be loose and not have to worry," said Alec Meyerhoeffer. "We were able to just play, and hopefully next year and the year after we'll be the ones doing what they're doing now."

Connor and Alec Meyerhoeffer both have dunking capability despite standing around 6 feet. They've rescued countless bad passes with that leaping ability and, most importantly in Twin Falls' system, they play relentless defense.

Leavitt has learned on the fly about defense while rattling in 3s from as deep as 23 feet.

Logan and Austin Beard have been more understated in their team's flow, stepping up as the leading scorer from time to time, but more effectively working as defenders and chemistry guys.

"A coach always wants to give the older kids their chance, but you have to decide by using younger kids if you'll help the older kids meet their goals," said Filer coach Allen Kelsey. "The Beards have been so good because they're so easy to work with. Both Logan and Austin at given times have been the leading scorer or one of our best players. They have the ability to step up, but part of the success has been real good team chemistry."

They have a variety of on-court seasoning from this season, but no amount of experience can prepare any of these sophomores for what they'll face this weekend: potentially three games in three days, all on the big stage of the state tournament.

Each hopes that the third game, if they get it, is on the biggest stage of all: the Idaho Center, where the championship games are staged on Saturday.

"I'm really nervous thinking about it," Leavitt said. "But I know we're prepared for whatever we face."

Zeller's 30 Elevate No. 6 North Carolina Past Maryland, 88-64

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. • Tyler Zeller had 30 points in his final home game to help No. 6 North Carolina beat Maryland 88-64 on Wednesday night.

John Henson added 19 points for the Tar Heels (26-4, 13-2 Atlantic Coast Conference), who led all game to set up a matchup with No. 4 Duke this weekend to determine the league's regular-season championship.

Zeller went just 5 for 12 from the field, but finished with his best scoring performance in an ACC game thanks to the number of times he went to the free throw line. Zeller made 20 of 23 attempts, breaking Tyler Hansbrough's Smith Center record for made free throws in a game and finishing one shy of matching the program's and ACC's all-time mark.

NO. 7 MISSOURI 78, IOWA ST. 72

COLUMBIA, Mo. • Michael Dixon scored 21 points to lead five Missouri players in double figures and the seventh-ranked Tigers clinched the No. 2 seed in the Big 12 tournament.

Dixon's driving layup with 3:36 left gave Missouri (26-4, 13-4) a 66-64 lead. Marcus Denmon followed with a 3-pointer and Phil Pressey had a steal and layup with 1:23 remaining to cap a 7-0 run for the Tigers.

Sullinger's game-winner completed a 22-point, 18-rebound night for the Buckeyes' sophomore star.

Ohio State (24-6, 12-5), which had lost three of five, has a chance to tie for the Big Ten title if it can win at No. 5 Michigan State in Sunday's regular season finale.

SOUTH FLORIDA 58,

NO. 19 LOUISVILLE 51

LOUISVILLE, Ky. • Jawanza Poland scored 16 points and South Florida got the signature win the Bulls have desperately sought for their NCAA tournament resume.

South Florida (19-11, 12-5 Big East) has won six of seven as a 30-point loss at Georgetown and was considered on the bubble with a game remaining at home against West Virginia on Saturday.

The Cardinals (22-8, 10-7) had won their 10 previous home finales. Their two starting seniors made the biggest contributions with Kyle Kuric and Chris Smith scoring 14 points each.

GENOA, Italy • The United States gained a rare victory over a soccer power, beating Italy 1-0 Wednesday night on Clint Dempsey's goal in the 55th minute for its first win over the Azzurri in 11 games over 78 years.

United States midfielder Clint Dempsey celebrates after scoring against Italy at the Genoa Luigi Ferraris stadium on Wednesday.

Dempsey, a Texan who has become an increasingly important element of the American team, took a short pass from Jozy Altidore following Michael Bradley's cross and put a right-footed shot from just inside the penalty area just past an outstretched hand of goalkeeper Gianluigi Buffon.

"I'd like to think that we're closing the gap and hopefully one day we can do something special," Dempsey said.

After returning to the World Cup for the first time in 40 years in 1990 and advancing to the quarterfinals in 2002, the Americans have struggled to make additional progress. They were knocked out in the first round of the 2006 World Cup and the coach Bob Bradley and replace him with Jurgen Klinsmann, the former German national team star player and coach.

"It's historic for us beating a team of Italy's level," Klinsmann said. "But what we wanted to do above everything was to learn, to see how we could do against a team like Italy. I think the boys did very, very well. They played great for 90 minutes."

Among the seven nations considered the world powers — Argentina, Brazil, England, France, Germany, Italy and Spain — it was just the ninth win for the United States to go along with 48 losses and six ties. The Americans had been 0-7-3 against Italy and had been outscored 32-4.

"It's a work in progress, trying to get there," Dempsey said. "It was a little bit of workout tonight, but we got the result."

Dempsey scored his 25th goal in 83 international appearances. A native of Nacogdoches who turns 29 on March 9, Dempsey has had the most accomplished season by a U.S. attacking player in European soccer. With 16 goals this season for Fulham, he's become the American career scoring leader in England's Premier League with 43 goals.

"Initially, I was going to stay where I was and have him lay it back to me," Dempsey said. "I saw the guy was covering. So I tried to move to my right to try get open so he could play me the ball. He did a great job of holding it up, playing me, and I just tried to hit it low and hard, far post, and it went in.

"This situation has caused great emotional distress for me and my family," Laurenzi said. "I have worked hard my entire life, have performed my job duties with integrity and professionalism, and have done so with respect to this matter and all other collections in which I have participated."

The rest of the statement detailed how the sample was collected, and what steps were taken to make it secure. Laurenzi said he took samples from three players late on a Saturday afternoon at Miller Park after Milwaukee opened the playoffs last season with a 4-1 win over Arizona, and took them home to his basement rather than leave them unattended at a FedEx drop off location until the following Monday.

The samples arrived at a Montreal lab with all the seals intact, and no evidence that anything was amiss. There was something amiss with Braun's sample, though — it reportedly showed a ratio of testosterone to epitestosterone in excess of 20-1, when a ratio in excess of 4-1 triggers a positive test.

If you believe Braun's protestations of innocence, you have to believe that somehow, some way, someone entered Laurenzi's basement with some synthetic testosterone, broke the seal on both the box and Braun's sample to contaminate them before finally rearranging the tamperproof seals in such a way that they didn't appear to have been tampered with.

If so, you'll be happy with the basket of candy you'll be getting in April because it means you believe in the Easter Bunny.

"If he really believed this guy contaminated it, then it's an assault with a controlled substance," said Travis Tygart, who heads the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency. "And with all the retired FBI agents employed as baseball investigators they would be all over it."

Apparently a lot of Milwaukee fans do believe it. How else do you explain the loud cheers greeting Braun at every turn in Phoenix as he casts himself as the true victim in the case. His buddy, Green Bay quarterback Aaron Rogers, is among the cheerleaders, saying on Twitter that baseball "tried to sully the reputation of an innocent man."

A plot by baseball? A rogue urine collector? Next thing you know, Braun is going to blame the sausage vendor at Miller Park for selling him a tainted bratwurst.

I can't say Braun is guilty of juicing because I don't have the facts. I do know his test wasn't overturned because of scientific reasons, but because of chain-of-command issues, and that MLB officials are furious about it. I also know that testosterone is easily available to anyone through a couple clicks of the mouse or a doctor's prescription. It's common knowledge that increased amounts of testosterone can help sluggers be sluggers, especially toward the end of a season when their bodies are run down.

Here's one more thing I know: Braun needs to apologize to Laurenzi, and he needs to do it publicly.

Yes, it may undermine the basis of his claim of innocence, but if Braun wants to paint himself as a victim, it's important for him to understand there's another victim here, too.
