JFAC Sets Schools Budget

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • A modest improvement in the economy is good news for Idaho's schools.

On Monday, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee set a public education budget for the coming year that more than offsets a nearly $50 million cut public schools took this current fiscal year.

The adopted budget increases state spending for school programs and teacher pay by 4.6 percent. It also provides money for public schools chief Tom Luna's Students Come First reforms, avoiding the need to use funds tabbed for teacher salaries as was originally planned.

With federal funding, the total public education budget is $1.56 billion, about half of the state's budget for fiscal year 2013.

During the morning meeting, the committee members sparred over pay raises for teachers and administrators. The plan favored by Republicans included a $500 increase in minimum salary for teachers, while the Democrats' plan had a broader increase in the salary grid used to determine pay for educators.

The Republican plan, which the committee ultimately backed, would put the minimum teacher pay at $30,500. Currently, 31 percent of Idaho's teachers make less than that and would see a raise, Luna said.

Sen. Nicole LeFavour, D-Boise, and Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-Moscow, argued that the Republicans' plan would benefit only new and recent hires, and wouldn't reward long-time teachers who have been with districts for years.

"It's really difficult to do a hard job when you feel that those above you don't appreciate it," LeFavour said.

Other committee members pointed out that there were other opportunities for teachers to get raises, including new pay for performance options under Luna's reforms.

The change to how Students Come First is funded is in line with legislation approved by the Idaho Senate would eliminate the salary reductions, leaving lawmakers to find the money for new technology and teacher merit pay bonuses.

The bill to reverse $34 million in salary cuts over the next five years is

A BUDGET AND A BIT OF HOPE

The Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center is moving closer to stability.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • For any other business, planning a yearly budget isn't that revolutionary.

However, for the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, a new budget provides not only basic operating guidelines, but also hope that things are getting better.

For the past three years, the senior center functioned without a budget, racked up large amounts of debt and went through four site managers in two years.

The situation reached critical point when the latest site manager suddenly quit after only serving four months on the job.

But after months of hiring new bookkeepers and electing new board members, the senior center is becoming more stable.

"Obviously the financial crisis isn't going to go away now that there's a new site manager," said Jeanette Roe, the center's newest director. "But we're getting better. We're implementing change."

GOODING • The last moments Amy Hansen spent with her son are still raw and vivid in her memory.

Hansen was driving down a rural Gooding County road on a sunny September afternoon. Nine-year-old Brady was excited about the baseball cap he had just won from a claw machine at the grocery store.

"He was saying, 'Mom, can you believe it fits me?'" she said.

Then, Hansen said, she saw a flash of white. The next thing she knew she was pinned in her car, her leg bent the wrong way, and she just started digging.

County Approves Canyon Zip Line

After years of proposals and zoning debates, a planned Snake River Canyon zip line could be a reality as soon as April.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • After months of holding her breath in anxious anticipation, Jody Tatum finally let out a sigh of relief.

The Magic Valley Flight Simulation business manager has spent the past three years fi-nagling and defending her company's effort to put a commercial zip line in the Snake River Canyon.

That process came to an end on Monday, when Twin Falls County commissioners voted to uphold a special-use permit granted to the company.

"We were just waiting to hear we would have to jump through another hoop," Tatum said. "We didn't know if there would be another delay."

The Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission granted the permit last year, but the decision was soon appealed by John Lezamiz, a Twin Falls

Bill Could Give Private Schools a Better Chance to Compete

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • It may be a small school, but Twin Falls Christian Academy still has extracurricular activities to choose from.

The private school of about 100 students — 25 in high school — has a full schedule of girls volleyball and boys and girls basketball games. Some students have participated in music competitions.

But there are some restrictions.

Some private schools can't participate in district- and state-level competitions through the Idaho High School Activities Association. It's because they're not accredited through an organization recognized by the Idaho State Department of Education.

Twin Falls Christian Academy is an associate member of the IHSAA. Though the restriction hasn't greatly affected his students, Principal Brent Walker said it doesn't make sense that they can participate in some competitions, but not state-level ones.

"It seems like an all-or-none deal to me," he said.

A bill moving through the Idaho Legislature could address that situation by providing more opportunities for private school students to compete.

The bill — introduced by Sen. Russ Fulcher, R-Meridian — seeks to have the Idaho State Department of Education come up with new accreditation standards.

"The basic goal here is to just make sure that as many students as possible across the state have the opportunity to participate in high school athletics," said department spokeswoman Melissa McGrath.

At Twin Falls Christian Academy, changes may already be on the horizon.

The school has candidacy status with the Association of Christian Schools International and Northwest Accreditation Commission — both recognized by the state.

Walker said he expects accreditation will be awarded by the next school year. He noted that sports and other extracurricular activities weren't the only reason the school pursued it.

Now, TFCA plays smaller IA schools but isn't a member of an athletic conference.

"Once we get accreditation, it's a topic we'll revisit," Walker said.

It's a non-issue for Lighthouse Christian School — a 300-student private school in Twin Falls. The school is already a full member of the IHSAA.

Even though his school isn't affected, Principal Kevin Newbry said the bill could be beneficial for other private schools.

However, he said it could set a bad precedent by allowing schools to get around accreditation requirements. Lighthouse Christian School is accredited by ACASI, NWAC and the state of Idaho.

Since it joined IHSAA six years ago, its sports teams compete in IA athletic events. Students can also compete in activities such as cheerleading, dance/drill, music and speech arts.

"We wanted them to have that opportunity," Newbry said.

Center

One of the biggest challenges was figuring out the center's finances. Constant turnover and inexperienced staff left the center unaware of how much debt it was in or how much revenue it collected.

In December, the center hired Debbie Brennan. The former accountant began attempting to manage the center's expenses, and eventually submitted a budget to the board of directors.

"The budget itself is only a tool, based on estimates and history," Brennan said. "The senior center hadn't had a budget for several years, so we had to go back through historical data to figure out how to plan for the year."

Brennan said the budget shows the center brings in $25,000 a month in delivery meal reimbursements and lunch charges. By the end of the year, the center should be out of debt and have a profit of $25,000, she said.

Roe said that the biggest challenge facing the center right now is attracting new volunteers to serve home-delivery meals.

"We need to grow to get better and a lot of that comes from volunteers," she said.

The board also hired a new community resource manager to promote the center's community involvement.

"We need to grow to get better and a lot of that comes from volunteers."

"Reputations are hard to change," said Lisa Doua, who recently stepped into the new position. "But our hearts are in the right place and we want people to see that."

attorney who lives along the road leading to the canyon site.

Over the months, Lezamiz has argued that Canyon Springs Road was already nearing capacity and that adding the zip line would cause unsafe walking conditions for pedestrians. He also said homeowners were not given proper notice of the project by the zip line company.

Despite his arguments, both the Twin Falls City Council and the County Commission voted to uphold the P&Z's decision.

"If everything falls inside the law and abides by the city code, then I don't oppose it," County Commissioner Leon Mills said, right before voting in favor of the permit.

Tatum said she was pleased with the commission's decision.

"We have done our best

What's this all about?

The idea of putting a zip line somewhere in or near the Snake River Canyon dates back to 2007, when a local inventor demonstrated a motorized ride in Devil's Corral.

Magic Valley Flight Simulation, which has adopted a different technology, began submitting project proposals to Twin Falls city officials in 2009. Over the years, suggested locations ranged from Shoshone Falls to Dierkes Lake, but all were denied — including pitches to other counties.

to do everything they asked us and because of our due diligence, we were happy to have gotten their approval," she said.

Lezamiz didn't attend Monday's commissioner meeting, but said he wasn't surprised by the commissioners' decision.

"I've been concerned

Finally, in December 2011, the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission approved a special-use permit to build a zip line next to Canyon Springs Golf Course, following a change to city code the year before allowing such an operation. The permit was immediately appealed, but both Twin Falls city and county leaders have upheld the decision.

What comes next?

The company still needs to get a few building permits but it plans to start construction next week. The zip line is scheduled to open as soon as mid-April.

about the safety of pedestrians and the road's capacity and that's been my pitch since the beginning," he said.

Tatum and her colleagues now await approval of a few more building permits. They plan to open the zip line in mid-April or early May.

awaiting a hearing in the Idaho House. Republican Rep. Fred Wood of Burley urged lawmakers on the House Education Committee to act on the measure as soon as possible, given that the public schools budget was written with the legislation in mind.

JFAC's budget proposal included $4 million to improve teacher training ahead of new technology entering the classroom, another aspect of Luna's changes. Teachers have 22 hours of total professional training a year, far short of a technology task force's recommendation of 72 hours to train teachers how to use technology in the classroom. Those 22 hours would remain the same with the extra funds; Democrats sought to add more hours to that total, but failed.

After the meeting, Luna praised the budget.

"This is a very pro-education budget," he said. "It shows that if we spend our money based on increasing student achievement and based on the priorities we have, we can accomplish a lot even with minimal funding."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

"I reached up and there was blood everywhere," Hansen said. "And I realized we'd been in an accident."

Hansen and her son had been struck by Mitchell Barnes' pickup as he failed to stop at a stop sign at the intersection of 3100 South and 1700 East.

A tearful Barnes pleaded guilty to vehicular manslaughter, a misdemeanor, Monday in Gooding County 5th District Court. Judge Casey Robinson sentenced him to two years of supervised probation and 200 hours of community service as part of a plea bargain agreed to by prosecutors.

Amy Hansen spoke emotionally and at length about the impact the loss of her son, along with her own severe injuries, had on her and her family.

After she and her husband Steve adopted their son Scott, the birth of Brady had been a second, unexpected miracle in their lives, she said.

"We never thought we'd have another child," she said.

Now, Hansen said, she feels like she doesn't know how to be a parent to her son or a wife to her husband. "We don't know how to help ourselves because we don't know how to help our son," she said.

Along with the emotional scars of losing a son, Hansen said she is in constant pain from injuries sustained in the collision, and needs medication for pain relief and to aid her sleeping and depression. Doctors have told her she won't be able to return to her previous, physically demanding job, leaving the family to live on her husband's disability check each month until she can find a job in another field.

"Every time I look at my hand and that scars that are on there, every time I look in the mirror at the scars on my face, every time I go to pick something up and it hurts so bad, it's a constant reminder that my baby's gone," she said.

Hansen ended her statement by asking the judge to give Barnes the harshest punishment he could.

"I know Mr. Barnes didn't intend that day to take anyone's life but that's what happened," she said.

With barely a traffic ticket on his criminal record, Barnes is like most people in the Magic Valley, his attorney James Meservy said. He's a hardworking family man who enjoys fishing and has spent his career in dairies and on farms.

Barnes, 59, is a cautious driver, Meservy said, who made a mistake the day of the accident.

The Jerome man neither drinks nor smokes, Meservy said. Drugs, alcohol and speed were not factors in the crash.

As Barnes left work, Sept. 12, it was like any other day.

"I was driving down the road in my pickup. I don't know why I missed that stop sign," he said at the hearing. "That little boy was taken. I wish I could go back and take it back. I wish I could just trade places. I'm so sorry."

Robinson chose to approve the deal Barnes reached with prosecutors because he believed Barnes' punishment would be better served doing something constructive in the community rather than sitting in jail. He said the decision, which the Hansen family disagreed with, was one of the most difficult in his tenure in Gooding County.

Along with community service and probation, Barnes was given a one-year suspended jail sentence, his license was suspended for a year and he must pay a $2,000 fine. Restitution for the Hansen family will be decided later in a civil case.

"There's nothing I can do today that's going to lessen your pain," Robinson said. "I feel horrible for your loss. I feel horrible for Mr. Barnes."

What Is It?

At the caucus, Idaho's GOP voters will choose which candidate they'd like to give the state's delegates to at the Republican National Convention. There are five candidates to choose from, including Mitt Romney, Newt Gingrich, Rick Santorum and Ron Paul. Buddy Roemer also qualified for the caucus, though he recently announced he intends to run for president as a third party.

Who Can Participate?

Participants must be registered Republican voters, though 17-year-olds may participate if they will turn 18 by Nov. 6 and have filled out a voter card. Voters can register at the caucus.

What Happens?

At each county's caucus, voters are given ballots or tokens, which they use to indicate which candidate they want to vote for. At the end of each round, officials count the votes.

The candidate who receives the least amount of votes is removed from the ballot, as is any candidate who receives less than 15 percent of the vote. Those who initially voted for eliminated candidates then choose from the ones who remain.

Voting continues until one candidate has at least 50 percent of the vote, or until the final vote is taken for the last two candidates.

What About the Democrats?

With seated President Barack Obama on the Democratic ticket, the party's April 14 caucus is expected to be a mellow affair this year.

Head Start students participate in a groundbreaking ceremony Friday for the new Head Start/Early Head Start center in Jerome.

Groundbreaking Held for Jerome Head Start Project

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Construction is scheduled to begin soon for a new Head Start/Early Head Start center in Jerome.

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Friday at the construction site. The $1.06 million facility will bring services provided through the College of Southern Idaho under one roof.

The 6,192-square-foot facility for North Side center programs will be located near the Jerome School District's administrative office.

CSI Head Start Director Mancole Fedder told the Times-News on Monday that the building should be completed by mid-August.

Children will start the next school year in the new facility, he said.

Plans to construct a center have been in the works since last spring. Over the summer, CSI bought 1.5 acres of land from the Jerome School District for $105,000.

Currently, Head Start and Early Head Start services are spread out in several leased buildings.

About 105 children receive services through North Side center programs in Jerome. There are also 17 employees.

T.F. Council Agrees to Seek Grant

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls City Council agreed Monday to apply for a $500,000 Community Development Block Grant to help with hooking up a new business to city services.

The grant is awarded through the Idaho Department of Commerce. The money would go toward expanding the city's water system in anticipation of handling the Chobani Greek yogurt plant's wastewater.

The expansion project was one of the incentives that attracted Chobani to Twin Falls.

The vote came at the end of a fairly quiet meeting. Among other actions, council members unanimously approved an alcohol license for Mezamie Inc., which owns The Historic Ballroom in downtown Twin Falls and just recently received a state liquor license. The approval brought smiles to ballroom owner Sarah Taylor and to the council, including Councilman Lance Clow, who threw up a thumbs-up in support to the audience after the vote.

Council members went on to appoint two new members and recommend a third to the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission.

Contractor Kevin Grey and KMVT-TV Creative Services Director Tom Frank will fill the commission's open three-year terms.

The council recommended retired mechanical engineer Steve Woods to represent the city's area of impact, an appointment the Twin Falls County commissioners will also weigh in on.

Twin Falls Man Arrested in Alleged Filer Home Invasion

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

FILER • Filer police have arrested a man accused of a December home invasion that led to the arrest of two people on drug trafficking charges.

John Valenciano Jr., 19, was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Monday on a charge of aggravated assault with a weapons enhancement.

On Dec. 1, police responded to a home on Main Street in Filer for a call of a robbery. Crickett Ray, 18 and Brydon Walker, 19, told police they had just been attacked by several men who had entered their home. Another woman, Debra Tonihka, 52, was found lying on the ground in the home and Romar Garza, 25, was also present.

As the police interviewed the victims, they reported smelling marijuana inside the home.

Walker told police he invited Garza over and a man he knew as "Juan" had come along.

Later, Tonihka identified Juan as Valenciano.

He and two other large Hispanic males allegedly held Garza, Walker, Ray and Tonihka at gunpoint.

According to court records, Garza said Valenciano pulled a gun and asked where meth and money was. Valenciano also allegedly said he was on the run and would do life in prison, so he did not care what would happen.

Garza then stated the men stole a bag full of marijuana and hit him and Ray before they ran from the house.

Police say Tonihka used the button on her portable medical alarm to call for help. She told police the men stole three packs of cigarettes.

Ray and Walker were both arrested on charges of trafficking marijuana, which were later amended to possession. Both are scheduled to be sentenced May 7.

A preliminary hearing for Valenciano is scheduled for March 16.

House Blocks Attempt to Ease Resorts' Liquor Licensing

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • The Idaho House killed a bill Monday that would have made it easier for some resorts to obtain liquor licenses.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, and Rep. Frank Henderson, R-Post Falls, would have added a liquor license exemption for inns located in one of Idaho's 10 resort cities. Currently in Idaho, licenses are doled out based on population, although some exemptions exist for airports, race tracks, cross country ski resorts and more.

Making it easier for inns with full-service restaurants to serve spirits with dinner would help satisfy tourists' demands, Jaquet said.

"I would really ask you to think seriously about this,"

she told House members. "This is economic development for a community that really needs it."

Rep. Ken Andrus, R-Lava Hot Springs, implored his colleagues not to pass the legislation because the state shouldn't facilitate what he called the evils of drinking.

"We don't need any more infidelity. We don't need any more broken marriages, broken homes. We don't need any more divorces," he said.

The bigger issue, said Rep. Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly, was that the Legislature shouldn't create any more exemptions for liquor licenses.

"I think we've had enough of these types of legislation already," Roberts said.

The bill failed 43-26. Locally, Reps. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, and Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, joined Jaquet to support it.

RIOT POLICE BREAK UP ANTI-PUTIN PROTEST IN MOSCOW

BY MARIA DANILOVA AND NATALIYA VASILYEVA
Associated Press

MOSCOW • An attempt by Vladimir Putin's foes to protest his presidential election victory by occupying a Moscow square ended Monday with riot police quickly dispersing and detaining hundreds of demonstrators — a stark reminder of the challenges faced by Russia's opposition.

The harsh crackdown could fuel opposition anger and bring even bigger protests of Putin's 12 years in power and election to another six, but it also underlined the authorities' readiness to use force to crush such demonstrations.

The rally marked a change of tactics for the opposition, which has been looking for ways to maintain the momentum of its demonstrations that flared in December. Alexei Navalny, a popular blogger and one of the most charismatic protest leaders, was the first to suggest that supporters remain on Moscow's streets and squares to turn up the heat on Putin.

For Putin, the opposition move raised the specter of the 2004 Orange Revolution in Ukraine, where demonstrators camped on Kiev's main square in massive protests that forced officials to throw out a fraud-tainted election victory by the Kremlin-backed candidate.

The government's response Monday night was fast and decisive. Lines of officers in full riot gear marched into tree-lined Pushkin Square and forced protesters into waiting police buses. About 250 people were detained around the city, police said.

The crackdown followed a rally that drew about 20,000 people angry over an election campaign slanted in Putin's favor and reports of widespread violations in Sunday's voting.

Putin commands the loyalty of police and the military, whose wages were recently doubled. Following Monday's massive show of force, the urban middle-class forming the core of the protests could be more reluctant to attend future demonstrations.

NATION BRIEFS

Condoms Now Required for Los Angeles Porn Actors: Actors in many of the adult films made in the nation's porn capital must use condoms under a law that took effect Monday, but the prophylactic police aren't yet on the beat. In Los Angeles, where an estimated 90 percent of the country's porn films are made, city officials and industry leaders are trying to settle on a way to ensure that there's more safe sex on the set. Some say health care professionals should be present during a shoot to make sure actors use condoms. "Today really is a milestone in the advance of health and safety for these adult filmmakers," said Ged Kenslea, spokesman for the AIDS Healthcare Foundation, which lobbied for years for the measure. — Associated Press

Obama, Netanyahu Talk Unity

BY BEN FELLER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Taking sharply different stands, President Barack Obama urged pressure and diplomacy to prevent Iran from getting a nuclear bomb while Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu emphasized his nation's right to a pre-emptive attack. Even in proclaiming unity on Monday, the leaders showed no give on competing ways to resolve the crisis.

Seated together in the Oval Office, Obama and Netanyahu at times tried to speak for each other and sometimes spoke past one another. The two leaders are linked by the history and necessity of their nations' deep alliance, if not much personal warmth, and they both used their moment to try to steer the agenda on their terms.

"I know that both the prime minister and I prefer to resolve this diplomatically," Obama said. "We understand the costs of any military action."

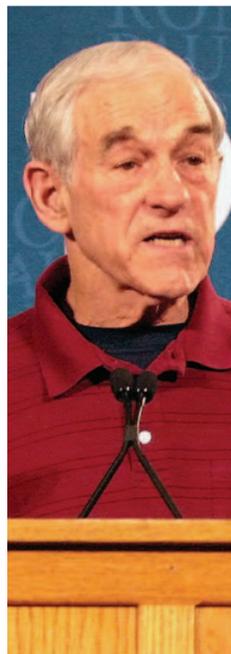

If he agreed, Netanyahu said nothing about sanctions or talks with Iran, or Obama's position that there still is time to try to deter Iran peacefully.

Super Tuesday Showdown

Romney, Santorum, Gingrich and Paul traveled the country on Monday ahead of today's Super Tuesday votes — a big day that all four hope will give them a leg up in the contentious race for the Republican nomination.

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • On the eve of their Super Tuesday showdown, Mitt Romney and Rick Santorum strained for an edge in Ohio on Monday and braced for the 10 primaries and caucuses likely to redefine the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Newt Gingrich, though winless for more than a month, campaigned in Tennessee and issued a stream of signals that he intended to stay in the race.

In a race marked by unpredictability, Romney's superior organization and the support of an especially deep-pocketed super PAC allowed him to compete all across the Super Tuesday landscape and potentially pick up more than half of the 419 delegates at stake.

Santorum cast the race in biblical terms, his David vs. Romney's Goliath. Even that "is probably a little bit of an understatement," he added.

Primaries in Ohio, Georgia, Massachusetts, Vermont, Virginia, Oklahoma and Tennessee plus caucuses in Idaho, North Dakota and Alaska make Tuesday the busiest day of the primary season.

Unlike previous Republican campaigns, when a primary winner would typically win all of a state's delegates, allocations this year generally reflect the split in the popular vote. As a result, several candidates may be able to claim success once the Super Tuesday results are known.

Mother: Children Survived Being Sucked from Home

BY MITCH WEISS
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) • When Latonya Stevens heard thunder and lightning in the distance, she knew the drill. Every time a storm drew near, her children would run to her room seeking comfort.

So Stevens turned on a hall light for the young kids as high winds began buffeting the house. Then she blacked out and awoke to find only one of the four kids in sight.

With the house about to shake apart, she quickly assumed the worst: that a twister had carried off the other three.

"I was screaming for them," Stevens said Monday. "I was panicking. For a moment, I didn't know where they were."

No one knows precisely what happened, but this much is clear. The three children were in their rooms when the twister approached. As the winds rose, most of the home's second floor was swept away. After the tornado passed, the kids were found outside on the ground, one of them 100 feet away along a major highway.

All three emerged with only cuts and bruises — and a story to tell for the rest of their lives.

THE MEDIA STARS AND POLITICS

BY BETH FOUHY
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The uproar over Rush Limbaugh's derisive comments about a young woman's sex life is serving as a vivid reminder of the outsized role conservative media stars play in Republican politics.

With a Democratic president in the White House and no leading GOP elected official setting the party's agenda, Limbaugh and other media personalities like the late Andrew Breitbart and even Donald Trump have filled a vacuum for many conservatives seeking a full-throated political advocate. The popularity of such figures among Republican core voters has made party leaders reluctant to cross them, even when their comments or tactics steer well out of bounds.

Democrats have plenty of left-leaning media figures in their corner, too — some of whom have made comments that have embarrassed the party and its candidates. Bill Maher, who gave $1 million to a super PAC that supports President Barack Obama, was widely criticized recently for mocking NFL quarterback Tim Tebow's religious beliefs on Twitter.

But no liberal media figure has an audience the size of Limbaugh's, estimated as high as 20 million listeners — mostly men — per week. And no one suggests Maher or any other commentator has displaced Obama as the voice of the Democratic Party.

"The voices you hear on the conservative side have an audience of people who are very skeptical of traditional mainstream media and power," said Stephen Farnsworth, a political science professor at the University of Mary Washington who studies media in politics. "If you're a Republican candidate you don't want to offend those people. They are the most hard-core Republican voters and the most likely to turn out in a primary."

GOP Candidates Facing Unexpected Headwinds

BY TOM RAUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • It's not a happy time for Republicans seeking the White House.

On the eve of key Super Tuesday contests, they find themselves on the defensive over birth control, embarrassed by conservative radio host Rush Limbaugh and tripped up by subjects bearing little relation to the day-to-day concerns of Americans. All the while, President Barack Obama's ratings are climbing.

There's still a long way ahead, for sure, but this isn't how GOP leaders had pictured things.

Ronald Reagan's 11th Commandment about saying no evil about a fellow Republican is in shreds in what's become a scorched-earth primary contest.

Contenders for the GOP nomination are trying to win the White House with a gloomy economic message, while Obama seeks to project reassuring optimism amid fresh signs of a growing — if still fragile — economy.

Some GOP pundits seem to be already bracing for an Obama re-election victory, even though Election Day is still eight months off.

Conservative columnist George Will has raised the specter of a repeat of the 1964 race, when "conservatives got their way" and the GOP chose Barry Goldwater as its nominee. He lost in a landslide to incumbent President Lyndon B. Johnson.

In a weekend column, Will wrote that neither Mitt Romney nor Rick Santorum — the two leading GOP contenders — "seems likely to be elected." Instead, he suggests that conservatives focus more energy on retaking control of the Senate and retaining the GOP majority in the House.

Peggy Noonan, a speechwriter for Republican Presidents Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush, recently wrote that "the Republican nominee will emerge so bloodied his victory will hardly be worth having; the Republicans are delving into areas so extreme and so off point that by the end Mr. Obama will look like the moderate."

Veteran GOP consultant Charles Black, a top political aide to Sen. John McCain's 2008 presidential campaign and now a Romney backer, said current GOP expressions of frustration are standard fare for when "a competitive primary race is going, when the negatives for your candidate are being highlighted, and when the other party's nominee is getting a free ride."

"For anybody on any side to throw in the towel now, they're going against both data and history," Black said.

GOP

Pre-primary polls show him with momentum in a close race with Santorum.

"Other people in this race have debated about the economy, they've read about the economy, they've talked about it in subcommittee hearings," Romney said dismissively of his opponents. "But I've actually been in it. I've worked in business, and I understand what it takes to get a business successful and to thrive."

Santorum, who narrowly lost Michigan to Romney last week, said that no matter how much his rival spends, "conservatives will not trust him, will not rally around him this primary season. ... We will be the nominee."

He said he looked forward to the day when Gingrich drops out and clears the way for him to challenge Romney one-on-one. "And when we do that, we'll win," Santorum said.

Gingrich, the former speaker of the House, was having none of it.

Seemingly confident of a primary victory in Georgia, where he launched his political career more than three decades ago, he unveiled a new television commercial in Tennessee promising to reduce the rising cost of gasoline. Eager to demonstrate his staying power, he said the commercial would soon begin running in Alabama and Mississippi, which hold primaries next week, and he announced a list of supporters in Kansas, where caucuses are on the schedule for Saturday.

The fourth man in the race, Texas Rep. Ron Paul, campaigned in Idaho after a weekend visit to Alaska, where he hopes to claim his first victory of the campaign.

Israel

Instead, Netanyahu drew attention back to Obama's acknowledgement that Israel is a sovereign land that can protect itself how it sees fit.

"I believe that's why you appreciate, Mr. President, that Israel must reserve the right to defend itself," Netanyahu said. "And, after all, that's the very purpose of the Jewish state, to restore to the Jewish people control over our destiny," he said.

Israel, he added, must remain "the master of its fate."

Across days of comments, speeches and interviews, Obama and Netanyahu left no doubt about where they stand on Iran. Far less clear is whether they have done anything to alter each other's position in what has become a moment of reckoning over Iran, and an important foreign policy issue in the U.S. presidential race.

Obama's aim is to dissuade Israel from launching what he considers to be a premature and dangerous attack on Iran.

The leaders spoke to the media at the start of their meeting, not at the end. That left no opportunity for them to reveal how their discussions went, and it reduced the possibility of repeating last year's remarkably blunt scene.

When they last sat in the Oval Office, in May, Netanyahu lectured Obama in front of reporters as differences over Mideast peace unfolded.

This time, their body language as they spoke was not so glaring but still telling: Obama addressed the media around the room; Netanyahu spoke directly to Obama and locked on him.

Netanyahu said later Monday that Obama "understood Israel's position" that it has the right to self-defense.

Both leaders see a nuclear-armed Iran as a nightmare that could threaten Israel's survival and potentially allow terrorists to grab unthinkable deadly power. Their difference is not over whether force may be needed — Obama has been specific on his willingness to use it — but whether the time for such a drastic step is near.

US Man in Webcam Case Spoke of 'Viewing Party'

BY GEOFF MULVIHILL
Associated Press

NEW BRUNSWICK, New Jersey • A former Rutgers University student accused of using a webcam to spy on his roommate's intimate encounter with another man said someone at Rutgers was planning a "viewing party" with beer and rum to watch the dorm room liaison, a high school friend testified Monday.

The revelation came in testimony from Michelle Huang, a Cornell University student who says Dharun Ravi told her about it in a text message on Sept. 21, 2010.

Ravi, 20, is on trial for 15 criminal counts, including invasion of privacy, bias intimidation and several charges accusing him of trying to cover his tracks. Bias intimidation is a hate crime punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

The roommate, Tyler Clementi, jumped to his death from the George Washington Bridge on Sept. 22, 2010. Since then, the case has sparked a national conversation about the difficulties faced by young gays.

Prosecutors are trying to prove that Ravi intentionally tried to humiliate Clementi. Huang testified that Ravi urged her to video chat him so she could see the webcam footage.

"Do it for real," Ravi wrote in a text that was shown to jurors. "I have it pointed at his bed."

People were planning a "viewing party with a bottle of Bacardi and beer" to watch the webstream that night, Huang said. It was the first mention of a planned party in the trial, which had its seventh day of testimony on Monday.

Huang later testified that after Clementi had killed himself, Ravi texted her that the talk of a viewing party was a joke.

Witnesses have said the webcam wasn't working that night.

But a Douglas Rager, a former university police detective, testified later Monday that when he went to inspect the dorm room on Sept. 23, he noticed that Ravi's webcam was "angled directly at Tyler's bed."

Ravi isn't charged in Clementi's death, and the judge has been cautious about how the suicide would come into the trial.

Prosecutors are precluded from linking the spying allegations to the suicide. Defense lawyers cannot make the case that Clementi killed himself for other reasons.

When prospective jurors were brought into the courtroom last month for the first time, the judge told them that it was the case involving Clementi and that Clementi had killed himself.

The issue came up Monday when Huang testified about hearing from Ravi that his roommate had committed suicide. The university sent counselors to his room and suggested he take several days off, he said, describing Rutgers officials in a text as "mad helpful."

After that testimony, which emerged during cross-examination by Ravi's lawyer, Assistant Prosecutor Julia McClure told the judge that she might recall some earlier witnesses to ask them about conversations with Ravi about the suicide.

Navalny — who sought to electrify the crowd with a passionate call of "We are the power!" — was among those detained, along with opposition leader Sergei Udaltsov. Both were released from police custody a few hours later.

"We are calling for peaceful action of civil disobedience, and we shall not leave," Navalny shouted to the crowd. "We know the truth about this government. This is the government of crooks and thieves."

Upon his release from police custody, Navalny told 30-40 supporters who greeted him that another protest was planned for Saturday in Moscow and other cities.

"We will keep on fighting until we win," he said.

Putin, who was president from 2000-08 and is the current prime minister, won more than 63 percent of the vote, according to the nearly complete official returns, but the opposition alleged massive ballot fraud. Communist Party candidate Gennady Zyuganov finished a distant second with 17 percent.

YURI TUTOV • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Russian police officers detain a protester after a rally in Moscow, Russia, Monday. Riot police on Monday broke up an opposition protest contesting Prime Minister Vladimir Putin's victory in Russia's presidential election, arresting dozens of participants, including prominent opposition leaders. The police action followed a rally in downtown Moscow that drew about 20,000 protesters angry over a campaign slanted in Putin's favor and reports of widespread violations in Sunday's ballot.

"The campaign has been unfair, cowardly and treacherous," said opposition leader Grigory Yavlinsky, who was denied registration for the race on a technicality.

International election monitors pointed to the lack of real competition and said the vote count "was assessed negatively" in almost a third of polling stations that observers visited.

"There was no real competition, and abuse of government resources ensured that the ultimate winner of the election was never in doubt," said Tonino Picula, the head of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe observer mission. "Broadcast media was clearly biased in favor of one candidate and did not provide fair coverage of the other candidates."

"It's a miracle they survived," said their grandfather, Clarence Gray Jr. "God was looking out for them."

Most of the family's possessions were lost. But by Monday, the children were playing in their grandparents' house if nothing had happened.

They picked up family photos scattered on a coffee table. "This was our house," Jamal said, pointing to a picture.

The children — 3-year-old Amber, 4-year-old Ayanna and 7-year-old Jamal — said they don't recall anything. And their mother blacked out for a moment herself.

"They're like me. They don't remember what happened," Stevens said. "We don't know. Maybe it will come back to us eventually. I mean, I've sat down and tried to figure out what happened. I don't know," she said softly.

When storms moved into the Charlotte area late Friday, the four children were upstairs in their bedrooms. Their grandmother, Patricia Stevens, was watching TV downstairs on a couch. Their father, Tyrone Stevens, was out with friends who were in town for a basketball tournament.

The noise awoke the children, who initially went to their mother's room where they watched a Disney movie. When the storm died down, they returned to their beds.

But a half-hour later, Stevens heard a new storm approaching and got up to take care of the children. As she got up to turn on the hall light, the house began to shake and the wind started to howl.

Then she lost consciousness.

Stevens awoke in the dark holding the other 3-year-old twin, Ashley, and shouting for her children. The roof was gone. Only then did she realize that her house had been struck by a tornado.

She hurried downstairs in the dark, screaming "Where's my babies," and spotted her mother who also was frantic.

"I didn't know where the children were," Patricia Stevens said. "The house was shaking, and then we heard the noise. And all of the sudden you heard the house go whap, whap, whap, whap. Just like that. Then the walls were gone. Then I said to myself, 'Is this how you're supposed to die? Are we going to die in here or what?'"

Stevens handed Ashley to Patricia while she started searching outside for her children. Neighbors began searching, too.

Sheena Redfearn and her husband, Chris, heard

Stevens shouting for her children from four doors down the street.

After the couple was sure their own children were safe, Chris Redfearn bolted outside with a flashlight and began following Jamal's voice, leaping over fences in the search for the boy.

Amber was found in the family yard under some debris. Ayanna landed in a neighbor's yard. Jamal had been tossed more than 100 feet.

The children were rushed to the hospital. Tyrone, who was contacted by family, headed to the hospital, too.

The next day when Tyrone returned to his house, he couldn't believe what happened.

"Just looking at it, it just shook me to my core," he said. "I was devastated. Thank God everyone is OK."

Key Investors Sign Up for Greek Bond Swap

BRUSSELS (AP) • A dozen banks, insurers and investment funds holding Greece's bonds will participate in a massive debt relief plan for the country, the group representing the private creditors said Monday as the deadline for the deal draws near. Without the debt relief, Greece won't get a second, €130 billion bailout from the other euro countries and the International Monetary Fund, and would face a messy default on its debts later this month.

Private creditors have until Thursday night to sign up for the bond swap, which could slice as much as €107 billion off Greece's €350 billion debt pile.

THE DIGIT

$3.80/gallon

The average price at the gas pump • Oil prices remained stubbornly high because of tensions tied to Iran's nuclear program. The nationwide average for gasoline rose less than a penny overnight to $3.77 a gallon, which was the 27th consecutive day of gains, according to AAA, Wright Express and the Oil Price Information Service. The price has risen 32 cents, or 9.3 percent, since Feb. 1.

OPIS chief oil analyst Tom Kloza said the average price could reach $4.25 per gallon by late March or April but the pace of the increase should slow. Gasoline has tracked oil prices, which have risen about 8 percent since the end of January.

Overhead Bins Get Bigger

This undated photo provided by American Airlines parent company AMR, shows workers installing larger bins for carry-on luggage on a Boeing 737, in Tulsa, Okla. Fliers can stop sharpening their elbows. Overhead bins are getting bigger.

BY JOSHUA FREED
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS • Fliers can stop sharpening their elbows. Overhead bins are getting bigger.

Packed planes and a high volume of carry-ons are forcing airlines to expand the space above passenger's heads. United and Delta are the latest airlines to replace or upgrade their bins so they hold more luggage. And engineers at Boeing are designing jet interiors with today's bulkier luggage in mind.

It's a chance to placate passengers who feel like they're thrown into a roller derby every time they board a plane. Because of fees on checked bags, more passengers are bringing carry-ons, which are growing in size. And with planes more crowded than ever, bins fill up before everyone has reached their seat. Travelers fight physics and one another to shove one more bag overhead. Or they're forced to check luggage at the gate.

The result is upset travelers, harried flight attendants and delays.

Airlines Expanding Their Bins

• United: The airline is replacing bin doors on 152 planes starting in April. The new doors curve out more than the old ones. That allows passengers to slide bags into the compartment wheels-first instead of sideways.

Passengers on United's A320s have had to check their bags at a higher rate than travelers on other planes because there wasn't enough room. "That's a real sore point," O'Leary says.

• American Airlines: The airline's new 737s will hold 48 more bags than the planes they are replacing, although they have 24 more seats, too. That means more people and luggage.

• Delta Air Lines: Passengers on international routes like Atlanta-Paris or Minneapolis-Amsterdam are starting to see new bins on the airline's 767 jets. The compartments hold 26 more bags than the bins they are replacing. It's an increase of 23 percent.

• US Airways Group Inc.: In 2008, it enlarged bins on its 757s, a mid-sized plane flown on routes including Phoenix to Hawaii and Charlotte, N.C., to Dublin. Like United, the change allowed fliers to slide bags in wheels-first instead of sideways.

The percentage of passengers bringing bags on board has hovered around 87 percent in recent years, United Continental says. And "the size of the carry-on has increased ... They are stretching the limits of their bags," says Scott O'Leary, managing director of customer solutions at United Continental Holdings Inc.

Expanding bins is a smart way for airlines to set themselves apart, says Henry Harteveltdt, who leads airline and travel analysis at Atmosphere Research Group, a market research firm. "Especially if they cater to the business traveler, they're hoping it will give them a small but noticeable competitive advantage."

REPORT SHOWS INCREASE IN IDAHO CONSUMER COMPLAINTS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • The number of consumer complaints filed to the Federal Trade Commission by Idahoans last year grew by nearly two thousand compared to 2010, with complaints against debt collection services showing the biggest increase.

The FTC released its annual report last week showing Idaho residents filed 7,448 complaints in 2011, up from 5,403 the previous year. The report shows financial fraud was the biggest source of consumer complaints, accounting for more than 4,600 complaints last year with losses estimated at $5.6 million.

The Idaho Statesman reports that debt collection services were the biggest source of complaints filed by consumers each of the last two years.

But ACA International, a trade group representing debt collection providers, says those totals can be misleading because they don't represent proven illegal activity.

"We won't make excuses for bad behavior, but there are other reasons complaints are on the rise, and by the dramatic jump since 2001, it seems that (there is a rise) for all industries," said ACA spokesman Mark Schiffman.

The FTC issues the report each year and uses data from the Idaho Attorney General's Office and local better business groups to compile the report.

The figures for 2011 show a decline of about 50 percent in the number of complaints filed with the attorney general's consumer protection division.

"I think Idahoans did a little bit better job protecting themselves, (or) maybe the attorney general did a better job stopping these from occurring in our state," said Brett DeLange, chief of consumer protection for the attorney general.

The FTC received 4,634 fraud complaints from Idahoans last year. Of those, 3,166 claimed the cases of fraud caused financial damage — an average of $1,775 apiece.

Coeur d'Alene finished in the top 50 cities in the nation for most fraud and other consumer complaints, with about 605 per every 100,000 residents, according to the report.

American Indian Tribes' Casinos See Turnaround

BY STEPHEN SINGER
Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. • Gambling revenue at casinos run by American Indian tribes edged up slightly in 2010, reversing a first-ever drop in revenue the previous year and showing renewed strength as the economy improves, according to an annual report released Tuesday.

The study, "Casino City's Indian Gaming Industry Report," said revenue at Indian casinos was $26.7 billion in 2010, up from $26.4 billion in 2009. In contrast, revenue at commercial casinos declined 0.1 percent and the businesses are expected to soon be overtaken by Indian casinos.

Tribes' casinos made up less than 20 percent of casino gambling in 1993, but now account for nearly 44 percent, just slightly less than commercial casinos' share of 45 percent, the study said. Racinos, which combine race tracks with casinos, account for 11 percent of market share.

Indian casinos appeal to gamblers because they're newer and operate in markets with less competition, said Alan Meister, an economist at Nathan Associates Inc. and author of the report.

"They're in areas where there wasn't gaming before," he said in an interview. "It's closer to the people. It can be a day trip. It does not need to be a weekend in Vegas or Atlantic City."

Despite its turnaround in 2010, growth that year was "significantly below" pre-recession increases of 10 percent in 2006 and about 15 percent from 2002 through 2005.

The recession took a toll, with lower consumer confidence and higher unemployment cutting into casino business and restricted lending and costlier financing reducing casino development and major expansions and renovations, the study said.

As many as 239 Indian tribes operate 448 gambling businesses with gambling revenue concentrated in certain states. In 2010, California was the largest state in Indian casino gambling revenue.

OBITUARIES

Mabel I. Hills

Nov. 13, 1918-March 3, 2012

NAMPA • Mabel I. Hills passed away peacefully Saturday, March 3, 2012, in Nampa Idaho.

Mabel Irene Edwards was born in Eden, Idaho, on Nov. 13, 1918, to Oscar and Blanche Edwards. She attended elementary schools in Eden and Twin Falls and graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1936. Following high school graduation, she attended art school in Los Angeles, Calif. On May 28, 1943, she married Fred A. Hills Jr. from Twin Falls. They lived in Nampa for a short time, where their first daughter, Karleena, was born.

Their first pastorate was in Cutbank, Mont. Mabel served as pastor's wife, church pianist, organist and teacher. While serving in Cutbank for five years, their second daughter, Bonny, was born. They continued their ministry at Trinity Church of the Nazarene in Billings, Mont., where they served for another five years. Their son, David, was born in Billings. In 1955, they moved to Kansas City, Mo., where Mabel was involved with the Nazarene Publishing House doing illustrative work while her husband, Fred, continued studies at the Nazarene Theological Seminary. In 1958, they moved to Jerome to assist with the family farm, living there until 1994. Mabel moved to Nampa in 1994, where she resided until her death March 3, 2012.

Mabel was a pianist and organist and enjoyed playing guitar. She was an artist; creating with chalk, watercolors, pen and ink, oils and acrylics.

She painted three wall murals. She has written many poems and enjoyed drawing and illustrating greeting cards. She loved the outdoors, the mountains, the ocean, hiking, birds, animals and gardening. Her passion was her love for Jesus and helping others.

She is survived by Bonny Golay (daughter); David and Patty Hills (son); Galen and Carol Golay (grandson); Michelle Golay (granddaughter); Randa Hills (granddaughter); Jeffrey Hills (grandson); Emily Erisman (great-granddaughter); Sophie Erisman (great-granddaughter); Sawyer Golay (great-grandson); Raymond Edwards (brother); Donald Edwards (brother); and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by Fred A Hills Jr. (husband); Karleena Hills (daughter); Edna Handy (sister); and Allen Edwards (brother).

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, March 8, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls, Idaho. A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, March 9, at Alsip and Persons Funeral Chapel in Nampa.

The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Boise Rescue Mission, P.O. Box 1494, Boise, ID 83701.

Comic Impressionist Steve Bridges Dies in LA

SUE MANNING

Associated Press

HARAZ N GHANBARI • ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Impressionist Steve Bridges, who used prosthetics and wigs to turn into presidents and laughs to make a living, was found dead at his home, his manager said Monday. He was 48.

Bridges returned from China on Feb. 23 and complained to friends of "super jet lag," manager Randy Nolen said.

Bridges' maid found the comic dead about 9:30 a.m. Saturday in his Los Angeles home, Nolen said.

It appeared that he died of natural causes, but an autopsy will be conducted, said Craig Harvey, chief of operations for the Los Angeles County coroner's office.

Bridges' George W. Bush impersonation made him a regular on "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" and earned him an invitation to the White House in 2003.

In 2006, Bridges joined Bush in a comic routine at the 2006 White House Correspondents' Association dinner in Washington, D.C., and at a Ford's Theatre benefit.

Nolen said Bush called Bridges' brother, Phillip, on Monday and offered condolences.

"Steve was not only a funny man, but a kind and decent human being. My heartfelt sympathies go out to his parents, his siblings, and his entire family," Bush told The Associated Press through spokesman Freddy Ford.

"We had a great 10-year run," Nolen said. "He went to the White House, the Oval Office, toured with Barbra Streisand and was a regular on the 'Tonight Show' for almost eight years."

Bridges became Barack Obama, Bill Clinton or Bush for his most popular shows.

The makeup and prosthetics used for Bush and Clinton were designed by Kevin Haney, who won an Academy Award for aging Dan Aykroyd in "Driving Miss Daisy." Obama was done by Kazu Tsuji, who designed Jim Carrey's Grinch in "How the Grinch Stole Christmas."

Mari Enyart was Bridges' makeup artist.

"From the neck up, everything but his teeth was covered in a prosthetic piece of some sort," Nolen said about the impersonations of presidents. "It was as extensive, as good and as complicated as anything you would see in a motion picture."

It took nearly four hours to apply the Obama makeup and nearly three hours to do Bush and Clinton. Close attention was paid to age marks and freckles on his hands because they were so visible, especially if a skit was being filmed.

John "JT." Holt Sr.

Feb. 13, 1952-Feb. 27, 2012

CASTLEFORD • John "J.T." Holt Sr., 60, passed away Monday, Feb. 27, 2012, at St. Luke's Boise as a result of a chronic/acute illness.

John was born Feb. 13, 1952, to Melvin Holt and Betty Lou Null-Holt. He attended schools in Portland and Corbett, Ore. He married Suse McNeese on March 1, 1969. To this union, John Jr. and Rhonda were brought into the world. John worked 32 years on the Union Pacific Railroad as a federal track and safety inspector. He retired in November of 2003 from complications of a stroke.

He leaves behind his wife, Suse; children, John Jr. (Lori) and Rhonda (Tim) Mangum; and grandchildren, Joshua, Michael and Hannah Holt, and Justin and Skylar Mangum.

Burial will take place at Corbett, Ore., at a later date.

'Star Wars' Illustrator Dies at 82

LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES • When director George Lucas hired illustrator Ralph McQuarrie in 1974 to do a series of paintings visualizing scenes from his script for an intergalactic war movie he was trying to sell, McQuarrie liked the concept for the space fantasy. He just didn't think it would ever get made.

"My impression was it was too expensive. There wouldn't be enough of an audience. It's just too complicated," he recalled in a 1999 interview with the San Diego Union-Tribune. "But George knew a lot of things that I didn't know."

McQuarrie, 82, whose dynamic artwork helped persuade 20th Century Fox to green-light what became the 1977 blockbuster "Star Wars," died Saturday at his home in Berkeley, said John Scoleri, co-author of a book on McQuarrie's art. He had Parkinson's disease and recently had been in declining health.

"Ralph McQuarrie was the first person I hired to help me envision 'Star Wars,'" Lucas said in a statement.

E. Ore. Geothermal Power Plant Nearing Startup

VALE, Ore. (AP) • Work is heading for a June startup at a geothermal plant that the state Department of Energy says will be the first in Oregon to produce energy on an industrial scale.

The developer, U.S. Geothermal Inc. of Boise, Idaho, plans to use heat from a 300-degree reservoir 2,500 feet underground to generate power, The Bulletin of Bend (<http://bit.ly/A46WG5>) reported.

The cost of the plant near Vale, west of Ontario in Malheur County, is estimated at $130 million.

Idaho Power Co. will buy the electricity. A spokesman said the 23-megawatt plant will supply enough power for about 700 typical homes in the utility's service area.

U.S. Geothermal has been drilling wells, erecting accessory buildings and preparing the site for the power plant modules that will be bolted together as they arrive at the site at Neal Hot Springs. Idaho Power has built a substation and strung transmission lines.

A Nevada company is building a second generating plant in the Southern Oregon town Adel, state officials say, and that's expected to go online in 2013.

The use of geothermal heat isn't new in Oregon, but such large-scale projects are. Homes, businesses and other buildings in Klamath Falls have long used geothermal heating systems. And guest rooms at Seventh Mountain Resort southwest of Bend use geothermal technology for heating and cooling.

Ultrasound, Ultra-truth

"Seeing is believing" is an ancient idiom. It teaches that a dispute can often be resolved by presenting physical evidence.

Opponents of the ultrasound bill passed last week by the Virginia Legislature and expected to be signed soon by Governor Bob McDonnell, thought they could stop the measure because they said it would require an invasive vaginal probe to determine the age of the fetus in an early-stage pregnancy. The bill passed after it was modified to mandate only a non-invasive procedure.

According to the Guttmacher Institute (<http://www.guttmacher.org/statecenter/spibs/spib-RFU.pdf>), Virginia will join seven other states "that mandate that an abortion provider perform an ultrasound on each woman seeking an abortion, and require the provider to offer the woman the opportunity to view the image."

Before other surgeries, doctors and hospitals must present information to patients who are then required to sign documents consenting to the procedure. No one would deny women access to information about a kidney transplant. So then for abortions, as part of this information-providing process, why shouldn't ultrasound images be included? Shouldn't abortion-seeking women see the life they are about to end?

The debate in Virginia and elsewhere over ultrasound legislation should include the voices of women who favor ultrasound laws.

The media speak of "women" as a monolithic group who consistently subscribe to the liberal-secular line. But there are many women — I have met a few — whose voices are rarely, if ever, heard. These women either decided to give birth after seeing an ultrasound image, or regretted having had an abortion and would testify that if they had seen an ultrasound image before the procedure they would have made a different choice. Does not seeing an ultrasound image change the reality of abortion?

There are several websites featuring testimonies from some of these pro-ultrasound women. One is: <http://www.projectultrasound.org/testimonies.html>.

Why would anyone want to deprive women of the joy they experience after seeing a picture of their baby and deciding to preserve their baby's life? Why would anyone not want to protect these women from the pain many have experienced from not seeing a picture and going forward with the abortion, only to later regret it?

In Britain, two "medical ethicists" associated with Oxford University have published an article in the Journal of Medical Ethics entitled "After-birth abortion: Why should the baby live?" which asserts that newborn babies are not "actual persons" and thus do not have a "moral right to life." As reported in the London Daily Telegraph, the professors argue, "Parents should be allowed to have their newborn babies killed because they are 'morally irrelevant' and ending their lives is no different to abortion." The authors, Alberto Giubilini and Francesca Minerva, maintain that "killing a newborn should be permissible in all the cases where abortion is, including cases where the newborn is not disabled."

The Telegraph story quotes Giubilini and Minerva: "The moral status of an infant is equivalent to that of a fetus in the sense that both lack those properties that justify the attribution of a right to life to an individual. Rather than being 'actual persons,' newborns were 'potential persons.'" They explained: "Both a fetus and a newborn certainly are human beings and potential persons, but neither is a 'person' in the sense of 'subject of a moral right to life.'"

Let's hear "pro-choicers" argue against infanticide and present their reasons for doing so. Having ceded any moral high ground that defines human life as distinct from animal life, though some do equate the two, on what basis do they say "no" to the ethicists' argument? They have no basis.

This is where our indifference to human life and its Creator has led us. Requiring ultrasounds before a woman has an abortion will help restore recognition of a baby's right to live and of our own humanity.

Israel's Brinkmanship, America's Peril

Last week, Gen. Norton A. Schwartz, chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force, confirmed a no-longer-surprising fact: the Pentagon has sent the White House a menu of options for going to war with Iran.

But that doesn't mean the military thinks bombing Iran would be a good idea. "It's not prudent at this point to decide to attack Iran," Schwartz's boss, Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said on CNN last month, adding that his advice applied to Israel as well as the United States. "A strike at this time would be destabilizing and wouldn't achieve their objectives," Dempsey said.

It's hard to find a high-ranking U.S. military officer who thinks war with Iran is a good idea. They point out that it is unclear that bombing Iran would succeed in stopping the Islamic Republic from developing nuclear technology, and that an attack would almost surely provoke Iranian retaliation and touch off a longer, wider war.

But that hasn't stopped President Obama from rattling the saber.

"When the United States says it is unacceptable for Iran to have a nuclear weapon, we mean what we say," he told Jeffrey Goldberg of the Atlantic last week. "As president of the United States, I don't bluff!"

Doyle McManus

Los Angeles Times

Part of the reason Obama sounds more hawkish than his generals is that he hopes the threat of military action can help bring Iran around. But he's also trying to navigate a delicate situation with a leader who's ostensibly one of his closest allies, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Netanyahu and his defense minister, Ehud Barak, have said that they don't believe economic sanctions and negotiations are working fast enough to persuade Iran to curtail its nuclear program. Barak has warned that Iran's nuclear facilities will soon be so deep underground that they will be in a "zone of immunity," safe from military attack — or at least safe from the scale of attack that Israel could muster.

Once that happens, Israel would have to depend on the United States for protection, and that's not a position the Israelis want to be in. So Netanyahu and Barak have publicly suggested that it may soon be time for Israel to strike, despite the dangers that an attack would bring.

Are the Israelis serious? They say they are, and the Obama administration is taking them at their word. Over the past two months, a parade of U.S. defense officials has visited Israel. This week, Netanyahu is visiting Washington — hoping, according to Israeli media reports, to win a promise from Obama that the United States will prevent Iran from even attaining the capability to build nuclear weapons. Until now, the United States has said it will prevent Iran from acquiring a nuclear weapon, but Israel wants the red line moved to the less easily defined point of "capability."

For all Netanyahu's bluster, Israeli officials still say war with Iran is something they'd like to avoid. An Israeli attack on Iran would almost certainly lead not only to direct retaliation from Tehran, but also a ground war with Hezbollah, the pro-Iranian militia that rules southern Lebanon. A poll of Israelis released last week found that only 19 percent favor attacking Iran without U.S. support, and only 42 percent favor an attack even with U.S. support.

Even Netanyahu has said that the outcome he'd prefer is an Iranian retreat in the face of economic sanctions, with no military action by anyone.

But is that possible?

The United States and its European allies have been working on proposals for the next round of nuclear talks with Iran, which are planned to begin next month. The aim, Obama said in his interview with the Atlantic, is to induce Iran's leaders "to make a strategic calculation" to delay "whatever potential breakout capacity they may have."

That probably means some kind of deal under which Iran would agree to limit its enrichment of uranium to levels well below what's needed for nuclear weapons and submit to international inspections that would reassure Israel and other countries that it is not pursuing secret military projects.

The idea, said Dennis Ross, a former Obama adviser, would be to "stop the clock" and freeze Iran's nuclear technology at a level that doesn't threaten anyone else. But that would likely require the United States and its allies to soften their previous demand that Iran suspend all uranium enrichment as a first step.

Obama noted that Iranian leaders have frequently insisted they aren't seeking nuclear weapons. "So it doesn't require them to knuckle under to us," he said. But it would require them to allow more intrusive inspections than they have accepted in the past.

The Obama administration contends that a deal like that is more possible than ever before, because economic sanctions against Iran have finally begun to bite. But to obtain an agreement with Iran, the United States needs Israel to stay its hand.

THEIR VIEW

U.S. Food Gets N. Korea Back to the Table

The following editorial appeared in the Seattle Times on Monday:

Credit the Obama administration with the patient pursuit of negotiations toward dismantling North Korea's nuclear program. Once again it may all come to a frustrating impasse.

Still, North Korea did announce Wednesday it would allow international inspectors into its Yongbyon nuclear complex and suspend nuclear weapons tests and uranium enrichment in anticipation of talks.

The New York Times reports the latest round of contacts began last July with the U.S. offering 265,000 tons of food to get the government in Pyongyang interested. The death of dictator Kim Jong Il in December left the future of the talks unresolved. His young son and successor, Kim Jong Un, startled the world with his government's offer, but it was quickly embraced. North Korea needs the food, and substantive progress toward a resumption of nuclear talks is great news.

Getting talks launched means arranging for the inspectors to gain access to the reactor site. Another set of negotiations, but it is all in the works.

The U.S. understands the diplomatic chess game under way, so the food will be parceled out in monthly deliveries. The food itself is described as nutritional supplements rather than rice and grains that might be diverted to the military or sold. Practical cynicism in pursuit of a verifiable nuclear agreement.

This is another step toward Pyongyang resuming six-party talks with the U.S., South Korea, Russia, Japan and China. The latter's influence is especially key.

Idaho Prison Budget Grows Slightly; Guard Pay Lags

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE (AP) • Lawmakers have approved a 3.5 percent increase for Idaho's Department of Correction, with much of the boost going to contracted medical services and community-based treatment programs.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee approved the $189.4 million budget Monday, an increase of more than $6.4 million from the previous year.

The department is faced with full prisons and a growing inmate population, and included in the new budget is $1.5 million from the general fund to cover the cost of housing overflow inmates in county jails.

In the past the state has been forced to send inmates to out-of-state prisons to avoid overcrowding, and department spokesman Jeff Ray said officials expect to be forced to do so again at the end of 2012.

Department employees will also see a slight boost, with the committee approving nearly $1.5 million for changes to employee compensation rates. But even with the increase, pay for Idaho Department of Correction employees still lags behind that offered in neighboring states.

Idaho's prison guards have a median hourly wage of $14.38, compared to $19.49 in Wyoming, $23.56 in Oregon and $26.81 in Nevada.

Sen. Nicole LeFavour, D-Boise, told fellow finance committee members she was worried that the increase in the approved budget wouldn't be enough to stop employees from leaving the department.

The turnover rate was 14 percent department-wide during fiscal year 2012, and 19 percent among guards.

"The department's had a really difficult time with retention of employees, just trying to address what has become really serious turnover," LeFavour said. "I'm a little bit worried that we haven't quite addressed that."

Almost $1.3 million in general fund money will go to cover an annual rate adjustment for Corizon, the company that provides medical services for all the state prisons.

Corrections Corporation of America, the company that runs the Idaho Correctional Center for the state, is also getting an additional $912,500 for its annual rate increase.

Another $3.8 million will go to cover community-based treatment services, which is largely handled by private companies.

Report: Unclear What Prompted Yellowstone Grizzly Mauling

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • An investigation into the second of two fatal grizzly bear attacks last summer at Yellowstone National Park was unable to conclude if the same bear was responsible for both deaths, a report released Monday said.

But DNA tests show the bear that killed California hiker Brian Matayoshi in July fed on Michigan hiker John Wallace with one of her cubs in August, and evidence of two other bears in the area where Wallace's body was found much farther away — 65 feet and 492 feet from the body.

The report indicates there is no "clear evidence" to identify the bear that attacked and killed the 59-year-old Wallace from Chassell in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

"The presence of bloody adult and cub tracks suggests that the adult female that killed Mr. Matayoshi and one of her offspring were likely involved in the consumption of Mr. Wallace's body," the report said. "This bear may or may not have been involved in the attack on Mr. Wallace, but this bear was at the fatality site."

Park officials decided against capturing or killing the mother bear, or sow, after Matayoshi's death. Investigators then concluded that Matayoshi and his wife had surprised the sow and its two cubs and the bear had acted defensively.

The report on Wallace's death by the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee said it is not known why the bear or bears attacked Wallace on Aug. 25. Wallace was hiking alone and there were no witnesses.

The sow was euthanized last fall after DNA evidence linked it to the scene of the second mauling. The sow's cubs were taken to the West Yellowstone Grizzly and Wolf Discovery Center.

Park spokesman Al Nash on Monday defended the park's decision not to remove the grizzly after the first attack.

"We feel we made the best decision available with the information we had subsequent to the attack on Mr. Matayoshi," Nash said. "Subsequent events prompted us to take a look at the unique circumstances surrounding the Wallace incident and take action based on that information available."

Wallace stopped on the side of the Mary Mountain Trail in Hayden Valley, about eight miles from where Torrence, Calif., resident Matayoshi and his wife were attacked on the Wapiti Lake Trail, according to the report. It was probably morning, because Wallace's lunch was found uneaten.

Wallace appears to have taken off his daypack and may have been snacking on an energy bar when he was attacked.

Bite marks on his hand and arm indicate that Wallace tried to fight back, but he was not carrying bear spray.

A father and daughter hiking along the trail the next morning found Wallace's body partially on the trail and partially buried next to the trail "consistent with the food caching behavior of a bear," the report said.

The night before the attack, campground personnel gave Wallace a lecture about food storage and bear safety when he arrived at the Canyon Village campground. Wallace said that "he did not need to hear that information and that he was a 'grizzly bear expert,'" the report said.

A sign posted at the Mary Mountain trailhead warned hikers that they were entering bear country, recommended carrying bear spray and recommended against hiking alone.

Senate to Hear Charter Bill

BOISE (AP) • Lawmakers have moved a step closer to lifting Idaho's cap on public charter schools.

The Senate Education Committee voted 5-4 Monday to ditch the rule limiting the number of new charter schools to six per year. The bill would also allow more than one charter school to open within the boundaries of a traditional school district each year.

The legislation now heads to the Senate floor, its final hurdle in the 2012 session, amid widespread support from charter school advocates who say the cap is harming efforts to secure federal and private grant money for the state.

Idaho Workers Would Get $10M Hike Under House Plan

BOISE (AP) • House lawmakers supported a 2 percent, across-the-board pay hike for state workers, while lamenting not having more for employees who've seen their wages cut nearly every year since the 2008 recession.

Republican Rep. Steve Hartgen of Twin Falls on Monday called this an imperfect way to say "thank you" to Idaho employees for hard work under difficult conditions.

Hartgen said in a perfect world, Idaho would have had more than just this $10 million price package to reward workers performing at expectations.

It now heads to the Senate.

In passing this on a 55-15 vote, representatives favored a plan that would increase state workers' base salaries.

That differs from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposal to give state workers a 3 percent, one-time bonus paid only if tax revenue hit targets.

Yellowstone Opening Dates for Spring Announced

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) • Offering good news for those tiring of winter, the concessioner that runs lodges, restaurants and activities in Yellowstone National Park says it will start opening park facilities in late April.

Xanterra Parks & Resorts says all park operations will up and running by mid-June in time for the summer season.

The Old Faithful Snow Lodge Geyser Grill and gift shop will be first to open on April 20, followed by the Mammoth Hot Springs gift shop and grill on April 27. The major lodging facilities will open throughout May.

Campgrounds start to open on May 4 with the Madison Campground, followed by Fishing Bridge RV Park on May 11.

The park itself reopens to automobiles in April when the major roads are cleared of snow.

House Passes Limits for Land Board Purchases

BOISE (AP) • House lawmakers want to put a halt to a state endowment fund's expansion into storage facilities, saying it unfairly meddles in the private sector's business.

Monday's 66-3 vote would require the Land Board to sell or lease all improvements on endowment-owned ground, and sell all business operations.

The measure heads to the Senate.

Since the 2010 purchase of Affordable Self Storage, lawmakers have chafed at the endowment fund's foray into storage.

It caused an executive branch dust-up, too, with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter belatedly branding the purchase a mistake, while another Land Board member,

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, defended the transaction as part of his constitutional duty to maximize investment returns.

ATV Bill Reaches Full House

BOISE (AP) • The Idaho Department of Fish and Game would be barred from telling big-game sportsmen where they can hunt with motorized vehicles under a bill heading to the House floor.

Under existing rules, Idaho requires hunters on public land in a third of the state's 99 hunting units to stay clear of trails reserved for unarmed ATV riders. But Midvale Rep. Judy Boyle says the Idaho Department of Fish and Game doesn't have the statutory authority to impose such restrictions. The department opposes the bill.

Other opponents worry the bill would create conflicts between traditional hunters and those using ATVs and lead to overharvest of deer and elk.

Ron Paul Draws Big Crowd in Sandpoint

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press

SANDPOINT (AP) • Republican presidential candidate Ron Paul drew an estimated crowd of 1,200 people in this small town on Monday to hear his Libertarian-themed themes of smaller government, an end to the Federal Reserve and more individual freedoms.

The mix of young and old supporters was a sign that his campaign continues to gather support, Paul said at the Bonner County Fairgrounds in this town of 7,000 in the Idaho Panhandle.

"Four years ago if I came here I would not have drawn 100 people," Paul told reporters after the rally, held the day before Idaho holds its presidential caucuses.

Paul is hoping for victory in at least one of the caucus states — Idaho, Alaska and North Dakota — on Super Tuesday. The Texas congressman is last among the four GOP candidates with 25 delegates.

"This one of our best states," Paul said of Idaho. "We expect to do very well."

Paul was asked by an audience member why evangelical Christians should vote for him.

"Whether someone is a Catholic or a Jew or an evangelical Christian, everyone should vote for liberty," he said.

No religious group should receive special privileges at the expense of others, he said.

Asked about his electability, Paul said persistent remarks that he cannot win the general election hurt his campaign. But he believes he has the best chance to beat President Barack Obama.

"What I say is difficult, it challenges the status quo," he said.

Mainstream Republicans have failed to inquire why his campaign draws so many young people that other GOP candidates do not attract, Paul said. He also said the paucity of his television coverage also limits his ability to influence voters.

"They'd rather have a small party and pretend they can beat Obama with old clichés," Paul said of the GOP establishment.

He said the two major parties sound different, but their policies are not that different.

Paul said he does not envision dropping out of the race anytime soon, and that his strategy is to continue to garner delegates heading in to the GOP convention.

During his speech, Paul drew applause for saying that the federal government must shrink, that the Federal Reserve should be abolished and the federal income tax eliminated. He said he wanted to cut $1 trillion from the federal government in his first year as president.

What's So Super About Tuesday? 419 GOP Delegates

WBVY CONNIE CASS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) • Super? Maybe not this time. But it is a Tuesday, one with the biggest payout of the Republican presidential primaries.

Super Tuesday, slimmed down to half its 2008 size but still doling out one-third of the delegates needed to win, probably won't settle much.

Sure, it could nudge Newt Gingrich out of the race, or lend Ron Paul more credibility. But it won't be easy for either Mitt Romney or Rick Santorum to score a decisive advantage, because delegates are handed out by share. A close second in a state can pay off almost as well as first place.

Win some big states, especially Ohio, and the symbolism is powerful, of course.

Romney might cement the front-runner status that keeps slipping through his fingers. Santorum could prove he's the real thing.

What's at stake, what's it mean and what might happen? A Super Tuesday tip sheet:

Delegates for grabs Tuesday: 419.

Delegates already won: 353. Romney, 203; Santorum, 92; Gingrich, 33; Paul, 25.

Delegates needed for the nomination: 1,144.

Super Tuesday is super expensive:

A week's worth of heavy advertising in all 10 states would cost a candidate about $5 million.

That's a lot even for Romney's well-financed campaign, prompting him to make a plea for donations amid his Michigan victory speech. Gingrich is getting another multimillion-dollar boost from Las Vegas billionaire Sheldon Adelson, who donated the money to a special type of political action committee, known as a super PAC, that will run advertising in key states.

A young boy's ears are shielded from crowd noise as Republican presidential candidate, former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum speaks during a campaign stop at Froehlich's Classic Corner, Monday in Steubenville, Ohio.

Ohio, Ohio, Ohio:

It's the race to watch. Political junkies get all misty-eyed over this Rust Belt swing state, and not just because of the 63 delegates.

No Republican nominee has ever become president without winning the state. That makes it a powerful proving ground for the men trying to show they can take on President Barack Obama.

It's home to Joe the Plumber and tens of thousands of auto workers, but Ohio's not all blue-collar. It's also the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, high-tech science, medical and energy workers, suburbanites, soybean farmers and a quarter-million dairy cows (OK, the cows can't vote). The big issue is the economy, including Obama's bailout of the auto industry.

Santorum and Romney are duking it out in Ohio. Look for the outcome to generate more buzz than any other Super Tuesday contest.

Newt's last stand or Gingrich rises again?

Get out the hook for Newt Gingrich if he loses in Georgia, the state he represented in the U.S. House for two decades.

Gingrich hopes to win decisively here and pick up enough other delegates to relaunch his up-and-down campaign, which has been mostly down-and-out since he lost Florida in January. He's got endorsements from Gov. Nathan Deal and Herman Cain, a fellow Georgian. He's got a new pitch, claiming he can bring the cost of gas down to $2.50 per gallon.

Santorum is pushing hard to wrest the state's Christian conservative and tea party voters away from Gingrich. Romney remains a force, even if the state is outside his comfort zone. Georgia boasts the day's biggest cache of delegates: 76.

Paul's big night?

The anti-war, libertarian-leaning, unorthodox Republican hasn't won a single state. Super Tuesday could change that.

Paul is focusing on the three caucus states — Idaho, North Dakota and Alaska — where a big turnout by his cadre of enthusiastic followers would have the most impact. Even if he doesn't score a win, he's likely to pick up delegates to help power him into this summer's Republican convention with enough clout to promote his ideas.

But his rivals won't make it easy.

Idaho's big Mormon population — about a fourth of its voters — bodes well for Romney, who's a Mormon. Santorum's looking to win in North Dakota, and Romney's trying, too.

Paul, a Texas congressman, may be the only one to journey to Alaska, however; he was in the state Sunday. Meanwhile, Alaska's most famous Republican, Sarah Palin, has been saying some nice things about Gingrich.

Together, the three caucuses pay out 84 delegates (Idaho 32, North Dakota 28, Alaska 24).

Romney territory:

There's little drama in the Northeastern races. Romney's virtually unopposed in his power base of Massachusetts, where he was governor just over five years ago. Delegates: 38. He's expected to win neighboring Vermont handily, too, although Santorum seeks to peel away some of its 17 delegates.

Next up:

Caucuses and primaries in Kansas, Wyoming, Alabama, Hawaii, Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Louisiana fill out the busiest month of the season.

Region Field Set After Wild Weekend

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • What a wild final weekend in the Scenic West Athletic Conference.

The College of Southern Idaho women lost to Colorado Northwestern for the first time in head coach Randy Rogers' career, USU-Eastern got the home sweep it needed to jump from fifth to third in the standings. On the men's side, Snow flopped at home and in the process lost a first-round bye in the Region 18 Tournament.

Starting with Snow, the Badgers lost 89-83 to in-state rival Salt Lake, which was led by Darian Cartharn and his 22 points.

A win and Snow would have wrapped up the No. 2 seed and first round bye in this week's tournament, but with the loss, the Badgers fell into a three-way tie for second with Salt Lake and North Idaho. Snow lost the tiebreaker, which is the aggregate number of wins among the three teams against one other.

Salt Lake (22-8, 9-6 Scenic West) won the No. 2 seed, North Idaho (23-7, 9-6) is No. 3 and Snow (22-8, 9-6), No. 4. The Badgers open the Region 18 Tournament against No. 5 Colorado Northwestern (6-22, 1-14) Thursday at 7:30 p.m. CSI (27-3, 13-2) gets the winner on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Salt Lake and North Idaho both have first round byes and play each other Friday at 2 p.m.

Behind 40 points from Priscila Santos against North Idaho, the USU-Eastern women (16-14, 8-7) swept CSI (15-15, 7-8) and the Cardinals (23-5, 12-3) to jump up and snag the No. 3 seed, where it will play No. 6 Colorado Northwestern (11-19, 1-14) at 2 p.m. Thursday.

No. 4 CSI, just 1-7 on the road in SWAC play this season, has to open the Region 18 Tournament against host and No. 5 seed Salt Lake (16-12, 7-8) at 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

SWAC champion North

Idaho and No. 2 seed Snow (17-12, 10-5) both have first-round byes.

A First For Rogers

Rogers, in his 10th year as head coach of the Golden Eagles went 32 straight games – by an average margin of victory of nearly 40 points – without a loss to Colorado Northwestern until this weekend's 76-74 setback in Rangely, Colo.

Since 2002, Rogers' first season, his teams averaged 90.1 points against the Spartans, while giving up just 50.8. The Golden Eagles topped 100 nine times and

Grubb Gets Hamlin Back to Victory Lane

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Darian Grubb sure hasn't missed a beat since he was unceremoniously fired by Tony Stewart.

The crew chief made yet another trip to Victory Lane on Sunday when he guided Denny Hamlin to the win at Phoenix in just their second race together. Dating back to last season, Grubb has won six of the last 12 races.

Yet he found himself out of work a week after leading Stewart to last season's championship. Stewart won five of the 10 Chase for the Sprint Cup championship races to win the title, but the driver-owner had made up his mind midway through the Chase to replace Grubb at the end of the season.

Grubb didn't last long on the free agent market – the joke in NASCAR was every job in the garage was available for him, except, of course, the one he had. Joe Gibbs Racing snapped him up to help guide Hamlin out of a season-long slump. Their win at Phoenix, where Hamlin effectively lost the 2010 championship, proved both driver and crew chief have something to prove.

"I guess you could say it is a little bit of vindication, but I really don't think that Grubb then praised Mike Ford, who was crew chief for all six of Hamlin's seasons in the Cup series and came oh-so-close to taking Hamlin to the championship. The No. 11 team won eight races in 2010 and had Jimmie Johnson on the ropes when they rolled into Phoenix, the penultimate race of the season.

BOISE • If Matt Kaiserman needs help convincing Idaho lawmakers to strengthen concussion protections for youth athletes, the game film from the 2010 Maaco Bowl in Las Vegas could work.

Kaiserman, 23, now a lobbyist for the National Football League's effort to pass head-injury legislation in Idaho, was a Boise State University Broncos' special teams player in the Dec. 22, 2010 game when he was on the receiving end of a vicious hit from a University of Utah player.

It broke his face mask, sent his helmet flying and left him unconscious for several minutes. Kaiserman still experiences splitting headaches during periods of stress that he'd never known before.

That blindside shot at the 35-yard line ended his promising college career, but also made him the ideal spokesman for the NFL's effort to transform the culture of contact sports.

Former Bronco running back Kaiserman turns advocate for concussion legislation in state after head injury in 2010 bowl game ended his career

Once, players were encouraged to "suck it up" and ignore bell ringers or other head injuries. Kaiserman's bill would require proper medical clearance before they're allowed to return to the field.

"It's OK to be tough, but we've got to understand our limits," he said Monday. "In no situation should the value of the game be higher than the value of human life."

The Maaco Bowl injury, shown first on national television and then re-played nearly 2,000 times on YouTube, lends credibility to his cause.

Even among the ranks of Idaho lawmakers leery of having the government intervene too deeply into people's lives, it's tough not to listen to a guy many of them watched lie unconscious on his back for anxious minutes that night in Las Vegas.

"I've seen the hit," said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley. "Hasn't everybody?"

Ex-Bronco Sues Over Concussion

A former Boise State wrestler has filed a lawsuit against the school seeking $10,000 in damages along with money for medical bills and lost income for injuries he said occurred when he was allowed to continue wrestling after suffering a concussion at the 2010 Pac-10 championships.

Samuel Zystra's lawsuit alleges he suffered from impaired vision, severe bleeding, headaches and memory loss. The lawsuit alleges he was insulted and criticized by coaches and teammates for refusing to participate in the NCAA Championships.

Zystra said he dropped out of school, was dropped from the ROTC program and his behavior became erratic.

The Idaho Statesman reports Boise State issued a statement saying it was aware of the filing, but declined other comment.

Good Sport Brits? Don't Shake on It

ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Let's shake on it."

Not if you're one of Britain's Olympic athletes.

The 550-strong British team has been advised by its top doctor to avoid shaking hands with rivals and visiting dignitaries at the London Games this summer.

The reason: Olympic germs could cost Olympic gold.

And while etiquette experts fear the host country could look rude, the British Olympic Association is far more concerned with illness spreading through the camp and thwarting the country's bid for glory.

Britain's minimum target is to match its fourth-place finish at the Beijing Olympics four years ago when it brought home 47 medals.

And BOA chief medical officer Dr. Ian McCurdie believes strong personal hygiene could prove to be the difference between success and failure.

Asked if the traditional British greeting of a hand-shake should be off-limits, Dr. McCurdie said: "I think, within reason, yes."

McCurdie points out that the Olympic village environment could be a "pretty hostile one" for infections.

"Almost certainly, I believe, the greatest threat to performance is illness and possibly injury," he said. "At an Olympic Games or any major event the performance impact of becoming ill or even feeling a little bit ill can be significant."

Will the 10,000 visiting Olympians and hundreds of dignitaries see it that way?

Britain's authority on etiquette, Debrett's, isn't so sure.

"It is the normal English greeting," etiquette adviser Liz Wyse said. "It is a bid of a sad thing if people are worried about shaking hands in case it spreads disease. It's not very sociable."

never scored fewer than 70 until this season.

The 76 points by Colorado Northwestern is the most allowed by CSI in Rogers' tenure and the most allowed this season in SWAC play.

Perhaps the writing was on the wall for a CSI loss in its two wins over Colorado Northwestern this season. In both games, the Golden Eagles led just 24-22 at halftime, before putting the Spartans away early in the second.

"This isn't the same team we've played throughout the years. They've improved every season," Rogers said. "It used to be that in the region tournament playing Colorado was a basically a bye in the first round. Not so anymore. Eastern (USU-Eastern) will have a tough time with them. They've been in the games all season and a win was going to come for them."

NBA ROUNDUP

Jazz Hand Cavs Sixth Loss in a Row

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND • Al Jefferson scored 25 points, Gordon Hayward added 23, and the Utah Jazz beat Cleveland 109-100 on Monday night, sending the Cavaliers to their sixth straight loss.

Utah snapped a six-game road losing streak with only its fourth victory away from home in 17 games.

Rookie Kyrie Irving led Cleveland with 22 points — 21 in the second half. He scored 13 points in the third quarter.

Jefferson was 9 for 16 from the field and had 13 rebounds.

Hayward started Utah's first 36 games, but was benched in favor of Raja Bell, who returned after missing six games with strained left adductor. Hayward responded by going 8 for 11 from the field.

Utah point guard Devin Harris sustained a sprained right knee in the third quarter and didn't return.

Utah led by 17 points late in the second quarter and was still ahead 85-70 in the final seconds of the third period. The Jazz were ahead by double figures for most of the fourth quarter until Cleveland closed the lead to 105-100 on Alonzo Gee's with 48 seconds remaining.

Utah didn't convert on its next possession, but Ryan Hollins missed two free throws with 12.5 seconds remaining. The Jazz put the game away at the four line.

MAGIC 92, RAPTORS 88.

TORONTO • Dwight Howard had 36 points and 13 rebounds, Ryan Anderson added 19 points and 13 boards, and Orlando beat Toronto.

J.J. Redick scored 13 points, making a key 3 pointer in the final 10 seconds, and Jameer Nelson had 11 for the Magic, who have won five of seven and nine of 12.

WARRIORS 120, WIZARDS 100.

WASHINGTON • Monta Ellis scored 25 points and Klay Thompson added 18 to lead the Golden State Warriors in a 120-100 rout of the Washington Wizards on Monday night.

David Lee had 13 points and 10 rebounds for Golden State, which had six players in double figures.

THUNDER 95, MAVERICKS 91

OKLAHOMA CITY • Russell Westbrook scored 24 points, Kevin Durant added 22 and the Oklahoma City Thunder scored the final eight points to escape with a 95-91 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Monday night and run their home winning streak to 13 games.

Westbrook answered Dirk Nowitzki's fourth 3-pointer of the final period by hitting one of his own from the right wing to get Oklahoma City within 91-90 with 2:25 remaining, and Dallas didn't score again.

BULLS 92, PACERS 72

CHICAGO • Luol Deng scored 20 points, teaming with Derrick Rose in a decisive third-quarter rally that sent the Chicago Bulls to their seventh straight victory, 92-72 over the Indiana Pacers on Monday night.

Rose added 13 points and nine assists, hitting three 3-pointers while Deng had two in the third as the Bulls blew open a close game.

Joakim Noah had 17 rebounds to lead the Bulls to a dominating 60-32 edge on the boards.

BUCKS 97, 76ers 93

MILWAUKEE • Beno Udrih hit a go-ahead jumper with just under a minute left, and Milwaukee held off a late comeback by Philadelphia.

Brandon Jennings had 33 points and Drew Gooden added 25 points and 10 rebounds for the Bucks, who have been stuck in a funk for a little more than a month. Since beating the Miami Heat on Feb. 1, Milwaukee had lost 12 of its last 16 games coming into Monday night's game.

TIMBERWOLVES 95, CLIPPERS 94

MINNEAPOLIS • Kevin Love had 39 points and 17 rebounds to carry Minnesota over Los Angeles.

Darko Milicic had 13 points in a spot start for the injured Nikola Pekovic and Michael Beasley scored all nine of his points in the fourth quarter for the Wolves.

Utah Jazz's Al Jefferson shoots over Cleveland Cavaliers' Ryan Hollins in the second half in Cleveland on Monday.

Injuries

The NFL has been blitzed by lawsuits from former pro players who contend the league should have done more to prevent recurring head injuries.

Family members of former Chicago Bears safety Dave Duerson sued last month after he shot himself, while former stars like Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett worry they may eventually suffer from dementia from the on-field pounding they took during their careers.

Consequently, the NFL is working to address not only its own issues with traumatic brain injury, but it's also joined the push for state-level changes meant to help younger athletes — in other sports, as well.

Just last week, former Miami Dolphins star Nat Moore, whose 1984 "helicopter catch" where he was spun violently through the air is an iconic NFL image, asked the Florida Legislature to join more than 30 states with laws already in place governing high school athletes suspected of having suffered concussions.

"Whether they're college athletes like Matt who tell compelling stories, or they're retired NFL players like Nat Moore in Florida or (ex-Green Bay Packer) Mark Taucher in Wisconsin, it's their real life experiences that are able to help educate policy makers about these bills," said Jeff Miller, the NFL's top lobbyist in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Caroline Faure, an Idaho State University professor and concussion expert, said Idaho's proposal would require schools to develop guidelines consistent with those from the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention that will protect young athletes — not just from hyper-competitive coaches or parents reluctant to pull them from games, but also from themselves.

"We need to take those decisions away from the athletes, the coaches and their parents and put them in the hands of health care providers," said Faure, part of a coalition that began advocating for legislation in Idaho in 2009, before the NFL joined the effort. "If we'd had these policies in place already, there are at least two or three cases of catastrophic injury that wouldn't have occurred. Right now, it's a guessing game."

In 2005, a series of concussions nearly killed a football player at eastern Idaho's Teton High School; Kort Breckenridge suffered permanent brain damage. At a northern Idaho school last year, Priest River's Lamanna High School, at least nine players suffered concussions during the football season, including one who was hospitalized for a time in a coma.

Kaiserman suspects his own history with concussions actually began when he was still an aspiring Division I college player at Nampa's Skyview High School.

He was fielding a punt when an opposing player clobbered him.

"I came to when I was running off the field," Kaiserman recalled. "A coach asked me, 'Are you OK?' I told him I was all right and continued playing."

Four months after the 2010 Maaco Bowl hit, Kaiserman, his family members, team doctors and head coach Chris Peterson gathered around a conference table at BSU where the painful, if inevitable, verdict was delivered: He would never play college football again.

"It wasn't something I wanted to hear," he acknowledged, adding the will to play — even against the advice of experts — underscores why states like Idaho should have rules governing when athletes must be pulled from the field.

"I've heard stories of players and parents hiding concussions," Kaiserman said. "There's a huge need for this."

Today is Tuesday, March 6, the 66th day of 2012. There are 300 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 6, 1962, what became known as the Ash Wednesday Storm began pounding the mid-Atlantic coast; over a three-day period, the storm resulted in 40 deaths and caused more than $200 million in property damage.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1834, the city of York in Upper Canada was incorporated as Toronto.

In 1836, the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, fell to Mexican forces after a 13-day siege.

In 1853, Verdi's opera "La Traviata" premiered in Venice, Italy.

In 1857, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Dred Scott v. Sandford that Scott, a slave, was not an American citizen and could not sue for his freedom in federal court.

In 1902, Congress passed a measure creating a Census Office in the Department of the Interior (the office was moved to the Department of Commerce and Labor the following year).

In 1912, Oreos sandwich cookies (originally called "biscuits") were first introduced by Nabisco.

In 1933, a nationwide bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt went into effect.

In 1944, U.S. heavy bombers staged the first full-scale American raid on Berlin during World War II.

In 1957, the former British African colonies of the Gold Coast and Togoland became the independent state of Ghana.

In 1967, the daughter of Josef Stalin, Svetlana Alliluyeva, appeared at the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi and declared her intention to defect to the West.

In 1970, a bomb being built inside a Greenwich Village townhouse by the radical Weathermen accidentally went off, destroying the house and killing three group members.

In 1987, 193 people died when the British ferry Herald of Free Enterprise capsized off the Belgian port of Zeebrugge. The first "Lethal Weapon" movie, starring Mel Gibson and Danny Glover, was released.

Ten years ago: Independent Counsel Robert Ray issued his final report in which he wrote that former President Bill Clinton could have been indicted and probably would have been convicted in the scandal involving former White House intern Monica Lewinsky. Federal regulators approved the proposed $22 billion merger of Hewlett-Packard Co. and Compaq Computer Corp.

Five years ago: Vice President Dick Cheney's former chief of staff, I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, was convicted of lying and obstructing an investigation into the 2003 leak of CIA operative Valerie Plame's identity. (President George W. Bush later commuted Libby's 30-month prison sentence, but did not issue a pardon.) Two suicide bombers blew themselves up in Hillah, Iraq, killing at least 120 people in a crowd of Shiite pilgrims.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Our life is frittered away by detail ... Simplify, simplify."
— Henry David Thoreau

In the following deal Paul Lavings of Australia displayed both good table presence and a fine knowledge of probability. He and his partner were playing a weak no-trump, which led to his declaring four hearts from the South seat. Lavings won the lead of the club nine with the ace and drew trumps in three rounds. What would you have expected him to do next?

The natural play is to lead out the top diamonds and gulp when the suit splits 4-1. But the correct way to plan the play is to realize that if diamonds break 3-2, all approaches will succeed. If the suit splits 4-1, with West having shortage, there is no chance of playing diamonds for one loser, and that is also true if East has the singleton four. If East has a singleton eight, you have a legitimate play to hold your losers to one, and if he has a singleton honor, you have a pressure play to make West's life hard.

Realizing that, Lavings placed the diamond nine on the table at trick five. When West covered and the eight appeared from East, it was a simple matter to lead a low diamond from the board to his six in hand and West's jack, subsequently finessing against West's remaining honor. Declarer's play had a psychological edge too. Had West begun with J-10-8-4, for example, it might not have been that easy for him to duck the diamond nine. If he splits his honors, declarer has again managed to hold the diamond losers to one.

ANSWER: You will not stay short of game in spades. But do you have enough for a splinter bid of four diamonds, showing short diamonds and at least game values? This depends on partnership style, but I'd say no, though with the club ace instead of the king, I'd accept the more aggressive action. Some play a jump to three no-trump here as a raise to four spades with some defense; that might be more suitable.

magicvalley.com

IF MARCH 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: In the year to come, be as honest with yourself as you are with others. In April, your genuine friendliness attracts others to you and your business sense can add dollars and cents to your bank account. Early June is the best time to put business ideas into motion, to make a major purchase or make crucial decisions that affect your finances. Steer clear of major investments or changes to your banking practices in August when business sense is lacking. Your love of romance can distract you from what is really important in September.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lots of spit helps the polish. By working just a little bit harder, you can enrich your life. It could be that your bank account expands, but you might just as easily win a pat on the back for achievement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can believe your eyes and ears. Listen with your heart to the sprouting of a tiny seed of hope. This could be an excellent time to put your most important plans into motion or make progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can sometimes learn more by studying others than you can by reading books. Your inner child might be a budding psychologist; pay attention to body language and depend upon your intuitions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Complexities can be confusing. Other people may muddy the waters by offering you too many choices or you feel you must please everyone. The fewest new assumptions usually provide correct answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is easy to steer clear of slippery slopes. You can stay on the path to success by ignoring untested side tracks. Be straightforward and sincere and you can win the hearts and minds of anyone you meet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): When you can't win the game, sometimes you need to change the rules. By acting wiser than your years, you can adjust circumstances to suit your needs rather than adapting yourself to circumstances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discipline breeds confidence. When you are prepared for all possible outcomes, you will not be shocked or dismayed if things don't turn out as you imagined. A trusted companion can show you the ropes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Start something of importance while ambitions and energies are spurred by a spate of good luck and optimism. A purposeful plan of action will run smoothly for the next several days. Get on the ball.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Think independently. Other people cannot share your backlog of experience. They can hold their opinions, but unless their opinion affects your opinion, their opinion matters not at all.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Let luck be a lady. Success sometimes requires strategic maneuvering, powerful planning and posturing. Under these stars, it could be that who you know is more important than what you know.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you take an active interest in your future, much can be accomplished. Expect honesty and commitment from others and you will not be disappointed. Financial matters enjoy a period of growth.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Doctors who treat themselves have fools for patients. The mythical wounded healer can help others but is unable to help himself. Although you can help others, there are times you need expert advice.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
