Reactions Mixed to Wind Project Delay

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

ROGERSON • It's unlikely a sage grouse would win a popularity contest these days.

The endangered species candidate is ruffling a few more feathers by being the main reason behind a two-year delay on a federal agency's decision on the China

Mountain Wind Project.

The wind energy project would straddle the Idaho and Nevada border in a wind-rich area with ample room for the proposed 170 wind turbines on 25,500 public acres. However, it's also home to some of the bird's most critical habitat.

"The large reason for the delay is because it's going to encompass so much public land on priority sage grouse habitat," said Jessica Gardetto, spokeswoman for the Bureau of Land Management office in Boise.

In 2010, federal officials decided sage grouse warranted protection provided by the Endangered Species Act, but they won't officially decide whether to list the bird until 2015.

The BLM now has three years to improve its sage grouse conservation efforts and also prove it can sustain the bird's habitat. One way the agency plans to do this in Idaho is by taking the next two years to finish amending its management plan for the Jarbidge area, Gardetto said.

RES Americas, the wind project's developer, offered only brief comment on its reaction to the federal agency's decision.

"We're disappointed and we're weighing our options," said Suzanne Leta Liou, spokeswoman for the Colorado-based company.

Leta Liou declined to comment how the delay would affect RES Americas or if the company will fight the agency's decision.

Filer Police Chief Tim Reeves patrols school zones in the city on Thursday. A bill moving through the House would give the state more control over state highway speed zones within Idaho cities' limits, but city officials say they're in a better place to determine what's safe.

Is Local Control Too Slow?

A House proposal would give the state more authority over highway speed zones through cities, but some city officials say they're in a better position to set safe speeds.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Anyone who's driven through Bellevue on their way to a weekend of Wood River Valley recreation knows well the frustration of getting caught in a 25 mph zone that stretches well beyond the city's main cluster of storefronts.

Is it a speed trap, or a necessary tool to force drivers to slow as they blast by subdivisions and businesses?

On Thursday, the House Transportation

Committee passed a bill that would return control over those speed limits to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Currently, cities are allowed to set speed limits on state highways that run through their boundaries, thanks to legislation passed 15 years ago. That bill was co-sponsored by Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, who said earlier this week that local control of the speed limits is crucial.

But that power has been abused, said bill author Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls. He called Bellevue's slow zone a speed trap, and said the state has competent engineers who can do traffic safety studies while staying mindful of traffic flow.

"Bellevue is my inspiration," Smith said.

During the meeting, Rep. Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d'Alene, pointed out plenty of other examples around the state. He cited zones near Donnelly and New Meadows where highway speeds are quickly reduced to long, slow stretches.

"The speed limit is 25 miles an hour for the longest area," Nonini said.

Smith's bill allows local cities to appeal ITD's decisions. During the committee meeting, Smith said those appeals would be processed quickly.

Craig Eckles, Bellevue's development service director, said he's still wary of the idea of the state boosting speed limits in his town. Though the limit is currently 25, most people drive between 32 and 35 mph through the Wood River Valley's southernmost town. If the state were to boost the limits, that would mean drivers would go even faster, he said.

This woman claimed several thousand dollars she'd thought was lost. Think you might have unclaimed property, too?

BY ANDREW WEEKS

TWIN FALLS • When Genevieve Allen moved to Meridian from California in 2007, she left a certificate of deposit in a bank to gain interest. When she called about it later, the bank told her it didn't have the CD any longer.

"Check with Idaho," she said she was told. "I was a little scared."

Allen called the Idaho State Treasurer's Office, told a staffer her situation, and waited several weeks for a response. The office sent her a letter requesting additional information. It was a bit of a process, she said, but she finally was reunited with several thousand dollars.

Many other Idahoans' names, for one reason or another, end up on the state's unclaimed property list.

Currently, there's about $66 million of unclaimed property in Idaho, said Cozette Walters, administrator of unclaimed property for the state treasurer. But getting it back into the hands of its rightful owners is a challenge.

"You think you'd never forget to leave a forwarding address," she said. "But people get divorced, they get remarried, they forget to follow up."

Allen said she didn't forget about her CD when she left California. "I thought it was still there, but the banks had changed hands."

The term unclaimed property usually does not refer to physical property such as land or a house, Walters said.

State Considers Clearinghouse for Online Classes

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With more students taking online classes in the future, the state is working out the details about which classes they can choose from.

High school students — starting with the class of 2016 — will have to take two online classes in order to graduate. The requirement was approved last year under the Students Come First laws.

On Thursday, the House Education Committee advanced a bill that would create an online course clearinghouse with a list of state-approved classes.

If approved, the Idaho State Department of Education could spend up to $500,000 in technology funds next year to create the system.

The College of Southern Idaho wants to be a vendor for online classes. But college officials haven't applied yet through the ISDE.

"The fact is we've been a vendor for online education," Instructional Dean John Miller said,

College of Southern Idaho Information Technology Services employee Gary Baum pauses to speak as he logs onto a computer in the 'Technosphere' Thursday in the Twin Falls college's Canyon building. CSI hopes to be among the vendors that provide online classes to Idaho public high school students who, starting with this year's freshmen, will be required to take two online classes in order to graduate.

but it's just a matter of formality and getting approved by the state.

Melissa McGrath, ISDE communications director, said the state is currently going through the process of finding vendors. Requests for proposals will go out in April.

CSI already offers dual-credit classes, in which high school students earn high school and college credit simultaneously.

Miller said most of that involves face-to-face instruction at high schools. But about 25 percent of instruction is delivered over the Internet.

"More students taking coursework online would stretch our resources," Miller said. But the college's fastest-growing division, he said, is students wanting to take advantage of online options.

School districts can choose their own online provider if classes meet Idaho standards and teachers are certified through the state.

The Twin Falls School District plans to continue using the Idaho Digital Learning Academy — the state's online school.

"The cost is much more reasonable than other vendors we've seen," Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said. It costs about $75 per student for each IDLA class.

But Dobbs said he's open to the possibility of working with CSI, too.

An all-online class, though, isn't the only option for students to meet the graduation requirement.

Filer Police Chief Tim Reeves makes a stop after a driver was speeding through a school zone along U.S. Highway 30 on Thursday.

Speed Zones

“That’s human nature,” he said.

Eckles understands drivers’ frustrations. After U.S. Highway 93 narrows to two lanes north of Twin Falls, there are few places to pass in the hour and a half drive to Wood River Valley locations. By the time drivers get to Bellevue and the road widens to four lanes, they want to speed up.

But Eckles has to think of Bellevue’s residents, he said.

Bud Compher, Filer’s director of public works, doubted the state’s ability to assess an individual community’s needs. Both Filer and Bellevue have no stop signs or lights to slow down cars, and rely solely on speed limits to regulate traffic.

“If the state runs their highway through the city, the city ought to have the right to say the speed,” Compher said.

He’s also concerned about keeping traffic slow because of the two Filer schools along U.S. Highway 30, which runs through the middle of the town west of Twin Falls.

“It’s a safety thing,” he said.

The bill will go to the House, where it will be amended and voted on.

Property

Rather, it’s money — checking accounts, savings accounts, stock dividends, mutual funds and utility refunds — or items stored in a safety deposit box. At times coins, gems, jewelry and stamps are reported unclaimed by hospitals, hotels and financial institutions.

Idaho exempts property valued at $50 or less from being reported, she said. Most businesses do turn it over to the treasurer’s office, however; otherwise they keep it as a liability.

“Businesses turn over to us what money they’ve been holding, and it makes us custodian to that money,” Walters said. “But if your name is there, it truly is yours; it belongs to you or your heirs.”

The state wants to get it back into your hands, she said. Once an owner or heir finds that he or she has unclaimed property, and the treasurer’s office verifies the true recipient, the state tries to reunite the property with its rightful owner, usually within 90 days.

“We try to make it a simple process,” Walters said. “We process claims, and sometimes we might come back and ask people for more evidence. But our goal is to process claims as quickly as possible.”

The treasurer’s office often lists unclaimed property in newspapers, especially toward the end of the calendar year, but people also can be proactive by searching their own names at the office’s website.

Don’t panic if you think you’ve lost touch with a bank account or some dividends, Allen said. Instead, check with the state.

You might be surprised at what you find.

Second Conspirator Sentenced for Walmart Bomb Threat

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • One of four people accused of calling in a bomb threat as a diversion for a planned burglary was sentenced last month in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Cassius Reynolds, 23, received three years’ supervised probation in lieu of a three- to seven-year prison term on Feb. 3.

Reynolds had pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit burglary. Prosecutors dropped an accompanying charge of false reporting of an explosive in December.

Reynolds, along with Levi Hays, 19, Terry Plew, 21, and Angel Estabrook, 19, were all accused by police of calling in a bogus bomb threat on the Twin Falls Walmart on Oct. 10. Their real target was a Subway restaurant on Kimberly Road, which they intended to burglarize. According to statements made to the investigating officers, the suspects’ plan was to take money from the restaurant to gamble at Fort Hall casinos.

Reynolds’ co-conspirators were also all charged with conspiracy to commit burglary. After pleading guilty, Hays also received three years’ probation, while Estabrook is scheduled to be sentenced March 15 and Plew’s sentencing is scheduled for March 26.

Drills Test Regionwide Mass Casualty Response Skills

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • Dozens of medical and law enforcement personnel responded Thursday to the scene of a terrible crash, where a plane had hit a school bus full of students.

The good news for those students was the crash scene west of the Burley airport wasn’t real. The staged scenario was meant to test the skills and equipment of those who responded.

South-central Idaho’s six hospitals, in Burley, Rupert, Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome and Ketchum, participated in similar drills Thursday — part of their requirements to receive Homeland Security grant funding.

“It was an excellent drill, it went better than previous drills that we’ve had,” said Maria Hoggan, ER nurse manager for Cassia Regional Medical Center and emergency preparedness coordinator for the hospital. “We learn something new each time we have one of these drills.”

Hoggan said the hospital specifically tested communications and incident command during this drill.

Dispatchers sent out the call for the drill at 10 a.m., with law enforcement, fire and ambulance crews and an extrication team from Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue responding.

Law enforcement officers directed the scene and performed crowd control, while medical personnel performed triage and loaded patients into ambulances. Once at the hospital, Hoggan said, patients were taken to a triage tent and treated.

“The hospital today was actually full so the disaster really stressed and tested our capacity,” Hoggan said. “Because staff was helping real patients there were not many to help with the drill. But it made us think about what we’d do in an instance like this if the hospital was already full.”

Normally the hospital would utilize other hospitals in the area, she said. But in this instance, the other hospitals were engaged in drills as well.

During the incident, the fire department was also called out to a real emergency.

Hoggan said a debriefing was held at the hospital afterward for all those involved to deconstruct what happened.

“It allows us to strengthen our weaknesses,” she said.

Online Classes

In Twin Falls and Kimberly, both school districts want to continue using a “blended model” where parts of a class are online, but there’s still a teacher in the classroom.

“That is the direction we want to go,” Superintendent Kathleen Noh said.

It’s an option that’s allowed under the state requirement.

Niki Walker, IDLA’s content development team lead, said a “blended class” means that between 51-79 percent of instruction is delivered online. The other time might be spent interacting with other students or having one-on-one time with a teacher.

The other option is a “flex model” — in which 80-100 percent of the class is online. Walker said teachers provide “as-needed support.”

Reactions

The BLM’s decision isn’t resting easy with Twin Falls County commissioners, either. Commissioner Terry Kramer said the agency’s decision came as a surprise.

“Of course we’re disappointed that the decision isn’t coming forward,” Kramer said. “I would love to see the wind turbines up there. They generate money and produce green energy, but you have to make sure they don’t have negative effects on the area.”

BLM’s decision will delay economic opportunity for

Twin Falls and Elko counties, Kramer said. The project was estimated to bring in 750 temporary construction jobs and almost 50 permanent jobs.

“I think it’s prudent that the BLM takes the time to look into this project, but gosh, we would like to see it developed,” he said.

For others, like Shoshone Basin Local Working Group member Rich Yankey, the delay will allow more time study China Mountain’s impact on grouse habitat.

Yankey isn’t opposed to energy development, but said constructing the project could cause the most harm to the land.

“They talk about rehab in that area after they’re done, but it’s pretty hard once a road is put in to keep the rest of the public off of it,” he said. “It’s just not the company that you have to consider, but the secondary effects.”

Even building temporary roads requires destroying a sizable amount of terrain, Yankey said.

“A project of that size and magnitude needs to be thoroughly studied,” he said. “It gives everybody a chance to see if there are other alternatives that would be better than what’s being offered now.”

Buhl Man Accused of Assault on Deputy

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • A Buhl man has been charged with aggravated assault on an officer and destruction of evidence after allegedly threatening a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy with a knife.

Deputies responded to a home southwest of Buhl because someone had called 911 twice from the residence on Feb. 24 just before 6 a.m.

According to court records Matthew James Pragnell, 28, answered the door and told deputies everything was OK and allowed them to look around the home.

At that point deputies said Pragnell started backing up, grabbed a knife that had been hooked to his pants and appeared to be unfolding it.

One deputy yelled at Pragnell to drop the knife, pulled his gun, and yelled several more times before Pragnell sat on the couch, knife still in hand, the report states.

Finally, Pragnell took his hand off the knife and deputies began to pat him down.

According to the report, Pragnell began to resist the deputies and one pulled out and activated his Taser. Pragnell then allegedly ran down a hallway and into a bathroom. Deputies entered the bathroom in time to see Pragnell flush a small amount of what they say was methamphetamine down the toilet.

Deputies said Pragnell continued to be resistant as they tried to get him in a patrol car and allegedly told them he had been self-medicating with meth for mental issues.

A preliminary hearing in the case is scheduled for today.

Mountain Home Democrat to Seek District 23 House Seat

by the Legislature. According to her campaign website, Chiarella grew up in Glens Ferry and earned her master's degree in education from the University of Idaho in 2005.

Legislators from District 23 will represent Elmore, Owyhee and western Twin Falls counties under the state's new legislative districts. Chiarella will face House incumbent Pete Nielsen, R-Mountain Home, and GOP challengers Matthew Bundy, also of Mountain Home, and Steven Millington of Buhl.

Chiarella, a fourth-generation Idahoan, is running on a platform opposing the Students Come First education reforms passed last year

"I am a teacher of seven years and over the past year and a half I have been a community organizer working to overturn the damaging education reform legislation, which lit a fire in me that cannot be extinguished," Chiarella said in a written release announcing her candidacy. "I want to continue the fight to bring about responsible, common sense governance back to Idaho."

I-84 Crash Sends Two to Hospital

TIMES-NEWS

GOODING • A two-vehicle crash sent two Gooding residents to North Canyon Medical Center Wednesday evening. Idaho State Police say alcohol is believed to be a factor.

At about 6 p.m. ISP responded to a report of an injury crash on Interstate 84 near the Gooding/Jerome County line.

Police said Mark Leonard, 51, of Twin Falls, was traveling at a high rate of speed in a 2004 Nissan 350Z when he attempted to pass between a truck hauling a semitrailer and a 2008 Chevrolet Cobalt driven by Dexter Tiggs, 39, of Gooding.

Tiggs' vehicle went into a slide, went into the median and then rolled one time, finally coming to rest on its wheels after being struck by Leonard's, the ISP report stated.

Both Tiggs and his passenger Lisa Lucas, 45, were transported to the Gooding hospital with minor injuries.

Leonard was taken into custody for driving under the influence of alcohol. Everyone involved was wearing seat belts and west-bound traffic was reduced to one lane for about two hours as a result of the crash.

Network of Idaho Ham Radio Operators Prepare for Worst

POST REGISTER

IDAHO FALLS • They hunker in basements and home “ham shacks,” their fingers tuning dials, squelching static.

They speak into handsets, call signs floating through the radio waves and relaying through radio repeater stations, waiting for responses from the next block or the next continent.

They are ham radio operators. They are silent to all but each other, at least until an emergency strikes and their hobby might save your house.

Steven Taylor of Idaho Falls was running the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints ham radio net during the Feb. 22 windstorm when The Cottages housing development in Ammon began flooding.

A call on the radio asked for help. He relayed the message on the radio, then phoned contacts on the LDS emergency response network.

More than 30 people convened at the housing development within 30 minutes armed with sandbags to fight the flood. Another 30 or more showed up before the hour was out.

Taylor is the Bonneville County Emergency Communications Radio Officer. In the event of a county-wide emergency, Taylor will run the ham radio at the county Emergency Operations Center as a failsafe if the newer, more sophisticated equipment fails.

The county has never had to activate the operations center. But if a catastrophe hits, Tom Lenderink, the county emergency management director, said he’s relieved to have the battery-powered, old-school hams on his side.

“If our regular police and sheriff and fire radio system fails, or if cellphones fail and the Internet goes down, those guys can still communicate with their ham radios,” Lenderink said.

“If our regular police and sheriff and fire radio system fails, or if cellphones fail and the Internet goes down, those guys can still communicate with their ham radios.”

Tom Lenderink, Bonneville County emergency management director

Taylor is way into the ham scene. He wears a baseball hat embroidered with his call sign, KC7IHV.

He’s earned the highest of the three licenses available - amateur extra - and teaches a class at Eastern Idaho Technical College, where he’s helped more than 300 local operators earn their licenses. Taylor also runs several of the local ham networks, which target different areas on different nights.

Taylor has used his radio to talk with operators in Australia and England. He said he’s taken up amateur radio mostly for emergency preparedness. Battery-powered radios will outlast cellphones’ battery life by leaps and bounds if power goes down during a catastrophe.

However, different operators have different interests, Taylor said.

“Some are in it for the hobby. They build a radio in a little box and talk all over the world in Morse code,” Taylor said. “Other guys, all they want to do is talk. Then you have other guys who do contests. They might make 4,000 contacts (in a contest)”

Taylor joined Craig Loertscher at the technical college Tuesday to help conduct the Eagle Rock Amateur Radio Club net call.

Handset in hand, Loertscher, the club president, ran through a list of local 49 call signs, his voice shooting across the airwaves from the antenna on top of the building and relaying off the repeater on Iona Hill throughout the Snake River Valley.

That night, 28 network regulars responded along with one visitor. They each reported “no traffic,” meaning there were no emergencies at their locations.

Loertscher said he knows more than 50 operators by their call signs.

SALT LAKE TRIBUNE • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Helen Radkey, who has publicized the LDS Church's proxy baptisms, speaks to a reporter in Salt Lake City in November 2009. Radkey said Thursday she had been blocked from the LDS genealogical database and was considering how she might continue her efforts toward revealing the ongoing practice.

Mormon Church Restricts Access to Jewish Names

Church says move is aimed at ending proxy baptisms, but critics say it blocks attempts to monitor whether the practice continues.

BY BRIAN SKOLOFF
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Mormon leaders have put up a virtual firewall in their massive genealogical database to block out anyone who attempts to access the names of hundreds of thousands of Holocaust victims the church has agreed not to posthumously baptize.

The move comes amid criticism that the Salt Lake City-based Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints hasn't done enough to live up to commitments to stop its members worldwide from performing the baptism ritual on Holocaust victims and other notable Jews.

The new system will immediately block church members' access should they try to seek out names of Holocaust victims or other notable figures that have been flagged as not suitable for proxy baptisms. The church said the move is aimed at ending the practice. But critics say it merely serves to block anyone from monitoring whether the posthumous baptisms continue.

"By not allowing public access to the records, it creates the illusion they have something to hide," said Jewish genealogist Gary Mokotoff, who was involved in negotiations with the church over ending the practice for the past two decades.

Mormons believe the baptism ritual allows deceased people a way to the afterlife — if they choose to accept it.

But the practice offends members of many other religions, especially Jews, who have expressed outrage at attempts to alter the religion of Holocaust victims because they were killed based on their beliefs.

In the 1990s, after negotiations with Jewish leaders, the church agreed to end to the practice, but revelations by an ex-Mormon researcher have shown it continues.

In recent weeks, researcher Helen Radkey, using confidential Mormon sources who had access to the LDS database, revealed that Mormon temples had posthumously baptized the family of Holocaust survivor and Jewish rights advocate Simon Wiesenthal, Anne Frank, a Jewish teenager forced into hiding in Amsterdam during the Holocaust and killed in a concentration camp, and Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl, a Jewish writer who was murdered while on assignment in Pakistan.

Mormon church leaders, in a letter to temples worldwide, asked that members be reminded of the policy during Sunday services this past weekend.

"The church is committed to preventing the misguided practice of submitting the names of Holocaust victims and prominent individuals for proxy baptism," LDS spokesman Michael Purdy said this week. "In addition to reiterating its policy to members, the church has implemented a new technological barrier to prevent abuse."

Radkey said Thursday she had already been blocked from the database under the new system, and was considering how she might continue her efforts toward revealing the ongoing practice.

"I don't believe for five minutes that they're going to stop baptizing Jewish Holocaust victims," Radkey said.

Purdy dismissed claims that the church was merely seeking to block Radkey's access, and said this week's move was just another step in the church's effort to stop the practice worldwide. He said that while nothing is foolproof, the church remained committed to keeping its word.

"We are doing exactly what we have been asked to do and what we said we would do — denying access to names that should not be submitted because they are against our policy," Purdy said. "There is no account for a Helen Radkey. If she, or anyone else, is misusing a Church member's identity to search for Holocaust names, then the system is set up to block those kinds of activities."

Federal Judge Sets Deadline to Unseal Report on Idaho Prisons

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge on Thursday set a deadline for unsealing an expert's report on medical care for inmates at an Idaho correctional facility, saying opposing lawyers for the state and prisoners have one week to agree on a statement to accompany the findings.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill appointed the expert to create the report as part of his effort to bring a decades-old lawsuit between the state and inmates at the Idaho State Correctional Institution to a close. Correctional health care expert Dr. Marc Stern filed the report under seal last month.

Attorneys for the state argued that the report should remain sealed until both sides have a chance to contest it, because otherwise, they said, the public could wrongly assume Stern's findings amounted to a court order.

But during a hearing Thursday, Winmill said the public's right to know outweighed the state's concern. He gave both sides one week to agree on wording for a stamp to put on each page of the report stating that it isn't the court's official ruling, and said after that, it would be unsealed.

Though still under seal, it's clear the report isn't flattering to the state. Deputy Idaho Attorney Generals Mark Kubinski and Colleen Zahn told the court that it contained inflammatory statements that if released, would be likely to cause an "unjustified public scandal."

Zahn told Winmill that the state needed a chance to "provide information that shows the conclusions in that report are very inaccurate."

But Jason Prince, an attorney with law firm Stoel Rives, which is representing the inmates, noted that Stern was ordered by the court to research and review the medical care at the prison and file his report under penalty of perjury. Just because the information Stern found might embarrass the state was no reason to seal it, Prince argued.

The lawsuit began in the early 1980s when so many inmates from the Idaho State Correctional Institution began filing lawsuits that the cases threatened to clog Idaho's federal dockets. The judge presiding over the lawsuits at that time noted similarities between them and combined them all into one class-action lawsuit, which became known as the "Balla case" after lead plaintiff Walter Balla.

Several rulings against the state were handed down over the next three decades, with various federal judges ordering Idaho leaders to stop prison overcrowding, reduce violence, provide prisoners with warm clothes and improve access to medical and mental health care.

But the case kept bouncing back to the federal courts as inmates maintained problems at the prison continued.

Most recently, the complaints have focused on medical and mental health care — a premise that seemed to be at least partly supported by the state's own decision in recent years to fine its medical care provider more than $382,500 for failing to meet some health care requirements set by the state.

The state contends that the Idaho State Correctional Institution has changed dramatically in both its physical facilities and operations over the past several years and that rulings in the long-running lawsuit are increasingly difficult to apply to the prison as it stands today.

Idaho officials contend that if there are still problems at ISCI, the inmates should file new lawsuits that would accurately reflect the present circumstances.

University, Education Board Deny Allegations in Fraternity Fall Case

Family says student should have been protected by older fraternity members and prevented from drinking at party the night she was hurt.

MOSCOW (AP) • The University of Idaho and the state Board of Education are fighting a lawsuit that says they should be held liable for severe injuries suffered by a former student who fell from a window at a fraternity house party.

Lawyers for the university and state board deny responsibility in recently filed responses to a civil lawsuit brought by Amanda Andaverde, of Caldwell, and her parents, Esmeralda Banda and Raul Andaverde.

Andaverde and her parents claim the university, state board and several fraternities and sororities on the Moscow campus did not do enough to ensure the safety of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house where she was injured in 2009.

Plaintiffs say the third-floor window did not have proper hardware to prevent it from fully opening, including stops, locks or other devices.

Andaverde, who was 19 at the time, fell 27 feet and suffered bone fractures and debilitating injuries. Her family also says she should have been protected by older fraternity members and prevented from drinking at the party the night she was injured.

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News reports that lawyers for the university and state board say any damages suffered by Andaverde would have been caused by "acts or omissions of persons other than" the university or state board.

Lawyers for the fraternity and other "John Doe" defendants associated with the organization have yet to file their responses.

The case has been assigned to Judge Michael Griffin of Grangeville.

Nearly 250 Protest Ultrasound Proposal at Capitol

BOISE (AP) • Nearly 250 people descended on the Idaho Capitol to protest a bill requiring women to get an ultrasound of their fetus before they can get an abortion.

Gathered on the Capitol steps Thursday, the crowd waved signs and hammered Sen. Chuck Winder's proposed legislation, calling it a political tactic to shame and bully women already burdened with a difficult health decision.

Dawn Phipps, a 58-year-old mother of three from Boise, says she's outraged Winder's initiative is happening in Idaho, calling it demeaning and shameful to women.

Kyme Graziano — was shared a sign with her 16-year-old daughter, a Boise High School student — called the measure cruel and blasted it as step backward for women's rights.

The bill is due a hearing in the Senate State Affairs committee next week.

Feds Tell Court Idaho Rep. Hart Not Immune from Taxes

BY BETSY Z. RUSSELL
Spokesman-Review

BOISE • The U.S. Justice Department wants a federal judge to toss out Idaho Rep. Phil Hart's arguments that his status as a state legislator should bar IRS claims against him for back taxes.

Federal authorities are seeking to foreclose on Hart's Athol, Idaho log home for $550,000 in back federal income taxes, penalties and interest. In fighting the move, Hart claimed that because a notice of deficiency was sent to him while the Legislature was in session, the whole case should be tossed out.

His Kentucky lawyer, Charles McFarland, argued in court documents that Hart's immunity from being served any such notices during a legislative session, to "prevent interference with the state legislative process." Wrote McFarland, "This has been a fundamental principle since the foundation of country and even the law of nations."

He cited a 1788 court case from the Court of Common Pleas of Pennsylvania to back up his argument, but Justice Department lawyer Adam Strait noted that decision predated the U.S. Constitution, and was expressly rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court in a 1934 decision.

"Federal law, not state law, determines the scope of legislative immunity from a federal-law cause of action," Strait wrote in court documents. "And there is no set of facts under which Hart is entitled to assert legislative immunity for failing to pay his federal income taxes."

Hart, a fourth-term Republican lawmaker, is a tax protester who stopped filing federal income tax returns in 1996 while he unsuccessfully pressed a federal lawsuit charging that the federal income tax is unconstitutional. He also stopped filing state income tax returns, and has argued that the Idaho state income tax also is unconstitutional. Hart says he started filing again after several years, but both federal and state authorities say he's never fully paid up.

Hart has an appeal pending at the Idaho Supreme Court over more than $53,000 in unpaid state income taxes, penalties and interest.

Since he's been serving as a lawmaker, he's sought delays in his state and federal tax cases five times due to his duties as a state legislator.

Strait has filed a motion to strike Hart's legislative immunity defense; Hart has argued for denying the motion "and that this issue proceed to the factual issues of whether the 90-day letter was actually issued to Hart while he was in a session of the Idaho Legislature."

Strait wrote, "Legislators are not a special class of citizens protected from suit, or prosecution, arising out of any activity that could assist in the performance of their official duties; ... much less a special class protected from suit arising out of any activity at all."

In a reply urging against

Hart's arguments, Strait wrote, "No federal court has extended to a state legislator immunity from process in a federal suit merely because the state legislature happened to be in session."

Hart also has cited a slew of other defenses in his bid to keep the IRS from foreclosing, including that the federal agency is wrong about his owing the taxes and that he was improperly denied legal deductions.

The IRS' foreclosure suit against Hart is scheduled to go to trial in April of 2013 before U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge, who hasn't yet ruled on the motion regarding the immunity defense.

House Panel Passes Boise County Bailout

BOISE (AP) • Some are calling it a bailout, but lawmakers from a normally tax-wary House committee narrowly approved a measure to help Boise County pay off a large debt.

The small county was ordered in 2010 to pay a $5.4 million judgment after a jury ruled it illegally blocked the creation of a teen treatment center.

OUR VIEW

Say No to GARVEE’s Last Gasp

For claiming they’re fiscally responsible, Idaho legislators sure can be fiscally confusing.

Take the Senate, for example, which recently voted 19-14 to give new life to an old program that put Idaho into debt to accomplish transportation projects.

GARVEE bonds — short for Grant Anticipation Revenue Vehicles — allow the state to borrow money for highway work, then repay it through future federal highway allocations. The state picks up the interest payments with its own funds.

S.1317a, which now sits in the House Transportation Committee, would allow transportation officials to use what’s left of Idaho’s GARVEE bonding authority to put a dent in the state’s backlog of bridge work.

The bridges do need the attention. But we’ve already sold enough of Idaho’s soul to GARVEE.

The debt was the cornerstone of former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne’s supposed legacy project, Connecting Idaho — an initial 13 road projects around the state over 10 years. In April 2005, after a battle to get GARVEE through the Idaho House, Kempthorne celebrated with a trip to Twin Falls, where he signed the law while bragging the Magic Valley would receive a third bridge over the Snake River.

That would be the bridge that the state just announced last month is off the table until at least 2030.

The fact is, Connecting Idaho devolved into largely Connecting Treasure Valley. Politics limited geographically where many of its projects took place, leaving rural legislators unimpressed with the program.

Meanwhile, debt service has consumed a large share of the funds Idaho has available for roads maintenance — hampering efforts to address bridges, highways and anything else for years to come. If federal roads allocations ever seriously decline (remember that national deficit?), that may further cramp the state’s ability to conduct basic upkeep with its remaining dollars.

Sadly, none of these are new arguments — they’ve been reasons to avoid GARVEE since shortly after Kempthorne’s program began.

It’s been a good couple of years since the Legislature really grappled with transportation funding — the recession took the wind out of those sails. So, it’s nice to see some thought put back into Idaho’s substantial infrastructure needs.

But in a state that prides itself on balancing its budget and not spending money it doesn’t have, legislators should examine what returning to GARVEE will once again risk us further down the road.

Zip Line Deserved Approval

I am a successful Twin Falls businesswoman and a supporter of the zip line for a number of reasons:

A new recreational venue and, right now, a hot destination for vacationers who want to add a zip line to their itinerary.

The Olympics in Canada had one. If you watched the Super Bowl, you saw one. Australia claims the longest one. Even the precious rain forest has one.

No. 2 is revenues; after all, is not tourism one of our main economic pluses?

Mr. Lezamiz says 3,500 vehicles will go by there; that’s 3,500 (or more) persons to need a hotel, visit the mall and downtown, eat at local restaurants, etc.

No. 3 is the locals. A survey was done and the percentage was in favor. Are we not a democracy and the yeas win over the nays?

No. 4: The gentleman who owns the land is the owner of the golf course in the canyon and he wishes to expand his recreational options by adding the zip line.

I do not think the ones against it have educated themselves on it. Jody has put forth an excellent business plan and website that will lure vacationers to our area. Enthusiasts who wish to do one will come — “Build it, they will come.” After all, the bridge jumpers come from all over (and they use the visitor center parking lot).

Besides, we taxpayers built a walking trail along the scenic edge of the canyon and it’s safe.

Also, the Jerome side, Blue Lakes Golf Course, has the answer to slow and control traffic — a light system. That was brought up at one of the local planning and zoning meetings. So maybe those that feel traffic is an unsafe situa-

I will be traveling to Coeur d’Alene to represent the Magic Valley in the Ms. Senior Idaho pageant. We are allowed one minute to describe our town. In 40 seconds, my speech is as follows: “Hi, my name is President Kennedy said, “Ask not what your country can do for you, rather what you can do for your country.” President Bush Sr. said, “Let’s be a kinder and gentler nation.”

Are we citizens not tired of all the protesting?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Friedman Expansion Is No Solution

It seems there’s a great misperception among valley residents that the proposed expansion of the Friedman Memorial Airport is the affordable solution to our airport reliability issues. Yet the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority has repeatedly stated — and published — information that while this expansion would bring the airport into compliance with the Federal Aviation Administration, it is not the long-term solution needed, nor is it affordable.

From a document entitled FAA Whitepaper: “Extensive impacts to the Airport and its environs, including project costs estimated at between $230 million to $270 million would be required to meet C-III standards at the existing site. And, even if such improvements were undertaken, the FAA has stated the no options exist to improve the reliability of flight operations at the Airport in periods of reduced visibility. As such, it would be expected that current rates of flight diversions and/or cancellations in winter months, averaging 20 percent in recent years, should be expected to continue indefinitely.”

The willingness of the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority to pursue a temporary solution to a long-term problem defies logic: spend $230 to 270 million now and deal with the same issues in 15 to 20 years or strive for a permanent solution at a cost of $326.9 million.

The replacement airport would be in compliance with the FAA regulations, “capable of accommodating existing and future aviation demand,” and improve the reliability issues without having aircraft landing from the north — over downtown Hailey — during inclement weather and without negatively impacting the well-being of the valley’s residents or their property values.

It’s time for “wheels up,” FMAA — let’s get this project off the ground!

IDAHO BRIEFS

Fugitive Caught Two Months after Escape

BOISE • Authorities have arrested an Idaho inmate two months after he escaped from a work crew. KTVB-TV reports that 49-year-old Curtis Engman was arrested Thursday afternoon at a home in Nampa. Engman escaped while installing office cubicles at the Nampa Police Station on Jan. 10. He was serving time at the South Idaho Correctional Institution for trafficking drugs and had three years remaining on a 15-year sentence. He faces five more years in prison for the escape.

Mont. Man Gets at Least 5 Years for Bank Robbery

REXBURG • A 34-year-old Montana man faces at least another three years in prison for the January 2010 robbery of Zions Bank in Rexburg. Madison County authorities say 7th District Judge Greg Moeller sentenced John H. Green of Livingston, Mont., on Monday to five to 20 years in prison. He received credit for the 711 days he has already served. He also must pay restitution.

House Panel OKs Concussion Bill

BOISE • Idaho's latest legislative effort to protect youth athletes from catastrophic concussions cleared a House committee. The State Affairs Committee voted 15-3 Thursday for the bill, a product of a local Idaho coalition and the National Football League's own efforts to make sports safer. Former Boise State University football player Matt Kaiserman, the NFL's lobbyist, told lawmakers the bill includes two main benefits. First, Idaho schools could design their own protocols governing when athletes should be pulled from games after a head injury — and when they can return. Kaiserman also said the measure would shield coaches and school districts from liability when they follow the standards.

Idaho Bill Gives School Building Fund Flexibility

BOISE • The state Board of Education is seeking more flexibility in using a fund created in 2006 after Idaho's method of paying for school construction was deemed unconstitutional. The $25 million pool of money that was set aside by lawmakers has been used once, in northern Idaho's Plummer-Worley Joint School District. The district tapped more than $11 million to replace its elementary school, where a roof was in danger of collapse. State Board of Education director Mike Rush sits on a panel that oversees the fund. He says the first-time use of the money highlighted a few issues that could be problematic, including the lack of a provision allowing the panel to access additional money should construction costs overrun.

Boise Man Pleads Guilty to Forgery

BOISE • A 31-year-old Boise man has pleaded guilty to giving false information to a federal mine safety and health inspector last year. Federal prosecutors say Jason Jones entered a guilty plea in U.S. District Court Wednesday to one count of submitting a false document. Investigators say that last June, Jones, the safety officer and trainer for Western Construction Inc., provided documents showing that six miners working at a sand and gravel mine had received annual training. Prosecutors claim Jones forged the miners' names then gave the documents to the federal inspector knowing none of the miners had received the training. He faces up to five years in prison and fines of up to $250,000.

Bill Seeks to Restore Funding Protections

BOISE • Idaho would restore funding protections for schools with enrollment declines, but shift the cost to the districts, with each giving up a small portion of their per-student funding. That's under a bill approved Thursday by the House Education Committee.

Idaho previously gave shrinking school districts a one-year extension of 99 percent of the funding that came with a departed student. But those protections were eliminated last year in reforms backed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, who said the state was giving schools money for "ghost students" a year after they left their classrooms. — Associated Press

A Bus Called Home

Postal carrier Vanessa Picazo stands outside the converted school bus Thursday in Splendora, Texas, where she discovered two young children living. The children, ages 11 and 5, are now in the custody of child welfare authorities.

2 Children Found Living in Abandoned Bus

Child welfare agents try to unravel the story of girl, 11, and boy, 5, whose parents are in prison.

BY MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press

SPLENDORA, Texas • The abandoned school bus had no engine and no front wheels. But there were crude curtains in the windows, an air conditioner and even bunk beds inside.

So when a postal worker repeatedly ran across two unkempt children at the scene, she grew concerned and this week contacted authorities to report that the pair had apparently been living there for months.

Now child welfare agents are trying to unravel the story of the siblings, a 5-year-old boy and an 11-year-old girl, whose parents are in prison and whose home was a dilapidated vehicle at the end of a muddy, one-lane road.

The postal carrier discovered the kids Wednesday near Houston, and the two were swiftly placed in foster care while authorities investigate.

“The little girl’s hair was just matted, like a stray dog’s,” Vanessa Picazo said.

The father of the pair said he never intended for the bus to be a permanent home. He said the family had originally planned to build a house at the site, which was now strewn with reeking trash.

“The house is normally clean. If me or my wife were there, it would not be in that shape, I assure you,” Shorten said. “Our house would be completed or almost completed.”

Randal McCann, a Louisiana attorney who represented the children’s mother prior to her imprisonment, said the aunt had been taking care of the kids since the case against the parents was launched more than a year ago. The kids were not enrolled in school.

“It was believed by everybody involved in this case that (the aunt) was properly tending to those children. What I saw in the newspaper this morning was shocking,” McCann said, referring to a report in the Houston Chronicle.

McCann said the aunt would often contact him but only to discuss the criminal case and not the well-being of the children.

“But there was no indication that the living conditions were as bad as those photographs,” McCann said.

It was not clear how long the children had been living in the bus and whether the aunt lived with them or simply made visits.

A spokesman for Child Protective Services said authorities were less concerned about the bus itself than with children’s overall well-being.

“It’s not the bus. It’s the condition and supervision issues,” spokesman Gwen Carter said, explaining that the agency understands that poor families often must resort to dire living arrangements.

Senate Rejects GOP Energy Proposals

BY JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Senate killed Republican-backed attempts to overturn several of President Barack Obama’s environmental and energy policies Thursday as lawmakers worked against a March 31 deadline to keep aid flowing to more than 100,000 transportation construction projects around the country.

The two-year, $109 billion transportation bill before the Senate has wide, bipartisan support, but has become a magnet for lawmakers’ favorite causes and partisan gamesmanship. Among the amendments batted aside were GOP proposals to bypass Obama’s concerns about the Keystone XL oil pipeline, to delay tougher air pollution standards for industrial boilers and to expand offshore oil drilling.

Action on those and other amendments came under an agreement between Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., aimed at clearing the way for passage of the transportation bill next week.

of the Keystone vote, urging them to oppose an amendment by Sen. John Hoeven, R-N.D., that would have prevented the president from intervening in decisions related to construction of the pipeline and would have speeded its approval. Pointing to the administration’s environmental concerns about the project, which would carry tar sands oil from Canada to the Texas Gulf Coast, Republicans accused Obama of standing in the way of greater oil supplies at a time when Americans are coping with rising gasoline prices.

But some Democrats, especially those from oil producing states, were torn between support for the pipeline and their support for the president. The amendment was defeated 56-42, even though 11 Democrats broke ranks to support it. Sixty votes were needed for passage.

Republican leaders jumped on the White House lobbying.

“Most Americans strongly support building this pipeline and the jobs that would come with it,” McConnell said in a statement.

The president’s lobbying against the Keystone provision came “a week after the president signaled to me and to Sen.

Gunman Opens Fire at Pitt Psych Clinic; 2 Dead

BY KEVIN BEGOS AND JOE MANDAK
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH • A man armed with two semiautomatic handguns entered the lobby of a psychiatric clinic at the University of Pittsburgh on Thursday and opened fire, killing one person and wounding several others before he was shot dead, apparently by campus police, the mayor said.

Six people were wounded by the man’s gunfire, Mayor Luke Ravenstahl said. A seventh suffered unspecified injuries but wasn’t shot, officials said.

The mayor stopped short of confirming the gunman was fatally shot by at least one University of Pittsburgh police officer who responded. But he confirmed “police acted admirably and did engage in gunfire. There’s no doubt that their swift response saved lives today!”

One of the injured was a police officer who Ravenstahl said was grazed by a bullet. Officials didn’t say if that officer shot the gunman, whose identity and relationship to the clinic, if any, weren’t disclosed. The injured people included employees and a visitor, said Dr. Donald Yealy, chair of emergency medicine at the university’s medical school.

Shooting witness Gregory Brant said he was in a waiting room on the first floor of the clinic building when pan-

“We were kind of sitting ducks. Luckily, he didn’t see us in there, and we didn’t make eye contact with him.”

demonium broke out.

“We heard a bunch of yelling, some shooting, people yelling, ‘Hide! Hide!’” he said. “Everyone’s yelling, ‘Stay down!’”

Brant, 53, and six other people, including a young girl and her parents, barricaded themselves inside the waiting room. But he said they did not feel safe because there were doors with windows along adjacent walls.

“The way the room was arranged, if he (the gunman) had gone to either window and would have seen us in there, he could have done whatever he wanted,” Brant said.

The group crouched in a corner, hoping the gunman wouldn’t see them as he went past, Brant said. The men in the group decided on the spot that if the gunman entered the room, they would rush him.

“We were kind of sitting ducks,” Brant said. “Luckily, he didn’t see us in there, and we didn’t make eye contact with him!”

Syrian Official Defects, Calls Regime Sinking Ship

BY PATRICK J. MCDONNELL
Los Angeles Times

BEIRUT • Syria’s deputy oil minister reportedly defected from the government of Bashar Assad on Thursday, and a high-level peace envoy seeking a cease-fire in Syria warned against further “militarization” of the bloody conflict.

The reported defection of Abdo Hussameddin — whose message abandoning the Assad administration was posted on YouTube — would represent the highest-level civilian defection to date from the beleaguered government in Damascus, which is facing a yearlong rebellion, international isolation and a reeling economy.

On the video, shown widely on international news channels, Hussameddin says he can no longer overlook “the crimes of this regime.” He urges fellow officials to abandon “the sinking ship,” even though he said he anticipated that the government would burn his house and “persecute” his family.

“I am joining the revolution of the people who reject injustice and the brutal campaign of the regime,” says Hussameddin, a more than 30-year veteran of the nation’s important oil sector.

There was no official word from the government, and the authenticity of the video could not be independently verified.

If the video is authentic, Hussameddin would become the highest-ranking official to abandon Assad’s regime. He would presumably have considerable insider knowledge about insider dealings in the oil sector that are reputed to have enriched members of the president’s inner circle.

BIRDLIKE DINOS WORE BASIC BLACK

An unusual crowlike dinosaur — which really doesn't look like a dinosaur at all — had glossy black feathers that were probably used to call attention to itself and find a mate, scientists say in Thursday's journal Science. The creature lived 130 million years ago in rural China, said study co-author Mark Norell of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. It's the oldest example of the shimmering look on animals, said study co-author Julia Clarke at the University of Texas. — Associated Press

Critics Say Viral Video Distorts Fight to Capture African War Criminal

BY ALAN BOSWELL
McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

NAIROBI, Kenya • If you haven't seen the viral "Kony 2012" video yet, you could soon be in the minority.

The half-hour film urging sustained U.S. military support against an elusive Ugandan war criminal was posted to YouTube on Monday, and by Thursday it had captured more than 36 million views.

The nonprofit group behind the campaign, Invisible Children, is hoping to raise awareness of Joseph Kony, the leader of the Lord's Resistance Army who is charged with war crimes and is regarded by some activists as an embodiment of evil.

But the film has irked many intimate with the conflict. They charge it oversimplifies a complex war, and they take issue with the group's 1-2-3 solutions.

"The war was more than just an evil man killing children. The war is much more complex than just one man named Joseph Kony," Ugandan journalist and blogger Rosebell Kagumire, who covered the conflict in northern Uganda, said in a response to the video posted to YouTube.

"This is another video where I see an outsider trying to be a hero by rescuing African children," she said.

Most of the footage in the video is several years old. Kony's band long ago stopped fighting in Uganda, and now is terrorizing the Democratic Republic of Congo, the Central African Republic and South Sudan.

The video urges Americans to keep up the pressure on U.S. politicians to support the deployment of 100 special forces troops in Africa to advise local armies on the hunt for Kony.

In the YouTube video, Americans are told that to save the children Kony abducts and turns into soldiers and sex slaves, the U.S. needs to give more military aid to the Ugandan forces chasing him.

"The Ugandan military has to find (Kony). In order to find him, they need the technology and training to track him in the vast jungle," the video's narrator says.

The problem with that is that the Ugandan military is not free of human rights abuses itself, and some doubt its resolve to finish the war.

The Ugandan military is hardly a great crusader for justice that the film portrays.

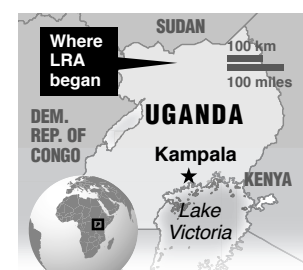

In the town of Obo, some locals say the Ugandans already have overstayed their welcome.

A local chief, Bassire Moke, described how one day the Ugandan commander in town burst into his home, raging drunk, waving a pistol, demanding his 18-year-old daughter.

Eventually, the commander was restrained by other Ugandans. But Moke still bitterly recalls the day, wondering "who sold our land and gave it to the Ugandans."

Invisible Children responded to the criticisms on its website with a point-by-point rebuttal.

"We do not defend any of the human rights abuses perpetrated by the Ugandan government or the Ugandan army," the group said, but it argued that the only feasible way to stop Kony was through coordinating with regional governments.

Ruthless rebels

The Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), formed in 1987, has been accused of widespread human rights violation.

1961 Joseph Kony is born in Odek, in northern Uganda; he is a self-proclaimed mystic

1988 Kony, others splinter off from rebels that sign peace deal with the Ugandan government; Kony names group Uganda Christian Democratic Army; begins attacking government

1991 Kony renames group Lord's Resistance Army; operates in northern Uganda from bases in southern Sudan; terrorizes civilians for years using abduction, rape, maiming, mass killing

2005 International Criminal Court issues arrest warrants for Kony, four other senior LRA leaders

Recent years Conflict has spread to neighboring countries; tens of thousands killed, 1.5 million displaced

School Bus

The parents — Mike and Sherrie Shorten — were convicted on charges of embezzling money from victims of Hurricane Ike, which struck in 2008. The mother was arrested in December 2010, the father in March 2011.

In a phone interview with AP from an Oklahoma City federal prison, Mark Shorten said he had not slept since his children were taken Wednesday.

Shorten said an aunt who was asked to watch the kids couldn't keep up, and he blamed the garbage blanketing his property on neighbors dumping their trash there.

Sherrie Shorten is scheduled to be released next month.

"I'm coming home in 30 days to be able to take care of my kids," she said from a separate federal prison in Lake Charles, La.

An AP reporter visited the site Thursday. The bus appeared to have electricity, and outside there was a small propane tank and homemade grill.

A woman who was in the bus declined to identify herself and told the reporter to leave.

The Shortens said the bus also has hot and cold running water, including a shower and flush toilets, as well as heat and closets.

Picazo said her latest visit to the bus was not the first time she was worried about the children. Once when she needed a signature for a package, the 11-year-old girl volunteered. But when Picazo handed her the signature slip, the girl confessed she didn't know how to sign her name.

"That kind of rose the red flag that she wasn't being schooled. But she was a bright child," Picazo said.

Mark Shorten said his children were being home schooled through a Texas Tech University program. He said his daughter was highly intelligent and "can even do tax returns."

He said the family was originally from Louisiana but that the hurricane left their home under more than 8 feet of water.

Senate

McConnell that he might be willing to work with us on some bipartisan steps forward on energy legislation that the American people support," House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, told reporters. "If we're going to have bipartisan action on energy, the Keystone pipeline is an obvious place to start."

White House spokesman Jay Carney said Obama felt it was "wrong to play politics" with the pipeline, especially since the company behind the project has said it still was working on a final route that might satisfy environmental concerns. He also said it was "false advertising" to suggest the amendment would have any impact on gasoline prices.

Also defeated was an amendment by Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, which would have forced the Environmental Protection Agency to rewrite a rule requiring boiler operators to install modern emissions controls. Boilers are the second-largest source of toxic mercury emissions after coal-fired power plants. Collins said the EPA's rule would drive some manufacturers out of business.

And the Senate turned down an amendment to expand offshore oil drilling even though its sponsor, Sen. David Vitter, D-La., contended it would increase domestic energy supplies and reduce gas prices.

The transportation bill itself would overhaul federal transportation programs, including boosting aid to highway and transit programs, streamline some environmental regulations in order to speed up approval of projects and consolidate dozens of programs.

Lawmakers are under pressure to act quickly because the government's authority to collect about $110 million a day in federal gasoline and diesel taxes and to spend money out of the trust fund that pays for highway and transit programs expires at the end of the month.

Syria

However, analysts were split over the significance of his reported defection.

Hussameddin is not regarded as especially close to the Syrian leadership. And his possible departure may be an isolated incident, not indicative of deeper fissures in the government.

But the defection would be a blow to the government's narrative of cohesion and loyalty despite nearly a year of rebellion that has seen thousands killed and some areas of the country slip into the hands of armed rebels. The revolt has seen many defections from the Syrian military, but not of its highest-ranking officers.

On Thursday, wire services quoted a rebel official as saying four more brigadier generals had defected to the opposition, bringing to seven the number of generals who have switched sides.

Pro-government websites and Facebook pages were already dismissing the importance of the reported defection, describing Hussameddin as corrupt, noted one Syrian analyst.

The Syrian opposition hailed the reported defection, and a U.S. State Department spokeswoman, Victoria Nuland, said in Washington that the report would be "very good news," if true.

"This would be absolutely in keeping with the kind of calls that the secretary and the president have been making for senior members of the regime to break with Assad," Nuland said in Washington.

But most analysts agree that Assad still has a unified inner circle, including many members of his Alawite sect.

OAKLEY • We all have talents. It's just a matter of developing them — and finding a way to use them. A girl with glasses finds out how to use her talent during a two-act play called "Dear Edwina." Hosted by the Oakley Valley Arts Council and directed by Kent Evensen, the 90-minute play is set for nine performances, beginning March 9, at the historical Howells Opera House.

The arts council is promoting it as a musical comedy for everyone. "Dear Edwina" is about a 13-year-old girl who's discouraged that all her siblings are more talented than she. She wonders: What are her talents? What is her place in the world?

"She's looking for recognition from her family," Evensen said. "She decides to write a newspaper column. All her siblings excel at other things, and her best skill is answering questions."

Neighborhood children soon respond, asking such things in letters as how to deal with an annoying brother or how to set a dinner table. Edwina answers the letters, with help from fellow cast members, through song.

Props such as large forks and spoons, colorful scenery and a snowmaking machine that rains confetti help to tell the stories.

Hardcastle, 31, and Erin Kauppila, 29, who plays Child's love interest Polly Baker, were rehearsing a slapping scene when both had to summon courage.

Kauppila had never slapped someone before. She held back, giving Hardcastle light taps on the cheek.

The Piano Falls Silent

Twin Falls lost its music man this week. Jan Olsen, who shared the gift of music all over town, died at 61.

BY DAVE WILKINS
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Friends remember Jan Olsen as a kind and talented man who spent much of his life sharing his gift of music with Magic Valley residents.

Olsen died March 5 of pancreatic cancer. He was 61.

Olsen, of Twin Falls, was active in numerous music and theater groups, including the Magic Valley Symphony, Twin Falls Municipal Band and Dilettante Group of Magic Valley productions. He was the pianist and organist at St. Edwards Catholic Church for years and was often called upon to play at weddings and funerals.

"He was phenomenal. There wasn't anything he couldn't play, couldn't sight read," said Colleen Werner, who conducted music at St. Edwards while Olsen was the accompanist. "He could go through and rewrite the music in his head for the key it needed to be in if it wasn't written that way."

Olsen was perhaps best known for his piano playing, but he was also accomplished on the organ, violin and viola.

"He was multi-talented," said Renee Chariton of Boise, one of Olsen's sisters. "He was such a showman. He would sit down at the keyboard and tell jokes and sing. He was the whole package."

Olsen poured his heart into his music, whether he was performing one of his favorite jazz pieces, a popular movie tune or a classical number, friends said.

"He was very dedicated, loyal and funny. He was just funny," Werner said, adding that Olsen played at church even when he was in pain. "The kids loved him because he was so childlike."

Olsen was a regular at local Kiwanis Club meetings, using the piano to set the tone for the featured speaker.

"He brought an amazing atmosphere with his music," said Trent Stimpson, president of the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club. "We are going to miss it terribly."

Last fall, Olsen performed a piano mini-concert during a Kiwanis banquet, even though he was battling cancer. The performance included selections from composing greats such as Gershwin and Mozart.

"He played for probably 20 to 30 minutes, and they weren't easy pieces of work," Stimpson said. "It was awesome."

Olsen also used his talent on the piano to accompany local singers.

"He was very giving of his time," said Marty Mead, founder of the Dilettante Group.

"He was so accomplished," she said. "If he knew the melody, he could come up with the accompaniment. He was a real musician."

Olsen started playing piano at about age 6, said another sister, Susan Mayer of Boise. She was just a year younger.

"We used to fight to see who would play the piano first at night. He always won," Mayer said.

Ted Hadley, director of the Magic Valley Symphony and a classmate of Olsen's at the University of Idaho, said Olsen was an incredible talent. "He was such a great musician, a kind and generous person."

An accident about two years ago affected Olsen's wrist motion and prevented him from playing the viola in the symphony — something he had done for years, Hadley said.

Olsen could be shy and introspective, but he also possessed a good sense of humor and a distinctive laugh, according to friends and family.

"You always knew it was Jan who was laughing," Hadley said.

A funeral mass will be held at 10:30 a.m. March 13 at St. Edwards Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Idaho Commission on the Arts is inviting nominations for the 2012 Governor's Awards in the Arts. The ceremony will be held Sept. 27 at the Twin Falls Center for the Arts.

"This will be the first time in many years that this signature arts event has been held in Twin Falls, so we are looking forward to entertaining nominations from all over the state for these prestigious awards," said Jan Mittleider of Twin Falls, a recent appointee to the Idaho arts commission.

The awards are given every two years. Categories include excellence in the arts, excellence in the folk and traditional arts, support of the arts, support of arts education and excellence in arts administration.

The awards, consisting of a silver medalion, are one-in-a-lifetime. College of Southern Idaho conductor and music professor George Halsell was a recipient in 2010.

Nomination forms are available from the Idaho Commission on the Arts at 2410 N. Old Penitentiary Road in Boise, or on the commission's website: arts.idaho.gov. Nominations must be postmarked by March 30.

slapped on stage, he said, "I've never been slapped any time." He wanted an authentic hit, but this authentic?

"I left finger marks on his neck," Kauppila said. "His eye was bloodshot for a while."

Ivan's response: "Can you back off just a touch?"

Since then, rehearsals have included real, skin-reddening blows.

"Every night, she does it," director Lori Henson said. "The whole cast, we all know it's coming, and we're going: (gasping sound). Between the kissing and slapping, they're getting comfortable with each other."

Submitting to physical violence is just one way Hardcastle has demonstrated his dedication to the show.

Hoping to land the lead role, he enrolled in tap-dancing lessons in September and practiced most nights.

"There's not a whole lot of 30-year-old guys who own a pair of tap shoes and are willing to put a lot of work into it," Henson said. "He did it all on his own, and came in for his audition, and I was so impressed."

The play follows the story of Bobby Child, the son of a high-powered banker from New York who wants to be a dancer. When he's sent to Dead-rock, Nev., to foreclose on a small theater, he falls in love with the owner's daughter. He wants to save the theater, not shut it down.

"It just becomes a comedy of errors," Henson said. "(There's) mistaken identities, and everybody is in love with the wrong person."

Henson said she wanted the Dilettantes' 55th annual show to have a lot of "rambunctious fun."

"Last year's show was 'Secret Garden,' and it's beautiful, tender, very touching," she said. "We decided it's time to do something that's full-out fun."

"Crazy for You" is chock-full of Gershwin tunes, including "I Got Rhythm," "Embraceable You," "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "Nice Work If You Can Get It."

"I mean, so many famous songs are in the show," Henson said. "Seriously, if people walk out of here without singing or humming a song, we haven't done our job."

And if they walk out thinking the slaps were mere "stage slaps" ... well, that's not going to happen.

Magician Will Perform at Benefit for Sick Children

TWIN FALLS • In 2007, NBC Television brought together a dozen magicians for a multiweek competition called Phenomenon. One by one, audience votes eliminated magicians until only one remained. The last magician standing: Mike Super.

Super will headline this year's Change for Children fundraiser, 7:30 p.m. March 24 at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

Since the NBC program, he has toured and in 2011 received the Merlin Award; other winners in past years include David Copperfield, Penn and Teller, Criss Angel and Siegfried and Roy. Super has won awards from college campus entertainment booking organizations and was featured on a French television program on magic and on the "Ellen Degeneres Show." Many of his illusions are available on YouTube.

Change for Children is an annual fundraiser sponsored by the CSI Student Senate. Each year, the senators select children or families in the community with special needs, a CSI press release sad. Two children's families will receive the funding this year: Tucker D'Ambra has a rare brain disease called moyamoya syndrome and has suffered multiple strokes, as did his twin brother. Tristan Durtshi was born with another rare disease called hypertonia; among Tristan's symptoms has been a tendency to bite his lips and tongue.

Tristan and his parents were featured on the Discovery Channel's "Medical Mysteries" series in an episode titled "The Boy Who Bit Himself;" the CSI release said.

CSI Student Senators started fundraising activities in February leading up to the March 24 show. Admission to the Mike Super performance will be by donation. Students encourage audience members to give whatever they can. A raffle with prizes donated by local merchants will provide another way to donate.

Herrett Speaker Explains Early Idaho Photos

TWIN FALLS • At this month's Herrett Forum, speaker Steve Wursta will help some old photos tell their stories.

Wursta's presentation, titled "Robert Limbert, the Stories Behind the Early Photos of Idaho," will be at 7:30 p.m. March 21 in the Herrett Center's Rick Allen Room.

Limbert is regarded among Idaho historians as the man who documented and explored the Great Rift and Craters of the Moon as well as the development of Redfish Lake.

Wursta has produced four documentaries, "From Cheyenne to Pendleton," "Among the Craters of the Moon,"

"The History of Idaho's Redfish Lodge" and "The Search for the Lost Valley." He's working on his fifth, "Letters From the Farm."

Wursta's early career was with Knight-Ridder Tribune News Service and later with United Press International as a photojournalist. He spent four years traveling on Air Force One as a member of the press pool. In 1996, he formed Arctic Circle Productions to produce a multimedia travel magazine. In 1998, he co-authored a pictorial of the nation's capital, produced from more than 14,000 images submitted by photographers. More information: arcticproductions.com.

No tickets are required for the free public lecture. The Herrett Center for Arts and Science is on the north side of the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Edwina

"It has a lot of quirky humor," Evensen said. "I think the best thing is the music."

Songs are upbeat and funny, such as "Put it in the Piggy," performed by Declo resident Katrina Tanner, who plays Mary Sue Betty Bob, and four other Mini-Cassia women.

In all, close to 30 youth and adults make up the cast.

"It's not a serious play," said 13-year-old Savanna Berlinguet of Oakley, who plays a cheerleader and said it's been a good experience working with the other youth, because they all get along well.

Sitting on stage for an interview with the Times-News after a dress rehearsal March 3, other young actors chimed in, saying much the same thing as they laughed and joked with each other.

Jacob Dayley, 13, of Rupert plays Scott, who, by the end of the play, tells Edwina he has fallen for her.

blush, and she turns away while Scott expresses his feelings to her in song. When he's finished, they hold hands and stare at each other for several moments.

During rehearsal, lead actor Holly Ward seemed to have a tough time keeping eye contact with Dayley.

"She doesn't look at me," Dayley said with a laugh. "She wants to make faces."

Fun aside, the play has a good message, said 36-year-old Tanner. It's the first musical she's acted in since high school.

"It has good morals," she said. "I've seen a lot of different musicals. This one shows kids what they should be doing."

Evensen said he's enjoyed working with the youth.

"It's funny and well-written," he said. "It's been fun to see the kids blossom and grow and take on their own parts."

Go a Little Crazy Tonight at 'Lost Wages' Casino

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Can't get to Vegas? Let the gaming city come to you.

Tonight is the 36th annual Lost Wages Night, a casino-themed charity fundraiser by Twin Falls Optimist Club.

With ticket sales surpassing 300, the club moved the event from its longtime venue to Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center this year to accommodate the growing crowd.

The move gives the club space for 20 tables devoted to the popular card game 21 and another eight tables set up for Texas hold 'em. The larger venue also means the Optimists can bring back bingo and add craps to the gaming mix, said Optimist board member and event co-chairwoman Kayla Smola.

"We're able to offer more games than we have in the past," Smola said. "Bingo was played years ago, and I hear that was a lot of fun."

Over the years, the club has accumulated decks of cards, gaming chips and tables for the night, club president Richard Craddock said, which keeps costs low.

"This is our signature fundraiser, our largest for the year," Craddock said, adding that the club's goal for the evening is $10,000, raised through ticket sales and a silent auction. By Monday, businesses and individuals had donated about 70 items for the auction.

Raffle and door prizes will be awarded throughout the evening, longtime club member Robin Stanhope said.

"When you buy your ticket at the door you get 1,000 gaming chips, no money or actual gambling is involved, and you take those chips to whichever game you want to play," Stanhope said. The winner of each game is awarded a raffle ticket.

"It's all in good fun. When I've dealt cards in the past, like in 21 if someone has 20, I'm like, 'close enough!'" Stanhope said.

The grand door prizes include a king-size, cool-gel mattress, a round diamond and a 55-inch LCD HD television. Even if you don't win one

All of the money raised supports youth programs sponsored by the club, which has 130 members. Its most visible and perhaps best-known program is Coats for Kids, which gathered more than 800 pieces of winter outerwear for Magic Valley youth this season, Craddock said. The club also supports — to name a couple — the 5th Judicial District Court Appointed Special Advocate program and Head Start, and it "helps kids on a case-by-case basis."

"If we get a call and there is something we can do to help, we do," Craddock said.

Protect Yourself Against Colon Cancer

Men and women of all ages are diagnosed with colorectal cancer in Idaho every year. It's the second leading cause of cancer death in our state.

But colorectal cancer is very treatable when caught early. Screening through colonoscopy can prevent cancer by removing pre-cancerous polyps. And home colon health test kits can detect blood hidden in the stool—a potential sign of cancer.

If you have any concerns about your colon health, don't ignore your risks or warning signs. Talk to your doctor immediately.

Order a free colon health test kit today at stlukesonline.org/freetkit, or find a doctor at stlukesonline.org/clinic. You can also Call St. Luke's at (208) 381-9000 for assistance.

Two-piano Concert Benefits Suicide Prevention

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • The soothing power of music becomes a vehicle to aid in the prevention of suicide and mental illness March 10, when the Sun Valley Artist Series and St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center present a suicide prevention benefit concert.

The 7 p.m. concert at Ketchum's Church of the Big Wood features two internationally known concert pianists — the husband-and-wife team of Misha and Cipa Dichter.

It will be preceded at 6 p.m. by 45 minutes of short video clips and a presentation by Salt Lake City psychiatrist Dr. Susan Mirow. Artist series co-directors Steve Gannon and Susan Spelius Dunning will pass out new comprehensive guides detailing the resources available to those suffering from mental illness.

The concert will benefit the Wood River Chapter of NAMI (National Alliance on Mental Illness), the local Crisis Hotline and The Speedy Foundation, which was created in honor of Olympic medalist freestyle skier Jared "Speedy" Peterson, of Bose.

Dunning said she and Gannon created the evening in memory of Gannon's son Dex, a bright young student at Rice University who took his life on New Year's Eve 2010.

"We wish we'd known about the resources available to us then," she said. "One of my sons was suffering from severe depression five years ago, and I had no idea where to turn."

and classmates of Emmanuel Ax, who recently performed with the Sun Valley Summer Symphony. They made their first joint appearance at the Hollywood Bowl in 1972, four years after their marriage.

Since, the New York couple has performed throughout the world, bringing to the stage many previously neglected works of piano for four hands.

"To have two 9-foot Steinway grand pianos in a small hall is itself amazing, powerful and exciting," Dunning said. "Then you have these two great pianists who not only play with each other but are married to each other and love each other. It'll be almost like Olympic beach volleyball with two players who are very athletic."

Tickets are $100 and $250, available at www.svartist-series.org, Chapter One Bookstore and Iconoclast Books (tickets include tax-deductible donation).

#3: Liming

Besides compaction, the presence of moss plants also signals "http://landscaping.about.com/library/glossary/bldef-acidity.htm" acidity. But grass likes a "http://landscaping.about.com/cs/lazylandscaping/g/neutral.htm" neutral soil pH. You can solve this problem by liming your soil. But don't expect a quick fix: the effects of liming are slow to take place.

But first send a soil sample to your local county extension to determine the extent of your soil's acidity. The county extension will also be able to advise you on how much lime per square foot you'll need. Apply the lime using a lawn spreader.

But if your lawn has been doing fine and shows no signs of suffering from acidity, don't apply lime. Liming is only a corrective measure, not a preventive measure. A soil that is too "http://landscaping.about.com/library/glossary/bldef-alkalinity.htm" alkaline will also cause your lawn problems, so too much lime is as bad as not enough.

Spring Lawn Care Tip #4: Overseeding

Is your lawn riddled with bare patches due to "http://landscaping.about.com/od/lawns/a/dog_landscaping.htm" dog spots, heavy traffic or neglect? If so, you may need to apply grass seed to fill in those bare patches. This solution is known as "http://landscaping.about.com/od/grassgrowingtips/qt/overseeding.htm" overseeding lawns." Apply a slow-release nitrogen fertilizer when you overseed. Five weeks after the grass germinates, apply a quick-release nitrogen fertilizer.

However, spring isn't the very best time for overseeding lawns. Fall is the preferred time, when the new grass won't have to compete with crabgrass (see Page 2), which is killed off by autumn frosts. So postpone overseeding until fall, unless your situation is dire.

Spring Lawn Care Tip #5: Fertilizing

Lawns can be fertilized organically by using "http://landscaping.about.com/library/glossary/bldef-compost.htm" compost and "http://landscaping.about.com/cs/giftideas1/f/mulching_mowers.htm" mulching mowers. But for those who prefer chemical fertilizers, Scotts provides a "http://landscaping.about.com/od/grassgrowingtips/qt/fertilizingLawn.htm" lawn fertilizing schedule. Many experts, however, recommend a lighter feeding in spring and a heavier one in late fall for "http://landscaping.about.com/cs/lawns/f/types_of_grass.htm" cool-season grasses. Too much fertilizer in spring can lead to disease and weed problems. And if you have, indeed, already fertilized in late fall, your lawn is still "digesting" that fertilizer in spring.

In addition to the above tasks of spring lawn care, don't forget weed control and making sure your mower is ready for the mowing season. These two subjects are covered on

For those who prefer weed-free lawns, spring grass care is as much about weed prevention as it is about fostering healthy lawn growth. Novices to spring grass care are often surprised to learn that not all lawn weeds are battled in the same manner. Depending upon whether a weed is an annual or a perennial, you will use a preemergent herbicide or a postemergent herbicide against it. More tips to come in weeks lawn and garden.

Eagles' Best Not Enough

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

SALT LAKE CITY • Perhaps Chakala Carthen said it best.

"We jumped high, they jumped higher. We shot well, they shot better," said the College of Southern Idaho sophomore after Salt Lake ended the Golden Eagles' season with a 76-71 win in the opening round of the Region 18 Tournament.

The Golden Eagles (15-16) did just about everything they could to slow the Bruins (16-12), who will play top seed North Idaho tonight at 5:30 in Salt Lake City. They tried a 2-3 zone, they tried man-to-man, they briefly tried a full-court press, but the Golden Eagles couldn't get a stop they so desperately needed down the stretch.

After a Tayllor Gipson layup cut Salt Lake's lead to two at 68-66, Diamond Marchand answered with a leaner in the lane from 16 feet out that bounced

A few possessions later, Marissa Robbins hit 1-of-2 free throws to give Salt Lake the 73-68 lead after a Gipson jumper.

Still, the Golden Eagles had hope. Mechela Barnes hit a pull-up 3-pointer with two defenders in her face with 19 seconds remaining to make the score 73-71.

"It was a set play and when I shot it I was like, 'Please go in, please go in,'" Barnes said. "We were down by two. I knew we still had a chance."

Robbins killed those chances. Forced to foul, CSI could only watch the forward hit 3-of-4 free throws in the closing seconds and CSI head coach Randy Rogers emptied the bench, subbing out sophomores Carthen, Barnes and Gipson.

"I was sick to my stomach," said Barnes, who led CSI with 24 points.

DISTRICT IV ALL-STAR GAMES

Coming Together

For one night, friends Harr, Kennedy play on same team instead of against each other.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • When it comes to sporting events, contestants from Twin Falls and Jerome are figurative mortal enemies.

More Inside
Read more about tonight's game on S3

With Eric Harr and Shaquille Kennedy, that's no been exception.

"I made it my goal to keep Eric from scoring double figures when we played this season," said Kennedy, a Jerome senior. "That didn't happen."

Said Harr, a senior for the Bruins: "I also scored my 1,000th point on him."

Kennedy rolled his eyes and walked away.

The pair competed as fiercely on the court as their respective schools demand, but outside of school hours they're good friends.

They learned each other's pet peeves, and they used them to great effect during the season as each guarded the other more often than not when Twin Falls and Jerome played.

"He likes to pinch me, and I tug at his jersey or shorts," Harr quipped.

They owe their friendship to a chance encounter during physical therapy sessions last summer. Harr was rehabbing from shoulder surgery, Kennedy recovering from a torn MCL.

"We happened to be there at the same time, and we traded phone numbers," Kennedy said. "We hung out for the first time a couple weeks later. We played Call of Duty for hours."

Kennedy quickly found a circle of Idaho's late run of success, which included a 19-point win against Hawaii last week, is all for naught in rematch.

LAS VEGAS • Hawaii coach Gib Arnold felt his team rediscovered its resolve when it took Utah State down to the wire in the season finale just two days after getting routed at home by Idaho.

So to make sure his Rainbow Warriors had their legs for the Western Athletic Conference tournament, Arnold practiced a total of 75 minutes between Saturday's loss and Thursday's conference tourney opener.

Turned it to be the perfect approach. Hauns Brereton hit a 15-foot baseline jumper with 3.2 seconds left, and Hawaii rallied from seven points down in the final 6 minutes to beat Idaho 72-70 in the Western Athletic Conference quarterfinals Thursday.

The sixth-seeded Rainbow Warriors (16-15) trailed 64-57 with 6:15 left but then outscored the Vandals 15-6 the close out the victory. Hawaii won despite playing without second-leading scorer Zane Johnson and a week after losing by 19 at home to the Vandals. It was Hawaii's first victory since Feb. 14 against

Boise State loses another game to a ranked team in heartbreaking fashion

LAS VEGAS • Everybody in the arena knew the ball was going to San Diego State star sophomore guard Jamaal Franklin in the closing seconds of a tie game against scrappy Boise State.

The Broncos got two players in his face. Franklin, doing what conference players of the year are supposed to, didn't flinch. He lofted an off-balance 3-pointer over the double-team and then landed on his backside as it went through at the buzzer to give top-seeded and No. 18 San Diego State a 65-62 victory over No. 8 seed Boise State in the Mountain West Conference tournament opener Thursday.

"I believed in myself," Franklin said. "I always practice the last shot. When it left my hand, I felt it was going to go in."

Said teammate Chase Tapley: "He does that in practice. He goes, 5-4-3-2-1 and it goes in."

BSU coach Leon Rice said the Broncos "couldn't have guarded it better. Derrick (Marks) almost poked it away to start out with, then Thomas (Bropleh) did a great job of guarding him without fouling him, too. He threw up a tough, tough shot. But, you know, a great player like that is a shot-maker, especially at the end of the game. That's why we were committed

Hudelson Headed to Walla Walla CC

dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Karly Hudelson wanted to make sure she could just focus on the field.

The Canyon Ridge two-sport standout wrapped up her college future as early as she could manage, signing a letter of intent on Thursday to play softball at Walla Walla Community College next year.

She'll join former teammate Alex Schamber, currently playing for the Warriors, in the college ranks.

"I was hooked from the minute the coach shook my hand," said Hudelson, who batted .630 with 61 RBI last season. "I fell in love with the girls there, and I think I'll fit in well."

Hudelson, who also played basketball for the Riverhawks, said she expects to play outfield for Walla Walla. She's caught the last two years for Canyon Ridge and anticipates a move to the middle of the infield this season.

Hudelson said Walla Walla started recruiting her last summer, and she decided on the school after her visit. A couple of other schools started fishing around recently, she said, but she'd already made up her mind.

That allows her and her teammates to focus solely on getting Canyon Ridge to the state tournament for the first time, after being in position the last two years and coming up short.

"On that visit they treated us so well, and they made it an easy decision," said Canyon Ridge coach Lyle Hudelson, Karly's father. "It was something that we never really pressed on her, because we wanted her to make that decision on her own. But we sat down and talked about it a couple weeks ago, and thought maybe it was best to get it out of the way early. Now it's all about having fun and playing softball."

New Orleans and its first WAC tournament win since 2005.

"We were a little wounded, a little down, but these guys rallied together," said Arnold, the former College of Southern Idaho men's head basketball coach. "They earned it. We struggled for three weeks. It wasn't easy, it never should be easy. But we've still got a lot of basketball left in us."

Hawaii will face second-seeded New Mexico State in the semifinals tonight.

Vander Joaquin led Hawaii with 20 points including a key putback with 29.5 seconds left and later stole the desperation inbound pass on Idaho's final effort to pull even. Brereton finished with 17 and freshman guard Shaquille Stokes also scored 17.

Stokes tried to play the role of hero for the Warriors. He drove aggressively toward the basket as the final seconds ticked away, only to get stripped as Idaho's defense collapsed. The loose ball bounded right to Brereton on the baseline, who rattled in the game-winner.

"Shaq left me open in the corner. Fortunately it went in," Brereton said.

Kyle Barone led Idaho (18-13) with 19 points, but was held to just five in the second half. Stephen Madison added 15 and Landon Tatum scored 12 for the Vandals, who had won seven of eight coming into the tournament and was the only WAC team to defeat regular season champion Nevada.

Yet the Vandals are headed home and have yet to reach the semifinals of the WAC tournament.

friends in the Twin Falls camp, even if they initially thought he was a Bruin — many thought he was a Twin Falls football player until halfway through last season.

When they found out that wasn't the case, they planned some ways to rib Kennedy.

"When I went to the foul line in their gym, they gave me the 'should have been a Bruin' chant," he said, referring to a chant typically reserved for Canyon Ridge athletes. "I knew it was coming, but it was all in good fun."

On Thursday, they played as teammates for the first time during the District IV senior boys basketball all-star game at Baun Gymnasium.

The pair drew up a few plays for each other during Thursday's game. Kennedy, as he has done for Jerome, played a behind-the-scenes role, setting screens for Harr to play his more known part of 3-point marksman, scoring 23 as their West team won comfortably.

"We don't even get to play on the same team when we play street ball," Harr said. "Tonight was pretty sweet."

Road to Repeat Begins in Salt Lake for CSI Men

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

SALT LAKE CITY • The Golden Eagles are driving steadfast on the road to repeat.

The fourth-ranked College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team, the defending Region 18 Tournament and NJCAA national champions, open the Region 18 Tournament in Salt Lake City tonight at 7:30 against Snow College.

"We're ready. We've been focused. It's March Madness time and we know it's win or go home," said CSI center Paul Bunch. "We want to get back to Hutch."

The fourth-ranked Golden Eagles' first step toward getting back to Hutch is beating a Snow team that handed them a 20-point loss three weeks ago in Twin Falls.

"We have to get them back," said CSI forward Paul Egwuonwu.

Since the stunning loss in Twin Falls, the fourth-ranked Golden Eagles (27-3, 13-2 Scenic West) have ripped off four straight conference wins and come into the tournament with that same championship swagger they showed during a mid-season roadtrip where they went 4-0.

"I think that game was a big wakeup call for us," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "Since then, you can feel it in the guys when they stop in to talk. You can feel their intensity and sense of urgency."

Fabyon Harris, the Region 18 Player of the Year, Rafriel Guthrie and wildcard Luke Cothron are three players who will have to put the Golden Eagles on their back against a sharp-shooting Snow team led by Travis Wilkins (16.8 ppg) and Brandon Vega (8.6 apg).

"It's always a very nervous time because it's one and done. No matter what you've done during the regular season. We're all 0-0 and we've got to play this game as if it were our last," Gosar said. "Against Snow, we have to slow down their transition game and in big games and tournament settings, you can't look ahead, you can't look behind. You have to stay in that possession and take it one possession at a time."

Snow defeated Colorado Northwestern in the opening round of the tournament 81-56 after losing the No. 2 seed with a loss to Salt Lake last weekend.

The 6-0 Robbins was a killer in the second half, where she scored 15 of her team-leading 17 points on an assortment of low post moves against the 5-8 Carthern and 5-9 Tanner.

"She looked like she had the freshest legs in the second half. She was looking to score no matter what and they were feeding her the ball every time down the floor," Rogers said. "Salt Lake went down and made their free throws and really didn't give us a chance to get back into it. I really thought if we hit the 70-mark, we would win this game."

After the first half, it appeared CSI would win the game.

The Golden Eagles led 39-35 at the break, spearheaded by 14 Barnes points. She scored seven in a row at one point to give the Golden Eagles an eight-point lead with 13:26 left in the half.

Salt Lake, however, started the second half on a 17-8 run, fueled by back-to-back 3's from Hayli Shurtz, who had eight points.

"At halftime we just told ourselves that we have to keep fighting. It's do or die right now. This may be it. Give it all you've got," Barnes said. "We never thought we were going to be in this position right now. We thought we were going to get this win. They fought harder."

NBA ROUNDUP

Orange Puts End to UConn Streak

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Dion Waiters had 18 points and James Southerland scored all 10 of his points in the final 8 minutes to lead No. 2 Syracuse to a 58-55 victory over Connecticut on Thursday in the quarterfinals of the Big East tournament, snapping the Huskies' 13-game postseason winning streak.

The top-seeded Orange (31-1) won their 11th straight game overall and advanced to face Cincinnati in the semifinals Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

But not before these rivals added another chapter to their Big East tournament history.

Shabazz Napier had 15 points and Andre Drummond added 14 for the ninth-seeded Huskies (20-13), who were trying to duplicate last year's first-ever five-game run to the Big East tournament title that was followed by a six-game streak that brought the school its third national championship.

In the semifinals last year, Connecticut beat the Orange 76-71 in overtime. In the previous meeting in the tournament in 2009, Syracuse won 127-117 in a six-overtime quarterfinal.

Big East
CINCINNATI 72, NO. 13 GEORGETOWN 70, 2OT

The fourth-seeded Bearcats (23-9) trailed by 11 points midway through the second half of the quarterfinal but rallied behind Yancy Gates, who scored 23 points in his back-and-forth, big-man duel with Henry Sims.

LOUISVILLE 84, NO. 9 MARQUETTE 71

Kyle Kuric scored 20 points, Peyton Siva added 18 and Louisville forced Marquette into a season-high 26 turnovers, advancing to the semifinals.

Wearing a new set of bright orange, neon-looking uniforms, the seventh-seeded Cardinals flashed their quick hands all over the court and held Big East Player of the Year Jae Crowder to 10 points in 31 foul-plagued minutes. Russ Smith and Chane Behanan each scored 12 points for Louisville (24-9), which will play No. 23 Notre Dame or South Florida on Friday night.

Big 12
NO. 3 KANSAS 83, TEXAS A&M 66

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Elijah Johnson scored a career-high 26 points, and Kansas began pursuit of its third straight tournament title with a victory over Texas A&M in the quarterfinals.

Thomas Robinson, the conference player of the year, finished with 19 points and 10 rebounds, and All-Big 12 guard Tyshawn Taylor added 16 points for the Jayhawks (27-5), who play Baylor today.

NO. 12 BAYLOR 82, KANSAS STATE 74

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Perry Jones III scored a career-high 31 points, hitting 11 of 14 shots, to help Baylor beat Kansas State.

The 6-foot-11 Jones also had 11 rebounds for the fourth-seeded Bears (26-6).

Brady Heslip had 15 points and former CSI guard Pierre Jackson added 13 points and eight assists for Baylor, which shot a sizzling 57 percent.

NO. 5 MISSOURI 88, OKLAHOMA STATE 70

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Kim English scored 27 points and led a 26-5 first-half run, and Missouri swamped short-handed Oklahoma State in the quarterfinals.

Marcus Denmon added 24 points, and Phil Pressey had 12 assists, one short of Missouri's school record. The Tigers also outrebounded the Cowboys 40-20.

The Tigers (28-4), who set a school record with 27 regular-season victories, played much of the game as though they have something to prove while heading out the door for the Southeastern Conference — a move that has earned the animosity of many soon-to-be former Big 12 peers.

Big 10
NO. 15 INDIANA 75, PENN ST. 58

INDIANAPOLIS • Jordan Hulls scored 20 points, Cody Zeller had 19 points and 10 rebounds, and Indiana beat Penn State to end a six-game losing streak in tournament play.

The Hoosiers (25-7) won for the first time in the postseason since the first round of the 2007 NCAA tournament. They hadn't won in the Big Ten tournament since a victory over Wisconsin on March 10, 2006.

Case No. CV 2012-844
 CHILD PROTECTIVE ACT SUMMONS

In the Interest of:

CHRISTOPHER SPAWN,
 d.o.b. 06-29-03

A Child under the age of eighteen.

THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS GREETINGS TO:
JOHN DOE

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:

A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named child comes within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Case Plan Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho, on April 5, 2012 at 9:30 AM.

You are notified that service of the attached Petition upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of this child, confers personal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court.

You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the child.

You are further notified that the child and parent(s), guardian, or custodian have the right to be represented by an attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the Court to represent the child or the parent(s), guardian, or custodian at county expense. If you request to have an attorney appointed at county expense, you must appear before the date of the hearing given above, at which time the Court shall consider appointment of an attorney for the child and inquire whether the parent(s), guardian, or custodian require the separate appointment of an attorney.

You are further notified that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that if a child is placed in the custody of the IDHW and was also placed in care out of the home for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months from the date of Adjudication, the IDHW shall initiate a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding by the Court that the filing of a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights would not be in the best interest of the child and their family, or that the child is placed permanently with a relative.

"Achievement, noun. The death of endeavor and the birth of disgust."

— Ambrose Bierce

David Gold, a regular on the England Open Team, sat South in this deal at the Young Chelsea Bridge Club. This club has a good claim to be one of the strongest in the world. Duplicates take place every weekday and it would not be unusual to find half a dozen internationals playing on any evening.

After East opened two hearts to show at least five cards in that suit, together with an unspecified four-card minor, Gold became declarer in four spades.

West led the club king to dummy's ace, and the club five appeared from East. It seemed likely that East's second suit was diamonds, and if East also had the heart king, there would be four losers. The only suit likely to provide a discard was diamonds.

Gold cashed dummy's top diamonds, then took the precaution of ruffing a third diamond high in hand as West discarded. The spade queen lost to East's ace and back came the club 10, overtaken by West for a heart return, Gold taking his ace.

Now, aware that East began with nine red cards and probably three clubs (deduced from East's carding up the line and West's silence in the auction), Gold placed East with the singleton trump ace.

Backing his judgment, he continued by finessing dummy's spade seven, ruffed another diamond high, and now a trump to the jack allowed him to discard a heart on the established fifth diamond.

ANSWER: In this sort of auction a bid of three hearts — a repeat use of the fourth-suit — is best used not as a red two-suiter, but as a way to ask for a half stop in hearts. If you had both red suits, you would simply bid three no-trump now, so your partner should bid no-trump with any three-card heart suit — even three small hearts.
