Twin Falls Roadwork Heads East

After two years of revamping Twin Falls' western main drags, construction shifts east this year, as does work to prepare for the new Chobani yogurt plant.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Along with the warmer days of spring comes road construction season, and Twin Falls drivers can expect several new projects to pop up soon.

Work at the intersection of Eastland Drive and Stadium Boulevard started March 6. Though it's not on the scale of Twin Falls road overhauls in recent years - including large stretches of Washington Street North and Blue Lakes Boulevard North - construction workers should be kept busy widening and repairing a rough stretch of Eastland.

The project to fix up Eastland between its intersections with Filer and Falls avenues will continue through August. Construction at the intersection of Eastland Drive and Addison Avenue will start sometime in mid-June or July and will hopefully be completed before Labor Day, City Engineer Jackie Fields wrote in an email to the Times-News.

Other city roadwork includes:

• A three-stage sewer project is expected to be completed by July. Stage one will be handled by Knife River Corp. Northwest and includes part of Canyon Springs Road and Carriage Lane. Stage two runs along Meadow Lane and Hankins Road, to be completed by Stutzman Inc. The third stage begins at Hankins Road at Addison Avenue and continues south along

House Panel Nixes Bid to Raise Idaho Cigarette Tax

Associated Press

BOISE • A House panel Monday rejected a bid to increase Idaho's cigarette tax by $1.25 per pack, with Republican foes branding health groups' efforts to erect stronger barriers to teen smoking as social engineering.

Idaho's 57 cent per pack tax will remain the lowest of Northwestern states.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee's vote against holding a full public hearing was 11-5, easily ending the effort by groups including the American Lung Association and American Cancer Society.

Though no public testimony was taken during the hearing, there were plenty of lobbyists in the room, including from health groups that favor raising Idaho's tax and convenience store representatives who contend that hiking costs of cigarettes would hurt their businesses.

Republican Reps. Lenore Barrett, of Challis, and Vito Barbieri, of Dalton Gardens, argued that cajoling people to quit by boosting a legal product's cost wasn't acceptable.

"This is the most blatant case of social engineering I have ever seen," said Barrett. "It's not the proper role of government to do social engineering through tax policy."

Others, including Rep. Del Raybould, R-Rexburg, feared hiking the cigarette tax could put undue hardship on low-wage earners who would continue to smoke and have less money for their children.

Rep. Dick Harwood, R-St. Maries, doubted that smoking was really that harmful to people's health, citing how his own mother smoked for about 82 years.

"Just because you smoke doesn't mean you are going to be ill," Harwood

Washington's per-pack tax is just over $3, Utah and Montana levy a $1.70 surcharge, Oregon charges $1.18 and Nevada's tax is 80 cents. Wyoming's is Virginia has the lowest tax in the country, at just 30 cents per pack. New York has the highest, at $4.35.

Heidi Low, the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network, told lawmakers that statistics indicate that about 12,400 Idaho teens would never begin smoking and another 9,400 other smokers would quit if they had to pay an extra $1.25 per pack for the privilege.

State Wants More College Grads by 2020

Now, it often begins in elementary

"We want to demystify college," said Marilyn Whitney, chief communications officer for the Idaho State Board of Education.

It's a topic that plays into the IS-BE's initiative to increase the number of Idahoans with college degrees. The goal of the Complete College

Idaho plan is that 60 percent of Idahoans age 25-34 will hold a college degree or certificate by 2020.

It's nearly double the state's current average -31 percent. Nationally, the average is 41 percent.

More than 40 Magic Valley educators and business representatives attended a meeting about the plan Monday at the College of Southern Idaho. It was sponsored by the ISBE and the Idaho Business Coalition for Education Excellence.

The framework for the plan was approved in December by the ISBE. Now, a comment process is going on

Bill to Protect Deathbed Decisions Moves Forward

On Monday, a Senate committee passed a bill to prevent physicians from denying patients requested end-of-life

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • End of life decisions are difficult to make, even without the worry of those wishes being honored.

On Monday, the Senate State Affairs committee voted to pass a bill that would prevent physicians from denying life-prolonging fluids, food and medications to patients who have indicated they want to receive that treatment. The bill clarifies Idaho's existing laws on endof-life care, and specifies that patients are in charge of making those decisions.

Currently, a physician or nurse can deny those treatments for patients who are near death if they've made a good faith effort to find another doctor who is willing to treat the patient, said bill sponsor Sen. Sheryl Nuxoll, R-Cotton-

That's not good enough, Nuxoll said, citing court cases around the country where patients' families and physicians differed on withholding treatment from patients who were close to death.

"If the patient wants to live, even if it's for only another two weeks, then isn't it his right to do so?" Nuxoll said.

The bill still allows patients and families to decline treat-

Several people testified in favor of the bill, some with anecdotal stories about conflicts between physicians and families over what constitutes comfort care for dying patients.

Jason Herring of Right to Life Idaho said the bill isn't an indictment against the state's hospitals or doctors. Rather, it is

British Court: Right-to-die Case Can Proceed

BY MARIA CHENG Associated Press

LONDON • In a case that challenges Britain's definition of murder, a severely disabled man who says his life has no "privacy or dignity" will be granted a hearing on his request that a doctor be allowed to give him a lethal injection.

Tony Nicklinson suffered a paralyzing stroke in 2005 that left him unable to speak or move below his neck. The former rugby player and corporate manager requires constant care and communicates largely by blinking, although his mind has remained unaffected.

"I am fed up with my life and don't want to spend the next 20 years or so like this," Nicklinson said in a state-

In January, Nicklinson asked the High Court to declare that any doctor who kills him with his consent will not be charged with murder. On Monday, a judge said the request may proceed, making it the first right-to-die case of its kind to get a hearing in a British

The 57-year-old's condition is stable, though Nicklinson has refused since 2007 to take any life-prolonging drugs recommended by doctors, including heart medication or blood thinners.

The ministry of justice argued that granting Nicklinson's request would require changing the law on murder and that such changes must be made by Parliament. The government had applied to have the case dismissed.

In his ruling, Justice William Charles said Nicklinson was "now inviting the court to cross the Rubicon" and that his case had "an arguable base."

Nicklinson argued that British law hindered his right to "private and family life" — guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights – on the grounds that being able to choose how to die is a matter of personal au-

"The decision to go to a hearing is quite a small step, but what's tremendously significant is what Tony Nicklinson is asking for," said Emily Jackson, a law professor at the London School of Economics. "Normally, it would be for Parliament to make any change to the law on murder, so it would be a very, very big deal for the court to make a change like this."

Nicklinson's wife, Jane, says the only way to end her husband's suffering is for him to die.

"A life like this is unbearable for him," she said. "We know there are doctors out there that would do this if it is made legal."

WASHINGTON • Fifty million people in America lack health insurance and the law says most of them must soon be provided coverage. But how to deliver?

The Obama administration Monday finalized an ambitious blueprint for new state-based markets that will offer consumers one-stop shopping along the lines of amazon.com.

It may sound simple enough, but getting there will be like running an obstacle course. The rule comes just two weeks before the Supreme Court takes up a challenge to the constitutionality of the law in a case brought by states. Many governors and legislators are on the sidelines awaiting the outcome, even as time is running out to act.

Starting Jan. 1, 2014, new health insurance markets called "exchanges" must be up and running in every state, the linchpin of a grand plan to make health insurance accessible and affordable to those who now struggle to find and keep coverage. Individual consumers and small businesses will be able to shop online for competitively priced coverage, and many will receive government subsidies to help pay premiums.

"More competition will drive down costs and exchanges will give individuals and small businesses the same purchasing power big businesses have today," Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said in a statement.

Experts say it's anybody's guess how the national rollout will go. If a state is not ready, the law requires the federal government to step in to run its exchange. But the Obama administration's request for $800 million to operate federal exchanges has gotten a frosty reception from congressional Republicans.

The Rule's Highlights

- States can receive conditional federal approval for their exchanges if their plans are far along but not final by Jan. 1, 2013. States can operate exchanges in partnership with other states.
- The state exchanges themselves will determine the number and type of health plans offered to consumers, within broad standards set by the federal government. Plans will have to comply with marketing rules to ensure they are not trying to cherry-pick the healthiest customers in the state.
- Consumers must be able to apply online for coverage in their state exchanges.
- Exchanges must be able to pick from two federally approved methods for coordinating with the Medicaid program in their states.
- Exchanges must be able to use intermediaries called "navigators" to help educate consumers and small businesses about how the new system
- Exchanges must be financially self-sufficient by 2015, by charging fees to support their opera-

Shootings Further Damage Americans' War Support

WASHINGTON • The weekend massacre of Afghan civilians, allegedly carried out by a U.S. soldier, newly undermines the rationale for a war that a majority of Americans already thought wasn't worth fighting. But the Obama administration and its allies insisted Monday the horrific episode would not speed up plans to pull out foreign

President Barack Obama called the episode "tragic," and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton called it "inexplicable."

Obama told a television interviewer Monday that the killings underscore the need to hand over responsibility for security to Afghans. But he said it won't lead to an early withdrawal of U.S. troops.

"It does signal, though, the importance of us transitioning, in accordance with my plan," Obama told WFTV of Orlando, Fla., "so that Afghans are taking more of the lead for their own security and we can start getting our troops home."

Clinton told reporters at the United Nations in New York, "This terrible incident does not change our steadfast dedication to protecting the Afghan people and to doing everything we can to build a strong and stable Afghanistan."

Administration officials were reacting to the weekend killing of 16 Afghan civilians, including nine children asleep in their beds. A U.S. Army staff sergeant is accused of slipping away from his base in the Taliban heartland of Kandahar and shooting nearby villagers in their

Despite the deaths, "Our strategic objectives have not changed and they will not change," White House press secretary Jay Carney said.

The killings were the latest in a series of deadly incidents that caused outrage for both Americans and Afghans.

The killing of Americans by their Afghan hosts and of Afghans by the Americans who are supposed to help them have forced an acute examination of a war strategy that calls for Afghans to assume greater responsibility for security through mentoring and "shoulder by shoulder" joint operations.

Obama expanded the Afghan war in the first year of his presidency, saying it was in keeping with U.S. national security interests in contrast to the Iraq war he opposed. But the war, now in its 11th year, remains a stalemate in much of the country, while the al-Qaida terror network that the war is supposed to deter has largely abandoned Afghanistan. U.S. commandos killed Sept. 11 mastermind Osama bin Laden last vear.

The war is increasingly becoming a political headache for Obama, with American voters appearing frustrated and Republican rivals accusing him of mishandling it.

In results from a Washington Post-ABC News poll conducted before the killings and released Sunday, 55 percent of respondents said they think most Afghans oppose what the United States is trying to do there. And 60 percent said the war in Afghanistan has been "not worth fighting."

Many Republicans – who as a party fought against a quick exodus in Iraq and criticized Obama's 2008 presidential campaign promise to end that war - are now reluctant to embrace a contincommitment Afghanistan.

"We have to either make a decision to make a full commitment, which this president has not done, or we have to decide to get out and probably get out sooner" than planned in 2014, GOP presidential hopeful Rick Santorum said Monday. He spoke on NBC's "Today" show.

Israeli Plans for Iran Go Back Years

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's threats to strike Iran, voiced last week during a high-profile visit to the White House, were not empty bluster. Although a unilateral Israeli attack would probably not destroy Iran's nuclear program, it appears capable, at least for now, of inflicting a serious blow.

> Israel, along with the United States and other Western countries, believes Iran has taken key steps toward developing nuclear weapons. The U.N.'s nuclear watchdog agency has cited this concern in reports, but notes its inspectors have found no direct evidence that Iran is moving toward an atomic weapon.

Israeli leaders, however, argue that time is quickly running out. They have grown increasingly vocal in their calls for tough concerted international action against Iran while stressing they are prepared to act alone if necessary.

Israeli defense officials believe Iran is capable of producing highly enriched weapons-grade uranium within six months. After that, it would require another year or two to develop a means of delivering a nuclear bomb, they predict.

Justice Dept Opposes Texas Voter ID Law

BY PETE YOST Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A photo ID requirement for voters in Texas could disenfranchise hundreds of thousands of registered Hispanics, the Justice Department declared Monday in its latest move against Republican-led voting changes in many states that have drawn protests from minorities, poor people and students. The Justice objection means that now a federal court in Washington will decide whether Texas, as well as South Carolina, will be allowed to enforce its new voter photo ID requirements. Justice's move merely blocked a Texas law until the court rules.

Other states have similar laws and more are moving toward them as advocates portray the restrictions as needed to combat voter fraud.

The Justice Department conveyed its objection in a letter to Texas officials that was also filed in the U.S. District Court case in Washington between Texas and the department. Justice said Hispanic voters in Texas are at least 50 percent more likely and possibly more than twice as likely as non-Hispanic voters to lack a driver's license or a personal state-issued photo ID, which the Texas law requires

Born three months premature and weighing 1 lb. 9 oz., Kaylee had spent her first days struggling to survive in a neonatal intensive care unit.

Her parents were young and involved in drugs, and the Idaho Department of Welfare was looking for a foster family to care for her until she could be reunited with her parents. Because Diane Harper was a nurse with neonatal experience, the Harpers were an excellent match.

About six months later, the Harpers decided to adopt Kaylee.

"We didn't go into it thinking of adoption," Kevin Harper explained. "The first goal of foster care is to reunify the child with the family. But little by little we could see it shifting?"

As the Harpers became attached to Kaylee, her parents realized they couldn't care for her as well as they'd like to. They gave the Harpers their blessing to adopt Kaylee, who is now a healthy, happy 3-year-old.

The Harpers, who live in Meridian with their four biological children and three adopted children, count Kaylee as their biggest success story as foster parents, and they want to get out the message that foster parenting can be an excellent option for people thinking about of Health and Welfare is to safely return foster kids to their parents or close relatives, but that doesn't always happen. In some cases, the state decides a child is better off adopted by the foster parents. Rather than spending tens of thousands of dollars for adoption through a private agency or a foreign country, prospective adoptive parents might consider the children in Idaho who need families. "This is a pathway to do a free adoption," Kevin Harper said. "If you have a heart for helping these kids, take the time to do it. Fill out the paper work and go through the process?"

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare is constantly seeking new foster parents. Adults of all ages, faiths and ethnicities are eligible. It doesn't matter if they are single, married or in domestic partnerships.

"They need to be flexible, kind and empathetic. They need to have a heart for kids," said Monique Layton, foster care licensing social worker for Health and Welfare. The state especially needs foster parents willing to take in teenagers and siblings, Layton said.

While Layton warned that potential foster parents should not expect to have the opportunity to adopt children, that is often a possibility.

"We always stress that our intention is to help families get reunited. If that's not possible, we look for permanency through guardianship, for a permanent place for the child," she said. Nampa residents Ashley and Tammy Wightman have adopted three foster children, two boys, 5 and 8, and a girl, age 3. They also have a 2-year-old biological daughter and two teenage foster

House Committee Swaps Out Teacher Pay Bills

BY JESSIE L. BONNER Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho would avoid more cuts to the funding used to pay teachers in 2013 but could dip deeper into that money in the future to fund new education reforms, under legislation introduced Monday. The bill from House Education Committee Chairman Bob Nonini aims to replace a plan already endorsed by state senators. They voted unanimously to reverse the shifting of $34 million from salaries over the next five years to help pay for a statewide laptop program and merit pay bonuses for teachers. Rupert Republican Sen. Dean Cameron's bill would allow lawmakers to direct tax revenue that's on the rebound to pay for those items. But Cameron's legislation isn't expected to get a hearing in the House Education Committee, where Nonini and others who supported the reforms worry about placing ongoing funding for the changes in jeopardy. "I think we're still in a little bit of a delicate economy, unemployment numbers are still at 8.5 to 9 percent, although we're seeing a little bit of a turnaround, we've got a little bit of revenue growth," Nonini said. "I'm just nervous about committing future legislators to the additional money that Sen.

Cameron's bill did." Nonini's legislation would keep teacher pay at current levels in 2013 while lowering the amounts taken from salaries in future years to help fund the reforms. The bill will get a hearing Nonini's committee and if approved, go to the full House

"I think this is somewhat of a compromise," Nonini said. "I just see mine as a little bit more, oh I guess what I would call, fiscally prudent legislation? Neither bill would restore

Cameron on Monday called Nonini's revenue logic "somewhat duplicitous," pointing out that Nonini had recently voted for a permanent tax decrease. "Either we have the data that shows we can afford an ongoing tax reduction or we don't," Cameron said. "If we don't have that data, then we shouldn't do either." But, Cameron said, Noni-ni's bill is better than nothing. "But it's certainly not what we'd hoped for," Cameron said.

As it stands now, schools will be given less in salarybased apportionment, then have to choose what to cut likely salaries or teaching positions. Idaho is shifting about $14.7 million, or 1.67 percent, in funding for employee pay and benefits this year to help pay for reforms approved in 2011. Another 2.38 percent, or nearly $20 million, was due to shift next year as the state phases in laptops for every high school teacher and pays out merit bonuses for teachers. The amounts being shifted from salaries were due to increase in following years, when students get the laptops. The goal of restoring teacher pay is popular in the 2012 session, and a public schools budget approved by legislative budget writers for next year does not rely on salaries to help fund the reforms. But leaving ongoing funding up to future legislatures is a gamble House lawmakers aren't willing to take,

Nonini said. Public schools chief Tom Luna has previously said he shares Nonini's concerns about placing future funding for the reforms at risk, with the cost of the technology and merit pay plan due to increase. Luna's office did not, however, take a position

Monday on Nonini's bill. "We're still reviewing the legislation;" spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said.

Tougher Animal Cruelty Bill

Approved BOISE • Torturing animals and organizing cockfights could be considered felonies in Idaho under a bill heading to the full House.

The House Agricultural Committee voted Monday to toughen animal cruelty penalties for pets and companion animals - a move intended to head off a ballot initiative by animal-rights advocates.

Lava Hot Springs Rep. Ken Andrus sponsored the legislation to make it a felony for anyone convicted a third time for torturing animals. Organizers of gamecock fights would also qualify for a felony if drugs or gambling are involved.

Livestock and other production animals are exempt from the bill.

Andrus says his bill is a better solution than a tougher ballot initiative being pursued by some animal rights advocates. Some groups behind that voter initiative have signaled support for Andrus' bill.

Senators Won't Amend Oil and Gas Bill

BOISE • Senators opted against considering changes to a bill that would limit local control of oil and natural gas drilling projects in a close vote that was a sharp reversal of a move just last Friday.

Monday's 18-15 vote means the industry-backed measure is due another round of floor debate, perhaps as early as Tuesday.

On Friday, Lt. Gov. Brad Little broke a tie vote and sent the bill to the Senate's amending order.

That's after senators including Dean Cameron of Rupert argued its provisions would upend the current balance between state and local control.

House Votes to Restore School Protections

BOISE • The Idaho House voted 62-1 to restore funding protections for schools with enrollment declines, while shifting the cost of the program to the districts.

Republican Rep. Mack Shirley says "the beauty" of the legislation is that it's self-funded, with districts each giving up a portion of their per-student funding to pay for the program.

Idaho previously gave shrinking school districts a one-year extension of 99 percent of the funding that came with a departed student. The bill that passed the House on Monday would restore those protections at 97

Bill Eases Workers Comp for Firefighters

BOISE • Senate lawmakers have endorsed a bill to better protect Idaho firefighters who contract cancer.

The Senate voted 23-10 Monday to pass legislation that would help the state's nearly 1,000 firefighters secure workers compensation for diseases they say result from years of battling burning, smoke-filled structures.

A growing body of medical research suggests the physically demanding profession suffers disproportionately from a variety of cancers.

ID House: Private Insurers Should Set up Exchange

BOISE (AP) · House members voted 49-13 to encourage private insurers to establish their own health insurance exchange, rather than having federal or state governments set one up as envisioned by the 2010 federal health care overhaul.

Rep. Bob Nonini of Coeur d'Alene said Monday he doesn't think Idaho lawmakers have enough time to pass exchange legislation, with just two weeks left in the 2012 Leg-Nonini, an insurance salesman, told lawmakers that he felt obligated to offer this alternative - especially since he's such an outspoken foe of a publicly-run exchange.

This non-binding resolution now goes to the Senate.

Its 13 foes didn't debate Monday.

But in committee, they argued government intervention was needed to help control health care costs because private insurers have failed to establish an exchange on their

The average price for a gallon of gasoline rose a nickel over the weekend and is now $3.80 per gallon. That more than wiped out the penny decline seen last Tuesday through Thursday. That's the highest ever for this time of year. The average pump price has risen 52 cents this year as refineries and wholesalers pass along the higher cost of crude oil. U.S. Report: Oil Imports Down, Domestic Production Highest in Nearly a Decade

BY NEELA BANERJEE Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON • Against the backdrop of gasoline prices rising in an election year, a new Obama administration report cites "significant progress" in reducing foreign oil imports and increasing domestic oil and gas produc-

The report by six federal agencies was released Monday on the first anniversary of a speech by President Barack Obama in which he pledged to reduce American dependence on foreign oil imports by one-third in about a decade.

According to the study, the United States reduced net imports of crude oil last year by 10 percent, or 1 million barrels a day. The U.S. now imports 45 percent of its petroleum, down from 57 percent in 2008, and is on track to meet Obama's long-term goal, the administration maintains.

Imports have fallen, in part, because the U.S. has increased domestic oil and gas production in recent years.

U.S. crude oil production increased by an estimated 120,000 barrels a day last year from 2010, the report says. Current production, about 5.6 million barrels a day, is the highest since

The U.S. has been the world's largest producer of natural gas since 2009, the report says. Use of renewable sources of energy, such as wind and solar, is still relatively small but has doubled since

A new poll shows that mounting frustration with the president's handling of the economy, driven in part by a sense that he can influence gasoline prices, has eroded Obama's approval

A Washington Post/ABC poll found that 46 percent of people surveyed approve of Obama's job performance, while 50 percent disapproved. That is a reversal of the president's ratings from last month, when his approval hit 50 percent for the first time in that survey in nearly a year. The quick drop coincides with a spike in gas prices and an increase in criticism from Obama's Republican rivals on the issue, even as the economy has shown noticeable signs of growth.

The poll underscored how rising gas prices threaten to keep Obama from reaping the rewards of the good economic news. The survey found that 65 percent of respondents disapproved of Obama's handling of gas prices, even though half said they believed there was nothing the administration could do to bring down the cost of gas.

Still, the report highlights improvements in the overall energy picture, citing initiatives such as the higher fuel efficiency of passenger cars, the jump in renewable energy output, and improved weatherization of 1 million homes.

But independent analysts attribute much of the fall in oil imports to slack U.S. demand in a still-anemic economy. And to a certain degree, they say, the boost in domestic oil and gas production is the result of decisions energy companies made during the George W. Bush administration to develop key

The report, titled "The Blueprint for a Secure Energy Future," appears aimed, at least in part, at tamping down political fire from Obama's Republican rivals and other critics who say his administration has not done enough to fight higher gasoline prices.

"We're experiencing yet another painful reminder of why developing new American energy is so critical to our future," the report states. "We know that there are no quick fixes to this challenge."

Domestic gasoline prices rise and fall with global crude oil prices, which have been driven up by the gradual economic recovery and by market jitters over mounting tensions with Iran, one of the world's largest oil producers. The closing of several U.S. refineries also has pushed gas prices higher.

Most Americans are convinced that Obama and Congress could do more to reduce gasoline prices, according to a recent Gallup poll.

GOP candidates on the campaign trail and some oil industry leaders have charged that Obama's energy policies stifle domestic production, and they have urged the administration to open as much public land and offshore areas as possible to drilling.

More domestic drilling will not end the need for imports, however. The United States holds only 2 percent of the planet's proven oil reserves, but Americans consume 25 percent of the world's daily output of crude oil.

While the U.S. has been importing less crude oil lately and producing more, this equation does not necessarily translate into lower prices at the pump since prices are set on the global market.

SAN FRANCISCO • In everything it does, from product design to business deals, Apple strives for as much control as possible.

But as the world's most valuable company sets out to define and dominate the rapidly evolving markets it created with the iPhone and the iPad, Apple is likely to face antitrust regulators who want to curb its power.

Apple's clout is coming under scrutiny as the U.S. Justice Department considers filing a lawsuit against the company and five U.S. publishers on allegations they orchestrated a price-fixing scheme on electronic books.

The involved parties are trying to avoid a high-profile court battle by negotiating a settlement, according to The Wall Street Journal. The newspaper broke the news last week about the government's plans to allege that Apple Inc. and the publishers tried to thwart e-book discounts offered Amazon.com Inc. and drive up prices since the 2010 release of the iPad.

"I think this might be a bit of a wake-up call for Apple," says Ted Henneberry, an antitrust attorney for the Orrick law firm in Washington. Apple declined to com-

The e-book case demonstrates the market leverage Apple has gained from its system of Internet-connected devices that tie into iTunes, its digital marketplace for mobile applications, books, newspapers, magazines, textbooks, movies and music.

"That platform has become really essential for a lot of people," says David Balto, an antitrust attorney who was a Federal Trade Commission policy director during the Clinton administration. "Apple clearly has gained a lot of power in a number of markets."

Apple has sold more than 315 million iPhones, iPads and iPods that run on its mobile operating system, giving it the keys to a market that will become increasingly influential as more people buy digital content for such devices.

Apple's success has transformed the company from a technology boutique to a trend-setting juggernaut in the past decade. Its annual revenue has soared from $5 billion in 2001 to $108 billion last year. About three-quarters of that revenue comes from sales of iPhones, iPads and iPods. The company, based in Cupertino, Calif., now has a market value of about $510 billion - more than Microsoft Corp. and Google Inc. combined.

So far, though, government regulators haven't paid as much attention to Apple as they did to Microsoft during the 1990s and to Google during the past four years.

Microsoft's efforts to maintain and increase its dominance of personal computer software provoked an antitrust lawsuit that unsuccessfully attempted to break up the company.

Allegations that Google has been abusing its dominance of the Internet search and advertising markets have sparked wide-ranging government probes into the company's business practices in the U.S. and Europe.

Apple may simply behave better than some of its rivals, or it may be doing business in areas that are so new that government regulators are still learning how those nascent markets function, says D. Daniel Sokol, a law professor who focuses on antitrust issues at the University of Flori-

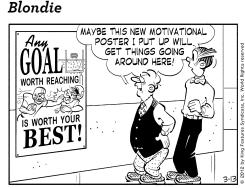

"To attract antitrust attention, you have to be more than just big. You have to be big and bad," Sokol says. "It was only 2007 when Apple released the iPhone, and only 2010 when it released the iPad. The company hasn't had that long to be bad yet, if it is indeed bad?

"One man can't kill so many people. There must have been many people involved. If the government says this is just one person's act we will not accept it."

Bacha Agha of Balandi village after a U.S. Army sergeant opened fire Sunday on Afghan villagers as they slept, killing 16 people

Where's the Hope?

ou've got to hand it to Democrats and the Obama re-election campaign. Like a quarterback who looks left to draw the defense away from his intended target on the right, Democrats have managed to divert our attention. Instead of debating President Obama's dreadful record on just about everything, Democrats have managed to get Republicans talking about sex and morality. Rather than figuring out what to do about Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons, Democrats have put Republicans on the defensive over the use of vulgar words applied to liberal women. For their use of equally offensive or similar words applied to conservative women, they mostly get a pass, because this isn't about the words; it's about

The strategy seems to be working. After a week of debating, discussing and deploring what Rush Limbaugh said about Sandra Fluke, the Democratfriendly Washington Postran a front-page story last Saturday announcing "GOP gains dwindling among women." They must be toasting each other at President Obama's 2012 national headquarters in Chicago.

How did Republicans allow themselves to be outmaneuvered like this? Why do they think that talking about sex, much less trying to regulate it (some might start with regulating themselves) is going to gain votes for the party in a hedonistic age where worship of the Dow Jones Industrial Average and pleasure trumps a Higher Authority? The public has little faith in the ability of politicians to run the country. The approval rating for Congress just hit an alltime low of 9 percent, according to a recent New York Times/CBS News poll. That's lower than the approval rating for pornography, polygamy and human cloning, as cited in Gallup's 2011 Values and Beliefs poll.

Republicans are missing an opportunity to outmaneuver Democrats. Instead of playing the Democrats' game, Republicans should embrace a positive and optimistic vision. It worked for Ronald Reagan — the president whom Republicans so revere and wish was still around. Does anyone believe if Reagan were alive today he would be happy with the way the party is destroying itself?

I have made this argument before in different ways and with different analogies and I will continue to make it until someone takes it seriously. Stop arguing about philosophy and morality and instead feature people who have embraced Republican principles and whose lives are better as a result. These would include a single mother who is now independent of government assistance and either has a job or operates her own small business, thanks, perhaps, to a microloan.

Show me people who were brought up on "the wrong side of the tracks" with an alcoholic father, or absent mother, but because someone took an interest in them (a teacher, a mentor), managed to make something of themselves.

How about an example of a man who was mired in debt but decided to stop spending money he didn't have, paid his bills and is now debt free with a good credit rating? He could provide an example for what government should do.

America has always been a storytelling nation. We love stories of people overcoming through hard work and personal integrity. The late radio broadcaster Paul Harvey made a career of telling inspirational stories. Why aren't Republicans telling positive stories, instead of so often labeling and condemning people? The smallest light can pierce the darkest room. Hope dispels despair. Confidence builds strength. "You can do it" beats "you'll never amount to anything."

Republicans should find people in small towns and big cities who would tell their stories. That's what voters want to hear and see. It's called leadership. It inspires people to believe in themselves and, ultimately, in America. It's what Reagan did. Go to YouTube and watch that 1984 campaign commercial "It's Morning in America."

For too many Republicans, the sun is setting on America. The return of Daylight Saving Time isn't going to help.

Free Speech under Fire

he recent exchange between an atheist and a judge in a small courtroom in rural Pennsylvania could have come out of a Dickens novel. Magisterial District Judge Mark Martin was hearing a case in which an irate Muslim stood accused of attacking an atheist, Ernest Perce, because he was wearing a "Zombie Mohammed" costume on Halloween. Although the judge had "no doubt that the incident occurred," he dismissed the charge of criminal harassment against the Muslim and proceeded to browbeat Perce. Martin explained that such a costume would have led to Perce's execution in many countries under sharia, or Islamic law, and added that Perce's conduct fell "way outside your bounds of First Amendment rights." The case has caused a national outcry, with many claiming that Martin was applying sharia law over the Constitution — a baseless and unfair claim. But while the ruling certainly doesn't suggest that an American caliphate has gained a foothold in American courts, it was nevertheless part of a disturbing trend. The conflict in Cumberland County between free speech and religious rights is being played out in courts around the world, and free speech is losing.

Perce was marching in a parade with a fellow atheist dressed as a "Zombie Pope" when he encountered Talaag Elbayomy, who was outraged by the insult to the prophet. The confrontation was captured on Perce's cellphone. Nevertheless, Martin dismissed the charge against Elbayomy. Then he turned to Perce, accusing him of acting like a "doofus." Martin said: "It's unfortunate that some people use the First Amendment to deliberately provoke others. I don't think that's what our forefathers intended."

For many, the case confirmed long-standing fears that sharia law is coming to this country. The alarmists note that in January, a federal court struck down an Oklahoma law that would have barred citing sharia law in state courts. But there is no threat of that, and certainly not in Oklahoma, which has fewer than 6,000 Muslims in the entire state. Rather, the campaign against sharia law has distracted the public from the very real threat to free speech growing throughout the West.

To put it simply, Western nations appear to have fallen out of love with free speech and are criminalizing more and more kinds of speech through the passage of laws banning hate speech, blasphemy and discriminatory language. Ironically, these laws are defended as fighting for tolerance and pluralism.

After the lethal riots over Dutch cartoons in 2005 satirizing Muhammad, various Western countries have joined Middle Eastern countries in charging people with insulting religion. And prosecutions are now moving beyond anti-religious speech to anti-homosexual or even anti-historical statements. In Canada last year, comedian Guy Earle was found to have violated the human rights of a lesbian couple by making insulting comments at a nightclub. In Britain, Dale Mcalpine was charged in 2010 with causing "harassment, alarm or distress" after a gay community police officer overheard him stating that he viewed homosexuality as a sin. The charges were later dropped.

Western countries are on a slippery slope where more and more speech is cited by citizens as insulting and thus criminal. Last year, on the Isle of Wight, musician Simon Ledger was arrested on suspicion of racially aggravated harassment after a passing person of Chinese descent was offended by Ironically, these laws are defended as fighting for tolerance and pluralism.

Ledger's singing "Kung Fu Fighting." Although the charges were eventually dropped, the arrest sends a chilling message that such songs are voiced at one's own risk.

Some historical debates have now become hate speech. After World War II, Germany criminalized not just Nazi symbols but questioning the Holocaust. Although many have objected that the laws only force such ignorance and intolerance underground, the police have continued the quixotic fight to prevent barred utterances, such as the arrest in 2010 of a man in Hamburg caught using a Hitler speech as a ring tone speech as a ring tone.

In January, the French parliament passed a law making it a crime to question the Armenian genocide.
The law was struck down by the Constitutional Council, but supporters have vowed to introduce a new law to punish deniers. When accused of pandering to Armenian voters, the bill's author responded, "That's democracy."

Perhaps, but it is not liberty. Most democratic constitutions strive not to allow the majority to simply dictate conditions and speech for everyone — the very definition of what the framers of the U.S. Constitution called tyranny of the majority. It was this tendency that led John Adams to warn: "Democracy ... soon wastes, exhausts and murders itself. There was never a democracy yet that did not commit suicide."

Legislators in the United States have shown the same taste for speech prosecutions. In June, Tennessee legislators passed a law making it a crime to "transmit or display an image" online that is likely to "frighten, intimidate or cause emotional distress" to someone who sees it. The law leaves free speech dependent not only on the changing attitudes of what constitutes a disturbing image but whether others believe it was sent for a "legitimate purpose." This applies even to postings on Facebook or social media.

Judge Martin's comments are disturbing because they reflect the same emerging view of the purpose and, more important, the perils of free speech. Martin told Perce that "our forefathers" did not intend the First Amendment "to piss off other people and cultures." Putting aside the fact that you could throw a stick on any colonial corner and hit three people "pissed off" at Thomas Paine or John Adams, the First Amendment was designed to protect unpopular speech. We do not need a First Amendment to protect popular speech.

The exchange between the judge and the atheist in Mechanicsburg captures the struggle that has existed between free speech and religion for ages. What is different is that it is now a struggle being waged on different terms. Where governments once punished to achieve obedience, they now punish to achieve tolerance. As free speech recedes in the West, it is not sharia but silence that is following in its wake.

Lona Hymas Smith April 14, 1961-March 9, 2012

BURLEY • Lona Hymas Smith, 50, of Burley, passed away Friday, March 9, 2012, from injuries sustained in a bicycle accident.

Lona was born April 14, 1961, in Burley, Idaho, the daughter of LaVern and Hazel (Linzy) Hymas. She graduated from Minico High School in 1979, then went on to attend Ricks College, where she studied art. Lona was lucky to marry her best friend, Dennis Smith, on May 5, 1994, in the Salt Lake LDS Temple. She met him up on the mountain at Pomerelle on a very stormy day when the weather forced skiers inside the lodge. She was a very cute ski instructor and Dennis was on ski patrol. They made their initial home in Burley, but early in their married life, they moved to a home on the Snake River because Lona loved the river and because Dennis loved doing things to support and encourage Lona. He encouraged her to pursue her love of woodcarving, and she'd often ask his advice on pieces she was working on. Lona knew Dennis was her biggest fan the reason she carved and the love of her life. Lona exuded a passion for life and the outdoors. She enjoyed swimming across the river and back to her home; exploring, hiking, skiing, bicycling, playing the banjo and all around adventuring.

Lona also enjoyed creating "illusionary realism" as she fondly tagged it, through her woodcarving. At 4 years old, she was drawing human forms. Later, she majored in sculpture at Ricks (BYU-Idaho), taking all the classes she could in human figure drawing and 3-D art. But it wasn't until 14 years after college that she discovered her rare talent in wild life art. Lona is one of only two recognized women bird carvers in Idaho, as well as the only woman fish carver. Her creativity, skill, dedication and love of her craft was beautifully displayed in her carvings, which were sold at the renowned Kneeland Gallery in Sun Valley, Idaho, and the Horizon Gallery in Jackson, Wyo. Private collectors recognized her incredible gift and commissioned her to do pieces for them. Her work was sought by numerous collectors for the exquisite attention to detail and the beauty of the pieces she crafted.

Lona's work has been publicly recognized through a number of honors and awards, including the prestigious Ward World Championship and placement in the University of Tulsa Gilcrease Museum collection. Although very humble and sincere by nature, Lona was so thrilled when her carving of the Stellar's Jay won the Advanced Level "Best in Division" for Decorative Life-size Wildfowl in the 2010 Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition and Art Festival in Ocean City, Md. This event is the top competition for world-class woodcarvers, and Lona's exceptional Stellar's Jay was a great representation of her skill. Lona gave of herself and her talent to bless the lives of others by donating art work to auctions benefitting wildlife and hunting organizations, a community cancer patient, and a bicycle accident individual to name a few.

Prior to carving full time, Lona held a variety of jobs throughout the community, working at the Wizard Sandwich Shop and Jil's Flower House. She served as Dr. Blackmer's podiatric assistant, was a BLM dispatcher and a banjo, scuba and ski instruc-

Surviving are her husband, Dennis of Burley; siblings, Jaunee (Vaughn) Baird of Pleasant View, Utah, Vickie (Larry) Hathaway of Spanish Fork, Utah, Cherri (Clint) Peavey of Ketchikan, Alaska, Monica (Duane) Rasmussen of Burley; and a sister-in-law, Tannie Hymas of Eagle, Idaho. In her heart, Lona adopted her niece, Shana Mortensen, as the daughter she never had and loved her as her own. She is also survived by her mother-in-law, Carol Smith of Burley; one brother-in-law, Jeff (Coco) Smith of North Carolina; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents, LaVern Charles and Hazel Marie Hymas; her brother, Steve Hymas; and her father-in-law, Rawlin (Butch) Smith.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday, March 15, at the Star LDS Ward, 100 S. 200 W. of Burley. Burial will follow at the Pleasant View Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 14, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from noon until 12:45 p.m. Thursday at the church.

"You were too young, too beautiful, too talented, to be taken away and how sad it is to lose such a lovely lady. We will always remember you and that smile. We have lost an amazing friend and artist in Lona Smith. She loved life and lived it to the fullest. You have left beauty here behind you in the legacy of your woodcarving and gifts of love that you sent into the lives of others. We are all better for you having been here. Lona, you were everything to us and more. You are our hero?

Farrell Delroy Nelson Feb. 5, 1940-March 11, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Farrell Delroy Nelson passed away Sunday, March 11, 2012, after a long, courageous battle with cancer.

He was born Feb.

5, 1940, in Idaho Falls and moved to Twin Falls in 1941. His parents were Farreld W. and Evelyn R. Nelson. Farrell was the youngest of three children; he graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1958 and enlisted in the Army. He went through basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., and was stationed at Fort Lee, Va.; Maine and Alaska. He was very proud of his military service and to serve his country from 1958 to 1961. Farrell enjoyed entertaining others with his stories about the Army, especially during his service in Maine and Alaska. After the Army, he worked for his father, who owned Nelson Truck Lines. Farrell went on to work for Sears for 26 years and then 16 years with Cain's and Furniture Outlet. He retired in 2005, having been a natural and gifted salesman. His first sales job was selling newspapers at the age of 8 on the corner of Shoshone and Main Street.

Since his younger days, he loved to hunt, fish and camp and did so to the end. He also enjoyed having coffee in the food court at the mall with friends. Farrell married Janice Miller in 1963 in Twin Falls; they were married 49 years. Together they had three children, Mike, Ron and Julie. He was preceded in death by his mother; father; sisand ter, Betty; brother, Bob. He is survived by his wife, Janice; sons, Mike and Bobbie Nelson of Vancouver, Wash., and Ron and Amy Nelson of Twin Falls, Idaho; daughter, Julie and Frank Vieira of Hauser Lake, Idaho; seven grandchildren, Stachya, Preston and Brady Nelson, Sariah and Alora Vieria, and Alex and Elisabeth Nelson, two stepgrandchildren, Andy Hurley, and Travis and Emilia Hurley; and one great-stepgrandchild, Jesse Hurley.

A heartfelt thank you to Idaho Home Health and Hospice (Paul and Danelle); and our family friends, Pastor Vi and Pastor Paul West. A special thanks to our son, Ron, his wife, Amy, and our granddaughter, Stachva Nelson, for helping with the care of gramps in his final

A viewing for Farrell will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 13, at Rosenau Funeral Home. A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, March 14, at Rosenau Funeral Home.

The family suggests memorials be made in Farrell's name to Idaho Home Health and Hospice, No Regrets, 5964 S. Olmstead Ave., Boise, ID 83709.

Carlos T. Hahn

Nov. 22, 1925-March 7, 2012

HOMEDALE • Carlos T. Hahn, age 86, died Wednesday, March 7, 2012.

Carlos was born Nov. 22, 1925, in Shoshone, Idaho, the son of Joseph T. "Chad" Sorensen and Mabel O. Sorensen. In later years, Carlos took the name of his stepfather, Edwin C. "Red" Hahn.

Carlos completed his schooling in Shoshone and, in April 1943, entered the U.S. Navy. He served three years in the Naval Air Corps as a radio/radar operator and certified aerial gunner. After his discharge, he attended the University of Idaho, where he studied civil engineering; then, on May 7, 1949, married Etta Maxwell of Hagerman.

Carlos worked on various projects starting at the atomic energy site near Arco, Idaho, then on a large atomic energy facility near Paducah, Ky. From there, he went to Saudi Arabia on the construction of the Dhahran Air Base and, on returning to the states, worked on the St. Lawrence Seaway near Ogdensburg, N.Y. From there, he went to California and the piping of a large irrigation project, then to Wishon Dam on the Kings River approximately 80 miles east of Fresno, Calif.

Carlos returned to Shoshone in 1958, where he worked for the Department of Transportation until he retired on the March 1, 1986. Carlos belonged to the Masonic Lodge, where he served as master, and worked with the Job's Daughters for several years. After retirement, he enjoyed woodworking and traveled to various areas, mostly to find a good fishing spot.

Powerful joint pill flying off drug store shelves

Clinical trial participants began to feel noticeable results in just days

(UMS) - Imagine a pill that can start helping you get around more easily in just a matter of days.1,2 Then think about how great it would be for your joints to start feeling better too.

Well there's no reason to imagine, a team of scientists has developed an amazing joint health supplement that's been clinically shown to improve mobility and joint comfort.1,4

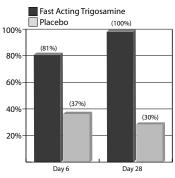

The remarkable joint health pill is called Fast Acting Trigosamine® and consumers can't seem to get enough of it.

Demand has been incredible; consumers have already purchased over 44.7 million doses and that number just keeps growing.

Why has this pill become so popular? The answer is really quite simple...because it works.

Trigosamine has been clinically shown to produce amazing results; 81% of the participants started feeling better just days after taking the recommended dosage (Figure 1) and an incredible 100% reported their joints felt better just halfway through the 8 week clinical study.1,2

6 Subjects that report improved joint comfort

"I've never seen relief from a supplement like this before,' said Dr. Philip Howren.¹

"I've been practicing medicine for a long time so believe me when I tell you for people to start getting results this quickly is pretty amazing. In fact, I use this pill myself and it's become my number one recommendation to anyone who suffers with joint discomfort," added Dr. Howren.4

Trigosamine is currently available at just about all of the national pharmacy retailers and PatentHEALTH, the company that developed this remarkable pill, has also set up a nationwide order line for those read- a "shock absorber" allowing for medicine, I've never seen peoers that want it shipped direct- effortless, comfortable motion.

"We hear from our customers all the time how great this product is so I'm sure the phones are going to ring off-the-hook when people find out they can get it shipped to their front doors while also saving a lot of money. I recommend that people call right away so they don't miss out on this amazing opportunity to feel better," said Barker.

Trigosamine's formula has a special combination of ingredients that until now have never been blended into a pill. It's this special mixture that was clinically tested and is responsible for delivering the incredible

One of the key ingredients is Hyaluronate, which is a building block of "human joint oil" and known by medical professionals as synovial fluid.

"But as we age, our bodies produce less of this super-slippery fluid which can force bones and joints to grind together causing nagging discomfort," said Dr. Howren.

"Trigosamine's remarkable what makes it work so well. It's helped me and my patients to move more freely and with greater flexibility," added Howren.4

Trigosamine's powerful results Trigosamine shipped right are all supported by an Independent Review Board-approved, randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical study which is considered to be the "gold standard" for joint health supplements.

While no pill works for everyone, during this clinical trial every one of the participants that took this amazing supplement reported an improvement in their joint comfort. The data also shows that their joint comfort kept improving the entire time they were taking Trigosamine during the clinical study.^{1,4}

On the other hand, the clinical participants taking the placebo pill experienced very different results. These individuals reported increased joint discomfort and soreness during the clinical study. This is the exact opposite result as compared to the participants that were taking Trigosamine. Further proof that this supple-

Idaho State Women Draw Miami (Fla.)

TIMES-NEWS

POCATELLO • The Idaho State women's basketball team isn't traveling far for its third trip to the NCAA tournament, learing Monday that it will travel to Spokane, Wash., for its opening-round game Saturday against Miami (Fla.).

The Bengals, champions of the Big Sky Conference, earned a No. 14 seed while the Hurricanes finished second in the Atlantic Coast Conference and feature three all-ACC selections. ISU's two previous NCAA bids came in 2001 when it lost to Vanderbilt and it 2007 when it played Stanford. This will be the first time ISU has not faced its NCAA opponent on its home floor.

"We are excited to be a part of the NCAA tournament and go to Spokane," coach Seton Sobolewski said. "Our players have worked hard and deserve this opportu-

The Twin Falls High School girls golf team of Katherine Reed, Sydney Lee, Emma Bride, Kelsy Sharp and Caryssa Leon teamed up to shoot the low score at the March Madness golf tournament at Blue Lakes Country Club. Of the 30 golfers who participated, only six shot below 100 and the Bruins had three of them, led by Reed's 79.

Picking Perfect Bracket a Tough Numbers Game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Want to be sure you have the perfect March Madness bracket this year? Not possible.

If you were to stack the amount of paper it would take to fill in every bracket with every possibility among the 68 teams who will play 67 games over the next three weeks, it would not fit inside the universe.

Michael So says Weimerskirch, a math professor at Augsburg College who gets paid to think about numbers and the way they affect the Kentuckys, Butlers and VCUs of the world.

But there's this small glimmer of hope. Weimerskirch says you could simply start flipping coins. The odds of finding perfection that way - by flipping a coin to pick the winner of every game: 1-in-100,000,000,000,000,00 0,000. For those keeping score at home, that's 1-in-100 million trillion.

Or, to put it another way: "You're just as likely to win Powerball three consecutive times as you are to picking a perfect bracket by flipping a coin," Weimerskirch says.

Of course, the NCAA tournament is all about making the impossible seem possible. Butler, a school with only 4,000 kids, made it to the finals two years in a row. VCU started the tournament last year as a No. 11 seed and wound up playing in the Final Four.

For those setting their sights on winning their friendly office pool, there are, in fact, ways to improve your odds. Weimerskirch suggests looking at the number of people in the pool. The more people in the pool, the more you must stray from picking a slate of straight-line favorites. Kentucky, by the way, is the odds-on pick at 2-1, followed by North Carolina at

"It's one thing to pick favorites to win the whole thing, but you have to know others are picking the favorites to win the whole thing, too," he said. "So, if you're in an office pool with 1,000 people in it, you need to do something a little bit unusual."

He recommends selecting a No. 14 seed to make it to the Sweet 16. Or an 11 to go to the Final Four, a la VCU.

"You need something unusual to go your way," Weimerskirch says.

There figures to be plenty of that over the next three weeks, ending April 2 at the Superdome in New Orleans. The games start Tuesday, with two first-round matchups: Mississippi Valley State vs. Western Kentucky and BYU vs. Iona.

The tournament gets into full swing Thursday and Friday with 64 teams in action.

Watching closely, once again, will be President Barack Obama, whose reelection campaign is welcoming visitors to his website to pick the winners. No wagering please, though anyone visiting the site is invited to donate money to Obama's campaign.

Things have changed for the Cougars, who got an atlarge NCAA bid after losing to Gonzaga 76-66 in the West Coast Athletic Conference semis on March 3.

A year ago, Fredette was America's darling as BYU headed into the tournament. The Cougars beat Wofford and Gonzaga before being eliminated by Florida 83-74 in the regional semifinals. Fredette went for 32, 34 and 32 points in those games.

With Jimmermania reigning, it was quite a ride.

"It's a big difference (this year)," forward Noah Hartsock said. "I remember last year having that 3 seed, a lot of expectations not only to win the first game, but to advance deep into the tournament." This year, post-Jimmer, is just as nice.

"You know, it's a neat feeling. It's still exciting," Hartsock said. Iona had to keep its fingers crossed after losing to Fairfield in the Metro Atlantic Athletic semifinals March 4. Some observers had them as one of the last teams into the field, and some left them out of the tournament entirely.

Now they want to prove that they belonged all along.

"Getting this opportunity is wonderful for us, because now we get to show the whole country what Iona basketball is about," point guard Scott Machado said. Iona, winless in seven trips to the tournament, doesn't have a player taller than 6-foot-7 in the starting lineup. BYU, in for the sixth year in a row and the 27th time overall, boasts a front line that includes Brandon Davies at 6-9 and the 6-8 Hartsock.

Free Agency Set to Begin

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Open for business, wild as it might get.

The NFL's calendar turns toward a new season today when free agency begins. As if there hasn't been enough news with the Peyton Manning tour, Saints bounties and veterans being cut by their teams, now comes the roster feeding frenzy.

Four-time MVP Manning is, of course, the top free agent after he was released last week by Indianapolis. So far, he's met only with the Broncos and Cardinals.

Manning did not show at the Dolphins' headquarters Monday despite speculation he would meet with the team.

Dolphins owner Stephen Ross arrived at the team complex at midmorning, and several players – including quarterback Chad Henne – showed up around the same time to work out. Henne is a free agent and not expected back this season.

A media stakeout at the complex began when a local TV station camera crew arrived at 4 a.m. Half a dozen TV cameras and a handful of reporters eventually gathered across the street. They weren't allowed on the team's property, but a Dolphins official brought out water, pizza and napkins.

Curious motorists occasionally pulled up to ask for an update. While Manning is pursued, many other gamechangers, such as Ray Rice, Wes Welker, Matt Forte and DeSean Jackson, were given franchise tags and will require compensation if they switch teams. Still, there are dozens of enticing options, from Mario Williams to Mario Manningham, from Vincent Jackson to Matt Flynn. "You go into pro free agency to try to address a need, hopefully not needs," Jaguars general manager Gene Smith said. "You want to get a couple of players out of it that can come in here and help you right away. You're looking for a quality starter or maybe trying to fill a situational role on your team. But filling huge holes, that's not where you want to be."

Addressing those needs is best done in the draft. But that grab bag isn't until late April, by which time many teams will have spent many millions of dollars on free agents.

Several others will let players walk to clear salary cap space. On Monday, the Redskins released safety Oshiomogho Atogwe, who signed a five-year, $26 million contract just before the NFL lockout began last March. They also cut veteran fullback Mike Sellers.

So Washington has 16 players who could leave, plus tight end Fred Davis, who received the franchise tag and would bring two No. 1 draft picks.

Knicks Lose Sixth Straight

CHICAGO • Derrick Rose scored 32 points and the Chicago Bulls beat New York 104-99 on Monday night, handing the Knicks their sixth straight loss.

Rose shot 12 of 29 from the floor and had six rebounds and seven assists as the Bulls got their 10th win in 11

Taj Gibson had 15 points and a team-high 13 boards for Chicago, which outrebounded New ork 56-38. The Bulls entered the game leading the league in rebounding margin.

Carmelo Anthony led the Knicks with 21 points and Amare Stoudemire added 20, but the two combined for just seven points in the fourth quarter as the Bulls pulled away.

Jeremy Lin had 15 points and eight assists for New York, but shot just 4 of 11 from the floor and had little luck stopping Rose.

DEAR ABBY: Like "Standing My Ground in New Jersey" (Jan. 9), I had decided at a young age I had no interest in changing my last name if I were ever to be married. For me, the decision had nothing to do with an established career or a fear of losing myself. I simply never saw the point.

Would you believe that I fell in love with and married a man who asked me how I felt about him taking MY last name? When he first mentioned the idea, I told him that he should think it through because a name change shouldn't be taken lightly. Like "Standing," my husband also had no father figure. He's happy to now have a last name that finally "means something" to him.

- ERIN IN EL CAJON, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ERIN: That column produced a wide variety of responses from both men and women. However, most of my readers agree that "Standing" and her fiance have an important decision to make, and they should both step back and examine the options together. Their comments:

ABBY: Most DEAR women around the world retain their names after marriage, and children take their mother's name as their middle name and their father's name as their last. It's only in English-speaking countries that the tradition exists for women to take their husband's last name. It originated from the time when wives were considered property.

- JANE IN FRANKLIN, TENN. DEAR ABBY: The decision to keep or change one's name is a personal one. In my experience as a judge, I often see women ask for their maiden name to be restored to them upon a divorce. I also saw one case in which the husband in the divorce requested that his former name be restored to him. That couple had used the wife's name as their family name when they married.

I agree with your response to postpone the decision until both of them have discussed the issue more fully. How they handle this decision will foretell how they will handle other decisions ın the future.

- JUDGE TONYA IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: By "Standing" not changing her name, which is the cultural norm in this country, she will create years of confusion, hassle, constant explanations and identity issues for her, her husband and her future children. Her husband will also feel a sense of disconnect that is hard for her to under-

- PATRICIA IN THE SOUTHWEST

DEAR ABBY: "Standing" seems to miss the primary point about entering into a marriage. It's not about standing your ground; it's about meeting in the middle ground. Not once in her letter did she make a reference to the fact that what she and her fiance are doing is forming a new family of their own. I kept my maiden name and hyphenated it, but was proud that my husband, children and I ALL created the "Smith" family.

- SUSAN IN PORTLAND, MAINE

DEAR ABBY: I was happy to change my name when I married the first time because I had little connection to my father's family. As the marriage progressed, I felt a loss of personal identity. After the divorce, I adopted my grandfather's name. Abby, the name change was also life-changing. I gained an identity and a legacy to continue. I think the name issue is as much about the insecurity of the man as the independence of the woman.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Soar not too high to fall; but stoop to rise." - Philip Massinger

In today's deal from a team game, South misjudged both the play and the result that would come through from the other ta-

In four hearts on the lead of the diamond jack, he put in dummy's queen. East won the trick and astutely shifted to a spade at trick two. That set up the setting trick for the defenders.

At the scoring-up, when his teammates called out minus 620, South asked suspiciously if West had a led a spade to trick one, or if East had forgotten to shift to a spade at trick two after a diamond lead. East-West denied the charges, and South asked exasperatedly how game had been allowed to make.

Patiently, West explained that their declarer had drawn the correct inference at trick one that West would not be leading from the K-J-10 of diamonds with what was surely a safer or equivalent holding in spades, his partner's suit. Thus East had the diamond king and nothing else. So South found the imaginative play of ducking the first trick in dummy. If East also ducked this, declarer could establish a club as a discard for his spade loser at his leisure, and East could not overtake the lead without setting up the discard at once.

Note that if declarer plays the diamond ace from dummy at trick one, West can underlead in diamonds to East at his next turn, and East will still have time for the spade shift.

ANSWER: Since you are facing a passed hand and a partner who could not or did not redouble one diamond, game seems highly unlikely to make. With a balanced hand, and no reason to believe that spades is the wrong strain for your side, it looks right to pass now. While bidding one no-trump may get you into a slightly better strain, it also runs the risk of getting you into a much worse one.

IF MARCH 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are in peak form to appeal to the public and earn respect for your leadership abilities between now and the middle of May. Be prepared for helpful assistance that will answer your prayers. Accept any opportunities that come your way. Make key moves in early May, but sit tight in the second half of the month when your plans could be blocked. Don't resist change this year, as the only things that will leave you are things that have outworn their welcome. In August, you may have a chance to land a lucrative position or otherwise improve your circum-

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are raring to get rolling. The freedom to take a risk walks a tightrope that always holds the possibility of loss. Focus on earning whatever you win. You benefit more from hard work than sheer luck.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): With good luck planet Jupiter in your sign, you can expect that the path ahead will be easy. Act like a monarch and devoted subjects will cater to your every whim and grant your every desire.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good news travels fast. The grapevine might be buzzing about you - but don't worry, all the gossip is good. Focus on ways to enhance your reputation. Intelligent conversations may offer guidance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Capitalize on new contacts and ask favors. People are in the mood to share their bounty. If you see a brass ring, reach for it, as the prize could be outstanding. A partner could possess enormous wisdom.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Anything that is meant to be will be. If your ideas meet with resistance, you are on the wrong track. Home, family and community are where you can reasonably expect the most apprecia-

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have the stamina to see a dream through to realization. You must, however, resist the temptation to belittle people who jump from one project to another without ever finishing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Opportunity won't knock twice. Moneymaking opportunities could offer a way to enhance your bank balance. If you had a tiff or dispute in the past few weeks, this is a good time to kiss and make up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again. Although persistence will unlock some closed doors, even on the best of days, it is possible there might not be anyone home if you knock on the wrong door.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can get attention for energy, aggressiveness or an inspired stroke of genius. Your focus on new obsessions has every chance for success. Don't overlook opportunities that drop in your lap.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Others eat your dust. The way ahead is clear when you are in the lead. You could appear highly successful so others are willing to follow your lead. Be a model of industry and win applause.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fair-weather friends lose their place in line to true-blue ones. You should focus on taking the most beneficial path. Firm up loose ends by getting on the phone and performing diligent follow up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Important new friendships and alliances are in the stars. Enjoy the benefits that arise from unexpected opportunities. Your judgment about financial matters is a bit better than usual and you receive good advice.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
