Fish and Game Sorts out Next Wolf Hunt

State wildlife commissioners will determine season quotas and dates this week, as well as hear proposals to expand trapping.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Idaho still has 10 days before its wolf hunting season closes, but officials are already beginning to plan for next year.

On Thursday, the Idaho Fish and Game Commission will set big-game season rules for 2012-2013, including for wolves. The animals were taken off the endangered species list 11 months ago by an act of Congress.

Included in the rule changes are increasing bag limits and allowing trapping in more hunting units. Commissioners will also decide if they want to increase the kill limit in the Southern Mountain area from 25 to 30.

Every rule change is region-specific, a sign that the proposals are now coming from individual regions and not the commissioners, said Jeff Gould, Fish and Game's chief of wildlife.

"What we're seeing is the evolution of the wolf hunting process," Gould said. "It started with the commissioners being highly involved with what they would allow during the season. This is now our third hunting season and we're starting with the ground up."

The process involves gathering input from the department's regional offices on wolf activity and feedback from hunters and citizens throughout the season, he said.

And while the commissioners will vote on a definitive outline of all next year's big-game seasons, they will also hear presentations on possible changes to how hunters and trappers kill wolves.

For example, there's a request to use bait while trying to kill wolves. Another proposal would allow trappers to use handguns or small-caliber rifles to kill wolves caught in a trap or snare. One request would permit the use of road kill as bait to trap wolves.

Filer sportsman Jack Oyler said he wants to see trapping made legal in more parts of southern Idaho.

"We haven't killed that many wolves," he said. "As soon as the pups grow up, we're going to be at the same population we started at the beginning of the season."

Overall, Idaho's wolf numbers are down for the second consecutive

NO REPEAT FOR EAGLES

CSI loses its first game in Hutch, also missing the chance to defend its national title.

HUTCHINSON, Kan. • Gary Lewis of Buhl was asked early Tuesday afternoon what would be key for the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team in its game against Eastern Oklahoma in the first round of the NJCAA National Tournament.

"They have to stay focused and they have to stay relaxed," Lewis said. "It's going to be a tough game, but I think they can do it."

Unfortunately for Lewis and about a dozen other CSI fans sporting black and gold in the crowd at the Sports Arena in Hutch, the Golden Eagles did not get it done.

CSI lost 76-69 to Eastern Oklahoma on Tuesday and will not defend its NJCAA title.

"It's sad. They just looked a little lethargic," said Leroy Scantlin of Jerome. "I'll tell you what happened. They missed too many free throws and had too many fouls. It's sad that they lost, but they still made it here."

Scantlin and his wife, Karolyn, have made the trip from Jerome to Hutchinson, Kan., for the last 20 or so years, each year bringing famous Idaho potatoes to hand out to their friends.

"That was the first thing we did when we got here," said Leroy Scantlin, who stayed to watch the rest of the day's games after CSI lost.

This is the third year Lewis has made the 1,164-mile trip to Hutch to watch CSI, this time hitching a ride with the Golden Eagles' cheerleading squad.

"The ride was fine. We watched a lot of movies," said Lewis, 68. "It's always fun to come watch and support the team. I went to all the home games this year. It's one of the best tournaments in the country. You get to see some great talent. We'll keep coming back."

Internet Meets In-class

As Twin Falls High School classrooms test out a mix of in-person and online learning, other school districts are visiting to see how it works.

TWIN FALLS • When students arrived Tuesday in BJ Price's class at Twin Falls High School, visitors from another school district were waiting to observe their class.

But it's nothing new for Price's biology students, who didn't seem to be caught off-guard.

"Does anyone have a laptop today?" Price asked as students got settled.

A few students pulled out their own laptops and signed into an online program to work on a science lab. Everyone else went to computers at the back of the classroom.

A few educators from the Fruitland School District in the Treasure Valley looked over students' shoulders to see what they were doing.

Price and fellow biology teacher Matt Harr are the only teachers at Twin Falls High with a fully "blended" classroom.

Who uses it? A number of school districts are trying it out to some extent. At Twin Falls High School, there are two fully blended classrooms this year, with five planned for next year.

Governor Protests Indigent Patch

Otter signals his disapproval to legislative leaders of ongoing funds to fully pay for state indigent medical care.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • There's more than one way to show disapproval. Last week, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter declined to sign House Bill 574, which would appropriate money for Idaho's catastrophic health care program, citing uncertainty on how the U.S. Supreme Court case concerning the federal Affordable Care Act will turn out. The state constitution allows the governor to pass on signing a bill while still allowing it to become law.

Also known as the "CAT Fund," the program pays for certain medical expenses for Idahoans who can't afford them. Counties also pick up some indigent costs, though the state pays for the bulk.

The appropriations bill, which passed both the House and Senate unanimously, added $13 million to this year's CAT Fund to make up for under-funding it. Of that, $5.5 million is one-time money for past bills, and $7.5 million is ongoing funds to avoid the need for similar action in coming years.

In his letter to House Speaker Lawrence Denney, Otter wrote that uncertainty over whether the Supreme Court will uphold the federal health care reform "puts the supplemental appropriation in doubt," especially the ongoing $7.5 million.

Please see CAT FUND, A2

Divided Digitally

The discussion on women's reproductive health issues isn't just taking place through protests on the Statehouse steps or in public hearings. With new technology comes new forms of dissent. But is anyone listening?

Texas Gov. Rick Perry's Facebook page was recently disabled after women from across the state posted on his wall asking for gynecology advice, ranging from menstruation to menopause. The tongue-in-cheek inquiries meant to show dissatisfaction with what they saw as government intrusion into women's health decisions.

On Tuesday, Perry's page had been scrubbed of the posts, and the ability to add new ones was disabled. But Perry's staff couldn't get rid of the comments before journalists took notice of the snarky digital protest.

And now, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's page is filled with posts protesting S.1387, which would mandate pre-abortion ultrasounds.

Dozens of people used the social media site to ask Otter to veto the bill. Only two had voiced their support of the proposed law as of Tuesday afternoon.

Before the Senate passed the abortion bill on Monday, Idahoans had posted on Otter's page about other issues

Melissa Davlin

The Back of the Notebook

Facing the state, like higher-education budgets, Occupy Boise and wolf control. But S.1387 prompted the biggest online outcry of any proposed legislation this year.

Sen. Chuck Winder, who sponsored the bill, is also on the receiving end of e-rage. Before Tuesday, Winder's campaign Facebook page was mostly dormant. Now, it's filled with harsh criticisms of comments Winder made on Monday about rape victims seeking abortions. Considering Winder's last post on the page was nearly two years ago, I doubt he'll see the biting remarks.

Jon Hanian, Otter's press secretary, said Tuesday that while Otter offers content suggestions for his Facebook profile, he doesn't manage it himself. But, Hanian added, "he usually is provided with an idea of what people are talking about, and a special assistant will brief him on that."

It looks like Otter and his assistant will have a lot to talk about this week.

Learning

Visitors from around the state have come to their classrooms to learn more about how the model works.

"Blended learning" combines face-to-face teaching with online resources, such as through the Idaho Digital Learning Academy.

Some Magic Valley school districts, including Twin Falls, want to move in the direction of having more blended classrooms.

And that's the plan for next year at Twin Falls High. Vice Principal Shaun Walker said a total of five teachers in a variety of departments will use a fully blended curriculum next year.

Other teachers are dabbling with blending learning, he said, but the five will be the "tip of the sword."

Teresa Fabricius, student achievement specialist for Fruitland High School, said the district could benefit from the work the Twin Falls School District has already done with its blended program.

Some Fruitland teachers are using online components in their classes. And for the first time, there's a required U.S. History class for high school juniors through IDLA.

"It seems like a natural step for us to transition to the blended learning," Fabricius said.

It's the fourth school district that's come recently to see how the model works at Twin Falls High. And Walker said more districts have expressed interest in visiting.

School districts will be able to use blended classes to help high school students meet a new state graduation requirement. Students starting with the class of 2016 will have to take two online classes.

Blended classes can count for the requirement if more than 50 percent of instruction is delivered online.

In Price's class, students can bring their own laptops, iPads, iPods or smartphones to use during class. He uses a variety of online programs and videotapes his lectures to upload online.

Within the next few years, it could be easier for students to access online material during class. The Idaho State Department of Education plans to distribute mobile computing devices — likely, laptops — to high school students.

They'll go out to one-third of high schools at a time, starting in the 2013-14 school year. Teachers and school principals will receive mobile devices — and training on how to use them — next year.

year, to 770 from 850 in 2010, according to a Fish and Game report.

As of Wednesday, hunters had killed more than 360 wolves in Idaho. This is well above the 188 wolves killed during the 2009 hunt, the state's first.

Federal law mandates that Idaho's wolf population must stay above 150 to keep the species off the endangered list. The population fluctuates throughout the year: At the beginning of this hunting season, Fish and Game reported it at around 1,000. It's a number the agency says is too high, but no one has yet to set an ideal population limit for the Gem State wolves.

One similarity to last year's wolf hunting season is repeated omission of quota limits. That isn't a surprise, said Mike Leahy of Defenders of Wildlife in Bozeman, Mont.

"We want to see wolves managed as well as any other species," Leahy said. "Fish and Game has the skills and the know-how. However, we've been concerned that the management of wolves has been heavy-handed. It's not just about reducing the population."

Two Face Prison in Blaine Co. Drug Trafficking Case

TIMES-NEWS

HAILEY • Two Blaine County men have been sentenced to prison time for convictions stemming from a Blaine County Narcotics Enforcement Team investigation.

Jose Manuel Hurtado-Delatorre, 27, of Hailey, was sentenced March 12 in Blaine County 5th District Court for a charge of delivery of a controlled substance. Another count of the same charge was dropped by prosecutors. He was given credit for 362 days served.

Ricardo M. Vargas-Hurtado, 22, of Ketchum, was sentenced on March 12 on two counts of delivery of a controlled substance. He was sentenced to serve from one year, nine months to two years, six months in prison and given credit for 272 days served.

The men were two of five suspects charged in the June 2011 investigation. Police valued the drugs seized during the investigation at $26,000, including 6.6 ounces of cocaine and 2.6 ounces of methamphetamine.

Alvaro Hurtado-Gomez, 40, was sentenced in January to serve up to three years and six months in prison for a charge of aiding and abetting in the delivery of cocaine.

Lisa Christine Justice, 42, of Twin Falls, received six to 15 years in prison for two counts of trafficking methamphetamine and one count of delivery of a controlled substance

Jessy T. Tellez, 20, of Hailey, is scheduled to be sentenced May 7 on a count of delivery of a controlled substance.

Retired Crime Fighter Patrols Paul

PAUL • After a 35-year career in law enforcement, Rupert police officer Terry Quinn retired in 2003. Then boredom set in.

So, he went back to patrolling.

years with the Rupert Police Department, spearheaded the department's Citizens on Patrol program as part of his job. After his retirement, he became one of the program's volunteers.

"The city paid me to work there all those years and this is a way to pay it back a little," Quinn said.

Now, he's signed on to provide some extra shifts patrolling the streets of Paul.

Paul Mayor Randy Jones said although the city can't take on the liability of the program, officials are grateful to have Quinn's experienced law enforcement eyes out on the streets.

Under the Affordable Care Act, Medicaid would be widely expanded to cover all adults who live under 133 percent of the federal poverty level — the same people who are covered by the catastrophic health care fund. If the act is upheld by the Supreme Court, then there is no more need to put money toward that fund, Otter said.

But even if the act is struck down, Otter said he believes that administration and expectations of the fund need "thorough evaluation and responsible reforms" before he would sign off on an ongoing appropriation.

"The goal should be a workable, well-defined process for paying medical costs for indigent citizens, replacing the existing patchwork of county and state responsibilities," Otter wrote.

Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee co-chairwoman Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said Otter's protest against the appropriation was based on misinformation. Even if the mandate is upheld, the state still has an obligation to help the counties with indigent health care, she said.

"It was the wrong place to send the message because this is an agreement we have with the counties on indigents," Bell said.

Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, was one of the members of JFAC who worked on the bill. Otter's staff had indicated to him that the governor might not sign the bill.

Wood said he understood Otter's concern, but said if the catastrophic health care fund ceases to exist, the Legislature would most likely transfer that $7.5 million in ongoing funds to Medicaid to cover its increased costs associated with more enrollees.

Jon Hanian, Otter's press secretary, said Otter felt not signing the bill was the most appropriate course of action, "provided that the Speaker and legislative leaders understand his well-founded concerns that we're budgeting something ongoing for a program that faces a lot of uncertainty around it, and may not even be there in a year or two."

Neither Bell nor Hanian could recall another appropriations bill that Otter had declined to sign.

T.F. Man Withdraws Guilty Plea in Rape Case

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man accused of a May 2011 rape of a 19-year-old woman has withdrawn the guilty plea he made just before a jury trial was about to start Dec. 20.

Jason Jay Ward, 36, and his attorney, David Smethers, made the motion to withdraw the plea March 16, stating Ward had received bad advice from his former attorney, D. Douglas Nelson.

On Friday, Ward testified that at the time of the alleged rape, he was on probation for a felony malicious injury to property charge and also had a felony driving under the influence case pending. Nelson, he said, told him a judge could find him to be in violation of his probation in both cases for the alleged rape even if a jury acquitted him.

According to Ward, he was told he was much more likely to go to prison for two probation violations than just one and was unlikely to win the jury trial anyway. This advice, he said, persuaded him to take a plea deal that could have sent him to prison for up to 15 years.

Ward also said he didn't feel he had enough time to discuss the guilty plea or its ramifications. He said he spoke to Nelson for about 15 minutes and felt rushed into making the decision.

Smethers argued that since Ward had not been sentenced on the felony DUI charge, that Nelson's advice was misleading. It would have been impossible for Ward to be in violation of probation he had not yet been sentenced to, Smethers said.

During questioning by deputy prosecutor Rosemary Emory, Ward said he has seen new evidence since he pleaded guilty and didn't feel like he could go over everything with his attorney before the trial.

"I was extremely overwhelmed," he said.

Nelson testified that he had not coerced Ward into making the guilty plea.

"It's my general philosophy — I don't tell the client what to do," Nelson said. "I suggest what I think the better option is, then it's up to the client to decide."

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker said he was troubled by the situation and what it meant for the plea process in Idaho. He found Ward was not denied due process, but that there was just cause for him to withdraw the plea because of Nelson's advice.

According to police reports, the alleged rape victim was found near the railroad tracks close to Grandview Drive at around 3:45 a.m. on May 22, 2011, with massive bruising to her face and bite marks on her body. She was treated for those injuries and sexual assault at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

Police say Ward forced the woman to drink multiple cups of alcohol before he raped her.

A new trial date has been set for July 17.

MAN CHARGED WITH METH, POT POSSESSION AFTER POLICE CHASE

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man who reportedly led a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy on a chase through southern Twin Falls was later arrested on several charges.

Danny T. Egelston, 42, of Twin Falls, was arraigned Monday on felony eluding and drug possession charges, along with misdemeanor charges of reckless driving, driving without privileges, possession of drug paraphernalia, and possession of a controlled substance.

The report states that a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy attempted to make a traffic stop while traveling southbound on Locust Street, after he noticed the license plate on Egelston's Jeep pickup was hanging at an angle and looked like it might fall off. The officer said Egelston accelerated toward Highland Avenue and sped through the intersection. Egelston then traveled south on Locust and slid as the vehicle went around the bend at Osterloh Avenue, the deputy stated. The Jeep continued to slide sideways around the corner at Madrona Street and went through additional intersections at Orchard Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard at speeds of 60 to 70 miles per hour, the report said. The deputy noted the intersection of Blue Lakes and Orchard historically has the most crashes out of any in Twin Falls.

Egelston finally came to a stop at the Oasis Stop 'N Go at South Washington Street and Orchard Avenue, where he was taken into custody.

The deputy said he found marijuana, a digital scale, a hypodermic syringe, a metal pipe and a glass pipe hidden inside a magic marker along with two small baggies of methamphetamine.

According to court records, Egelston was uncooperative and refused to sign some court documents.

A preliminary hearing for the felony charges is scheduled for March 30. A pretrial hearing for the misdemeanors is scheduled for April 24.

Grants Promote Healthy School Food, Exercise Initiative

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Three Magic Valley schools will receive funding through a program aimed at helping students make healthy food and physical activity choices.

The Idaho Dairy Council announced Tuesday that Jerome Middle School, Kimberly High School and Filer High School were selected. The schools will receive money to support their Fuel Up to Play 60 initiatives.

Jerome Middle School will receive $2,700, Kimberly High will receive $2,750 and Filer High will receive $2,200.

The nationwide funding program offers schools up to $4,000 to help them increase awareness and access to nutrient-rich foods and physical activity opportunities for students. Funding is provided by the Idaho Dairy Council and America's dairy farmers.

All three schools will use part of the funding to purchase a smoothie blender to add yogurt and fruit smoothies to breakfast menus. They'll also purchase fitness equipment.

In Filer, the high school gym will be available at times other than physical education classes or sports activities.

Kimberly High School will use the portion of the funds to promote healthy food choices by incorporating taste-testing days to allow students to try food that could be added to the school menu.

BOISE • A Republican Idaho lawmaker's suggestion on the Senate floor that a doctor should ask a woman who says she was raped if the pregnancy could have been "caused by normal relations in a marriage" brought a rebuke from another legislator who said it's insensitive and suggests women may lie to get an abortion.

Sen. Chuck Winder of Boise, the Senate assistant majority leader, was speaking during closing testimony on a bill to require a woman to get an ultrasound before an abortion, when he addressed foes of the legislation who said it provided no exemptions for medical emergencies — or in cases of rape or incest.

"Rape and incest was used as a reason to oppose this. I would hope that when a woman goes into a physician, with a rape issue, that that physician will indeed ask her about perhaps her marriage, was this pregnancy caused by normal relations in a marriage, or was it truly caused by a rape," Winder said during his testimony Monday, before the bill passed the Senate 23-12. "I assume that's part of the counseling that goes on."

In this March 14 photo, Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Boise, a sponsor of a bill that would require women seeking an abortion get an ultrasound first, is pictured at a Senate State Affairs Committee hearing at the Idaho Capitol in Boise. Winder's suggestion on the Senate floor that a doctor should ask a woman who says she was raped if the pregnancy could have been 'caused by normal relations in a marriage' brought a rebuke from another legislator who said it's insensitive and suggests women may lie to get an abortion.

complaining about Winder's comments. "I understand why people are upset," Brass said. "I hope that he did not mean to say that some people use rape as an excuse to receive abortion care."

Rep. Cherie Buckner-Webb, a Boise Democrat, questioned Tuesday if Winder was inferring that women didn't know the difference between rape and consensual sex, or would lie about it.

"The audacity of saying such a thing. Rape changes lives, forever," Buckner-Webb said in an interview Tuesday afternoon. "I thought it was so disrespectful!"

Winder said Tuesday he never meant to question victims' truthfulness.

Rather, Winder said he meant to say he hoped a woman would work with her physician to determine if a fetus resulted from a rape or was, in fact, a result of consensual relations that occurred outside of the attack. Winder said he was pointing out that a woman would likely want to consult with her physician and perform tests to determine if the child she was carrying was a product of a rape, so as not to allow doctors to abort a consensual conception.

"I used a married woman, the idea being that as a woman or a couple, whether they be married or unmarried at the time, would want to find out if the pregnancy occurred as the product of the rape, or whether the pregnancy was unknown at the time," Winder told The Associated Press. "There was never any intention on my part to question the honesty of a woman in cases of rape."

Winder said late Tuesday that his Facebook page, as well as his home and cell phones, have been bombarded with messages.

"People totally misunderstood what was said," he said.

Despite his explanation, however, Buckner-Webb still contends Winder's comments on the floor were insensitive.

After a rape, Buckner-Webb said, a doctor should be performing medical procedures to ensure a woman's health, gathering evidence of a crime and taking measures to assure that she has the necessary support.

"Those are the things they should be checking — not the context. That's an affront," Buckner-Webb said. "Let me tell you, a comment like that is very painful. A comment like that is what keeps women from coming forward" when they've been victimized by a violent attack.

The abortion ultrasound mandate is one of the most controversial issues confronting lawmakers. After passing the Senate, it now goes to the House.

Ethics Probe Spawns GOP-Conflict Declaration Flood

BOISE (AP) • The Senate's conflict-of-interest cup runneth over.

Since Democrats complained about Sen. Monty Pearce's alleged disclosure transgressions, Republicans have been disclosing en masse.

Maybe it's a protest of solidarity with Pearce, like Sen. Jeff Siddoway did Monday when he asked to be recused from voting on an abortion-related bill — because he has two daughters.

Maybe it's out of spite.

Either way, it's slowed the gears of democracy.

There was Sen. Chuck Winder, who Tuesday told lawmakers his job as a developer's representative could pose conflicts.

Sen. Tim Corder said he belongs to the human race, breathes air and walks on dirt.

Democrat, GOP Ethics Panelists Split on Charges

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Democratic and Republican members of the Senate Ethics Panel on Tuesday were split over pursuing allegations that Sen. Monty Pearce broke ethics rules by not adequately disclosing he's leased land to a gas exploration company before voting on measures affecting the industry.

The panel did schedule a third day of hearings at 9 a.m. Wednesday, to resolve Democrats' questions including whether Pearce, R-New Plymouth, got sweetheart lease deals from Snake River Oil & Gas on his land in western Idaho's Payette County.

Pearce has denied wrongdoing.

Republican Sen. Jim Hammond conceded that Pearce could have avoided questions of his integrity if he had disclosed his leases before a bill to restrict local control over the industry reached a final Senate vote last week.

Still, Hammond doubts Pearce's agreement with Snake River Oil & Gas, struck last November, represents a classic conflict of interest because he isn't likely to reap direct financial gain from passage of the bill.

"The gain he could achieve as a result of that bill is purely speculative and it's a gain that could be gained by hundreds of other lessees or possible lessees within that class," Hammond said, adding "from a public perception point of view, Sen. Pearce would have been well served to have disclosed."

According to Senate rules, a senator who has a conflict of interest must disclose it to the presiding officer or the chamber before the legislator can vote.

Last Wednesday, just before the final vote on House Bill 464, Pearce disclosed he had natural gas leases on his property dating back to the 1980s.

Pearce's disclosure didn't include details about his latest lease, struck in November 2011.

Democrats contend that he should have disclosed his interests much earlier, during committee hearings on numerous measures before the 2012 Legislature governing the gas industry.

They contend that House Bill 464 includes provisions governing activities like fracking to stimulate gas production that could result in higher yields — and corresponding financial benefit to property owners like Pearce who have agreed to work with gas companies.

"Somebody who has a conflict of interest has divided loyalties," Senate Assistant Minority Leader Les Bock, D-Boise, told the panel. "It's my opinion that Sen. Pearce had a conflict he did not disclose."

Meanwhile, Democratic Ethics Committee members Sens. Elliot Werk, of Boise, and Diane Bilyeu, of Pocatello, had lingering questions about whether Pearce entered into lease agreements that are richer than those Snake River Oil & Natural Gas struck with other property owners in western Idaho where the company is exploring.

Senate Ethics Committee Chairman Dean Mortimer, R-Idaho Falls, agreed to schedule a third day of hearings, to give Senate staffers time to gather as many as 20 or 30 oil leases, so the panel can scrutinize whether Pearce has gotten a sweetheart deal making his stake in the measure passing the Legislature more lucrative than for others.

"We'll...try our best to obtain other leases and perhaps somebody with some expertise" to interpret whether Pearce's lease is better than those others have struck, Mortimer said.

Suzanne Budge, a Snake River Oil & Gas lobbyist, said the company was collecting leases offered to Pearce's neighbors, to demonstrate terms of his agreements were virtually identical.

Pearce didn't speak during Tuesday's hearing.

But his attorney, Charles Peterson, told the panel he didn't believe Pearce's interests in the natural gas project met the legal definition of a conflict of interest, in part because his agreement with Snake River Oil & Gas entitles Pearce to nothing more than others in the region with similar leases, the Boise-based attorney said.

Peterson also contended that Senate rules don't require any disclosure of potential conflicts in committees.

In fact, Peterson said Pearce went "above and beyond" his disclosure obligation when he spoke up last Wednesday.

"In an act of political theater masquerading as an ethics complaint, the complainants have unjustly attempted to make an example of my client," Peterson said. "However, their allegations are not supported by fact, are inconsistent with both Idaho law and Senate rule and are riddled with factual errors."

Senate Dumps House Bill to Expand Disturbing Peace

BOISE (AP) • Senate lawmakers roundly rejected an effort to expand Idaho's laws governing disturbing the peace.

Tuesday's 22-12 vote dumped plans to add conduct intended to seriously alarm or harass a person such as would cause a reasonable person substantial emotional distress.

The measure had an easy time in the House.

Its sponsor, Rep. Bob Nonini of Coeur d'Alene, convinced lawmakers there to vote unanimously in support.

Not so in the Senate, whose members questioned whether the language was so ambiguous as to be an inappropriate addition to Idaho's statutes.

MEASURE LIMITING ASBESTOS LIABILITY CLEARS SENATE

BOISE • Bottle-cap maker Crown Holdings might want to pop the top off a celebratory bottle, after a bill to limit its asbestos liability in Idaho cleared the Senate and headed to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter for signature.

The measure cleared the chamber 19-15 on Tuesday, reflecting a strong minority's reluctance to help it off the legal hook.

The House had approved the bill 47-22 in February.

For years, the Pennsylvania-based company has sought protection from claims filed by lung-disease patients.

Though it has just a handful of claims from Idaho, it also wants protections here from having to make future payments related to its ill-fated purchase of an asbestos-tainted company in 1963.

That's resulted in $700 million in payouts, with 50,000 claims still pending.

Crown has won protections in 14 states.

Idaho House Delays Charter School Facilities Vote

BOISE • Legislation to help charter schools with the cost of bonding for buildings was pulled from the Idaho House floor before a vote.

Republican Rep. Reed DeMordaunt requested that the bill return to committee Tuesday after several lawmakers debated in opposition.

DeMordaunt's bill allows charter schools that raise money for buildings by issuing bonds to get state help in repaying their interest through a program now available to traditional school districts. But House Minority Leader John Rusche was among critics who argued the move would dilute Idaho's already limited support for public school facilities.

Supporters, including Republican Rep. Pete Nielsen, say the measure is aimed at fairness. Unlike traditional schools, charter schools can't get money from property taxes to buy buildings and have to borrow at higher interest rates.

Police: Idaho Woman Attacked Man with Meat Cleaver

REXBURG • Authorities say an Idaho woman who struck her husband in the leg with a meat cleaver remains jailed in Madison County.

KIFI-TV reports the 45-year-old woman, Elissa Patrice Beatong Ellis, told police late Monday that she attacked her husband after an argument in which she accused him of giving her a communicable disease. The man was treated at a Rexburg hospital.

Rexburg Police Capt. Randy Lewis says officers were notified about the incident by personnel at Madison Memorial Hospital. Ellis was arrested on suspicion of aggravated assault and remained held at the Madison County jail on Tuesday.

While the woman is from Jamaica, jail officials confirmed she is an Idaho resident.

BOARD GIVES NOD TO GRAVEL MINE ON SALMON RIVER

BY TODD DVORAK

Associated Press

BOISE • The state Land Board has unanimously agreed to renew a lease and permit for a Grangeville company that mines gravel for a two-week period each winter from the bed of the Salmon River.

The decision by the board Tuesday gives Kaschmitter Enterprises Inc. permission to remove gravel for the next five years from a dry area of the riverbed downstream of Riggins.

The lease and permit were first issued by the state in 1955 and renewed periodically every five years.

But this time, environmentalists, anglers and rafting outfitters urged the board to delay approval and require more study of the operation and its impact on the river, fish and recreation.

Jonathan Oppenheimer, of the Idaho Conservation League, told the board Tuesday that too few studies have been done to gauge the effect gravel mining has had over the decades on water quality and downstream spawning beds for threatened salmon species. He also suggested that operating a gravel mine in the middle of the Salmon River sends the wrong signal about the state's commitment to protecting resources.

"The Salmon River is one of Idaho's most beloved treasures, and we ask you to protect the river in keeping with its iconic status," Oppenheimer told the board.

The Idaho Department of Lands recommended renewing the lease and stream channel alteration permit.

Eric Wilson, mineral programs manager for the agency, said there was no data submitted during the public comment period showing the operation has had a negative impact on the streambed or recreational values. He said gravel mining occurs during the winter months, long after the summer floating and fishing season. High flows from spring runoff typically deposit new gravel in the location where the mining occurs.

Tim Kaschmitter, owner of the mining company, said his crew is careful each season to avoid causing damage to the riverbed, water quality and vegetation along access points.

"We only spend a couple of weeks physically pulling the material out from below the high water mark," Kaschmitter said. "We pretty much limit our access to a just couple of different points to limit impact on vegetation."

Critics Ask Judge to Return Bison

BY MATTHEW BROWN

Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • A Montana judge on Tuesday turned down a request that he intervene in the transfer of dozens of Yellowstone National Park bison to the tribes of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation.

But the rejection from Judge John McKeon addressed only procedural issues, prompting bison opponents to resubmit their request late Tuesday and ask McKeon to order the animals back to the Yellowstone area.

Tribal officials said they plan to keep the 62 newly-arrived bison in a 2-acre holding corral for several months. Then they will be moved to a 2,100-acre pasture with an 8-foot fence.

The reservation's Assiniboine and Sioux tribes had intended to use a larger pasture with a shorter fence. But the tribe said it decided last week to build a taller fence to address concerns bison could escape and cause property damage or mingle with cattle.

"That's to please people," said Robert Magnan with the Fort Peck Fish and Game Department. "They use these scare tactics about all the problems buffalo have caused but the buffalo don't do it. They've got to realize there are 56 buffalo ranches in the state of Montana. There's no problem with them."

The state on Tuesday released the agreement under which it transferred the animals to the tribe after several requests from the AP, and after the AP already obtained a copy of the document through opponents of the transfer.

The agreement states that if bison leave the Fort Peck Reservation, state officials or local landowners could be permitted to kill them. If the bison leave repeatedly and the tribe does not reimburse any damages, the agreement allows the state to take back the animals.

Also, the state will retain ownership of 25 percent of the animals' offspring, with the option of transferring those animals elsewhere to start yet more herds in the future.

The bison will be tested periodically for five years to ensure they are not carrying the disease brucellosis. They already spent several years in quarantine near Yellowstone to protect against the disease.

The relocation of wild bison to the arid, agriculture-dominated Fort Peck Reservation along the Missouri River marks their return to the area for the first time in decades. The Great Plains once hosted millions of bison before they were driven to near-extinction in the 19th century.

Unlike most of the approximately half-million bison in the U.S., Yellowstone's animals are considered genetically pure and have not been interbred with cattle.

But the move was fiercely contested by ranchers and ranching groups, some state lawmakers and several property rights groups that helped finance a lawsuit to stop the transfer.

Monday's relocation of the animals took place with no prior notice and in a significant snowstorm as officials sought to avoid a possible court injunction in a lawsuit filed by opponents.

"This whole thing was a rush project start to finish," said Cory Swanson, the opponents' attorney. "The plan is supposed to be public. We're supposed to have public comments. None of the public notice provisions were met."

However, the prospects are uncertain for Swanson's renewed request for a temporary restraining order that would return the animals to the Yellowstone area. Fort Peck Chairman Floyd Azure said the state no longer had jurisdiction over the animals and they were "here to stay" on the reservation.

The agreement between Fort Peck and the state allows for half of the 62 bison to be transferred to the tribes of the Fort Belknap Reservation. That could happen later this year, tribal officials have said.

Originally, 68 bison were slated for Fort Peck. Several died, including one that Magnan said was trampled during Monday's shipment.

Another group of Yellowstone bison that could be transferred to public or tribal lands is being held on a ranch near Bozeman owned by billionaire Ted Turner. The animals were put into Turner's care when state and federal officials failed to find anywhere to place them after several proposed locations ran into opposition.

Turner will get to keep most of the animal's offspring when those animals are moved, although it is uncertain when that could happen. Sarah Elliot, a spokeswoman for Gov. Brian Schweitzer, said there were no immediate plans for the bison.

Idaho Argues Against Fraudulent Birth Certificate

LEWISTON (AP) • State health officials are asking an Idaho judge to revoke a birth certificate issued three years ago, alleging the applicant was a Mexican national who lied to the judge to obtain the document.

Prosecutors alleged Roman Cenicerros-Mora, 60, had been trying since 1989 to obtain a U.S. birth certificate, using several names and birth dates, in an effort to avoid deportation.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that in 2009, Cenicerros-Mora told 2nd District Judge Jeff M. Brudie that his name was Joseph Ann Evans Shippentower, that he was an American Indian born in Lapwai on May 19, 1950, and received a Purple Heart while serving in the U.S. Marine Corps.

The Idaho Health and Welfare Department wants the birth certificate revoked and Shippentower's name removed from the state's vital statistics records.

The Yakima Herald-Republic reports an investigation began when Cenicerros-Mora applied for a passport in Yakima, Wash., in March 2010 using his court-issued birth certificate and officials at the Seattle Passport Agency noticed discrepancies in the application.

Investigators learned the defendant had been convicted of sneaking into the United States or committing other immigration violations throughout the 1970s and 1980s. Court records said he was receiving welfare benefits under the name of Joseph Evans or Joseph Evans Shippentower and even claimed that he was a disabled Marine.

Cenicerros-Mora was born on Aug. 9, 1951, in Mexico, investigators said. During his welfare fraud trial in Yakima, court records show the defendant's sister identified him as her brother and said they grew up in a small town in Mexico.

He denied knowing her. Cenicerros-Mora was sentenced in December to eight years in prison for Social Security and food stamp fraud, making a false claim of U.S. citizenship and making a false statement in a passport registration. He was ordered to pay $155,000 in restitution for the federal disability, medical and food aid assistance he fraudulently received.

Idaho House Mulls New Effort to Rein in Protesters

BY ALEX MORRELL

Associated Press

BOISE • House lawmakers are taking another stab at legislation to rein in Occupy Boise's encampment on state-managed land across from the Capitol.

But state officials, keenly aware that their actions are being scrutinized by a federal judge who blocked their last efforts to oust the protesters, characterized the measure Tuesday as a long-term solution to a loophole in state law rather than a quick fix.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted along party lines to pass a bill that would give the Idaho Department of Administration more power to create and enforce rules governing Capitol Mall properties. Republicans support the measure, which is opposed by Democrats — just like the initial bill.

It encompasses grounds of the Ada County Courthouse where Occupy Boise has held a permanent vigil since November, exploiting a loophole in state law that was silent on whether camping was permitted on state land.

Teresa Luna, director of the Department of Administration, proposed the emergency legislation, which she said clarifies the state's right and responsibility to manage the property.

"This legislation is being proposed to give us the authority to do so explicitly in this statute," Luna said.

The plan would let the agency issue permits required to use the property and also let other agencies adopt its rules for state-managed land.

The bill passed earlier by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter banned camping on state-managed property, but Occupy Boise lawyers responded by suing for an injunction against the law. U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill issued a preliminary ruling in February allowing protesters' tents to remain, for now, on grounds they represent protected free speech, but barred overnight stays and camping.

Winmill has scheduled another hearing for April 27, but lawmakers are hoping to address the matter with this latest measure before they adjourn, likely next week.

"Every day we're seeing the envelope pushed on what's happening in the Capitol Mall," said Luna, noting that Occupy opponents have grabbed hold of Winmill's First Amendment ruling.

Some have begun driving their cars on the courthouse lawn in protest. Two Occupy foes' cars were towed.

Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said speech should be protected but subject to rules regulating time, manner and place — such as those that govern protests on the state Capitol steps.

"We have broader interest of maintaining the grounds," Bedke said.

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, opposed the measure, saying it hampers free speech and could conflict with the ongoing lawsuit.

"We're in the middle of the lawsuit, and I don't think it's going to help," Rusche said. "I don't believe it's an emergency, and I do think it has a chilling effect on free speech."

But protesters' tents might not be in immediate jeopardy if the plan is signed into law. Though state agencies have the power to enact temporary rules that take effect right away, Bedke and Otter spokesman Jon Hanian each said that any procedures would be developed in conjunction with Winmill's ruling.

The rules would probably be completed after Winmill issues a final opinion on the camping legislation.

"The judge has carved out certain activities that are protected and others that are not. I don't think you'll see necessarily rules pushing that line one way or another," Bedke predicted.

Boise and EPA Reach Deal to Clean up Boise River

BOISE (AP) • Federal environmental officials have issued the city of Boise two permits aimed at reducing the amount of phosphorus that seeps into and pollutes the Boise River.

The permits approved by the Environmental Protection Agency this week are aimed at reducing phosphorus discharge into the river from wastewater treatment plants by 98 percent during the summer months.

Under a deal reached with the EPA, the city will take steps to limit mercury and ammonia discharges and release cooler water from treatment plants into the river.

The permits also feature a so-called reopening clause, which could enable the city to remove more phosphorus with a small wastewater treatment plant positioned downstream near a drain that carries runoff from thousands of acres of cropland. The language gives the city the chance to clean up water with high levels of phosphorus downstream instead of making pricey but marginal upgrades to its urban waste treatment system.

Local and federal officials see that pollution trade-off as a model that could be incorporated in other locations along the Boise River watershed or other urban centers in the region, according to an Idaho Statesman story published Tuesday (<http://bit.ly/Gzs3xq>).

"These new permits are good news for everyone who uses and enjoys the Boise River," said Dennis McLerran, the EPA's Regional Administrator in Seattle. "We've worked together to build strong permits while being sensitive to the cost to the city and ratepayers. We share the goal of clean water and support the city's efforts to reduce the phosphorus and protect Idaho's treasured rivers, lakes and streams."

Boise currently discharges about 1,100 pounds of phosphorus each day from the two treatment plants. Once the plants are in compliance with the new permits, the city will discharge no more than 15 pounds each day. The city was not obligated to remove phosphorus under older EPA permits or impose limits for phosphorus, mercury, ammonia or temperature.

Under the new permits, the city will remove the majority of the phosphorus within the next five years by upgrading technology at two treatment plants. Later this month, city officials anticipate requesting that one of the permits be reopened to get approval for the Dixie Drain project downstream near Notus.

Bureau of Rec Should Focus on Maintenance, Not Closures

To the Bureau of Reclamation:

My family has lived in Power County and enjoyed the Snake River below the reservoir for 110 years.

We have been involved in the development of our county. My grandfather was a county commissioner, my wife is currently a commissioner, my father was instrumental in creating the Idaho Wheat Growers, and I served as Power County Highway commissioner for 27 years and chairman for more than 13 years. My uncle served in the Idaho Legislature and was instrumental in the establishment of Massacre Rocks State Park. For more than 100 years, we have respected and cared for this free-flowing area of the Snake River. I still stand on the same rock as my grandfather and catch 5 to 6 lb. trout.

My business uses this area to entertain individuals and companies interested in business ventures. Whether from the United States or other countries, they are amazed at this area. This area is a vital part of my business and Idaho’s ongoing economic development.

Idaho’s congressional delegation has been contacted, and they are very interested in the procedure used in this arbitrary decision. What does this tell you? Your bureau has aroused all segments of society, and none of them understand or agree with your thinking. Consider this, did you ever in your wildest dreams believe that the duck hunters and the bird watchers could be united in a common cause?

There are no buildings available that are large enough to hold a public hearing on this. I respectfully suggest that you drop this venture, reopen the area previously closed by Duck Point, and turn your efforts toward better maintenance procedures for the accesses that are currently used.

Caucus Hurt Too Many Hopeful Voters

The caucus in Twin Falls was a big joke. Your newspaper stated that the Idaho Republicans will finally make their choice. Not so.

First there was not enough parking, so after walking more than a half mile in the freezing wind at the first door, we were told we have to walk around the building and, when we finally got there, they had just locked the doors and were not letting anyone else enter. (It was unbelievable the amount of people being turned away.)

If we were to have our say, we should have been able to go to our regular voting place at hours that everyone registered to vote could do so. A primary served us well.

They tell us that they want people to get out and vote, but they make it so it is impossible for a lot of us. Is this another way to keep us from voicing our opinions?

THEIR VIEW

Death-by-drone Needs Checks and Balances

The following editorial appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Sunday:

In April 2009, three months after his inauguration, President Barack Obama ordered the release of the last four “torture memos” that the Bush administration had used to justify harsh interrogation methods, including waterboarding, for terrorism suspects. The memos had been written by lawyers in the Justice Department’s Office of Legal Counsel.

Now Obama is refusing to release a memo written by his own Justice Department’s OLC, defending the legality of an action far harsher than waterboarding: the targeted killing of American citizens who are accused of working for terrorist organizations.

Indeed, the administration has not even formally acknowledged that the memo exists, though its contents have been described in general terms to news organizations.

The New York Times has filed a lawsuit under the Freedom of Information Act asking that the memo be released. The American Civil Liberties Union has filed a separate FOIA lawsuit seeking the memo and the specific rationale for the drone attack in Yemen last Sept. 30 that killed Anwar al-Awlaki.

Born in New Mexico, al-Awlaki held joint U.S.-Yemeni citizenship and had been identified as a leading al-Qaida recruiter and plotter.

As a candidate for president, Obama repeatedly and strongly criticized the broad claims of executive powers exerted by President George W. Bush and Vice President Dick Cheney. “I taught the Constitution for 10 years,” he said at a May 18, 2008, stop in Billings, Mont. “I believe in the Constitution, and I will obey the Constitution of the United States.”

But in 2010, after al-Awlaki had been tied to both the so-called “underwear bomber” and the Army ma-job responsible for the Fort Hood, Texas, killings, Obama approved putting him on the Joint Special Operations Command’s “kill or capture” list. He later was added to the CIA’s kill list, too.

Thus, within two years, Obama had gone from rejecting President Bush’s claim that he could detain U.S. citizens as enemy combatants to approving the summary execution of a U.S. citizen deemed an enemy combatant.

What happened to change his mind? Obama has not explained, but presidents see intelligence reports and threat assessments that presidential candidates don’t.

Earlier this month, Obama sent Attorney General Eric Holder to Northwestern University Law School in Chicago to explain, sort of, the administration’s policies for terrorist crime and punishment. Major points:

- International law says that in an armed conflict, “we are authorized to take action against enemy belligerents.... The Constitution empowers the president to protect the nation from any imminent threat of violent attack. And international law recognizes the inherent right of national self-defense. None of this is changed by the fact that we are not in a conventional war.”

- In a war with a stateless enemy, this nation can take action in another sovereign nation that “is unable or unwilling to deal effectively with a threat to the United States.”

- In a war, targeting “specific senior operational leaders” of the enemy is established principle. We killed Yamamoto. We killed Osama bin Laden.

- These are not “assassinations,” because assassinations are unlawful. Killing someone who presents an imminent threat of violent attack is not unlawful.

- This applies even to U.S. citizens working for the enemy. In such cases, the government must consider the Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause. But Holder argued that the “Supreme Court has made clear that the Due Process Clause does not impose one-size-fits-all requirements, but instead mandates procedural safeguards that depend on specific circumstances.”

- The president doesn’t have to get permission from a judge. “Due process’ and ‘judicial due process’ are not one and the same,” Holder said.

This is casuistry, for which the dictionary provides two definitions: “The application of general principles of ethics to specific problems of right and wrong in conduct, in order to solve or clarify them”; and, “subtle but misleading or false reasoning; sophistry, often specifically about moral issues.”

We do not mourn Anwar al-Awlaki. We mourn the loss of judicial due process. We mourn the rule of law.

Merely to eavesdrop on a terrorism suspect takes a warrant from a Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act court judge. They are available 24/7; the government presents its case for probable cause, and, almost without exception, the court approves the warrant.

But to kill someone? That doesn’t take a warrant? Getting a court to review of the case for the targeted killing of an American citizen would not be an undue burden on the president’s war-making powers. Death-by-drone is too easy. It needs checks. It needs balances.

Further, there should be robust debate, among scholars and experts and average citizens, on the legal rationale and case law behind the assertion that there are times and circumstances that the Constitution permits a president to be judge, jury and executioner.

That claim should be tested in court and in Congress. That’s what’s the rule of law requires. The president should give up the memo.

Plans to Kill Salmon-eating Sea Lions Held Again

BY JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

Plans to resume killing California sea lions that eat endangered salmon at Bonneville Dam are on hold again.

The states of Oregon and Washington had been set Tuesday to resume trapping and lethally injecting sea lions that eat salmon at the dam, but they agreed to hold off pending a federal court hearing Thursday in Washington, D.C.

The Humane Society of the United States had returned to court to challenge the federal government's latest approval of the program, which has removed 41 salmon-eating sea lions since 2008. The group has twice before won court orders temporarily stopping the plans.

Meanwhile, the spring chinook run that the sea lion removal was intended to protect has barely started. Oregon wildlife officials report just 26 fish over the dam on the Columbia river east of Portland, Ore.

The lawsuit contends that the NOAA Fisheries Service erred when it decided that sea lions eating up to 4.2 percent of the fish passing over the dam amounted to a significant obstacle to the restoration of endangered salmon, when fishermen are allowed to take up to 17 percent. It adds that killing sea lions will have no effect on restoring salmon, which face a greater threat from fishermen and predation by walleye and bass introduced into the river for sport fishermen to catch.

"Rather than the problem growing or increasing, which they keep asserting, it isn't," said Sharon Young, marine programs field director for the Humane Society. "The time that an individual sea lion spends at the dam is down. The number of days sea lions spend at the dam is down. The amount of the run consumed is down. It was down last year even though there was no killing authorized."

Army Corps of Engineers data showed the number of salmon eaten by sea lions at the dam rose from 4,466 in 2008 to 6,081 in 2010, but that the percentage dropped from 2.9 percent to 2.2 percent in the same period.

House Passes Texting-while-driving Ban

Associated Press

BOISE • After several tries and frustrating setbacks, Idaho is set to join the majority of states that have toughened laws against sending text messages while driving.

House lawmakers voted 53-17 Tuesday to bar motorists from using smartphones and other hand-held devices to review, prepare or send written communications. Rep. Julie Ellsworth, R-Boise, pushed the plan, saying a strong message from state leaders is needed to curb the deadly and growing habit.

"There is just something cultural now with this texting thing," Ellsworth said. "We need to send a message as lawmakers and leaders of this state that we're not going to do it while driving."

At least 35 states and Washington, D.C., ban text messaging by drivers, but efforts to toughen the law in Idaho have struggled to gain traction in recent years.

This session seemed different as lawmakers have acknowledged feeling more pressure to act in the wake of recent traffic deaths linked to smartphone use. An 18-year-old Caldwell woman died in January after smashing into a slow-moving tanker truck on the highway. Taylor Sauer had been using her phone to look at a social networking website before the crash, authorities said. Her family has testified in favor of the texting ban.

Distracted driving contributed to 192 traffic deaths from 2008 through 2010, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Ellsworth emphasized that texting is especially dangerous because it distracts visually, physically and mentally.

Idaho's measure would slap offenders with an $85 fine and a non-moving traffic infraction that wouldn't add points to the violator's driving record.

Rep. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry, a former Idaho State Police trooper, said teen drivers would likely attract the most citations under the new law, a belief that prompted him to argue for making texting while driving a crime below the misdemeanor level.

"I don't think we want to punish them with a criminal record," Wills said. "It should be a wake-up call for everyone."

But some lawmakers weren't convinced that the police can enforce the bill as it's written. Rep. Brent Crane, R-Nampa, voted against the bill and questioned how police could determine whether a driver was visiting a website on their smartphone rather than sending a text message.

"This applies specifically to the manual preparation of a text message," Crane said. "It would arguably apply not to looking at a website."

The Idaho Sheriff's Association has said admissions of guilt will be crucial to enforcing the legislation.

"It's going to be limited, as many other laws are," Wills said. "We do not have the authority to go in and actually see what they were doing on the phone."

The Senate approved the measure in February but will have to sign off on House amendments that expand the ban to emergency and law enforcement personnel and eliminate adding points to an offender's license.

Ask The Plant Lady

Question: Dear Plant Lady, I've been told some indoor plants can be moved outside in warmer months and it helps them. When can I do this and where do I put them outside? Signed "Outside Vacationer"

Answer: Dear "Outside Vacationer," Yes, plants love a summer outdoor vacation but location and timing are the keys. Wait until warm nights begin (usually mid-June in our area) and place them in a shady spot out of the wind. Filtered morning sun is okay but protect them from direct sun at all times. Water more often than you do indoors. Ficus, ferns, tropicals and citrus love a summer hiatus!

E. Idaho Man Pleads Guilty to Firing at Police

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An eastern Idaho man has pleaded guilty to shooting at police officers last fall.

Thirty-two-year-old Scott Daniel Parker of Shelley pleaded guilty to two counts of aggravated assault and two other criminal charges on Monday.

Parker was charged last year with fleeing police on Oct. 14 in Idaho Falls, then firing at the officers with an assault rifle from inside his car. Police returned fire and hit Parker three times.

A deputy with the Bonneville County Sheriff Department was injured in the episode, but was released from the hospital the same day.

The Post-Register reports Parker entered the pleas as part of a deal with prosecutors. In exchange, prosecutors will recommend no more than 20 years in prison.

7.4 Quake Shakes Mexico, 100s of Homes Damaged

BY KATHERINE CORCORAN
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY • A strong 7.4-magnitude earthquake hit southern Mexico on Tuesday, damaging some 800 homes near the epicenter and swaying tall buildings and spreading fear and panic hundreds of miles away in the capital of Mexico City.

One of the strongest to shake Mexico since the deadly 1985 temblor that killed thousands in Mexico City, Tuesday's earthquake hit hardest in border area of southern Oaxaca and Guerrero states. In Guerrero, officials confirmed that some 800 homes had been damaged, with another 60 having collapsed.

Hours after the shaking at noon local time, there were still no reports of death or serious injury, even after a less powerful, magnitude-5.1 aftershock was felt in the capital and several other aftershocks near the epicenter in a mountainous rural region.

"It was very strong, very substantial," said Campos Benitez, hospital director in Ometepec, about 15 miles (25 kilometers) from the epicenter.

Guerrero Gov. Angel Aguirre, who is from Ometepec, was headed there to survey the damage and ordered emergency crews and civil protection to the area to help with the damage. The state did not say how many were displaced.

In Mexico City, frightened workers and residents poured into the streets of the capital. Telephone service was down in the city and throughout the area where the quake was felt and some neighborhoods were without power, according to Mexico City Mayor Marcelo Ebrard, who set up a hotline for people to report damage.

A pedestrian bridge collapsed on an empty transit bus.

About 40 passengers were stranded for a short time on the Mexico City airport air train, but later released. The airport closed for a time but officials said there was no runway damage and they resumed operations.

Afghanistan Suspect Left Trail of Shady Dealings

AND DANIEL WAGNER
Associated Press

CINCINNATI • The U.S. suspect in the slaughter of 16 villagers in Afghanistan has a trail of shady financial dealings — from working in penny-stock boiler rooms that drew numerous client complaints, to an unpaid $1.5 million fraud judgment, to a failed investment partnership with a former high school football teammate, records show.

Staff Sgt. Robert Bales joined the Army in 2001 after a Florida investment business failed and after he had worked with a string of securities operations with one company official now barred from trading in Ohio. That broker and Bales were socked in 2003 with a $1.5 million arbitration ruling after an elderly couple charged that their holdings were decimated.

Bales responded to another client complaint by saying the company officer, Michael Patterson, had wrongly blamed Bales for bad trades for an elderly client.

Bales, 38, is being held in Fort Leavenworth, Kan., while a military investigation continues into the nighttime rampage in Afghanistan. His attorney said Tuesday he expects the case to be lengthy.

"Everyone has financial problems," attorney John Henry Browne said Tuesday of Bales' money problems, including a planned sale of his Seattle-area home for $50,000 less than he and his wife paid for it in 2005. "But you don't go around killing innocent women and children over financial problems."

Bales' investment career — from 1996 to 2001 — followed the rise and fall of the tech stock bubble, which burst in 2001, causing an historic stock-market crash months before the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. After college, he worked for a web of companies accused of numerous petty financial frauds, records show. Bales shuttled between five different companies tied to the same principals until 2000, when he founded the doomed venture with former NFL player Marc Edwards.

Bales joined the Army two months after Sept. 11, after a Florida business dissolved and 18 months after the Ohio couple charged him with fraud, unauthorized trading and breach of financial responsibility. That complaint was upheld in a 2003 arbitration. A second complaint in Ohio charged him with unauthorized trading.

Records show Bales told the state in that case that the trades were done by a company principal who "told the elderly client they were my responsibility" but that they were carried out after he had left the company, called MPI Financial.

Records show he never responded to the complaint that led to the $1.5 million judgment, issued a few months before he went on his first of three tours in Iraq.

Patterson, who ran a company called Michael Patterson Inc., is barred from dealing with securities in the state, Ohio Department of Commerce records show.

Public filings with an industry regulator show Bales was registered to sell investments for five companies that appear to have been fronts for the same group: Hamilton-Shea, Quantum Capital, Michael Patterson Inc. (MPI), Capital Securities of America and Quantum Securities Corp.

Romney Routs Santorum in Illinois

Romney benefits from a crushing, 7-1 advantage in television advertising wars, and as his chief rival struggles to overcome self-imposed political wounds.

BY DAVID ESPO
AND STEVE PEOPLES
Associated Press

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. • Mitt Romney took a major stride toward the Republican presidential nomination Tuesday night, routing Rick Santorum in the Illinois primary for his third big-state win in a row and padding his already-formidable lead in the race for convention delegates.

"What a night," Romney exulted to cheering supporters in suburban Chicago. Looking beyond his GOP rivals, he said he had a simple message for President Barack Obama, the man Republicans hope to defeat next fall: "Enough. We've had enough."

Returns from 75 percent of Illinois' precincts showed Romney gaining 47 percent of the vote compared to 35 percent for Santorum, 9 percent for Ron Paul and 8 percent for a fading Newt Gingrich.

That was a far more substantial showing for Romney than the grudging victories he eked out in the previous few weeks in Michigan and Ohio, primaries that did as much to raise questions about his ability to attract Republican support as to quell those questions.

Santorum, who hopes to rebound in next Saturday's Louisiana primary, sounded like anything but a defeated contender as he spoke to supporters in Gettysburg, Pa.

He said he had outpolled Romney in downstate Illinois and the areas "that conservatives and Republicans populate. We're very happy about that and we're happy about the delegates we're going to get, too."

"Saddle up, like (Ronald) Reagan did in the cowboy movies," he urged his backers.

Romney triumphed in Illinois after benefitting from a crushing, 7-1 advantage in the television advertising wars, and as his chief rival struggled to overcome self-imposed political wounds in the marathon race to pick an opponent to Obama.

Most recently, Santorum backpedaled after saying on Monday that the economy wasn't the main issue of the campaign. "Occasionally you say some things where you wish you had a do-over," he said later.

Over the weekend, he was humbled in the Puerto Rico primary after saying that to qualify for statehood the island commonwealth should adopt English as an official language.

Initial results showed Romney's victory was worth at least 22 delegates in Illinois.

That gave him 544 in the overall count maintained by The Associated Press, out of 1,144 needed to win the nomination. Santorum has 253 delegates, Gingrich 135 and Paul 50.

Cut Spending Much Deeper, House Republican Plan Says

BY ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Mixing deep cuts to safety-net programs for the poor with politically risky cost curbs for Medicare, Republicans controlling the House unveiled an election-year budget blueprint Tuesday that paints clear campaign differences with President Barack Obama.

The announcement reignited a full-throated budget battle. Republicans cast themselves as stepping up to a federal deficit crisis long ignored by both parties, while Democrats and their allies responded with promises to protect the elderly and the poor from drastic cuts they said would harm the most vulnerable Americans.

The GOP plan doesn't have a chance of becoming law this year — the Democratic-controlled Senate has no plans to even take it up — but it provides a sharp election-season contrast to the budget released by Obama last month. His proposal would rely on tax increases on the wealthy to curb trillion-dollar-plus deficits but for the most part would leave alone key benefit programs such as Medicare.

The Republican proposal, released by House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, would wrestle the federal spending deficit to a manageable size in short order, but only by cutting Medicaid, food stamps, Pell Grants and a host of other programs that Obama and other Democrats have promised to defend.

The plan calls for steep drops in personal and corporate tax rates in exchange for clearing away hundreds of tax deductions and preferences. It would eliminate oft-criticized corporate tax boondoggles but also tax deductions and credits claimed by the poor and middle class.

To cope with the unsustainable growth of Medicare and the influx of retiring baby boomers, the GOP budget reprises a controversial approach that would switch the program — for those under 55 today — from a traditional "fee for service" framework in which the government pays doctor and hospital bills to a voucherlike "premium support" approach in which the government subsidizes purchases of health insurance.

Republicans say the new approach would force competition upon a wasteful health care system, lowering cost increases and giving seniors more options.

Syrian Forces Take Eastern City from Rebels

BEIRUT (AP) • Syrian soldiers backed by tanks seized the eastern city of Deir el-Zour from rebels on Tuesday, the latest opposition stronghold to fall to an offensive by the better equipped Syrian military.

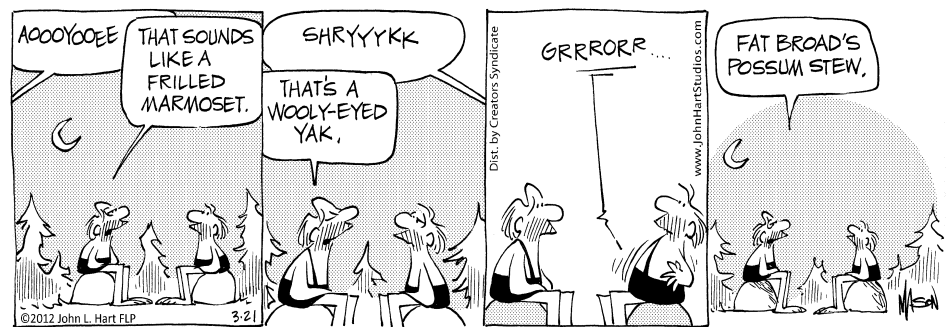

Activist Osama Mansour said government troops and armored cars entered the city about 60 miles from the Iraqi border from four sides, sparking short gunbattles with fighters from the Free Syrian Army.

Mansour, reached by telephone in Deir el-Zour, said the rebels quit fighting and took shelter in homes and apartments, fearing that protracted clashes would destroy the city.

Taking back rebel-held cities in the past weeks, government troops have often heavily shelled neighborhoods before sending in troops, killing civilians and damaging buildings.

"They knew they could not hold control of the neighborhoods, so they decided to stop fighting, knowing that the regime would bring in heavy weapons and kill many civilians," Mansour said.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Worry About Chinese Demand Drives U.S. Stocks Lower

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks closed lower Tuesday for only the second time in two weeks after two reports suggested an economic slowdown in China, where blistering growth over the past three years has helped sustain the global economic recovery. Home prices dropped in 45 Chinese cities last month, a result of government policies designed to reduce property speculation. And BHP Billiton, a mining company, predicted that China will not use much more iron ore in 2020 than it does today. In the United States, stocks recovered some of their early loss but still closed lower.

Builders Expect Brighter U.S. Housing Market

WASHINGTON (AP) • U.S. builders are betting that the housing market is finally on the path back to health. They requested 5 percent more permits in February to build single-family homes and apartments in the coming months. That increased the annual rate to a seasonally adjusted 717,000 permits, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. While that's still half the rate considered healthy by most economists, it's the highest since October 2008. Builders have grown more confident over the past six months after seeing more people express interest in buying a home. The rise in permits suggests builders see that interest translating into sales over the next 12 months. That's how long it typically takes to build a home after a permit is obtained.

Apple's Next Hot Item: The Dividend Check

Apple Inc. is finally using its $98 billion pile of cash to reward shareholders, saying it's instituting both a dividend and share buyback program.

BY BERNARD CONDON
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Apple made computers sexy. Can it do the same for the musty old dividend? Issuing a regular payment to your stockholders after years of just amassing cash used to be an admission that your company has run out of creative ideas to grow profits.

The quarterly check for a buck or two was more associated with staid utilities than sleek tech companies. "It wasn't sexy," says John Buckingham, chief investment officer at Al Frank Asset Management. "Now the cool guy is doing it." Apple said Monday that it would begin paying a quarterly dividend of $2.65 per share starting this summer after years of resisting the idea. Its late former CEO, Steve Jobs, always thought the company could make better use of its cash. But the hoard of cash and securities grew so large — $97.6 billion, more than the entire market value of all but 15 companies in the Standard & Poor's 500 — that Apple had no use for it. So it took the risk of looking like a fuddy-duddy and reversed its policy. Apple also announced that it planned to buy back $10 billion worth of its stock in the next fiscal year, which begins in October. Investors pushed the stock up 2.7 percent Monday to $601.10. That's on top of a 37 percent gain since the company first hinted in January that a dividend may be coming. Perhaps the rise in Apple stock isn't surprising. After years of pulling money out of stocks, investors are cautiously returning, but they're demanding dividend payments. Three-quarters of the $3.6 billion that investors added to stock funds in February went to funds specializing in dividend-paying companies. One reason for the buying is that many of the alternatives for generating cash are so unattractive lately. The interest payments on money market accounts, CDs, and many Treasury securities are next to nothing. For the S&P 500, the dividend yield, which measures annual payouts to shareholders against a company's stock price, is 2.04 percent — at least close to keeping up with inflation. Another appeal of dividends is that they are taxed at 15 percent, like a capital gain, instead of at income tax rates, as they were previously. The top marginal income tax rate is 35 percent. Dividends are scheduled to be taxed at income rates again starting next year, after the Bush-era tax cuts expire. It wasn't so long ago that a dividend announcement by a tech company was perceived as a kiss of death. When Microsoft announced its first dividend in 2003, some investors feared it was a sign that its best days were behind it. Judging from its stock, which has gone nowhere for most of the past nine years, they turned out to be right. Cisco, whose stock price hasn't moved much since the end of the dot-com craze a decade ago, finally decided to issue a dividend last year. Amazon and Google still don't pay a dividend. Neither does Dell, which has been around for a generation. Tim Holland, portfolio manager at Tamro Capital, says a dividend is seen as "taboo" for many companies, but he likes Apple's decision. He says the main attraction for him is the company's proven ability to grow earnings fast — Apple increased profit 85 percent in the last fiscal year ended Sept. 30 — and that investors apparently don't believe it can keep doing so. THE DIGIT

$2.5 billion

Oracle's 3Q earnings • Oracle's sales of new software licenses picked up in its latest quarter, helping to ease concerns about the company's future as it loses customers to rivals offering less expensive alternatives. The business software maker earned $2.5 billion, or 49 cents per share, during its fiscal third quarter — a period spanning from December through February. That represented an 18 percent increase from net income of $2.1 billion, or 41 cents per share, at the same time last year. If not for acquisition expenses and other costs, Oracle said Tuesday that it would have earned 62 cents per share.

Idaho House Passes Ag Tax Credit

mdavlin@magiclevel.com

BOISE • Businesses may soon have more incentive to process Idaho products in-state. On Tuesday, the House passed a bill that would offer a tax credit to businesses who make value-added improvements for agriculture-related products — for example, turning milk into cheese, potatoes into fries, or wheat into flour. The tax credit would be up to 30 percent of the investment, with an annual cap of $500,000. The idea, said co-sponsor Rep. Roy Lacey, D-Pocatello, is to keep Idaho ag products in Idaho. That will lead to more jobs, as processing plants and similar facilities open in the state. Co-sponsor Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, acknowledged there would be a negative fiscal impact on the state. "How much? It's really hard to estimate ... because we don't know how many companies will take advantage of this tax credit?" Pence said. The bill passed 62-6, and will now be considered by the Senate.

Report: Just $31B from Buffett Rule Tax on Wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) • A bill designed to enact President Barack Obama's plan for a "Buffett rule" tax on the wealthy would rake in just $31 billion over the next 11 years, according to an estimate by Congress' official tax analysts obtained by The Associated Press. That figure would be a drop in the bucket of the over $7 trillion in federal budget deficits projected during that period. It is also minuscule compared to the many hundreds of billions it would cost to repeal the alternative minimum tax, which Obama's budget last month said he would repeal with the Buffett rule tax. The alternative minimum tax, originally aimed at ensuring that wealthy Americans pay taxes despite deductions and other breaks, has begun affecting upper middle-class families. Congress acts every year to minimize its impact. The Buffett rule has become a leading symbol of Obama's and congressional Democrats' election-year efforts to persuade voters that they are the party championing economic fairness. Republicans have mocked it as one aimed at scoring political points that would have little real budgetary impact. The plan is named for billionaire investor Warren Buffett, who has said taxes on the rich are too low.

Employers Asking Job Seekers for Facebook Passwords

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE • When Justin Bassett interviewed for a new job, he expected the usual questions about experience and references. So he was astonished when the interviewer asked for something else: his Facebook username and password. Bassett, a New York City statistician, had just finished answering a few character questions when the interviewer turned to her computer to search for his Facebook page. But she couldn't see his private profile. She turned back and asked him to hand over his login information. Bassett refused and withdrew his application, saying he didn't want to work for a company that would seek such personal information. But as the job market steadily improves, other job candidates are confronting the same question from prospective employers, and some of them cannot afford to say no. In their efforts to vet applicants, some companies and government agencies are going beyond merely glancing at a person's social networking profiles and instead asking to log in as the user to have a look around. "It's akin to requiring someone's house keys," said Orin Kerr, a George Washington University law professor and former federal prosecutor who calls it "an egregious privacy violation." Questions have been raised about the legality of the practice, which is also the focus of proposed legislation in Illinois and Maryland that would forbid public agencies from asking for access to social networks. Since the rise of social networking, it has become common for managers to review publically available Facebook profiles, Twitter accounts and other sites to learn more about job candidates. But many users, especially on Facebook, have their profiles set to private, making them available only to selected people or certain networks. Companies that don't ask for passwords have taken other steps — such as asking applicants to friend human resource managers or to log in to a company computer during an interview. Once employed, some workers have been required to sign non-disclosure agreements that ban them from talking negatively about an employer on social media.

Diego Berdakin, the founder of BeachMint Inc., doesn't see the point of business cards. "When I go into a meeting and there are five bankers across the table, they all hand me business cards, and they all end up in a pile, in a shoe box somewhere."

Business Cards Edged Out by Technology

Analysts say the 2-by-3.5-inch pieces of card stock are fast giving way to digital alternatives.

BY MATT STEVENS
Los Angeles Times (MCT)

LOS ANGELES • Chalk up another looming casualty of the Internet age: business cards.

Ubiquitous as pinstripes, the 2-by-3.5-inch pieces of card stock have long been a staple in executive briefcases. Exchanging cards helps to break the ice and provides a quick reference for forgotten names.

But to many young and Web-savvy people who are accustomed to connecting digitally, the cards are irrelevant, wasteful — and just plain lame.

Diego Berdakin, the founder of BeachMint Inc., a fast-growing Santa Monica, Calif., e-commerce site, has raised $75 million from investors without ever bothering to print up a set. He doesn't see the point.

"If someone comes in to meet me, we've already been connected through email, so it really doesn't feel like a necessity in my life," he said. "When I go into a meeting and there are five bankers across the table, they all hand me business cards and they all end up in a pile, in a shoe box somewhere."

U.S. sales of business cards have been falling since the late 1990s, according to IBISWorld Inc., an Australian business data company whose data go back to 1997. The slide appears to be accelerating. Last year printers posted revenue of $211.1 million from the segment. That's down 13 percent from 2006.

The weak economy has been a factor in recent years. But analysts said printed business cards, like newspapers, books and magazines, are fast giving way to digital alternatives. Smartphones, tablets and social media are helping people connect more quickly and seamlessly than ever before.

"It's a steady decline," said Caitlin Moldvay, a printing industry analyst with IBISWorld. "The printing industry in general has entered into a decline, so this is part of that trend."

Many under-30 tech entrepreneurs see the paper rectangles as an anachronism, so they are turning to digital options.

About 85 million people have a professional network on LinkedIn. Some 77 million smartphone users have downloaded the Bump app, which allows them to bump their phones together and instantly exchange contact information.

Others carry a personalized quick-response code that smartphones can scan like a hyperlink. And, of course, there's always Facebook, email and digital business cards.

If they do take a paper card, some said they use a smartphone app to snap a picture of it and instantly digitize the card's information. Then they toss it into the nearest trash can.

"Paper is not so appealing to this generation," said Kit Yarrow, chairwoman of the psychology department at Golden Gate University in San Francisco who has studied Generation Y: the 20- to 30-year-olds who grew up with the Internet. "They absolutely gravitate toward products that help them do things really efficiently. It's time-consuming to organize business cards — and not portable."

Sam Friedman, co-founder and chief executive of Parking in Motion, which sells a mobile app for finding open parking spaces, said his Santa Monica firm's digital presence is its most effective communication tool. "The business card is your website," he said.

Still, old habits die hard. Friedman said he makes sure his employees are issued business cards, which sometimes come in handy at conferences.

Other firms that do business abroad, particularly in Asia, have found printed business cards to be crucial to corporate culture and ritual there.

And although the number of U.S. print shops is declining, some are thriving with the help of e-commerce and innovative new designs.

Online printer MOO Inc. specializes in "minicards" that are half the standard size to appeal to eco-conscious entrepreneurs. Others are peddling plastic business cards equipped with flash drives that companies can hand out as promotional freebies.

But one of the most successful firms, Vistaprint, keeps it relatively simple. The Netherlands company allows customers to create personalized business cards using online templates or their own digital designs. Businesses on a budget can get as many as 250 cards free of charge.

The company posted sales of $452.8 million in North America last year, up 17.9 percent from 2010. Spokeswoman Wendy Cebula said that business cards account for about 30 percent of Vistaprint's product revenue and that most of its customers are small businesses.

"We're just not seeing that electronic medium replace" printed business cards, she said. "We see them as complements as opposed to substitutes."

BY VICTOR L. SIMPSON AND COLLEEN BARRY
Associated Press

ROME • Thanks to two Marios, Italy's image as the fun-loving land of the bunga bunga party but unreliable partner in Europe is under reconstruction — sparking cultural shifts at home.

Premier Mario Monti, an economics professor who succeeded Silvio Berlusconi, is creating renewed confidence in Italy — among investors, political partners and crucially Italians themselves. Mario Draghi, as head of the European Central Bank, basks in acclaim leading an institution that holds sway over the EU economy.

The two Marios, both in their roles since November, have the seal of approval from German Chancellor Angela Merkel, a key figure in Europe's drive to save itself from ruin.

"If you want to hear something positive about Italo-German cooperation, I can say this: I highly appreciate the work of Mario Draghi, and it goes without saying that I appreciate that of Mario Monti," Merkel told reporters last week after meeting with Monti in Rome.

That's a sea change in Italy's image among its key European allies.

One of the last times Merkel was in Italy, she was greeted by then-premier Berlusconi who popped out from behind a pillar calling "cuckoo!"

Berlusconi enthralled Italy with his charisma and success, and humiliated it with an endless stream of sleaze that included tales of trysts with underage prostitutes, shameless cronyism and rampant corruption that fostered an entire culture of cheating.

Monti, a sober former EU competition commissioner who heads a government of experts, is challenging Italians through his policies to become better citizens. In Italy, being "furbo" or clever, but also carrying a pejorative sense of gaining an underhand advantage, has sometimes been more prized than hard work.

Berlusconi was seen as an exemplar of that kind of Italy.

Monti is putting the spotlight on another side of his nation — one of quality, precision and world class intellectual achievement.

As the former head of prestigious Bocconi University, Monti embodies this spirit — as does Draghi with his background at MIT, where he earned his economics Ph.D.

Monti says he wants to instill a culture of merit, doing away with privilege that has made economic mobility in Italy among the lowest in Europe.

Tax evasion, long tolerated on many levels despite costing Italy between 120 billion to 150 billion euros a year, has become a priority from senior politicians to the baker next door. In recent weeks, raids on posh resorts and ordinary businesses have led evening newscasts.

In an unprecedented show of transparency, Monti and his Cabinet ministers have published their tax returns and financial and real-estate holdings on their ministry websites.

U.S. Sets New Tariffs on Chinese Solar Panels

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Commerce Department is imposing new import fees on solar panels made in China, finding that the Chinese government is improperly giving subsidies to manufacturers of the panels there.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday it has found on a preliminary basis that Chinese solar panel makers have received government subsidies of 2.9 percent to 4.73 percent. Therefore, the department said, tariffs in the same proportions will be charged on Chinese panels imported by the U.S., depending on which company makes them.

The tariff amounts are considered small, but the decision could ratchet up trade tensions between the U.S. and China. Several U.S. solar panel makers had asked the government to impose steep tariffs on Chinese imports. They are struggling against stiff competition from China as well as weakening demand in Europe and other key markets.

Apple

Holland says that if they had more faith, the stock wouldn't be trading at a cheap 13.1 times expected earnings over the next year. The so-called price-to-earnings ratio of companies in the S&P 500 has averaged 15 or 16 over the decades.

It makes sense to buy for that reason, he says: "The company keeps delivering."

For the coming fiscal year ending Sept. 30, Apple is expected to increase earnings by nearly 60 percent, according to a survey of analysts by FactSet, a research firm.

"Their earnings growth is reliable," says Shaw Wu, an analyst at Sterne, Agee & Leech and another Apple fan. "And they're still an innovative, cutting-edge company."

Had it held on to the money, Apple could have faced legal challenges from shareholders arguing that the company was misusing their money.

The dividend will come to $10.60 per year, or 1.8 percent of Apple's stock price. Microsoft pays a dividend yield of 2.5 percent, Hewlett-Packard 2 percent. Utilities often pay 5 percent or more.

In dollar terms, it will be one of the richest dividends in investing. Apple will pay $10 billion in the first year, placing it just below AT&T and Verizon Communications. Those companies use dividends as their main attraction to investors.

In Apple's case, Jeffrey Snider, president of Atlantic Capital Management, an investment management company, sees the decision to offer a dividend as a possible omen, accidental or otherwise.

He says technology changes too quickly for leaders in one industry to stay on top for long, citing the once dominant companies like AOL, Yahoo and Research in Motion.

TWIN FALLS • Alesha Ketterling showed up early to last year's Taste of Home Cooking School so she could score front-row seats. "You just smell the aroma of the fresh herbs," Ketterling said of the live cooking demonstration presented by the Times-News. The chef "makes it look easy. It reassures you, 'I can go home and make this meal for my family. I just watched someone do it in 10 minutes!'"

Last year, Ketterling was one of more than 900 eager-to-learn amateur cooks who attended the high-energy cooking class. She plans to be there again this year when Taste of Home comes back to Twin Falls on April 17.

"The recipes are always fun," said the competitive Dutch oven cook who picked up ideas for contests at last year's event.

This year, Taste of Home culinary specialist Kristi Larson will show Magic Valley chefs how to make 10 dishes, including peanut butter cheesecake, mushroom tacos, grilled-chicken skewers and asparagus strudel.

TWIN FALLS • If you like to lift a glass for a good cause, then circle Aug. 18 on your calendar.

That's when Twin Falls City Park could play host to a wealth of breweries for the Magic Valley Beer Festival.

If approved by city officials, it'll be the area's first beer festival in more than a decade, since the Blue Lakes and Twin Falls Rotary clubs partnered on a Twin Falls Brew Fest in the late 1990s.

The new event is the brainchild of Shayne and Michelle Carpenter. Michelle, a Blue Lakes Rotary member, brought up the idea of a beer festival when the club was brainstorming replacements for its Road Apple Roulette.

The latter was a Western Days fundraiser that challenged participants to predict where the horses in a parade would, ahem, lift their tails.

"Shayne was going to do the beer fest no matter what," said Kyle Poppleton, Blue Lakes Rotary president. Meanwhile, the roulette was making a few thousand dollars for the club each year and people were losing interest. "It was hard to get the membership of the club enthused about it."

KETCHUM • It's likely not a style of food you've ever had before, but you'll probably recognize it.

"Latin freestyle" is what Jim Roberts, executive chef at a newly opened restaurant in Ketchum, calls the menu. Latin, because it draws on the ingredients and flavor profiles of Spain, Portugal, Mexico, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Argentina and Peru; freestyle, because it's more than mere fusion (also, to honor Ketchum's ski heritage).

Think duck confit empanadas, smoked ribs with candied chilies, mussels and clams sauced in Tecate and lime. And don't forget the flights of tequila with

Janitzio Prepares for Second Location

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS

TWIN FALLS • The downtown crowd need not worry: Janitzio Mexican Restaurant isn't leaving Main Avenue.

But Janitzio is preparing to open a second location, at 2096 Kimberly Road, with the same menu and same beer-and-wine lineup as its original eatery.

"We're still going to keep this one here, too," said Gloria Guzman, manager of Janitzio on Main.

The leased building on Kimberly Road is getting exterior stucco, a new roof, new interior carpet and tile and some updated kitchen equipment, Guzman said. Janitzio hopes to open there by the first or second week of April but hasn't set a date.

"We're just waiting on the people who are doing the work over there," Guzman said.

Some of Janitzio's downtown staff will move to the new restaurant, and the business will make new hires for both locations. Guzman said she'll remain the manager of the existing restaurant but help out at the new one.

Other Mexican restaurants have come and gone at that Kimberly Road address - a fact that some customers have warned Janitzio about. But Guzman and her colleagues are counting on the building's attractive remodeling and on their own track record.

"We've been doing OK here, so we'll be good over there, too," she said.

Besides, she added, the new location has a large parking lot. "That's one problem we have downtown that we're not going to have over there."

seats? No big deal. Throughout the demonstration, a camera will be pointed directly at Larson's hands as she whips up the dishes. Her busy hands are projected live onto two big-screen TVs on both sides of the stage and on a massive screen above her head.

"Even if you're on the back row, you can still see every move she makes," said Susan Nickell, Times-News marketing manager.

Larson travels the country presenting the cooking class.

"I love that every show is different," said Larson, noting anything can happen at a live show.

Recently, at an Oregon stop, she was making a marinade with chicken when she committed a common kitchen mistake. "I managed to spill two cups of marinade all over the table."

"It's all part of the fun. If I do mess up, the audience is there to cheer me on," Larson said.

She hopes her cooking students take home a similar message.

"If you mess up, it's OK," she said. "You can make it into something else, or start over. That's OK too."

The Taste of Home class isn't a snobbish affair.

"These are not ingredients you'd buy at a strange, weird, off-the-wall specialty shop," Nickell said. "Anybody can do this."

The show gives people who read Taste of Home a chance to interact with the magazine and meet other fans, Larson said.

"And there's prizes," Larson said. "People love prizes."

Kumquats: What They Are and How to Use Them

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

There's really no way around it. Kumquats are an odd little fruit.

Visually, they resemble diminutive oranges. But they technically aren't citrus. And unlike oranges, it is the thin skin that is sweet, while the flesh is sour.

You probably won't find bushels of them at the grocer, but most stores will have a few pints (they usually are sold in the same containers as cherry tomatoes) tucked away among the "strange" produce offerings.

And they are worth looking for. Here's why:

In a tiny (about the size of a large olive), bright orange package, kumquats pack a puckeringly intense sweet-tart flavor that complements both sweet and savory dishes. They also make a mean cocktail.

Kumquats, which originated in China, are eaten whole — skin and all. The seeds can be chomped, too. But that's a matter of taste.

I prefer to slice the kumquats in half and use the tip of the knife to pop out the seeds (it's easy). The halves are amazing drizzled with or dunked in a bit of honey.

Don't bother juicing them. Because the sweetness resides in the skin, you'll be disappointed. Better is to halve and seed one, then blend it into your smoothie. In general, the intensity of these flavor bombs means a little goes a long way.

Kumquats should be firm, but tender. They can be stored at room temperature for several days (their flavor is best at this temperature), or refrigerated for two to three weeks.

If you try kumquats fresh and find the skin is too tough, dunk them in boiling water for about 20 seconds, then place them in ice water to cool.

Kumquat and Red Onion Salsa on Baked Haddock

Start to finish: 25 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1 cup panko breadcrumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/4 pounds haddock fillets, divided into 4 pieces
1 medium red onion, quartered
1/2 jalapeno pepper (with seeds if you like it hot)
2 cloves garlic
1/2 cup loosely packed fresh cilantro
1 pint kumquats, halved and seeded
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon honey
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt and ground black pepper

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray.

In a wide, shallow bowl or pie pan, whisk together the eggs and flour. In a second similar bowl or pan, mix the breadcrumbs and salt.

One piece at a time, dip the haddock in the egg blend, turning to coat all sides, then dredge through the breadcrumbs, patting them on to cover evenly.

Arrange the haddock on the prepared baking sheet.

The tart-sweet flavor of kumquats is the perfect foil for a mildly spicy salsa. Here, a blend of sweet-and-heat, spooned over breaded and baked haddock.

Spritz the tops of the fish with cooking spray. Bake for 12 to 14 minutes, or until the fish flakes easily. Meanwhile, in a food processor combine the onion, jalapeno and garlic. Process until chopped. Add the cilantro and kumquats, then pulse to chop.

Transfer the kumquat mixture to a medium bowl.

Stir in the olive oil, honey and lemon juice, then season with salt and pepper.

Serve the haddock topped with the salsa.

Shayne Carpenter is working with distributors to get more than 40 breweries represented. Organizers also plan to feature live bands and a raffle. The festival will be organized in a fenced-off area of the park, and Carpenter said he hopes to eventually sell tickets online and through local bars and restaurants.

Blue Lakes Rotary is providing volunteers, looking for sponsors, helping secure permits and attending to various other tasks. It will share the festival's proceeds with another nonprofit, the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, which Shayne Carpenter said he and his wife selected after learning of its recent budget problems.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce is advising on the event. President and CEO Shawn Barigar said he talked to Carpenter early on, offering background and some planning advice. The chamber will also help promote the festival locally and to visitors, just like it would any other local event, though Barigar noted the chamber isn't taking a direct role.

"I think it's a great new event we can add to the summer lineup for the Twin Falls area," Barigar said.

There have been a couple of hiccups; organizers had to change the date to Aug. 18 to avoid conflict with an annual beer festival in Boise. But Carpenter said he's had luck finding companies and organizations to donate items and services or help sponsor the event. He views it as an opportunity for beer fans to enjoy each other's company and for those new to craft beer to get an education.

"My wife and I have probably been to almost 100 beer festivals," he said. "It's clearly a big enough valley and towns to support a beer festival."

Of course, given its nature, organizers are being careful about how they present it.

"It's a polarizing event," Poppleton said, adding that Blue Lakes Rotary doesn't want to be seen as just "the drinking club ... I want it to be a professional fundraiser."

The true test will come in a couple of years, he said, when he sees whether the festival is something the club can keep going annually and whether it pays off. "If it makes Road Apple look like nothing, then it'll be a lot easier to keep people enthused about it, that's for sure."

Blue Lakes Rotary wants to keep momentum going on its latest project, a park just south of Oregon Trail Elementary School. The club is at the halfway point, Poppleton said, with about $65,000 raised and spent so far and another $65,000 left to go before the park is finished.

Two sets of playground equipment will be installed this spring or early summer. Then, he said, the club hopes to raise money for a shelter with picnic tables, and for some sort of climbing course similar to the large rocks that park-goers climb on at Dierkes Lake.

Rotary would each year split the festival revenue with another charity, he said — perhaps again the senior center, or maybe a different group.

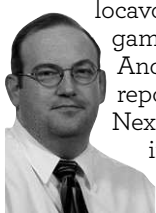

That assumes the Twin Falls City Council gives the event the all-clear, of course. Carpenter, a city employee, said he expects the special event permit application to reach the council's agenda sometime in April.

Barigar, a City Councilman, said such permits are generally reviewed by several city departments — including police and parks — then sent to the council for a vote. He'll participate in that vote, he said; because their accompanying sangrita: a mix of pomegranate, orange and lime juices, plus a hit of hot sauce.

The restaurant, named boca — which means “mouth” in several Latin-heritage languages — is owned by Alyson and Shawn Tierney, who also own Ketchum’s Il Naso. They originally wanted to move Italian-themed Il Naso into the new location, which formerly housed lo-cavore-focused Segó, because the space came with one of Ketchum’s rare liquor licenses.

“I realized what I’d built (at Il Naso) didn’t really dovetail well into this space. It’s more mellow and quiet and intimate. Here (at boca) it lends itself to being a socially inspired space,” Shawn Tierney said.

Through several trips to a restaurant owned by his wife’s family in Mexico, and experience enjoying celebrity chef Rick Bayless’ high-end Mexican-inspired cuisine, they had fallen in love with what Tierney calls “refined Mexican” and wanted to bring it to Ketchum.

Their concept: “We’re taking the entire Latin genre, considering the Latin world as a giant canvas and the different cuisines as paint colors. ... Let’s bring some bold flavors to Ketchum and deliver them in a small-plate fashion in a fun, energetic environment to inspire good times,” Tierney said.

Roberts trained at the Culinary Institute of America in classic French technique. He has worked at fine restaurants including Zagat-acclaimed Rover’s in Seattle, while more recently he was chef at the Valley Club in Ketchum and Idaho Rocky Mountain Ranch in Stanley.

Roberts runs boca’s kitchen with a practiced ease interrupted only briefly by hunts for equipment in an as-yet unfamiliar kitchen; the restaurant’s hard opening was Feb. 29. His instructions during afternoon prep met are with a cheerful “yes, chef” from his line cooks.

“This gave me an opportunity to reinvent myself,” Roberts says, describing how the flavor profiles at boca differ from his previous menus. He lists the fresh peppers and cilantro from Mexico, potatoes from Peru (and Idaho), chimichurri from Argentina, and serrano ham and Manchego cheese from Spain as inspirations.

Bartender Ryan Sullivan pipes in as he prepares the bar for evening service: “We’re not pigeon-holed into Spanish food, so we can go anywhere Spain went in the last 600 years,” he says. “He’s taking a chance, being ahead of his time.”

Sullivan worked closely with Roberts and Tierney to build a drink menu that complements the food. The tequila flights — named after the difficulty of various ski runs — will set you back anywhere from $12 to $50 for three shots. Sullivan also created signature cocktails.

“Spanish cocktails are usually very basic; citrus (and) whatever alcohol. They drink it to be refreshed and cool down,” he says, describing the challenge of altering these basic drinks into cocktails that are warming and sophisticated for a ski town.

Although the restaurant has been close to capacity every night since it opened, Tierney said, the volume isn’t just the curious checking out the latest menu in town.

“We’ve had a lot of repeat business, and I’m overly thankful people are excited about what we’re doing,” he said.

He hopes his menu of primarily small plates will attract customers looking for a quick bite before a movie at the nearby Magic Lantern, those trying many flavors with a group of friends for a full meal, and those capping off their night with a cocktail and dessert — perhaps boca’s signature Mexican hot chocolate, made with two kinds of chili powder and hand-whipped cream.

Candied Chilies

From Jim Roberts, executive chef at boca in Ketchum.

- 1 cup sliced serrano chilies
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 tablespoon red chili flakes
- 2 ounces lime juice
- 2 ounces orange juice
- 2 ounces grapefruit juice
- 2 ounces distilled white vinegar

Combine ingredients and simmer in a saucepan until the consistency of syrup, about 10 minutes. At boca, Roberts tosses smoked ribs in the sauce, then stacks them log-cabin style for serving.

boca Hot Chocolate

From Jim Roberts, executive chef at boca in Ketchum.

- For the chocolate:
- 1/2 gallon half-and-half
 - 1 1/2 cups sugar
 - 1 cup cocoa powder
 - 1 ounce cinnamon

PHOTOS BY ARIEL HANSEN • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

- 1 ounce ancho chili powder (plus additional for garnish)
 - 1 ounce New Mexico chili powder (plus additional for garnish)
- For the whipped cream:
- 1 quart heavy cream
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 ounce Grand Marnier liquor

Thoroughly mix all chocolate ingredients and heat to a simmer.

Whip the cream ingredients together until peaks stand on their own. Do not overwhip.

Pour hot chocolate into a small mug, top with whipped cream, and lightly dust with the mixed chili powders.

Charred Rare Ahi with Chilled Tequila Lime Vinaigrette

From Jim Roberts, executive chef at boca in Ketchum.

- 4 ounces sashimi grade tuna (per serving)
- Ancho chili powder, salt and pepper to taste

- For the vinaigrette:
- 1 tablespoon tequila
 - 1 tablespoon lime juice
 - 1 teaspoon pineapple syrup
 - 1 teaspoon tamari sauce
 - 1 tablespoon minced shallots
 - 1 jalapeno, seeded and minced
 - 1 tablespoon chopped cilantro
 - 2 tablespoons olive oil
 - Salt and pepper to taste

Lightly coat the fish with olive oil (too much will cause the oil to catch fire when you sear), then dust with a pinch each of ancho chili powder, salt and pepper.

Quickly grill, at very high heat, on both sides to char outside of tuna. Inside of tuna should remain pink and raw. Chill tuna, then slice against the grain into thin pieces for plating.

Mix vinaigrette ingredients together with a whisk or hand blender until well mixed. You may need to mix again before adding to dish if ingredients have separated.

Compose plate with slices of tuna. Add garnish of finely julienned English cucumber and radish (tip from Roberts: Use a mandoline to slice them in one direction, then your knife to get same-sized cuts in the other direction). Spoon vinaigrette over tuna. Season lightly with black salt and serve. For an added touch, boca includes a drop of basil oil between the arranged pieces of tuna.

El Fuego Dulce ('The Sweet Fire')

From Ryan Sullivan, bar manager at boca in Ketchum.

- Jalapeno pepper and cilantro
- 1 tablespoon agave syrup
- 1 1/2 ounces 100 percent blue agave tequila
- 1/2 ounce Cointreau
- 1/2 ounce fresh-squeezed lime juice
- 2 ounces fresh-squeezed blood orange juice

Muddle two slices of jalapeno and a sprig of cilantro with agave syrup. Combine with all liquids in a shaker with ice, and shake. Prepare a glass by mixing half sugar and half salt, plus fresh-grated lime zest. Rim the glass with the mixture and pour in the shaken, strained cocktail.

NORTH CANYON MEDICAL CENTER

For Easy Cool-weather Cooking, Try Braising

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Cool days call for cooking that is low, slow and wet. Which is to say, braised.

And it's simpler than you might think. Braising is just a matter of cooking food, usually meat, for a long period at a low temperature and submerged in some kind of liquid. Pot roasts are a good example. Many foods cooked in a slow cooker also qualify.

Beef stews are another great example. A long, slow simmer is used to break down and tenderize cuts of meat that otherwise would be tough and unappealing. And this is true for all manner of meats. Goat and lamb, especially the shanks, frequently are braised to produce succulently tender meals.

This is why many braising recipes call for the fattier or tougher cuts of meat. The added benefit is that these also tend to be the cheapest cuts. For example, chicken thighs would be a good choice for braising, while chicken breasts would not. Pork shoulder would be another option, rather than the lean tenderloin.

Of course, braising doesn't have to be limited to meat. Vegetables also can be braised. Fibrous vegetables (such as fennel or winter greens) and root vegetables (such as parsnips and carrots) take particularly well to braising. The technique is done the same as for meat, though vegetables don't take as long to braise.

Often in braising you'll find that the meat or veggies are seared prior to adding the liquid. This deepens the flavor. The browning and caramelizing of the surfaces serves to flavor the liquid and the finished dish. Liquid and seasonings then are added to come half to two-thirds up the side of the food. Then the dish is brought to a low simmer and kept that way.

Braising can be done over a low heat on the stove, or at moderate heat in the oven. Usually the pot remains covered for the majority of the cooking.

Either way, this is a relatively hands-off process. Once the dish is cooking, you just let it do its thing. Sometimes the cover is removed toward the end of cooking so the liquid can reduce some and the food can brown on the top. And sometimes the liquid is reduced further to serve as a glaze or a thickened sauce. Regardless of the chosen consistency, some of the liquid is almost always served with the food.

For our braising recipe, we opted for short ribs. Short ribs are the perfect cut of meat to be braised. They have quite a bit of marbling and can be tough if not properly cooked. You can get short ribs off the bone, but for the best flavor, opt for on-the-bone.

We're braising in a tangy blend of balsamic vinegar and seasoned stock. A lot of the flavor comes from the caramelizing of the meat and the vegetables, so don't skimp on the browning. After the meat is tender, we boil the liquid down to a glaze. Serve the short ribs and their glaze over mashed potatoes, creamy polenta or egg noodles.

Balsamic Braised Short Ribs

Start to finish: 2 1/2 hours (30 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 1 tablespoon vegetable or canola oil
- 6 bone-in short ribs (about 3 pounds)
- 2 leeks, white parts only, sliced
- 2 medium yellow onions, sliced
- 2 carrots, peeled and cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 stalks celery, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 cloves garlic, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 3 sprigs fresh rosemary
- 1/2 cup balsamic vinegar
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 1 quart unsalted beef stock

In a large, heavy-bottomed pot such as a Dutch oven, heat the oil over medium. Working in batches so as not to crowd the pan, sear the short ribs for 3 to 4 minutes on each side, or until well browned. Transfer the short ribs to a plate.

Add the leeks, onions, carrots, celery and garlic to the pot and cook until well browned, stirring occasionally, about 12 to 15 minutes. Add the red pepper flakes, salt, pepper and tomato paste, then cook until the tomato paste turns a brick reddish-brown color, about 6 to 7 minutes.

Add the Dijon mustard, rosemary sprigs, balsamic vinegar and brown sugar. Scrape up any browned bits from the bottom of the pot. Return the short ribs to the pot, then add the beef stock. Bring the mixture up to a low simmer and cover.

The pot can be left on the stovetop on low heat or placed in a 325 F oven for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, or until the short ribs are very tender when pierced with a fork. Carefully transfer the meat to a platter. Cover with foil and a couple kitchen towels to keep warm. Using a slotted spoon, remove and discard the solids from the liquid. Bring the liquid to a boil on the stovetop and cook until reduced to 1 cup. Drizzle the glaze over the short ribs and serve.

Try Salami in Pasta Carbonara

BY SUSAN M. SELASKY
Detroit Free Press

When a recipe begins by telling me I probably have most of the ingredients on hand, I'm sold.

Most recently, it was a recipe in the March issue of Martha Stewart's Everyday Food magazine. The variation on the traditional pasta carbonara dish used crispy salami instead of pancetta or bacon as a topper. And guess what? I just happened to have the exact amount of salami called for.

The other ingredients — eggs, olive oil and Parmesan cheese — also are staples in my kitchen, and many others.

This recipe reminded me of one I made years ago in which salami was deep-fried and used as a garnish. It was the first time I'd fried salami, and I remember thinking, "Who fries salami?" But it was different — and delicious. In today's recipe, salami supplies a salty note.

This recipe isn't super saucy. Reserved pasta water thins the sauce enough so it just coats the pasta. Using the pasta water also adds flavor.

I added asparagus to the recipe because I had some nice thin spears on hand. It's one of my all-time favorite vegetables, and it made me think of spring.

It's easy to just toss the asparagus in with the pasta during the last minute or so of cooking. This cooks the asparagus just briefly, so it still has a little snap when you bite it. Since asparagus takes to all kinds of flavors, it was a perfect match for this dish.

The whole thing came together in about 35 minutes, including waiting for the pasta water to boil.

Spaghetti Carbonara with Asparagus and Crispy Salami

Serves: 4 (generously).
Preparation time: 10 minutes. Total time: 35 minutes.

- 2 large eggs
- 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese (plus more for serving)
- 1/4 cup fat-free or regular half-and-half
- 3/4 pound dry spaghetti
- 1/2 pound trimmed asparagus, cut into 2-inch pieces
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1/4 pound salami, cut into 1/4-inch-wide strips
- 3 cloves garlic, peeled and chopped
- 1/4 cup white wine
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
- 1/2 cup chopped parsley for garnish

In a small bowl, whisk together the eggs, Parmesan cheese and half-and-half. Bring a large pot of salted water to a rolling boil. Add the spaghetti and cook until al dente. Add the asparagus during the last minute of cooking. Carefully scoop out 1 1/2 cups of the pasta cooking water and set aside. Drain the pasta and asparagus and give them a brief rinse.

While the pasta is cooking, in a large skillet heat the olive oil. Add the salami strips and cook until crisp, about 5 minutes. Stir in the garlic and cook about 1 to 2 minutes or just until fragrant. Stir in the white wine and cook until it's almost evaporated.

Return the pasta to the cooking pot with the heat off. Quickly stir the egg/cheese mixture into the hot pasta, tossing to coat. Add enough of the reserved pasta cooking water to thin out the sauce if needed. (This is not a super saucy dish.) Stir in the salami/garlic mixture and season with salt and pepper.

Serve in individual bowls, garnished with parsley, if desired. Serve more cheese on the side, if desired.

Newsday

I have a theory about the pretzel bread craze sweeping bakeries, sandwich shops and brew pubs: We're attracted to this new bread because it reminds us of our first love, the bagel.

Soft pretzels, pretzel bread (which is simply soft pretzel dough shaped into little loaves) and bagels are similar to each other, and different from most other breads, because they are boiled before baking. On contact with the hot water, the starches on the surface of the dough gelatinize, forming a protective crust. This crust will become characteristically shiny and chewy in the oven.

The big difference between bagels and pretzels is the solution in which they're boiled. Real bagels are boiled in water and maybe a little bit of malt syrup, which penetrates the dough to give it a slight sweetness and color. Pretzels, in contrast, are boiled in an alkaline solution, which gives them their distinctive, slightly soapy flavor and deep brown hue.

It is simple enough to make an alkaline solution by mixing a mineral base into a pot of boiling water. German bakers have traditionally used lye, the base with the highest PH, which creates the strongest, most effective alkaline. Recipes using lye often direct cooks to wear protective eyewear and gloves to avoid burns. If you are like me, you may balk at boiling your pretzel bread in the same chemical used to unclog the kitchen sink (if you'd like to try this, be sure to order food-grade lye from a reputable source; lye from the hardware store has not been purified and is not suitable for pretzel-making).

Like many safety-minded (OK, cowardly) bakers, when I wanted to make my own pretzel bread I turned to a weaker base, baking soda, to give my pretzel dough flavor and color. The dough itself was easy to make and work with. After I let it rise briefly on the countertop, I divided the dough and rounded the pieces into eight little rolls. Then I covered and refrigerated the rolls, to slow down fermentation and firm them up so they'd keep their shape in the boiling water.

After poaching, I transferred them to a parchment-lined baking sheet and sprinkled them with some seeds and salt. I snipped an "x" shape into the top of each one to give it the ability to expand. I split the warm rolls and used them for ham-and-cheese sandwiches, but they would also make great burger buns. And, in a pinch, I wouldn't refuse a pretzel roll with a schmear.

Pretzel Rolls

To make hot dog or sausage buns, pat each piece into a 4-inch-by-3-inch rectangle, fold it into thirds as if folding a letter, pinch to seal, and roll back and forth on countertop to lengthen into a 6-inch cylinder. To shape pretzels, roll each dough piece into a 12-inch rope, twist the ends together and fold them toward the center.

3 cups (15.6 ounces) unbleached all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
1 1/4 cups lukewarm water
1 teaspoon instant yeast
1 tablespoon packed dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon kosher salt
1/2 cup baking soda
Pretzel salt, sesame seeds, and/or poppy seeds for sprinkling

Combine flour and butter in bowl of electric mixer fitted with a paddle. Mix on low until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add water, yeast, sugar and kosher salt to bowl. Stir several times with a rubber spatula until a rough dough forms. Remove paddle and replace with dough hook. Knead dough on medium speed until springy and smooth, about 10 minutes. Place in an oiled bowl, cover with plastic wrap, and let stand 1 hour. Dough will rise slightly into a dome. Turn dough onto a lightly floured countertop and divide into 8 equal pieces. Shape each piece into a round by pulling the slack surface of dough piece downward toward countertop and pinching it together on underside. Cup dough round in both hands and rotate it several times to tighten round into a firm ball. Place rounds on a parchment-lined baking sheet, pinched sides down. Lightly drape with plastic wrap and refrigerate at for at least 2 and up to 24 hours. Arrange rack in middle of oven. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Bring 4 quarts water to boil in a large pot. Stir baking soda into boiling water, 1 tablespoon at a time (it will bubble up). Drop dough rounds, 3 or 4 at a time, into pot, being careful not to overcrowd. Lower heat and simmer on one side for 30 seconds, turn, and simmer on other side for 30 seconds. Remove with a slotted spoon, drain well, and place

snipping twice, to create an "x" on top of each roll. Bake until reddish brown, 20 to 25 minutes. Let cool 10 minutes and eat warm or let cool to room temperature.

OBITUARIES

Mary Alice Means Jefferson

April 2, 1916-March 18, 2012

HAILEY • Mary Alice Means Jefferson was born in St. Joseph, Mo., on April 2, 1916. She was the daughter of Foster and Faye L. Means. Her father was a victim of the epidemic which killed so many, and he died when Mary was a very young girl. Her mother worked for a small railroad company and, when the opportunity came, she accepted employment with the Union Pacific Railroad settling on the Omaha Headquarters, raising the two girls with grace and grand style.

Originally, she helped organize and run the now present day Gold Mine, the Ketchum Library, Hemingway School and the Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood.

Mary loved all the qualities that the Wood River Valley afforded her and her family, whether tending her garden or her animals or camping at 95 years old in their RV motor home at Little Wood River Reservoir or at the base of the Boulder Mountains.

Mary married Ray Jefferson on May 8, 1946, resulting in a 65-year union, blessing them with two sons, Gregory and Tony.

Mary entered high school in Omaha and, with her sister, attended Central High School, graduating in 1934. During World War II, she worked in the Union Pacific traffic department direction Troops Train movement across the United States. With the ending of the war, Mary was sent to Sun Valley, Idaho, to establish a reservation department to answer the hundreds of requests for accommodations when the Sun Valley Resort reopened.

Mary is survived by her husband, Ray of Hailey; son, Greg and wife Sherri of Hailey; grandson, Mark and wife Trina and two great-grandchildren, Jaden and Lane of Boise; grandson, Jake of Boise; and son, Tony and granddaughters, Mia and Alberta of Hailey. She was also survived by numerous nieces and nephews.

Mary had an exceptional ability in various duties required of a secretary. Because of this, she was called upon to fill many assignments. These included secretary of the Sun Valley Ski Club, private secretary to Bill Janss, including directing the whole stenography pool. Mary never sought the spotlight but rather found pleasure in working to help people fill a need in her community.

Mary was preceded in death by her mother and father; and sister, Fosteen Herd.

It was Mary's request that there be no service held, and cremation will follow. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Labre Indian School, Ashland, MT 59004

Friends and family are welcome to leave memories and condolences or light a candle at www.woodriver-chapel.com.

Raona Ann (Sjostrom) Kesler

April 25, 1931-March 17, 2012

Raona is survived by her five children, Karen (Mike) Kerr of Gooding, Kevin (Michelle) Clark of Stockton, Calif., RaeLyn (Devin) Rigby of Gooding,

She was born April 25, 1931, in Union (now Midvale), Utah, to Lester Charles Sjostrom and Orell Jensen Sjostrom. She attended schools in Rockford and Blackfoot, Idaho, graduating from Blackfoot High School in 1949. On July 25, 1950, she married Ronald Lynn Clark in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple. They were later divorced. On Sept. 18, 1970, she married Ray William Kesler in Elko, Nev. This marriage was later solemnized in the Jordan River LDS Temple. She was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, having served in many leadership and teaching positions throughout the years. She served five stake missions and she and Ray served two 18-month missions for the church in the Canada Vancouver and Tennessee Nashville missions.

In 1976, they moved from Blackfoot to Challis, Idaho. From 1979 to 1992, they lived in Jerome, Idaho. During this time, she attended classes at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls. In 1992, they moved to Malad, Idaho. Ray passed away on June 22, 1998. In 1999, she moved to Gooding, Idaho, to be closer to family.

She was preceded in death by her husband; parents; one son, Larry; three sisters, Lois Barton, Berniss Anderson and Evalyn Johnson; one granddaughter; one great-granddaughter; one step grandson; one step granddaughter; and three step great-grandsons.

Radene (Steve) Houser of Spokane Valley, Wash., and Launa (Verl) Romrell of Belgrade, Mont.; 26 grandchildren; 40 great-grandchildren; one sister, Cheryl (Brent) Hollinger of Tooele, Utah; five stepchildren, Karen Harsh of Pocatello, Idaho, Kathy (Larry) Housley, Cheryl Moss and Brenda (Jay) Johnson, all of Idaho Falls, Idaho, and Brent (Kathy) Kesler of Portland, Ore.; 24 step-grandchildren; 94 step-great-grandchildren; and four step-great-great-grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial contributions in Raona's name be made to the Missionary Fund of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The family would like to express their gratitude to Alliance Hospice for their assistance.

Visitation for family and friends will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, March 23, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. A funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 24, at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Gooding, with visitation at the church beginning at 9 a.m. A committal service will follow at 4 p.m. at Fielding Memorial Park Cemetery in Idaho Falls.

Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

OBITUARIES

C. Bruce Young

Feb. 1, 1913-March 17, 2012

BURLEY • Clyde Bruce Young, of Burley, passed away Saturday, March 17, 2012, at the age of 99.

Bruce has been a Burley stalwart for 53 years, moving here in 1959 from Boise, Idaho. He took great pride in supporting and promoting the Burley community, having served on the Burley School Board for two terms, as the Cassia County coroner for 15 years, as president and treasurer of the Burley Kiwanis Club and lieutenant governor of Division 5 of the Utah-Idaho Kiwanis Region. He also served as a director of the Burley Senior Center for many years. Bruce was also very active in the Cassia County Republican Committee, serving as treasurer and precinct committeeman for 25 years.

Bruce was a faithful member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He had a very strong pioneer heritage, being a great-grandson of the Mormon pioneer prophet Brigham Young. His commitment to pass on to his posterity a knowledge of their pioneer heritage has been very evident by the volumes of research he has done to collect and organize the names of thousands of his deceased ancestors. Bruce was a collector — he collected books; he collected coins; he collected stamps; he collected perfect attendance pins from the Kiwanis Club (50 of them) and he collected family file cards from the temples of the LDS Church.

Bruce was born on Feb. 1, 1913, in Salt Lake City, Utah, to Leo Howe Young and Elise Olsen Young. Growing up and going to school in the Sugar House area of Salt Lake, he prepared for life by developing a very strong work ethic. He served a mission for the LDS Church in the Central States with headquarters in Independence, Mo. He married Dora Dean in the Salt Lake LDS Temple on June 8, 1937. Together they raised four children, Farrell, Marvin, Paul and Darla.

Bruce worked hard at various jobs to support his family. He was a banker (at one time being an Idaho State bank examiner), an insurance broker, a real estate broker and a self-trained accountant. He supported youth athletics and the Cassia County Fair as he served with his fellow Kiwanians. He served his church in various callings over the years. He and his wife went as missionaries to Russellville, Ala. Upon his return to Burley, he was asked to be manager of the LDS Employment Office. They later served together as workers in the Boise LDS Temple.

He is survived by his son, Farrell (Doratha) Young of Rexburg; son, Paul (Susan) Young of Burley; daughter, Darla (Barry) Johnson of Idaho Falls; and daughter-in-law, Diane Young of Springville, Utah. Also surviving him are 25 grandchildren; 95 great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents; his two brothers; his sister; his son, Marvin; and his wife of almost 75 years, Dora.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, March 26, at the Burley LDS West Stake Center, 2420 Parke Ave. in Burley, with Bishop Dan Alvey officiating. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, March 25, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from noon until 12:45 p.m. Monday at the church.

Chicago Tribune

Does your cupboard hold a package of unfinished crackers? An old bag of whole grain flour? Some leftover nuts from holiday baking? Or perhaps a bottle of vegetable oil you've been slow to finish?

If so, you may be harboring dangerous, rancid foods.

Protecting against rancidity — which occurs when oils oxidize — has long been a challenge for home cooks, but a recent perfect stew of factors has made the issue more serious. Strangely enough, this situation comes courtesy of the rising popularity of “healthy” polyunsaturated fats, whole grain flours and warehouse stores — not bad developments on their own, but taken together they've resulted in American pantries full of food that goes rancid much faster than we're used to.

Add to that Americans' growing acclimation to the taste of rancid foods, and the problem gets bigger.

So what's wrong with eating rancid oils?

“There are at least two,” says lipid specialist and University of Massachusetts professor Eric Decker. “One is that they lose their vitamins, but they also can develop potentially toxic compounds” that have been linked to advanced aging, neurological disorders, heart disease and cancer.

“They're carcinogenic, pro-inflammatory and very toxic,” says integrative medicine specialist Andrew Weil. “They are also widespread in the food chain.”

The growing problem comes as a byproduct of Americans and food manufacturers swapping trans fats for polyunsaturates in their products over the past 10 years. This has resulted in a whopping 58 percent drop in trans fatty acid consumption in the U.S. in the past decade, according to a recent government report. But for all of their artery-blocking evil, trans fats had at least one benefit: They were very stable, meaning they took forever to go rancid. The same is true of highly refined white flours.

But when these flours and fats were replaced with whole grain flours and polyunsaturates, such as corn and soybean oil, that shelf stability collapsed.

“Manufacturers noticed this and had to change their delivery schedules and formulations,” says Kantha Shelke a food scientist and spokeswoman for the Institute of Food Technologists. “And some consumers became irrationally angry that their food was not lasting as long as it had before.”

Oil in foods will slowly turn rancid, so it is only a matter of time before items in your cupboard can become dangerous.

Indeed, while Americans followed orders to ditch saturated and trans fats for polyunsaturated (vegetable) and monounsaturated (olive, canola and peanut) fats, they didn't realize these healthier fats don't last nearly as long.

While monounsaturates (like olive or peanut oil) also can go rancid after about a year, they are still 10 times more stable than polyunsaturates, according to Decker.

And while some consumers can sniff out (and toss out) rancid foods, many don't know the telltale stale, grassy, paintlike odor. Others may not be able to detect them through layers of other flavorings. And still others might feel compelled to consume them out of thriftiness or hopes that a strong sauce will mask the taste.

Because air, light and heat speed up oxidation, it's normally a bad idea to, for example, buy vegetable oil in a clear bottle and place it on the counter in a warm kitchen for several months.

Exotic oils (macadamia, walnut, sesame, fish, flaxseed, etc.), nuts and whole grain flours are also major candidates for fast rancidity, and should all be stored in the refrigerator or freezer. Whole intact grains and nuts in their shells, however, last much longer.

The Institute of Food Technologists' Kantha Shelke says she's found that similar boxes of soda crackers using refined and whole grain flours had shelf lives of 141 and 80 days respectively when left unopened.

- In general, buy products that contain oils or fats in small quantities.
- Store most cooking oils in a cool, dark cabinet — not next to the stove.
- Refrigerate polyunsaturated oils especially fish, nut and flax seed oils.
- Store nuts and whole grain flours in the freezer.

“Dr. Jill's March of Dimes Fundraiser!”

One year ago on March 4th, 2011 our daughter Aniyah Adell Adepoju was born. Unfortunately she had a rough start and was in the intensive care unit for four days. Thankfully she recovered quickly and was able to come home. While in the intensive care unit I saw a lot of sick premature babies and that experience was my inspiration to start this fundraiser.

The Smell Test

A rancid food is “the smell of oil paint,” says integrative medicine specialist Andrew Weil. “Linseed oil, which is the same as flax oil, is the basis of oil paint. It's highly unsaturated and so it oxidizes fast when exposed to the air.”

Although the FDA oversees advice on the safe storage of food at home, it has not updated its recommendations since the gradual switch from saturated fats to unsaturated fats in food production.

Rethinking a Classic Casserole to be Healthy

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Foodies probably don't like to admit it, but nearly everyone loves a good casserole.

Trouble is, casseroles don't have a lot of love for healthy diets. Especially when you reach back to the '60s, an era of classic casseroles — like turkey tetrazzini — that were made all the more delicious with the help of gobs of heavy cream, butter and cheese.

So without sacrificing the “creamy” comfort of the dish, we set out to make a delicious casserole minus the guilt.

As with traditional versions of this dish, we started out with leftover turkey. Be sure to use the leaner turkey breast and trim off any skin or fat. If you don't happen have cooked turkey handy, a rotisserie turkey breast or chicken from the grocer are fine.

We also kept the mushrooms, though we opted for fresh ones over the canned variety favored back in the day. We threw in some chopped red bell pepper and chopped asparagus, too. Color in vegetables adds more than just eye appeal; different colors are indicative of different nutrients. So the more color, the better.

But the real heavy hitters in this casserole are the white pasta, cream sauce and cheese.

The pasta was an easy fix. Using whole-grain pasta adds lots of fiber and nutrients. The cream sauce was another matter. We used fat-free half-and-half as our base, but you also could substitute fat-free evaporated milk. Thickened up to a creamy consistency, without the use of half a stick of butter, we were off to a good start.

Lastly, instead of using a cup or more of shredded cheese, we used just a bit of assertive Parmesan. Then we topped it all off with seasoned panko breadcrumbs for a nice crunch.

Turkey Tetrazzini

Start to finish: 45 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 8.

- 12 ounces whole-grain spaghetti, broken into 2-inch pieces
- 1 tablespoon canola or vegetable oil
- 8 ounces cremini mushrooms, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 1 bunch asparagus, trimmed and cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 red bell pepper, cored and diced
- 2 teaspoons onion powder, divided
- 1 1/2 teaspoons paprika, divided
- 1/4 cup dry sherry
- 3 cups cubed cooked turkey breast
- 2 cups fat-free half-and-half
- 3 tablespoons instant flour (such as Wondra)
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 cup panko breadcrumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a large casserole dish with cooking spray.

Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil and cook the spaghetti according to package directions.

Drain and set aside. In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the mushrooms and garlic, then season with salt and black pepper. Sauté until the mushrooms are well browned and release all their liquid, about 10 minutes. Add the asparagus and red pepper and cook for another 4 minutes.

Stir in 1 teaspoon of the onion powder, 1 teaspoon of the paprika and the sherry. Cook for 1 minute, then remove from the heat. Add the turkey and set aside. In a small saucepan over low heat, bring the half-and-half to a simmer. Whisk in the instant flour, then bring to a boil. Cook until thickened, about 1 minute. Remove the pan from the heat and stir in the Parmesan. Season with salt and pepper.

To assemble the casserole, stir the cooked spaghetti and the cream sauce into the skillet with the turkey and vegetables. Spoon this mixture into the prepared casserole dish, then sprinkle the seasoned panko over it. Spritz the top of the panko crumbs with cooking spray and bake for 10 to 15 minutes, or until golden. Per serving: 330 calories; 45 calories from fat (13 percent of total calories); 5 g fat (1 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 40 mg cholesterol; 48 g carbohydrate; 23 g protein; 6 g fiber; 250 mg sodium.

Manning Introduced as New Denver QB

BY EDDIE PELLIS
Associated Press

DENVER • Peyton Manning stood next to John Elway, holding up a bright orange jersey with the No. 18 on it.

Yes, that could take some getting used to.

And now if Manning's surgically repaired neck cooperates, these two quarterbacks — one in the Hall of Fame, the other headed there one day — think they might be taking a similar photo together, only next time they'll be holding a Super Bowl trophy.

Manning was introduced as the new quarterback of the Denver Broncos on Tuesday, the four-time MVP taking the spot once held by Elway, who as Broncos vice president engineered the deal to bring the NFL's most sought-after free agent to town.

It's a deal that could also mark the end of Tim Tebow's days in Denver — a bold move, for sure, but one Elway was more than willing to take.

"Plan B?" he said. "I don't have a Plan B. We're going with Plan A."

After his photo op with Elway and owner Pat Bowlen, Manning answered many of the questions that have been bouncing around since March 7, when his old team, the Indianapolis Colts, released the quarterback and set in motion one of the most frenetic free-agent pursuits in history.

On the neck injury that kept him off the field through 2011: "I'm not where I want to be. I want to be where I was before I was injured. There's a lot of work to do to get where we want to be from a health standpoint."

On his potential role in being the man who could bring about the end of Tebow's popular stay in Denver: "I know what kind of player Tim Tebow is, what kind of person he is, what an awesome year it was. If Tim Tebow is here next year, I'm going to be the best teammate I can be to him. He and I are going to help this team win games. If other opportunities present themselves to him, I'm going to wish him the best."

On Elway's role in leading him to choose Denver over other suitors, the most serious of which were the Titans and 49ers: "I'm seeing him as the leader of a franchise. I really liked what he had to say. Everyone knows what kind of competitor he is as a player. I can tell he's just as competitive in this new role. That got me excited."

And so, the deal was sealed.

Manning has a five-year, $96 million contract and plans to retire in Denver. His familiar No. 18 was actually retired — a tribute to Denver's first quarterback, Frank Tripucka, who was more than happy to let Manning bring it out of mothballs. The Broncos, meanwhile, have some protection in the way the contract was formulated. There's no signing bonus. Manning will get $18 million guaranteed for next season, but must pass a physical before each season, starting in 2013, to get paid.

Frustrated assistant coaches mulled over lost opportunities.

The championship dream was over.

The College of Southern Idaho lost 76-69 to Eastern Oklahoma in the first round of the NJCAA National Tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., Tuesday afternoon, relegating the Golden Eagles (30-4) to a consolation bracket game against Three Rivers (Mo.) on Thursday at 9 a.m. MDT.

"This is a hard one to take. This team had high hopes and high expectations just like the other 15 teams in this tournament," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "I don't think these guys came 22 hours on that bus ride to let that be the taste that they end the season with. I know they'll respond and play a better game on Thursday."

The 2011 NJCAA champions hardly resembled a championship team at any point during Tuesday's loss.

They missed free throws (13-for-25), they were careless with the ball (18 turnovers), they shot poorly from the field (37 percent) and they lacked the killer instinct Scenic West Athletic Conference opponents had been so accustomed to seeing.

"We didn't give it our all tonight. The ball didn't bounce our way. It bounced their way. They hit a lot of big shots," said CSI guard Fabyon Harris, who led CSI with 17 points. "We weren't scared. We just came into the tournament like we had all the other games this season."

A tight game throughout after CSI fought back from an 11-point deficit, the contest turned in CSI's favor midway through the second half.

Rafiel Guthrie made back-to-back buckets on sweet post moves to put the Golden Eagles up 48-44 — tied for their largest lead of the night. Guthrie, who was questionable entering the game with a groin injury, finished with 16

Future Men's Field Could Be Seeded

BY STEPHEN MEYERS

HUTCHINSON, Kan. • College of Southern Idaho men's basketball head coach Steve Gosar thinks it's a good idea.

Soon the NJCAA may think so, too. We're talking about seeding the Division I men's basketball tournament.

This spring, the NJCAA executive committee will vote on a proposal that would expand the tournament field from 16 to 24 teams, with the teams seeded based on record, strength of schedule and historic results of the team's district at the national tournament.

"I think a lot of the ideas that are being proposed are good ideas,"

Jazz Win Fourth Straight, Top Thunder

SALT LAKE CITY • Paul Millsap scored 20 points, Al Jefferson had 16 and Devin Harris added 15 to lead the Utah Jazz to their fourth straight victory, 97-90 over the Oklahoma City Thunder on Tuesday night.

Millsap had a dunk and a fallaway jumper to help the Jazz finish the game on a 10-4 run.

Russell Westbrook had 23 points for Oklahoma City, and Kevin Durant had 18, but went scoreless in the fourth quarter and misfired on all seven attempts from the field in the period.

James Harden added 17 points for the Thunder, who have lost four of their last seven games. The NBA's most efficient offense went 6 of 21 in the fourth quarter and committed 20 turnovers in the game.

After Derrick Favors made two free throws for an 85-77 Utah edge, Westbrook made two 3-pointers and a pair of foul shots to power a 9-2 run and cut Utah's lead to 87-86 with 2:56 to play.

Jamaal Tinsley scored nine points in 9 minutes and Utah's reserves turned a deficit into an eight-point lead during the second quarter. The Jazz led

NCAA BASKETBALL

Running Down the NCAA's Regionals

BY JOHN MARSHALL

Associated Press

Now it's time for the big dogs to take over the NCAA tournament.

Fourteen of the 16 teams remaining in the bracket are from major conferences, leaving scrappy Ohio and Xavier as the only mid-majors with a shot at following up on what Butler and Virginia Commonwealth did a year ago.

Good news, even for you underdog fans, is that the resumes of the 14 big-school programs include 93 Final Four appearances and 33 national titles. Get teams like that together, and there's sure to be some great matchups and games.

Needless to say, it should be sweet.

BEST GAMES: If we're going to tout how great the matchups are, we might as well start off by pointing out a few.

Syracuse vs. Wisconsin. The Orange live for creating turnovers; the Badgers hold onto the ball as if it were a pot of gold coins. Should be fun to see how this battle of styles and wills plays out.

Michigan State vs. Louisville. A battle of minds between Cardinals coach Rick Pitino and the Spartans' Tom Izzo. A couple of pretty good teams with some good players, too.

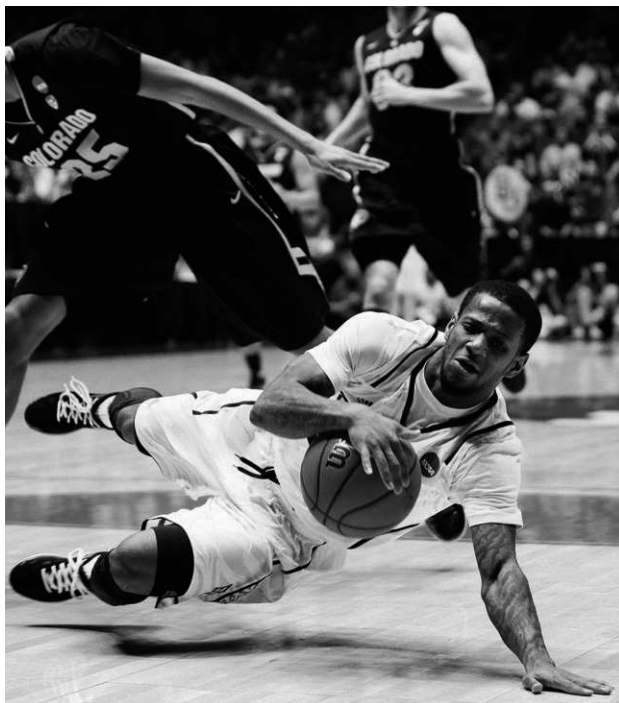

Kentucky vs. Indiana. Don't think the Wildcats have forgotten about that Assembly Hall court storming after Indiana's win in December. Two traditional powers, too; a combined for 12 national titles between them.

Marquette vs. Florida. The Gators can shoot, particularly from the 3-point arc. The Golden Eagles are tough and like to play defense. Another will-inflicting game.

UNSUNG HEROES: We know the stars, the big names who get all the attention. But just below the marquee are a handful of under-the-radar players who are there to support the headliner, sometimes even steal the show.

Here's a few who have grabbed the spotlight so far:

Brady Heslip, Baylor. He's open soon as he crosses midcourt and has killed teams that collapse on Baylor's big front line in the NCAA tournament. In case you didn't see it, he hit a 10th 3-pointer on the way to the locker room after demolishing Colorado on Saturday.

Former College of Southern Idaho standout Pierre Jackson, foreground, and his Baylor teammates square off against Xavier in one of eight "Sweet Sixteen" NCAA Tournament matchups to be staged later this week.

Marquis Teague, Kentucky. Once considered Kentucky's lone weak spot, the freshman had 24 points, seven assists and four rebounds against Colorado.

Jeff Withey, Kansas. Thomas Robinson and Tyshawn Taylor make the Jayhawks go. Withey becoming more assertive helped take them to the regional semis.

Aaron Craft, Ohio State. The Buckeyes' point guard can score and has great court vision. His biggest contribution could be defense; he can take an opposing guard completely out of a game.

Russ Smith, Louisville. The Cardinals guard can be a difference-maker and was against New Mexico, scoring 17 points. He disappeared a few times this season, which Louisville can't afford at this point.

NUMBERS: 0 — Losses by 29-7 Baylor outside the Big 12.

3 — Conference tournament champions in the round of 16: Michigan State, Louisville and Ohio.

4 — Teams from the Big Ten and Big East left in the tournament.

10 — Times Michigan State has reached the regional semifinals in the last 15 years.

48 — Years since Ohio last reached the round of 16.

50 — Years since Cincinnati beat Ohio State in the national title game for the second year in a row. The Bearcats and Orange play Thursday in Boston.

106 — Miles between Cincinnati and Ohio State, who play each other in Boston in the East Regional.

88,312 — Twitter followers for Kentucky super fan, actress and avid tweeter Ashley Judd, who attended the Wildcats' win over Iowa State on Saturday.

HEADING EAST: The initial 68-team bracket had teams from all over the west, from Arizona and UNLV to Gonzaga and St. Mary's.

Not a single team from the western half of the United States reached the regionals this year, leaving Baylor, in heart-of-Texas Waco, as the last stop in the bracket.

That's 11 states, no teams. Yet Ohio put a record four teams through to the round of 16: Ohio State, Xavier, Cincinnati and Ohio.

STUDENTS OF THE GAME: Four of the teams in the round of 16 have coaches who never played college hoops and came through the ranks as student managers.

Tom Crean, Indiana. Didn't play at Central Michigan and got his start as a graduate manager at Michigan State before going on to head coaching jobs at Marquette and with the Hoosiers.

Mick Cronin, Cincinnati. After coaching a local high school while completing his undergraduate degree, he got his first college coaching job as a video coordinator for the Bearcats in 1996-97.

Buzz Williams, Marquette. Before he became Marquette's head coach, the Buzz saw served as a student assistant at Navarro College in Corsicana, Texas, under Juco Hall of Famer Lewis Orr.

Scott Drew, Baylor. Started his career as a student assistant at Butler and later moved on to Valparaiso, where he earned his master's degree while working for his father, Homer, the Crusaders head coach at the time.

MONUMENTAL

MOMENTS: The remaining teams have accounted for some of the greatest moments in NCAA tournament history. Here's a few:

North Carolina State, 1983. Coach Jim Valvano running around looking for someone to hug after Lorenzo Charles' putback is an all-timer.

Kansas, 2008. "Mario's Miracle" — Mario Chalmers' tying 3-pointer — still draws cheers like Kansas won the title all over again during the pregame video at Allen Fieldhouse.

Michigan State, 1979. Magic vs. Bird. 'Nuff said.

North Carolina, 1982. Freshman Michael Jordan hits the winning jumper against Georgetown, becomes one of basketball's — or any sport's — greatest icons.

Indiana, 1987. Keith Smart pulls a Jordan to beat Syracuse. Now, the question is will there be any moments as memorable as those when the tournament resumes Thursday?

Eastern Oklahoma (31-3) battled back as Theron Chilton hit a deep 3 with the shot clock ticking down to give the Mountaineers a 53-52 lead with nine minutes to go.

A Luke Cothron layup tied the game at 58, but on the next defensive possession the Golden Eagles began to lose their composure.

Cothron was called for a goaltend, Sebastien Michineau turned the ball over while trying to break the press on the ensuing possession, and Marcus Tarrance hit a 3 after a CSI basket to put Eastern Oklahoma up 65-60 with four minutes left.

"The guys fought hard, but I thought we made too many mental mistakes, too many little mistakes, too many missed free throws,"

Gosar said. "I thought we shot too many 3s when we instead could have worked the offense better."

Eastern Oklahoma showed no mercy closing out the game, as Tarrance led all scorers with 26 points. A Harris free throw got CSI within four at 71-67 with 43.7 seconds left, but the Golden Eagles didn't have anything left from there.

"Nothing compares to this group of guys I've got here," said Eastern Oklahoma head coach Scott Edgar, who won his first NJCAA tournament game in his 35-year career. "This is an unselfish group and they did everything I asked of them. We were prepared and they accepted the challenge."

Eastern Oklahoma plays Spartanburg Methodist (S.C.) tonight at 7 for a berth in the semifinals.

"That's a very good ball club. They hit some big shots. They did a really good job of keeping pressure on us

Gosar said after CSI's loss to No. 8 Eastern Oklahoma in the first round of the NJCAA national tournament.

Asked specifically if seeding the tournament is one of those good ideas, a sour Gosar simply said, "Yes."

Under the current format, the bracket for the NJCAA field of 16 is created via a blind draw. This year, the No. 4 Golden Eagles landed in the top heavy part of the bracket with No. 8 Eastern Oklahoma, No. 16 East Mississippi, No. 7 Indian Hills (Iowa), No. 3 Monroe (N.Y.)

and No. 1 and undefeated South Plains (Texas).

Only three ranked teams — No. 19 Otero (Colo.), No. 17 Seward (Kan.) and No. 2 Northwest Florida — are in the bottom half.

The 16 district champions would receive automatic bids, with the top eight as voted by the NJCAA seeding committee, receiving first round byes.

Seeds nine through 24 would be comprised of the final eight district champions, four at-large selections and four zone qualifiers. "I think it's a great idea,"

CSI women's head coach Randy Rogers said earlier this season. "You look at region like ours that's so tough, we could get two teams in the national tournament who would do well. And you look at how the bracket is going to fill out, it makes more sense to seed that thing like the women's tournament."

SWAC Not In The Semis This Time: For the first time since 2006, a team from the Scenic West Athletic Conference won't at least have the chance to advance the semifinals or further in the Division I men's basketball tournament.

CSI and Salt Lake won titles last year and in 2009, respectively, and the Bruins finished runner-up in 2008.

USU-Eastern Utah (formerly College of Eastern Utah) finished third in 2010 and CSI was fourth in 2007 after losing to Coffeyville (Kan.).

Back in 2006, the Golden Eagles lost to Monroe (N.Y.) in the consolation final to finish a dubious eighth place. The last time a SWAC team didn't place was in 2004, when CSI went two-and-out, losing to Eastern Wyoming.

CSI will look to avoid that Thursday against Three Rivers (Mo.). Two more wins Friday and Saturday and CSI would finish seventh.

Jazz

52-44 at the half on the strength of 11 forced turnovers.

Utah extended the advantage to 14 in the third quarter. Harris scored 13 straight points for the Jazz and opened the middle for Mill-sap and Jefferson to operate.

Oklahoma City's Serge Ibaka and Harden hit several wide-open jumpers as Utah's big men hurried to help stop the drives of Durant and Westbrook to get the Thunder back within striking distance. The Jazz have won six straight games at home and looked nothing like the team that lost two games within a week in mid-February to Oklahoma City by an average of 20 points.

After a string of five consecutive losses to Oklahoma City and looking outmaneuvered by the Thunder's length and quickness, Utah employed a scrambling, helping defense that forced difficult shots and bad passes.

The Jazz outscored the Thunder 50-20 in the paint and moved a step closer to reaching the playoffs. Utah is ninth in the Western Conference, a half-game behind Houston for the last spot.

Messi Sets Barcelona Goals Record

BY JOSEPH WILSON
Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain • Step aside John Cruyff. Move over Laszlo Kubala, Romario and Ronald Koeman. And, please, don't even mention Ronaldinho.

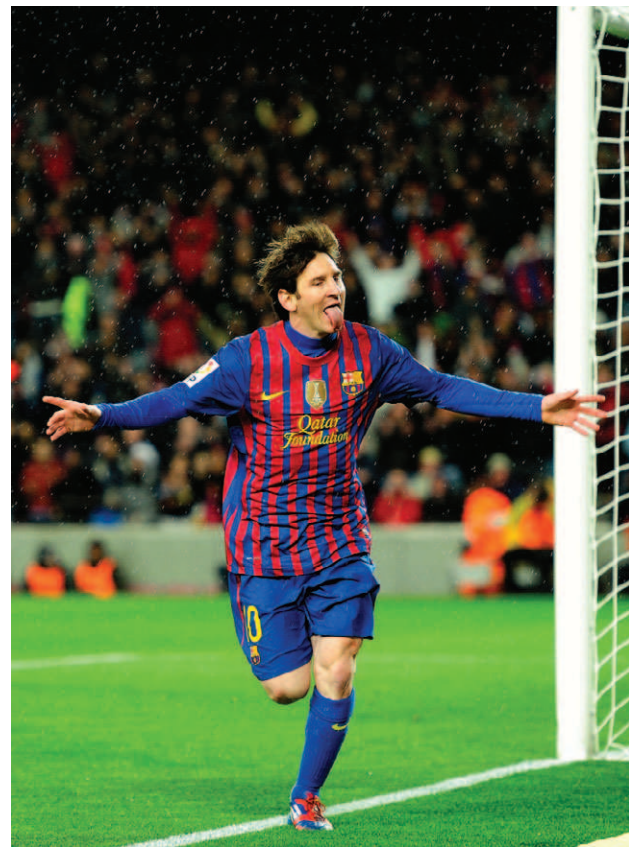

If anyone doubted who is the best scorer to don Barcelona's burgundy and blue, Lionel Messi ended the debate in emphatic fashion on Tuesday night with a hat trick to become the club's career goals leader.

Messi broke Cesar Rodriguez's 57-year-old Barcelona record, getting his eighth hat trick of the season in a 5-3 Spanish league win over Granada that increased his goals total to 234.

"We are before the best player in absolutely every facet," Barcelona coach Pep Guardiola said. "He is capable of everything that a football player must do and he does it every three days. I am sorry for those who want to dethrone him, but he is simply different from all the rest. Messi has entered the history of the club at just 24 years of age. If he continues like this in the coming years, he will score so many goals that he will never be surpassed."

Guardiola said that Messi was to soccer what Chicago Bulls great Michael Jordan was to basketball.

FC Barcelona forward Lionel Messi reacts after scoring against Granada during a La Liga soccer match at the Camp Nou stadium in Barcelona, Spain, Tuesday.

While Cesar set the mark in 13 seasons from 1942-1955, Messi needed just under eight campaigns to pass his milestone.

"He is defining an era. He is the best," Barcelona goalkeeper Victor Valdez said.

Nicknamed "The Flea" for his headlong, goal-bound bursts, Messi made his Barcelona debut in 2004.

The European record for most goals in a single top-division season is 66, set by Hungary's Ferenc Deak in 1945-46, and the world record is held by Scottish-American forward Archie Stark, who netted 70 in 1924-25. Barcelona has at least 13 games remaining this season and, depending on Champions League advancement, could play as many as 16.

A three-time FIFA player of the year, Messi has 17 goals during a seven-game scoring streak and leads La Liga with 34 goals, two ahead of Real Madrid's Cristiano Ronaldo.

The hat trick was Messi's 18th for Barcelona and gave him 154 goals in his last 153 games over three seasons. His six hat tricks in La Liga this season tie the record set by Ronaldo last year.

Messi has scored 153 goals in the Spanish league, 49 in the Champions League, 19 in the Copa del Rey, eight in the Spanish Supercup, four in the Club World Cup and one in the European Supercup.

Late Monday, Barcelona announced Cesar's total from 1942-55 was three fewer than the team previously said. A review by Barcelona's Center of Documentation and Studies and the La Vanguardia newspaper determined Cesar did not score goals attributed to him during the 1947-48, 1948-49, 1949-50 and 1952-53 seasons and also credited him with an additional goal in 1945-46.

Premier League Looks Into Improved Screenings

BY ROB HARRIS
Associated Press

LONDON • English soccer player Fabrice Muamba showed encouraging signs on Tuesday in his recovery from a cardiac arrest, three days after collapsing on the field during a match.

Despite the quick attention from medical personnel at the FA Cup quarter-final Saturday at Tottenham, the Premier League said it will consider improving medical screenings throughout the year.

The Bolton midfielder began breathing independently again and speaking on Monday. He had a "comfortable night" in intensive care, doctors said Tuesday.

"It's still very early in the process," Bolton manager Owen Coyle said after speaking to Muamba in hospital. "There is still a long way to go but there are encouraging signs ... and we pray he continues to improve."

Premier League chief executive Richard Scudamore said Tuesday that "everyone comes out of this with huge credit," particularly the medics who raced onto the field to try to resuscitate Muamba.

But there will be a full review of the treatment available at White Hart Lane for the former England Under-21 international and the medical checks that soccer players receive. According to the Professional Footballers' Association, the 23-year-old Muamba had four heart screenings. The Congo-born player fled to England from Congo's civil war in 1999.

"In the immediate aftermath of Saturday night, we checked Fabrice's records and he had been screened four times," PFA chief executive Gordon Taylor said.

The PFA said it has spent around $10 million over the last 20 years on screening professional soccer players for heart defects.

"Incidents and events shape policy, shape developments, shape progress," Scudamore said. "We will look at every aspect of what happened and ... if there are ways and means of making it better in the future. We will do everything we can to reduce to the point of elimination, if we possible can, things like that."

An ambulance was on hand on Saturday in part because of criticism from then-Chelsea manager Jose Mourinho in 2006 about the time it took for goalkeeper Peter Cech to get to a hospital after fracturing his skull during a game at Reading.

An ambulance must be in place at stadiums for the exclusive use of players and club doctors.

NASCAR

Johnson Team Sees Most Penalties Overturned

BY JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. • NASCAR's chief appellate officer overturned on Tuesday the bulk of the penalties levied against five-time championship winning crew chief Chad Knaus, who still must pay a $100,000 fine because Jimmie Johnson's car failed the opening day inspection of the Daytona 500.

Chief appellate officer John Middlebrook overturned the six-race suspensions NASCAR handed down to Knaus and car chief Ron Malec, and ruled both instead will be on probation through May 9.

Middlebrook also reinstated the 25 points that Johnson had been docked. The decision moves Johnson to 11th in the Sprint Cup standings heading into Sunday's race at California.

"It's been a tough 30 days," Knaus said. "It's not about vindication. It's time to move on."

Johnson, who earned his first career victory at California in 2002, was ready to get on with the season. He was told by Knaus via text message about the ruling.

"I'm glad this is over; now it's on to Cali," he posted on Twitter.

torsports owner Rick Hendrick have maintained the No. 48 Chevrolet was not illegal when it was presented for inspection Feb. 17 at Daytona. NASCAR used a visual inspection to determine the sheet metal between the roof and the side windows had been illegally modified to give Johnson an aerodynamic advantage.

The car was never sent through NASCAR's templates, and the team maintained it had not been altered since it was approved in January at NASCAR's R&D Center. Hendrick also said he had paperwork showing the car was exactly the same as it was following Johnson's win last April at Talladega.

"My argument was simply that the car is out in plain view. The car went to the tech center. It was inspected at the race track. It was inspected at the tech center on multiple occasions, and it was at the tech center as late as January. And the car had not been altered," Hendrick said. "We even had one of the NASCAR officials make comments about the car being correct. We had all that documented.

"I think by going piece-by-piece, date-by-date, you could see there was no ill intent by our part. ... Our car was approved."

Report: Saudi Crown Prince OKs Women for London Games

ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia • A Saudi Arabian newspaper says Crown Prince Nayef has approved plans for the ultra conservative Muslim country to send female athletes to the Olympics for the first time at the London Games.

The Saudi-owned and London-based Al-Hayat newspaper says Nayef, who is heir to the aging king, has approved the participation of women at the London

Olympics in sports that "meet the standards of women's decency and don't contradict Islamic laws."

Saudi sports officials could not be reached to confirm Tuesday's report in the Arabic-language newspaper.

The IOC said Monday that progress has been made in talks with Saudi Olympic officials on sending female athletes and officials to the games.

NOTICE OF HEARING REGARDING PROPOSED INCREASE IN ELECTRICAL RATES OF THE CITY OF HEYBURN

Pursuant to the requirements of Idaho Code Section 63-1311A, the City of Heyburn gives notice of a hearing to consider an increase of the rates charged the City's electrical customers. The hearing will be conducted on March 28, 2012 at 7:00 P.M. at the Heyburn Council Chambers, at City Hall, located at 941 - 18th Street, Heyburn, Idaho. At that hearing the Mayor and City Council will take public comment on the proposed increases.

The proposed electrical rate increases are:

Residential Rate:	Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	5.220 cents/kWh	5.597 cents/kWh
Customer Charge:	$9.59 per month	$9.59 per month

Commercial Rate (Single Phase):

Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	5.216 cents/kWh
Customer Charge:	$11.83 per month

Commercial Rate (Three Phase):

Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	2.789 cents/kWh
Customer Charge:	$16.97 per month
Demand Charge	$4.82 per kW per Month $5.33 per kW per Month

Industrial Rate:*

Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	3.000 cents/kWh
Customer Charge:	$18.86 per month
Demand Charge:	$5.00 per kW per Month $4.00 per kW per Month

* The previous Industrial rate was established by special contract with individual customers who met certain load requirements and was based upon time-of-day metering. The actual cost of the energy as billed by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) to the City was passed on to the customer, plus an additional 0.7220 cents/kWh to cover the City's overhead. Such a rate, under the new BPA rate structure, is no longer feasible.

Irrigation Rate:

Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	3.7 cents/kWh
Customer Charge:	$20 per month

Yard Light Rate:

Current Rate	Proposed Rate:
Energy:	$7 per month $7 per month (no change)

The reasons or needs for such increases are contained in recommendations of a cost of service study performed by Brooks & Associates, of Bellevue, Washington, dated January 28, 2012. The need for the increase is a substantial increase in the rates charged the City by the Bonneville Power Administration, the City's wholesale electrical energy supplier. A copy of the study is available for public inspection at the City Clerk's office at located at 941 - 18th Street, Heyburn, Idaho.

Dated this 27th day of February, 2012.

NOTICE

The Department of Health and Welfare is seeking to identify community-based nonprofits and government agencies that show the interest, ability and financial stability to implement and operate an Individual Development Account (IDA) Program in Idaho. IDA projects help participants save earned income in special-purpose, matched savings accounts. Every dollar in savings deposited into an IDA by participants is matched by the project, promoting savings and enabling participants to acquire a lasting asset. Upon successful completion of the program, IDA project families use their savings, including the matching funds, to achieve any of three objectives: acquiring a first home; capitalizing a small business; or enrolling in postsecondary education or training.

All IDA projects must provide basic financial management training and supportive services, such as financial education on owning and managing a bank account or a credit card; credit counseling and repair; guidance in accessing refundable tax credits, including the Earned Income Tax Credit and the Child Tax Credit; and specialized training in owning particular assets for the long term. Subgrantees spending $500,000.00 or more in federal funds during the subgrantee's fiscal year shall have an audit performed in accordance with Circular A-133 and provide proof.

The Department will award up to $100,000 per year to the successful agency. Awards may be made to multiple agencies. Each subgrant will be awarded for a 2-year period. Continuation and/or expansion of IDAs subgrants will be dependent on the availability of federal funding. Funding for this program comes from the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) Block Grant CFDA# 93.558.

Applications to apply for an IDA subgrant may be obtained at Health and Welfare website: <http://healthandwelfare.idaho.gov/FoodCashAssistance/CashAssistance/CashAssistanceforFamilies/tabid/172/Default.aspx>.

Proposals must be received by Program Manager: Rosie Andueza at the Department of Health and Welfare at anduezar@dhw.idaho.gov; or by mail at 450 W. State Street, Boise, ID 83720 by 5:00 pm Mountain Standard Time Friday April 20th, 2012.

Today is Wednesday, March 21, the 81st day of 2011. There are 285 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 21, 1963, the Alcatraz federal prison island in San Francisco Bay was emptied of its last inmates at the order of Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1556, Thomas Crammer, the former Archbishop of Canterbury, was burned at the stake for heresy.

In 1685, composer Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach, Germany.

In 1804, the French civil code, or the "Code Napoleon" as it was later called, was adopted.

In 1806, Mexican statesman Benito Juarez was born in the state of Oaxaca.

In 1871, journalist Henry M. Stanley began his famous expedition in Africa to locate the missing Scottish missionary David Livingstone.

In 1907, U.S. Marines arrived in Honduras to protect American lives and interests in the wake of political violence.

In 1940, a new government was formed in France by Paul Reynaud, who became prime minister, succeeding Edouard Daladier.

In 1960, about 70 people were killed in Sharpeville, South Africa, when police fired on black protesters.

In 1962, the first Taco Bell restaurant was opened by Glen Bell in Downey, Calif.

In 1965, more than 3,000 civil rights demonstrators led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. began their march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala.

In 1972, the Supreme Court, in Dunn v. Blumstein, ruled that states may not require at least a year's residency for voting eligibility.

In 1985, police in Langa, South Africa, opened fire on blacks marching to mark the 25th anniversary of Sharpeville; the reported death toll varied between 29 and 43.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush began a four-day trip to Latin America. Marjorie Knoller, whose two huge dogs had mauled neighbor Diane Whipple to death in their San Francisco apartment building, was convicted in Los Angeles of second-degree murder; her husband, Robert Noel, was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter. (The judge later threw out the murder conviction against Knoller, replacing it with manslaughter, but the murder conviction was reinstated by an appeals court.) Alexei Yagudin won the men's title at the World Figure Skating Championships in Nagano, Japan. Former Georgia governor and U.S. senator Herman Talmadge died in Hampton, Ga., at age 88.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"You make your own luck, Gig. You know what makes a good loser? Practice."

— Ernest Hemingway

This week's deals come from last year's Spring Nationals at Louisville, to mark the fact that this week the 2012 Spring Nationals are being held in Memphis.

In this deal from the second semifinial session of the Norman Kay Platinum Pairs, the field played four spades with the North-South cards — a perfectly reasonable spot, doomed on the lead of the diamond queen by East.

Josh Parker and Bruce Rogoff play a strong club system. Parker's one-spade call showed a balanced positive response, so Rogoff bid what he thought his partner could make. Now the contract was played objectively the "wrong way" up. East would have had an easy diamond lead, but West had a very unattractive diamond holding to lead from.

On the lead of the club jack, Parker put up dummy's queen. East took the ace and correctly continued with a club to remove the entry to the South hand. Parker won, went to the heart ace to unblock the suit, and now had to try to build an entry to his hand. To put maximum pressure on the defenders, he led the spade nine from dummy. East cracked under the pressure and put up the queen. So now Parker was able to get to hand with the spade 10 to pitch two of dummy's diamonds on the top hearts, then lead up to the diamond king for plus 420.

If East had ducked the first spade lead smoothly, declarer might well have gone wrong.

ANSWER: As a passed hand, you can afford to bid two hearts. It is easy to see that there are deals where you can make four hearts, or that hearts might be the best strain. If your partner is desperately short in hearts, he will know that you, as a passed hand, won't hold a good six-card suit, and so can convert to a better spot.

DEAR ABBY: At a recent dinner party the men and women got into a heated debate about porn. The men said men love porn because it shows women enjoying sex with abandon. We women protested that women who behave this way in real life are labeled "sluts" by both men and women. Do men not realize this makes no sense? If you can't answer this, maybe your male readers can.

— NO FAN OF PORN

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR NO FAN: Not being an expert on the subject of pornography or why men enjoy it, I posed your question to a recognized expert — Larry Flynt. His answer is different than the one given by the men at the dinner party. He said that men love porn because men are aroused by the visual. Then he added that women are more turned on by the written word, which is why torrid romance novels are so popular.

P.S. Women who enjoy sex with abandon are not necessarily "sluts." Many of them have high morals, are very happily married, and find it stimulating to watch porn with their husbands.

DEAR ABBY: I'm getting married this summer. I want to send an invitation to my brother, but I don't want his live-in girlfriend to come. We used to be friends until I realized she was lying to me and using me. Now she's with my brother, who is 23 years older than she is, which caused a rift in my relationship with him. We barely talk anymore.

I know I should be more understanding because it's my brother's life. He enjoys her company. But I find her hospitality fake — just like the smile she puts on. She's not welcome at my wedding.

I want my brother there, but I'll feel terrible if he feels alone. What's the best way to handle this? Should I tell him verbally that only he is invited and not send an invitation?

— WANTS A

HAPPY WEDDING IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR WANTS A HAPPY WEDDING: Telling your brother with whom you are no longer close that his live-in girlfriend isn't welcome at your wedding is sure to go over like a lead balloon. If you want him to be there, accept that his girlfriend is part of the package deal. You can bank on the fact that he would feel alone without her, so plan on seating them some distance from your table at the reception. It will make her presence less painful for you.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Justin," and I are in our early 20s. We were high school sweethearts and we have a little girl together. Everything was going well until Justin went to a car lot to look for a car for his mother. He came home that day with a new one. My problem is he used the money he told me he was saving for my engagement ring as the down payment.

I am very hurt. I tried to seem happy and excited for him, but he knew I was upset and says I'm being "ridiculous." At this rate, with the new car and the insurance for it almost doubled, I don't see how he'll have anything put away for a ring in the near future.

I have told Justin I don't care about the size or the price of the ring, it's the thought behind it that counts. Justin still says he wants to get me an expensive one.

I'm beginning to think he's making excuses so he won't have to propose to me anytime soon. What do you think?

— ENGAGED-IN-WAITING IN OHIO

DEAR ENGAGED-IN-WAITING: I think you nailed it!

IF MARCH 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your creative faculties may be lit like a candle in the year ahead. Write down the inspiring ideas and thoughts that occur to you in the next six to eight weeks and they may help you in the future. A muse may enter your life, but don't be too gullible about true love. If you need to make an important commitment or begin anything of primary importance, it will be best to wait until August when Lady Luck smiles on everything you begin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put your creativity to the test. You are capable of achieving anything if you put your mind to it, so let your imagination run wild and produce a masterpiece. Enthusiasm is a plus, but don't exceed your abilities. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make some waves. To earn recognition and rewards for your hard work, you must go the extra mile. Don't wait for success to come to you, go find it on your own. Make a favorable impression. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep it professional. You may feel that you can let your hair down while working on a project. Remain aware that Big Brother is watching and only those who follow the book will earn recognition. CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can't please all of the people all of the time. Your latest project may not have won accolades even with your best efforts. The problem may not be your work, but the unrealistic goals of superiors. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't settle for second place. You'll get nowhere unless you strive to be the very best. Even if your efforts fall short, you find satisfaction in knowing that you tried. If you keep at it, success won't be far behind. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Open up the books. Go over finances and find ways to improve the situation. Remember that little things add up over time. Anticipate the unexpected and keep something stashed away for rainy days. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Go for the gold. You can stick with the normal routine and just get by or you can stretch yourself towards achieving something truly great. If you want to become a star, you have to give a maximum effort. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you talk the talk, you'd better walk the walk. Practice what you preach through action and not just through flowery words. Great leaders make things happen; don't just read the teleprompter. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Demonstrate by doing rather than talking. To get ahead, you must create results and the only way to do this is by putting your nose firmly to the grindstone. Actions speak louder than words. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practice makes perfect. Even the best hitters in the majors are likely to strike out if they haven't honed their swing in batting practice. Don't start any new projects unless you have prepared yourself. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can't judge a book by its cover. Beauty may have no true talent and vice versa. Look beneath the surface to find out if a pretty face has some substance behind it or is just window dressing. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Rise to the occasion. Your intuitions are in tune with events. You can rely on your instincts to guide you through the most difficult challenges. Don't be afraid to leap right into any task that comes your way.

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

HE WAS RUNNING BEHIND WITH HIS MUSTARD DELIVERIES AND NEEDED TO DO THIS.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

WARNING
When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (exception: Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number, amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
