Jerome Soldier Killed in Afghanistan

Defense officials say 27-year-old Daniel Brown died Saturday in IED attack in Kandahar province.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • U.S. Army Sgt. Daniel Brown, a 27-year-old Jerome resident, died Saturday while serving in Afghanistan.

The U.S. Department of Defense confirmed Monday that Brown died as a result of wounds suffered when enemy forces attacked his unit with an improvised explosive device in the Kandahar province.

Family members requested privacy, according to the Idaho Army National Guard, but issued a statement about Brown.

"Dan will be missed by his family and friends. He loved the company of others and was a friend to everyone he knew, because he always put others before himself."

Brown leaves behind his wife, Jordan Brown, and their 3-month-old twin daughters, Mattie and Marlee. Survivors also include his brother, Matt; his parents, Becky and Jerry Brown; and grandparents Lee and Barbara Urie.

Brown

Brown was assigned to Fort Carson, Colo.-based 2nd Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 4th Infantry Division.

Although Brown wasn't a member of the Idaho Army National Guard, the state's guard is providing assistance to his family.

Col. Tim Marsano, public affairs officer for the Idaho Army National Guard, said information about Brown's funeral service isn't yet available.

Marsano met with Brown's family Monday. He said an obituary — with information on when a service will be held — should be coming in a few days.

Chris Webb, a local casualty assistance officer, is working with the family to handle funeral arrangements.

ONE OFF THE LIST

One of three former Twin Falls meth labs tracked by the state has been cleaned up, with lessons learned in the process.

TWIN FALLS • It took patience, time and work, but Don Patterson finally got his father's property removed from a list no one would want their home to be on.

The property, at 552 Second Ave. E. in Twin Falls, was one of a few dozen on a public list of sites of former drug labs, tracked by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

It was officially removed from the list on Feb. 28, dropping the number of listed properties in Twin Falls to two. The Times-News reported in November on the three homes, which all reportedly had labs for making methamphetamine somewhere on each property.

That story prompted Patterson's efforts to redeem his father's house — which was listed not because of the home itself, but a trailer out back.

Patterson's father, Donald Patterson, and his wife are in their 80s. Going through the ordeal of a drug raid on their property and being in the news was tough on them, Don Patterson said.

Contreras to Serve Probation in Kidnapping Case

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A 29-year-old Twin Falls woman will serve three years of probation for taking her son from his father's home.

Stefanie Marie Contreras was sentenced for conspiracy to commit custodial interference to two to five years in prison, which was suspended for three years of supervised probation. She will also be required to earn her GED and must have no contact with her 4-year-old son unless ordered by a court.

Charges of custodial interference and burglary were dismissed under a plea agreement. The sentence was handed down Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Senior Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway recommended the sentence, which Judge Randy Stoker agreed to.

Kelvin Milo Jr., 21, will be sentenced April 16 for child custody interference.

Daniel Thomas, 35, is charged with unlawful possession of a weapon by a felon. No hearings are currently scheduled because of separate, pending charges.

What Do You Do With a Drug House?

In cases where a house was the site of a drug lab, it might need to be demolished or burned down if authorities decide the contamination is too great to be washed away.

In the case of lower levels of contamination, a property owner can clean it themselves or contract with someone else to do it.

"That's washing down the walls one, two, three or four times with basic soap and water, cleaning ceilings, a coat of paint," said Jim Faust, the indoor environment program manager at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "Then the big thing is to hire a certified industrial hygienist."

The hygienist takes samples throughout the house, especially ventilation systems and the suspected location of a meth cooking area. The samples are then sent to a lab, which will determine what chemicals are left at the site.

The current indoor cleanup level for meth in Idaho is .1 micrograms per 100 square centimeters. If that standard is not met, and it usually isn't on the first try, the cleaning process starts again, Faust said.

Twin Falls police and the Idaho State Police investigate a suspected methamphetamine lab at 528 Fourth Ave. W. in February 2008 in Twin Falls.

A Quiet Death

With the Legislature wrapping up, not every proposal gets a clean finish. Here are a few that will fade away this week.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • There's more than one way to kill a bill.

The majority of bills introduced in any given legislative session never make it to the governor's desk. While a death by may votes gets a bill the most attention, there are other, quieter ways Statehouse proposals meet their ends.

House and Senate committee chairmen can refuse to give a bill a hearing once it's passed the other side of the rotunda, and sponsors can pull their own proposals for a host of reasons. And if a bill is still making its way through the process when the Legislature adjourns, it's the end of the line.

That's a fate awaiting a few high-profile bills this session, including S.1387, which would require women seeking an abortion to get an ultrasound. That bill, which passed the Senate last week, is headed to a

Much of T.F. Council Bows out of Grant Talk

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • No one can accuse Twin Falls City Council members of not being involved in their community.

During Monday's meeting, half of the council members made a surprise announcement that they would bow out of an upcoming Municipal Powers Outsource Grant allocation process. The fund is awarded to local nonprofits that provide services the city should provide, but doesn't.

Council members Shawn Barigar, Don Hall and Rebecca Mills Sojka all cited some sort of conflict of interest with the grant applicants. Councilman Lance Clow wasn't present at the meeting and it wasn't made clear if he, too, has any tie to the applicant pool.

Before announcing their conflict of interest, the council voted 5-1 that the 15 applicants will deliver a five-minute presentation on why they're seeking a grant at next week's meeting. Councilman Don Hall voted against the motion.

The council also decided to move the meeting's start time to 4 p.m. that day to include time for all applicants presentations, a public hearing, and hashing out who will get a grant and how much.

"It's going to be a good old roundtable of democracy," said Councilman Chris Talkington.

Kidnapping

Holloway said Contreras hatched the plan with several co-conspirators to take her son away from his father, Jason Bearce, because of his drug abuse and physical and psychological abuse against her.

While Contreras may have had good reasons for wanting her son away from Bearce, she went about it in the wrong way, Holloway said. He also acknowledged she was helpful to police and her interviews pieced together the day's events.

The night of Nov. 29, Contreras, with a gun in her purse, went to Bearce's home and spent the night there, Holloway said. In the morning, she and several men took several loads of her possessions out to a waiting van. Finally, Contreras went into the bedroom to take her son, but Bearce awoke and followed her into the living room where he was met by two men with guns. One of the men, allegedly Daniel Thomas, was accused of shooting at Bearce with a semi-automatic pistol from about 10 feet away. The bullet hit a wall and Milo pushed Bearce out of the way while Contreras fled with her son.

A few hours later, the two were found at a house in the Sun Valley area and Contreras was arrested. The child was unharmed, police said.

At the sentencing hearing, Contreras said she was sorry and never wanted guns to get involved in the dispute — she just wanted her son away from a dangerous situation. If she could do it all over again, she said she would still take her son away from his father, but do it through the court system. She is currently pursuing custody of the boy.

Stoker noted a pre-sentence investigator thought Contreras wasn't taking the situation seriously, and also pointed out she had said she would "probably" take her son from Bearce through legal means. He also emphasized the weapons used in the crime made it a serious offense.

"You can't un-ring that bell," he said.

CORRECTION

Council Bid Information Incorrect

Monday's preview of this week's Twin Falls City Council meeting included incorrect information about two non-responsive bids for a city communications tower project. Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts said the bids were deemed non-responsive because the companies failed to submit required paperwork. If the project is re-bid, the companies can re-submit their proposals.

CSI Employees Could Get Raises Next Year

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • Come next school year, College of Southern Idaho employees could see larger paychecks.

President Jerry Beck told college trustees Monday night that he's recommending a 2 percent increase in compensation for faculty and staff members.

Trustees didn't make a decision Monday. The item will come back for action next month.

Beck's recommendation is in line with a state higher education budget that passed the Idaho House earlier this month. The budget includes a 2 percent pay increase for public college and university employees.

During the Monday meeting, CSI's board also held off on setting student tuition rates for the next school year. During their meeting, CSI trustees:

CSI Vice President of Administration Mike Mason said it will be a joint project with the city of Jerome, funded by the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security.

Approved a board meeting schedule for fiscal year 2013, which begins in July.

The board will meet the third Monday of each month. The exception will be the March meeting, which will be moved up one week to avoid spring break.

A budget hearing is scheduled for Aug. 20.

Approved CSI's strategic plan for 2012-2017.

Edit Szanto, vice president of student services, said student learning and success play a large role. That includes focusing on retention and graduation rates.

school year.

Beck said a work session on the topic will be held next week.

A recommendation will be made after that about what to do with tuition rates, including keeping them the same as this year or approving an increase.

Students from Twin Falls and Jerome counties currently pay $110 per credit. Full-time students pay $1,320 per semester.

ARRESTS MADE IN T.F. FAIRGROUNDS ARSON

TIMES-NEWS

FILER • Deputies have arrested a man they say set fire to a trailer on the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer.

Roman Barbier, 19, was arraigned Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on a charge of arson in the third degree, a felony.

According to deputies, Barbier and a group of juveniles entered the fairgrounds on Saturday afternoon. The group entered a 26-foot camp trailer located inside Beef Barn No. 4 with the intent to burn it down, according to court documents.

Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies came to the assistance of Filer police after hearing about a large fire at the fairgrounds over the radio. By the time they arrived, Filer Fire Department personnel had extinguished the flames, but deputies noted lighter fluid and fire damage on a tire cover two trailers away from the camper that was completely destroyed.

Filer police were able to identify a juvenile male from video surveillance who was brought in for questioning. The boy told police he and several others, including Barbier, entered the barn to play.

According to deputies, Barbier admitted to starting the fire after spraying WD-40 in a bedroom of the trailer.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 6.

MAN STILL CRITICAL AFTER SHOOTING

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Police are not yet releasing the name of a 27-year-old man who was reportedly accidentally shot Saturday afternoon.

Police responded to 864 Rosewood Drive for a report of an accidental shooting. The victim was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was stabilized and then flown to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

The man is still in critical condition, Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts said Monday afternoon.

More information on the ongoing investigation will be released today, Stotts said.

No one was arrested directly after the shooting and police said they were not looking for suspects in the case.

No Boost for Bike Safety

Proposals to establish minimum passing distances around bicyclists have stalled in Minidoka County, Capitol.

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A bill to improve bicycle safety in Idaho has failed to reach a committee vote, and will die in the waning days of this year's legislative session.

H.586 was introduced by Rep. Roy Lacey, D-Pocatello, but stalled after its introduction and has been dormant for about two weeks. It would have required drivers to give bicyclists extra space while passing them on the state's roads, but after Lacey's fellow legislators sent it back for revision, its progress halted.

"Rather than take a chance on bad legislation, I'm just going to let it die there," Lacey said Monday, adding that some legislators wanted to amend the bill in ways that would have "ruined the bicycling experience for cyclists."

Similar bills have been introduced four times, only to fail. This is the second try by Lacey, a cyclist himself.

His proposal would have banned motorists from passing bicyclists or runners, horseback riders or people in wheelchairs when there's oncoming traffic unless they can safely do so while maintaining at least a three-foot separation between the vehicle's outermost right side and the person being passed.

To prevent worries of traffic jams, the bill would have required bicyclists to turn off the roadway when three or more vehicles line up behind them. It would also order them to ride single file and as close to the right side of the road as possible.

Bills

hearing in House State Affairs — one that's unlikely to happen this year. The same fate may await a Senate bill to restore cuts to teacher salaries and a House tax cut bill, if the Legislature's chambers remain locked in an ideological standoff.

Here are three other proposals that may not make it on the books this session:

Tax credits for agriculture: This legislation would have offered tax credits of up to 30 percent for businesses that added value to agriculture products, like turning wheat into flour, or milk into cheese. The bill passed the House 62-6 last week.

But the Senate won't debate it — at least not this year. Sen. Tim Corder, chairman of the Local Government and Taxation Committee, said he isn't planning a hearing for the bill. It's not fair to offer the credit to only ag businesses, the Mountain Home Republican said.

"It's just not good policy," Corder said.

But we haven't heard the last of the proposal, said sponsoring Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding. She hopes to bring back similar legislation again next session.

Anti-bullying: The legislation, sponsored by Sen. Nicole LeFavour, D-Boise, would create a law outlining school districts' and teachers' responsibilities when it comes to preventing bullying. It passed the Senate and is currently awaiting a hearing in the House Education Committee.

That committee's chairman — Rep. Bob Nonini, R-Coeur d'Alene — said Monday he hasn't made a decision on the bill. With only a few days left in the session, that indecision may prove to be a death sentence for the issue.

But Ismael Fernandez is determined to revive the anti-bullying bill.

The 15-year-old from Wilder spent Monday meeting with House members in an attempt to convince them to give the bill a public hearing. He told them his experiences being bullied verbally and physically.

Nonini said there's still time for discussion to resurface.

"We'll still be here for a few more days, I'm sure," he said.

Over-the-border students: Earlier in the session, Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, introduced legislation that would help the Bruneau-Grand View School District negotiate a better price with Nevada officials for students sent to school in the Silver State.

The bill passed the Senate Education Committee, but on Monday, co-sponsor Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, pulled it from the calendar. The reason: Nevada officials had already agreed to take $80,000 off the cost of educating those 60 students, Hartgen said.

Though the bill didn't get passed, Hartgen called the effort a success.

"It's not every day you can get the result without passing the bill," he said.

Cleanup

Nearly four years ago, his brother Dale was convicted and sentenced to prison for making and selling meth from a trailer in the backyard of their property.

After police make a drug bust on a lab, the address of the property is sent to Jim Faust, the indoor environment program manager at Health and Welfare.

Sometimes, Faust said, he hears back immediately from homeowners who are eager to begin the clean-up process. Other times, he never hears from them at all.

"A lot of them ignore it, they throw it away, they don't care," Faust said.

Don Patterson worked diligently to get the property clean, calling Faust often, Patterson said.

"It was kind of back and forth," Patterson said. "We did a little bit at a time."

First, he disposed of the contents of the trailer. He was then told he'd need to get rid of the entire camper, metal frame and all, because of contamination.

Though Patterson tried to recycle the frame, he learned from Health and Welfare that it had to be destroyed.

Despite some frustrations, Patterson said the process was fairly straightforward. After producing a receipt from the landfill showing the trailer had been received, the property was cleared from the list.

Another property that's still listed is unoccupied at 2555 Alderwood Ave. The house has been vacant since August 2010, when it was foreclosed upon. Even an auction has failed to produce a buyer.

Monday, a notice was taped in a front window stating the house had been winterized and listed contact information in case of emergency.

Mitch Campbell is a landlord of a property that remains on the list, at 528 Fourth Ave. W.

Campbell said he started looking again last week at removing the property from the list. He said he put in two calls to Health and Welfare's 800 number and hasn't heard anything yet.

After the property was in the Times-News's November story, Campbell hired an environmental consulting service to test the house and said the group found no trace of chemicals. The lab was in a shed behind the house and a hazardous materials crew cleared the shack of meth-related materials, so Campbell said he thought the house was fine to live in.

Even though the house remains on the list, renters currently live at the residence. While he doesn't inform residents himself of the property's past, a property manager who shows the house to prospective tenants has the information, Campbell said.

The law that created the list of former drug labs states no one should live on an actively listed property, but it happens, Faust said. Neither Health and Welfare nor local police are responsible for enforcing that rule, something Faust would like to change.

He'd also like to see a deadline for how soon the cleanup process must begin. "Would 12 or 18 months be too much to ask?"

Felony Animal Cruelty Punishment Moves Forward

Separate proposals by the House and Senate may meld into one to develop Idaho's first felony animal cruelty punishment.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Idaho's first felony punishment for animal cruelty isn't off the table yet.

This session, the Idaho House and Senate each produced legislation to toughen the state's animal cruelty laws. Both bills stalled, but the House is moving to amend the Senate's version and make it law before the session ends.

The original Senate bill would have created a felony for the third charge of animal abuse with malicious intent. Those three strikes would have to occur within a 15-year period, and would not apply to normal agricultural animal practices, like branding or castrating.

The bill passed the full Senate and the House Agriculture Committee, but had been sitting on the reading calendar until Monday. And while the House passed its own version, Senate Agriculture Committee chairman Jeff Siddoway, R-Terreton, won't hold a hearing for it.

At a Monday joint meeting of the House and Senate agriculture committees, Siddoway said he polled colleagues.

"I think I have only one member on the committee that's willing to take (the House bill) and move it forward," Siddoway said. "I'm not going to ask my committee to bleed over this."

Sen. Dan Schmidt, D-Moscow, was one of those against hearing the House version. He doesn't feel there's enough time in the session to adequately consider the matter, especially after all the work that went into the Senate legislation, he said.

After the joint meeting, the House declared its solution: Add amendments to the Senate's bill to include anti-cockfighting provisions, and abandon the torture definitions for this session.

If the amended legislation passes the House, it will return to the Senate, but bypass Siddoway's committee.

Lisa Kauffman, Idaho State Director for the Humane Society of the United States, said she was heartened by the move.

Another sign of progress, she said: The livestock industry has agreed to come together with the Humane Society for a summer working group to consider future pieces of animal cruelty legislation, a move she appreciated.

"I fully understand where the ranching and cattle and production animal industry is coming from," Kauffman said.

Unrest

committee considered a bill that would allow the Department of Administration to manage facilities, including the lawn of the old Ada County Courthouse, where Occupy Boise protesters have camped since November. During testimony, Idaho State Police had to escort out Occupiers who disrupted the meeting.

Then United Action of Idaho showed up with their rain-soaked boxes, dumping them outside legislator's offices.

At 2:30 p.m., Boise resident Sue Philley dropped off a petition with more than 5,000 signatures from Idahoans asking Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to veto the proposed pre-abortion ultrasound mandate if it shows up on his desk. An hour and a half later, more than 200 people gathered in front of the Capitol to support the same legislation, with some praying on the steps and holding American flags as speakers from Right to Life Idaho and the Cornerstone Institute spoke.

They were scheduled to rally until 6 p.m.; an hour later, a vigil opposing the bill would take their place.

There is, it appears, no rest for the unrest.

Jeannine Howard of Boise was among those urging lawmakers to vote for the ultrasound mandate, which is currently being held in committee, its fate uncertain.

"I think it's against women not doing this," Howard said, adding women deserve full access to the medical information ultrasounds provide.

Are the legislators listening? Howard thought so. The protesters with United Vision for Idaho disagreed, as they showed with a faux eviction notice.

"You are hereby required, by order of the people, to quit and vacate these premises within three days of this notice, having been judged guilty of failing to pay attention during the period of your tenancy," the notice said.

The U.S. Army's Fort Carson Public Affairs Office didn't have information Monday afternoon about what Brown's unit was tasked with in Afghanistan.

The U.S. Department of Defense states in its announcement that Brown was supporting Operation Enduring Freedom.

In their statement, family members said Brown felt called to join the Army after the events of Sept. 11, 2001.

Brown was a Jerome High School graduate. Superintendent Dale Layne said Monday that there isn't a record of what year Brown graduated in the district's current computer system.

Layne said he doesn't know much about Brown, but heard the young man never had a chance to see his twin girls after they were born.

Brown's family remembers him as a leader, as well as an athlete who loved football and baseball.

"For his Jerome High school senior project, he began a mentoring program to help younger kids excel at baseball," according to the family's statement.

Police Reveal Details of Florida Shooter's Account

BY RENE STUTZMAN
The Orlando Sentinel (MCT)

SANFORD, Fla. • With a single punch, Trayvon Martin decked the neighborhood watch volunteer who eventually shot to death the unarmed 17-year-old, then Trayvon climbed on top of George Zimmerman and slammed his head into the sidewalk several times, leaving him bloody and battered, authorities have revealed to The Orlando Sentinel.

That is the account Zimmerman gave police, and much of it has been corroborated by witnesses, authorities say.

Zimmerman has not spoken publicly about what happened, but that night, Feb. 26, and in later meetings he described and reenacted for police what he says happened.

In his version of events, he had turned around and was walking back to his SUV when Trayvon approached him from behind, the two exchanged words then Trayvon punched him in the nose, sending him to the ground, and began beating him.

Zimmerman told police he shot the teenager in self-defense.

Civil rights leaders and thousands of others have demanded Zimmerman's arrest, calling Trayvon a victim of racial profiling and Zimmerman a vigilante.

Trayvon was an unarmed black teenager who had committed no crime, they say, who was gunned down while walking back from a 7-Eleven with nothing more sinister than a package of Skittles and can of Arizona iced tea.

Supporters have held rallies in Sanford, Miami, New York and Tallahassee, calling the case a tragic miscarriage of justice.

The Rev. Al Sharpton headlined a rally in Sanford Thursday that drew an estimated 8,000 people. The Rev. Jesse Jackson Sunday spoke at an Eatonville, Fla., church, where he called Trayvon a martyr.

Zimmerman has gone into hiding. A fringe group, the New Black Panthers, have offered a $10,000 reward for his capture.

Police have been reluctant to provide details about all their evidence, but this is what they've disclosed to the Sentinel:

Zimmerman was on his way to the grocery store when he spotted Trayvon walking through his gated community.

Trayvon was visiting his father's fiancée, who lived there. He had been suspended from school in Miami after being found with an empty marijuana baggie. Miami schools have a zero-tolerance policy for drug possession.

Zimmerman called police and reported a suspicious person, describing Trayvon as black, acting strangely and perhaps on drugs.

Zimmerman got out of his SUV to follow Trayvon on foot. When a dispatch employee asked Zimmerman if he was following the 17-year-old, Zimmerman said yes. The dispatcher told Zimmerman he did not need to do that.

There is about a one-minute gap during which police say they're not sure what happened.

Zimmerman told them he lost sight of Trayvon and was walking back to his SUV when Trayvon approached him from the left rear, and they exchanged words.

Trayvon asked Zimmerman if he had a problem. Zimmerman said no and reached for his cell phone, he told police.

Trayvon then said, "Well, you do now" or something similar and punched Zimmerman in the nose.

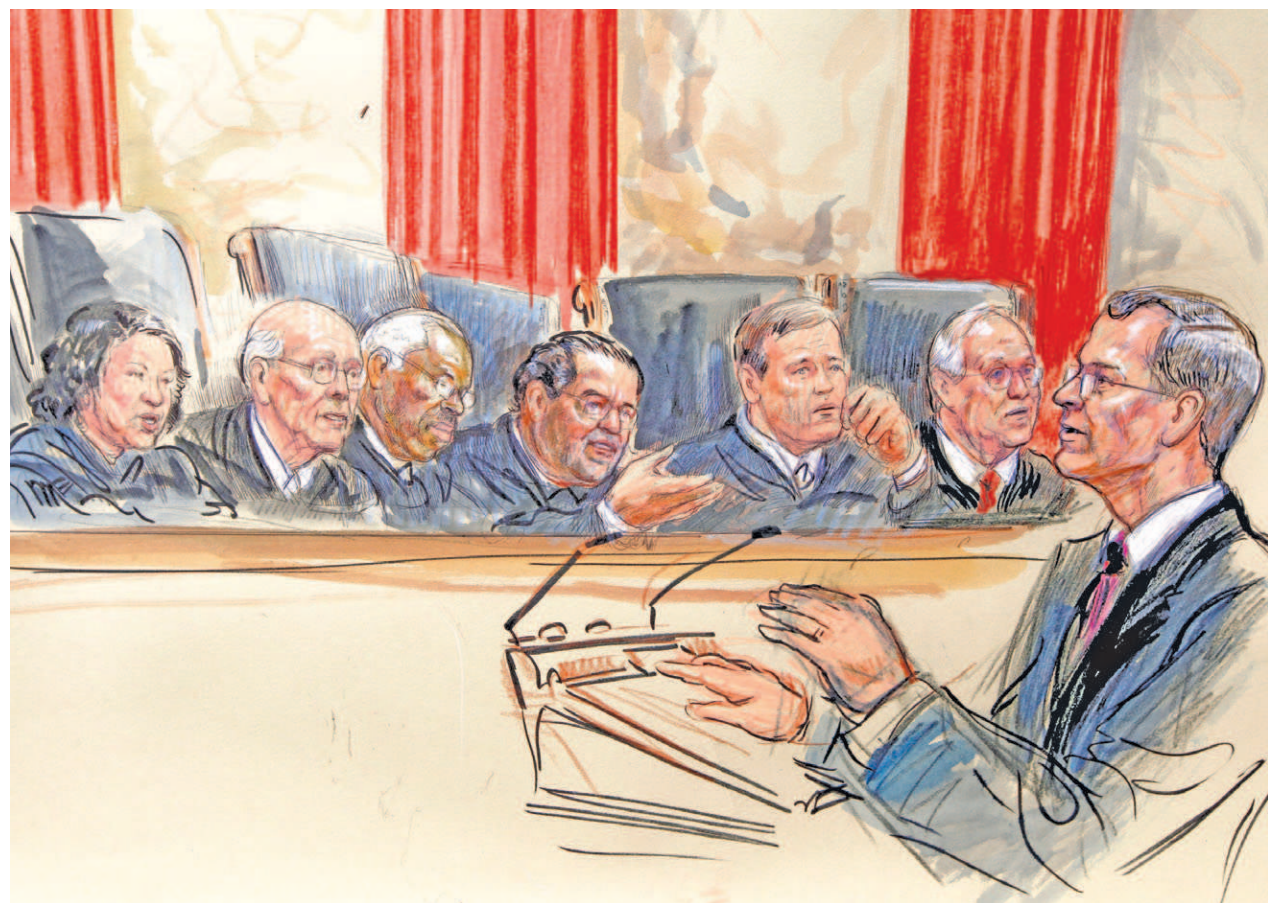

Zimmerman fell to the ground and Trayvon got on top of him and began slamming his head into the sidewalk, he told police.

Zimmerman began yelling for help.

Several witnesses heard those cries, and there has been a dispute about from whom they came: Zimmerman or Trayvon.

Lawyers for Trayvon's family say it was Trayvon, but police say their evidence indicates it was Zimmerman.

One witness, who has since talked to local television news reporters, told police he saw Zimmerman on the ground with Trayvon on top, pounding him and was unequivocal that it was Zimmerman who was crying for help.

Supreme Court Doesn't Punt on Health Care

Justices moved Monday to the heart of Obama's health care overhaul, signaling they wouldn't use an obscure tax law to delay the case.

BY MARK SHERMAN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • As demonstrations swirled outside, Supreme Court justices signaled on Monday they are ready to confront without delay the keep-or-kill questions at the heart of challenges to President Barack Obama's historic health care overhaul. Virtually every American will be affected by the outcome, due this summer in the heat of the election campaign.

On the first of three days of arguments — the longest in decades — none of the justices appeared to embrace the contention that it was too soon for a decision.

Outside the packed courtroom, marching and singing demonstrators on both sides — including doctors in white coats, a Republican presidential candidate and even a brass quartet — voiced their eagerness for the court to either uphold or throw out the largest expansion in the nation's social safety net since Medicare was enacted in 1965.

Tuesday's arguments will focus on the heart of the case, the provision that aims to extend medical insurance to 30 million more Americans by requiring everyone to carry insurance or pay a penalty.

A decision is expected by late June as Obama fights for re-election. All of his Republican challengers oppose the law and promise its repeal if the high court hasn't struck it down in the meantime.

On Monday, the justices took on the question of whether an obscure tax law could derail the case.

The 19th century law bars tax disputes from being heard in the courts before the taxes have been paid.

Under the new health care law, Americans who don't purchase health insurance would have to report that omission on their tax returns for 2014 and would pay a penalty along with federal income tax on returns due by April 2015. Among the issues facing the court is whether that penalty is a tax.

Solicitor General Donald Verrilli Jr., defending the health law, urged the court to focus on what he called "the issues of great moment" at the heart of the case. The 26 states and a small business group challenging the law also want the court to go ahead and decide on its constitutionality without delay.

But one lower court that heard the case, the federal appeals court in Richmond, Va., has said the challenge is premature. No justice seemed likely to buy that argument Monday.

'Pink Slime' Maker Suspends Some Plant Operations

BY BETSY BLANEY

Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas • The maker of "pink slime" suspended operations Monday at all but one plant where the beef ingredient is made, acknowledging recent public uproar over the product has cost the company business.

Craig Letch, director of food quality and assurance for Beef Products Inc., declined to discuss financial details, but said business has taken a "substantial" hit since social media exploded with worry over the ammonia-treated filler and an online petition seeking its ouster from schools drew hundreds of thousands of supporters. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has decided school districts may stop using it and some retail chains have pulled products containing it from their shelves.

Federal regulators say the product, which has been used for years and is known in the industry as "lean, finely textured beef," meets food safety standards. But critics call the product an unappetizing example of industrialized food production.

Beef Products will suspend operations at plants in Amarillo, Texas; Garden City, Kan.; and Waterloo, Iowa, Letch said. About 200 employees at each of the three plants will get full salary and benefits for 60 days during the suspension. The company's plant at its Dakota Dunes, S.D., headquarters will continue operations.

The company, meanwhile, will develop a strategy for rebuilding business and addressing what Letch called misconceptions about the beef the company makes.

"We feel like when people can start to understand the truth and reality then our business will come back," he said. "It's 100 percent beef."

The company last week took out a full-page ad in the Wall Street Journal defending its product. It also launched a new website, <http://beefisbeef.com>, which Letch says will help dispel myths about pink slime — a term coined by a federal microbiologist grossed out by it and now widely used by critics and food activists.

The lower-cost ingredient is made from fatty bits of meat left over from other cuts. The bits are heated and spun to remove most of the fat. The lean mix then is compressed into blocks for use in ground meat. The product is exposed to ammonium hydroxide gas to kill bacteria, such as E. coli and salmonella.

The result is a product that is as much as 97 percent lean beef, Letch said.

AFGHAN SECURITY FORCES KILL 3 NATO TROOPS

BY DEB RIECHMANN

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • Afghan security forces shot and killed three international troops Monday, one of them an American, in two attacks. They were the latest in a rising number of attacks in which Afghan forces have turned their weapons on their foreign partners.

The killings reflect a spike in tensions between Afghan and international forces that follow an American soldier's alleged massacre of Afghan civilians, the burning of Muslim holy books at a U.S. base, and uncertainty about Afghanistan's fate as foreign troops prepare to pull out.

They also come at a time when international troops have stepped up training and mentoring of Afghan soldiers, police and government workers so that Afghans can take the lead and the foreign forces can go home. The success of that partnership is key to the U.S.-led coalition's strategy to withdraw most foreign combat forces by the end of 2014.

Studies: Surgery Can Put Diabetes into Remission

BY MARILYNN MARCHIONE

Associated Press

CHICAGO • New research gives clear proof that weight-loss surgery can reverse and possibly cure diabetes, and doctors say the operation should be offered sooner to more people with the disease — not just as a last resort.

The two studies, released on Monday, are the first to compare stomach-reducing operations to medicines alone for "diabetes" — Type 2 diabetes brought on by obesity. Millions of Americans have this and can't make enough insulin or use what they do make to process sugar from food.

Both studies found that surgery helped far more patients achieve normal blood-sugar levels than medicines alone did.

The results were dramatic: Some people were able to stop taking insulin as soon as three days after their operations. Cholesterol and other heart risk factors also greatly improved.

Doctors don't like to say "cure" because they can't promise a disease will never come back. But in one study, most surgery patients were able to stop all diabetes drugs and have their disease stay in remission for at least two years. None of those treated with medicines alone could do that.

"It is a major advance," said Dr. John Buse of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, a leading diabetes expert who had no role in the studies.

Buse said he often recommends surgery to patients who are obese and can't control their blood-sugar through medications, but many are leery of it. "This evidence will help convince them that this really is an important therapy to at least consider," he said.

There were signs that the surgery itself — not just weight loss — helps reverse diabetes. Food makes the gut produce hormones to spur insulin, so trimming away part of it surgically may affect those hormones, doctors believe.

Senate Passes B Public Schools Budget

School funding is one of few major issues lawmakers expect to tackle.

BY CLARK CORBIN
Post Register

BOISE • Creeping closer to adjourning for the year, members of the Idaho Senate on Monday passed the 2013 public schools budget, which represents the state's biggest annual expense.

The $1.6 billion plan calls for increasing minimum teacher salaries by $500 to $30,500 and funding the technology expansion mandated by the Students Come First laws.

Overall, the budget pushed by Idaho Falls Republican Sen. Dean Mortimer represents a 4.6 percent increase in state spending over this year's level. The increase is arriving after three years of drastic budget cuts.

Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna said earlier this month that total public schools funding still lags 2009 budget year levels by about $100 million.

The budget bill next moves to the House, and lawmakers cannot end this year's session without setting the schools' budget.

"I think it's important to the whole Legislature," Mortimer said. "I think it is in the mind and will of the Legislature to give as much as we have the ability to prudently give to fund K-12 education."

The budget plan passed 31-4, with four Senate Democrats opposing it.

Sen. Diane Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, said she voted against the budget because of several concerns. She said she was disappointed there was again no funding for textbooks and she questioned how the pay-for-performance component of the Students Come First laws would work.

"I still think we are increasing the size of classrooms and I can't see how we are not doing that," Bilyeu said. "$1.6 billion is a lot of money, I just don't like the way the money is being distributed."

Mortimer said the budget plan includes funding to "fix" an aspect of the Students Come First laws that diverts some money from teacher salaries into paying for expanded technology.

"We feel like we did have the money this year, as evidenced by the budget we presented," Mortimer said.

Although money is included to restore the shift away from salaries, the issue isn't resolved. Mortimer said restoring the money needs to be addressed both in the budget and in a separate new law.

The issue of the funding shift is one of three speed bumps preventing lawmakers from adjourning — with the other two being consideration of tax cuts and bolstering state reserve accounts.

This morning, members of the House Education Committee are scheduled to consider two bills that pertain to teachers' salaries. If a House agreement is reached and is palatable to senators across the hall, the deal could trigger action on the two remaining issues.

If everything lines up, lawmakers could end their session by Thursday or Friday, which is what Senate Majority Leader Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls, is pushing for.

Bonneville Joint School District 93 Superintendent Chuck Shackett said he supports the 2013 schools budget, and urged lawmakers to restore the salary funding shift before adjourning.

"I'm very pleased by (the budget)," Shackett said. "I don't feel at this time, in the economy we are in, it could be any better. This is probably the best the governor and Tom (Luna) could have put forth."

House Backs $200K for Outside Counsel

BOISE • House lawmakers have approved a $200,000 account for the Legislature to hire outside legal counsel, something majority Republicans contend is necessary because the state attorney general's office often has a conflict of interest on heated issues.

With the money at House and Senate majority leaders' disposal, however, Democrats fear this will become a slush fund for Republicans to tap when shopping for a favorable legal opinion.

The House approved the bill Monday, squarely taking aim at Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden's office. The measure now goes to the Senate for consideration.

The 53-16 vote fell largely along party lines. Three Republicans opposed the bill: Reps. Jeff Nasset, of Lewiston; Leon Smith, of Twin Falls; and Tom Trail, of Moscow.

US Supreme Court Won't Hear Bible Case

BOISE • A defunct Idaho charter school exhausted its appeals Monday in a legal battle with state officials who barred the use of the Bible and other religious texts as a historical teaching tool in the classroom.

The U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear Nampa Classical Academy's federal lawsuit. The Alliance Defense Fund, an Arizona-based group representing the school's founders, expressed disappointment with the decision.

"When government officials ban the objective study of all religiously themed texts — like the Bible, the Iliad, and the Odyssey — it does nothing but dumb-down public education," said senior counsel David Cortman.

Senate Kills ATV Hunting Bill

BOISE • A measure to strip the Idaho Department of Fish and Game of the authority to regulate ATV-mounted hunters has been shot down by Senate lawmakers.

The Senate voted 20-15 against the measure, which takes aim at Fish and Game rules requiring sportsmen on ATVs in a third of Idaho's hunting units to avoid off-road vehicle trails.

Terreton Sen. Jeff Sideshow, a former Fish and Game commissioner, fears losing that authority could lead to overharvests and reduce hunting opportunities in Idaho.

Mountain Home Sen. Tim Corder pushed the measure, saying the department doesn't have legal authority to ban ATV hunting on the public trails.

Occupy Bill Heads to House

BOISE • The latest effort to settle the state's Occupy Boise quandary is headed for a hearing on the House floor.

The House State Affairs Committee voted along party lines Monday to advance the legislation, which would give the Idaho Department of Administration greater power to regulate public use of the Capitol Mall and other state-managed land.

State officials argue the measure, which would let the agency issue use permits for grounds of the old Ada County Courthouse where Occupy Boise has held a vigil since November, fixes a loophole that allowed protesters to set up camp.

They say it won't conflict with U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill's preliminary decision to let Occupiers keep their tents up on the land.

Schools Vie to Be First for Laptops

BOISE • The state is giving Idaho high schools some homework.

Schools vying to be first when Idaho starts phasing in laptops for every 9th through 12th grader have to write a five-page, double-spaced essay on their plans for the devices. The due date: April 27.

The state Department of Education detailed the application in a memo Friday to districts.

Idaho is phasing in mobile computer devices for every high school teacher and student under reforms approved last year with backing from public schools chief Tom Luna. The program starts this fall, with teachers.

Moscow Mayor Declares Emergency Due to Flooding

BOISE (AP) • City leaders in Moscow are declaring a disaster emergency in the wake of flooding from recent spring of heavy rain and warm temperatures.

Moscow Mayor Nancy Chaney issued a disaster proclamation Monday at the same time crews began placing sandbags to control specific flooding threats.

KREM-TV also reports flooding on private homes in areas south of Moscow and the nearby town of Genesee as small streams in the region spill over their banks.

Moscow's disaster declaration will remain in effect for seven days unless extended by the city council.

The National Weather Service has issued flood warnings or advisories for several north Idaho counties, including Nez Perce, Lewis and Latah.

Similar warnings and advisories are in effect for counties in southern and eastern Idaho.

Facebook Seeks Dismissal of New York Man's Lawsuit

BY JESSICA GUYNIN
Los Angeles Times (MCT)

SAN FRANCISCO • Facebook Inc. asked a federal judge to throw out a case brought by a New York state man who claims he's entitled to half of Mark Zuckerberg's multibillion-dollar stake in the social networking giant. Calling it a "fraudulent shakedown," Facebook filed the motion to dismiss the lawsuit Monday. The Menlo Park, Calif., social networking service aims to quash the case that is unfolding in federal court in Buffalo, N.Y., ahead of Facebook's initial public stock offering that could value Facebook at $100 billion or more. Paul Ceglia sued Zuckerberg and Facebook in 2010 in a dispute over a 2003 contract.

Southwest raises roundtrip fares • Southwest Airlines Co. says it's raising ticket prices to offset the high cost of jet fuel. On Monday, Southwest raised fares by between $4 and $10 per round trip, depending on the distance. It's Southwest's third increase this year, and spokesman Brad Hawkins said it's all due to higher fuel costs. According to government figures, spot prices for jet fuel are up 12 percent so far in 2012 but just 4 percent from a year ago. Southwest said this month that because it will pay more than it expected for fuel, it won't earn a profit for the first three months of the year.

Bernanke Calls U.S. Job Market Weak Despite Gains

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Chairman Ben Bernanke says the U.S. job market remains weak despite three months of strong hiring and that the Federal Reserve's existing policies will help boost economic growth.

Bernanke's comments Monday to a group of economists in Arlington, Va., drove stocks higher. Many took his cautious words about the economy to mean the Fed is likely to stick to its plan to hold short-term interest rates at record lows through 2014.

Though the hiring has helped support consumer confidence and incomes, "we have not seen that in a persuasive way yet," Bernanke said. The Fed needs to "remain cautious" in deciding what its next moves should be, he said.

Further job gains will likely require stronger consumer and business demand, Bernanke said in a speech to the National Association for Business Economics spring conference.

The association has 2,500 member economists who work for corporations, universities, the government and trade associations. Bernanke was addressing the group for the first time since 2008.

After Bernanke spoke, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 160 points, its third-biggest gain of the year. Broader indexes also increased.

The surge in hiring since December had led some economists to predict that the Fed might consider raising rates earlier than planned. But many took Bernanke's cautious tone as a firmer commitment to the late-2014 timetable.

And some viewed the speech as a signal that the Fed might take further steps, if the economy falters, to try to further drive down long-term borrowing rates. The goal would be to encourage more spending by consumers and businesses.

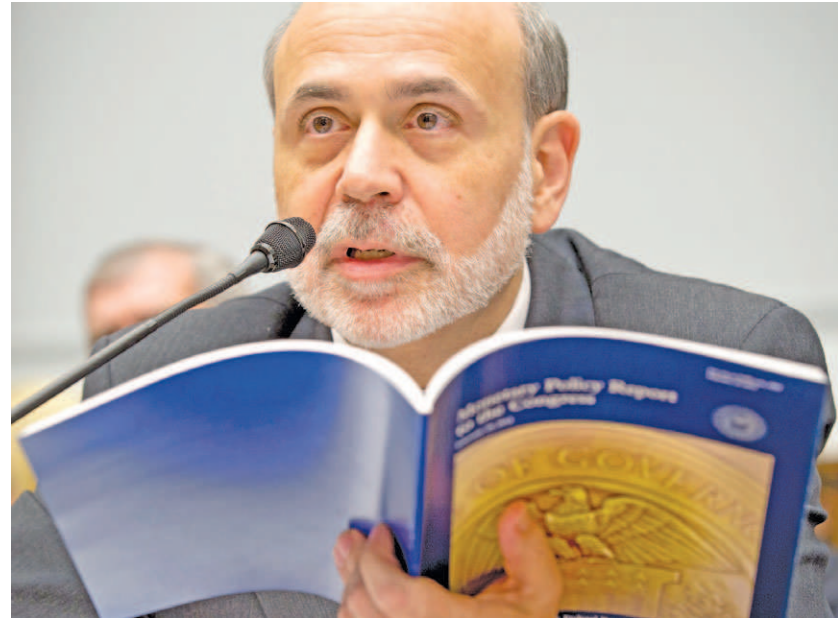

Robert Dye, chief economist at Dallas-based Comerica bank, said the Fed might extend a program of shuffling its investment portfolio to shift more of its holdings into long-term Treasuries. That could help lower long-term rates. Or the Fed could launch another round of bond-buying.

"The chairman is very much keeping additional monetary policy options on the table," said Dye, who attended the NABE conference.

Employers added an average of 245,000 jobs a month from December through February. The unemployment rate has fallen nearly a full percentage point since summer, to 8.3 percent.

Still, the economy grew at an annual pace of just 3 percent in the October-December quarter. And economists think growth has slowed in the January-March quarter to around a 2 percent annual rate.

Bernanke said the combination of JOB MARKET: Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke says the U.S. job market remains far from normal despite three months of strong hiring.

FED POLICY: Bernanke's cautious words about the job market in a speech Monday were seen as a signal that the central bank is likely to stick to its plan to hold short-term interest rates at record lows through 2014.

STOCKS UP: Investors liked what they heard and pushed up the Dow Jones industrial average by 160 points on Monday, its third-biggest gain of the year. Broader indexes also gained.

modest economic growth and rapid declines in unemployment is something of a puzzle. Normally, it takes growth of roughly 4 percent annual growth to lower the rate by 1 percentage point over a year.

He offered some reasons for the unexpected decline in unemployment. Employers may be hiring rapidly because they cut too many jobs during the recession. He also said that government revisions may later show stronger economic growth over the past year.

But Bernanke cautioned that he doesn't expect the unemployment rate to keep falling at its current pace without much stronger growth and more robust hiring. He noted that the rate is still roughly 3 percentage points higher than its average over the 20 years preceding the recession.

"Despite the recent improvement, the job market remains far from normal," Bernanke said. "The number of people working and total hours worked are still significantly below pre-crisis peaks."

Bernanke also expressed concerns about millions who have been out of work for more than six months. Those long-term unemployed Americans have made up more than 40 percent of the unemployed since December, he said. In the severe 1981-82 recession, long-term unemployment never exceeded 25 percent.

"Long-term unemployment is particularly costly to those directly affected, of course," Bernanke said. "But in addition, because of its negative effects on workers' skills and attachment to the labor force, long-term unemployment may ultimately reduce the productive capacity of our economy."

The Fed is concerned that the recovery could falter, as it did last year. Americans aren't seeing big pay increases. Gas prices are high. And Europe's debt crisis could weigh on the U.S. economy.

As long as inflation remains tame, analysts think the Fed will likely hold interest rates down to give the economy more support. Most economists don't think Fed officials will change their interest-rate policy at their next meeting on April 24-25 and will ease credit only if the economy slows further.

While the recent job market gains may continue, analysts think the record-low rates will continue as well, at least through this year. The Fed could reconsider the timetable next year, if the job gains prove more enduring.

But for now, most economists sense the Fed is committed to its plan.

"The clear tone of Chairman Bernanke's statement is that he is defending the Fed's current highly accommodative position," said David Jones, chief economist at DMJ Advisors.

CONTRACTS FOR U.S. HOMES DIPPED IN FEBRUARY

BY DEREK KRAVITZ
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The number of Americans who signed contracts to buy U.S. homes dipped in February from nearly a two-year high, a mixed signal ahead of the spring home-buying season.

The National Association of Realtors said Monday that its index of sales agreements declined 0.5 percent last month to a reading of 96.5. January's reading of 97 was the highest since April 2010, the last month buyers could qualify for a federal home-buying tax credit.

A reading of 100 or higher is considered healthy. April 2010 was also the last time it was that high. More signings in recent months are among the signs of a slight pick-up in the housing market. Still, analysts said the decline in February report was disappointing after the three best months of hiring in two years.

"So far, stronger employment growth has not prompted significantly sturdier willingness to sign purchase contracts, despite — or perhaps because of — some erosion in house prices over the last few months," said Pierre Ellis, an economist at Decision Economics.

Contract signings typically indicate where the housing market is headed. There's a one- to two-month lag between a signed contract and a completed deal. A sale isn't final until a mortgage is closed. January and February made up the best winter for completed sales in five years, when the housing crisis began. And builders are more confident about the market and have is year. In February, they requested the most permits to build single-family homes and apartments since October 2008.

Homes are the most affordable they've been in decades. And mortgage rates remain a bargain.

The job market is also getting stronger. The economy has added an average of 245,000 jobs per month from December through February. The unemployment rate has fallen to 8.3 percent, the lowest in three years.

Another reason for the uptick in sales: Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac have both announced they plan to raise the fees on mortgage applications in April. The government-controlled mortgage buyers own or guarantee about half of all U.S. mortgages and 90 percent of new loans.

Analysts caution that the damage from the housing bust is deep and the industry is years away from fully recovering.

Potential buyers are holding off for a number of reasons. Despite the recent job gains, unemployment remains high. Many buyers can't qualify for loans. Lenders are requiring higher credit scores and larger down payments.

And some who can qualify are hesitant to buy because they worry home prices will keep falling.

DC Check Paying for Superman Up for Auction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) • Seven decades after it was cut by DC Comics, the check sent to Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster for their creation of Superman is up for auction.

Written for $412 and made out to the duo, the check includes a line item for $130 showing that DC paid for full ownership and rights to the man from Krypton and paved the way for comic books, TV, radio and films. But, a legal dispute over creator's rights to the character is still far from settled.

Stephen Fishler, co-owner of Comic Connect.com, says the check went up for auction Monday for three weeks.

He said the check is a touchstone for the comic book industry because it represents the launching of the Golden Age of super-heroes.

OPINION

"It's really the first time that human eyes have had an opportunity to gaze upon what is a very alien landscape."

Terry Garcia, the National Geographic Society's executive VP after Hollywood icon James Cameron completed his journey to Earth's deepest point

What's Different about Trayvon Martin?

If you watch the news in any large city you are probably desensitized to stories about crime involving young black men. Most nights there are reports about several of them getting shot; often, more than one dies. It might be a gang fight, a revenge killing, robbery or a drive-by. Someone is likely killed for their cellphone, or simply because they talked to the wrong girl at a party. Tragedy has become routine. Too many young black men die on our streets; too many rot in our prisons.

Two weeks ago, the Chicago Tribune reported that at least 10 people, including a 6-year-old girl, were killed in weekend shootings in Chicago.

The media love these stories because they up the ratings and spike newsstand sales. Fear sells. "If it bleeds, it leads" is a familiar saying among those in the news business. Politicians use these horrific stories as an opportunity to pontificate for the cameras. They all deplore the violence, denounce it and demand its end, their outrage well timed to make the 10 o'clock news.

Rev. Al Sharpton frequently inserts himself into these situations, crying for "justice," which in the case of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin is likely to come without his help, given the multiple levels of government involvement in the investigation.

The facts in this case are not yet fully known, but that doesn't stop people from thinking they have them, giving some an excuse to resurrect racial templates from the past. The Washington Post featured this headline last week, "Florida Shooting Stirring Memories of Civil Rights Era."

Trayvon Martin was shot and killed by George Zimmerman, a member of a neighborhood watch group. Whether Zimmerman was an official member, or a cop wannabe, is one of the questions investigators are asking. Zimmerman has yet to be charged, presumably, because officials are trying to sort out whether a Florida law known as "stand your ground," which gives Florida residents the right to protect themselves with deadly force, applies in the Martin case. That hasn't stopped nearly 1 million signers of an online "petition" from reaching conclusions before investigators and a grand jury have completed their work.

I will leave the ques-

Cal Thomas
Tribune Media Services

tions about this tragedy to those looking into it, but the politics of it is worthy of comment.

In light of the number of young black men who are too often gunned down on America's streets, what's different about the Trayvon Martin case? Is it the fact that he was killed in a gated community and not in an alley in Detroit? If Zimmerman, a white Hispanic, were black, would we have the current controversy? If Martin were white, or any other race, would the president of the United States have called for "soul searching"? He made no comment about the Chicago shootings.

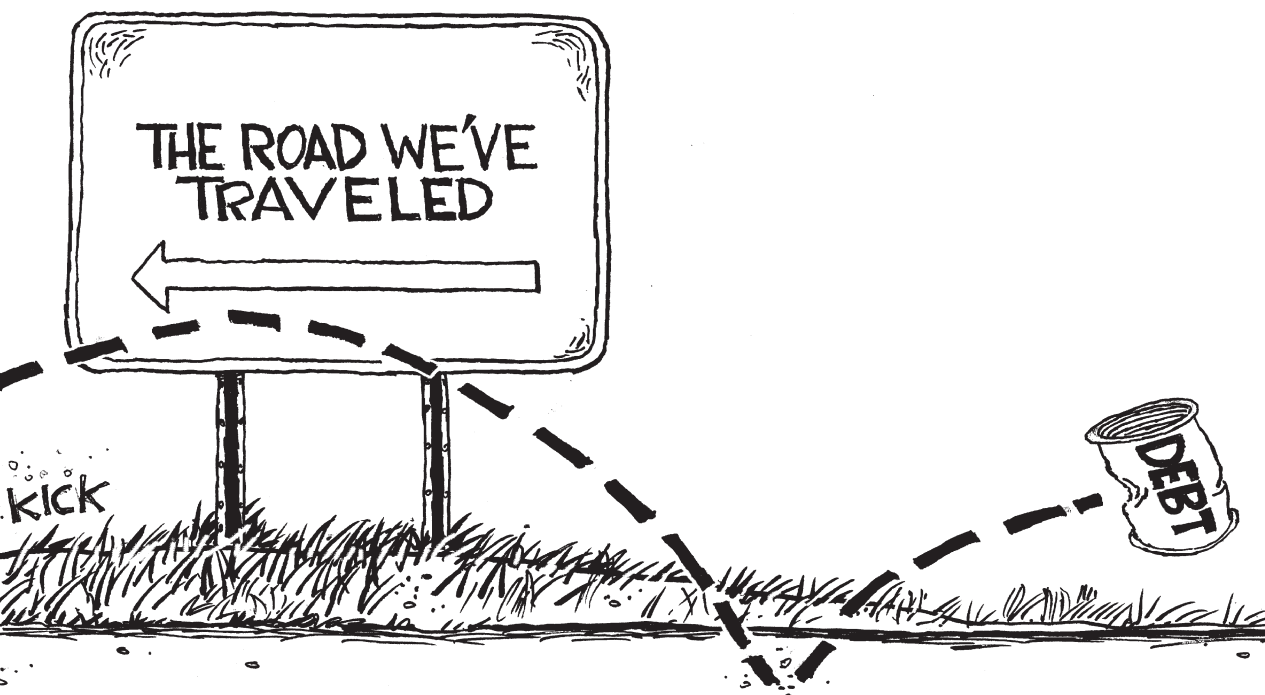

Would Al Sharpton have made the trip to Florida if Martin had been white? Not likely. Sharpton apparently hopes people have forgotten the 1987 Tawana Brawley incident during which he waved the "racism" flag in support of the African-American teenager's contention that she had been raped by six white men. A grand jury later found that Brawley had not been the victim of a forced sexual assault. The New York prosecutor whom Brawley had accused as one of her alleged assailants successfully sued Brawley and her three advisers, including Sharpton, for defamation.

The media bear some responsibility for exacerbating racial tensions. By too often featuring stories of violent young black men they appear to promote the very racial stereotyping they deplore. Why don't we see more stories about young black men making right choices, staying in school, rejecting drugs and getting married before having children? They exist. Can't the media find them?

The steady drumbeat of crime and violence in the media and their association of race and crime with certain parts of town feed into the often irrational fears of white people. I'm not suggesting these stories shouldn't be covered. I am suggesting that local news ought to tell more stories of young black men who make good decisions that benefit themselves and their communities. Or have we forgotten what "good" looks like?

Trayvon Martin should not have been killed, but Zimmerman shouldn't be the only one facing indictment.

Fuming about Gas

When the price of gasoline rises, the supply of hot air expands.

Just look at the recent GOP attacks blaming President Obama for prices that exceed $4 a gallon in some parts of the country.

Not only is Obama responsible, according to some Republicans, he's downright pleased. As Mitt Romney put it last week to Fox News, "There's no question that when he ran for office, he said he wanted to see gasoline prices go up."

But there are some problems with Romney's statement. First, it's false. Obama never said he wanted to see gasoline prices go up — although it's true that his Energy secretary, Steven Chu, once argued that higher prices would be good for conservation. (That was when Chu was a physics professor; once he became a Cabinet secretary, he recanted that view.)

Second, Obama's policies in office haven't held down the oil supply or pushed prices up; U.S. oil output is at its highest point since 2003. Yes, Obama imposed a moratorium on deep-water drilling in the gulf after the BP oil spill in 2010, but the moratorium has been lifted and BP is drilling off Louisiana again. True, Obama hasn't opened as much federal land to drilling as the energy industry wants, but even if he had, that wouldn't ease prices in the short run.

Third, and most important, the president doesn't

Doyle McManus
Los Angeles Times

set the price of gasoline; the global market does. Over the long term, the price of crude oil has been pushed up by booming demand from developing countries such as China, which has doubled consumption in the last 10 years and is on the way to doubling it again. In the short term, oil prices have also been pushed up by wars and rumors of wars in the Middle East, including fear that an escalating standoff with Iran could disrupt oil shipments from the Persian Gulf.

That's why gasoline prices have risen all over the world, not only in the United States. Germany and Britain aren't ruled by Barack Obama, but that hasn't spared them from price increases.

Of course, Obama can't be too surprised by the GOP attacks. After all, when he ran for president in 2008, he blamed then-President George W. Bush for high gasoline prices, just as his opponents are blaming him now.

It's no wonder the president has spent so much energy recently promoting himself as a friend of domestic production. Last week, he hopped around the nation's oil patch for a series of photo opportunities (dericks, pipelines, solar panels), arguing along the way that he's in favor of more energy.

"We've quadrupled the number of operating oil rigs to a record high," he said at an oil field in New Mexico.

"We've added enough new oil and gas pipeline to encircle the Earth," he said at a construction site in Oklahoma.

Like most politicians, in other words, Obama sometimes tries to have it both ways.

He pleased environmentalists last year by blocking permission for a new pipeline from Canada's shale oil fields to the refineries of Texas. But last week, safe from any primary challenges on his left, he signaled that the pipeline might get his OK after Election Day.

"We'll be happy to review future permits," he said as environmentalists howled.

He tried to take credit for allowing a Canadian pipeline firm to begin building the southern leg of the pipeline from Oklahoma to Texas, even though the federal government didn't really have a say in the matter.

America's voters, subjected to these gas fumes from both sides, have reacted remarkably calmly, and arguably more sensibly than most of the politicians who would lead them.

Surveys show that most Americans don't blame Obama for high gas prices, though they would like him to do something to fix the problem. (Hence the president's trip to the wilds of Oklahoma and New Mexico.) Most voters say they're in favor of the Republican demand for increased oil production, but they also support the Democrats' desire for more conservation, more fuel efficiency and more investment in alternative energy sources such as solar or wind power.

Is there anything a president can do to affect the price of gasoline over the long run? In fact, says David G. Victor, an energy scholar at UC San Diego, there is one thing: "innovation."

"The most interesting changes in the energy market over the last 10 years have come about because of unexpected technological innovation," he told me, pointing to the new techniques for extracting natural gas and oil from shale — gas and oil that were once inaccessible.

"Long-term innovation on both the supply side and the demand side can really make a difference," he said. By demand side, he meant measures such as increased fuel efficiency in vehicles and power plants that are actually driving U.S. oil consumption downward.

"That's the one place where domestic U.S. policies can play an effective role," he said.

Last week, Rep. Paul D. Ryan, R-Wisc., unveiled a new Republican budget proposal that Romney and other GOP candidates quickly endorsed. Ryan's budget would eliminate federal subsidies and tax breaks for alternative energy firms and would slash funding for energy research.

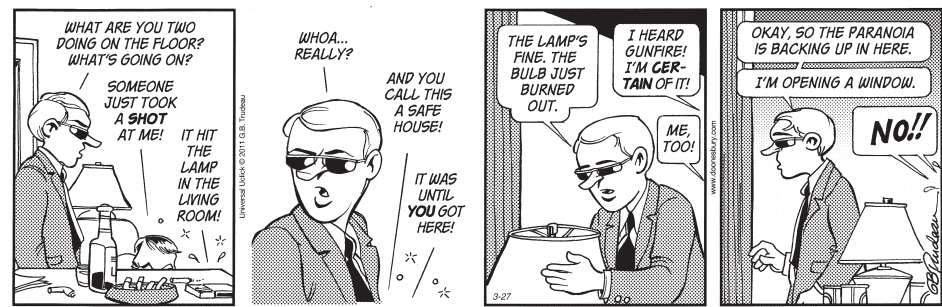

Obama, on the other hand, wants to continue funding alternative energy projects but end tax breaks for oil and gas drilling. That should give voters a nice, clear choice on energy issues when they decide which party to support in the fall.

Health Care

The justices fired two dozen questions in less than a half hour at Washington attorney Robert Long, who was defending the appeals court ruling.

"What is the parade of horrors?" asked Justice Sonia Sotomayor, if the court were to decide the penalties were not a tax and the health care case went forward? Long suggested that could encourage more challenges to the long-standing system in which the general rule is that taxpayers must pay a disputed tax before they can go to court.

The questions came so quickly at times that the justices interrupted each other. At one point, Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Elena Kagan and Sotomayor started speaking at the same time. Chief Justice John Roberts, acting as traffic cop, signaled Ginsburg to go first, perhaps in a nod to her seniority. Only Justice Clarence Thomas, as is his custom, stayed out of the fray.

Verrilli also faced pointed questioning over the administration's differing explanations for whether the penalty is a tax.

"General Verrilli, today you are arguing that the penalty is not a tax. Tomorrow you are going to be back and you will be arguing that the penalty is a tax," Justice Samuel Alito said.

Verrilli said Monday's argument dealt with the meaning of the word in the context of the 19th century law, the Anti-Injunction Act. Tuesday's session will explore Congress' power to impose the insurance requirement and penalty. In that setting, he said, Congress has the authority under the Constitution "to lay and collect taxes," including the penalty for not having insurance.

Still, he had trouble keeping his terms straight. Answering a question from Kagan, Verrilli said, "If they pay the tax, then they are in compliance with the law."

Justice Stephen Breyer jumped in: "Why do you keep saying tax?" Breyer reminded Verrilli he should be saying penalty.

"Right. That's right," Verrilli said.

The administration officials involved with the defense and implementation of the health care law, Attorney General Eric Holder, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, were in the courtroom Monday. Republican Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama and Florida Attorney General Pam Bondi also were in the crowd that filled the courtroom's 400 seats.

Outside the court building, about 100 supporters of the law walked in a circle holding signs that read, "Protect my healthcare," and chanting, "Care for you, care for me, care for every family." A half-dozen opponents shouted, "We love the Constitution!"

Republican presidential candidate Rick Santorum was there, too, declaring anew that GOP front-runner Mitt Romney has no standing to challenge Obama on the law since Massachusetts passed a somewhat similar version when Romney was governor. Santorum said, "If you really want Obamacare repealed there's only one person who can make that happen."

Q. My father is taking quite a few prescription and over-the-counter drugs. Should we be concerned about over-medication?

A. It is true that as people age, their reaction to drugs, even ones they have been taking for many years, can change. Your father's doctor and his pharmacist should help put your mind at ease. Ask the pharmacist for a printout of all prescriptions, including possible interactions and side effects. The pharmacist can help you and your father develop a strategy for managing his medications. Help your dad make a list of prescriptions and over-the-counter meds he is taking. Throw out all outdated drugs at his home. Make sure that he is only getting his prescriptions filled at one pharmacy. Remind your father to discuss any new prescriptions with his pharmacist. Ask the pharmacist if a physician visit, and a review of medications your father is taking is in order. Proper medication is a serious business. Go with your father to the doctor's office and get the peace of mind you both desire.

Final Defendant Sentenced for Walmart Bomb Threat

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man police say called in a bomb threat at the Twin Falls Walmart was sentenced to probation and community service Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

Terry Plew, 21, was sentenced to serve three years of probation and ordered to complete a combination of 150 hours of community service and participation in the county work detail.

Plew's defense attorney argued the court should consider Plew's service in the Idaho Army National Guard's 116th Cavalry Brigade Combat Team in the sentence. Plew served a year in Iraq, and though tests indicate he doesn't suffer from post-traumatic stress, it's common for returning veterans to have some difficulty adjusting back to civilian life, the attorney said.

The attorney also asked Judge Randy Stoker to withhold judgment in the case. With a felony on his record, Plew would most likely be dishonorably discharged from the National Guard. Withheld judgment would give Plew an opportunity to get an honorable discharge when he left the service.

Stoker sided with prosecutors in the case, deciding not to withhold judgment because of Plew's juvenile record and a misdemeanor drug charge on his adult record.

"I don't understand your thinking process," Stoker said. "Here you are, an individual who through military endeavors goes to a foreign country and put your life on the line for the rest of us who sit in this court room?"

After being in a war zone, Stoker said Plew should understand the serious implications a bomb threat could have on a community.

Stoker told Plew to continue to reach out to veterans' groups for help with issues relating to his service.

Police say Plew, Cassius Reynolds, 23, Levi Hays, 19, and Angel Estabrook, 19, used a bomb threat against Walmart as a diversion to target a Subway restaurant on Kimberly Road, which they intended to burglarize. All the co-conspirators were sentenced to various terms of probation.

Benedict Arrives in Cuba in Footsteps of John Paul

BY NICOLE WINFIELD AND ANDREA RODRIGUEZ

Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Cuba • Pope

Benedict XVI arrived in Cuba on Monday in the footsteps of his more famous predecessor, gently pressing the island's longtime communist leaders to push through "legitimate" reforms their people desire, while also criticizing the excesses of capitalism.

In contrast to the raucous welcome Benedict received in Mexico, his arrival in Cuba's second city was relatively subdued: President Raul Castro greeted him at the airport with a 21-cannon salute and a goose-stepping military honor guard, but few ordinary Cubans lined Benedict's motorcade route into town and the pope barely waved from his glassed-in pope-mobile.

Santiago's main plaza, however, came alive when Benedict arrived for his evening Mass, his main public event here before heading Tuesday to Havana. While the plaza, which has a capacity of about 200,000, was not fully packed there was a festive atmosphere, with Cubans dancing to the rhythms of a samba band awaiting Benedict's arrival and waving small Cuban and Vatican flags.

"It is a message of love, this visit," said Jorgelina Guevara, a 59-year-old homemaker as she waited for the Mass to begin. "The Cuban people need it."

The trip comes 14 years after John Paul's historic tour, when the Polish pope who helped bring down communism in his homeland admonished Fidel Castro to free prisoners of conscience, end abortion and let the Roman Catholic Church take its place in society.

Benedict's message as he arrived was more subtle, taking into account the liberalizing reforms that Raul Castro has enacted since taking over from his older brother in 2006 and the greater role the Catholic Church has played in Cuban affairs, most recently in negotiating the release of dozens of political prisoners.

The pontiff, who at the start of his trip said Marxism "no longer responds to reality," gave a much gentler message upon stepping on Cuban soil, saying he wanted to inspire and encourage Cubans on the island and beyond.

"I carry in my heart the just aspirations and legitimate desires of all Cubans, wherever they may be," he said. "Those of the young and the elderly, of adolescents and children, of the sick and workers, of prisoners and their families, and of the poor and those in need." The 84-year-old pontiff's voice was tired, and by the end of the day he seemed exhausted after a vigorous four days of travel. The Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, acknowledged Benedict's fatigue but said his health was fine.

In his own remarks, the Cuban leader assured Benedict his country favors complete religious liberty and has good relations with all religious institutions. He also criticized the 50-year U.S. economic embargo and defended the socialist ideal of providing for those less fortunate.

Cameron: Earth's Deepest Spot Desolate, Foreboding

BY SETH BORENSTEIN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • In James Cameron's fantasy films, like "Avatar" and "The Abyss," the unexplored is splashed in color and fraught with alien danger. But on his dive to the deepest place on Earth, reality proved far different: white, barren and bland.

Yet otherworldly — and amazing.

"I felt like I literally, in the space of one day, had gone to another planet and come back," Cameron said Monday after returning from the cold, dark place in the western Pacific Ocean, seven miles below the surface. "It was a very surreal day."

Cameron is the first person to explore the deepest valley in the ocean since two men made a 20-minute foray there more than half a century ago. He spent about three hours gliding through the icy darkness, illuminated only by special lights on the one-man sub he helped design. That was only about half as long as planned because his battery ran low.

This deepest section of the 1,500-mile-long Mariana Trench is so untouched that at first it appeared dull. But there's something oddly dark and compelling about the first snippets of video that Cameron shot. It's not what you see, but where it puts you. There is a sense of aloneness that Cameron conveys in the wordless video showing his sub gliding across what he calls "the very soft, almost gelatinous flat plain."

"My feeling was one of complete isolation from all of humanity," Cameron said.

It may not have looked all that dramatic and, in a way, Cameron was "doing exploration with training wheels," said Andy Bowen, who heads the deep submergence lab at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

But it was an amazing start.

The images "do lack the visual impact of highly colored 3D spectacular representations of the ocean," Bowen said. But there are still "dramatic discoveries to be made."

The minute-long snippet, released by trip sponsor National Geographic, is just a coming attraction. Cameron will keep diving in the area, some 200 miles southwest of the island of Guam, where the depth of the trench is called Challenger Deep. And he's already filming it in 3D for later viewing.

Wife Defends Soldier Accused in Afghan Rampage

SEATAC, Wash. (AP) • The wife of a U.S. soldier accused of killing 17 Afghan civilians says her husband showed no signs of PTSD before he deployed, and she doesn't feel like she'll ever believe he was involved in the killings.

"I don't know a lot about the symptoms of PTSD, so I wouldn't know," Karilyn Bales told NBC's "Today" show. "He doesn't have nightmares, you know, things like that. No dreams," she said.

She defended her husband, Staff Sgt. Robert Bales, in a weekend interview with Matt Lauer that aired on Monday. Officials say Bales left his base March 11 in southern Afghanistan and killed eight Afghan adults and nine children.

The wife of the Joint Base Lewis-McChord soldier said the accusations are "unbelievable to me."

"He loves children, he's like a big kid himself," she said. "I have no idea what happened, but he would not ... he loves children, and he would not do that."

He was formally charged Friday with 17 counts of premeditated murder and other crimes, and is being held at a U.S. military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Karilyn Bales was in a grocery store when she first heard of the rampage in a phone call from her parents.

"They said well it looks like a U.S. soldier, some Afghan civilians were killed by a soldier," she said.

She learned more when she got home.

"I saw 38-year-old staff sergeant, and I don't think there are very many of those, and I probably prayed and prayed that my husband wasn't involved," she said.

"And then, I received a phone call from the Army saying that they would like to come out and talk to me. And I was relieved, because when you get a phone call, you know that your soldier is not deceased."

Jayhawks' Robinson Leads AP A-A Team

Kansas forward Thomas Robinson has even more in common with Blake Griffin now. Not everything, though.

Robinson, who played through personal tragedy as a sophomore reserve, capped his junior season by being a unanimous selection to The Associated Press' All-America team Monday, a day after leading the Jayhawks to the Final Four.

The 6-foot-10 Robinson averaged 17.9 points and 11.8 rebounds this season and he was a first-team pick by all 65 members of the national media panel that selects the weekly Top 25.

The last unanimous pick was Griffin in 2009.

"It's a blessing to be named even in the same category as Blake Griffin," Robinson said. "For that to

BCS: 'HOST OF INTRICATE DETAILS' BEING DISCUSSED

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAPEVINE, Texas • BCS leaders finally are starting to get into some specifics in their discussions about possible — maybe even likely — changes in college football's postseason and how to determine a champion.

They are finding out just how tricky the process will be. And it's still far from being finished.

"The complexity is phenomenal, the level of details requires a great deal of time," BCS executive director Bill Hancock said Monday, after the 11 conference commissioners and Notre Dame's athletic director met for about 7½ hours.

This was the third meeting this year, coming just more than a month after the group met over two days at the same hotel connected to a terminal at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

"There's no consensus yet on anything," SEC Commissioner Mike Slive said. "The first couple of meetings, we talked a lot about just college football in general, the regular season. This time, less of that and more about how we need to start getting closer to where the rubber meets the road. And there's lots of different options, and start to analyze each one of those and the pros and cons that go with them."

MAC Commissioner Jon Steinbrecher said while progress is being made, things are also getting more complicated.

Tebow the Jet: Celebrity Backup Meets Media

ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. • Tim Tebow laughed a few times, smiled steadily and stayed polite and composed.

If being surrounded by dozens of cameras and scores of media people made him nervous, the New York Jets' new backup quarterback didn't show it.

He was cool and calm — exactly how he looked during those hair-raising comebacks last season with the Denver Broncos.

His message: I'm here to help, not to create another Jets controversy.

"It's an honor for all of you to show up to hear me say a few words," a grinning Tebow told a pack of more than 200 reporters.

Asked what he thought about the media crush, he said: "I really don't think it will be much of a distraction because, honestly, I will try not to pay too much attention to it."

Good thing, because it will surely be around 24/7. Monday was only the beginning. Even though both he and Mark Sanchez, the starting quarterback, don't want more drama.

Tebow spoke for more than 30 minutes at a news conference held in the team's field house because the media turnout was so massive it couldn't be accommodated in the normal press room. It was hardly a run-of-the-mill meet-and-greet, with the star of the show hardly a part-time player.

Cameras flashed, capturing every Tebow step, as he strolled onto the field and made his way to the podium for his big New York close-up. He appeared polished and unfazed handling a barrage of 31 questions, most of his answers measured and upbeat as he deftly handled the local media.

Tebow, who used the word "excited" more than 40 times, refused to stir the volatile mix that is the Jets. He went out of his way to say he believes he and Sanchez can co-exist despite all the skeptics. And there are plenty.

Jazz Have Enough in Tank

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. • Fighting for one of the last playoffs spot in the Western Conference, the Utah Jazz couldn't afford to be tired a day after losing a four-overtime game in Atlanta.

Paul Millsap had 24 points and 13 rebounds, Al Jefferson added 19 points and eight rebounds and the Jazz shook off the disappointment and fatigue from the night before to beat the Nets 105-84 Monday night.

"I felt I was ready to play," Jefferson said. "That game was tough, but we lost and it left a bad taste in my mouth. The way we could get over that game was to come and win this one, and I think that's what we did."

The win was the seventh time in eight games for Utah and kept it in seventh place in the conference playoff hunt with Denver and Houston, who also have 27-23 records after wins on Monday night.

"This is a key (win) for us," Millsap said. "We're in the bottom four. We're contesting with all the other teams"

Alec Burks added 15 points for the Jazz, who used an 18-4 fourth-quarter run to lock up the game after New Jersey cut a 21-point deficit to three.

Gerald Green led the Nets with 20 points. Deron Williams added 17 points and 11 assists against his former teammates on 7 of 21 shooting.

INDYCAR'S SNOOZER OF A RIDE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • IndyCar needed a nice, smooth race to open its season.

What the series didn't need — couldn't afford, really — was a snoozer.

There's mixed feelings about Sunday's season opener through the streets of St. Petersburg, where fans in attendance were adamant they saw a good race. But that didn't translate to television, where IndyCar desperately needs to shine.

The series had a huge opportunity with its opener to showcase its product to the casual fan. The death of Dan Wheldon in last season's finale put the spotlight on the series the last five months and probably pulled in some new eyeballs for ABC's broadcast. The race drew a 1.1 overnight rating, down just a tick from the 1.2 the opener did last season.

The television rating, for IndyCar, is acceptable, especially considering the race was up against Tiger Woods and the NCAA tournament.

And fans who tuned in were able to see that Indy-

Car had a lot to be proud of: A new car, multiple engine manufacturers, improved competition and several new faces, including popular former Formula One star Rubens Barrichello. It also helped that NASCAR, the beast of American auto racing, was out west and its race in California wasn't a head-to-head competition.

"There's definitely more interest going into this season than there has been in 15 years," racing great Mario Andretti declared at the start of the weekend.

But when the green flag waved — it was done by Wheldon's little sister, Holly, — IndyCar's drivers carefully maneuvered their way through treacherous Turn 1 incident-free and sailed off for a fairly uneventful race. Of course, nobody wanted a repeat of last year, when a five-car accident on the first lap in that very spot flipped Marco Andretti upside down. But they wanted something - anything - that matched the energy surrounding the event. Ultimately, there ended up being only one significant pass shown during the television broadcast, and it wasn't even for the lead. Granted, Helio Castroneves' move around Scott Dixon ended up being the race-deciding pass. But when it actually happened, it was for second place, and Castroneves eventually drove away to an unchallenged win with a 5.5292 seconds margin of victory over Dixon. When asked why the race didn't have more action, Dixon seemed genuinely surprised to learn people found it boring. "I started in seventh, got to the lead, then got passed. That is eight spots right there," he said. "I thought the racing was good. The first part of the race was good, mixed up really good, people were trying to pass." Not at the front, though, and not much of it was caught on camera. As the race developed, and it became clear that fuel strategy would play a huge factor in deciding many finishing positions, the chances for anything exciting happening slipped considerably. Many drivers were ordered by their teams to conserve fuel. Doing that requires slowing down, which goes against the very nature of racing. The bottom line is that this style of racing is an acquired taste and might not be an easy sell to new fans.

With only five ovals on the schedule this season, the bulk of IndyCar's product could look a lot like Sunday. Further hurting IndyCar's attempt to broaden its audience is that Saturday's qualifying, which was probably the most exciting part of the weekend, was not broadcast. For now, the lasting image of the opener is Castroneves' emotional post-race celebration in which he stopped his car in Turn 10, recently re-named Dan Wheldon Wa., and paid tribute to the fallen driver by climbing the fence to pat the street sign. But now it's on to Alabama for Sunday's road course race at Barber Motorsports Park, and television coverage shifts to cable with rebranded NBC Sports Network making its season debut.

Today is Tuesday, March 27, the 87th day of 2012. There are 279 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On March 27, 1912, first lady Helen Herron Taft and the wife of Japan's ambassador to the United States, Viscountess Chinda, planted the first two of 3,000 cherry trees given as a gift by the mayor of Tokyo on the north bank of Washington, D.C.'s Tidal Basin.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1513, Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de Leon sighted present-day Florida.
In 1625, Charles I acceded to the English throne upon the death of James I.
In 1794, Congress approved "An Act to provide a Naval Armament" of six armed ships.
In 1836, the first Mormon temple was dedicated in Kirtland, Ohio.
In 1911, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was incorporated.
In 1942, American servicemen were granted free mailing privileges.
In 1958, Nikita Khrushchev became Soviet premier in addition to First Secretary of the Communist Party.
In 1964, Alaska was hit by a powerful earthquake and tsunamis that killed about 130 people.
In 1968, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin, the first man to orbit the Earth, died in a plane crash.
In 1977, 583 people were killed when a KLM Boeing 747, attempting to take off, crashed into a Pan Am 747 on the Canary Island of Tenerife.
In 1980, 123 workers died when a North Sea floating oil field platform, the Alexander Kielland, capsized during a storm.
In 1992, more than a month after winning the Olympic gold medal in men's figure skating, Viktor Petrenko of the former Soviet Union won his first world title in Oakland, Calif.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush grudgingly signed landmark legislation designed to limit the role of big money in political campaigns, triggering a rush to the courthouse by critics challenging the law's constitutionality. Thirty people were killed by a suicide bomber during a Passover Seder in Netanya, Israel. A gunman killed eight members of the Nanterre city council outside Paris; a suspect killed himself the next day while in police custody. Death claimed Oscar-winning filmmaker Billy Wilder at age 95; comedian Milton Berle at age 93; and actor-comedian Dudley Moore at age 66.

Five years ago: Truck bombs hit markets in Tal Afar, Iraq, killing at least 152 people and wounding more than 150. NFL owners voted 30-2 (with Cincinnati and Arizona dissenting) to make the video replay system a permanent officiating tool.

One year ago: International air raids targeted Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi's hometown of Sirte for the first time as rebels quickly closed in on the regime stronghold. Miami's LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh accomplished something that hadn't been done in more than 50 years: Each had 30-10 nights — James with 33 points and 10 rebounds, Bosh with 31 points and 12 rebounds, and Wade with 30 points and 11 boards — as the Heat beat the Houston Rockets 125-119.

ANSWER: The right time to raise your partner when you have only three-card support is when you have a small doubleton in a side suit. Here you have moderate three-card support, but more importantly you have a top honor in each side-suit, so you should not feel embarrassed about rebidding one no-trump and limiting your hand precisely.

IF MARCH 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If your job requires publicity or if you work with the public, your star will shine a bit brighter in the year ahead. Your popularity rises between now and the end of May. You could find the right person to take your hand for a long-term commitment but if you are in a lackluster relationship you can break it off successfully. Your love of excitement and change might make this a great year to test and experiment, but too much ambition could spoil it. Make key decisions in early October when good advice comes your way.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Perseverance pays off. To make it to the finish line first, you can't quit running when you see you are ahead. Just because you have an advantage doesn't mean you can slow down before you have completed the course.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): When push comes to shove, you aren't willing to shove back. Abrasive individuals could put you in a predicament. You dislike being rude, so you won't defend yourself even when you should.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could be the aggressor. But then you stop and think that you have much more important issues to occupy your time. You refuse to be manipulated into doing something merely to satisfy a passing passion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sometimes you need to have your cake and eat it, too. When you observe how your partner or other important people in your life go for the gusto you are spurred to greater accomplishment yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reaching for the best and highest is in your DNA. If you have children, encourage them to follow their bliss, and if you are working on a new idea don't be limited by your surroundings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Remember the old saying that opposites attract. In situations where you have little sympathy, you may be drawn to the person who is the most compassionate. Avoid major purchases for the next few days.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): History is written by conquerors; the losers only write in the margins. You can't edit the past, so you might be stuck in a situation where you have little leeway. Delay making major financial decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work at what you love. Put off important decisions for a few days. Right now, your passion to succeed might blind you to what is really important. You could waste money on some pie in the sky.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You love to be seen in exciting new places with the most popular faces. People see you as more attractive than you really are, so you might have the chance to impress a potential new boss.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will work without a break even if you end up at a breaking point. No one worries that you will give in to a whim and shirk responsibilities or go out to play when recess isn't on the agenda.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The status quo won't let you go. You can't change anything of key importance without resistance from those in charge. Your best bet is to wait until later in the week to make a major decision or change.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can't fight city hall, but you can vote and choose who runs it. Although you can't do anything now to change a situation, you can find a way to ensure that you won't repeat it.
