Residential, commercial construction setting a fast pace after the slowest year in recent history.

TWIN FALLS • The nail guns are busy at 449 Arrow St. in south Twin Falls.

Workers on the roof attach moisture barrier sheeting for a base under shingles. Inside, others tend to the house's frame. Seven men labor in various capacities on the Wolverton Homes construction site, including project manager Ryan Sawers, who oversees the activity.

The scene is being replicated many places across town during the current upturn in residential and commercial building.

"We have 12 projects going now and six more submitted to the city that we haven't heard back about," Sawers said. "Things have really picked up. It's better this spring than it's been for three years?

IDAHO LEGISLATURE INCHES TOWARD TAX CUT COMPROMISE

The long-held House tax bill will get a hearing today, while budget-setters prepare to prop up state savings.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Now, we're getting somewhere.

Senate Republicans came out of a Wednesday morning caucus without having reached consensus on how much money to set aside for tax cuts and savings. But later in the day, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee made a compromise budget to accommodate both, signaling progress in the Legislature's move toward adjournment.

Tax relief and propping up state savings are the two major issues left for the Legislature to resolve before the session ends. Senate Republican Caucus Chairman Russ Fulcher, R-Meridian, said many senators would rather see most of the money go toward replenishing the state's reserve accounts, which were depleted during the economic downturn.

But tax cuts have been a big priority for both Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the House, which passed a $35 million income tax cut earlier in the session.

Initially, Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee Chairman Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, wasn't planning on hearing the House tax cut bill, saying he'd prefer to put as much money as possible into savings.

But after the Wednesday caucus, Corder announced a change of plans, saying he would hold a Thursday morning hearing for the House tax bill.

That doesn't mean it will pass, but Corder wouldn't speculate on the meeting's outcome. With that uncertainty, the Joint FinanceAppropriations Committee met Wednesday afternoon to set aside money for the state's savings.

The committee adopted flexible language that put at least $23 million into the budget stabilization fund and $21 million into the public education stabilization fund, regardless of the outcome of tax legislation. Any leftover Please see LEGISLATURE, A2

Rep. Wendy Jaquet represents the central Idaho district where Bergdahl was born and where his parents live.

As Wednesday morning's House session closed, Jaquet somberly asked lawmakers to keep him in their prayers and their hearts - in the hopes that he will soon return home.

As recently as this year, there have been discussions of a possible deal between the Taliban and the United States that could clear the way for Bergdahl's release.

So far, however, nothing has materialized.

Be Prepared for May Primary Elections

What you need to know before heading to the polls.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • With the May 15 primary elections looming, it's time to start thinking about voting.

Across the Magic Valley, candidates will seek your vote in 21 contested elections. Ranging from the Democratic and GOP candidates for Idaho's District 2 House seat in Congress, to a plethora of county races, there'll be plenty on area ballots when voters head to the polls.

Here's what you need to do to get ready to vote:

How Do I Register?

If you're 18 and a legal Idaho resident who will have lived here for 30 days prior to the election, you can register to vote at your local county clerk's office until 5 p.m. April 20.

You can also register at the polls on the day of the election. Here's what you'll need:

People who have lost their voting rights due to a felony conviction may not register.

What's New This Year?

For the first time in Idaho election history, the Republican party will hold a closed primary. What's that mean for you?

Well, if you want to vote for a GOP candidate in any of the 19 contested area Republican races, you'll need to be a registered Republican. Last year, the Idaho GOP party decided to go to a closed primary system, arguing that an open primary diluted the party's nominees for the November general election.

The Democratic primary remains open.

Will I Vote for a Presidential Nominee?

No. That's what this year's caucuses were for. Mitt Romney already won Idaho's nod for the GOP nomination, while Gem State Democrats will select their choice during their April 14 caucus.

With President Barack Obama eligible for a second term, the Democratic caucus isn't likely to stir as much interest as the GOP's Super Tuesday version.

What If I Want to Vote Absentee?

Once the ballots are set, likely by next Monday, people will be able to start filling out in-person absentee ballots at their county clerk's office through 5 p.m. May 11. Applications for mailed absentee ballots are due by May 9, and are available at county clerks' offices and Idahovotes.gov.

School Leadership, Technology Highlight Boise State Project

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Creating "21st-century classrooms" is a focus for eight south-central Idaho school districts participating in a statewide leadership project.

Boise State University's new Idaho Leads Project provides training to teams of employees from nearly 50 school districts and public charter schools. The idea is to advance education reform and ultimately, student achievement.

The Twin Falls School District plans to use information from project sessions to shape what goes on in classrooms.

Spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass – who is one of the district's team members said the first regional session in February in Sun Valley focused largely on increasing school leadership.

"As we move forward in the 21st century, how do we get our team members on board?" she said.

Each school district participating in the Idaho Leads Project has a 10-member team - including school board members, administrators, teachers and students.

Besides Twin Falls, other area school districts participating are Blaine County, Cassia County, Gooding, Jerome, Minidoka County, Buhl and Castleford.

The 18-month project is funded through a $3.85 million grant from the J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation. School districts don't receive any money, but the grant covers attendance costs at four regional conferences.

Buhl Superintendent Byron Stutzman said one idea he took away from the first meeting was about the role a school district plays in its community.

"We would like to see the school district being the center of the community again," he said about Buhl. "I think that's an important piece."

In Twin Falls, Pendergrass said the school district is trying out a couple of ideas from the first session, though it has no specific plan in place.

One trial idea adds a "technology tool" section to the monthly employee newsletter with suggestions teachers can use in their classroom.

A larger goal is creating the "21st-century classrooms," which involves reevaluating teaching strategies. Technology is a piece of that.

How students are taught in classrooms is shaped partly by research-based methods. That doesn't always work with quickly changing technology, however.

Pendergrass said many teachers are using interactive whiteboards and other specialized software in their classroom.

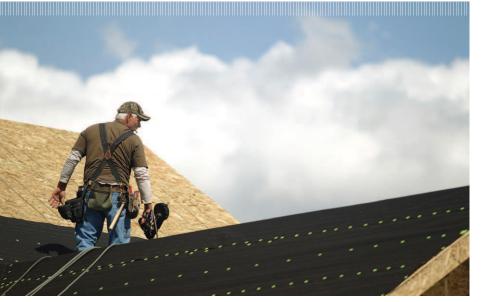

With new state initiatives, students and teachers alike will be using more technology in coming years.

Each year through 2017, school districts and public charter schools will receive $32 per student from the Idaho State Department of Education to spend on classroom technology.

Plus, one-third of high schools a year will receive a mobile device for each student starting in fall 2013 – likely, a laptop computer.

Most Magic Valley school districts, including Twin Falls, applied to be in the first round. The ISDE plans to select schools by the end of this school year.

This fall, all teachers and school principals will get a mobile device and state training on how to use it.

both of those jobs, starting in two weeks. Thomson believes it will speed up the permitting process.

"Right now it's a struggle to keep up," he said.

"Our local economy is fueling a lot of excitement in new construction." Chad DeBie, sales manager

Thomson, the city building official, theorizes that Twin Falls' big commercial projects have stimulated residential construction. That's led by Chobani's new 1 millionsquare-foot plant on Kimberly Road, scheduled for completion this year. "That's been good for us, and good news creates positive feedback," Thomson said. The vogurt production company will help the area in another way, said Melinda Anderson, city economic development director. Chobani uses so much milk as its main ingredient that it will spur a "huge economic impact" to local dairy farmers and the Magic Valley in general, she said. Anderson noted that a state study projects Chobani's employment and the effect on services it uses will account for 3,000 new jobs and a billion-dollar impact to the area within three years. Another big project will break ground this year when Glanbia Foods builds a 35,000square-foot office and 15,000-square-foot research and development facility at the former Kruzer's Nightlife nightclub location. "It will make a big impact on downtown," Anderson said, "and their new facility will have room to grow."

State OKs Funds for Victim Notification System

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has signed a bill into law to permanent ly fund a system to notify crime victims of changes to their tormenters' status.

Under the new law, misdemeanor offenders will pay an additional $10 to a victim fund that will cover the state's participation in the Victim Information and Notification Everyday - or VINE system offered through the Idaho Sheriffs' Association. The system will provide registrants with phone or email notification of their related offender's incarceration, court status, transfer or escape.

Collection of the fees will begin July 1, the start of the state's new fiscal year.

"This allows the victims to remain informed about the offender's status," said Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd.

Jerome County Sheriff's Deputy Spencer Lewis said the notification system gives victims and their families a chance to take action to protect themselves when their offender is released from jail or prison.

"For the victims of violent crimes, it gives them a feeling of security and safety and of transparency, so they are not left in the dark," he said.

Idaho Sheriffs' Association Victim Services Coordinator Tammara Slater said the program has been managed by the ISA since 2009 and is currently funded by grants from the federal Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance. The ISA contracts with Appriss Inc., which sent out and 22,000 notifications to Idahoans last year. Anyone can register for notification.

The new $10 fee is expected to raise about $525,000 yearly for the program. The amount is based on the state's an av-ern Idaho gymnasium.

Also, Jerome High School's class of 2003 has set up the Dan Brown Memorial Fund. Donations can be made at any Wells Fargo branch until April 6 or at tonight's event.

All funds raised will go to Brown's wife, Jordan, and Several things are prompting the building boom. Contractor James Ray points to the relatively low cost of lumber and labor, factors that have resulted in "building prices as low as I've seen in 15 years."

Ray built 35 homes in 2011, but already has 20 under construction this year with another 16 to begin soon.

Affordable land and low interest rates also play a part in the industry's revival, said James Wallace, general manager of Franklin Building Supply. Even the mild winter helped.

"The year is looking very bright," he said. TKO Construction is getting in on the action, with seven more homes under construction now than it had at the same time last year.

"Our local economy is fueling a lot of excitement in new construction," said sales manager Chad DeBie.

As contractors benefit, so do their suppliers. Anthony Renaldi of BMC Select said their sales are up 23 percent this year compared to the same period in 2011.

Another Suspect to Face Trial in Wendy's Robbery

alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • A second suspect in a January armed robbery of the Jerome Wendy's restaurant will face a trial. Branden Alexander Galbreath, 20, of Galbreath Jerome, has been accused of aiding and abetting in the crime and was charged with grand theft, burglary, robbery, battery, second-degree kidnapping, aggravated assault, and conspiracy to commit robbery.

Admitted robber Nick Maria, 18, testified at a Wednesday preliminary hearing that Galbreath knew Maria and alleged accomplice Taylor Cnossen, 19, were going to rob Wendy's the night of Jan. 26. Maria also said Galbreath waited in the car while the other two entered the restaurant to rob $900 from its manager at gunpoint, then asked for $100 of the stolen money once back at Maria's house.

For cooperating with police and testifying, Maria has been offered a place in the state's retained-jurisdiction program and has not yet been arrested or charged in the case.

Jerome Police Detective Dan Kennedy also testified at the hearing about an interview with Galbreath.

In both cases, testimony cited Cnossen, Maria, Galbreath, Jorge Alatorre-Banuelos and Cesar Granados as all hearing the plans for the robbery. Galbreath and Maria differed on a few details such as who owned the gun used in the robbery. Maria testified the gun was provided by Galbreath, Galbreath while told Kennedy the gun belonged to Maria's mother.

Kennedy said he discovered Maria's mother owns a

BY ALISON GENE SMITH black, .22 caliber handgun similar to the one described as used in the robbery.

Defense attorney Stacy DePew argued prosecutors did not have enough evidence to show Galbreath actively participated in the crime. Simply being present during the announcement and then waiting in the car were not enough to show that he was aiding and abetting, she argued. Cnossen Jerome County

Magistrate Judge Tom Borresen also questioned whether Galbreath's mere presence could be shown to be aiding in the crime, but said he could see how a jury would decide so and ordered the case to be heard in district court on April 23.

Cnossen was charged with grand theft, burglary, robbery, battery and false imprisonment. A district court hearing is scheduled for April 2.

Galbreath was also arraigned Feb. 13 in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on a count of grand theft by possession and/or disposing of stolen property. Alatorre-Banuelos was arraigned earlier that month on a count of burglary. The two were accused of stealing a laptop, jewelry and a handgun from a Twin Falls residence and then pawning the items.

At Wednesday's hearing, Borresen lowered Galbreath's bond from $250,000 to $50,000. He also ordered Galbreath to have no contact with Maria, Alatorre-Banuelos or Granados and said he must not enter the Jerome Wendy's restaurant.

After the hearing, Kennedy said he filed the same seven charges as Galbreath faces against Granados and Alatorre-Banuelos earlier Wednesday.

Health District to Seek Boost from Counties

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Facing a budget deficit, the South Central Public Health District is setting out to request more funds from its county contributors.

During Wednesday's board meeting, Director Rene LeBlanc explained that rising health insurance costs and unexpected employee hires increased the district's spending. This leaves an almost $170,300 deficit for next year's budget.

SCPHD is now looking to increase its $1 million in county contributions by 2 percent. The increase would still leave the district with a $150,000 deficit, but it would help keep it from dipping too much into its reserves, LeBlanc said.

However, board members who are seated county commissioners expressed concern that counties may not have the extra funds to spare.

"Two percent is reasonable," said Terry Kramer, a Twin Falls County commissioner. "But with less money coming from the state, I don't know what might happen."

The district had cut six employee positions to help stay within budget. However, LeBlanc was soon forced to hire two more employees to ensure the district could adequately perform services and spend needed time billing for reimbursements.

"We have reached a point where if we cut any more staff, we'll have to cut programs," he said. "We will be using our reserves."

Board members won't officially set the budget until April, giving time for LeBlanc to submit his funding requests to all eight counties within the district.

Board members also moved to sell the SCPHD Rupert office location to Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

The three employees there would move to the Burley of fice and shuttle into Rupert for vaccinations and other services.

However, board member Cheryl Juntunen expressed concern that selling the location could send the message that SCPHD is abandoning the area.

"I do think there's a worry we're not coming back," Juntunen said. "So I think we need to make it clear that we're going to still be there."

Bollar appointed public defender Daniel Brown to represent Nash, 37, and ordered a new magistrate preliminary hearing. Bollar said he would not allow Nash to "circulate" among defense attorneys by threatening them.

Co-defendant Robert Joseph Lambert, who faces the same charges, waived his preliminary hearings and will face a June 20 jury trial.

Minidoka County Prosecutor Lance Stevenson said a warrant has also been issued for the arrest of a third suspect in the case.

Nash and Lambert were arrested for allegedly attempting to make off with a store cash cart containing more than $50,000.

According to court records, the men allegedly parked on the south end of the store so Nash could enter to scope out the car's location. Lambert then allegedly donned a mask or hood and forcefully took the cart from an employee.

As he neared the south exit, he allegedly hit a shopping cart with an infant in it, which struck the mother of the child and careened across the floor, nearly throwing the infant to the ground. The child's father allegedly confronted Lambert, who pulled a knife and stabbed the father.

Another shopper al-legedly tried to help the father subdue Lambert and take the knife before he was arrested. Nash left the scene and was later arrested in Gooding County.

T.F. Man Arraigned on Felony Battery Charges

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A 29year-old Twin Falls man has been accused of battering a 6-month pregnant woman.

Jolly Hansulum Sikain was arraigned on a charge of domestic battery inflicting traumatic injury on Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

On March 23 Twin Falls police responded to the 600 block of Grant Street for a call about a battery.

When they arrived they discovered a pregnant woman with fresh, bleeding lacerations to her back, bruising on her cheeks and red marks on an arm.

The woman told police Sikain had tied her hands behind her back using a cellphone charger cord and proceeded to strike her with a belt, punch her, kick her and throw her against a wall. The woman said she was able to escape and told a roommate to call police.

When and officer later found Sikain at a home in the 600 block of Polk Street, he said Sikain smelled of alcohol. According to court records Sikain said he had had about six beers at 3 p.m. Police say Sikain told them he and the woman had an argument and she began to strike herself in the back with a wire.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 6.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Harris Seeks Jerome Co.'s Support

Jerome County voters have a choice on May 15 to elect a candidate with a wealth of experience, an open mind and the ability to represent all of Jerome County.

With almost eight years of experience on Jerome County's Planning and Zoning Commission and the necessary experience to work closely with voters, residents, public and county officials, I am up to the job. I have proudly lived in Jerome County for many years and worked 20 years at Watts Manufacturing, beginning in 1974 as the shop foreman and concluding as general manager.

Yes, I did run as a Democrat in 2006; however, it is crucial to note that I switched to the Republican Party only to reflect my long-held conservative views. I will represent all voters, all parties and all residents in Jerome County. When called upon, I will listen and implement decisions reflecting majority views. In 2008, residents in Jerome County formed a group called Jerome Concerned Citizens, which consisted of both parties, and many times the meetings were held in our home. Having served in the U.S. Navy from 1961 to 1970 and serving on the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission, I understand and appreciate procedure, team work, collaboration, cooperation and sometimes compromising. These are all strong qualities to make me the next Jerome County commissioner. I am Sam Harris, your Republican candidate for Jerome County commissioner, and I would appreciate your vote on May 15. SAM HARRIS Jerome

Republican Congressman Walter Jones wants to impeach President Obama over potential actions in Syria and Iran. # Those Without Affiliation Don't Always Reject God

he Rise of the Nones" is one of 10 trends changing American life, according to Time magazine's March 12 cover story. That's because the "nones" those who mark "none" on surveys that ask them to identify their religious affiliation - are the fastestgrowing religious group in the United States.

Not surprisingly, the increase in the unaffiliated comes at the expense of America's mainstream religions, which means that Christianity is taking the biggest hit. Mainstream Protestant churches have lost more than a third of their members since 1960. Evangelical churches are also feeling the pinch; Southern Baptists are hurting. Various surveys illuminate this trend: About 75 percent of Americans between the ages of 18 and 29 now consider themselves "spiritual but not religious." Furthermore, all traditional forms of Christian practice have sharply declined from previous decades (including church attendance, Bible study and prayer), and doubts are much sharper regarding traditional Christian beliefs. Although a recent bumper crop of pundits likes to proclaim that we'd all be better off with no religion, I suspect that the majority of us believe that religion, in spite of its flaws, offers individuals the inspiration to be better people and to create a better nation. Seminary and church leaders, in particular, are highly motivated to staunch the decline. Unfortunately, many of them believe that what's really needed is a return to the "faith of our fathers," stricter adherence to creeds and (this is America, after all) better marketing methods. I advocate a radically different solution: the Emerging Church. It's a movement based on understanding the reasons for mainstream religion's dramatic decline: improved scientific understanding, changing social norms, an increasingly pluralistic religious culture and more freedom to doubt and question - a freedom that until the last three centuries was mostly absent or suppressed and that is still resisted, sometimes violently, in much of the world today.

In my experience, the nones are not rejecting God. They are rejecting doctrinal requirements that they no longer find believable, along with the rigid structures of many organized religions. For that reason, the rise of the nones may well be a new kind of spiritual awakening, one in which doubters are welcome. In the Christian tradition, for example, the Emerging Church invites participation from all who find themselves attracted to the teachings, actions and person of Jesus. It isn't crucial that members call themselves Christians, or that they believe Bible stories literally (rather than metaphorically), or even that they are believers rather than agnostics and atheists. As long as people want to sincerely engage with the teachings of Jesus and with the communities that seek to live by those values - "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," "Love your neighbor," "Blessed are the peacemakers" - they are welcome. Given that there are already almost 10,000 religions in the world, Jewish author Eric Weiner writes that we need to "invent not a new religion but, rather, a new way of being religious." As the dean of a theology school, I see the Emerging Church attracting an incredible diversity of people into new and experimental kinds of religious community. The lapsed faithful, exhausted refugees from mainline faiths, former evangelicals, frustrated Catholics and seekers with no background at all in or ganized religion are creating (in Weiner's beautiful phrase) "a religious space that celebrates doubt, encourages experimentation and allows one to utter the word God without embarrassment."

The leaders of the movement share a common fascination with the radical teachings of Jesus, but the communities they form vary widely. Meeting sites range from homes to pubs to parks to churches to convention centers. These groups aren't rigidly hierar### reality is understood (or doubted) by each of their members.

Emerging Christians don't have a monopoly on spirituality for the nones, however. L.A.'s East Side Jews often meet for discussion, comedy nights or outreach projects. Although they bill themselves as "an irreverent, non-denominational collective for Jews with confused identities," their events usually have a spiritual thread as well. In one meeting the group invited Jewish and Muslim comics, and professors from Claremont Lincoln University, the inter-religious consortium I work with, to take questions from the membership and their invited Muslim guests. The discussion ranged from hilarious to deeply spiritual, and participants were clearly moved. I see an immense yearning for these kinds of communities in America. If religious leaders can quit idolizing doctrinal purity and instead create a place for people who doubt and question as well as those who believe, I believe faith in America will have a vital future. And these new models for "church" will be better equipped to work collaboratively with all Americans, no matter what their religion.

U.S. Supreme Court Turns Down Petition from Duncan

BY REBECCA BOONE Associated Press

BOISE • The U.S. Supreme Court won't consider whether a man convicted of kidnapping, torturing and murdering some members of a northern Idaho family was competent when he waived his appeal.

The high court rejected the petition from Joseph Edward Duncan III on Monday. Now U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge in Idaho must hold a hearing to determine if Duncan was competent when he decided to waive his right to an appeal in the 2008 death penalty case. If Duncan is found to be incompetent in the matter of waiving his right to an appeal, Lodge must hold an additional hearing to see if he was competent when he represented himself during his sentencing hearing.

Lodge sentenced Duncan to die for kidnapping, torturing and murdering a 9-yearold Coeur d'Alene boy in 2005. Prosecutors said Duncan snatched Dylan Groene and his 8-year-old sister from their home after killing their older brother, mother and mother's fiance. Duncan kept the children at a remote Montana campsite for weeks before killing Dylan and returning with Dylan's sister to Coeur d'Alene, where he was arrested.

Duncan has also been sentenced to two life terms in California state court for torturing and killing 10-year-old Anthony Martinez in 1997. Duncan abducted Mar-and Carmen Cubias, 9, near Seattle in 1996. At the sentencing hearing in Idaho, Duncan decided to represent himself even though the court had provided him with three defense attorneys. The court-appointed attorneys were ordered to help Duncan when he asked, but otherwise allow him to present his own defense.

The attorneys objected, telling the court that they suspected Duncan wasn't competent to represent himself, but Lodge rejected that challenge and decided not to hold a hearing on the matter. Instead, he had Duncan examined by a local psychologist who found that while Duncan's thoughts were "somewhat unusual," he wasn't delusional and that he'd waived his right to an attorney knowingly and voluntarily.

Duncan's attorneys, meanwhile, contended that experts they contacted found that Duncan suffered from delusional beliefs, paranoia, grandiosity and psychotic breaks from reality.

Lodge decided to let Duncan represent himself, and Duncan waived his right to an appeal after he was sentenced to death.

COEUR d'ALENE • A century-old turbine engine could be headed to the scrapheap if the director of the Museum of North Idaho doesn't find a new home for it soon.

The massive engine, which used to power the Northwest Timber Co., has been on display outside the Fort Sherman Museum at North Idaho College since the 1980s. A remodel of the Fort Sherman site set to be completed by June doesn't include plans for the 10-ton turbine.

The turbine's former worksite, Riverstone, has developed into a mix of condominiums, retails shops and park space. North Idaho College is refurbishing the interior of the Powder House at the Fort Sherman site, and the plans call for transforming where the turbine now sits into a landscaped area for students to gather.

The college wants to have that project done by June, before its president, Priscilla Bell, retires, said Ron Dorn, NIC vice president for resource management.

The museum's 4,000 square feet of shed storage off Northwest Boulevard is full, and it already has hundreds of duplicate pieces it is looking to get rid of.

Even if the museum can't keep the turbine, its goal would be to find a home so that it doesn't have to be scrapped, Dahlgren said.

Senate Votes to Ease Sale of Unwanted Horses

BOISE • Horse stables tired of being stiffed by boarders will likely have an easier time selling animals to recoup their costs.

The Senate voted 33-0 Tuesday to ease requirements for auctions.

Currently, horses must be sold at a licensed public livestock auction. But Sen. Melinda Smyser says these licensed auctions in Idaho typically don't deal in equines.

With this bill, future sales of horses to satisfy liens could occur at a public auction.

The measure, which has already cleared the House, now heads to Gov. C.L. County case threw Idaho's 35-year history of specialuse permitting into question.

Bill sponsor Sen. Tim Corder says a remedy was needed, to keep decades of land-use planning from descending into chaos.

But House members also demanded the bill include new public-notice requirements meant to govern industrial wind farms.

The combination, something Sen. Elliot Werk of Boise called one of those "funny" little peculiarities that emerge in bills during a legislative session's waning days, was inserted by turbine foes. # Bill Would Stagger Food Stamp Issuance

But, with session ending soon, grocers are discouraged. IDAHO PRESS-TRIBUNE

BOISE • Grocers are asking Health and Welfare to distribute food stamps – or SNAP benefits – over a number of days rather than just the first of the month.

But for the second year in a row, a bill that would answer that request probably won't make it to the governor's desk.

It costs hundreds of thousands of dollars more to stagger issuance, said Senate Health and Welfare Committee Chairman Patti Anne Lodge, R-Huston.

Lodge is holding the bill in committee after it glided through the House Friday, sponsored by Rep. Christy Perry, R-Nampa. "During times when we cannot fund education at the levels we would like, should we spend taxpayer dollars because a company cannot handle all the business it receives?" Lodge asked.

Grocers see little hope for bill, Northwest Grocery Association lobbyist Roy Eiguren said.

The current system overwhelms stores the first of each month, making it almost impossible to keep shelves stocked and racking up costs in overtime and food spoilage, he said.

TIMES-NEWS

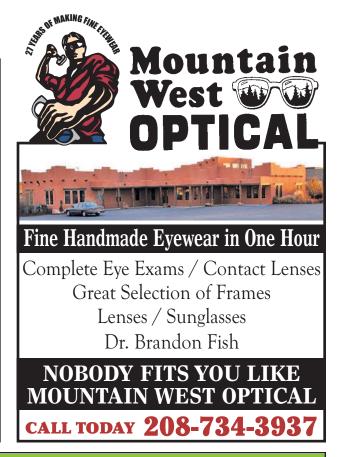

"It is a very real problem that is impacting business and consumers in Idaho, and unfortunately our state government is unable to resolve it."

Although single-day issuance is the easiest and cheapest option for the Department of Health and Welfare, "there's no push back at all" if legislators choose to switch over, DHW spokesman Tom Shanahan said.

"We can understand how it has impacted some areas and some grocers. So if the state can fund the equipment and the people, then we're good to go with it."

Canyon County grocers may be rooting extra hard for this bill because 24 percent of county residents use SNAP benefits, Shanahan said. That's higher than any other county by about 4 percent.

Statewide, 239,000 Idahoans receive SNAP benefits, up from 154,000 in mid-2009, when the department switched from five-day to single-day issuance to save money.

Animal Cruelty Bill Passes House

BOISE • House lawmakers have approved a plan to authorize felony penalties for animal cruelty and cockfighting in Idaho for the first time.

The House voted 64-2 Wednesday to pass the bill, which creates a three strikes felony for animal cruelty convictions.

The proposal was amended to also make it a felony to organize cockfighting events accompanied by drugs and gambling, a move that appeases animal rights groups threatening to put an initiative before voters with much stiffer animal cruelty penalties.

Blackfoot Rep. Dennis Lake says the legislation is backed by the livestock industry, which has historically opposed animal cruelty bills. The measure exempts normal animal production practices.

It now heads to the full Senate for final approval.

More Security for U.S. Troops

U.S. military commanders in Afghanistan have assigned 'guardian angels' — troops that watch over their comrades even as they sleep — and other increased security measures.

BY LOLITA C. BALDOR AND PAULINE JELINEK Associated Press

WASHINGTON • U.S. military commanders in Afghanistan have assigned "guardian angels" – troops that watch over their comrades even as they sleep and have ordered a series of other increased security measures to protect troops against possible attacks by rogue Afghans.

The added protections are part of a directive issued in recent weeks by Marine Gen. John Allen, the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan, to guard against insider threats, according to a senior military official. And they come in the wake of a spike in attacks on U.S. and coalition forces by Afghans, including the point-blank shooting deaths of two U.S. advisers in Afghanistan's Ministry of Interior.

Some of the changes have been subtle, others not so much.

In several Afghan ministries, Americans are now allowed to carry weapons. And they have been instructed to rearrange their office desks there to face the door, so they can see who is coming in, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity to describe the internal directive.

While Allen did not detail the new measures in a briefing earlier this week, he acknowledged that changes

WASHINGTON • Concluding three days of fervent, public disagreement, a Supreme Court seemingly split over ideology will now wrestle in private about whether to strike down key parts or even all of President Barack Obama's historic health care law. The justices' decision, due this June, will affect the way virtually every American receives and pays for care.

The court wrapped up public arguments Wednesday on the overhaul, which is designed to extend health insurance to most of the 50 million Americans now without it. The first and biggest issue the justices must decide is whether the centerpiece of the law, the requirement that nearly all Americans carry insurance or pay a penalty, is constitutional.

usual in that it assumed a negative answer to that central question. What should happen to other provisions, the justices and lawyers debated, if the court strikes down the requirement? If the justices are following their normal practice, they had not even met to take a preliminary vote in the case before all argument concluded.

Questions at the court this week days showed a strong ideological division between the liberal justices who seem inclined to uphold the law in its entirety and the conservative justices whose skepticism about Congress' power to force people to buy insurance suggests deep trouble for the insurance requirement, and possibly the entire law.

The divide on the court reflects a similar split in public opinion about the law, which Congress approved two years ago when Democrats controlled

Less clear was whether the court would conclude the entire law, with its hundreds of unrelated provisions, would have to be cast aside.

HAVANA • Pope Benedict XVI demanded more freedom for the Catholic Church in communist-run Cuba and preached against "fanaticism" in an unusually political sermon Wednesday before hundreds of thousands at Revolution Plaza, with President Raul Castro in the front row.

Before the pope's departure, he met with the president's brother, revolutionary leader Fidel Castro. Castro grilled the pontiff on changes in church liturgy and his role as spiritual leader of the world's Catholics, a Vatican spokesman said.

Benedict's homily was a notso-subtle jab at the island's leadership before a vast crowd of Cubans, both in the sprawling plaza and watching on television. But he also clearly urged an end to Cuba's isolation, a reference to the 50-year U.S. economic embargo and the inability of 11 American presidents and brothers Fidel and Raul Castro to forge peace.

"Cuba and the world need change, but this will occur only if each one is in a position to seek the truth and chooses the way of love, sowing reconciliation and fraternity," Benedict said

The remark built upon the famed call of his predecessor, John Paul II, who said in his groundbreaking 1998 visit that Cuba should "open itself up to the world, and may the world open itself up to Cuba."

JetBlue Airways Pilot Grew Increasingly Erratic on Flight

BY RUSS BYNUM AND DANNY ROBBINS Associated Press

RICHMOND HILL, Ga. • JetBlue Airways captain Clayton Osbon showed up unusually late to fly Flight 191 to Las Vegas. The plane was in midair when he eerily told his co-pilot they wouldn't make it there.

Osbon started rambling about religion. He scolded air traffic controllers to quiet down, then turned off the radios altogether, and dimmed the monitors in the cockpit. He said aloud that "things just don't matter" and encouraged his co-pilot that they take a leap of faith.

"We're not going to Vegas," Osbon said.

What unfolded next, according to court documents released Wednesday, was a dramatic chase and struggle in the cabin that ended with passengers tackling Osbon, 49, and holding him down until the co-pilot could make an emergency landing in Amarillo, Texas. He was charged Wednesday with interfering with a flight crew.

A pilot with JetBlue since 2000, Osbon's odd behavior on Tuesday became increasingly erratic after the flight departed New York, worrying his fellow crew members so much that they locked him out after he abruptly left the cockpit, according to an affidavit. Osbon then started yelling about Jesus, al-Qaida and a possible bomb on board, forcing passengers to tie him up with seat belt extenders and zip tie handcuffs for about 20 minutes until the plane landed.

"The (first officer) became really worried when Osbon said 'we need to take a leap of faith," according to the sworn affidavit given by FBI agent John Whitworth. "Osbon started trying to correlate completely unrelated numbers like different radio frequencies, and he talked about sins in Las Vegas."

Osbon left the cockpit soon after and tensions on the plane began to escalate, according to witness accounts compiled by investigators. Osbon, described by neighbors in Georgia as tall and muscular, "aggressively" grabbed the hands of a flight attendant who confronted him and later sprinted down the cabin while being chased.

From inside the locked cockpit, which Osbon tried to re-enter by banging on the door, the co-pilot gave an order through the intercom to restrain Osbon, the affidavit said. Passengers wrestled Osbon to the ground, and one female flight attendant's ribs were bruised during the struggle. No one on board was seriously hurt.

federal charges The against Osbon were filed in Texas. He was being held Wednesday at Northwest Texas Healthcare System in Amarillo and remains under a medical evaluation. Under federal law, a conviction for interference with a flight crew or attendants can bring up to 20 years in prison. The offense is defined as assaulting or intimidating the crew, interfering with its duties or diminishes its ability to do operate the plane.

JetBlue spokeswoman Allison Steinberg said earlier Wednesday that Osbon had been suspended pending a review of the flight.

JetBlue's CEO and president Dave Barger told NBC's "Today" show that Osbon is a "consummate professional" whom he has "personally known" for years. He said there is nothing in the captain's record to indicate he would be a risk on a flight. Fellow pilots, friends and Osbon's neighbors in Richmond Hill, Ga., a bedroom community on the coast just south of Savannah, said they were baffled by the midflight outburst. None recalled any previous health or mental problems.

allies on television by a margin of more than 4-1, with an attack-heavy diet of television ads.

In addition, Romney's campaign attacked Santorum in a recorded message called into thousands of homes.

"I was shocked to find out that Rick Santorum repeatedly supported big labor and joined with liberal Democrats in voting against rightto-work legislation during his time in Washington," it says. "He even opposed the hiring of permanent replacements for striking workers. When it comes to big labor, Rick Santorum's record of opposing right-towork legislation and standing with union bosses speaks for itself."

Santorum is campaigning across the state as an ally of Walker.

"I'm excited to stand here with Gov. Walker. Not only should he not be recalled, he should be re-elected," Santorum said in LaCrosse, Wis. "When Gov. Walker ran and your lieutenant governor ran, they didn't run as they would be moderates. They said the problems in Wisconsin were serious?"

There was no let-up in Santorum's criticism of Romney, whom he said is "completely out of sync with America'' and "uniquely disqualified" to lead the party against President Barack Obama.

But after absorbing defeats in a string of industrial states in the past month – Michigan, Ohio and Illinois he said of Wisconsin: "I think we'll do well here. The question is how well?"

Erich Thorp, a neighbor who recently helped Osbon put a fence in his yard, described Osbon as affable and outgoing, standing about 6foot-4 with a crew cut and a muscular build.

"I just don't know what happened. It's just not like Clayton," Thorp said. "He was always happy and positive thinking. He never complained about anything?"

Osbon was also a direct marketer for health shakes sold by Visalus Sciences, a marketing company based in Troy, Mich. Ashley Guerra, a fellow Visalus marketer in Georgia, said she saw Osbon just last weekend and that he appeared friendly and helpful as usual.

said, adding that now someone is "always over-

And on Feb. 25, two U.S. military advisers were gunned down at their desks in one of the most heavily guarded ministry building in Kabul.

As a result of the shootings, more than 300 advisers were pulled out of the Afghan ministries. So far, several dozen have returned, but many will not go back until additional security measures are put in place by the Afghans. That would include better vetting procedures, background checks and physical security measures at the ministries. The military official also said some advisers may not return, since commanders have determined that some may no longer be needed in the jobs.

alone was expected to extend coverage to 15 million people and which no lower court has rejected.

Solicitor General Donald Verrilli Jr. took a few seconds at the end of the Medicaid argument to make a final plea for the court to uphold the entire law, which he said would "secure the blessings of liberty" for millions of Americans by providing them with affordable health care.

Verrilli told the court that Congress had made a policy decision to fight the high cost of medical care through the new law. "I would urge the court to respect that judgment," he said.

Paul Clement, the lawyer for the states challenging the law, retorted that it would be a strange definition of liberty to make people who may not want it buy health care insurance. And he called Congress' threat to cut all Medicaid funding from states that refuse to expand the program "a direct threat to our federalism?"

Not since 2000, when the court resolved the Bush v. Gore dispute over Florida election returns that sealed George W. Bush's election as president has a Supreme Court case drawn so much attention.

In their questions Wednesday, liberal justices Sonia Sotomayor, Elena Kagan, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer took issue with Clement, who was asking that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act be tossed out in its entirety.

"What's wrong with leaving this in the hands of those who should be fixing this?" asked Sotomayor, referring to Congress.

Chief Justice John Roberts also spoke about parts of the law that "have nothing to do with any of the things we are" talking about.

For example, Ginsburg observed that the act deals with issues such as black lung disease.

"Why make Congress redo those?" she asked. "There are many things" that have "nothing to do with affordable health care?" But Clement said the court would be leaving "a hollow shell" if it decided to excise the several key provisions. "The rest of the law cannot stand," he contended.

TIMES-NEWS

Roberts and Justice Anthony Kennedy also asked hard questions of Deputy Solicitor General Edwin Kneedler that indicated they are at least considering Clement's arguments. Kneedler said that the only other provisions the court should kill in the event the mandate is stricken are the two that bar refusing coverage to sick people and limit ing the charges to old or sick people.

Justice Antonin Scalia suggested many members of Congress might not have voted for the bill without the central provisions, and he said the court should not go through each and every page to sort out what stays and what goes.

In the afternoon arguments, the liberal justices made clear they would vote to uphold the Medicaid expansion, for which the federal government would pay almost all the costs.

Justices Sotomayor, Kagan, Ginsburg and Breyer voiced strong disagreement with the states' contention that the expansion of the joint state-federal program would be unconstitutionally coercive.

"Why is a big gift from the federal government a matter of coercion?" Kagan asked.

Even Roberts joined his liberal colleagues in questioning Clement about the states' argument that that the expansion comes with too many strings.

"Well, why isn't that a consequence of how willing they have been since the New Deal to take the federal government's money? And it seems to me that they have compromised their status as independent sovereigns because they are so dependent on what the federal government has done, they should not be surprised that the federal government having attached the - they tied the strings, they shouldn't be surprised if the federal government isn't going to start pulling them," Roberts said.

"On the other hand there are those who wrongly interpret this search for the truth, leading them to irrationality and fanaticism; they close themselves up in 'their truth' and try to impose it on others," he said from the altar, backed by an image of Cuba's revolutionary hero Ernesto "Che" Guevara.

Still, it was unclear how much the pope's message resonated with ordinary Cubans.

Many in the crowd had trouble hearing him over the loudspeakers, and others said it was hard to understand the dense biblical message delivered by the pope in a soft voice.

<sup>4</sup>I don't understand this Mass at all. I don't have an education in these things and I know nothing about religion,'' said Mario Mendez, a 19-year-old communications student. "On top of that, I can't hear anything?"

Benedict's comments were an unmistakable criticism of the Cuban reality even if the pope didn't mention the government by name, said the Rev. Joseph Fessio, a former student of Benedict's. As his U.S. publisher, Fessio knows well the pope's message and how he transmits it, particularly the watchwords of his pontificate: truth and freedom.

"Does anyone in Cuba not know how the words themselves condemn the reality there?" Fessio said in an email.

Benedict's trip was aimed largely at building a greater place for his church in the least Catholic nation in Latin America. In his homily, he urged authorities to let the church more freely preach its message and educate its young in the faith in schools and universities.

to the church, a pattern that accelerated with the visit of Pope John Paul II.

"It must be said with joy that in Cuba steps have been taken to enable the church to carry out her essential mission of expressing her faith openly and publicly," Benedict said. "Nonetheless this must continue forward" for the good of Cuban society.

During the 30-minute meeting between the pope and Fidel Castro at the Vatican's Embassy, the retired Cuban leader – a one-time altar boy who was educated by Jesuit priests - essentially interviewed Benedict, asking him about the changes in church teachings since he was a child, what it's like to be a pope and the challenges facing humanity today, said the Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi.

Benedict, meanwhile, raised issues such as the role of freedom and liberty, Lombardi said.

The meeting began with some jokes about their ages. Castro is 85, Benedict reaches that milestone next month. "Yes, I'm old, but I can still do my job," Lombardi quoted the pope as saying.

Video released later showed Fidel arriving at the embassy wearing a dark warm-up jacket and a scarf. He seemed animated, if unsure on his feet.

"I have felt very good," Castro could be heard telling the pontiff in the choppy footage.

Castro introduced his companion, Dalia Soto del Valle, and two of his children, and asked the pope to send him some books to elaborate on the topics they discussed, Lombardi said. He described the meeting as intense, animated and cordial.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Materials Lead U.S. Stocks Lower as Commodities Dip

NEW YORK (AP) • Falling commodity prices punished materials and energy companies Wednesday, pushing Wall Street's major stock indexes to a lower close. Crude oil lost nearly $2 to $105 a barrel, hurting energy stocks. Peabody Energy fell 3.4 percent, Chevron 1.1 percent and Exxon 0.9 percent. Materials fell the most among the 10 industry groups in the Standard & Poor's 500 index. The Dow closed down 71.52 points at 13,126.21. The broader S&P 500 index lost 6.98 to 1,405.54. The Nasdaq composite index, heavy with technology stocks, fell 15.39 to 3,104.96.

Bank of America CEO's Pay Quadruples in 2011

LOS ANGELES (MCT) • In a year when Bank of America Corp.'s stock plunged 58 percent and the company announced plans to lay off 30,000 employees, Chief Executive Brian Moynihan's compensation package more than quadrupled to nearly $8.1 million.

Here's why: In 2011, the Charlotte, N.C., bank recorded $1.4 billion in profit after losing $2.2 billion the year before.

Moynihan

So although the bank's compensation and benefits committee kept Moynihan's salary the same at $950,000, he landed $6.1 million in performance-reliant stock.

TWIN FALLS • There may soon be another fast food option in town.

Chick-fil-A received approval for a special-use permit Tuesday from the city's Planning and Zoning Commission to build a store at 1631 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. The .91-acre site is currently a parking lot adjacent to Target and Key Bank near the intersection of Blue Lakes N. and Pole Line Road.

The special-use permit was required to operate a drive-through window. The commission voted unanimously to approve the request and the Twin Falls City Council does not need to give its stamp of approval, a city of Twin Falls spokeswoman said Wednesday.

Robert Lombardi of Chick-fil-A said the company hopes to open the store during the last quarter of this year or first quarter of 2013. It must negotiate the city permitting process before construction can begin.

"We're excited and want to get this going quickly," he said.

More U.S. CEOs Plan to Hire as Economic Outlook Brightens

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A grow-

ing number of chief executives at large U.S. companies say they are more optimistic about the economy and plan to step up hiring. The brighter view from the boardroom comes after the best three months of job growth in two years.

The Business Roundtable said Wednesday that a survey of its CEO members found that 42 percent expect to hire over the next six months. That's up from 35 percent three months ago.

Nearly half plan to spend more on machinery and other capital equipment and more than 80 percent expect their sales to rise. Both those figures are much higher than three months ago.

The chief executives' overall outlook on the economy improved sharply from the end of last year. The group's outlook index jumped to 96.9 in the current January-March quarter. That's up from 77.9 in previous quarter and the highest reading since last spring.

The group is an association of the leaders of the 200 biggest U.S. companies.

The fourth quarter survey's finding that only 35 percent of CEOs planned to add jobs was the lowest in 5 quarters. Yet the next three months saw the biggest job gains in two years.

The economy has added an average of 245,000 jobs per month since December. That has lowered the unemployment rate to 8.3 percent, the lowest in three years.

It suggests that most of the gains came from smaller companies, rather than the large corporations that make up the Roundtable's membership.

Research shows that small and particularly new businesses create most of the new jobs in the United States. Businesses with fewer than 500 employees account for about 65 percent of jobs created in the past 20 years.

The improvement in the CEO survey suggests the job gains "will continue," said Jim McNerney, chairman of the Roundtable and CEO of Boeing Co.

But plenty of concerns remain, he said. Europe's debt crisis could weigh on the U.S. recovery. Growth has slowed in China. And oil prices have spiked since the fall, driving gas prices up.

WASHINGTON • U.S.

companies ordered more long-lasting goods last month, showing businesses are willing to buy equipment and machinery even after an investment tax credit was halved.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that orders for durable goods rose 2.2 percent in February after a steep drop in January. Greater demand for machinery, computers, autos and aircraft drove much of the increase.

Orders for so-called "core" capital goods, a good measure of business investment plans, rose 1.2 percent. Demand for these goods fell in January by the most in a year, after the full tax credit expired.

A durable good is expected to last at least three years. Orders can fluctuate sharply from month to month. Still, orders have been steadily rising since the recession ended nearly three years ago.

In February, durable goods orders totaled $211.8 billion, 42 percent above the recession low. Orders remain roughly 14 percent below their peak in December 2007.

The increase in February disappointed some economists, who had hoped to see a bigger gain in orders. Paul Ashworth, an economist at Capital Economics, noted that orders for commercial aircraft were much smaller than expected.

MF Global Executives Cooperating with DOJ Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) • Three MF Global executives say they are cooperating with a Justice Department investigation into more than $1 billion in customer money that vanished before the firm collapsed. But they largely deflected questions about the missing money at a congressional hearing Wednesday

Edith O'Brien, a fourth executive who had the authority to approve a transfer, declined to answer questions, invoking her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Lawmakers expressed frustration over the limited information provided by the witnesses during a threehour hearing of the House Financial Services oversight subcommittee. The panel was trying to piece together what happened in the final days before the firm filed for bankruptcy on Oct. 31.

The witnesses – senior finance executives and the firm's general counsel - barely mentioned MF Global's departed CEO, Jon Corzine.

Corzine, a former Democratic New Jersey senator and governor, testified in December that he never instructed anyone to misuse customer funds.

"Apparently no one did anything wrong, but there's more than a billion dollars missing," Rep. Michael Capuano, D-Mass., the subcommittee's senior Democrat, told the executives.

Rep. Stephen Lynch, another Massachusetts Democrat, said: "It is utterly disgraceful what has happened here. It's not believable, I've got to tell you."

A key issue raised at the hearing was whether MF Global improperly transferred $200 million from a customer account to cover a shortfall in an overseas account held by the firm.

O'Brien, a former assistant treasurer at MF Global, was subpoenaed to testify about an email she sent, which appears to contradict testimony from Corzine.

Thrills 2012

Tempted to try extreme outdoor sports this year? It'll be a good season for rock climbing, river rafting and BASE jumping.

BY ANDREW WEEKS aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With warmer weather approaching, thrill seekers are eager to get outdoors. If you're one of them, now is a good time to start planning your adventures. The Times-News asked Magic Valley enthusiasts how the season is shaping up for three of the region's big summer thrills. Here's what we learned:

Drier weather in 2012 is likely to mean a livelier season for rock climbing. River rafters expect high water, and some trips are already sold out. And BASE jumpers hope to draw more attention to the Perrine Bridge with celebrities' help.

Get Wet and Wild

If Randy McBride has his way, Mother Nature will allow at least 30 days to float the premier whitewater on the Murtaugh section of the Snake River. Water flow in the Snake right now looks promising.

"We've got a pretty good snowpack coming down," McBride said. "It just depends on how it comes down. If it hits 90 degrees in June, we're in big trouble."

McBride owns High Ad-

Hagerman. He said last year, because of a longer, wetter spring, wasn't nearly as good as this year is shaping up to be. Last year was cold even in June, he said, when he had to cancel trips for 120 people because of inclement weather.

"Our outlook for this ing really good right now," he said. "Weekends for July are just about booked full, and June and August are about half full."

After 40 years of running rivers — 30 years of that at High Adventure — McBride will sell his business to Wayne White at the end of McBride's wish for his last year running the river: "a good, bang-up year." He hopes to get between 800 to 1,000 people on the river.

Of course he'll need a little help. "Mother Nature is our biggest challenge."

You might not have much luck booking a camping spot at Redfish Lake, but there are other options. Now's a good time to plan your warm-weather camping trips.

BY DAVE WILKINS

For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • The mountains are still buried in snow and summer is three months away, yet it's not too early to start planning a camping trip.

It may, in fact, be too late to reserve some of the more popular campsites the West has to offer.

"A camping spot at Redfish Lake is probably out of the question," said Julie Thomas, a spokesperson for the Sawtooth National Forest.

Campers can reserve their favorite spots months in advance, and many savvy sojourners do just that.

The federal government starts taking online camping reservations Jan. 1, and by 2 p.m. that day many of the most popular sites have been snapped up, Thomas said.

"People come back to the same places every year," she said. "They have gotten used to the way the system works and do their best to get them."

Don't despair. Plenty of campsites are still available, although you may have to settle for a more remote spot that lacks amenities like flush toilets, showers, or a nearby lodge.

Consider Alturus Lake Inlet campground, for example. It's 17 miles south of Redfish in the Sawtooth range. Nearly half its campsites are designated as first-come, first served.

It has vault toilets, drinking water and some of the best hiking, fishing and canoeing opportunities you're likely to find.

Veteran campers Gale and Sue Chapman of Twin Falls actually prefer more rustic sites. It helps them avoid the crowds. They have a self-contained recreational vehicle, so they don't need a fully developed campground with restrooms and potable water.

Sometimes their campsite is nothing more than a fire pit formerly used by hunters.

"We look for something more out of the way, something that doesn't required reservations," Sue Chapman said. "We like to be where we can use our ATVs and don't have to pay a fee. That's what we are going to be doing this summer."

Chapman said they've found no-frills/no-fee campsites in the Stanley Basin and some may be available in the South Hills and other areas.

Campers who head into the backcountry need to be responsible.

"You have to take everything with you, and you have to take everything back out," Chapman said.

For families looking for developed campgrounds, there are basically two options: Reserve a spot as early as possible or take your chances at the last minute.

Idaho has 17 state parks that allow camping. Folks can reserve sites up to nine months in advance.

"For those who don't plan in advance, many of our parks will still have a few sites available even on busy weekends," said Jennifer Okerlund, communications manager for the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

The IDPR processed about 8,600 camping reservations in 2003, the first year that it offered online reservations. It now processes about 38,000 reservations annually.

"At some of our most popular parks, the spaces are reserved well in advance," Okerhund said.

People sometimes cancel reservations, so it's worth checking the state website occasionally to see if something has opened up. Be flexible.

"I would encourage folks to not limit themselves to the most popular campgrounds, but to explore some of those in more remote locations," Okerlund said.

Camping fees have increased a couple bucks per night for some of the most popular sites, but it's still inexpensive compared with some other forms of entertainment, she said.

"It's still cheaper for a family of four to go on an overnight camping trip than to go to the movies," Okerlund said.

It's likely to be a lot more fun too.

LEARN TO SHOOT A MUZZLELOADER

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • In a modern world there's still time for the past, even in hunting.

If you want to expand your season while learning about an old-style of hunting and hunting equipment, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has just the thing for you: a muzzleloader workshop, April 20-21.

The workshop, held at the Magic Valley Regional office at 324 S. 417 E., Jerome, is divided into two sections. The classroom portion from 6-9 p.m. April 20 covers hunting laws, equipment, accessories and safety concerns. The next morning, April 21, students will meet at the Jerome Gun Range from 9 a.m. to noon.

Students are asked to bring their own muzzleloaders, but guns are available for students who do not own one.

There's no cost to attend the workshop, but students are asked to register in advance. The class is limited to 25 students.

The Art of Outdoors Artist

Artist has helped further many causes with his work.

BY MICHAEL PEARCE McClatchy Newspapers

WICHITA, Kan. • For about 25 years, those who appreciate the outdoors have appreciated the wildlife artwork of Jerry Thomas.

The Scott City, Kan., native has created hundreds of outdoors paintings that have become everything from greeting cards and fine shotgun engravings to prized commissioned pieces and widelycirculated prints.

With fine details down to the number of feathers in a strutting turkey's wing or perfect replication of colors on a rooster pheasant, he's rated as one of the nation's best. But few realize how much the art has done for conservation and other causes through wide-scale sales of limited edition prints and other creations.

As an avid sportsman, Thomas said he feels indebted to conservation groups for enhancing wildlife. As a professional he feels closeness because many supported him greatly in his early days as an artist.

Thomas has no exact figures, but simple math shows his works have raised a lot.

"Ducks Unlimited did over 2,500 prints of one painting and they probably averaged, conservatively, $250 at auctions," Thomas said. "It doesn't take many of those to get

MICHAEL PEARCE • WICHITA EAGLE/MCT Outdoors artist Jerry Thomas numbers and signs a print at his home studio, March 15 in Manhattan, Kansas. into (millions)." Mike Hayden is familiar with the contributions. While governor in the late 1980s, he began working on projects with Thomas. The relationship has held through Hayden's tours with the U.S. Department of the Interior, the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks and years with Kansas Wildscape.

"Jerry's work has done a tremendous amount of good, working with Ducks Unlimited and a host of other organizations," Hayden said. "He's helped raise a tremendous amount of money and his work usually carries a strong conservation message, too."

Other groups include the National Wild Turkey Federation, Waterfowl USA, Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and Pheasants Forever.

The money raised from such sales goes mostly toward habitat and hunting recruitment projects.

Sometimes Thomas has been commissioned for such projects. Other times he's done it so he could keep the original and gain further exposure.

This is the 20th year he's donated the official print for the Governor's Turkey Hunt.

Becky Wolfe, hunt director, said the annul prints are presented to the 200-plus landowners who donate hunting grounds.

courtesy Jerry thomas Gallery & collection VIA wichita Eagle/MCI A painting titled 'Silent Watch — 1996,' is part of the collection by artist Jerry Thomas.

Thomas' No. 1 signed print of each painting may bring $1,000 or more for the hunt that sponsors several college scholarships.

Proceeds have gone for other causes, too.

About 10 years ago funds were needed to create a 250acre wetland hunting area for youth near Milford Reservoir. The project was to honor Zach Hudec, an avid 14-yearold hunter who died unexpectedly.

Selling prints of a painting Thomas did of Hudec's favored hunting spot was a sizable part of the fund raising.

These are especially busy times for Thomas. His home holds several artworks in progress and a gallery of his works has been opened in Scott City.

In the last few years he's gained a reputation for his western history paintings.

His attention to detail includes perfect replication of the clothing worn and gear carried by participants. Their exact likenesses come from researching old photographs.

Thomas, 53, has donated prints to help with several western causes, like the purchase of land that once held a famed Cheyenne camp Custer and his men failed to conquer near Larned. The U.S. National Park Service manages the site.

Hayden said as much as Thomas' works have already done to promote good causes, the best may be yet to come.

"As Jerry's matured his artwork has matured, too, and he keeps getting better," Hayden said. "He's got a lot of good years left ahead of him."

Wildlife Watching Becoming a Popular Trend

BY PAUL SMITH

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

MILWAUKEE • The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service surveys Americans every five years to assess trends in outdoor activities.

According to a 2009 analysis of the results, one of the most popular "outdoor recreation activities" was wildlife watching.

The Service estimates one-third of U.S. residents engage in wildlife watching.

For purposes of the survey, trend: people who watch wildlife via a digital device. Last year a video camera

Certainly it's a big number. There's no substitute for

HUNTING SEASON CLOSING ON PRAIRIE DOGS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • State wildlife officials are reminding hunters they can't shoot prairie dogs during breeding season from April 1 to June 15.

Utah keeps a hunting season for Gunnison's and white-tailed prairie dogs on public land, just like game animals. The limits leave enough prairie dogs for such predators as owls and black-footed ferrets.

Gunnison's prairie dogs can be found east of the Colorado River. Whitetailed prairie dogs are found in other spots in eastern Utah. Hunters aren't supposed to shoot another species, the Utah prairie dog, anytime during the year.

Utah prairie dogs live in a large area of southwestern Utah and are protected by the Endangered Species Act.

In addition, no hunting of white-tailed prairie dogs is allowed in Coyote Basin in far eastern Utah.

that's defined as closely observing, photographing or feeding species of wildlife in backyards, wetlands, woodlands, rivers and lakes.

It can be done at home or away from it.

However, the report doesn't include information on what seems to be a growing into the field and seeing the action live and in person.

But there are some things even the best eyes and optics won't reveal. And some wildlife, like nesting birds or birthing mammals, are best left undisturbed.

As technology has advanced and America's digital getting outdoors. But if live web cams can increase America's appreciation of wildlife and support for science-based wildlife management, let the electrons flow.

Just don't use it as another excuse for not making a real connection to nature.

Menomonee River Reveals Its First Steelhead of Spring

BY PAUL A. SMITH Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

MILWAUKEE • The welcoming committee was in full view and voice along the Menomonee River in Milwaukee.

Bunches of daffodils jutted skyward from a grassy berm. Red-winged blackbirds rattled the branches of budding trees with their throaty chorus.

And in the water, yet more harbingers of spring.

Here a silvery flash and flutter in the clear, tea-colored water. There, a halfdozen dark shapes, holding along the bottom like footlong submarines.

The feathered migrants such as robins and sandhill cranes are observed by most Wisconsinites. Fewer see the piscine equivalents such as the steelhead and suckers now moving up the Menomonee.

"There are at least four trout right in this pocket," said John Cain of Wauwatosa, casting a fly in a bend of the Menomonee east of Miller Park. "What a sight."

For one of the last days of winter, it was doing a very good imitation of spring.

The calendar is a human construction. The fish were heeding the more important factors of water temperature and river flow.

The river was flowing about 55 degrees, signaling time to get busy to the steelhead and suckers.

A rapid warm-up had created a strong, concentrated run of fish; the river was alive.

Every few minutes a steelhead would porpoise or slap the surface. Hens turned on their sides and used their tails to clear out redds, or spawning sites.

White suckers joined the trout in the riffles and started their own mating ritual, often grouped in six or more.

Fishing 50 yards upstream of Cain, I drifted a size 12 chartreuse nymph through a run.

The first dozen casts yielded only exercise. After adding a small split shot, however, the fly hesitated on the next drift.

As I lifted the rod, it began quaking with a lively weight. A steelhead briefly thrashed at the surface then fell back with the current, prompting me to follow to the next pool. The fish held tight to the bottom for a minute then moved upstream. The to-and-fro covered about 50 yards of river before the fish was beached on a rocky bar.

It was a 27-inch hen, sleek and beautiful with an olive back and silver sides. Its cheeks and sides were accented with a blush of pink, befitting its other name, the rainbow trout.

The fish was quickly unhooked and turned into a mild side current, where it slashed its tail and disappeared into a dark pool.

The steelhead might seem as unlikely as an 80-degree day in March. But here they are.

Wild turkeys are an elusive prey, but they can be a tasty reward.

BY SUSAN COCKING

McClatchy Newspapers

MIAMI • Wild turkey hunters Jeff Budz and Ron Bergeron sat in their blind one morning a couple of weeks ago and listened as their potential Thanksgiving dinner in March grew more and more distant.

Since before dawn, the two hunters had elicited eager gobbling responses from five toms to the various hen noises Budz made using slate, box and diaphragm calling devices. They also had seen a hen fly down from her pine tree roost only a few yards to the north and saunter away.

Early on, the male turkeys sounded fairly close to the hunters' hiding place on the edge of a pasture. They felt pretty confident at least one of those gobblers would strut into the field and approach the lifelike decoy they placed within easy shotgun range of their blind. Budz even got into a lively conversation with a vocal hen. But after an hour or so, the gobbling grew distant and more sporadic. Sometimes, Budz's calls would get no answer at all.

Even though spring gobbler season was only a few days old, the Osceolas seemed to be reverting to the maddeningly typical behavior for which the Florida subspecies is famous: fooling hunters into thinking their brains are addled by testosterone during the mating season – only to escape detection with ease.

Hunter success rates for North America's five subspecies of wild turkeys – (Eastern, Gould's, Merriam and Rio Grande are the other four) – average below 15 percent.

After walking a short distance down the dirt track, Budz stopped and mimicked a hen with his box call. To his joyful surprise, he heard a gobble-gobble-gobble about 150 yards to the south.

Budz backtracked and pulled out the Montana decoy, holding it in front of him as he crept slowly down the path.

Suddenly, there was hurried movement about 20 yards in front of him. The gobbler he had been talking to dashed out of the underbrush and around a bend in the track, disappearing before Budz could get a bead on it.

Some hunters might have given up, believing they had spooked the bird for good.

But Budz advanced, holding the shield and making a couple more hen calls.

As Budz was in mid-step, the gobbler's urge to mate overcame its wariness, and it came sauntering back around the bend. Budz raised his shotgun and blasted it from about 35 yards.

"A subordinate tom, about 2 years old," Budz said.

Its beard measured 8 inches; the spurs on its legs were three quarters of an inch long and it weighed 16 pounds. And that evening, it became a very tasty casserole.

Popular places to climb at City of Rocks: Elephant Rock, Bath Rock and, for lack of a better name, Parking Lot Rock.

The nearby Castle Rocks State Park, which has a $5 vehicle entrance fee, also is almost fully open.

"There's a little snow and ice on the north-facing trails, little pockets of mud and ice, but for the most part Castle is open," Shilling said.

At Dierkes Lake, you can already find weekend climbers on the rocks anytime the sun shines.

A Chute and a Prayer

You have only one option if you're looking to BASE jump in the Magic Valley, and you know it as the Perrine Bridge.

The bridge is most popular four times a year, said BASE jumper Sean Chuma: Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day and the Perrine Bridge Festival, this year scheduled Sept. 7-8 at Twin Falls' visitor center.

But that doesn't mean you can't jump at other times of the year. Chuma made nearly 800 jumps in 2011.

Will he beat that this year? He doesn't care. He doesn't do it for numbers.

"I jump all the time," Chuma said. "It's hard to explain why. For one, it's an adrenaline rush. We're known as adrenaline junkies. But I just like to fly. It's a peaceful feeling for me. ... It's the closest thing you can get to being a bird."

Margaret 'Peggy' Long July 29, 1925-March 22, 2012

BOISE • Margaret "Peggy" Long left this world in the early morning hours of Thursday, March 22, 2012, on a strong breeze out of the West, heading for her island home. She had her family by her side.

Mom was born July 29, 1925, to Harold and Margaret Hutchings in Paget, Bermuda, the third of eight children. She was an avid swimmer, tennis player and artist. During the Korean War era, mom married a U.S. Marine, Jack Long Sr. She moved to Emmett, Idaho, with her two daughters, Debbie and Jan. Mom gave birth to two more children, Jacque and Randy, in Boise.

Following her divorce from Jack, Mom relied on her wit, strong will and tenacity to raise her family. She became a U.S. citizen in 1964 and began her career as a freelance accountant, which she continued until the age of 81. Mom loved her work, and she was exceptional. Mom moved back to Bermuda in 1966 with her two youngest children and continued life there. In 1979, Mom moved to Venice, Fla., where she made her home until the last few years.

Mom enjoyed treasure hunting, collecting shells, coins, stones, and plants. She loved her Montana rubies mined on a trip with her eldest daughter. Mom was a knitter and made hundreds of hats and scarves which were do### nated to many or ganizations.

Mom took pride in her ancestry, traced to the 1400s. Her family history is interwoven into our lives. Her greatgrandfather visited Boise from Bermuda in the 1870s as a visiting minister at Christ Chapel, now on the Boise State University Campus. It is in this chapel that her memorial service was held on March 24, 2012.

Mom was an extraordinary woman. She had a Bohemian spirit tempered by responsibility and obligation. She grasped life with both hands, giving freely to those in need. Mom was greatly loved and will be greatly missed.

Mom is survived by her sister, Bobbie Lee McPhee of St. George's, Bermuda; her children, Debbie Mink (Jack) of Buhl, Jan Russell of Boise, Jacqueline Hutchings (Jack Kaper) of Boise and Jack "Randy" Long (Yasemin) of Sunrise, Fla.; eight grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; three great-greatgrandchildren; and nieces, nephews and other family members in Bermuda. She was preceded in death by her parents, four brothers, two sisters and other cherished loved ones.

Donations may be made in mom's name to a children's art program or charity of your choice. Arrangements are under the direction of Summers Funeral Homes in Boise, Idaho.

Doris J. Sorenson March 11, 1925-March 25, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Doris J. Sorenson, age 87, passed away Sunday, March 25, 2012. Doris was born in

Lyons, Kan., on March 11, 1925. Doris was the youngest of seven daughters (Emmie, Alice, Frances, Faye, Dorothy and Ruth) born to George and Marion Perkins. At the age of 7, Doris and her family moved to Kimberly, Idaho, where Doris went to school. At the age of 16, Doris married Wendell Eller and was later divorced. To this union, five children were born: Wendell "Bing" Eller, Marion Edgar, Roxanne Eller, Dale Sorenson and Gerald "Jerry" Sorenson.

On April 12, 1955, Doris married the love of her life, Stanley J. Sorenson. This is when her life of happiness truly began. While maintaining a home, caring for her mother and raising her children, Doris worked at Trollinger Drug, later known as Crowley's, and then at the Holiday Inn until retirement.

family. Doris and Stan spent many summers fishing and camping at Magic Reservoir. When fish weren't biting, there were many battles of Gin Rummy and Casino. Holidays, caring and cooking for her family were special times for Doris. The Fourth of July was a picnic in her front yard with family coming from everywhere. There was always "pressed" chicken, Grandma's potato salad and vegetables from her garden. Thanksgiving brought football, turkey and Doris' cranberry salad. Christmas brought every family member to Doris' living room. Cinnamon rolls were made for everyone. Lots of homemade chocolate chip cookies, gingersnaps, candy and the special "Old English Fruit Cake" were set out. Doris made sure every family member up to the last great grandchild had one of the "family" stockings. There were also many of her crocheted items as special gifts.

Doris loved when family got together and reminisced about the occasions of the past; she was always smiling, sometimes in disbelief at the stories of her children that she hadn't heard before. Every family member was equally important to Doris and each felt a love that will never be duplicated. Doris ### had a way of making every family member feel that they were her "favorite." Over the last 12 years, Doris developed a unique and special bond with her greatgranddaughter,

Kennedy. Kennedy spent a part of most days at Doris' house and there were very few nights that they didn't call each other to say goodnight and "I love you." Doris and Kennedy filled a void in each other's lives when they both needed it the most.

Doris was preceded in death by her parents, George and Marion Perkins; five sisters, Emmie, Faye, Frances, Ruth and Alice; her loving husband of 54 years, Stanley J. Sorenson; and a daughter, Roxanne Eller. Doris is survived by a sister, Dorothy; her children, Bing (Mary) Eller, Marion (Mark) Edgar, Dale (Laurie) Sorenson and Jerry (Gail) Sorenson; grandchildren, Rondi (Pete) Woodruff, Stacey (Frank) Anderson, Stan (Lacey) Sorenson, Monte (Nicole) Edgar, Jai (Suzanne) Eller, Tatijana (Wolfgang) Schuler, Bill Sorenson and Colby (Terri) Sorenson; great-grandchildren, Justine, Grant, Lacey, Megan, Andrew, Anthony, Andrew, Cody, Celine, Kenndy, Easton and Hope. Doris is also survived by her fourlegged companion, Taffy. Special thanks to Lucille Still for being a great neighbor and friend.

Doris will be missed for all the canned foods she supplied for her family, the world's best cookies, her amazing cooking and all the family gatherings. But more than anything, she will be missed for being the greatest wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother that a family could ever ask for.

Friends may call from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, March 30, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 31, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home. Following the funeral will be a graveside service at Sunset Memorial Park on Kimberly

Adela Escobedo Graf

Sept. 27, 1952-March 27, 2012

RUPERT • After the darkness of night comes the dawn of a new day. Adela Escobedo Graf, at age 59, on Tuesday, March 27, 2012, and after 18 years of struggling with chronic illness and its effects, went back into the arms of her Heavenly Father. She was our beloved mother and grandmother, faithful wife, dear sister and friend. She will be missed deeply by all.

Adela was born Sept. 27, 1952, in San Luis Potosi, SLP, Mexico. She was the ninth of 10 children in the home of Francisco and Concepcion Escobedo. Though raised in the poorest of neighborhoods and under difficult circumstances, she often would tell touching and humorous stories of her childhood, which were cherished memories. At age 7, her family immigrated to the United States of America, which brought many opportunities to the family for education, economic betterment and service to God.

Only a year after moving to the United States, the family became acquainted with The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. After careful investigation of its teachings and following the guidance of the Holy Spirit, the family joined the church. This was a lifechanging experience for them all because, over the years, their faith in God and service in the Lord's kingdom has been a driving force in all of their lives. Adela began teaching Primary children when she was only 13 years old. Teaching children, youth and adults and bearing witness of her Savior became her life's work. Over the years, she served in nearly every capacity that a Latter-day Saint woman can serve in local wards and stakes.

Adela graduated from high school in McAllen, Texas, which was a great accomplishment and something not easy for her to do. She next made application for citizenship for the United States and followed the necessary procedures for that to happen. She was always proud to be a U.S. citizen and loved her new country just as much as she loved the country of her birth. Two of her sons, Jesse and Seth, served their country as soldiers in Iraq. Their mother prayed every day for them and all the soldiers fighting to preserve our liberties and freedom. Two years after graduat ing from high school, Adela bravely left her beloved home and family to travel far away to college in Rexburg, Idaho, to study at Rick's College. There, a whole new world opened to her and she enveloped herself in study, activity, dancing, singing, culture and faith. It was there that she met the love of her life, Steven K. Graf, who was a recently returned missionary for the church. They were married and sealed together for time and eternity on April 24, 1975, in the Idaho Falls Temple. As always faithful to her Lord's teachings, Adela and her Steve began to multiply and replenish the earth. Despite the opposing forces of raising large families which were so prevalent in those times, Adela dedicated herself to bearing and raising children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Six children, Steven Eric, Jesse Ellsworth, Sylvia Lark, Marie Adela, Seth Escobedo and Jonathan Henry, were blessed to call her mother. Always proud to be known as a "stay at home mom," Adela gave her whole heart and life to her husband and children. In so doing, she gained the most complete and well-rounded education that any woman can achieve. As her children grew up and moved on, she continued to be a mother, counselor and support; someone that was always there and could be depended upon. Adela believed that service to mankind was true wealth and made many friends through her service, which helped her feel that she was contributing something good to the world. She lived by the Golden Rule of doing unto others as she would have them do to her. But her greatest joy was the role as mother and later grandmother. She found joy in staying close to the land through gardening and working with her hands. Steve and Adela's gardens were an expression of their love of life and the beauties of nature. The abundance that came from those gardens was shared freely with others.

In nothing was her faith in God so tried as through a devastating illness which began in the prime of her life at age 43. Diagnosed with a chronic, degenerating illness, she experienced deep, lasting pain, loss of strength and vigor, depression, disfiguration, humiliation and hopelessness. Doctors and hospitals became familiar to her. At times, her pains were very great and her soul cried to God for relief. She would pray for a guardian angel to be with her. Then she would see her beloved Steven attending to her needs, or a son or daughter caring for her and knew that her prayer was answered. Over the years, the illness gradually went into remission but left in its wake many other health problems. A person not so strong-willed would have become bedridden. But Adela struggled to stay active and continued to serve her family, her church and God, her neighbors and friends all the way to the end. Her heart was always strong and kept beating until after her last breath. Adela is survived by her loving husband, Steven K. Graf, whom she called "Vida," her life. She was "Corazon," his heart. Surviving brothers and sisters are Maria Louisa Canedo of Mexico City, David Escobedo of Orem, Utah, Juan Manuel Escobedo of Panaca, Nev., Gloria Dixon of Orem, Utah, Concepcion Kurocik of Mesa, Ariz., and Mario Escobedo of Seattle, Wash.; all six children; and 12 grandchildren, Dunken Hoy, Marisa Hoy, Megan Graf, Wyatt Mecham, Ronan Hoy, Katie Mecham, Kloe Graf, Ashlynn Graf, Pieran Hoy, Francisco Hoy, Mitchell Graf and Cian Hoy. Adela was preceded in death by brothers, Javier Escobedo and Francisco "Kiko" Escobedo; her sister. Guadalupe Silva; and her father, Francisco Escobedo. Her mother that she could never leave, Concepcion Escobedo, passed away Saturday, March 24, 2012, and will walk hand-in-hand with Adela into the presence of their Lord to enjoy all the glory they have sent on. The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Monday, April 2, at the Rupert LDS 5th Ward Chapel, 324 E 18th St., with Bishop Rick Larsen officiat ing. Burial will follow at the Paul Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, April 1, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert. We thank God for giving us such a special woman in our lives for these 59 years. We thank all the support from family, friends and the wonderful, outstanding care of physicians, nurses and staff at Cassia Regional Medical Center in her final days

Bluegrass Legend Earl Scruggs Dies at 88

BY CHRIS TALBOTT Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. • Bluegrass legend and banjo pioneer Earl Scruggs, who helped profoundly change country music with Bill Monroe in the 1940s and later with guitarist Lester Flatt, has died. He was 88.

Scruggs' son Gary said his father died of natural causes Wednesday morning at a Nashville, Tenn., hospital.

Earl Scruggs was an innovator who pioneered the modern banjo sound. His use of three fingers rather than the clawhammer style elevated the banjo from a part of the rhythm section or a comedian's prop – to a lead instrument.

His string-bending and lead runs became known worldwide as "the Scruggs picking style" and the versatility it allowed has helped popularize the banjo in almost every genre of music.

The debut of Bill Monroe and The Blue Grass Boys during a post-World War II performance on The Grand Ole Opry is thought of as the "big bang" moment for bluegrass and later 20th century country music. Later, Flatt and Scruggs teamed as a bluegrass act after leaving Monroe from the late 1940s until breaking up in 1969 in a dispute over whether their music should experiment or stick to tradition. Flatt died in 1979.

They were best known for their 1949 recording "Foggy Mountain Breakdown, played in the 1967 movie "Bonnie and Clyde," and "The Ballad of Jed Clampett" from "The Beverly Hillbillies," the popular TV series that debuted in 1962. Jerry Scoggins did the singing

The Earl Scruggs Revue. The group played on bills with rock acts like Steppenwolf and James Taylor. Sometimes they played festivals before 40,000 people.

In a July 2010 interview, Scruggs said in the early days, "I played guitar as much as I did the banjo, but for everyday picking I'd go back to the banjo. It just fit what I wanted to hear better than what I could do with the guitar?'

Scruggs will always be remembered for his willingness to innovate. In "The Big Book of Bluegrass," Scruggs discussed the breakup with Flatt and how his need to experiment drove a rift between them. Later in 1985, he and Flatt were inducted together in the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"It wasn't a bad feeling toward each other as much as it was that I felt I was depriving myself of something," Scruggs said. "By that, I mean that I love bluegrass music, and I still like to play it, but I do like to mix in some other music for my own personal satisfaction, because if I don't, I can get a little bogged down and a little depressed."

He said he enjoyed playing because "it calms me down. It makes me satisfied. Sometimes I just need to pick a few tunes?

At an 80th birthday party for Scruggs in January 2004, country great Porter Wagoner said: "I always felt like Earl was to the five-string banjo what Babe Ruth was to baseball. He is the best there ever was, and the best there ever will be?"

In 2005, "Foggy Mountain Breakdown'' was selected for the Library of Congress' National Recording Registry of works of unusual merit. The following year, the 1972 Nitty Gritty Dirt Band's "Will the Circle Be Unbroken," on which Scruggs was one of many famous guest performers, joined the list, too.

Scruggs had been fairly active in the 2000s, returning to a limited touring schedule after frail health in the 1990s. In 1996, Scruggs suffered a heart attack in the recovery room of a hospital shortly after hip-replacement surgery. He also was hospitalized late last year, but seemed in good health during a few appearances with his sons in 2010 and 2011.

HEMINGWAY SHOWS SOFT SIDE IN NEWLY PUBLIC LETTERS

BY BRIDGET MURPHY Associated Press

BOSTON • Ernest Hemingway shows a tenderness that wasn't part of his usual macho persona in a dozen unpublished letters that became publicly available Wednesday in a collection of the author's papers at the Kennedy presidential library.

In a letter to his friend Gianfranco Ivancich written in Cuba and dated February 1953, Hemingway wrote of euthanizing his cat "Uncle Willie'' after it was hit by a car.

"Certainly missed you. in Idaho.

Miss Uncle Willie. Have had to shoot people but never anyone I knew and loved for eleven years," the author wrote. "Nor anyone that purred with two broken legs."

The letters span from 1953 to 1960, a year before the prize-winning writer's suicide. Whether typed or written in his curly script, some of the dispatches arrived on personalized, onionskin stationery from his Cuban villa Finca Vigia.

The author also wrote from Europe, while on safari in Africa, and from his home

The two men met in a Venice hotel bar in 1949, bonding despite a twodecade age difference because they'd both suffered leg wounds in war.

"I wish I could write you good letters the way you do," Hemingway wrote in a January 1958 letter from Cuba. "Maybe it is because I write myself out in the other writing."

Experts say the letters demonstrate a side to Hemingway that wasn't part of his persona as an author whose subjects included war, bullfighting, fishing and hunting.

conscious verse influenced a generation of feminist, gay rights and anti-war activists, has died. She Rich was 82.

Rich died Tuesday at her Santa Cruz home from complications from rheumatoid arthritis, said her son, Pablo Conrad. She had lived in Santa Cruz since the 1980s.

Through her writing, Rich explored topics such as women's rights, racism, sexuality, economic justice and love between women.

Rich published more than a dozen volumes of poetry and five collections of nonfiction. She won a National Book Award for her collection of poems "Diving into the Wreck'' in 1974. In 2004, she won the National Book Critics Circle Award in Poetry for her collection "The School Among the Ruins." According to her publisher, W.W. Norton, her books have sold between 750,000 and 800,000 copies, a high amount for a poet.

She gained national prominence with her third poetry collection, "Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law," in 1963. Citing the title poem, University of Maryland professor Rudd Fleming wrote in The Washington Post that Rich "proves poetically how hard it is to be a woman – a member of the second sex."

Rich and her husband had three sons before she left him in 1970, just as the women's movement was exploding on the national scene. She used her experiences as a mother to write "Of Woman Born," her groundbreaking feminist critique of pregnancy, childbirth and motherhood, published in 1976.

Unlike most American writers, Rich believed that art and politics not only could coexist, but must co-exist. She considered herself a socialist because "socialism represents

"That is, the resources of a society should be shared and the wealth redistributed as widely as possible."

"She was very courageous and very outspoken and very clear," said her longtime friend, W.S. Merwin, the Pulitzer Prize winning poet. "She was a real original, and whatever she said came straight out of herself."

Rich taught at many colleges and universities, including Brandeis, Rutgers, Cornell, San Jose State and Stanford.

She won a MacArthur "genius'' fellowship, two Guggenheim Fellowships and many top literary awards including the Bollingen Prize, Brandeis Creative Arts Medal, Ruth Lilly Poetry Prize and the Wallace Stevens Award.

But when then-President Clinton awarded the National Medal of Arts in 1997, Rich refused to accept it, citing the administration's "cynical politics."

"The radical disparities of wealth and power in America are widening at a devastating rate," she wrote to the administration. "A president cannot meaningfully honor certain token artists while the people at large are so dishonored."

In 2003, Rich and other poets refused to attend a White House symposium on poetry to protest to U.S.-led invasion of Iraq.

Born in Baltimore in 1929, Rich was the elder of two daughters of a Jewish father and a Protestant mother – a mixed heritage that she recalled in her autobiographical poem "Sources." Her father, a doctor and medical professor at Johns Hopkins University, encouraged her to write poetry at an early age.

Rich graduated from Radcliffe College in 1951 and was chosen for the Yale Younger

BOSTON • Kevin Garnett found Keyon Dooling for a 3-pointer. Then the Boston big man hit a fallaway jumper of his own. Back at the other end, Garnett grabbed a rebound to start a fast break that ended with Avery Bradley at the free throw line.

Just like that, the Celtics broke open a tie game and took a seven-point lead they never relinquished. "He's been playing like that a lot in the second half of the season," said Celtics swingman Paul Pierce, who scored 20 points. "We've been going to him a lot out there. And he's been inspiring on both ends of the floor."

Brandon Bass scored 19 points, and Rajon Rondo had 14 assists for Boston, which won for the fifth time in six tries to move into a tie with the Philadelphia 76ers atop the Atlantic Division. After playing at Minnesota on Friday night, the Celtics play seven games in 11 nights against likely playoff teams. "We kind of smell the end of the season, with the playoffs coming," Pierce said. "This is the time of year you've got to step it up and get ready."

From high school to Utah Valley University, it's difficult to discern between the lives and careers of Valley's Nelson and Raft River's Hansen

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

Sally Hansen has been chasing Zandrea Nelson since they were in high school.

Four years later, nothing has changed except now they're teammates.

Nelson, a 2008 graduate of Valley High, and Hansen, a 2009 graduate of Raft River High, have traveled parallel paths from small-town Idaho roots to major NCAA Division I athletic accomplishments. In fact, the pair has so much in common it's almost comical.

Both were multi-sport stars in high school. Neither was afforded the luxury of a standard rubberized track surface, instead training every day on their small schools' gravel tracks. Still, each sprinter won multiple state titles and was named Times-News Female Track Athlete of the Year.

Wait, the similarities don't stop there.

Both were valedictorians and graduated with 4.0 grade point averages. They were both elected class president and were involved in numerous clubs.

Now Nelson and Hansen are teammates at Utah Valley University, where they recently wrapped up a successful winter indoor track season.

At the Great West Conference Championship in February, Nelson, a senior, won the 200-meter (25.45 seconds) and 400-meter (56.78 seconds) dashes, as well as the 4x400 relay (3:53.71). The UVU women won their first-ever indoor conference title and Please see MIRROR, S2

Mariners Need Extras to Beat A's

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO • Dustin Ackley drove in the go-ahead run in the top of the 11th inning and Ichiro Suzuki went 4 for 5 as the Seattle Mariners beat the Oakland Athletics 3-1 Wednesday in baseball's season-opener in Tokyo.

Brendan Ryan doubled to lead off the 11th, advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt by Chone Figgins and scored on Ackley's single to center.

"I was able to put a good swing on that one," Ackley said of his 11th inning hit. "Our team is off to a good start, and that's all that matters."

Suzuki then gave Seattle an insurance run with a single to center off Oakland reliever Jerry Blevins that scored Ackley from second.

The capacity crowd of 44,227 at Tokyo Dome was a sea of flashbulbs every time Suzuki came to bat. He got a standing ovation when he took his position in right field in the final inning.

Suzuki got his first hit in the first inning on a grounder over the mound that was deflected by Oakland starter Brandon McCarthy, allowing Suzuki to beat out the throw from shortstop Cliff Pennington.

Ackley put the Mariners ahead 1-0 in the fourth on a solo homer to center off Mc-Carthy. Suzuki then came up and beat out a grounder to short for his second hit of the game.

"I'm glad I was able to put our team on the board and get an early lead," Ackley said.

Oakland tied the game in the bottom half of the inning when Kurt Suzuki hit a double to left that scored Pennington from third.

Seattle reliever Tom Wilhelmsen picked up the win after pitching two scoreless innings in the ninth and tenth. Brandon League retired the side in the 11th for the save. Andrew Carignan took the loss after giving up both runs in the 11th.

Seattle starter Felix Hernandez struck out six and gave up one run on five hits over eight innings while walking none. McCarthy gave up one run on six hits in seven innings with three strikeouts and no walks.

Cuban defector Yoenis Cespedes picked up his first major league hit with a double to lead off the seventh.

When the game started, it was 4:09 a.m. MDT.

The game Wednesday was the fourth Japan opener, following the New York Mets and Chicago Cubs (2000), the New York Yankees and Tampa Bay (2004), and Boston and Oakland (2008).

Before the game, a video presentation honoring the victims and survivors of the March 11 earthquake and tsunami was played on the center field screen at Tokyo Dome. The video was narrated by Derek Jeter, Bobby Valentine and Cal Ripken Jr.

Bartolo Colon is scheduled to start today's game for the A's, while Jason Vargas is set to take the mound for the Mariners.

FINAL FOUR

LEXINGTON, Ky. • This Bluegrass State rivalry runs deep, and the divide is wide.

Just 70 miles apart, Lexington and Louisville are worlds apart when it comes to college basketball. Come Saturday when the Cardinals and Wildcats meet at the Final Four in New Orleans, a berth in the national title game is just the beginning.

Here, the game is likened to a civil war.

Pick a side: Wildcats or Cardinals. Rupp's Runts or the Doctors of Dunk. Dan Issel or Wes Unseld. John Calipari or Rick Pitino.

"If the excitement and frenzy and turbulence that's been stirred up in Kentucky this week could be harnessed, we could solve our energy crisis," Kentucky Sen. Mitch Mc-Connell said on the Senate floor. "Basketball fans from Kentucky have been waiting their whole lives for this game."

This is the grudge match to end them all. It's the fifth time the Final Four schools will meet in the NCAA tournament - the two sides have split the four previous meetings – and it pits Louisville coach Pitino against one-time friend and now frosty foe Calipari. Not to mention Kentucky freshmen phenoms Anthony Davis and Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, who have been steady in taking the Wildcats to the top, vs. a ragtag flock of Cardinals who've won eight straight with a rotating cast of mostly unknowns such as Peyton Siva and Gorgui Dieng.

"It's not about (Pitino) or I; it's about these players," said Calipari, who's in his second consecutive Final Four still searching for the national title that's eluded him. "Hopefully we both have our teams ready to play, and I think we will, and we'll go at it."

The Cardinals (30-9) lost this year's matchup vs. the Wildcats (36-2) 69-62 on Dec. 31. Even though there is much more on the line Saturday, it will be difficult for the game to be much more intense.

"There's going to be so much pressure on the players," former Louisville forward Earl Clark said. "It's going to go down in history. Kentucky is the No. 1 team, and Louisville is like the Cinderella of the tournament."

Kentucky blue dominates most of the state of more than 4.3 million basketball-crazed fans, surrounding the outnumbered Cardinals fans who have fortified a stronghold in the state's largest city.

The fan bases are about as different as they can be, and Pitino is one of the few who knows what it's like on both sides of the aisle.

He coached Kentucky for eight years, bringing the Please see FINAL FOUR, S1

J. Wadsworth, Bedke Lead Area Rodeo All-Around

TIMES-NEWS

After the first week of the 6th District high school rodeo, seniors Jacee Bedke of Oakley and Jade Wadsworth from Kimberly sit in the top spots in the girls and boys all-around standings, respectively. Freshman Derek Wadsworth of Kimberly and Jaylee Stimpson from Minico lead the boys and girls rookies.

In the girls all-around, Bedke (43) holds only a one point lead over Macy Urrutia (42) from Twin Falls and Bandee Tubbs (40) from Filer is only three points from the top.

The 6th District returns to the College of Southern Idaho at the Eldon Evans Expo Center in the Shawn Davis Arena this weekend with performances at 7 p.m. on Friday with slack to follow and Saturday slack at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. performance.

FILER'S TAYLOR RECEIVES HIGH RODEO HONOR

TIMES-NEWS

Filer's Jon Taylor will be inducted with four others into the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame on July 14, the Colorado Springs, Colo.,-based organization announced.

Taylor, 70, of Filer, was a barrelman at the National Finals Rodeo in 1974, 1979 and 1983, while serving as an alternate in 1980-81. Taylor worked the rodeo circuit nationally for the better part of two decades.

In addition to his stint on the PRCA board of directors from 1982-85, Taylor was the superintendent of the Eldon Evans Expo Center at the College of Southern Idaho.

Taylor will be inducted with five-time world champion saddle bronc rider Billy Etbauer, his brother, twotime world champion Robert Etbauer, Khadafy Skoal, a three-time PRCA Bareback Horse of the Year and longtime administrator Hal Littrell. Three-time world champion roughstock cowboy Frank Schneider will be inducted posthumously.

A selection committee consisting of former con-on to the next level. Dennis Mikelonis, a redshirt sophomore from Boise, signed with Carroll (Mont.) College of the NAIA on Wednesday, said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

"It's a good move for him. He'll do well up there. It's a good school with good academics and he'll fight right in," Gosar said.

The 6-5 swingman played sparingly for the Golden Eagles this season, appearing in 22 games, averaging 2.6 points and 2.2 rebounds in 9.5 minutes. He'll join a Carroll squad in Helena, Mont., that was 14-13 this season, including a 7-7 record in the Frontier Conference.

Mikelonis, who graduated from Borah High School in 2009, played at CSI for three years, redshirting in 2010-11 following a knee injury. His freshman year, he averaged 6.1 points and led the team in 3-point shooting at 43.8 percent.

He is the second CSI player in recent years to play for Carroll, following in the footsteps of guard Byago Diouf, who signed with the Saints in 2010.

Boise State Football Season Ticket Renewal Underway

Current season ticket holders will receive renewal forms in the mail over in the coming days and can also renew online at broncosports.com. Boise State will play six home games this season, starting with the home opener against Miami (Ohio) on Sept. 15, continuing the following week against Brigham Young and into the Mountain West Conference opener against Fresno State on Oct. 13.

Included with this year's season ticket renewal are tickets to the Blue and Orange Spring Game, April 14 at 5 p.m. at Bronco Stadium.

"This will be another challenging schedule for our team," head coach Chris Petersen said. "Our players are excited about this year's schedule and have been working hard during the offseason. We've had a good first two weeks of spring

"I might be done for the (outdoor) season but it's OK because I'm going to have that breakout senior year like I did in high school," Hansen said.

Hansen's "breakout" season at Raft River included four gold medals at state (100m, 200m, 400m and long jump) and a team championship for the Trojans.

"She was a really hard worker and I'm not surprised that she continued her career in college," said Jeremy Qualls, Hansen's former track and basketball coach at Raft River. "She was a fun kid to coach and she's one that I've continued to follow as she's progressed in her college career."

While Hansen still has one more year to compete for UVU, Nelson's career is winding down as she prepares for the next chapter in

It will be a hard transition for Nelson, who has been a competitive runner since she was 9 years old.

"I'm excited to try something new but I think I'm going to miss it a lot. I'm going to miss my teammates the most," Nelson said. "To not be doing track meets and not competing and pushing my body to that next level, I think will be kind of weird."

But before she hands the baton to Hansen and her other teammates, Nelson has a few goals for her final outdoor track season, like qualifying for NCAA regionals.

Nelson's feats don't surprise her high school coaches, however.

"We knew she was going to be something special, way beyond what Valley had ever seen, even when she was a seventh grader. Her times in junior high track were faster than anybody we had in high school," said Valley athletic director Brian Hardy, who also coached Nelson in basketball.

Hansen said one of Nelson's biggest contributions to the Utah Valley track program is her leadership as team captain.

"She's a workhorse but she's never arrogant and she's always encouraging her teammates to be their personal bests," Hansen said. "I think I can speak for all my teammates when I say it really is an honor and a blessing to be on the same team as Zandrea. The whole team is going to miss her leadership and example when she graduates. I know I'll be working my hardest to reach the standard that she has set?"

Carmelo, Shumpert Help Knicks Blow Out Magic

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Carmelo Anthony and the New York Knicks climbed above .500 for the first time since mid-January in overwhelming fashion, scoring 21 straight points in the third quarter and routing the Orlando Magic 108-86 on Wednesday night.

Anthony and Iman Shumpert each scored 25 points for the Knicks (26-25), who won for the eighth time in nine games despite playing without the injured Amare Stoudemire and Jeremy Lin. New York outscored Orlando 65-30 in the middle two quarters and has a winning record for the first time since it was 6-5.

The Knicks moved 2 1/2 games ahead of Milwaukee for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference and pulled within 2 1/2 of Philadelphia and Boston for first place in the Atlantic Division. New York could get Stoudemire back before the end of the season, announcing Wednesday that he could be back in two to four weeks after non-surgical treatment for a bulging disk in his back.

BULLS 98, HAWKS 77

ATLANTA • Luol Deng scored 22 points and led a flurry of 3-pointers to help NBA-leading Chicago blow out Atlanta for another road victory.

Deng was 5 of 8 from beyond the arc and the Bulls finished 9 of 16 to improve to their NBA-best record away from home to 21-6 and their overall mark to 41-11, even while missing star Derrick Rose for the eighth straight game with a shoulder injury.

Weary Venus Loses at Key Biscayne

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. • Venus Williams sagged in the wooden changeover chair as if it were a cushy recliner, her head tilted back, her tank on empty.

She rose slowly to play the final two games and lost both, but grinned as she walked to the exit, perhaps because she was headed for a well-deserved rest.

Weary after winning three consecutive three-set matches, Williams was eliminated Wednesday by Agnieszka Radwanska in the quarterfinals of the Sony Éricsson Open, 6-4, 6-1.

"It was disappointing not to be able to feel my best today," Williams said. "I was able to keep it close in the first set and try different strategies, but it was definitely a mental battle, and today I didn't conquer the mental part of it."

Top-ranked Victoria Azarenka lost for the first time this year when she was beaten by Marion Bartoli, 6-3, 6-3. Azarenka had won 26 consecutive matches, a streak that dated to the beginning of 2012.

In the men's quarterfinals, No. 2-seeded Rafael Nadal continued his bid for his first Key Biscayne title by beating No. 6 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga 6-2, 5-7, 6-4. His opponent Friday will be 2009 champion Andy Murray, who overcame an upset stomach and early deficit to beat No. 9 Janko Tipsarevic 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Williams' serve lacked its usual velocity, and by the final game she wasn't even chasing shots in the corner. The tournament was her first since the U.S. Open last August, when she withdrew after being diagnosed with a fatigue-causing autoimmune disease.

Two Williamses were eliminated in 18 hours. Younger sister Serena lost Tuesday night to former No. 1 Caroline Wozniacki.

West Gets Lift From Unsigned Muhammad

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO • Shabazz Muhammad scored 21 points, Rasheed Sulaimon added 18 and the West beat the East 106-102 in the McDonald's All-American game on Wednesday night.

Muhammad and the West squad finished a number of breaks with fantastic dunks, and Duke recruit Sulaimon was 4 for 8 from 3-point range.

Muhammad is still weighing his college choic es. He is considering Kentucky, Duke, Kansas, UN-LV and UCLA.

Alex Poythress, who signed with Kentucky, finished with 19 points for the East. The East trailed by as many as 24 with 12:03 left, but they mounted an impressive comeback. Amile Jefferson had a dunk to make it 93-88 with 3:42 left, but Sulaimon answered with a 3. Rodney Purvis' three-point play got the East within four with 1:19 left, but Sulaimon answered with a threepoint play of his own.

claims to have invented the French dip sandwich. The place has been a haven for Dodgers fan since the team moved just a mile up the hill when Dodger Stadium opened in 1962.

On Wednesday, not a person in the place, save a few tourists who had no idea what the hoopla was about, disagreed with him.

"The whole town is going to go crazy. Magic Johnson, he's the right guy to do this. He's just so popular," said Wally Quan, shoving aside his breakfast for a moment to pick up a copy of the Los Angeles Times sports section and point to a halfpage photo of the former Los Angeles Lakers star.

"And this guy, he's a baseball man," Quan said, pointing to a much smaller photo of Stan Kasten, the former president of the Atlanta Braves and Washington Nationals, who is part of the ownership group that McCourt agreed to sell his bankrupt team to.

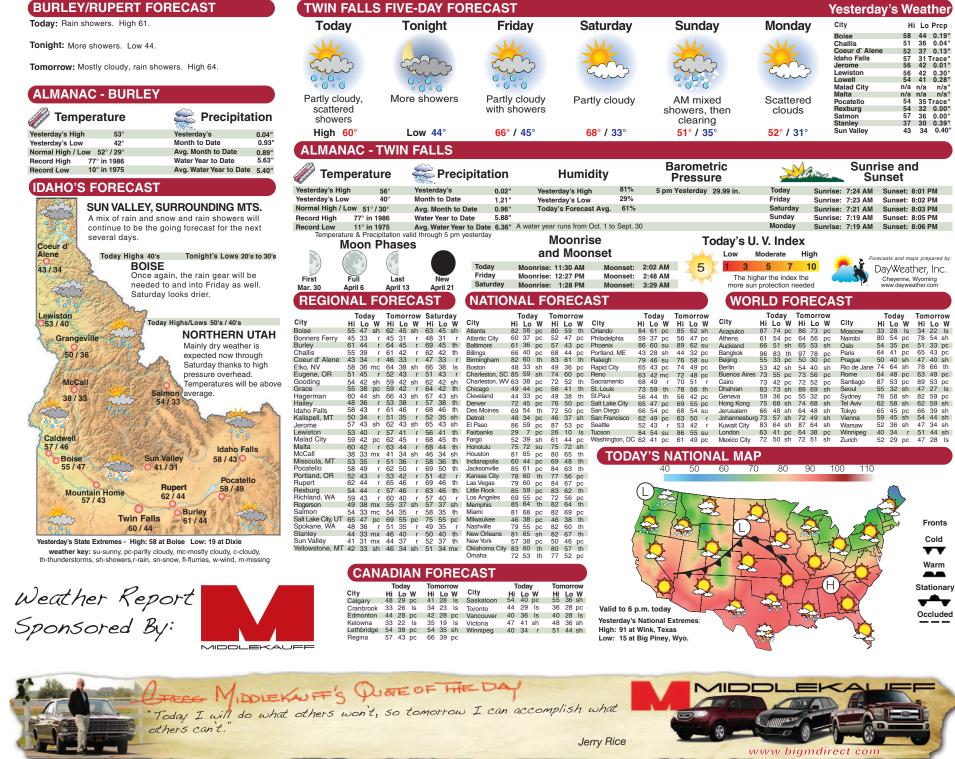

The deal must still be approved by Major League Baseball and a federal bankruptcy court.

If it is, Quan and others see the Johnson-Kasten group quickly ending a long municipal nightmare that began with McCourt's purchase of the Dodgers eight years ago.

Things really went sour for McCourt after he and his ex-wife, Jamie, became embroiled in a long, costly, bitter divorce and the team fell into financial decline, filing for bankruptcy protection last year.

Women's Final Four Arguably Strongest Ever

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • For the first time since 1989, all four top seeds reached the NCAA women's Final Four.

This year's field of Baylor, Stanford, UConn and Notre Dame is arguably the strongest ever, with all four programs motivated by unfinished business from last season and out to add yet another crown to their crowded trophy case.

"All four of us, I think, pretty much we're the top four teams in the country all year long. I'm not sure if anybody ever fell to fifth," Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw said. "I think all four teams are probably the most talented teams in teams would be in the Final Four.

"Now, because of teams getting better, you are seeing teams even win national championships that weren't No. 1 seeds, including our 2005 championship at Baylor. But you've had a lot of parity since '89 until 2012. And that's a good thing."

This year, however, the top four teams have reached Denver, as expected.

All thrived on high expectations, especially Baylor, which never shied away from the championship chatter.

"Not one time this year have we ever felt pressure, we haven't," Mulkey insisted. "It's just a case of we want to win a national championship. And if we lose it, what have we lost? I mean, we have had a great vear.

MINNESOTA, STANFORD MEET IN NIT TITLE GAME

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Minnesota coach Tubby Smith and Stanford's Johnny Dawkins ran into each other a few times recruit ing Andre Hollins.

The point guard from Memphis, Tenn., chose the Golden Gophers, and he's playing his best basketball deep into his freshman season, leading an injury-riddled team to the title game of the NIT against the Cardinal. The schools face off Thursday night at Madison Square Garden.

then, when the Cardinal wasted a big lead against Massachusetts but rallied to win.

"The same run was made, and we didn't respond the way we needed to," Dawkins said of the Syracuse game. "To see our growth in our young players that we were able to respond."

Sixth-seeded Minnesota's young players, Hollins included, have had to grow up in a hurry because of injuries to two key seniors: Trevor Mbakwe and Ralph Sampson III. The Golden Gophers started three freshmen, a sophomore and a junior in Tuesday's semifinal against Washington. And yet Smith can credit good health for Minnesota's recent strong performances. Players such as Hollins, who was bothered by a sprained right ankle earlier in the season, are no longer nagged by various ailments, leading to more continuity at practice. Others are settling into Rodney new roles. Williams moved from small forward to power forward when Mbakwe was hurt early in the season, and he's averaging 20.8 points in his last five games compared with 10.9 for the first 32.

the country. So I guess we all achieved our expectations."

Yet, Baylor, behind 6-foot-8 star Brittney Griner and a lineup loaded at every other position, is a prohibitive favorite to cut down the nets at the Pepsi Center on Tuesday night.

To become the first team in NCAA hoops history to win 40 games in a season, the Lady Bears will have to get past Stanford, led by superstar sisters Nnemkadi and Chiney Ogwumike, on Sunday and then either UConn or Notre Dame in the title game.

"Whoever wins this tournament this coming weekend will have earned it, because they'll have beaten two of the best teams in college basketEven without Tennessee and Pat Summitt, left, this year's Final Four is arguably the strongest ever, led by Baylor and coach Kim Mulkey, right. The national semifinalists combined to go 140-8 this season.

ball in quite some time," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said.

Auriemma, whose Huskies played all three of the other semifinalists this season, said the common thread is a dedication to defense and "people that are OK with the spotlight. They're OK with the big moment. They've had enough failure and enough frustration to kind of harden them and toughen them."

"I think all the teams have a little bit of a hunger. There is no defending national champion that's in the field. So I think the same thing is going through everyone's mind at this point?"

And that is, why not us? Only one other time, 23 years ago, did all four No. 1 seeds reach the Final Four, which speaks to the parity in women's basketball.

"I'm kind of glad in a sense because it tells you that women's basketball is growing," Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said. "It tells you that there's parity out there. Back in the '80s, when I played and brackets were released, you pretty much knew what four uled in-state schools under

Stanford, like UConn, reached the Final Four for the fifth straight season.

"I think a lot of the reason that we are going is because we play Tennessee and we play Connecticut, and we really try to play as tough a preseason schedule as we can so we know what's out there and we know what we have to do to be here," VanDerveer said.

The Big East's power pair of UConn and Notre Dame are certainly familiar with each other.

This will be their fourth meeting this season and eighth in the last 14 months.

"We want the ball in his hands because he's making very good decisions with it," Smith said Wednesday.

For third-seeded Stanford, there will be plenty of familiarity Thursday, too. The Cardinal played in the Garden in November, reaching the final of the NIT Season Tip-Off. They led Syracuse, which would go on to earn a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament, by six points with about  $4^{1/2}$  minutes left.

But the Orange turned up the pressure, ending the game on a 15-3 run to win 69-63. Stanford saw convincing evidence in Tuesday's semifinal that it's come a long way since

Final Four

'Cats back to the pinnacle of greatness with an NCAA title in '96. He's been at Louisville for the last 11 years and is heading to his second Final Four with the Cardinals.

'It's two different entities, really, it's two rabid fan bases," Pitino said.

That was oh so clear this week when two senior citizens duked it out at a Georgetown dialysis clinic.

A 68-year-old Kentucky fan and 71-year-old Louisville fan were arguing Monday about who will win Saturday's game when the discussion quickly got out of hand. Georgetown police Lt. Robert Swanigan says the Kentucky fan flipped off the Louisville fan, prompting the Cardinals fan to punch him in the face. Though police were called, Swanigan said the Kentucky fan declined to file charges. The fight likely wouldn't surprise Kentucky coach Calipari, who lovingly compares Wildcats fans to piranhas - yes, the flesh-eating fish.

"If you're going to attack Kentucky, just be right," Calipari said of a fan base that feeds off every little bit of information about his school and dissects every game tape three times. "I'm just telling you: piranha – wahp-wahp-wahp-wahpwahp-wahp. They'll come and eat your yard, your house. These people are nuts."

And Cardinals' fans enjoy poking fun at them.

On Twitter and message boards, they joke how Kentucky fans turn Cats into two words - Ca-yuts. One of Big Blue Nation's favorite retorts? Loserville.

It took the governor to first get the two schools together on an annual basis. Kentucky never schedcoach Adolph Rupp, and former assistant Joe B. Hall dutifully followed suit when he took over as coach. Gov. John Y. Brown stepped in following their matchup in the 1983 NCAA Mideast Regional finals - know around the state as The Dream Game. Louisville beat Kentucky in overtime in Knoxville, Tenn., in the teams' first meeting since 1959. "It created a lot of animosity and strong feelings toward each other, but at the same time I felt like the taxpayers were entitled to see the competition between two of the nation's premier programs," the former governor said. "If you ask either school what the No. 1 game on the schedule both in basketball and football, they'll say it's the rival school.

"They have to live in shame, whichever one loses."

The Trustee's sale shall be made pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust to satisfy the obligation secured thereby. The sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrance. The Deed of Trust referred to herein was executed by MICHAEL J. SCHILZ and JAMIE M. O'DONNELL, unmarried persons, as Grantor, to Scot M. Ludwig, as original Trustee, for the benefit and security of Green Tree Servicing LLC fka Conseco Finance Servicing Corp. (Beneficiary), dated April 27, 2000, and recorded May 1, 2000, as Instrument No. 2002047, official records of Jerome County, Idaho, (the "Deed of Trust"). The beneficial interest under said Deed of Trust was assigned of record to U.S. Bank, National Association as Trustee on behalf of Manufactured Housing Contract Senior/Subordinate Pass-Through Certificate 2000-4, by Assignment of Deed of Trust executed by Green Tree Servicing LLC fka Conseco Finance Servicing Corp., dated November 1, 2011, recorded January 18, 2012, as Instrument No. 2120203, official records of Jerome County, Idaho, whereas Green Tree Servicing LLC is acting as the Servicer for Beneficiary, with delegated authority under the transaction documents. Alliance Title & Escrow Corp. has been appointed as Successor Trustee, pursuant to an Appointment of Successor Trustee dated October 7, 2011, and recorded January 18, 2012, as Instrument No. 2120202 records of Jerome County, Idaho. Pursuant to Idaho Code Section 28-9-604(2), the Lender has elected to proceed as to both the Real Property and the personal property attached thereon in accordance with its rights and remedies in respect to the Real Property described herein.

THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45 1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THE GRANTOR IS, OR IS NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The defaults for which this sale is to be made are failure to pay: (i) the regular monthly payments of principal and interest, as set forth and required by the Deed of Trust and Note, due on June 5, 2011, in the amount of $551.98 and thereafter on the 5th day of each month until the date of sale or reinstatement;

(ii) late fees in the amount of $82.77 accrued through January 18, 2012, plus the greater of $5.00 or 5% of the unpaid amount of each payment of principal and interest not paid within 15 days of the due date, until the date of sale or reinstatement;

(iii) escrow fees; and

- (iv) delinquent real property taxes for the years 2008, 2009, 2010 and the first half of 2011, together with penalties and interest; and
- (v) real property taxes for the second half of the year 2011 and the year 2012.
- The original loan amount was $64,246.38 with interest due thereon at the rate of 9.75% per annum, as evidenced by the Real Estate Note (the "Note") dated April 27, 2000, executed by Grantor payable to Lender. The principal balance due on the Note as of January 18, 2012 is $60,817.11.

The balance owing as of January 18, 2012, on the Note secured by the Deed of Trust and Note is $73,648.19 including principal, accrued interest and late charges, but excluding delinquent property taxes, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations under the above mentioned Deed of Trust and Note or in connection with this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees, as authorized in the Deed of Trust and Note.

THE ABOVE DESCRIBED ANNEXATION AREA CONTAINS 73.56 ACRES, MORE OR LESS.

The property is currently zoned by Minidoka County as AL (Agricultural Low). It is proposed that the City zones the land as CG (Commercial General). The annexation and zoning would allow for the development of basic commercial uses and also allowing the hookup to city water and sewer.

The annexation would be made pursuant to the authorization of Idaho Code Section 50-222 (3) (b) (i). The Heyburn Planning and Zoning Commission and the Heyburn City Council will consider the annexation and zoning. The Petition and Request for Annexation Zoning Map Amendment is on file with the City Clerk's office at City Hall, 941 - 18th Street, P.O. Box 147, Heyburn, Idaho 83336 (208 679-8158), and is available for public inspection.

The City's proposed plan of annexation can be obtained at the City Hall. Those wishing to testify at the hearing may do so in person or in writing. But the written comments or testimony must be received by the City Clerk before close of business day on the date of the hearing.

The public is invited to attend hearings regarding the annexation and zoning. The hearings will be conducted before the Heyburn Planning and Zoning Commission on April 9, 2012 and before the Heyburn City Council on April 25, 2012. Both hearings will be held at 7:00 o'clock p.m. at the Heyburn City Council Chambers, at 941 - 18th Street, Heyburn, Idaho. DATED this 22nd day of March, 2012. Today's hand comes from the Open Teams Semifinal between Italy and Norway at the first World Mind Sports Games in Beijing three years ago.

In the first room (not shown here), South for Italy bid and repeated his spades. When North now introduced his hearts, South bid three no-trump. The operation was successful, in a sense, but after a club lead, declarer had to use heart entries to try to bring the spades in. When he subsequently found it to be impossible to develop the spade suit, the defenders had time to enjoy their club winners and set up hearts, and declarer finished no fewer than four down!

At the second table the bidding was as shown here. The decision by South, Terje Aa, to remove to four spades was right, as it takes perfect defense to defeat the spade game. However, Fulvio Fantoni and Claudio Nunes were up to the task.

Fantoni led his lone diamond, taken by dummy's ace, Nunes contributing the 10. West switched to a heart. Winning in dummy, declarer played a second spade to the king and ace, and the heart return from Fantoni gave South no chance. He had to play a diamond toward his jack at this point, as he was in dummy for the last time. Nunes rose with the king and returned a diamond for Fantoni to ruff with the defenders' last trump. One down.

ANSWER: Your choice is to pass — which you know will freeze your side out of the auction forever — or to risk a takeout double. The danger is, of course, that you will finish up in clubs with an unsatisfactory trump holding; the upside is that you may push the opponents higher or find a makable partscore. Put me down as a bidder.

Today's Highlight:

On March 29, 1912, British explorer Robert Falcon Scott, his expedition stranded in an Antarctic blizzard after failing to be the first to reach the South Pole, wrote in his journal, "We shall stick it out to the end but we are getting weaker of course and the end cannot be far. It seems a pity

TODAY IN HISTORY

but I do not think I can write more." Scott concluded with: "Last entry. For Gods sake look after our people." (Scott is presumed to have died shortly thereafter; his four companions also perished.)

On this date:

In 1638, Swedish colonists settled in present-day Delaware.

In 1790, the tenth president of the United States, John Tyler, was born in Charles City County, Va.

In 1792, Sweden's King Gustav III died, nearly two weeks after he had been shot and mortally wounded by assassins during a masquerade party.

In 1812, the first White House wedding took place as Lucy Payne Washington, the sister of First Lady Dolley Madison, married Supreme Court Justice Thomas Todd.

In 1871, the Royal Albert Hall in London was opened by Oueen Victoria.

In 1882, the Knights of Columbus was chartered in Connecticut.

In 1943, World War II rationing of meat, fats and cheese began.

In 1951, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were convicted of conspiracy to commit espionage. (They were executed in June 1953.) The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The King and I" opened on Broadway.

In 1962, Jack Paar hosted NBC's "Tonight" show for the final time, although the network aired a repeat the following night. (Johnny Carson debuted as host in Oct. 1962.)

In 1971, Army Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was convicted of murdering 22 Vietnamese civilians in the My Lai (mee ly) massacre. (Calley ended up serving three years under house arrest.) A jury in Los Angeles recommended the death penalty for Charles Manson and three female followers for the 1969 Tate La Bianca murders. (The sentences were later commut ed.) In 1973, the last United States combat troops left South Vietnam, ending America's direct military involvement in the Vietnam War. In 1992, Democratic presidential front-runner Bill Clinton acknowledged experimenting with marijuana "a time or two" while attending Oxford University, adding, "I didn't inhale and I didn't try it again." More than a month after winning the Olympic gold medal in ladies figure skating, Kristi Yamaguchi of the United States won the world championship title in Oakland, Calif. Ten years ago: Israeli troops stormed Yasser Arafat's headquarters complex in the West Bank in a raid that was launched in response to anti-Israeli attacks that had killed 30 people in three days. Five years ago: A defiant, Democratic-controlled Senate approved legislation calling for the withdrawal of U.S. combat troops from Iraq within a year. Veteran diplomat Ryan Crocker was sworn in as the new U.S. ambassador to Iraq. West Virginia beat Clemson, 78-73, for its first NIT title in 65 years. One year ago: Gunmen held an Iraqi government center in Tikrit hostage in a grisly siege that ended with the deaths of at least 56 people, including three councilmen, plus the attackers, who blew themselves up. A seriously ill 73-year-old British woman was accidentally dropped into the bitterly cold Norwegian Sea as rescue workers took her off the cruise ship Ocean Countess (Janet Richardson later died at a hospital).

DEAR ABBY: "Darrel" and I have been married 28 years. I thought we had an easy, comfortable relationship. We have no children; it's just the two of us with a large family of furry animals. We don't take vacations together because one of us has to be home to care for the animals.

Last year Darrel took four trips to Las Vegas - two for business and two for special sporting events. I'm beginning to get little nagging signals that he may not have been on these trips alone.

He shuts his phone off for hours at a time and changed the password on his computer after I had to get on it for a security update. The last time he went, he told me he had won two tickets in Las Vegas to a show, so I asked him to bring the extra one home so I could see it. When he returned, he didn't have it. He said he had misplaced it.

There are other things, too, and I don't know what to think. I don't want to hurt his feelings if there isn't anything going on, but I need to know. What do I do?

- WHAT HAPPENED IN VEGAS?

DEAR WHAT HAP-PENED IN VEGAS: If your intuition is telling you that something is wrong, listen to it. Tell Darrel you're feeling insecure and why. Start going with him to Las Vegas. Hire a pet sitter if necessary. It will be money well spent. If your husband isn't open to it, hire a private investigator to tell you what's going on. Clearly, something is up.

DEAR ABBY: My 7-yearold son, "Kenny," is being bullied at school. He was punched so hard in the stomach that I had to get him medical care. I have called the school board and no one has done anything about it. What else can I do? Kenny is small for his age and weighs only 40 pounds. I'm worried for him.

- WORRIED ABOUT MYBOYINTULSA

DEAR WORRIED: Assuming that you have already spoken to your son's teacher and the principal of Kenny's school, as well as having contacted the school board, your next step would

DEAR ABBY: I have muscular dystrophy and am beginning to need my wheelchair full time. My friends and family are doing whatever they can to make their homes accessible so I am not left out of activities. They mean everything to me, and I depend on them a great deal.

My wheelchair can be unforgiving when going around doorways, hardwood flooring, etc. It's inevitable that I will damage something in someone's home and I will feel terrible about it. What should I do when this happens? I may not even know I did it. I can't fix every scratch I make or clean every track I leave on the rug. I want to be invited, but I also want to be a good guest. What do you think?

- PLANNING IN ADVANCE, COLUMBUS, OHIO DEAR PLANNING IN

ADVANCE: Because you are wisely planning in advance, this is a conversation you should have with your family and friends now, before the need arises. Explain your concerns and offer to pay for the repair of any damage caused by your wheelchair. I'm sure the offer will be appreciated, whether or not they take you up on it in the event of an accident.

It pays to read the fine print. Contact Times-News to place your ad 208.733.0931 ext 2 1.800.658.3883 ext 2 twinad@magicvalley.com

IF MARCH 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Passions can put you in a pickle during the next six to eight weeks. You may be pressured to make drastic changes, either by your peers or by your conscience. In any case, you should not burn bridges or break off any relationships because you may feel differently when this is over. Relationships that are meant to be will last and later this year you might be ready to make a permanent commitment. September and November are excellent times to put dreams in motion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A little extra turns the ordinary into the extraordinary. You should wait until tomorrow to make a commitment or a key decision. Today could be a great time for you to make a personal presentation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make time for your own joy. You can't shove away the things that make you happy just because someone else is having a bad day. Remain sympathetic, but don't lose sight of the big picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you place small value on your ideas, others certainly won't raise the price. Make sure you do not sell yourself short or hide your talents. This is a poor time for confrontations but you must stick to principles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Design a day to match your own delight. Sometimes the pattern repeats and you see foreshadowing of events to come. If you can change the patterns to please yourself then good things will unfold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When you shoot for the moon you might end up closer to the stars. Your allor-nothing attitude could offend some people, but it also means you aren't afraid to tackle dirty jobs or see it through to the end.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This may be a Pink Floyd day when you feel just like another brick in the wall. Just because you aren't given tokens of appreciation doesn't mean vou aren't appreciated. Hold off on major decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The best person to love is often the one who annovs you the most. This is not a good day to confront someone with a disagreement or to try to negotiate a compromise. You can employ peaceful tactics.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Happiness is a work in progress. Not all moments are perfect but you can keep on building with what you do have. Remain ethical; be guided by your own inner light if placed in a precarious position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do-or-die attitudes prevail. When it comes down to putting in extra effort to get a job done, you are willing to do whatever it takes. Ambitious people could easily rub each other the wrong way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rather than waiting for the storm to pass, learn to dance in the rain. Tensions might be taking their toll but by continuing to do what you ought to be doing and by not making waves, you will prevail.

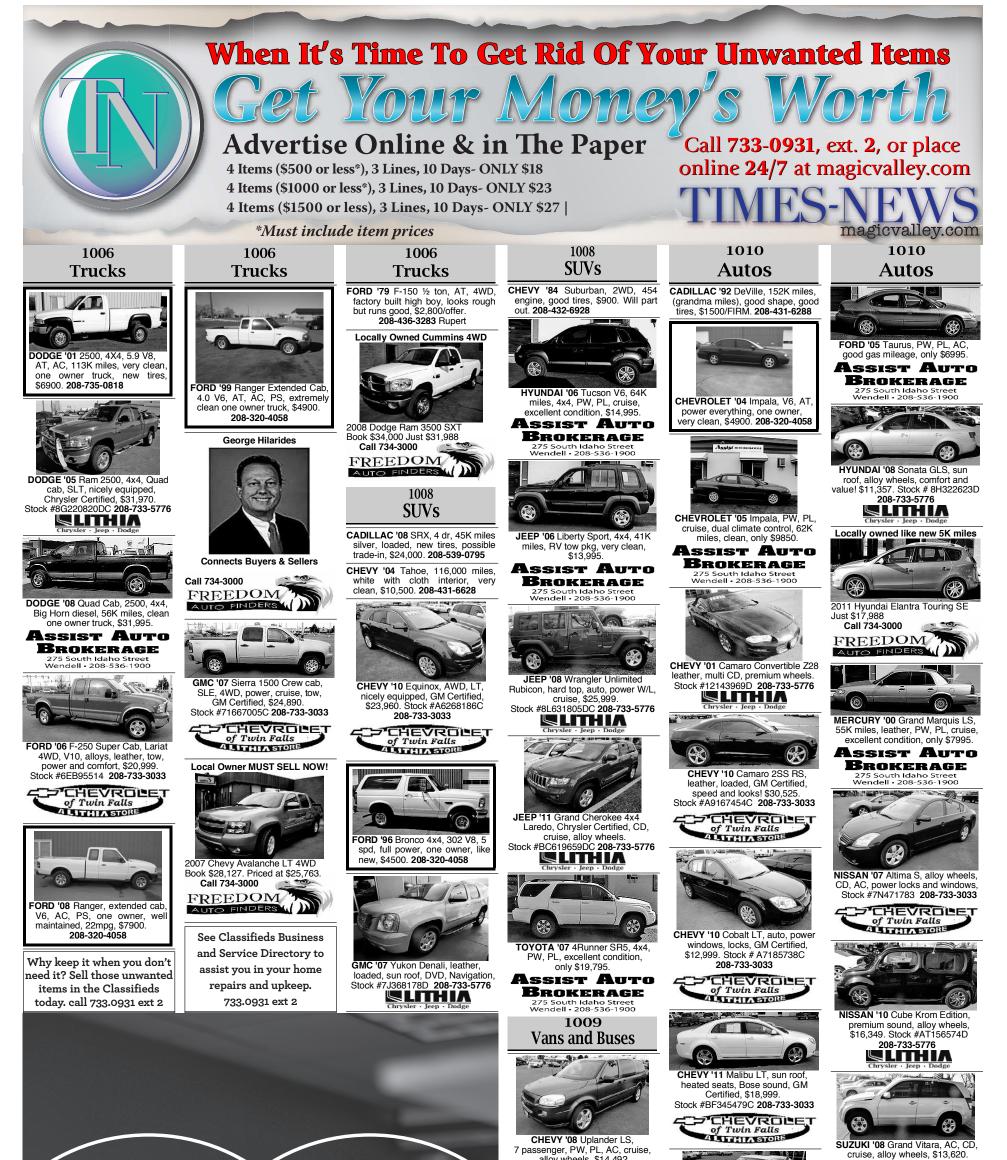

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your presence is an adequate present. Your special someone knows you are cheering in support even when you don't say a word. When everyone is under the gun to perform you pull your own weight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is the dawning of the Age of Aquarius. Collective wisdom can guide you towards a fuller life and happier relationships. Positive thinking is the key to turning a clash of wills and argument into an asset.
