Lee Fife was sentenced Monday in Twin Falls County 5th Judicial District Court for a range of criminal convictions stemming from incidents spanning 2011 and this year.

FIFE TO SPEND UP TO 20 YEARS IN PRISON

The Twin Falls man was sentenced Monday for crimes ranging from illegally collecting unemployment benefits to trying to ram police cars.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • The last year and a half has upended Lee Fife's world.

In that time, Fife lost his job, divorced, added five felony charges to his criminal record and was shot by police following a high-speed pursuit. Now, he could spend up to 20 years in prison for his crimes — serving at least five before any chance for parole.

The 41-year-old spoke at his sentencing hearing Monday and apologized to the people his crimes affected.

"I've had a rough time coming to this but I know I'm the one who put that officer in the situation to shoot me," he said.

Fife's troubles started in February 2011, when he wrote a check for car repairs for more than $6,000 that was returned for insufficient funds. Then, on April 5 police saw Fife pull into a convenience store. Officers knew Fife had a suspended license and attempted a traffic stop.

Fife took off for a residential neighborhood near Elizabeth Street and O'Leary Way, reaching speeds of 60 mph in 35 mph zones. When he found he was cornered in a cul-de-sac, he used his vehicle to try to ram police cars to escape, causing Officer Isaiah Day to shoot into the car, striking Fife, said Twin Falls County Senior Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway.

State Must Explain Firing ITD Director

Former Director Pamela Lowe can proceed with her claim that political pressure led to her 2009 termination.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Former Idaho Transportation Director Pamela Lowe responded Monday to a ruling in her wrongful termination case, saying she was elated with a federal judge's finding that state officials must provide a reason for her 2009 firing.

U.S. District Judge Ronald Bush also rejected the state's argument that Lowe was an at-will employee who could be fired at any time. The ruling, which was filed on Saturday, means Lowe's lawsuit can move forward.

She is seeking back pay, reinstatement or compensation in lieu of that, and attorney's fees, though no amount is specified. Lowe said Bush's decision over the weekend vindicates her contention that she had been doing a good job and her termination was politically motivated.

"It absolutely vindicated me and what I had been saying, and that is that the board was happy with my work, I had done a good job, I had had nothing but positive comments from the board as well as certainly my formal evaluations,"

Council Declines Gas Station Rezone, Awards Grants

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Between grant applicants pleading for funds and members of the public upset by a possible zoning change, it was clear there were no easy answers at Monday's Twin Falls City Council meeting.

Council members decided not to approve a zoning change to allow a Maverik gas station to be built along Addison Avenue East and Eastland Drive.

A small crowd of nearby residents and business owners spoke their opposition to the idea during a public hearing.

"You're not going to buy a home next to a gas station," resident Patricia Curtis said.

Councilman Shawn Barigar was the only vote in favor of the motion.

"Those who are against it are against a gas station, not retail," he said.

Completing one hurdle, the council then switched to selecting the recipients of a small, but significant city grant.

Out of the 15 local nonprofit organizations who applied for the Municipal Powers Outsource Grant, only seven will receive funding this year. Only four council members — Jim Munn, Chris

TWIN FALLS • Dr. Stanley Mogelson has cared for the hearts of Magic Valley residents for years.

Now, the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center cardiologist will back up the Twin Falls County sheriff's critical response team in dangerous situations — offering his services to the team free of charge.

"I thought Twin Falls has been good to me and this was an opportunity to give something back to Twin Falls," Mogelson said.

Mogelson was officially deputized as the sheriff's tactical medical officer on Jan. 24 and has been training once a month with the critical response team.

A small-arms enthusiast, he trains at Gunsite, a shooting school north of Prescott, Ariz., at least once a year. He is board-certified in internal medicine and cardiology and is certified in advanced trauma life support.

At Gunsite, Mogelson met another physician who worked with the SWAT team in her home county.

"That planted the seed in my mind," Mogelson said.

In October, Mogelson put together a packet explaining his proposition and got letters of reference from Gunsite trainers and his fellow doctors. Then, he set up an appointment with Sheriff Tom Carter to discuss his plan.

"I didn't see a downside," Carter said. "We were both excited."

Brown Funeral to be Saturday at CSI

TWIN FALLS • The body of U.S. Army Sgt. Daniel Brown will arrive Friday in Twin Falls.

An honorable transfer ceremony is scheduled at Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport. The charter flight will originate from Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

Col. Tim Marsano, public affairs officer for the Idaho Army National Guard, said the ceremony is the way the military returns the bodies of soldiers killed in action to their families. Brown — a 27-year-old from Jerome — was killed March 24 while serving in Afghanistan.

Brown

Brown's return at the airport will be private, Marsano said.

The next day, Brown's funeral service — which the public is invited to attend — is scheduled for 4 p.m. Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho's gymnasium. It will be followed by burial with full military rites at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Donations may be made to the Dan Brown Memorial Fund at any Wells Fargo bank branch. Proceeds will benefit Brown's twin daughters. Memories of Brown may be shared at www.rose-naufuneralhome.com.

Mogelson

While Carter approved, it was up to Chief Deputy Don Newman to make the final call.

The unique set of skills Mogelson possesses decided the matter, Newman said.

Since he's a special deputy, Mogelson can be right on the scene of a dangerous situation, while EMT paramedics are generally stationed near the scene, but out of harm's way. They can often be a few minutes away.

If someone has a traumatic injury, "a one- or two-minute wait can be a lifetime," Newman said.

On Feb. 13, Mogelson traveled to Jerome to back up the critical response team as they tried to coax a man out of a home who was accused of shooting a gun outside the La Oficina bar.

"Most of what I remember was being cold," Mogelson said. No one was injured in the nearly nine-hour standoff, and Mogelson said he hopes his skills are never needed, but he's proud to serve alongside the other deputies.

"I was very impressed with how well organized the team was," he said. "They have skills that mesh together extremely well."

As part of his entry into the sheriff's office, Mogelson brought a comprehensive medical kit that was purchased through a federal grant secured by Twin Falls County. The items in the kit will help Mogelson offer life-saving care before paramedics arrive.

"I hope I never have to use it, but such care in the first minutes after an injury can be life-saving," he said.

Neither Carter nor Newman can remember a person with Mogelson's skill sets volunteering their services with the sheriff's office. Mogelson has continued to pursue new skills and additional certifications beyond what he already has.

"I've got to hand it to the guy," Carter said, "He does it on his own dime."

Talkington, Lance Clow and Mayor Greg Lanting — voted after the council's other three members declared conflicts of interest.

The grant is designed to fund organizations who provide services the city could offer, but doesn't.

Applicants requested almost $180,000 but the city only had $100,000 to give out. Recipient amounts ranged from $4,000 to $23,500. Each organization gave a five-minute presentation arguing why they should receive funding.

"I wish we had more," Lanting said. "Everyone deserves this."

Also Monday, the council laid the grounds for a future public hearing, to hear testimony on a proposed land swap between the city and Twin Falls County. The exchange would provide the city about 2.7 acres at the northeast corner of Blake Street North and Shoup Avenue, which could eventually host an off-leash dog park, a community garden or both. The city would trade its one-third share of the McCoy gravel pit property west of the former Twin Falls hospital.

TWIN FALLS • Police responded Monday afternoon to a report of a vehicle that crashed into a northeast Twin Falls home.

At 12:15 p.m. police arrived at the home on the 2300 block of Julie Lane to find a silver, two-door Honda Civic driven by Casey McElliot, 22, of Twin Falls, had crashed into the house, damaging a wall near the front door.

McElliot was cited for reckless driving and the preliminary investigation suggests he was smoking synthetic marijuana known as spice before the accident. Police say the man blacked out just before crashing into the home.

There were no injuries in the crash, but police say extensive damage was done to the home.

Beauty Students Learn Ugly Truth of Workplace Violence

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • While each school and workplace is meant to be a safe environment, a growing trend of violence in both is prompting some Mini-Cassia employers to seek advice about keeping employees and students safe.

About 40 students at the Cosmetology School of Arts and Sciences in Burley participated in a Monday workshop presented by Cassia County Sheriff's Detective Kevin Horak.

Horak said potential incidents range from stalking and confrontations between students or employees to situations involving a gun-wielding suspect who enters the building.

"I thought the class was pretty interesting," said student-teacher Jo Anna Clark. "It got me thinking about how there are not many places to hide in this building and how we would get students out if something like that occurred."

Ronda Clark, co-owner of the cosmetology school, said the federal government requires the school to have safety policies in place.

"We also have had a couple of incidents in the last few years that made us think it wouldn't hurt to get the students some training," Clark said. "A lot of our students are young women, so the potential is high to have these kinds of incidents."

From interpersonal squabbles to jealous ex-boyfriends, the potential for high drama to turn violent is present at the school, as it is in many other workplaces.

Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd said incidents of violence have been on the rise for the past 10 years. His office is offering the new, free workshops to any group that seeks to learn more about violence prevention.

many of the facts surrounding the prosecution's version of the crimes, but acknowledged there was enough evidence to convict him.

Bingham requested Fife be given a lighter sentence in order to show he can move forward and be a good citizen. A mixture of drugs and suddenly unstable work and home situations caused Fife to commit the felonies on an otherwise misdemeanor-filled record, he said.

Judge Richard Bevan asked how a man who lived an ordinary middle-class life could wind up in Fife's place.

"You began this crime spree that now brings you before the court," he said. "It's not reconcilable with you a year and a half or two years ago."

Even though he might be sorry, Bevan said, Fife painted himself into a corner.

For battery on officers, Fife will serve a minimum of four years with the possibility of eight more. Various sentences for his other crimes will run concurrently except for the burglary, which will run consecutively. Bevan sentenced Fife to one to eight years in prison on that count.

Idaho Noted for Lifting Cap on Charter Schools

BOISE • Idaho now ranks among a dozen states with the strongest charter school laws.

That's according to the Center for Education Reform, a school choice advocate based in Washington, D.C. Idaho climbed several notches in the group's annual report, which was released Monday and ranked Idaho 12th among 42 states with laws allowing charter schools.

These schools are funded with public money but given more freedom in how they operate.

Last year, the group ranked Idaho 20th among 41 states, citing the state's cap that limited the number of new charter schools to six per year. State lawmakers did away with that cap during the 2012 session, which helped bump up the state's ranking with the Center for Education Reform.

Man Collected Dead Mother's VA Benefits

BOISE • A 57-year-old Boise man has been sentenced to one month in prison and five months of home confinement for collecting his mother's Department of Veterans Affairs dependent compensation payments for two years after she died.

The U.S. Attorney's Office says Paul Richard McLeod was sentenced Monday by U.S. District Judge Edward J. Lodge in Boise. Lodge also ordered McLeod to pay nearly $36,000 in restitution and complete 60 hours of community service. He will be on supervised release for three years.

McLeod pleaded guilty in January to receiving stolen government money.

McLeod's mother died in June 2008. Prosecutors allege that from July 2008 through July 2010, the VA continued to deposit the monthly compensation payments into the joint account belonging to McLeod and his mother.

Rexburg Man Indicted on Embezzlement

POCATELLO • The U.S. Attorney's Office says a 26-year-old Rexburg man has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Pocatello on a charge of financial institution fraud.

Prosecutors allege Carlos E. Juarez embezzled just more than $11,000 from Wells Fargo Bank by arranging unauthorized loans from customers' accounts between August and November 2011. He was indicted last week.

A trial is set for May 14 before U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill in Pocatello.

Vet Seeks Canine Blood Donors

BOISE • A Boise veterinarian seeking a more reliable blood supply for dogs needing transfusions has started a donor program.

The Idaho Press Tribune reports veterinarian Chad Hunt started the Canine Blood Heroes, Boise program at Bench Animal Hospital in January.

Under the program, owners can bring in their dogs to donate nearly a pint of blood as often as once every eight weeks. Donors are compensated with $50 worth of veterinary care.

Hunt says donor dogs must weigh at least 50 pounds and undergo a physical exam to make sure they are healthy enough to donate.

So far, Hunt has eight dogs that donate blood on a regular basis. And he says they have already helped save the lives of other dogs.

Hunt says an Idaho Falls veterinarian founded the program.

Gold Miner Told to Back off River

LEWISTON • The Idaho Department of Lands is warning a gold mine operator to back away from the Salmon River or face a violation of his permit.

Jay Sila, manager of the department's Craig Mountain region, told the Lewiston Tribune that miner Mike Conklin has been told to move his mining operation further away from the Salmon River near White Bird. The agency also told the Grangeville miner to fill in part of the area that has been mined and reclaim it, taking steps to restore it to its pre-mined condition.

The Grangeville miner has a permit that requires he stay 20 feet away from the high water line during most of the year, and 30 feet away from the line in spring, when high flows are common.

Sila said his department is also sending a team to the mining site to better mark the high-water line, in an effort to avoid future permit violations.

N. Idaho Rest Stop Shooting Investigated

POTLATCH • Authorities are investigating the shooting of a 28-year-old woman at a rest stop in northern Idaho.

The woman was being treated Monday at a hospital in Moscow.

The Latah County Sheriff's Office say the shooting was reported just before 4 a.m. at the Mineral Mountain Rest Area north of Potlatch. Deputies who responded say they found the woman with a gunshot wound to the abdomen.

Authorities said the woman's name and her condition were not immediately available.

The Lewiston Tribune reports the rest area has been closed to the public while authorities investigate the shooting.

Idaho Says Prison Health Care Report Is Faulty

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Correction is telling a federal judge that a scathing report about health care at a Boise-area prison isn't accurate and doesn't reflect current conditions.

Attorneys for the state filed their response to the report late last week, saying a court-appointed health care expert didn't do a thorough review at the Idaho State Correctional Institution.

Dr. Marc Stern was appointed by the federal court to examine the care at the prison as part of a long running lawsuit between inmates and the state. U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill has said he will use Stern's findings to help him decide whether to end the lawsuit. Stern's report was damning, finding that the medical care was so poor that it amounts to cruel and unusual punishment.

ITD

Lowe told the Spokesman-Review (<http://bit.ly/HJJb53>).

The transportation department also responded to the ruling on Monday, saying it would consider an appeal. The agency pointed out that Bush's decision did not specifically address the claims in Lowe's lawsuit, and the next step would be to determine whether or not she was provided due process.

"The ruling does not address claims of gender discrimination and wrongful firing. No schedule has been set by the court to hear these claims," the agency said.

Idaho code gives the transportation board authority to remove the director for inefficiency, neglect of duty, malfeasance and nonfeasance in office.

Lowe contends none of those reasons were given to justify her firing. She claims she was let go by the Transportation Department board in a power play to help Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and his big campaign donors.

Lowe claims she refused to bow to threats by governor's aides not to interfere with a contract originally worth $50 million. The contract benefited URS Corp. and CH2M Hill, two engineering companies that at the time of Lowe's firing had given the governor at least $22,000 combined since 2005.

She said the transportation board succumbed to political pressure when asking her to resign on May 11, 2009.

Earlier that year, Lowe had been criticized and targeted by lawmakers during a legislative session highlighted by bitter battles over funding to fix roads and bridges. Some Republican lawmakers worked to get support for a bill that would give Otter power to replace Lowe.

Sponsors of the measure, including then-Sen. John McGee, said it would give Otter authority to pick an advocate for highway policies favored by the executive branch, as well as give the governor someone to hold accountable when problems emerge.

But the bill failed to gather enough support, and Lowe resisted pressure to step down.

"The board succumbed to political blackmail and pressure from John McGee when he ran that bill," Lowe said Monday.

McGee did not immediately return a phone call on Monday. The Caldwell Republican resigned from the Idaho Legislature in February rather than face an ethics investigation into a young female Senate employee's claim that he sexually harassed her.

April 3rd is the 100th birthday of Marie McFarland, of Twin Falls. Marie came to Twin Falls from Seward, Kansas when she was 4 years old with her parents Joe and Stella Andrews in 1916. She grew up on a farm south of the Sugar Factory on the edge of Rock Creek where she and her brother and 5 sisters played.

Marie remembers very well her dad driving the covered school wagon with his team picking up the kids and taking them to Bickel. Most vivid in her mind are the winters when her dad had to shovel to get the wagon through the drifts, "there was more snow then".

Marie married Loren McFarland June 6, 1930 right at the start of the Depression. Marie and Loren had a service station and hot dog stand in Hansen and she remembers the dust bowl families driving through on Highway 30, the main route through southern Idaho. They would sometimes only be able to buy a dime worth of gas to take them a few more miles down the road.

She offered to let some children have their windfall apples from under the tree and they took them all even the rotten ones.

Loren and Marie and their 3 sons lived south of Hansen and they farmed out on the Hansen Butte on a farm that still had ruts from the Oregon Trail on it, Marie was always busy canning, sewing, quilting, crocheting and gardening. She invested a lot of time in her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Marie enjoyed trips to Hawaii with Loren and after his death in 1987 she took quite a few trips with her son and daughter-in-law to Cancun, Buchart Gardens, Grand Targhee, North Dakota, Wisconsin, the Sawtooths and others. She and her sister Bernice went on a cruise to Alaska together.

She took pleasure in her volunteer work at the college and visitor's center on the canyon rim.

Marie has 7 grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren and 4 great-great-granddaughters.

Marie resides at Alterra Wynwood in Twin Falls where she enjoys the staff, the birds at the feeders outside her windows, reading mysteries and watching television.

7 DEAD, 3 HURT IN SCHOOL SHOOTING

BY TERRY COLLINS
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. • A 43-year-old former student of a small Christian university in California opened fire at the school Monday, killing at least seven people and setting off an intense, chaotic manhunt that ended with his capture at a nearby shopping center, authorities said.

Police Chief Howard Jordan said One L. Goh surrendered about an hour after the shooting at Oikos University. Jordan initially reported that authorities recovered the weapon used during the rampage, but later clarified that police only recovered enough ballistics evidence to determine that a handgun was used in the rampage.

"It's going to take us a few days to put the pieces together," Jordan said. "We do not have a motive."

Police first received a 911 call at 10:33 a.m. reporting a woman on the ground bleeding. The first arriving officer found a victim suffering from a life-threatening gunshot wound, he said.

More officers arrived and formed a perimeter around the school on the belief that the suspect was still inside, he said.

"Potential victims remained inside the building either trapped by a locked door which officers were unable to open," Jordan said. Others were unable to flee because they were injured, he said.

Report: Air Travel Improving for Passengers

BY JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Airlines, led by low-cost carrier AirTran Airways, are doing a better job of getting passengers to their destinations on time, with their bags, and with fewer complaints, private researchers who have analyzed federal data on airline performance said Monday.

It was the second year in a row that AirTran topped the rankings of the nation's 15 largest airlines included in the annual report. Hawaiian Airlines and JetBlue Airways also repeated their performance from the previous year, ranking second and third, respectively.

The rankings are based on data airlines supply the Department of Transportation regarding lost bags, delayed flights, and bumpings from full planes, and consumer complaints made to the department.

Overall, the report shows flying is getting better even through passengers grappling with fare increases, canceled routes and a seemingly endless parade of new fees may not feel that way, said Dean Headley, a business professor at Wichita State University who has co-written the annual report for 22 years.

Airlines are slowly, steadily recovering from their melt-down five years ago, when, under the strain of near-record consumer travel demand, their performance tanked, he said. Industry performance for all four measurements was slightly better in 2011 compared with 2010.

OBAMA, CALDERON, HARPER VOW TO CUT EXCESS REGS

BY MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama and the leaders of Canada and Mexico on Monday vowed a new effort to boost North American trade — and cut needless regulation that stifles it — in a summit that aimed to shore up a fragile economic recovery.

After a one-day summit with Mexican President Felipe Calderon and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Obama said the United States has trimmed outdated and burdensome rules in talks with both its neighbors, but all three countries will now go beyond that.

"Our three nations are going to sit down together, go through the books and simplify and eliminate more regulations that will make our joint economies stronger," he said.

Obama noted trade among the three neighbors now tops $1 trillion a year, and he wants to see that number rise. "This is going to help create jobs," he said.

The summit ranged broadly across issues of energy and climate change, immigration and the war on drugs.

But notable by its absence from the post-summit news conference in the Rose Garden was the controversial Keystone XL oil pipeline from Canada's oil sands in Alberta to the U.S. Gulf of Mexico. Obama shelved the plan pending further review — and has endured ferocious GOP attacks ever since, with Republicans calling the move a blow to job creation and U.S. energy needs. He maintains GOP leaders in Congress forced his hand by insisting on a decision before an acceptable pipeline route was found.

Harper has voiced disappointment with Obama's decision. He also visited China in February to explore alternatives. Canada has the world's third-largest oil reserves — more than 170 billion barrels — after Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, and daily production of 1.5 million barrels from the oil sands is expected to rise to 3.7 million by 2025.

Obama, Harper and Calderon will see each other later this month at the Summit of the Americas in Cartagena, Colombia. They're also well-known to each other from international gatherings — but are headed in different electoral directions.

Study: Some Early Breast Cancer Overdiagnosed

BY STEPHANIE NANO
Associated Press

NEW YORK • For years, women have been urged to get screened for breast cancer because the earlier it's found, the better. Now researchers are reporting more evidence suggesting that's not always the case.

A study in Norway estimates that between 15 and 25 percent of breast cancers found by mammograms wouldn't have caused any problems during a woman's lifetime, but these tumors were being treated anyway. Once detected, early tumors are surgically removed and sometimes treated with radiation or chemotherapy because there's no certain way to figure out which ones may be dangerous and which are harmless.

"When you look for cancer early and you look really hard, you find forms that are ultimately never going to bother the patient," said Dr. H. Gilbert Welch of the Dartmouth Institute for Health Policy and Clinical Practice, who was not part of the research. "It's a side effect of early diagnosis."

The study is the latest to explore overdiagnosis from routine mammograms — finding tumors that grow so slowly or not at all and that would not have caused symptoms or death. Previous estimates of the problem have varied.

The researchers took advantage of the staggered decade-long introduction of a screening program in Norway, starting in 1996. That allowed them to compare the number of breast cancers in counties where screening was offered with those in areas that didn't yet have the program. Their analysis also included a decade before mammograms were offered.

They estimated that for every 2,500 women offered screening, one death from breast cancer will be prevented but six to 10 women will be overdiagnosed and treated.

ROMNEY'S FALL FOCUS BRINGS NEW CHALLENGES

GREEN BAY, Wis. • Mitt Romney is looking for a sweep in today's three Republican primaries, expecting to tighten his grasp on the party's nomination.

Regardless of the outcome in Wisconsin, Maryland and Washington, D.C., the GOP front-runner is rapidly shifting toward the general election — and the challenges of President Barack Obama's better-financed and better-organized opposition.

Court OKs Jailhouse Strip Searches

BY MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Jailers may perform invasive strip searches on people arrested even for minor offenses, an ideologically divided Supreme Court ruled Monday, the conservative majority declaring that security trumps privacy in an often dangerous environment.

In a 5-4 decision, the court ruled against a New Jersey man who was strip searched in two county jails following his arrest on a warrant for an unpaid fine that he had, in reality, paid.

The decision resolved a conflict among lower courts about how to balance security and privacy. Prior to the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks, lower courts generally prohibited routine strip searches for minor offenses. In recent years, however, courts have allowed jailers more discretion to maintain security, and the high court ruling ratified those decisions.

In this case, Albert Florence's nightmare began when the sport utility vehicle driven by his pregnant wife was pulled over for speeding. He was a passenger; his 4-year-old son was in the backseat.

Justice Anthony Kennedy said the circumstances of the arrest were of little importance. Instead, Kennedy said, Florence's entry into the general jail population gave guards the authorization to force him to strip naked and expose his mouth, nose, ears and genitals to a visual search in case he was hiding anything.

"Courts must defer to the judgment of correctional officials unless the record contains substantial evidence showing their policies are an unnecessary or unjustified response to problems of jail security," Kennedy said.

In a dissenting opinion joined by the court's liberals, Justice Stephen Breyer said strip searches improperly "subject those arrested for minor offenses to serious invasions of their personal privacy."

SUU KYI HOPES VICTORY IS DAWN OF NEW ERA

YANGON, Myanmar • Democracy icon Aung San Suu Kyi's victory in parliamentary elections is the biggest prize of her political career. But the weekend vote for only a few dozen legislative seats may have sown the seeds of something far more significant — the possibility her party could sweep the next balloting in 2015 and take control of Myanmar's government.

That, for now, remains only a tantalizing dream for her supporters, and making it happen in three years' time may be unrealistic in a nation still heavily influenced by a feared military whose powers and influence remain enshrined in the constitution.

COURT NIXES CIVIL SUITS OVER GRAND JURY LIES

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court ruled unanimously Monday that witnesses who lie to a grand jury are protected from civil lawsuits, giving them the same protection that witnesses get at trials. The justices ruled against Charles Rehberg, an accountant who was indicted three times involving charges that he harassed doctors affiliated with a south Georgia hospital system.

Lying under oath can subject someone to criminal charges. That was not at issue before the high court.

1940 Census Release Welcomed with Rush for Records

BY RANDY HERSCHAFT AND CRISTIAN SALAZAR
Associated Press

NEW YORK • With the 1940 census records released Monday, Verla Morris can consider herself a part of living history.

Morris, who is in her 100th year, got to experience the novelty of seeing her own name and details about her life in the records being released by the U.S. National Archives online after 72 years of confidentiality expired.

"I'd be happy to see it there," she said in an interview prior to Monday's rollout. "I don't think anything could surprise me, really."

Morris is one of more than 21 million people alive in the U.S. and Puerto Rico who were counted in the 16th federal decennial census, which documents the tumultuous decade of the 1930s transformed by the Great Depression and black migration from the rural South. It's a distinction she shares with such living celebrities as Clint Eastwood and Morgan Freeman.

Interest in the 1940 census was so great Monday that the government website with the information was nearly paralyzed shortly after its release.

Miriam Kleiman, a spokeswoman for the U.S. National Archives, told The Associated Press that the site registered more than 22 million hits in just four hours on Monday, from almost 2 million users.

Morris, who has been working on her family history since 1969 and has written six books on its branches, said census records were essential for her genealogical work because oftentimes people don't want to give their personal information.

"Lots of times I just have to wait until maybe they die," she said. "Then I'll have all their information."

But census records, which include names, addresses and — in the case of the 1940 census, income and employment information — are rich with long-veiled personal details.

Morris, who turns 100 in August and was contacted through the National Centenarian Awareness Project, said she was working as a keypunch operator in Fairfield, Ill., when the 1940 census was taken. "I don't remember them taking my census," said Morris, who lives in Chandler, Ariz.

While a name index will not be immediately available to search, tens of thousands of researchers across the country are expected to go on a monumental genealogical hunt this week through the digitized records for details on 132 million people. Access to the records will be free and open to anyone on the Internet.

Every decade since 1942, the National Archives has made available records from past censuses. Some privacy advocates have opposed releasing such large amounts of personal information about living people.

The American Civil Liberties Union, for instance, has for over 30 years opposed any unrestricted release of census records.

A document obtained from the National Archives by The Associated Press through a Freedom of Information Act request shows that, in 2010, the U.S. Census Bureau raised privacy concerns about the disclosure of the 1940 census by the nation's record-keeper.

Census Bureau spokesman Robert Bernstein said in an email that any fears the data could be used to harm anyone living today "such as through identity theft" were alleviated when the archives said no birthdates or Social Security numbers would be in the records. One 1940 census question asked a sample group of over 6 million people whether they had a Social Security number, but did not explicitly ask for the number itself.

Mexico's PAN Battling to Retain Presidency

BY OLGA R. RODRIGUEZ
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY • Expectations were high when a maverick businessman favoring cowboy boots and plain talk won the presidency in 2000, defeating the party that had governed Mexico for 71 consecutive years.

Mexicans hoped that their country would take a new course under Vicente Fox's center-right National Action Party, or PAN, with government corruption uprooted, the police and justice systems strengthened and poverty curtailed.

But they have been disappointed by drug trafficking violence, and the failure to prosecute government corruption or correct judicial inefficiency under the PAN's leadership, first under Fox and then under current President Felipe Calderon, who barely squeaked by in a contested 2006 election. Despite a more open economy and a bigger middle class, more than half of the nation's 120 million people still live in poverty.

Amid the dashed hopes of many Mexicans, the PAN is battling to retain the presidency in July 1 balloting as the formerly entrenched Institutional Revolutionary Party known as the PRI seems poised for a comeback.

"When I voted for Fox and for Calderon I expected change," said Homero Aridjis, a Mexican poet, diplomat and environmentalist. "We thought corruption was going to end, that the country would be well-governed but now we see with disappointment that the lack of justice continues, the corruption we knew continues, and now we can add incompetence in governing to that."

Since its 1939 founding, the pro-business PAN has billed itself as an anti-corruption crusader that made pinpointing the abuses of PRI governments its main mission. Fox was elected largely because he promised to break with the past and vowed to crush the corrupt "black snakes" and "toads" of the old regime.

The night Fox was declared the winner, thousands of ecstatic Mexicans donning masks of the mustached leader and waving the country's red, white and green flag rushed to celebrate beneath the gilded angel of Mexico City's Independence monument. A coffin decorated with the PRI logo was passed among the crowd. Many equated the PAN's victory to the fall of the Berlin Wall.

But the euphoria quickly wore off.

Fox "marketed democracy to the Mexican people and sold it as a panacea for all of their individual, personal concerns," said David A. Shirk, director of the University of San Diego Trans-Border Institute and author of a book about the PAN. "The expectations that people had were the expectations that Fox set for himself, and they were frankly unrealistic."

Once president, Fox made accountability for the PRI's past crimes and the fight against corruption the centerpiece of his administration but achieved little in both efforts.

In one of the most high profile cases of government corruption gone unpunished by the Fox administration, a former union leader of the state-owned Petroleos Mexicanos company, known as Pemex, was accused of diverting as much as US$170 million in state oil funds to the 2000 presidential campaign of the PRI candidate, Francisco Labastida. The party was fined $1 billion pesos (about $90 million dollars) but no one was criminally prosecuted in the case dubbed "Pemexgate."

Bug Hunters Fan Across LA to Stop Citrus Disease

HACIENDA HEIGHTS, Calif. (AP) • The ubiquitous backyard citrus tree, symbolic of California's agricultural abundance, is front and center in the battle now under way to save the state's nearly $2 billion citrus industry.

State bug detectives fanned across this suburban Los Angeles neighborhood Monday, vacuuming backyard trees with bug catchers, setting traps and taking tissue samples from citrus in a frantic effort to stop the spread of a deadly disease detected there last week.

“You can treat commercial groves with pesticides, but you can't do that in downtown LA,” said Larry Hawkins of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, underscoring the difficulty in treating an agriculture disease in an urban landscape.

AG BROWN BAG LUNCHEON PLANNED

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Magic Valley residents are invited to learn how Idaho agricultural activity helps meet the world's food demand during a Thursday luncheon.

Idaho Ag in the Classroom State Director Rick Waitley will present the free glimpse into the agricultural education program at noon at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, 858 Blue Lakes Blvd N., Twin Falls.

The event is hosted by the Chamber Agribusiness Committee, which also plans a fall 2012 Ag Tour of local food producers. Details of that event will be released at a later date.

The committee meets at 7:30 a.m. the first Tuesday of each month, at the Twin Falls chamber's office.

IDAHO POWER SEEKS RATE CHANGES

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Idaho Power Co. has applied for seven rate adjustments that, if approved in their entirety, would increase its customers' rates by an average of 3.35 percent by no later than July 1.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is accepting comments on the power company's seven proposals, which range from a requested 7.1 percent increase to pay for a $398 million natural gas plant near New Plymouth expected to go online by July 1, to a 3.2 percent rate decrease through the second year of a revenue-sharing mechanism.

Further, the annual Power Cost Adjustment becomes effective June 1, and could increase or decrease the proposed rate adjustment.

To comment on any of the cases, visit www.puc.idaho.gov and click “Comments & Questions About a Case.” Written comments can be mailed to P.O. Box 83720, Boise, ID 83720-0074, or faxed to 208-334-3762.

Kruzer's Demolition Slated for April 10

The old Twin Falls nightclub is going down to clear space for Glanbia's multimillion-dollar corporate HQ.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • What once was home to drinks and youthful dalliances will soon be the construction site for Glanbia Foods' multimillion-dollar corporate headquarters and research center.

The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency announced Monday that demolition of the former Kruzer's Nightlife building will begin April 10. The former nightclub at 121 Fourth Ave. S. closed in early 2009 and was purchased by the URA to be developed.

In January, Glanbia announced plans to build a 35,000-square-foot office complex and 14,000-square-foot research center at the site. According to company officials, Glanbia could spend up to $15 million on the project.

But first, the old bar needs to come down. The URA bid out the building's demolition to Boise-based Asbestos Unemployment in the eurozone • Unemployment in the 17 countries that use the euro hit its highest level since the currency was introduced back in 1999, official figures showed Monday, adding to fears that the region is in recession.

The number of unemployed totaled 17.1 million, nearly 1.5 million higher than the same month a year ago. Of the 17 countries in the eurozone, seven countries had unemployment rates of above 10 per cent.

The figures stand in marked contrast to the U.S. — with an unemployment rate of 8.3 percent — which has recorded solid increases in the number of people finding work over the past few months.

Flying Car Gets Closer to Reality with Test Flight

BY DEE-ANN DURBIN
Associated Press

Flying cars aren't just science fiction anymore.

Woburn, Mass.-based Terrafugia Inc. said Monday that its prototype flying car has completed its first flight, bringing the company closer to its goal of selling the flying car within the next year. The vehicle — dubbed the Transition — has two seats, four wheels and wings that fold up so it can be driven like a car. Last month, it flew at 1,400 feet for eight minutes. Commercial jets fly at 35,000 feet.

Around 100 people have already put down a $10,000 deposit to get a Transition when they go on sale, and those numbers will likely rise after Terrafugia introduces the Transition to the public later this week at the New York Auto Show. But don't expect it to show up in too many driveways. It's expected to cost $279,000.

And it won't help if you're stuck in traffic. The car needs a runway.

The flying car has always had a special place in the American imagination. Inventors have been trying to make them since the 1930s, according to Robert Mann, an airline industry analyst who owns R.W. Mann & Co. in Port Washington, N.Y.

But Mann thinks Terrafugia has come closer than anyone to making the flying car a reality. The government has already granted the company's request to use special tires and glass that are lighter than normal automotive ones, to make it easier for the vehicle to fly. The government has also temporarily exempted the Transition from the requirement to equip vehicles with electronic stability control, which would add about six pounds to the vehicle. The Transition is currently going through a battery of automotive crash tests to make sure it meets federal safety standards.

Mann said Terrafugia was helped by the Federal Aviation Administration's decision five years ago to create a separate set of standards for light sport aircraft. The standards govern the size and speed of the plane and licensing requirements for pilots, which are less restrictive than requirements for pilots of larger planes. Terrafugia says an owner would need to pass a test and complete 20 hours of flying time to be able to fly the Transition, a relatively low hurdle for pilots.

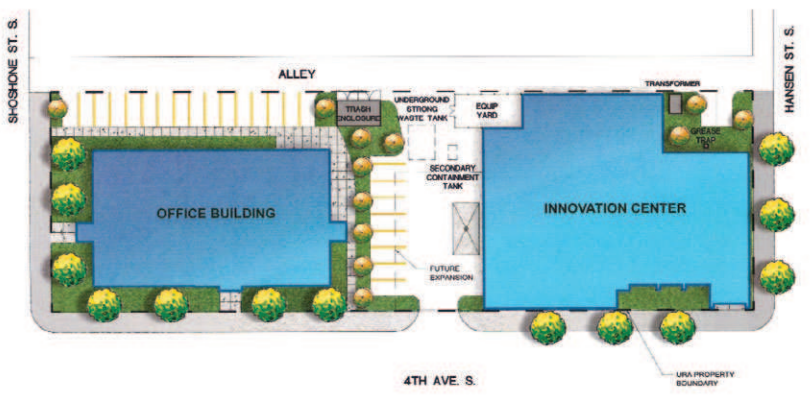

The Transition can reach around 70 miles per hour on the road and 115 in the air, spokesman Steven Moscaritolo said. It flies using a 23-gallon tank of automotive fuel and burns 5 gallons per hour in the air. On the ground, it gets 35 miles per gallon.

Mann questions the size of the market for the Transition. The general aviation market has been in decline for two decades, he said, largely because of fuel costs and the high cost of liability for manufacturers. Also, fewer people are learning how to fly.

“This is not going to be an inexpensive aircraft to produce or market,” he said. “It has some uniqueness, and will get some sales, but the question is, could it ever be a profitable enterprise?”

Mann sees the western U.S. as the most likely market, where people could fly instead of driving long distances.

Terrafugia has been working on flying cars since 2006, and has already pushed back the launch once.

This site plan shows Glanbia Foods' planned downtown Twin Falls headquarters and Cheese Innovation Center. The Twin Falls cheese company expects to move into the new location at the corner of Shoshone Street South and Fourth Avenue South in early 2013.

Demolition is expected to be completed by mid-April.

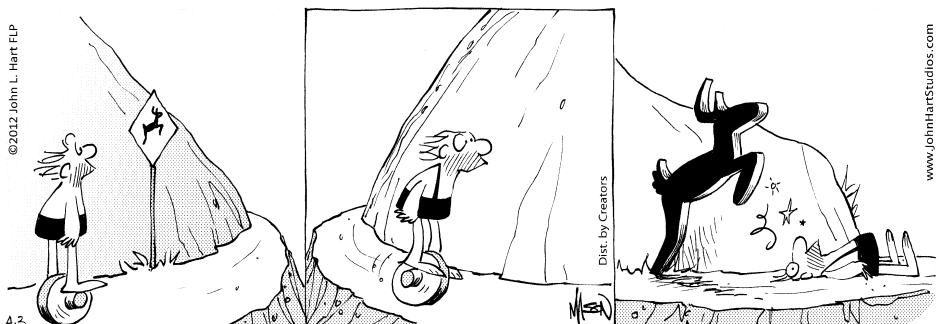

“While the demolition of Kruzer's may be the end of an era in that part of town, it is the mission of the TFURA to make use of public/private partnerships to build business to make our Old Town area more vibrant for the entire community,” URA Board Chairman Gary Garmand said in a written release.

Glanbia is the largest producer of American-style cheese in the U.S., and is Idaho's largest milk buyer. It's expected that Glanbia will bring 100 jobs into downtown Twin Falls when it moves into its new facilities.

“Each and every one of us feels the pain of this family simply because Trayvon Martin could have been one of all of us.”

Former Miami Heat star Alonzo Mourning in a statement as political leaders, sport stars and entertainers were among several thousand people who gathered Sunday at a Miami rally to call for an arrest in the fatal shooting of an unarmed Florida teenager by a neighborhood watch volunteer.

Care or Cure?

The debate isn't new, but as the country awaits the U.S.

Supreme Court's decision on the constitutionality of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, commonly called Obamacare, suppose the conversation switched from a health care system devoted primarily to caring for the sick to one that gives top priority to finding cures for disease? A healthier public would sharply reduce expenses associated with catastrophic illness.

There is also the issue of prevention so that while cures are pursued through research, people might order their lives in ways that give them the best chance of avoiding sickness altogether.

A useful starting point is a paper published in 2009 by Partnership for Prevention (www.prevent.org), “A non-partisan organization of business, nonprofit and government leaders working to make evidence-based disease prevention and health promotion a national priority.” The paper was titled “The Economic Argument for Disease Prevention: Distinguishing Between Value and Savings.”

The authors — three doctors and an executive consultant with an MBA — write, “There are three kinds of prevention. Primary prevention can be accomplished by modifying unhealthy behaviors (e.g., smoking, physical inactivity), which cause many diseases and account for 38 percent of all deaths in the United States, administering immunizations to prevent infectious diseases, and reducing exposure to harmful environmental factors. Secondary prevention can reduce the severity of diseases, such as cancer and heart disease, through screening programs that detect the diseases or their risk factors at early stages, before they become symptomatic or disabling. Tertiary prevention — the effort to avoid or defer the complications of diseases after they have developed — is the current focus of medical care.”

That focus on tertiary prevention is the driving force behind rising health care costs.

As baby boomers age, the cost of treating the rising number of diseases and common illnesses attributable to aging will increase. Finding cures is the most logical approach to keeping health care costs in check.

Take Alzheimer's disease. Because of medical advances, more people are living longer, and more will likely contract this slow progressing, eventually fatal disease. According to the Alzheimer's Association (www.alz.org), “Medicare and Medicaid will spend an estimated $140 billion in 2012 on people with Alzheimer's and other dementias.” Worse, it says, “Caring for people with Alzheimer's disease will cost all payers — Medicare, Medicaid, individuals, private insurance and HMOs — $20 trillion (in today's dollars) over the next 40 years. The overwhelming majority of that will be spending by Medicare and Medicaid.”

It would cost far less if we found a cure for Alzheimer's.

The three leading causes of death in America remain what they have been for some time. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, they are: heart disease, cancer and chronic lower respiratory diseases.

What is needed is political leadership, not unlike John F. Kennedy's vision of putting a man on the moon by the end of the 1960s. If the forces of technology can be marshaled to achieve a major task in space, why can't medical and political forces, working together and without the polarization that divides Washington, find cures for diseases here on Earth? Disease does not discriminate. Democrats and Republicans get sick. Where is the downside to cooperating to find medical cures?

Especially if the Supreme Court overturns part, or all, of Obamacare — but even if it doesn't — finding cures to diseases that kill is a worthy objective that will produce dividends for millennia to come and contribute to human happiness. It will also substantially reduce the federal deficit and national debt.

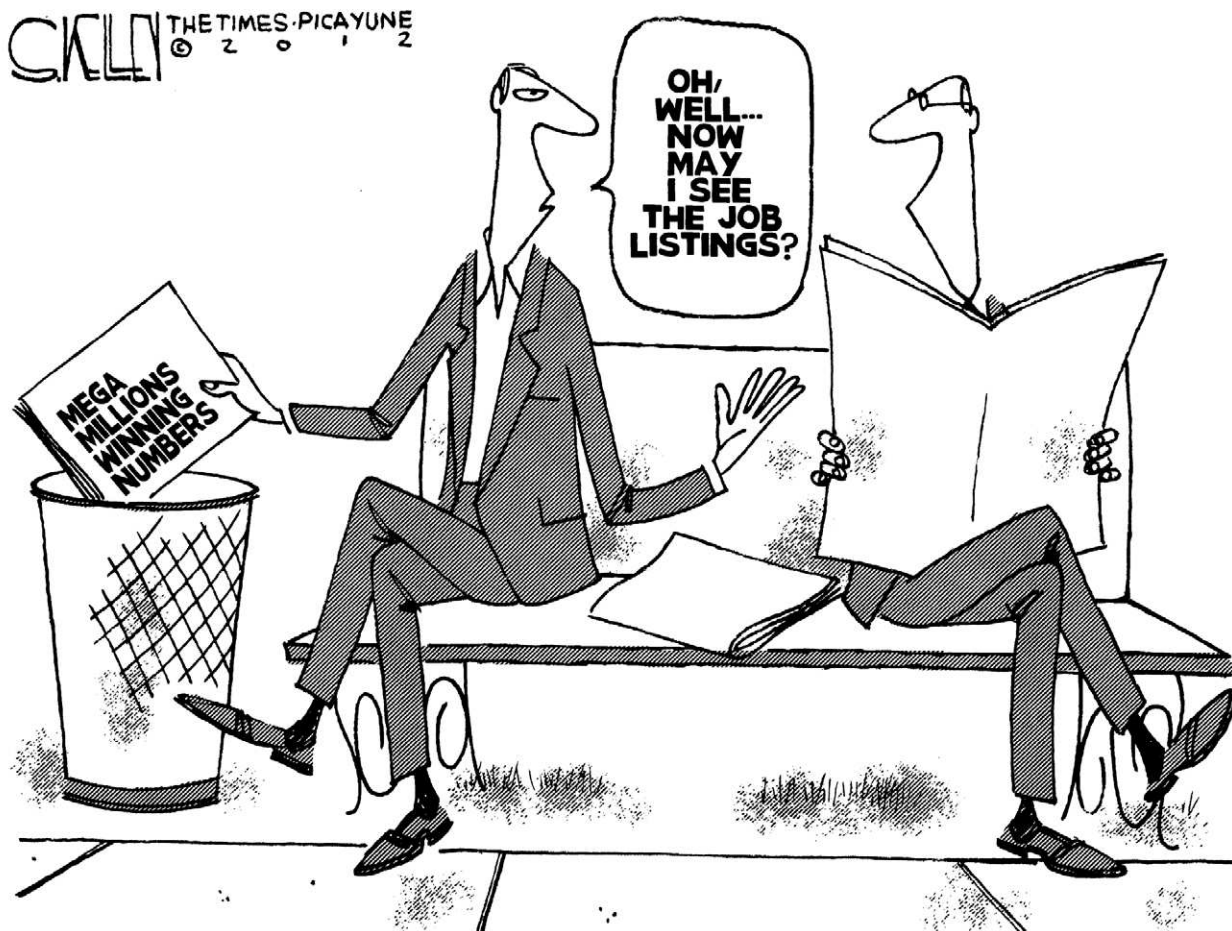

It is rare when an issue has no political negatives attached to it and finding cures for diseases is one of them. Working together might even improve the political health of Washington, which, according to opinion polls, is in critical condition.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hadden's Story Heart-wrenching but Remarkable

I would like to thank Natalie Dicou for the inspirational story and Ashley Smith for the outstanding photos in the Times-News featuring Blue Hadden.

The information about Blue growing up in such an explosive environment was difficult to comprehend. How can a mother demand her son to kill his grandfather? That is so extremely ugly and unbelievable.

Blue is now on a journey with new goals and new character traits that he has personally developed. Changes like these are difficult and painful. But this young man has courageously admitted his mistakes, paid his debt and has asked for forgiveness to those that he hurt and offended.

Craig Hadden has forgiven his grandson and, through his forgiveness, he has greatly helped Blue build his new life.

What a heart-wrenching but remarkable story!

Also to be thanked are the people involved in Blue's rehabilitation programs and a special thank you to Blue's probation officer, Linda Boguslawski, who helped Blue to focus on his new goals for a changed and productive life.

This story about Blue has given the people of Magic Valley an insight into the juvenile system. We learned that caring and compassionate people worked together to bring self-esteem and courage to a young man's life.

My very best wishes to you, Blue. May this new journey in your life bring you much happiness and success.

Keystone XL is Tip of the Iceberg for Oil Plans

Over the past few months, Americans have learned a lot about the Keystone XL tar sands pipeline — the oil industry's scheme to pad their profits and expand development in Canada's pristine northern forests. Recently, President Obama announced that his administration will expedite pipeline permits, including the southern leg of Keystone XL, which runs from Oklahoma to the Gulf Coast.

The decision is both incredibly frustrating, considering Keystone's huge threat to wildlife and public health, and confusing — as it comes after months of White House promises to thoroughly review the project before making any decisions.

Tar sands pipelines are dirty, dangerous and inadequately regulated, as proven by catastrophic spills in the Kalamazoo and Yellowstone rivers. Cleanup crews are still struggling to restore those ecosystems.

Keystone XL is just the tip of the iceberg and Big Oil has big plans for more tar sands pipelines and more exports. President Obama's wrong turn on pipeline safety will have big consequences for Americans and does nothing to address gas prices or employment.

Obama Presiding Over the Death of Our Nation

Tools or fools? On March 22, 2012, the Associated Press and most other major media trumpeted the news that President Obama had gone to Louisiana to authorize a portion of the pipeline to bring oil to the refineries in Texas. That was one of the most transparent lies supported by the media to date.

The agreement between Louisiana and Texas was a “done deal” that the Obama administration was unable to stop. Can we be persuaded that this regime that wants to wean us off oil, wants gas prices to reach levels paid by Europeans, is willing for us to suffer the added cost to prices for food, clothing and everything else affected by higher oil prices has now had an epiphany and is in favor of lower oil prices? Get real. The election is only a few months away.

Perhaps a food analogy will illustrate the importance of the lower piece of the pipeline. The president has said, “I will authorize food to travel from the stomach to the large intestine. Isn't that a wonderful idea? But under no conditions will I allow food to be taken in by mouth.”

It doesn't matter whether he is a socialist, communist or progressive. His policies are destroying the best hope the world has ever seen for making a better life for more of the world's people. If food (oil) does not come into the body, the body (our nation) dies.

So, are those who heap praise on the president for his misguided policies “tools or fools”? It doesn't matter. They are presiding over the death of our nation.

GOP Caucus Worked as Planned

I worried about going to the GOP caucus on March 6. But we had read in the Times-News all about it, so we went. When we went through the door, they gave us a paper to fill out. They put us in a line.

The line had some people with wheelchairs. There was a person with a crutch sitting on a chair. I saw a person that was there with a cane sit on a chair until someone said it was your turn. At the end of the line, a woman found our name and address and we showed our ID to see if we were from Twin Falls County. That's all right with me. Then they stamp your hand. Then we went to the school gymnasium. Well, I tell you, they had food, drinks and snacks. They didn't close the doors until everyone was in the school gym. They closed the doors for the voting and opened them again for counting the votes. We could buy food or drinks and had snacks. And you could go to the bathroom. What more would you ask for? I think it was well organized. I like the Super Tuesday caucus. But that's just an Idaho opinion. I'm grateful for all the time and work that went into the caucus. Thank you, Twin Falls County and Times-News.

I respect President Obama because he is my president of the United States. I just don't have to agree with him. President Obama said oil is a thing of the past. So why is he still using it then?

He is always flying over places like Manhattan or going to New York. He said he is going to Texas now. I wonder how many gallons of jet fuel is used. I understand he has to fly when he goes from one place to another. I understand he can't use a car to travel, so why can he understand I use a truck out west in Idaho?

Mitt Romney has to fly from one state to another. Romney knows we need the oil pipeline. President Obama wants us to change our truck to an electric car. How many different things do we use our truck for? And count how many trucks you see on the road.

Wake up, Idaho, and keep on trucking. I need to eat my Idaho spud, drink my Idaho milk and eat our Idaho sugar and to read my Times-News.

Jerome Co. Jail Needs Replaced

The article, “More Space for Inmates,” points out a very real need for a new jail in Jerome County. After 37 years of service, the jail really shows its years, in addition to not being ADA compliant or able to pass other jail inspections standards for safety of inmates or staff.

Today's modern jails are all direct supervision, where all activities can be monitored from a central advantage point. The current jail is a series of cells on two floors, where unless you happen to be at the cell, you cannot see what's occurring inside the cell.

Liability and risk management are big issues in jail management today. A lawsuit for anything preventable, lends credible support for having a new facility that can pass inspections while providing for the health safety and welfare of both inmates and staff.

Cost savings from being able to house inmates currently sent to surrounding counties quickly add up to savings for Jerome County.

It's hoped Sheriff McFall can and will get the support of voters on this issue, which is vital toward public safety.

Joseph Jacob Alcalá

April 23, 1980-March 30, 2012

BUHL • Joseph Jacob Alcalá, 31, also known as "Joe" and "Joe Joe," of Buhl, was called home unexpectedly on Friday, March 30, 2012.

He was born to Fidel and Lori Matsen Alcalá on April 23, 1980, in Twin Falls, Idaho. He was brought home to a big sister, Jamie, to start his life in Hazelton, Idaho, between the valley and Murtaugh roads. He learned early in his life that Grandma Dorothy's house was just across the field. It was a short walk on the canal bank to grandma's and sometimes it was a long walk back when he and Grandma Dorothy had a minor disagreement, but before long, he would think it over and would be walking back. He had the best of both worlds; he could step out the front door and look to the south and see Grandpa Bonnie's house at Murtaugh. He spent his childhood divided between spending time with aunts and uncles, grandparents and cousins on both sides of the river. He attended schools in the Valley School District, where he liked football and history. He was in the graduating Class of 1999.

He later attended CSI for a short time. The most joyous day of his life was June 16, 2001, when Collin Jacob Alcalá Tverdy made him the dad he always wanted to be. Every day that Joe could spend with Collin was the highlight of his life; he was very family oriented. He had the call of the wild in him because anything that was wild he hunted, from snakes to deer, elk, antelope and any critter known to man. In 2004, Joe's life was turned upside down when he was diagnosed with cancer. He met the challenge to fight for his life at the Huntsman Center in Utah, which he was still continuing until he was called home.

He left behind his father and stepmother, Fidel and

Marie Alcalá of Murtaugh; his mother, Lori Alcalá of Hazelton; his sister and brother-in-law, Jamie (Tracy) Staggs of Caldwell; as well as his son, Collin Alcalá Tverdy of Hazelton. He is also survived by his niece, Raychell; two nephews, Ian-Ehron and Billy of Caldwell; his stepbrothers, Hailey (Brigham) Hurd of Nampa and Megan Holbrook of Murtaugh; his stepbrothers, Reiny (Crystal) Holbrook, Chase Holbrook and Colton Holbrook of Burley; as well as his grandfather, Bonifacio Alcalá of Filer; loving friend and companion, Kacie Sherman of Twin Falls; and many loving aunts, uncles and cousins by the dozens. He was preceded in death by his Grandma Dorothy Matsen, Grandma Mercedes Alcalá, Grandfather Ray Matsen, Aunt Enedina Alcalá and Uncle Melvin Meyer.

The funeral for Joe will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday, April 5, at the Kimberly LDS Church, 222 Birch St. in Kimberly, with Bishop Levi Perkins conducting. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park. A viewing for family and friends will take place from 5 until 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 4, at White Mortuary, "Chapel by the Park," 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, as well as one hour prior to the service Thursday at the church.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials be given to a trust fund set up in the name of Fidel Alcalá for Joe's son, Collin, at First Federal Bank. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to White Mortuary, P.O. Box 845, Twin Falls, ID 83303, or dropped off at any branch of First Federal Bank.

Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at White Mortuary, "Chapel by the Park," in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Alan L. Peterson

Sept. 14, 1958-March 29, 2012

WENDELL • Alan L. Peterson, 53, a longtime resident of Wendell, Idaho, passed away Thursday, March 29, 2012, at his home.

Alan was born Sept. 14, 1958, in Twin Falls, Idaho. He was the middle son of Ardean Peterson and Barbara Inscore. Alan grew up in Kimberly and Wendell, graduating high school from Wendell in 1976. Alan married Teresa Campbell on Feb. 17, 1979, in Hagerman, Idaho. They had two daughters, Tiffany and Dessa. Alan graduated from CSI in 1977 with a degree in HVAC. After working for other companies, he opened a business of his own in 1988. He operated that until they moved to Montana.

Alan and Teresa returned to their home in Idaho in 2005. During his life, Alan was an avid hunter, planning a hunting trip every fall to get an elk. Alan was an active member of the Twin Falls Gun Club, the NRA, SRTA, PITA, and a lifetime member of the N.A. Hunting Club. He won the Idaho State Championship Trap Shoot for several years and numerous other shooting awards. Alan had a love of horses and animals that he passed on to his daughters. He loved the great outdoors: camping, hunting, fishing and spending time with his grandsons.

Alan is survived by his wife of 33 years, Teresa Peterson; his children, Tiffany (Jeff) Storey of Filer and Dessa Peterson (David Jenkins) of Montana; two brothers, Dale (Sharon) Peterson of Washington and Dennis Peterson of Oregon; a sister, Julia (Larry) Bingham of Filer; three grandsons, Jeramhia, Jessie and Ryan Storey; grandmother, Laura McAnulty of Wendell; mother, Barbara (Chet) Inscore of Caldwell; and his second family (all his friends) at the Twin Falls Gun Club. N. Idaho Sex Offender Task Force has Early Success

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • Officials with a new task force in northern Idaho are touting their efforts to bolster enforcement of sex offender registration laws in Kootenai, Bonner, Shoshone, Benewah and Boundary counties.

The North Idaho Sex Offender Task Force reports it has brought 14 sex offenders into compliance with registration rules. The task force began operating four months ago, thanks to a two-year grant worth nearly $500,000 from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Sex offenders need to be kept up to date with registration and disclosure requirements, and that non-compliance can lead to them committing more crimes, said prosecutor Dave Robins, who is part of the task force. "Some sex offenders work under the radar and don't like to be noticed," Robins told the Coeur d'Alene Press.

Of the 747,408 registered sex offenders nationwide, 3,654 live in Idaho, according to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Among the cases assigned to the task force was that of Isaac Joshua Angel, who was found living at a house last August that was different than the one he reported to the sex offender registry, according to police. Angel was arrested, and authorities determined that he had been non-compliant with the registry for about a month.

He was required to register as a sex offender due to his 2008 conviction for sexual battery on a minor. He was ordered to serve at least three years in prison, with a maximum sentence of 10 years, for failing to register.

The task force also takes on other types of sex crimes, including child pornography. "Part of the purpose of this task force is to protect kids," Robins said. "We want to be proactive about searching for predators before they get to children."

In Idaho, 335 registered sex offenders live in Kootenai County, 88 in Bonner County, 35 in Shoshone County, 30 in Benewah County and 18 in Boundary County, for a total of 506 in the five northern counties where the task force operates.

The number did not surprise Kootenai County Prosecutor Barry McHugh, who secured the grant that was used to set up a team that includes the U.S. Attorney's Office, the U.S. Marshals Service and law enforcement agencies to investigate and prosecute child-victim crimes.

Some sex offenders who moved to the area have failed to register, said Paul Farina, an investigator on the team.

"These are the ones we're really concerned about and are hardest to track," said Farina, who previously worked with Post Falls police. His job on the task force is to track sex offenders who live in the region and keep tabs on those who have recently moved into the area.

Jazz Rally After Poor Start, Beat Portland for Big Road Win • S3

Clegg Heading to Utah Valley

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The carpool accommodations keep growing for girls track stars commuting between their Southern Idaho hometowns and Utah Valley University as Jerome's Mikesell Clegg became the latest to commit to the Orem, Utah, school.

Clegg

Clegg, who ran cross-country for the Tigers in the fall and will compete in the 800, 1,600 and 3,200 meters this spring, is the fourth area athlete in recent memory to sign with the Wolverines. She joins Raft River senior Echo Hansen in UVU's incoming class, and they will be joined there by Echo's sister, senior-to-be Sally Hansen.

A fourth Wolverine, Valley's Zandrea Nelson, will graduate after this season.

"It's far enough to be away from home, but close enough to come home when I need to," Clegg said, who also had Brigham Young and Utah State on her list of schools.

Many members of Clegg's family, including her parents, attended and graduated from BYU, and Clegg had always had it in her to go to school there. In fact, she admits to putting off making any decision until she knew where she stood with the Cougar track program.

"I was kind of hoping for BYU a little bit," Clegg said. "But things worked out and I'm going to UVU."

But before she begins running for Wolverines head coach Scott Houle — Clegg isn't sure which event will become her specialty in college — there's the matter of her final outdoor season with the Tigers and improving on her top-six medalist finishes in her three events.

"It's always been a goal (to win state) obviously, so I'll work as hard as I can and we'll see where I get."

Burley's Thomas Putting Stamp on Bobcats

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Jed Thomas called a team meeting last month shortly after being hired as Burley's new head football coach.

First item he discussed wasn't Xs and Os. Instead, he talked ABCs.

"You will perform in the classroom before you perform on the football field," he told the approximately 40 players in attendance. "If you're getting F's in the classroom, I don't want you on the football field. The classroom is huge, because if you're not going to apply yourself there, you're not going to apply yourself on the football field."

First impressions? "Coach Thomas brings a lot of excitement. He's very intense," said Burley junior Jackson Kunz.

His tenure only weeks old, Thomas has already sunk his teeth into his first head coaching job in hopes of turning around his alma mater, a program that has stumbled to a 19-68 record the past 10 years.

"We're changing the attitude that losing is all right. It's not all right," Thomas said. "I think that's what Burley's gone to, it's OK to lose if it's a close game. We're going to change that." Top on Thomas' priority list was assembling a coaching staff. He's hired 13 assistant coaches, including defensive coordinator Eric Jackson Mabry (Thomas will handle offensive coordinator duties). Three of Burley's coaches were retained from last year's staff. Only one coach, Gary Elsensohn, is a teacher at the school.

"We've got a good staff," Thomas said. "They have to be good people first of all. I've got to be able to trust them. We have to be open with one another, we have to be able to communicate." Thomas said his biggest challenge right now is not being able to coach kids during the offseason. But the coaches have been meeting regularly getting up to speed.

"The only way the kids will learn the offense and defense is if the coaches understand it. I've got to get them on the same page," Thomas said.

Among other groundwork, Thomas has reached out to the junior high, is planning a kids camp this summer, and will implement a before-school weightlifting class next school year.

"We've got a lot of work to do," he said. "It's definitely all uphill, but we're on the right track."

Champion 'Cats: UK Triumphs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • No matter where Anthony Davis and his buddies go to make their millions, their ol' Kentucky home will long remember this championship season.

The Wildcats hit the jackpot with their lottery picks Monday night, ignoring Davis' bad shooting night and parlaying a roster full of NBA talent into a 67-59 victory over Kansas for the team's eighth national title — and its first since 1998.

The one-and-doners did it in a wire-to-wire victory — a little dicey at the end — to cap a season in which anything less than bringing a title back to the Bluegrass State would have been a downer. They led coach John Calipari to his first title in four trips to the Final Four with three different schools. Doron Lamb, a sophomore with first-round-draft-pick possibilities, led the Wildcats (38-2) with 22 points, including back-to-back 3-pointers that put them up by 16 with 10 minutes left.

The Jayhawks (32-7), kings of the comeback all season, fought to the finish and trimmed that deficit to five with 1:37 left. But Kentucky made five free throws down the stretch to seal the win.

Davis' fellow lottery prospect, Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, was another headliner, creating space for himself to score all 11 of his points in the first half.

Davis, meanwhile, might have had the most dominating six-point night in the history of college basketball, earning the nod as the most outstanding player. He finished with 16 rebounds, six blocks, five assists and three steals — and made his only field goal with 5:13 left in the game. It was a surefire illustration of how the 6-foot-10 freshman can exert his will on a game even on a rare night when the shot isn't falling.

Helps when you've got teammates like this. Davis is the likely first pick in the draft should he choose to come out, and Kidd-Gilchrist won't be far behind. Another first-round prospect, freshman Marquis Teague, had 14 points. And yet another, sophomore Terrence Jones, had nine points, seven rebounds and two of Kentucky's 11 blocked shots.

Kansas also has a lottery pick in AP All-American Thomas Robinson. But he was harassed all night by Davis and Jones and finished with 18 points and 17 rebounds on a 6 for 17 shooting night.

The Jayhawks won the "B" League this year, as Calipari avenged a final-game loss to Bill Self back in 2008 when Cal was coaching the Tigers. Not a bad season in Lawrence, though, considering where KU began.

Kansas lost four of its top five scorers off last year's roster. There were times early in the season when Self and his old buddy and mentor, Larry Brown, would stand around at practices and wonder if this was a team that could even make the tournament. It did. Won its eighth straight conference title, too.

None of this, however, was for the faint of heart. The Jayhawks trailed by double digits in three of their five tournament games leading to the final and

The Bloom Is Off Augusta National

AUGUSTA, Ga. • Something is missing from the Masters this year, a tradition that ranks right up there with Amen Corner, endless roars on Sunday afternoon and the winner's green jacket.

Color. Red, pink and white azaleas that typically are ablaze for the opening round, have lost their bloom or were wilting fast. The beautiful contrast of white against the lush course comes from sand in the bunkers, not dogwoods.

Spring arrived early in many parts of the country this year, and not even Augusta National was immune.

"I saw them, but it was last week," defending champion Charl Schwartzel said, referring to the signature shrubs. "I was here a week ago last Thursday, and they were beautiful. But the first thing I thought was, 'They're all going to be gone.' I thought Augusta would be able to do something — get the fans on them or something. It's weird"

Indeed, the Masters has gone green.

The 13th hole has an estimated 1,600 azalea bushes — that's why it's called "Azalea" — yet there are only a dozen or so bushes behind the green that still have blooms. Fans on the course Monday for a practice round posed for pictures in front of one azalea bush whose pink flowers rested on a bed of pine needles.

Not to worry, golf fans. The tournament will manage to go on. The course is

NEW ORLEANS • There's more to Kentucky than Anthony Davis — and that's what made the Wildcats almost impossible to beat.

Davis' supporting cast made the most of their turns in the spotlight Monday night, picking up the scoring slack for their freshman star and overwhelming Kansas for a 67-59 victory in the NCAA title game that gave the Wildcats their eighth national title.

Michael Kidd-Gilchrist set the tone a minute in, staying in the game after a hard foul that looked as if it might have dislocated his shoulder, and Marquis Teague and Doron Lamb hit clutch shots that kept the held back the Jayhawks' late rally.

Terrence Jones and Darius Miller also made their marks in just the type of team effort the Wildcats (38-2) had given all season.

The 'Cats other NBA prospects handled things on the offensive end while Davis went 1 for 10 from the field. The AP player of the year remained the dominant self in every other phase of the game with 16 rebounds, six blocks and five assists.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON THE
NOTICE OF INTENT TO EXCHANGE PROPERTY

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Wednesday, the 18th day of April, 2012, at the hour of 6:45 o'clock p.m., at the City Hall of the Bliss, Idaho, 140 Kentucky Avenue, a hearing before the Mayor and Council of the City of Bliss, Idaho, will be held on the declaration of the City's intent to exchange real property now owned by the City for real property owned by Cascade Investments, Inc., an Idaho corporation. The exchange proposed by the City will result in the City conveying a parcel of 0.024 acres to Cascade Investments, Inc., in exchange for the conveyance of a parcel of 0.017 acres owned by Cascade Investments, Inc., to the City. ALL INTERESTED PARTIES WHO ATTEND THE HEARING SHALL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO BE HEARD.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“Do not men die fast enough without being destroyed by one another?”

— Francois de Salignac

Not rushing in with a high card was the key to the defense in this deal from the 2002 McConnell Cup Women's Teams, where England won the match by knocking out Austria.

A couple of points to note in the bidding: After South had shown a two-suiter with her opening bid, the response of four no-trump asked for the minor. East's first double suggested defending, and her second was purely for penalties.

Against five clubs doubled, Nicola Smith cashed her top two hearts, then accurately switched to a trump. Declarer won in dummy, then played the spade two, on which East, Heather Dhondy, wisely followed low. Dhondy had appreciated that there was no rush to take her spade ace, for even if South had held the king, there were not enough trumps in dummy to cope with the rest of the suit.

South's queen lost to West's king and back came a second trump, won by South with the jack. A spade ruff was followed by a low diamond. Again East declined to rise with a top honor, and the eight in the closed hand lost to Smith's nine. Had East risen in diamonds, she would have had a difficult continuation, and declarer might have ended just two down. As it was, the heart-queen return was ruffed in hand, and another spade was ruffed in dummy, but now declarer had to concede two further spades for four down — plus 800 to England.

ANSWER: A simple jump to four spades looks obvious, but you might well do better to prepare partner for the possible five-level action in a red suit from your opponents. I play a jump to four clubs not as a splinter, but a fit-jump, the values for a four-spade call and a good source of tricks in clubs. This way you can bid four spades later and help partner make the final decision at the five-level.

DEAR ABBY: I have been separated from my husband, "Fred," for several months because of his infidelity. He is pushing to move back in together and has been very insecure and overly clingy. He constantly accuses me of not paying enough attention to him, no matter what I do or how much time I spend with him.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Fred and I have two children, so this has been difficult for all of us. But I'm frustrated with his disrespect for my space and seriously considering divorce. I want to tell him, but I'm worried about his reaction since he cries every time I mention anything that implies that I might "give up on us." He was married once before, and told me that he had to stay with his brother for a while afterward to make sure he wouldn't hurt himself.

His family lives 400 miles away, and he wants to visit them soon. Would it be wrong of me to call him while he's there and tell him it's over? I feel he'll need support when he gets the news, and I don't want him to be alone. He's a good father and good friend. I do love and care about him, and don't want him to do anything that will hurt himself or his children, but I can't stay married to someone who cheats on me. Any suggestions?

- TORN IN PIECES
DEAR TORN: To stay married to someone because you think he might hurt himself would be giving in to emotional blackmail. Fred is clingy and needy because he now realizes what his cheating may have cost him. Of course it's a turn-off.

However, before ending the marriage, it's important that you understand your disgust with him is mixed with your anger at his betrayal. That's why you could both benefit - and communicate more honestly and safely - if you schedule some appointments with a licensed marriage and family counselor. If, during that time, you decide you still want a divorce, the place to tell him would be in the therapist's office. You won't be alone. He will have emotional support, and his family can be told immediately afterward.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 46-year-old married man and have been with my wife for 23 years. We were both married before and have two children from our prior marriages. Our children are now grown and live their own lives.

I have recently learned that I'm terminally ill and, as I come to the end of my journey here on Earth, I need some advice. My son, 26, does not know he's not my biological child. His mother was pregnant when she met me and we never told him. As I make my final preparations, I am conflicted as to whether I should. How do I address this? Or do I even address it all?

If I do it before I pass away, I'm afraid he will be upset and angry and turn away from me. If I do it afterward, via taped video message or handwritten letter, I won't be there to answer the questions he's bound to have. Where do I go from here, Abby?

- UNSURE IN MISSOURI
DEAR UNSURE: Please accept my sympathy for your poor prognosis. Your situation is regrettable, but please don't shoulder all the blame. Your first wife shares some of it, too.

The young man has the right to know that, while you love him and have raised him as your own, he isn't your biological child. He should be told before your death, in person, and nothing should be left out. If possible, his mother should participate in the conversation. And if she knows who the father is, your son should have access to an accurate family medical history.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. IF APRIL 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Physical energy is at your command for the next few weeks. You are motivated to put your dreams, hopes, and financial ideas into motion. Even if all your ducks aren't in a row, you can take notes and write down your ideas for future use. October is an especially good month for financial success, so plan ahead to make key business decisions then. November offers you a time when romance can be more romantic so plan to take a vacation. Early January is a good time to launch your most important plans or make decisions about anything that requires expert advice and opportunity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): One for the money and two for the show. Remember this motto as you put money aside for a rainy day instead of betting on what probably isn't a sure thing. Steer clear of confrontations or arguments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): When you show you are grateful you conquer the hateful. Even though there are fleeting moments when you and a loved one doubt your trust in one another, there is plenty of room to prove your loyalties.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sensitive souls react to every shift. You can learn a great deal from your mistakes if you don't waste all your time denying them. If loved ones hem you in too much, you are tempted to go AWOL.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take two aspirin and call someone in the morning. When you are sick of being treated like you are invisible, it is time for a large dose of reality. The truth is that you are only imagining that you are not noticed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If it were easy, everyone would do it. Sometimes you have to face the fact that the success that appears effortless from a distance requires hard work when looked at up close. Don't be too envious of greatness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Honey, I shrunk the kids. You might need to admit to a glaring mistake. Your instinct may be to bury the truth, hide the paperwork or pretend it never happened, but eventually the truth will come out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Impetuous reactions can only lead to confusion. No one will be able to trust you if you fail to call or don't show up when promised. You might not be forgiven a transgression.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may be time to saddle up the one-trick pony in your stable. There may be tensions simmering in the background that you can settle by being inventive or by using new tactics to settle a dispute.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep cats in the bags. You can't take back what is already given. You would be wise to edit the dialog before it leads your mouth rather than waiting until words have passed your lips.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can only hope that others will give you the benefit of the doubt. You can put a positive spin on the worst scenario, but once the money has been spent or wasted, spin is all you will have left.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Throw in the towel. There is no reason to continue to throw good money after bad. This might be the time to give up a dream, an investment or a relationship that hasn't lived up to your expectations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't confront personal demons unless you are prepared to defeat them. You need to keep your least desirable impulses well in hand. It will be tempting to find ways to achieve underhanded revenge.
