Rim Development Gets Green Light

Pending the final OK from the Twin Falls City Council, developers of a new canyon rim shopping center are ready to build.

TWIN FALLS • "We are ready to move dirt," Gerald Martens of EHM Engineers said Tuesday

The spokesman representing Canyon Park Development was all smiles after the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission voted unanimously to approve a preliminary plat for the 25-acre Snake River Canyon rim commercial development. It all but assures the project, eight years in the making, will go forward.

The final step is in the hands of the Twin Falls City Council, which now must approve a final

The quick decision during Tuesday's Planning and Zoning public hearing – just three citizens spoke about the issue — didn't please Twin Falls resident Cheri Condie. She told commissioners the design lacks imagination and respect for the unique natural environment.

"I see this as a cookie-cutter plan that you'd find anywhere in the nation," Condie said. "Twin Falls deserves a better appreciation from the developer for the canyon rim's aesthetics. There should be room to view the canyon, not just a big building."

She believes the project violates city code pertaining to the canyon rim's overlay district, which stretches back 700 feet from the edge. Purposes of the overlay district, according to the code, are "to protect views and create a unique visual environment along the canyon rims" and "to preserve and improve the aesthetic appearance of the canyon rims for the enhancement of the quality of life in the community."

Condie said during an interview, "I guess it depends on your definitition of 'aesthetic'"

But David Sparks, who lives along the rim east of Blue Lakes Boulevard, found no problem with

POACHING PROBLEM

Fish and Game's new K-9 unit helps track down wildlife violations. But another effective tool doesn't have a dog's nose: It's you.

BY ANDREW WEEKS

TWIN FALLS • Sandra Benge sat on a lawn chair beside Dierkes Lake when Jim Stirling approached her. "How's the fishing?" asked Stirling, an Idaho Department of Fish and Game law enforcement officer.

"I just got here," Benge replied. She said she comes to the lake as often as weather permits and expected to catch fish on this sunny Saturday in April.

"My husband tells me, 'The fish see you more than I do," she joked.

Stirling was amiable as they talked, but the wildlife official was on business. He chuckled and asked to see her fishing license.

Benge's license was current, but not everyone is as careful. Fishing without a license is a misdemeanor, Stirling said, as are most other wildlife violations.

To combat poaching - a term used by the public but rarely by Fish and Game, which instead refers to "wildlife violations" - the department last year kicked off a five-year pilot program involving Stirling and a black Lab named Pepper.

Scientists Map Size, Behavior of WRV Aquifer

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Understanding the Wood River Valley's complex aquifer system just got a little easier.

With the help of 3,000 welldrilling reports and plenty of geological maps, a third installment of a federal study has documented the aquifer's physical characteristics providing valuable details for those who rely on it.

The U.S. Geological Survey released the study Tuesday. In it, scientists discovered the aquifer is releasing a drastically smaller amount of water into the Lake Erie-sized Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer than originally estimated. That changes perceptions of not only how much water is staying in the valley, but also how much ESPA water users are gaining from the region.

4 Inmates Challenge Idaho's New Execution Protocol

BY REBECCA BOONE Associated Press

BOISE • Four inmates on Idaho's death row are suing the state, contending Idaho's new execution procedures give too much power to prison officials, create a risk of severe pain and would allow unqualified workers to carry out medical procedures. The lawsuit, filed in Boise's U.S.

District Court late last week, asks a judge to stop all executions until the problems are fixed.

The lawsuit against the Idaho Department of Correction's Director Brent Reinke, Operations Division Chief Kevin Kempf and other department officials comes as the men prepare for the possibility of an execution sometime in late spring or early summer. Richard Leavitt, convicted of the brutal 1984 stabbing death of Danette Jean Elg in Blackfoot, is waiting to see if the U.S. Supreme Court will consider his case. If the high court refuses, Leavitt could be the next inmate to enter the lethal injection chamber at the Idaho Maximum Security Institution.

Leavitt is joined in the lawsuit by fellow condemned inmates Thomas Creech, James Hairston and Gene Stuart. All four men are represented by the Federal Public Defender's office.

In the 37-page lawsuit, the inmates take issue with Idaho's newest version of the execution policy, adopted by the department earlier this year.

The new policy allows the state to use either a three-drug mixture for lethal injections, or to opt to use just one drug. It also changed the name of the team that administers the lethal Please see PENALTY, A2

Twin Falls High Track to be Resurfaced Over Summer

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • While students are on summer break in a couple of months, two Twin Falls school renovation projects will be in full swing.

School trustees unanimously awarded two bids Monday night for projects at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School and Twin Falls High School.

O'Leary will get new telescoping gym bleachers. A nearly $50,000 bid was awarded to Arizona-based Norcon Industries.

Kirk Brower, facilities manager for the Twin Falls School District, said the old bleachers in the gym have already been torn out.

"They're just getting to the point where they're really unsafe," he said.

The new bleachers will be electronically controlled. The old bleachers were moved manually, Brower said, which caused damage over time.

Trustees also awarded a $61,000 bid to Track Doctor in Meridian to resurface the Twin Falls High track.

Over the past two or three years, the track has been patched. But now, Brower said there are a few cracks that need to be addressed.

"If we don't do something, it could get worse," he said.

Funding for both projects will come out of the school district's plant facilities fund.

Maintenance Funding Shortage

School districts are required to seek bids for any project that costs more than $25,000.

But without any state funding for school maintenance over the past few years, some projects have been put on hold.

The last time the Idaho State Department of Education distributed school maintenance funding to districts was during fiscal year 2009.

Brower told school trustees there hasn't been a district budget for summer maintenance projects for the past two

As a result, he said the district - which has more than 9,000 students — is falling behind on projects.

One of the largest needs is asphalt repairs in school parking lots and playgrounds, he said.

School districts have 10year maintenance plans for future building needs and projects.

Welder in Chief

ight before the Legislature adjourned two weeks ago, I found myself in Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's office with three senators who were tasked with reporting the end of the session.

But the governor wasn't there. The senators instead spoke to Otter's staff, who thanked them for their hard work. When the trio reported back to Lt. Gov. Brad Little, he grinned and said the governor was at his welding class.

I thought he was joking But after a couple press conferences the next morning, I saw the governor in the hall.

"How was your welding class?" I asked. I didn't expect much of an answer, but Otter lit up and invited me to his office.

There, he showed me and a couple other reporters a practice weld, with perpendicular pieces of metal held together with aluminum.

"Look at those beads," he said, pointing to the welded joints. I didn't know what he meant, but I showed my admiration.

It's not a back-up career plan in case politics doesn't work out, he said. Rather, it's enrichment. Otter knows how to weld steel, he said, but wanted to learn how to work with aluminum.

He takes the twiceweekly class through College of Western Idaho, Tuesday and Thursday evenings on the Boise State University Campus.

The Idaho Statesman tried to follow up with a visit to the welding class, but said Otter's staff wouldn't allow it. Instead, they released photos of him working, jeans, boots, visors and all. In one photo, he's sitting on a stool, leaning over his work, sparks flying in the air.

Not a bad way to blow off steam after running the state.

CSI Releases Plan to Raise Graduation Rate

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Getting students to go to college is one Another is making sure they earn a degree. Under a new five-year strategic plan, the College of Southern Idaho wants to see more students graduate.

Vice President of Student Services Edit Szanto said CSI has focused for years on making higher education accessible to students. But now, there's a push from the federal government to have more students finish college.

"They made it clear that they want to fund completion," she said.

Szanto said a major CSI initiative for 2012-17 is to improve the college's graduation rate while still maintaining the quality of instruction.

The goal is to increase the number of degrees and certificates awarded by 3 percent each year.

CSI's strategic plan also calls for increasing the total student headcount by 2 percent each year and the number of full-time students by 1

In the past, scientists es-percent each year.

College trustees and the Idaho State Board of Education approved the plan a few weeks ago. It was then submitted to the state's Division of Financial Management.

Szanto said the plan was developed by a 50-60 member committee and went through several revisions. It was also emailed to school employees and students for feedback.

"It's important for them to know what we're planning to do for the next five years," she said.

The plan includes a goal that CSI's graduation rate for first-time, full-time students will be at or above the median rate for its peer group. The group includes several dozen similar schools across the country.

Among Idaho's public colleges and universities, a Complete College America report this fall lists CSI with the lowest graduation rate.

CSI's most recent graduation rate is 17.4 percent, according to information released by the school.

The statistic is based on nearly 950 full-time, firsttime students who came to CSI in fall 2008 and graduated within 150 percent of "normal time." For an associate degree, that's three years.

Szanto said the college has to use Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System requirements to calculate its graduation rate since the school receives federal financial aid to distribute to students.

The system, she said, works well for four-year universities. But it poses some challenges for CSI's non-traditional student population.

About two-thirds of students were enrolled parttime during the fall semester. They're not included in the graduation rate reported to IPEDS. There were 9,085 total students -3,141 were enrolled full-time and 5,944 were part-time.

CSI draws a variety of students. Some plan to earn a degree and transfer to a fouryear university.

Others want to earn a technical certificate, take dual-credit classes in high school or take a class just for 11,800 to 58,000 acre-feet per year, while the report found the amount was closer to 4,000 acre-feet per year. An acre-foot is the amount of water need to cover 1 acre, 1 foot deep, or close to 325,000 gallons.

"We've been grappling with how much water is flowing out of the aquifer for awhile," said James Bartolino, a USGS groundwater hydrologist. "This is really going to affect ESPA users and how much water they think is flowing out from there."

Scientists also reported that the aquifer system's thickness ranges from less than a foot to almost 350 feet.

Before, it was believed the aquifer was shorter and couldn't hold a sizable amount, Bartolino said.

Having enough water will be critical for the Wood River Valley in the next few years. According to census data, the area's population jumped from 5,700 in 1970 to 22,000 in 2010.

"When viewed as a community investment, this benchmark study will continue to pay dividends of truly informed development decisions in the Wood River Valley for decades or perhaps centuries to come," said Blaine County Commissioner Tom Bowman in a news release.

Most recently, the Idaho Department of Water Resources created a measurement district in the Upper Big and Little Wood River basins to help measure aquifer levels. The decision was spurred by surface water users worried that groundwater pumpers might have infringed on their senior water rights.

Scientists are now working on the study's final installment. By 2014, Bartolino hopes to have a dataset of the aquifer's water qual-

T.F. Candidates Say Their Signs Are Legal

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Both the Twin Falls County prosecutor and Twin Falls County clerk contacted Sheriff Tom Carter about his re-election campaign this past week.

Both offices were concerned about what's known as a "paid for acknowledgement" that was missing from some campaign signs.

According to Idaho state statute, when any person spends money on a political campaign advertisement the person responsible must be indicated on the ad.

The rule is listed on a page marked "Duties of a Political Treasurer" in a packet of materials given to all candidates who file, Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock said.

The rules recommend printing something like "Paid for by Candidate X for Commissioner, John Doe Political Treasurer" on all printed materials. An exception is made for materials that are too small for the message, like buttons, bumper stickers or he spoke to the clerk's office last week and printed some stickers with the statement, placing them on the signs. Those stickers resolved the issue, he said.

Between his 2008 campaign for sheriff and this one, the treasurer on his campaign staff changed, Carter said, and new signs were printed without the "paid for" message.

This week, Carter and his campaign crew worked to get the stickers on his

"They're compliant," he said.

Carter's opponent, Jack Johnson, the chief deputy at the Jerome County Sheriff's Office, said though the notice is small on many of his signs, it's there.

"You want as much space as you can for everything else and then you get that in there," he said.

Johnson said the "paid for" notes have been on his signs since the first day of his campaign, but he's had to replace some that have fallen off of his larger, wooden signs.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said he hasn't personally looked at the signs this week, though Carter showed him the stickers.

Loebs said he has gotten some email about the legality of the campaign signs, but it's not a huge priority in his office. The proper way to make a complaint isn't to email him but file an actual case, he said.

"If someone brings me a case, I'll look at it," he said.

New Budget Structure Provides Forest Service More Flexibility

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Sawtooth National Forest is one of a handful of Idaho forests included in a pilot program designed to improve federal restoration efforts.

By using a simplified budget line, the U.S. Forest Service looks to achieve more restoration work without the strain of funds constricted to individual line items. Essentially, it broadens what dollars that Congress gives the federal agency can be used for.

The streamlined budget proposal was pushed by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho. The congressman leads the House Interior and Environment Appropriations Subcommittee that oversees the Forest Service's funding.

The committee is still waiting to measure the agency's success before funding the initiative nationwide, said Nikki Watts, Simpson's spokeswoman.

The new structure consolidates funding for road maintenance, non-hazardous fuels, landscape restoration, and wildlife and watershed management into one item called "Integrated Resource Restoration."

"Under the old funding structure, if you were going to do a project, it had to fall under the funding code's primary purpose," said Sharon LaBrecque, a regional planning and natural resources staff officer for the agency.

"Now we can look at the full need and see what else can be restored when we propose a project."

The idea was originally proposed in the Forest Service's 2011 fiscal year budget, but didn't receive funding until the current fiscal year. The agency received a little more than $146 million to enact the program in three regions.

The agency has already asked for a funding increase in next year's budget. By 2013, officials hope to have close to $793 million to implement the program nationwide. The agency predicts that this would help restore 2.6 million acres of forest land and 2,750 miles of stream habi-

"We have a committee and we're going to start proposing projects soon," said Julie Thomas, spokeswoman for the Sawtooth National Forest.

While Thomas said the committee doesn't yet have a concrete list of proposed projects, she said they would likely look at prescribed fires and how they can include a "holistic approach" to effectively execute each project.

"It has to have the biggest bang for your buck," she said. "So if we have a prescribed fire, we're going to see what other wildlife we can help restore or how we would also help improve a watershed."

Police: Man Sold Stolen Dump Truck for Cash to Buy Spice

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Police say an 18-year-old Twin Falls man stole a dump truck and then sold it to get money to buy synthetic marijuana.

On April 6 at about 4:15 p.m., an officer spoke with a man who said his green 2.5-ton 1961 Chevrolet dump truck had been stolen from his home in the 600 block of Locust Street South. The owner said the truck had a lot of recent work done and he had renewed the registration the day before. He estimated the value at $1,500 and told officers he knew the truck was at A-1 Towing in Twin Falls.

Officers spoke with the owner of the towing company, who said Jacob Jack Bellus had sold him the truck for $500 cash.

The next day at 7 p.m., officers located Bellus at the Old Towne Lodge at 248 Second Ave. W. Police say Bellus climbed through a back window and ran down an alley before he was stopped by a reserve officer.

According to the police report, Bellus said he knew he was violating his probation. Police say Bellus told them he wanted to get money so he could keep smoking synthetic marijuana called "hay" until his expected arrest.

Police said they found 13.9 grams of spice in Bellus' pocket, along with a pipe and $131.

"Mr. Bellus told me he spent most of the money renting the motel room, ordering pizza and purchasing 'hay' to smoke," the police report states.

Bellus was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on Monday on charges of grand theft and inhalation of an intoxicant. He is held on $10,000 bond.

A preliminary hearing on the theft charge is scheduled for April 20, and a pretrial for the inhalation of intoxicants charge is scheduled for May 1.

SW Idaho Teen Who Killed Dad Denied More Freedom

BOISE (AP) • A southwestern Idaho teen serving at least seven years in juvenile custody for killing his father was denied a request Monday for unsupervised visits with his mother and two younger siblings.

The Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections requested more freedom for Zachary Neagle, who pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in 2010. The agency cited Neagle's behavior during supervised visits with his family.

"He is a leader in his group and has taken on a lot of individual responsibility," said Nancy Bishop, an attorney with the agency. "His risk level at this point is a Level 1, which is our lowest risk-assessment level."

Third District Judge Bradly Ford ruled Monday that it was too soon to grant the request, and noted that the teen had served less than two years of his sentence, which carries a maximum of 30 years. Neagle, 17, will be able to continue supervised visits with his family.

The judge, who has retained jurisdiction in the case, indicated that he might later decide to release Neagle on probation before he turns 21, the Idaho Statesman reports. Neagle was 14 when he shot his 32-year-old father, Jason Neagle, in Caldwell.

During trial, the boy testified his father sexually molested him the morning of May 16, 2009, describing it as a pattern of abuse that began when he was 8 or 9. Later that day, Neagle shot his father with the rifle while the man slept on a couch in their living room.

Neagle testified that he believed the abuse was soon going to include his younger brother and sister, then age 6 and 9.

The sexual abuse charges were never proven in court.

"The circumstances are at least understandable although not justifiable," said Neagle's defense attorney, Chuck Peterson, on Monday. The judge said there were "a number of uncertainties" about the boy's claims.

Neagle's mother, Cindy, said she was disappointed the judge didn't grant her son unsupervised visits but was happy the supervised visits would continue.

Also Monday, a judge denied relaxed juvenile custody restrictions for a teen convicted in a separate case that was also highly publicized in southwestern Idaho.

Trevor Reizenstein is serving at least 10 years for injuring a 5-year-old girl In 2007.

Reizenstein, 18, was 12 when he attacked the girl in an alley. She was found wearing only a T-shirt and not breathing, but was later released from the hospital.

Reizenstein was tried as an adult in 2009 and ordered to serve 15 years for attempted murder and 20 years for battery with intent to commit rape. The Nampa teen pleaded guilty to the charges in exchange for prosecutors recommending a sentence of 10 years fixed.

The state Department of Juvenile Corrections recommended earlier this year that Reizenstein be transferred from a juvenile facility in eastern Idaho to a community-based program in Canyon County. Third District Judge Thomas J. Ryan requested a proposal with stronger security measures.

The corrections agency presented a revised request Monday, asking that Reizenstein remain at the juvenile facility in St. Anthony. The department dropped the proposal to place Reizenstein into a community-based program.

A return to the community could be daunting for Reizenstein, who has been in custody for five years and is responding well to treatment, said his defense attorney, Scott Fouser, after the hearing Monday.

"He's more comfortable with this approach," Fouser said.

EPA Says It Can't Regulate Lead in Hunting Bullets

Environmental groups lose bid to regulate lead under Toxic Substances Control Act.

LEWISTON (AP) • The Environmental Protection Agency has denied the latest petition from environmental groups that want the agency to regulate the amount of lead used in some hunting ammunition.

The agency told the groups Monday that it has no authority to act because ammunition was specifically exempted in the Toxic Substances Control Act. It's the same answer the agency provided when the groups made a similar request in 2010.

The Center for Biological Diversity and more than 100 other groups submitted the petition last month, asking that the lead be regulated under the Toxic Substances Control Act. They contend the lead is responsible for poisoning millions of birds and other animals every year.

It's shameful that the EPA refuses to save wildlife from senseless lead poisoning," Jeff Miller, a representative of the Center for Biological Diversity, told the Lewiston Tribune. "The poisoning of bald eagles and other wildlife is a national tragedy the EPA can easily put an end to, since there are plenty of safe, available alternatives to lead ammo."

Many hunting groups and ammunition makers say lead alternatives are too expensive, and that bullets containing lead don't pose a threat to animal populations. Hunters prefer lead shot because it's heavier and flies straighter than other ammunition.

Miller argued the EPA has the authority to regulate chemical substances in ammunition that pose a threat, if not ammunition itself. He said his organization and others advocating for some restrictions on lead in ammunition intended to go to court to force the issue.

"We look forward to putting this issue before a court, since the law is very clear that EPA has the responsibility to protect wildlife and people from toxic lead exposure," said Miller. "The EPA never evaluated the merits of regulating toxic lead ammo, nor has a court ruled on its authority to act under the federal toxics law."

The Center for Biological Diversity sued following the dismissal of its 2010 petition, but the case was thrown out because a filing deadline was missed.

Some federal bird biologists believe lead is a major cause of mortality in bird populations, especially the struggling California Condor. North America's largest land bird is a scavenger and feasts on carcasses such as deer and coyotes left behind by hunters, often ingesting lead fragments left in the carcass.

NTSB Suggests Changes to Air Race Rules

BY SANDRA CHEREB Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • Air race pilots should take their modified aircraft on a dry run before participating in certain types of competitions and should possibly wear flight suits to help them withstand high gravitational forces, the National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday.

The recommendations were among seven the board offered during a news conference in Reno, nearly six months after a crash at the Reno National Championship Air Races that killed 11 people and seriously injured more than 70 spectators.

"We are not here to put a stop to air racing," said NTSB Chairman Deborah Hersman. "We are here to make it safer."

Investigators are still trying to piece together exactly why 74-year-old Jimmy Leeward's souped-up P-51 Mustang rocketed straight up before pitching nose first onto the tarmac just feet from a VIP viewing area on Officials say a final report would be issued before this year's air races, scheduled for September.

Intense scrutiny will be given to those last seconds of the doomed flight, when Leeward's plane banked going around the eighth pylon on the third lap of a six-lap race. It veered back to the right, shot up and rolled over before slamming into the ground in front of horrified spectators.

"That 8 or 9 seconds is going to get a lot of written words" in the final report, said Howard Plagens, NTSB lead investigator.

The NTSB said telemetry data showed the plane was traveling at 530 mph when it pitched violently upward, exerting a force of at least nine times the normal force of gravity on the pilot's body, or 9 Gs. The NTSB said that appears to have incapacitated the pilot as blood rushed from his brain.

By comparison, experts say, F-16 fighter pilots, who wear special suits to counter the G-forces, can typically take 9 Gs, but only for a limited time. And those are modern planes designed with tilted seats intended to help keep blood flow to the brain. Average roller coasters expose riders to about 2 to 3 Gs, but only for brief moments.

Leeward was not wearing a special G-suit as he piloted the World War II-era aircraft.

"We know very well that that is at the limit for human beings, and it is very difficult for people to maintain awareness at 5 Gs — 9 Gs is significant," Hersman said. "But more importantly is the rapid onset in less than a second of this increased load."

The board recommends that race organizers provide training to pilots on how to mitigate the effects of high G-forces. Board members also want organizers to see whether it's feasible to require the flight suits during the races for the fastest aircraft.

Man to Undergo Tests in N. Idaho Murder

SANDPOINT • A judge ordered a psychiatric evaluation for a northern Idaho man charged with first-degree murder.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports a public defender for 19-year-old Austin Blake Thrasher made the request last week, raising concerns he may be delusional and unable to understand the criminal proceedings against him.

Thrasher is among three Bonner County residents accused in the death of 19-year-old Michael Wyatt Smith. Thrasher's wife, 22-year-old Jennifer Thrasher, and 19-year-old Christopher Garlin face accessory to murder charges.

Detectives received a tip in January that a man was picked up on the pretense of attending a party, driven to the woods, then shot and buried. Smith's body was found on

Appeal Dismissed in Sivak Murder Case

BOISE • A federal judge in Idaho has dismissed an appeal by a man found guilty of murder in Boise 30 years ago to have his conviction overturned.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Ronald E. Bush dismissed a motion filed by Lacey Mark Sivak. Bush ruled that his court lacks jurisdiction and that Sivak's appeal must first be authorized by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Last fall, the appellate justices upheld Sivak's conviction in the 1981 murder of Dixie Wilson. But justices overturned the death sentence after finding the state allowed a jailhouse informant to lie during the trial.

Buhl Airport Work Delayed

BY BLAIR KOCH

For the Times-News

BUHL • A plan to add new lighting to the taxi and runway of the Buhl Municipal Airport has been postponed as the advisory board decides how it will pay for the estimated $245,000 project.

Airport Board Chairman Neil Ring asked the City Council Monday night to the delay the project following decreases in federal and state

The council did just that.

The Federal Aviation Administration has typically funded 95 percent of such projects, with the state and local governments splitting the remaining 5 percent. However, the FAA has low $ered its funding \, match \, to \, 90$ percent and the state also dropped its to 2 percent, adding about $14,000 to Buhl's share of the cost.

"We were hit essentially three ways," Ring said outside the meeting. "We weren't prepared and don't have 8 percent budgeted for the project. Instead of the budgeted $6,450 we're looking at something like $20,300."

The lighting project, which would replace several-decades-old, energy-inefficient and sometimes unsafe wiring with "a new, low voltage system with about 60 lights," is part of the advisory board's multi-year plan and has been in the works for several years.

Last year, the board began the engineering phase of the project, which cost about $50,000. The airport's portion was about $12,500.

"If we weren't already into the project then we just wouldn't do it," Ring said.

The airport board also faces a pending lawsuit against it and the city of

In 2010, Skydive Buhl sued both entities after its lease at the airport was cancelled. Its owners, Paul and Denise Janes of Caldwell, who could not be reached for comment for this report, had leased space at the airport for nearly two years.

Mayor Tom McCauley said the case could be heard by the Idaho Supreme Court later this year.

"We've offered to settle," McCauley said.

In the meantime, the air-port's budget has taken a hit. Board member Ray Hoem said the funds would be available to cover the lighting project if not for the law-

"One of the reasons we're in this mess is because we have no money," he said.

Ring said the situation wasn't that dire. He stressed that the airport board would repay the city if it covered the extra cost of the project, something not likely to hap-

"We would not expect the citizens of this to town to pay for airport expenses," he Ring said the engineering firm assisting the board would work with it on delaying the project, and the project bid would likely be good through the fall.

Slotten DUI Hearing Delayed

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A pretrial hearing in the drunken driving case for former Canyon Ridge High School football coach David Slotten has been delayed until May 22. The hearing had been scheduled for Tuesday.

According to court records, Slotten, 46, was stopped in Filer along U.S. Highway 30 shortly before 10 p.m on March 20 for a malfunctioning headlight. During the stop, officers said they detected alcohol on Slotten's breath, and found an open bottle of beer in a cup holder.

Slotten allegedly failed a field sobriety test and later recorded a blood alcohol content of .165, more than twice the legal limit.

Slotten resigned as coach on March 22.

Discussion among commission members was brief. Commissioner Tom Frank noted that change is often difficult, adding the Canyon Park project represents a big change from the current grassy field.

"I believe they've done a good job with this," Commissioner Chuck Sharp said. "I think it will be aesthetically pleasing."

Despite the last hurdle of the council, Martens said "realistically, we believe it is a go. We'll make a project everybody will be proud of."

He estimated it could take two weeks to two months for the council to wrap things up by approving the final plat. As soon as that happens, he said, bulldozers will go to work.

Martens declined to reveal how many potential tenants have given verbal or written commitments.

"We're in negotiations with several," he said. "We don't have all the clients yet."

He noted previous objections by some citizens that delivery trucks would be supplying stores through doors just off the walking

Poaching

It's a new tool Fish and Game uses to encourage conservation, discourage wildlife violations and catch those who break the law. But an even more effective tool is the law-abiding pub-

What's the Problem?

For hundreds of years, people hunted and fished without wildlife laws. When they got hungry, going afield to spear a fish or kill a deer was a logical solution.

"That's just the way people lived," said Gary Hompland, a conservation officer with Fish and Game. "There was no season, no method of take or bag limits. When families' food supplies got down they went out and killed a game animal."

The problem today?

"That whole philosophy is still alive and well in some communities," he said.

Especially in small, rural communities, Hompland said, some people believe it is their right to feed off the land without restrictions. Others just have no respect for the law or conservation. But in some places the old attitude is changing.

"That culture isn't accepted by a lot of younger people, newer people moving into the area," he said.

Some hunters and anglers don't like it when their peers break the law.

"It's a matter of ethics," said bird hunter and fisherman Ben Collins. "There's two kinds of poachers: people who poach out-season and those that take more than their limit. I don't like either one."

Stirling compares the range of wildlife crimes to other offenses: Speeding or running a red light, for instance, doesn't have the impact of a more serious crime such as murder unless speeding causes an accident leading to someone's death. Keeping more than your legal share of trout might not have the same impact as taking an elk out of season, he said, but it's still wrong. And if everyone did it, it could have a serious effect on fishing opportunities.

The number of violations rises during a dour economy, Hompland said.

"People are out of work," he said. "They can't afford to buy food, which is weird, because you'd think they wouldn't be able to buy fuel either. But some things, like food, you have to have."

The most common wildlife violation is rule compliance: fishing without a license, using two poles when the angler should be using only one, or not properly validating a deer tag, Stirling said. Sometimes it's carelessness or laziness on the part of the perpetrator, he said. Other times, it's blatant disregard for the law.

Sniffing Out Crime

It was a good first year with the K-9 unit, Stirling said, because Pepper helped uncover evidence on several violations. The most remarkable: Searching in the dark, Pepper found a shotgun and spent shells that had been dumped in a cornfield by juveniles hunting ducks out of season.

"We did that within a matter of 20 minutes," Stirling said. "It was much more efficient utilizing the Pepper is the only dog in the K-9 unit, a program funded by grants from Shikar Safari in Boise, the Idaho Conservation Officers Association and private donations. Initial training happened in Indiana, where the Indiana Department of Natural Resources paid for Pepper's training.

If the K-9 program is successful over the course of the five years, it will continue and even expand into other regions, Stirling said. If not, it likely will go away.

Stirling takes Pepper with him into the field to sniff out evidence and to train, and to school classrooms where Stirling discusses conservation issues with students and teachers. Everyone likes the friendly black Lab, he said.

Hompland said Pepper also helps Search and Rescue find lost hunters and trains with other law enforcement K-9 units.

"We had a good year learning this new tool that we have," Stirling said.

Stirling wants to keep the K-9 program and said there seems to be significant interest from local sportsmen's groups and individuals. He's garnered more than $20,000 through fundraising and donations since the program started.

Currently, the department has about $12,600 budgeted for the remainder of the pilot program - expenses include equipment and vet checks – and is looking for more money to get it through the next four vears.

"At this point, we're very proud of it," Hompland said, adding that the donations give the agency a window to make the program

Pepper, who sniffed out hidden fish and a handgun during training at Dierkes Lake on Saturday, seems to like it, too.

"He's so eager to please," Stirling said.

The Best Tool

Pepper, however, is not the ultimate poaching solution. One of the most effective tools Fish and Game uses to catch violators doesn't have a dog's nose: It's you.

"What people tell us is huge," Hompland said. "We depend on the public so much."

When you're in the field and notice anything suspicious or see something you know is not right, he said, report it as soon as possible to Fish and Game or call the Citizens Against Poaching toll-free number.

One person might hear off-season gunshots in the woods; another person might see neighbor Bill coming down the mountain. It might not be Bill who did the shooting, Hompland said, but maybe Bill saw someone who did. Pieces of reported information can be put together to form a clearer picture of what might have happened. "The public's help is crucial," Hompland said.

No, that was a uniquely Nixonian response to political challenge: Shadowy operatives with national security credentials tapped phones of columnists; dissidents were burgled and bullied; critics had their taxes audited; black bag operations were authorized at cabinet level and above.

That was Watergate, and since it cost Richard Nixon his presidency it seems now to have been banished from the political sphere, an absence that is rarely noticed. So Watergate touches the political culture only faintly.

But for journalists it's quite a different matter: Watergate remains the defining event of the past half-century. It was a towering moment of heroism, an episode of legendary stature in which journalism's foundational purposes were triumphantly validated and a drift toward despotism was stopped, all thanks to a single-minded dedication to the craft of determined reporting.

And it has been a powerful inspiration for the two generations of journalists that came since. "We're all the sons and daughters of Watergate," as Jeff Leen, investigations editor of The Washington Post, told a gathering at the American Society of News Editors annual conference in Washington last week.

Leen's comment came during a remarkable panel marking the 40th anniversary of the Watergate break-in, when burglars hired by the Nixon re-election campaign were busted while trying to plant listening devices at Democratic Party headquarters. (The anniversary isn't until June, but nobody seemed to care.)

The ASNE panel included both reporting stars of The Post's historic investigation, Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein. No less important, in the front row of the audience were their then-editor, Ben Bradlee, now 90, and Donald Graham, CEO of the Post organization, whose late mother Katherine, then publisher, stood firm before the fierce counterattack of the Nixon cabal.

The panel's ostensible topic was how the media would handle that affair today, in a radically different informational world.

Surely nowadays an election-season break-in at opposition headquarters would trigger an informational avalanche, and the mystery would unravel in days, rather than the nearly two years of courthouse and congressional hearings that it took to eviscerate Nixon's administration and force him out.

But the panel was skeptical, and it was hard not to wonder whether, paradoxically, exposing a conspiracy of that scope might actually be harder now. For one thing, Bernstein suggested, he and Woodward were writing for an audience that was interested in facts. Today's readers are looking more single-mindedly to confirm what they be-

"I'm not sure the story could withstand that cultural reception," he said. "It'd get ground up."

And there's another reason to wonder how readily Watergate would be exposed today. That's the capacity of authorities to identify and move against sources.

The warm reception President Obama received from the editors conference a few hours before the Watergate panel was ironic in view of the unprecedented six Espionage Act prosecutions his Justice Department has mounted against people who leaked information to the press — information that while institutionally embarrassing, was miles from constituting any detectable security threat.

Nowadays, those sources are being ferreted out and shut down with 21st-century techniques of surveillance and digital information retrieval. It's good that Nixon's henchmen didn't have those tools to roll up the network of sources so patiently cultivated by Woodward and Bern-

How Our Enemies Slowly Destroyed America

It came, not on silent cat feet. Everyone of average intelligence knew it, although few attended the memorial. Loyal patriots prayed, cried and gnashed their teeth, but it was too late. Others smiled and rejoiced.

It came in phases that all recognized, but those in power did nothing to prevent the obvious defeat of this "noble experiment." Even when encouraged by multitudes of alarmed taxpayers, obeisance was paid to outsiders with no vested interest in saving a country they'd not shed blood to preserve. This is how our enemies, both foreign and domestic, intent on our demise caused deterioration from within.

Phase 1: Ruin the national moral base. Atheists were already pitted against those believers in intelligent design so they only had to pit denominations against each other. Allow spiraling drug use, promiscuous sex and the porn industry to gain general acceptance. 2. Ruin the stock market and banking industry. 3. Destroy the working classes. Move manufacturing abroad and allow in unskilled laborers to compete for the remaining jobs.

4. Disallow drilling or use of domestic oil reserves, thus forcing dependence on foreign crude.

5. Ruin the individual's financial base. Skyrocketing gas prices continuously escalate the price of every consumer product and cripple personal wealth.

6. Destroy our national esteem in the eyes of other nations by allowing detractors to pick at our bones while we flounder. By sending our boys to fight and die in other countries' civil matters, then bankrupt our treasury by rebuilding those countries' economies.

We can't blame it all on the current administration; they're probably guilty for no more than 90 percent. Decline began when we started to eliminate prayer, failure to acknowledge the faith of our forefathers, trying to eliminate God from our money, Ten Commandments from public buildings, Pledge of Allegiance and trial oaths.

Black Idaho Lawmaker Gets KKK Mailing

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's only black lawmaker said she received a direct mailing from the Ku Klux Klan that has bolstered her resolve to fight preju-

Childhood memories of a cross burning on her lawn on Boise's north end were rekindled for Rep. Cherie Buckner-Webb, D-Boise, when she opened a hand-addressed application last week to join the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"It conjured up a lot of things for me that weren't very comfortable - not fear, but sometimes we get to thinking things are settled," she said.

The mailing solicited a photo, $35 in annual dues and asked for a completed statement proclaiming: "I am a White Christian man or woman," The Idaho Statesman report-also included a newsletter introducing the organization's national director, Thomas Robb, but there was no personal note.

Still, Buckner-Webb doesn't think it's a coincidence the application was delivered to the only black member of the Idaho Legislature.

The mailing had a return address for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan offices in Harrison, Ark., the Statesman said. No one answered a phone call Tuesday from The Associated Press to the offices of the group.

"Initially, I wondered what was someone's thought process in sending that to me. My first inclination was someone wants me to know the Klan is still around," Buckner-Webb said.

The Southern Poverty Law Center, which tracks racist and hate groups, identified 18 such active organizations in Idaho in Buckner-Webb posted a copy of the KKK application and newsletter on her Facebook page to express her surprise and start a dialogue.

She said legislative battles this past session over gay rights, contraception and restrictions on abortion showed her the fight against prejudice in Idaho isn't over.

"I would be a fool not to take note and govern myself accordingly," she said.

Idaho Prosecutor Drops Sex Charge after Polygraph

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • An eastern Idaho prosecutor has dropped a lewd conduct charge against a man convicted of violently sexually abusing a toddler in 2010.

Thomas Paulk was resentenced Monday to 15 years in prison for the remaining charge against him, felony sexual penetration by forcible use of a foreign object. A jury found Thomas Paulk guilty of lewd conduct with a child and forcible penetration last Septem-

Paulk, 24, was accused of attacking a 2-year-old girl, leaving her with severe vaginal injuries that required surgery.

After his conviction, Paulk underwent a court-ordered polygraph test for a psychosexual evaluation. The test showed Paulk wasn't lying when he said he didn't commit the crime for sexual gratification. Idaho's lewd conduct law requires intent to receive sexual gratification.

Bonneville County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Daniel Clark filed a motion to dismiss the charge last month, saying that since violence was the motive for Paulk's actions, he no longer fit the state's definition of lewd conduct.

"I could no longer stand for a conviction that I thought was unfair," Clark told the Post Register.

Paulk's conviction on the forcible penetration charge was upheld.

On Monday, district judge Dane Watkins Jr. sentenced Paulk to serve a minimum of 5 years and a maximum of 15 years in prison. That's the same prison term Paulk received when he was initially sentenced in the case last December.

A 15-year sentence on the forcible penetration charge was scheduled to run concurrently with the 15-year sentence on the lewd conduct charge, which has since been dismissed. Under his new sentencing, Paulk will still have to register as a sex offender.

When resentencing Paulk earlier this week, Watkins said he was alarmed to hear the defendant describe the "violent and willful" incident as an accident.

"It wasn't an accident;" Watkins said. "... It's a tragedy."

Trial for Mountain Home Murders Suspect Pushed Back to Fall

BY PATRICK ORR

Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Jorge Orozco – a former member of the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list in connection with the brutal killing of a Treasure Valley woman and her two children in 2002 - is now set to start his first degree murder trial in October.

Orozco, who pleaded not guilty in August to three counts first-degree murder, was originally supposed to begin his trial in February. That trail got pushed back to May, and was recently pushed back again to an Oct. 15 start date. Testimony in the trial is expected to last more than a month. Fourth District Judge Timothy Hansen will hear the Jorge Orozco is accused of killing his girlfriend Rebecca Ramirez and her two kids and lighting their bodies on fire in the desert south of Mountain Home in July 2002. Sheriff's officials say Orozco left Idaho - and the United States — in the days following the murders and hid in Mexico for years to avoid arrest, until he was found in 2009 and brought back to Idaho a year later. He has been in custody in the Elmore County Jail since then.

While first-degree murder is punishable by the death penalty in Idaho, Elmore County Prosecutor Kristina Schindele agreed not to pursue capital punishment against Orozco, since the extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico allows either nation to refuse extradition over that issue.

Orozco could still spend the rest of his life in prison for the shooting deaths of Ramirez and two of her sons, Ricardo, 4, and Miguel, 2.

Fishermen found their bodies in a burned-out car in a remote part of Elmore County. FBI officials say Orozco confessed to family members, who helped him get out of the United States shortly after the murders.

Local and national law enforcement searched for Orozco for years. The FBI eventually put Lopez-Orozco on their "Ten Most Wanted" list - a list that included criminals like Osama bin Laden and and killed. Martin Hernandez, Boston crime boss James Bulger – in March 2005. Since then, all three have been caught or killed.

The case also got national attention the case was featured on the "America's Most Wanted" TV show.

NEWS IN BRIEF

STAFF REPORT

Ed Johnson, heavy equipment operator, was surprised when he pulled the giant scoop of earth from the basement he was digging. "What is that?" he thought. "An old whiskey barrel or a wooden box of some kind?" He jumped off his backhoe to investigate. As he approached, his mind was racing. He could see that the wooden box was badly decayed and full of something. As he got closer, he could make out a sword, an old canteen and remnants of an old military uniform. While sifting through the box, he found a bugle, tattered papers and some military badges. It appeared to be the belongings of a soldier of some kind. He spent the rest of the day collecting and examining the items he had found. He needed to find out more The next morning he stopped by the local coffee shop to ask questions about the lot he was digging on. He stopped at the right place. Three elderly gentlemen were swapping stories as they did every morning. Ed approached the group and asked if they were from the area. They all laughed and said "Who's asking?" Ed explained that he was building a new house on a lot he recently purchased and told them where it was. One gentlemen said, "Oh, you mean the old Norris place? That place was demolished over 50 years ago. Been an empty lot ever since." Ed was intrigued-he hadn't realized there had been a house there. "Place caught fire in the 1940's. I was just a school boy at the time-no one was home, but the place was a total loss. The charred remains sat there for 4 or 5 years before it was cleaned up. I walked past that place twice a day, five days a week, back and forth from school. Went all the way to the 8th grade," the fellow said with a smile. "After that, no one ever rebuilt on the lot. I'm glad to see somebody's doing something with it. Go down and talk to Larry at the court house. He can pull the plat book and tell you all about it." The old guy was right, Larry was a wealth of information. The original farm house was built by Elsie and Thomas Little back in 1845. They moved out and sold to Elijah Miller in 1883. Then in 1916, the place was sold to Henry Norris who tore down the existing two-room farm house and built a new house. That house burned down in 1943.

All of this was great info, now what about the military items? Ed needed to find out exactly what they were. When Ed learned that the Treasure Hunters were coming to town, he thought this would be his chance to learn more about the items he had found. The advertisement had said that the experts would offer advice on any antique and collectible items and they would do it for free. It also said that they would make offers to purchase selling, but you never know. Hey, if the price is right, who knows?

Ed walked into the hotel where the show was and followed the signs to the meeting room with great anticipation. "My heart was actually beating at twice the normal rate," he said. "As soon as I walked in I was welcomed to the show and given a number. They said it would be about 10 minutes until they would call my number. While I waited, I looked at all the unusual antiques on display. There were old toys, coins. silver tea sets and old metal signs. There was even a sword similar to mine. My number was called and it was the moment I'd been waiting for. I would finally learn about the items I had found."

Ed continued, "almost immediately after I sat down, Greg the antique guru was assigned to assist me said, 'hey nice Civil War sword and bugle. Where did you get them?' I told him my story and he said the family most likely buried the items in honor of the soldier who owned them, and who most likely fought in the Civil War." The soldier's uniform, or what was left of it, the sword and other items would have been distributed by the Union Army. The items were that of an infantry soldier and dated at around 1863. Because a bugle was found, this soldier was most likely the company bugle boy. Most buglers were young boys. Also, the hat in the collection would have fit a very small head-that of a 12 to 14 year old boy.

Greg also explained that since the uniform, sword and other items were together, the soldier most surely survived the war and returned home. Ed reflected that "learning about the items was very interesting and definitely worth the trip. The entire collection was valued at $2,200. Most of the value was the sword and the bugle. I decided to take pictures and sell the collection. I had a great time learning about it and thought it should be in a Civil War enthusiast's collection. I'm actually having a small monument made in honor of the find and putting it at the exact location where it was found."

Treasure Hunters are coming to Twin Falls

BY DAVID MORGAN

STAFF WRITER

Got Booty? If you have a coffee can full of old coins, an old guitar or maybe the costume jewelry your aunt gave you, it's time to bring it out of hiding. This week, Treasure Hunters will make a five day stop here and want to see what you have. These Treasure Hunters aren't armed with a shovel and metal detector, rather their weapon of choice is their expertise and the collectors they buy for. You see, these guys know all about diamonds, coins, antiques and collectibles, musical instruments and anything that's old. For five days they are asking you to bring your booty and make your best deal. These guys pay cash for just about anything that's old. The items they buy go straight to collectors all over the world. How much is a 1960 Gibson Les Paul worth? Well, to some, it might be worth a couple hundred dollars but to a serious collector it could be worth thousands, even ten's of thousands. These guys are buying for these collectors. They pay more for the things their collectors want.

The event is free to attend and there is no obligation to sell anything. If it's information you want, that won't cost you a thing. But be prepared, as an offer to purchase your treasures is highly likely. About eighty percent of the stuff that comes into the show is purchased by these hungry treasure hunters.

According to the Treasure Hunters I talked to, the wait time to get your items looked at is usually a half hour or less. Once there, your items will be examined, identified and an offer will quickly follow. Then it's up to you...do I sell, do I hold out for more or do I walk? The whole thing sounds like a lot of fun and might put some jingle in your pocket. So dig up that booty and head down to the show. You might have the treasure they have been looking for!

What kind of things are they looking for?

I'm Tony, and I get asked this question a lot. I usually say, "if it's gold or old, they will probably be interested in it." I know that's a vague answer, so here's a list that might get you thinking:

Gold Jewelry, Costume Jewelry, Diamonds, Silver Coins, Silver Dollars, Gold Coins, Old Paper Currency, Old Wheat Pennies, Old Pocket Watches, Toys made before 1970, Wrist Watches, Foreign Coins, Silver Bullion, Sterling Silver, Barbie Dolls, Tonka Trucks, Coin Collections, Advertising Signs, Old Guitars, Saxophones, All Musical Instruments, Comic Books, Historical Documents, Oil Paintings

ABOVE A customer brought in his father's coin collection that he had inherited. He was pleasantly surprised with his offer and decided to sell the collection. He said that the money would go towards a down payment on a house for his family.

GOLD IS ALMOST AT $1,700 PER OZ.

IT'S TIME TO SELL!

Hi, I'm Archie. I've been Treasure Hunt-

Back in the 1980's, gold and silver soared in price, but soon fell back to rock bottom. Well, it's a seller's market right now. The poor world economy and weak dollar have increased prices to all-time highs. My advice to people is to sell now at the high side.

Many people have gold in their jewelry box and don't realize how valuable it really is. If you've got old rings, necklaces, mismatched earrings or even gold teeth just sitting in a dresser drawer, dig it out and bring it in. You will be surprised just how much we can pay you.

Old Coins and Paper Currency

Did you know that the United States started minting coins in 1793? All coins are worth something: old silver dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes made before 1965 are mostly silver and worth many times their face value. A $20 gold coin from the early 1900's could be worth $2,000 or more to collectors. If you have any older coins or paper currency, please come see us. We will buy one coin or million dollar collections.

3 Maryland School Workers Split Mega Millions Prize

BALTIMORE (AP) • An anonymous trio of Maryland educators who will split a share of the record $656 million Mega Millions jackpot say they're staying on the job for the children. Maryland lottery officials said Tuesday that the state's winning ticket was held by two women and a man calling themselves "The Three Amigos." They are a special education teacher, an elementary school teacher and a school administrator who all worked multiple jobs to make ends meet. Each will collect about $35 million after taxes. Santorum Drops Out of Race, Clearing the Way for Romney

Santorum had been facing a loss in the April 24 primary in Pennsylvania, where the Romney campaign planned nearly $3 million in ads against him.

BY KASIE HUNT AND MARC LEVY Associated Press

GETTYSBURG, Pa. • Rick Santorum cleared the way for Mitt Romney to claim victory in the long and hardfought battle for the Republican presidential nomination Tuesday, giving up his "against all odds" campaign as Romney's tenacious conservative rival.

Santorum's withdrawal sets up what is sure to be an acrimonious sevenmonth fight for the presidency between Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, and Democratic President Barack Obama, with the certain focus on the still-troubled economy.

"This has been a good day for me," a smiling Romney told supporters in Wilmington, Del., saying he believes Santorum "will continue to have a major role" in the Republican Party.

In a preview of the personal attacks that lie ahead, Obama's campaign manager declared that Americans neither like nor trust Romney, and the Romney camp said the fight had always been about defeating Obama, not GOP rivals.

"This game is a long, long, long way from over," Santorum said as he bowed out of the contest with Romney. "We are going to continue to go out there and fight to make sure that we defeat President Barack Obama."

Santorum had been facing a loss in the April 24 primary in Pennsylvania, the state he represented in Congress for 16 years, and where the Romney campaign planned nearly $3 million in ads against

Whether or not there are lingering hard feelings, Santorum didn't mention Romney, who has been the front-runner for months and was far ahead in the race for the 1,144 delegates needed to clinch the nomination at the party's convention in August.

Romney has tried to ignore his GOP rivals and campaign against the president since he first entered the race last year with a pitch focused on the still frail economy. But Romney was forced to go after Santorum and former house Speaker Newt Gingrich after Santorum showed strength in Iowa and Gingrich in South Carolina early this year. Then Santorum kept on, memorably winning three Southern primaries.

Zimmerman's Lawyers Withdraw in Shooting Case

Suspect portrayed as erratic, emotionally shaky amid mounting pressure in slaying

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANFORD, Fla. • The Trayvon Martin case took a bizarre turn Tuesday when George Zimmerman's attorneys said they were dropping the neighborhood watch captain as a client, complaining that they have lost all contact with him and that he called the prosecutor and talked to a TV host after they told him not to speak to anyone.

The lawyers portrayed Zimmerman as erratic and his emotional state as shaky, and they expressed fear for his mental and physical health under the pressure that has been building in the month since he shot and killed Martin, an unarmed black teenager.

"As of the last couple days he has not returned phone calls, text messages or emails," attorney Craig Sonner said at a news conference outside the courthouse. "He's gone on his own. I'm not sure what he's doing or who he's talking to. I cannot go forward speaking to the public about George Zimmerman and this case as representing him because I've lost contact with him."

The split came as a special prosecutor neared a decision on whether to charge Zimmerman with a crime in the Feb. 26 shooting.

Sonner and colleague Hal Uhrig said they had not spoken with Zimmerman since Sunday. Since then, they said, they had learned that he spoke to special prosecutor Angela Corey's office and to Fox TV host Sean Hannity without consulting them, in an attempt to give his side of the shooting. They said Corey refused to talk to Zimmerman without his attorneys' consent and Hannity wouldn't tell them what was discussed.

Craig Sonner, left, and Hal Uhrig, former attorneys for George Zimmerman, speak to reporters Tuesday in Sanford, Fla.

Zimmerman also set up his own website even as the lawyers were creating one for him at his request. Zimmerman said on his website that he wants "to ensure my supporters they are receiving my full attention without any intermediaries?'

Obama Sees Biggest Divide in America Since'64 Race

BY KEN THOMAS Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. • President Barack Obama said Tuesday the choice facing voters this November will be as stark as in the milestone 1964 contest between Lyndon Johnson and Barry Goldwater — one that ended up with one of the biggest Democratic landslides in history.

The president made his comments during a fundraising blitz in Florida, and right before his general election foe was essentially decided. Republican Rick Santorum dropped out of the presidential contest, making it clear that Obama would face off against Mitt Romney, the former Massachusetts governor.

Obama used a daylong trip to Florida to call again for Congress to raise taxes on millionaires, a populist pitch on an issue that he hopes will help define the differences with nominee-to-be Romney.

"This election will probably have the biggest contrast that we've seen maybe since the Johnson-Goldwater election, maybe before that," Obama told donors at the first of three campaign events in this battleground state. The events were expected to raise at least $1.7 million.

In his 1964 race against Goldwater, Johnson carried 44 of 50 states and won 61 percent of the popular vote, the most by any candidate since 1820.

Republicans said Obama's tax proposal was aimed at dividing Americans along class lines and gave him an excuse to raise more money for his re-election campaign.

"He can't run on his record so he is coming down here to raise money using taxpayers' funds to do so," said Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart, R-Fla.

In a reception at a gated community in Palm Beach Gardens, Obama said Democrats would ensure the rich pay their fair share, while focusing on investments in education, science and research and caring for the most vulnerable. By contrast, he said, Republicans would dismantle education and clean energy programs so they can give still more tax breaks to the rich.

Best Buy CEO Resigns Amid Investigation

NEW YORK (AP) • Best Buy CEO Brian Dunn abruptresigned on Tuesday after the embattled consumer electronics chain launched an internal investigation into his "personal conduct?

Best Buy released a statement late Tuesday saying that it is conducting the probe after earlier only saying the departure was a "mutual decision." The chain would not give any specifics on the circumstances surrounding the investigation of Dunn, a 28year Best Buy veteran who had been CEO since 2009.

"Certain issues were brought to the board's attention regarding Dunn's personal conduct, unrelated to the company's operations or financial controls, and an audit committee investigation was initiated," according to a company statement issued late Tuesday. "Prior to the completion of the investigation, Mr. Dunn chose to resign."

Dunn, who started his career at Best Buy as a sales clerk in the 1980s, could not be reached for comment.

Syria Defies Cease-fire Plan as Hopes for Peace Fade

BEIRUT • Syrian troops defied a U.N.-brokered cease-fire plan on Tuesday, launching fresh attacks on rebellious areas, but special envoy Kofi Annan said there was still time to salvage a truce that he described as the only chance for

More than a year into the Syrian uprising, the international community has nearly run out of options for halting the slide toward civil war. On Tuesday, Annan insisted his peace initiative remains "very much alive" - in part because there is no viable alternative.

The U.N. has ruled out any military intervention of the type that helped bring down Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, and several rounds of sanctions and other attempts to isolate President Bashar Assad have done little to stop the bloodshed.

"If you want to take (the plan) off the table, what will you replace it with?" Annan told reporters in Hatay, Turkey, where he toured a camp sheltering Syrian refugees. Facing a Tuesday deadline to pull back its tanks and troops, the Syrian government had said it was withdrawing from certain areas, including the rebellious central province of Homs. But France called the claims a "flagrant and unacceptable lie," and activists said there was no sign of a withdrawal.

Worst Loss for Dow This Year as Stocks Slump Again

NEW YORK (AP) • The stock market suffered its worst loss of the year Tuesday because of uncertainty about coming corporate earnings reports and concerns that the borrowing costs of Spain are creeping close to a crisis level. The Dow fell 213.66 points, its third triple-digit loss in four days. It closed at 12,715.93, its lowest since Feb. 2. The S&P finished down 23.61 points, its worst decline this year, at 1,358.59. The Nasdaq composite index, which eked out a gain in one of the past four days, ended down 55.86 points, its worst performance this year, at 2,991.22.

Wireless Providers to Disable Stolen Phones

BY ERIC TUCKER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Wireless carriers will be able to quickly disable a cellphone after it's reported stolen, under a plan announced Tuesday by federal and local officials.

The anti-crime strategy relies on a database that will allow wireless providers to disable a cellphone after a user reports it stolen.

The plan was unveiled by Federal Communications Commission Chairman Julius Genachowski, Sen. Charles Schumer and police chiefs from New York, Philadelphia and the District of Columbia.

Instagram is demonstrated on an iPhone Monday in New York. Instagram lets people apply filters to photos they snap with their mobile devices and share them with friends and strangers.

Loyal Instagram Users Fret about Facebook's Reach

Facebook is spending $1 billion to buy the photo-sharing company Instagram in the social network's largest acquisition ever.

BY BARBARA ORTUTAY

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Poor Instagram users. First, their beloved photo-sharing application moves from iPhone-only exclusivity to the Android phone masses. A week later, Facebook swallows up the tiny startup behind the app for $1 billion. The purchase sparked worries that Facebook might shutter Instagram or change it for the worse by harvesting their personal information or shoving ads into their carefully curated photo streams. "I've tried very hard not to be part of the Facebook ecosystem," says Darwin Poblete, a Brooklyn, New York-based architect who has used Instagram since its early days. "Now I feel like the purchase has sucked me in. I'll have to see how the privacy settings change to decide if I will leave it?"

Instagram has attracted more than 31 million users in less than two years. Its near-cult-like early followers were loval iPhone users who flocked to the app for its ease-ofuse, its playful filters that can make even boring photos look artistic, and its lack of ads, status updates and other clutter. Apple named Instagram the iPhone App of the Year in 2011.

To be fair, both Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg and Instagram CEO Kevin Systorm sought to reassure people that the app is here to stay. Unlike all the other startups Facebook has bought, Instagram will remain available to people who don't use Facebook or don't want to connect it to their accounts on the world's most populous online social network, the CEOs said.

"Millions of people around the world love the Instagram app and the brand associated with it, and our goal is to help spread this app and brand to even more people," Zuckerberg wrote on his Facebook page announcing the purchase on Monday.

It's hard to say, though, what Facebook might do a year or two from now. After all, its site's constant evolution has been a big reason for its success. Doing things the old way just because a few users complain isn't the Facebook way.

For Samantha Hutmacher, change isn't necessarily a bad thing. The college student, who uses both Facebook and -since last week- Instagram, says that if Facebook tweaks the app, "I assume it'll be more creative?

While a lot of people complain when Facebook makes changes to its site, Hutmacher says she "can't pinpoint any particular time" when she wished that her Facebook page didn't have the new features the company has added over the years.

"It kind of grows on you," says Hutmacher, who studies elementary school education at the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo.

Instagram already feels a bit like Facebook, but with all the noise of status updates, links, ads, videos and games stripped away. That's part of its appeal, and a large part of why Facebook saw it as so much of a threat that it paid $1 billion to buy it.

"They are growing like mad on mobile, and Facebook's mobile platform (including its app) is mediocre at best," wrote tech blogger Om Malik on Tuesday on GigaOm. "Facebook is not a mobile-first company and they don't think from the mobile-first perspective. Facebook's internal ideology is that of a desktopcentric Internet company?

Instagram is a social network only for photos, but even those are different. Users seem to put more thought and caring into an Instagram photo than they do for a typical Facebook snapshot. These aren't your party group shots, tagged with the names of everyone there, nor are these the endlessly re-shared kitten photos with funny quotes attached to them. Instead, users are more likely to share, say, a photo of a cup of tea with a filter applied to it, so it looks like it was taken with a film camera 30 years ago. Children are popular subjects too, as are tulips and Easter eggs when they are in season.

Alcoa's revenue reported for the first quarter •

The largest U.S. aluminum manufacturer said Tuesday that it earned 9 cents share in the first quarter. It surpassed analyst forecasts for a small loss by selling more aluminum to a wide range of customers, including car makers and aircraft manufacturers, and operating its plants more efficiently. Alcoa is considered a barometer for the economy. It's also the first of the 30 companies in the Dow Jones industrial average to report results. Revenue rose to $6 billion from $5.95 billion. Analysts predicted revenue of $5.77 billion. Alcoa said sales rose from the fourth quarter across most of its markets.

Flachbart has been president and CEO since Jan.1, 2002, and has a total of 15 years of service with Blue Cross. He previously was senior vice president and general manager of Ameri-Health of Texas, a subsidiary of Independence Blue Cross, which has its headquarters in Pennsylvania.

Under Flachbart's tenure, Blue Cross of Idaho grew from 298,000 members to 718,000, according to a news release from the company.

"Ray has provided superior executive leadership to ensure that our members have the best health insurance coverage at the most affordable price," said Mike Shirley, board chairman for Blue Cross of Idaho. CSI Foundation Has New Director

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho Foundation has a new executive director.

Debra Wilson was promoted to the position in February after nearly 22 years of experience working for the foundation.

She started her career with the CSI Foundation as an office specialist in 1990. She became an administrative assistant/special events coordinator in 1993.

Wilson was the assistant executive director from 1995-2000 and associate executive director from 2002-

Former executive director Curtis Eaton — who filled the position for 10 years — is now the college's presidential adviser.

Wilson said it's been a "very smooth transition" and the foundation continues to grow thanks to support from south-central Idaho residents.

The foundation, she said, doesn't pay for the college's operating costs, but does help growing programs that show promise.

Also, the CSI Foundation has awarded nearly $12.9 million in scholarships to students since 1984.

Report: Dodgy Dossiers Hurt Job-seekers' Chances

BY DANIEL WAGNER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Thousands of U.S. job hunters are losing out because employers use faulty background-check data drawn from shoddy records, consumer advocates say in a new report.

Those advocates want the government to make sure people know what information prospective employers see, so that errors can be corrected and abusive companies can be held responsible.

Use of criminal-background data is exploding as the economy struggles back from the worst job crisis in decades, the National Consumer Law Center says in the report, which is being released Wednesday. To meet surging demand, countless dubious companies have sprouted up, it says.

"It's the Wild West for backgroundscreening report companies," says Persis Yu, lead writer of the report. "They're generating billions in revenue, but they have little or no accountability?

Nearly three-fourths of companies conduct criminal background checks for some job applicants, according to a 2010 study by the Society for Human Resource Management. They buy criminal-background data from providers of all sizes, including national names like Lexis-Nexis as well as upstarts that could include "anyone with a computer, an Internet connection and access to records," the report says. Data providers obtain information from online public records, private vendors, jails and police blotters, it says. Sloppy handling of that data can cause a search on one person to turn up a rap sheet about someone with a similar name, for example.

Other common errors include displaying criminal records that were supposed to be sealed or wiped clean, misclassifying minor offenses as major crimes and listing charges that have been dismissed, the report says.

The information is more widely available in part because local law-enforcement agencies are selling it to raise money, the group says. It says some data providers refuse to correct errors even when people can document inaccura-

Study: Tax Deadline Day Can Be Deadly on U.S. Roads

CHICAGO (AP) • The two certainties in life death and taxes - may be more intertwined than Ben Franklin ever imagined: A study found that deadly auto accidents increase on Tax Day.

Drivers recklessly racing to the post office to meet the deadline might be one reason. Or it could be that stressing over taxes distracts motorists and contributes to human error, researchers said.

They looked at 30 years of data and found 6,783 traffic-related deaths on Tax Day, or 226 per day. That compares with 213 per day on one day a week before the deadline day and another day a week

5 More Minutes of Shut-eye? New Clock Answers Resounding 'No'

HOBOKEN, N.J. • There is no snooze button. If you unplug it, a battery takes over. As wake-up time approaches, you cannot reset the alarm time.

It could be the world's most annoying alarm clock.

Once it goes off, to stop it you must get out of bed, go into the kitchen or bathroom, and punch the day's date into a telephone-style keypad. That's the only way to stop the loud 'ding-ding,' designed to sound like a customer angrily banging on a concierge bell at a hotel.

It was invented by Paul Sammut, a 25-year-old engineer who lives in Hoboken. During the day, he builds and researches underwater robots and vehicles at the nearby Stevens Institute of Technology.

He started working on the gadget because he was find-

"I wanted to make something that would essentially force me to get out of bed when I wanted to get out of bed the night before," said Sammut. "And I was thinking about ways of doing it and I thought about how in high school I had the perfect solution to this, which was my mother, and how she would, if it was time for me to wake up, she would force me out of bed."

He built the prototype in his spare time and uses it every day.

"Now I wake up before it goes off," said Sammut. "I subconsciously fear it and know I have to get up?"

After a friend suggested he try and sell the device, he made a video demonstrating it, and posted that on kickstarter.com. That's a website where the general public can support creative ideas by investing in them financially.

"We raised over $150,000 over a month and a half and we currently have over 400 orders," said Sammut.

Sammut has formed a company and is now trying to fill all the clock orders by the end of the summer.

Campaign

Romney's campaign has long been the best funded, the best organized, and the most professionally run of the GOP contenders.

Despite Santorum's refusal to get out of the race earlier — and Gingrich hasn't officially dropped out yet -Romney had already begun looking ahead with a unifying message. He told Pennsylvania supporters last week that "we're Republicans and Democrats in this campaign, but we're all connected with one destiny for America."

And Obama has turned squarely to face Romney, recently assailing him by name, as his campaign has worked to paint Romney as a rich elitist who will win the nomination only because he buried his opponents under millions of dollars in negative advertising.

"Neither he nor his special interest allies will be able to buy the presidency with their negative attacks," Obama campaign manager Jim Messina said Tuesday after Santorum left the race. "The more the American people see of Mitt Romney, the less they like him and the less they trust him."

In response, a Romney campaign spokeswoman insisted that "for Mitt Romney, this race has always been about defeating President Obama, and getting Americans back to work."

But Romney still has had to wage a drawn-out nomination fight that's seen candidate after candidate try to block his path. That has highlighted Romney's problem with the most conservative voters. As recently as last week, activists huddled with Santorum to try and figure out how to keep him in the race, and Gingrich was still insisting Tuesday that his campaign represents the "last stand for conservatives" as he vowed to stay in the race until the conven-

Claiming a victory of sorts, Santorum said Tuesday, "Against all odds, we won 11 states, millions of voters, millions of votes."

That took its toll on Romney. It all started in Iowa, where vote counts initially showed an eight-vote Romney victory – giving him momentum and headlines. But weeks later — after the campaign had moved to South Carolina and Romney was battling Gingrich -Santorum was declared the winner.

Romney's campaign left Santorum for dead as he beat Gingrich in Florida and won in Nevada. But he lost three states - Colorado, Minnesota and Missouri – to Santorum on Feb. 7, breathing new life into the former senator's insurgent candidacy and forcing Romney to compete for two more months. Santorum eventually won contests in Tennessee, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Kansas, Mississippi,

Capers: What They Are and How to Use Them

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

This week, it's flower power. Because that's exactly what capers are and do they are the flower buds of a wild bush that lend serious flavor power to your cooking.

Our story starts several thousand years ago, when capers moved from simple would-be blossoms to culinary colossus.

That's when the people of the Mediterranean realized that if they picked the buds of the caper bush before they opened, they could pickle them and use them to add a deliciously pungent flavor to their cooking.

And the pickling is key. Fresh caper buds are insanely bitter.

But once those buds have been dried in the sun and packed in brine, vinegar or dry salt (brining is the most common method today), the bitterness dissipates and the tender, green, pellet-shaped buds develop a deep salty, tangy flavor.

Most capers available in the U.S. are the sort found in Italy and southern France, where they are used to flavor sauces and seafood. Capers also grow in Spain, but the variety there tends to be larger and is consumed similar to olives.

Chances are good that you've had capers before. They are a standard ingredient in many Mediterranean seafood dishes (especially those involving tuna), and are a must-have for authentic puttanesca.

When shopping for capers, head to the pickle or Italian section of the grocer, where you will find them in small jars. Most will be packed in brine, the best of which are the "nonpareils" from France.

Capers that are drypacked in salt are prized for their intense flavor, but usually are found only in specialty shops. They also must be rinsed very well before using. Brine- or vinegarpacked capers also can be rinsed, but it isn't essential.

If you happen to stumble upon something called caper berries, you've hit on a related but not identical ingredient. Caper berries are the fruit of the same bush. They are larger than capers, but can be pickled in the same

You also may sometimes find anchovies sold in tins wrapped around capers. These are especially delicious savory flavor bombs. Use them to doctor up homemade or purchased

Capers generally are used as a flavor accent, a sort of finishing savory-salty bite for sauces, seafood, lamb and salads. Just remember they are intense, so a little goes a long way. Once opened the bottles can be refrigerated for months.

Heng suggests Butter Chicken for those who haven't had Indian food before because it's tasty but mild. Strips of chicken are marinated overnight in fresh ginger, a natural meat tenderizer. Before cooking, the ginger mix is rinsed off but the flavors are already in the chicken, giving it a subtly sweet flavor.

The chicken is served in a tomato-based cream sauce, sauteed with an aromatic mix of cinnamon, cumin, ginger, cloves, chili powder, turmeric and other herbs and spices. Like many of the dishes, it comes with a heaping side of white rice, in the dining room for five minutes.

"It doesn't take that long to find your manager," he said. "Most restaurants aren't that big."

Or if he walks into the kitchen and finds five or six staff frantically cleaning or he notices everything looks freshly washed.

First Impression

Last week, it was El Cazador Mexican Restaurant's turn for an unannounced meeting with Paul. Owned by Gloria and Arcadio Navarro, the Kimberly restaurant has been open since 2007.

Life hasn't been great for the Navarros lately. The couple, who also owns a restaurant of the same name in Buhl, lost their home last fall and had to move into an apartment above the Kimberly restaurant. Gloria said she has bleeding ulcers from

But, she said, inspections aren't a point of stress. She's confident that she runs a clean operation and always ushers Paul into the back without objections.

Accompanying the inspector last week were a Times-News reporter and photographer. Gloria and Arcadio were required to allow Paul into their kitchen, but not the newspaper staff. When told journalists would like to attend the inspection, they allowed it.

OK'ing media participation was a sign to Paul they had nothing to hide.

"You get a good impression (of how the inspection will go) based on what their reaction is when you walk in," Paul said. "If they're scared, there's probably a reason why."

Red flags aren't so obvious to diners. As per the Idaho Food Code – established by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and approved by the state Legislature - diners aren't allowed in the kitchen, so they never see how their steak is prepared. They don't know what the taco meat-frying skillet looks like or whether the floor has been swept or whether the dishwasher water is hot enough to sanitize the silverware.

They just have to trust. And that's why Paul takes his job so seriously.

What Happens When He Finds Violations?

While Paul sees himself as a teacher, there must be consequences to make the system work, he said.

Rarely does the health district force a restaurant to suspend operations. In environmental health director Merl Egbert's 22 years at the district, Egbert said, only three restaurants (none are currently in business) were suspended. And that was only for three days.

But inspectors do regularly hand out violations at two levels of severity: "critical" violations (which could potentially cause an immediate health hazard) and "good retail practice" violations (lesser offenses that don't pose an immediate danger to public health). inspection reports are available to the public and can be found at http://bit.ly/HpUlIW.

While there is some follow-up by inspectors, fixing these violations is largely left to the restaurants themselves. In a lot of ways, it's an honor system.

At the conclusion of inspections, restaurant staff are given a Violations Correction Report (VCR), which they must sign and return within an assigned time saying they have fixed the problems. It relies on restaurants to be honest about their intentions to keep customers safe.

"They can lie to me, and I wouldn't know," Paul said.

However, there are a few ways to check a restaurant's follow-through.

The Idaho Food Code states that if a restaurant classified as high-risk because of its menu has five critical violations or if a medium-risk restaurant has three critical violations, the inspector must return to the restaurant within 10 days to make sure the problems were fixed.

For restaurants with fewer violations — that's the vast majority of inspections inspectors simply wait for the VCR to be returned.

Looking in Every Corner

Before inspecting El Cazador last week, Paul reviewed the restaurant's previous inspections. It's part of the prep work he does before each visit, helping him to remember what to watch for.

"If we keep seeing the same problems over and over again, and they send me a VCR saying they fixed it, they're obviously not fixing it," Paul said. "It's time to sit down with them and see if we can fix things on a permanent basis."

Paul began his inspection at El Cazador by reviewing the menu, scanning it for high-risk items, such as ceviche (raw fish), that would require extra attention. No ceviche on the menu.

Many restaurateurs don't realize they must alert the health district with menu changes, Paul said.

"If I come into a restaurant, and they're not supposed to be serving soup, but I see soup on the menu, that's something we need to talk about," he said.

Soup is a high-risk item because it is often heated, cooled, then re-reheated, entering the temperature "danger zone" – between 41 degrees and 135 degrees. If food lingers in the danger zone, it must be used within four hours or be thrown away, Paul said. reviewing After Cazador's menu, he proceeded to the kitchen. Paul can usually determine quickly whether staff are using the hand-washing sink. Are boxes stacked in front of the sink blocking the path? How long does it take for hot water to run? "If it takes a long time, that's probably a sign they're not using it," Paul said. At El Cazador, hot water flowed quickly. Paul said hand-washing is one of the simplest things staff can do to keep food safe. Restaurant managers must take note of their employees' wellness to ensure they won't infect customers. Vomiting and diarrhea are the most important symptoms to look for. If staff have either of these symptoms, they must not work until 24 hours after the symptoms have resolved. Paul's advice: "If you've got an employee who's been taking a lot of bathroom breaks, and they come back looking pale, maybe you need to ask questions." He pulled one of three thermometers from his pocket to begin testing El Cazador's beans and sauces, making sure each bin's contents were safely above the 135-degree mark.

Gloria, who took a break from food prep, watched confidently as he measured. All were in the safe zone.

"What we try to do is we make very small batches (of beans, salsas and enchilada sauce) to make sure they don't go bad," Gloria said. "We make a whole new batch at dinnertime. That way, you don't deal with re-heating."

Checking temperatures in pots and fridges comprises a huge portion of the inspection. Thermometers should be calibrated every six months or they can become inaccurate, Paul said. He recently calibrated one of his thermometers and found it to be 15 degrees off.

Paul has a holster for his thermometers – infrared, waterproof and probe — but doesn't wear it. Not really his

What the Thermometers Reveal

After checking hot spaces, Paul moved to the Kimberly restaurant's fridges and freezers.

He opened a freezer and noticed a rectangular bin of chili peppers that had clearly gone bad. There wasn't a lid on the chilis, and unopened bags of food were lying on top, touching the chilis.

"What are these?" Paul wanted to know.

Gloria explained that the chilis weren't intended to be used for the restaurant. Since moving into the apartment upstairs, the Navarros have used some of the restaurant's cooler space for their own food. Gloria intended to throw it away but hadn't yet.

Paul marked down El Cazador for a critical violation: 3-701.11, Discarding or Reconditioning Unsafe, Adulterated, or Contaminated Food. Like most problems Paul encounters, it was corrected on site.

"I wasn't going to leave without her throwing those away," he said.

Next, Paul checked the dishwasher's temperature. Dishes must be sanitized either with bleach or something similar or with heat. Dishes must reach 160 degrees for at least 15 seconds, which means water temperature usually needs to be around 180 degrees.

"I'm only getting 148," Paul said. Gloria was surprised. The dishwasher repairman had serviced it only days earlier.

"I'm wondering if you're not getting the water up to the dish," Paul said.

Until the dishwasher is repaired, El Cazador would need to use sanitizer to ensure its dishes were clean, Paul told Gloria. He often suggests backup plans for owners to use until the problem can be fixed permanently. Paul gave the restaurant a "good retail practice" violation.

El Cazador received two other retail practice violations. One was for general cleanliness. The other was because the restroom door wasn't equipped with a spring that forces it to shut automatically.

Paul said he was surprised he had to mark down the restaurant for cleanliness.

Gloria had a molar removed this month which had dry-socket complications, leaving her in a lot of pain. Usually she runs the Kimberly restaurant, with limited staff, while Arcadio runs the Buhl location. But because his wife needed extra help, Arcadio was at the Kimberly store to help out when Paul showed up for the inspection.

It wasn't ideal timing.

'A Snapshot in Time'

Because Paul doesn't typically spend more than an hour at a restaurant, he warns that inspection results don't tell the whole story.

"Since I'm only here an hour out of the year, that's a snapshot in time," said Paul, noting restaurants usually are marked for one or two violations. "You could have a place doing everything wrong almost every day of the year, and the day I show up, it could be just fine. Or vice versa. You could have someone who is doing everything great, and they have a bad day."

It means that inspection reports give diners a glimpse into a 30- to 60-minute window during a 365-day span, and nothing more.

Gloria said last week's inspection was fair. She sees it as a chance to learn about new rules and guidelines that'll keep her customers healthy. For instance, Gloria didn't know the dangerzone definition had changed slightly from 41-138 degrees to 41-135 degrees. These numbers are posted in her kitchen so staff don't forget. While Paul was there, Gloria crossed out the old number with a marker and wrote in the new one.

"The Food Code is not there to be the big bad wolf," Paul said. "It's to ensure restaurants are serving safe food to their customers. For the most part, they want to do what's right."

When a reporter revisited the Kimberly restaurant on Monday, a repairman was at work on the dishwasher, and kitchen surfaces were shiny clean.

Eel Market Sizzles as Prices Hit $2k/lb in Maine

BY CLARKE CANFIELD Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine • Tiny translucent elvers - alienlooking baby eels the size of toothpicks, with big black eyes and spines - are mysterious creatures, floating thousands of miles from their birthplace in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean before ending up each spring in Maine's rivers and streams.

But there's no mystery about what's drawing hundreds of fishermen to riverbanks to catch the creatures during the two-month fishing season. The price of the eels has skyrocketed to unparalleled levels, with catches bringing up to $2,000 a pound.

A worldwide shortage of the prized dinner fare, imported in infancy from Maine to Asia to be raised in farm ponds, has buyers paying top dollar for the baby American eels. A pound of eels should be worth around $30,000 on the open market once grown to market size, according to Elver prices go up and down all the time, but nobody's seen them shoot up the way they have over the past two seasons. Last year, at $891 per pound, elvers became Maine's fourth mostvaluable wild fishery, worth more than well-known traditional fisheries such as groundfish, shrimp and scal-dealers are on edge about poachers, fishermen's safety, the secrecy of fishing spots and unwanted publicity. On top of all that, there's a move to have the eels protected by the Endangered Species Act.

Pre-season rumors had the price starting at $2,000 a pound, said longtime fisherman Bruce Steeves of Raymond, as he prepared his nets on a southern Maine river for a night of eel fishing on the season's opening day, March "And there's a prediction it'll goup from that. At $2,500 a pound, that's almost $1 per elver," Steeves said. "This is almost like liquid gold."

There are records of a commercial elver fishery in the U.S. dating back to at least the 1880s, but nowadays only two states allow it.

South Carolina allows fishing on just the Cooper River, and issues only 10 permits annually, seven of which are held by Mainers this year, said Allan Hazel of the state Division of Natural Resources. Hazel's getting calls this year from people in Korea, Taiwan, Japan and elsewhere, seeking to get in touch with fishermen and elver dealers.

But Maine is the elver breadbasket, so to speak, with 407 license holders who fish 525 nets in streams and rivers along the state's long ragged coast, working with the tides night and day.

Add Chia Seeds to Your Morning Smoothies

BY ALISON LADMAN

For The Associated Press

When soaked in water, chia seeds become plumped and gelatinous, with a texture similar to tapioca. And that makes them an ideal addition to smoothies.

In this recipe, the chia seeds give the smoothie a deliciously thick body and a mildly nutty taste that is complemented by the lime juice, basil and mango. But don't limit yourself to our flavors; soaked chia seeds can be added to any smoothie.

Basil Mango Lime Smoothie with Chia

Start to finish: 1 hour 10 minutes (10 minutes active). Servings: 4.

1 tablespoon chia seeds

1/2 cup water 2 tablespoons lime juice 2 tablespoons honey Finely chopped zest of 1/2 lime

4 fresh basil leaves 10-ounce package frozen mango chunks, thawed 2 cups fat-free vanilla yogurt

In a small bowl, combine the chia seeds, water and lime juice. Set aside for 1 hour to let the seeds plump and become gelatinous. In a blender combine the soaked chia seeds (with the liquid), honey, lime zest, basil, mango and yogurt. Blend until smooth. Serve immediately.

The Power of the Grill Sweetens Spring Asparagus

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL

For The Associated Press

I have always loved asparagus. But the minute I tasted grilled asparagus, it went from a vegetable I liked to one that I was madly in love

Every time I make it seasoned with my basic grilling trilogy of olive oil, salt and pepper — people ask for the recipe. That's because grilling transforms the asparagus so much that most people think I am pulling their leg when I tell them it has just those ingredients.

Most people don't realize what a powerful flavor enhancer the heat of the grill is. And this simple recipe really shows just how powerful it

It works because the high heat of the grill causes the natural sugars in the asparagus (as well as many other vegetables) to caramelize, accentuating its nutty, sweet

I prefer the thick bottomed stalks that snap instead of bend with tight tops and a plump green look to them. If you crave thin asparagus, save it for the saute pan. It's much too delicate to hold up to the grill. In fact, for grilling the thicker the stalk the better.

I usually buy asparagus the day I am going to cook it, but you can keep it fresh in the refrigerator the same way you keep parsley fresh – cut off the bottoms and place the entire bunch upright in a glass of water, similar to a bouquet of flowers.

When you are ready to cook it, you need to trim the bottoms. You have two options. You can snap the stalks one at a time. Or, if you've kept the bunch intact (usually held tight by a rubber band), lay it on its side on the cutting board and use a knife to cut just below the band.

I then wash my asparagus, dry it and place it in a zipclose plastic bag. Drizzle olive oil in the bag, seal it and "massage" the stalks so that all the exposed surfaces have a light coating of oil. This is essential for juicy grilled asparagus. Otherwise, it will dry out and might stick to the grates. My motto - oil the food, not the grates!

Grilled asparagus needs no adornment to enjoy, but in honor of spring ham I am 1 pound fresh thick wrapping the room-temperature grilled asparagus with translucent slices of Prosciutto for an antipasto appetizer all in one bite. You can take it even further and dress it up as a gorgeous salad with a dollop of buratta or fresh mozzarella and a drizzle of olive oil, coarse sea salt and cracked black pepper.

Prosciutto-Wrapped Grilled Spring Asparagus

Look for fat firm stalks with deep green or purplish tips. Also check the bottom of the spears. If they are dried up, chances are they have been sitting around for too long. Start to finish: 25 minutes. Servings: 8.

asparagus

2 to 4 tablespoons

extra-virgin olive oil 1 teaspoon kosher salt (use salt according to taste)

1/2 pound thinly sliced prosciutto

Heat the grill to medium. Trim off the tough bottoms of the asparagus spears. You can use a knife and cut them roughly twothirds of the way down, or by hand. For the latter methods, one at a time, grasp each stalk by both ends and bend it gently until it snaps at its natural point of tenderness. Wash and dry the spears.

Place the asparagus in a large zip-close plastic bag. Add enough oil to allow you to massage the spears and coat them entirely with olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and massage again. Leave the asparagus in the bag until ready to cook.

Place the asparagus on the cooking grate crosswise so they won't fall through. Grill for 8 to 12 minutes (depending on the size and thickness of the stalks), turning occasionally to expose all sides to the heat. The asparagus should begin to brown in spots (indicating that its natural sugars are caramelizing) but should not be allowed to char.

Remove from grill and let cool to room temperature. Wrap each stalk of grilled asparagus with a thin piece of prosciutto. Serve imme-

Quick Dinner: Almond-crusted Chicken Breasts

MATTHEW MEAD · ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Ground seeds and nuts are a weeknight cook's dream ingredient.

With virtually no effort from you, they add tons of protein-rich crunch and pack deep, savory flavors. Ground peanuts, for example, can be used to flavor meatballs and burgers or to coat meatloaf. Ground almonds can be combined with tomato sauce and chipotle peppers to make a Mexican mole sauce for chicken.

Ground cashews can be used to coat shrimp for baking. Ground pistachios are wonderful tossed with a bit of melted butter and sprinkled over salmon for roasting.

And ground nuts of just about any variety can be sprinkled over rice noodles tossed with shrimp or chicken for a peanut noodle-style

There are just a couple of pointers to consider when cooking with ground nuts or seeds. First, the point is to grind them only until they resemble coarse breadcrumbs, not reduce them to peanut butter. A food processor (use the pulse setting) is ideal for this. But in a pinch, you can do it by hand with a large knife on the cutting board.

Second, nuts and seeds stand up fine to baking, but not so well to broiling. The high fat content of most nuts and seeds makes them rather flammable. I once tried broiling a pan of scallops topped with crushed peanuts. They quickly burst into flames. Re-

One of my favorite ways to use ground nuts is in breading for baked chicken breasts. In this recipe, I give them a bit of kick with red pepper flakes, but use whatever seasonings vou like.

For the nuts, I used marcona almonds, which are a Spanish variety of almond that have a tender, butterysavory flavor quite different from conventional almonds. But you also could use ground pistachios or peanuts.

Marcona Almondcrusted Baked Chicken Breasts

To cut the fat in this recipe, you could substitute fatfree half-and-half for the heavy cream used to make the pan sauce. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

2 cups salted marcona almonds

1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes, to taste 1/4 cup panko

breadcrumbs 1/2 cup all-purpose flour 1 large egg, beaten

2 large boneless, skinless chicken breasts

1 tablespoon olive oil 4 ounces sliced button mushrooms

1 large yellow onion, diced 2 cloves garlic, minced 1 cup heavy cream 2 tablespoons chopped

fresh chives

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a baking sheet with cooking spray.

In a food processor, combine the almonds and red pepper flakes. Pulse until the almonds are coarsely ground, but not reduced to a paste. Transfer the mixture to a wide, shallow bowl. Mix in the breadcrumbs. Place the flour in a second bowl and the egg in a third.

One at a time, lay each chicken breast flat on the cutting board. Use a knife to carefully slice each in half horizontally to create 2 thin cutlets. Dredge each cutlet first through the flour, then the egg, and finally through the almondbreadcrumb mixture until well coated. Arrange on the baking sheet.

Bake the cutlets for 10 minutes, or until lightly browned and cooked through.

Meanwhile, in a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the mushrooms, onion and garlic and saute until the mushrooms are browned and any liquid that was released has evaporated, about 10 minutes. Stir in the cream, scraping the bottom of the pan. Season with salt and pepper, then stir in the chives.

Serve the chicken cutlets topped with the mushroom

A Strawberry-apricot Tart for Spring

BY ALISON LADMAN

For The Associated Press

Like the traditional French tarte tatin, this spring pastry has caramelized fruit cooked on the stove. It then is topped with a pastry, baked and flipped out of the pan.

The typical tarte tatin is made with apples, but our spring version opts for strawberries and dried apricots.

We've included easy instructions on how to make a delicious, all-butter blitz pastry. If you don't have the time, you can use purchased puff pastry, but the homemade version is definitely the star of this dessert.

Strawberry Apricot Tarte Tatin

Start to finish: 2 1/2 hours (1/2 hour active). Servings:

For the pastry:

2 cups all-purpose flour 1/2 cup cake flour

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch

1/4 teaspoon salt 1/3 cup ice water

1/4 cup water

For the topping: Two 16-ounce containers fresh strawberries, hulled and halved 2 teaspoons lemon juice Pinch of salt 1 cup sugar, divided 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter 7-ounce bag dried apricots 3 tablespoons cornstarch

To make the pastry, in a food processor combine both flours, the butter and the salt. Pulse until the butter is just distributed through the flour. It should remain in large pieces. Add the water and pulse again, just until distributed. Pulse 2 more times. The dough should still be crumbly and dry.

Pour the dough onto the counter. Press into a 8-by-12-inch rectangle. It's okay for it to be crumbly, just squeeze it together. Fold the dough in half, then use a rolling pin to roll it back to an 8-by-12-inch rectangle. Fold the dough in half again and place on a baking sheet. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 20 minutes.

While the pastry rests, in a medium bowl toss together the strawberries, lemon juice, salt and 1/2 cup of the sugar. Let sit for 10 minutes.

Once the pastry has rested, roll it out once again to an 8-by-12-inch rectangle. Repeat the folding and rolling process one more time, but this time roll it to a 10-inch round. Place the dough in the freezer (on a baking sheet if necessary) until the fruit is ready. Heat the oven to 400 de-

In a 9-inch oven-safe skillet over medium-high heat, melt the 1/4 cup of butter. Add the remaining 1/2 cup sugar and cook until it turns golden brown, about 10 minutes.

Add the apricots, strawberries and any juices from the bowl to the pan and continue cooking until the fruit is soft and begins to caramelize, about 8 to 10 minutes. This should be done at a medium-high to high heat so that the fruit caramelizes before it gets too soft.

In a small glass, stir together the cornstarch and water. Add to the skillet and stir gently to mix. Bring to a boil, then remove the skillet from the Place the pastry over the fruit, fitting it down tightly into the pan. Use a paring knife to cut several slits in the top center of the pastry. Bake until golden brown, about 30 to 35 minutes. Remove the tart from the oven and let sit for another 30 minutes to allow the filling to set up.

Run a knife around the edge of the skillet to loosen the pastry. Place a large serving plate or round platter over the pan and carefully but quickly overturn the pan so the plate is on the bottom. Lift the pan off the serving plate to reveal the tart. Serve warm or at room temperature.

A Light Touch Makes the Most of Spring Veggies

BY ALISON LADMAN

For The Associated Press

To make the most of tender spring vegetables, it's important to use a gentle touch at the stove.

This not only results in a more delicious dish, it's also usually much less work. This simple braise of chicken legs and spring vegetables is a great example. Though the chicken cooks for 30 minutes in chicken stock, the vegetables steam in the same pot for just a few minutes.

For maximum flavor, we brown the chicken in a heavy pan before deglazing with a bit of white wine. This adds all the flavorful browned bits to the sauce. If you prefer chicken breasts over dark meat, you could certainly substitute them for the legs. For best flavor, opt for bone-

For the sauce, we use

chicken stock rather than broth. Stocks are made with the flavorful bones, so they often have a deeper flavor than broths. You also can get stocks completely unsalted, unlike broths. This allows you to control the sodium you add to your dish. You should be able to find stocks alongside the broths and soups at the grocer.

Broccolini looks like baby broccoli on long, thin stalks. It's actually a hybrid of broccoli and Chinese kale, but with a mild, slightly peppery

Braised Chicken Legs with Spring Vegetables

Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active). Servings: 4.

1 tablespoon unsalted butter, room temperature 2 tablespoons all-purpose

1 tablespoon canola or vegetable oil

4 chicken legs, skin and excess fat removed (can also substitute a mix of drumsticks and thighs)

Salt and ground black pepper

2 large sweet onions, quartered

1/4 cup white wine 2 cups no-salt chicken stock

2 teaspoons dried thyme

1 bunch asparagus 1 bunch Broccolini

1 tablespoon cider vinegar

In a small bowl, mix together the butter and flour until completely smooth. Set aside.

In a heavy-bottomed pot over medium-high, heat the oil. Season the chicken legs with salt and pepper. Working in batches, cook the chicken legs until well browned, about 5 minutes per side. Transfer the chicken to a plate.

Add the onions to the pot and brown for 8 minutes. Add the wine and scrape the bottom of the pan to loosen any browned bits. Return the chicken legs to the pan along with the stock and thyme. Bring to a low simmer, then cover. Reduce heat to low and simmer until the chicken legs are tender, about 30 min-

When the chicken is cooked, place the asparagus and Broccolini over the chicken and cover. Allow the vegetables to steam for 4 to 5 minutes, or until just tender and bright

Transfer the chicken legs and vegetables to a platter. Increase the heat to medium-high and whisk in the flour and butter mixture. Continue whisking until the mixture thickens, about 3 minutes. Whisk in the vinegar, then season with salt and pepper. Pour the sauce over the chicken and vegetables.

Chia Seeds: Not Just for 'Fur' on Clay Critters

BY MICHELE KAYAL For The Associated Press

After decades adorning everything from a zoo-worthy collection of clay critters to presidential busts, ch-ch-ch-chia seeds finally are ready to ditch the kitsch.

Because in recent years these tiny black seeds have gone from an as-seen-on-TV punch line to a must-have ingredient in the natural foods world, taking starring roles in smoothies, health drinks, energy bars, crackers, cereal, granola, even pasta.

"People think 'chia' in the U.S. and they think 'green hair on a terra cotta figurine;" said Peter Georgii, new product manager for San Franciscobased Joseph Enterprises Inc., which created the Chia Pet in 1981 and recently released an edible seed product. "What's becoming known now is the benefits to your diet."

Packed with omega-3 fatty acid — more than flax seed — along with fiber, calcium and antioxidants, the native Mexican seed is being touted by runners, yoga moms and all manner of other health-conscious eaters.

Sales of edible chia have skyrocketed during the past two years, retailers and specialty food experts say, driven at least in part by an overall growing interest in so-called ancient grains, such as quinoa and amaranth.

Bob's Red Mill, a national grain seller based in Milwaukie, Ore., began carrying chia in 2009. Sales last year saw quadruple growth, said vice president of sales Robert Agnew, and already show signs of continued growth this year.

Joseph Enterprises began selling edible seeds in a few hundred CVS and Walgreens drug stores last year, Georgii said, and now sells them in thousands of stores, as well as online.

"In the last year, they've really jumped in popularity;" said Kara Nielsen, trend analyst with California-based product developer CCD Innovation, who first identified chia's trend potential in 2006. She credits recent publicity from television health gurus, athletes and online chatter with fueling the popularity.

"When you start having these different groups, you're talking about a lot of people," Nielsen said. "The press will also keep rippling this out and it will get broader and broader."

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Health food aficionados have likely known about chia since the mid-2000s, when people such as natural health personality Dr. Andrew Weil first began talking about them. Runners got on board thanks to the 2009 book "Born to Run" by Christopher McDougall, which credited the seeds as a source of sustenance for Mexico's Tarahumara Indians, who run hundreds of miles.

"It really can be traced to that book," said Joanna Golub, senior editor at Runner's World magazine. "That's when a wider audience of runners became aware of it. It's always been on the fringe, but that's when it came up on the radar for all sorts of runners."

The seeds — which resemble poppy seeds — have become an especially popular addition to drinks. That's because when soaked in water, the seeds develop a gelatinous coating, giving them the texture of tapioca. Add them to a drink and the result is similar to Japanese bubble tea

— a thick beverage full of floating, jelly-like balls.

They are a common addition to kombucha, a popular health drink. And Empellon, an upscale Mexican restaurant in New York, even featured them in a cocktail.

"It adds a cool texture that's definitely an acquired taste," says Christine Muhlke, executive editor of Bon Appetit magazine, who abandoned flax for chia. "And it gives that little halo of health."

Oh, and as for the Chia Pets? They haven't gone anywhere. They flood into stores during the holidays and are available all year online. And Georgii says sales today are sometimes even stronger than in the heyday of "Chia Guy" and "Chia Ram."

But seeds — the ones you eat — are the future.

"Dietary chia will outpace the Chia Pet," Georgii said. But he warns not to go pilfering from the pet's packet. Those seeds aren't grown, packed, stored or quality checked for human consumption. "People should not eat the seeds sold in the pets," he says.

Natural Peanut Butter Bounty

BY HEIDI STEVENS
Chicago Tribune (MCT)

Peanut butter is never an easy purchase. Allow your mind to wander for a split second and poof! You're bringing reduced-fat crunchy home to a full-fat smooth crowd. There was a time when unwittingly grabbing the "natural" stuff could send certain households (mine) into fits of wailing and distress. The oil! The stirring! The no taste!

No more. All the major brands have natural varieties now: The upside being somebody discovered a way to reduce the number of ingredients while also eliminating the layer of oil that used to sit messily on top. The downside being peanut butter shopping is more time-consuming than ever.

How does one choose from such a bounty of peanut butter riches?

For starters, let's discuss what "natural" means. The ingredients list for regular peanut butter usually reads like this: peanuts, sugar, molasses, fully hydrogenated vegetable oils (cottonseed, rapeseed and soybean), mono and diglycerides, salt. On natural labels, the ingredients list is peanuts, sugar, palm oil, salt.

Sugar remains the second ingredient in natural varieties, but adds up to just 3 grams per 2-tablespoon serving in every major brand, which is the same amount found in regular. (Natural brands whose only ingredients are dry roasted peanuts have 1 gram of sugar.) Sodium doesn't change much either — 150 milligrams per serving is almost universal, natural or non. Jif Natural is the exception, with 80 mg sodium per 2-tablespoon serving, compared to 140 mg in its regular creamy and 115 mg in its regular crunchy.

The all-important question then is: Which one tastes the best? We set out to find an answer and, unfortunately, one eluded us. But the good news is they're all pretty darn good.

We presented a group of five 6-year-olds with four brands of natural: Skippy, Jif, Planters and Peter Pan. We spread a taste-size portion of each on graham crackers and asked the kids to rank them on a scale of 1 to 5 (5 is best). THE RESULTS:

First place: Jif and Skippy (tied) 5 points.

Second place: Peter Pan, 4.2 points.

Third place: Planters, 4 points.

3 Yeasts Give Rise to Confusion

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS

McClatchy Newspapers

Question: What's the difference between regular yeast, quick-rising yeast and the new pizza dough yeast? When I make dough, I can't tell a difference between regular and quick-rising.

Answer: Peter Reinhart, the bread and pizza expert and a chef-instructor for Johnson & Wales University, helped us figure out the difference between regular and quick-rising or instant yeast, sometimes called bread machine yeast.

read machine yeast. "Instant yeast doesn't need to be dissolved in advance in warm water," he says. "Active dry yeast requires blooming it first in warm water to dissolve the crystals." Since that saves a step, it makes it quicker and also simplifies mixing a dough.

However, Reinhart wasn't familiar with pizza dough yeast, which is fairly new. While we have heard from pizza fans that it does yield faster results, we wonder if it may be shorter on flavor develop-

Allowing dough to rise slowly, even overnight, allows fermentation that d- gives better flavor to the dough. So dough made with a faster yeast is probably an improvement over frozen pizza, but it may not be as good as dough that gets more rising time.

North By South for Declo Duo

Robinson

BY RYAN HOWE rhowe@magicvalley.com

DECLO • Two Declo senior athletes have decided their college destinations, albeit in two different directions. One will take her volleyball seven hours north; the other will pack her basketball five hours south.

Keva Robinson will play volleyball at University of Great Falls in Montana, and Sydney Webb will play basketball at Snow College in Ephraim, Utah.

Webb, who averaged a double-double in points and rebounds for three straight years, carried Declo to three straight Class 2A District IV championships. As a senior averaging 18 points and 13 rebounds per game, the 5-11 forward led the Hornets to a third-place finish at state.

"It's always been a dream of mine to go on and play, so over the years I had to work harder and think, if I want to play college basketball I have to work at this (fundamental) and get better at certain skills that I'll need," said Webb, who earned second team allstate recognition as a junior and senior.

The Snow Badgers are coming off their first Region 18 Tournament championship and first NJCAA national tournament appearance in school history under first-year head coach Natalie Visger.

Snow first caught sight of Webb during a chance encounter in Twin Falls in January. The Badgers were in town playing College of Southern Idaho and happened to stop the same restaurant Webb was eating at after a road game in Fil-

"At the next level it's all girls that love basketball and are really talented. I'm excited to play with a bunch of good players," said Webb.

Robinson, two-time Canyon Conference selection, averaged about 13 kills, 11 digs and three aces per match as a senior, leading Declo to the 2A District IV title. She is also a standout for Club Canyon volleyball team.

"Definitely playing club helped me get ready for the next level because at club I'm with girls who all have the same dream I want, to go play college," said Robinson. "You're around the best players form our area and we go to national tournaments and play against other really good teams. It's a whole different level of competition."

An NAIA program, the UGF Argos were 22-10 last season, 6-8 in the Frontier Conference.

"The training is going to be really hard, but that's what I'm looking forward to the most," said Robinson, who plans to major in health and human performance. "It's going to be a big step up and I'm going to have to work 10 times harder. I'm excited for that."

Now Harris is finally on a roll offensively, and it comes at a critical time, with eight games left and Utah (30-28) trying to sneak into the playoffs. Entering Tuesday, the Jazz were 1 ½ games out of the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot.

"He's been making timely 3-pointers for us of late," Jazz coach Tyrone Corbin said Tuesday.

Can the 6-foot-3 guard keep it going, especially with the Jazz starting a threegame road trip Wednesday in Houston? "I think he can," Corbin said of Harris, who averages 10.9 points, five assists and 1.7 rebounds a game. "He's worked his butt off all year to get to this point and now the work is starting to pay off for him."

Harris has averaged 23.7 points a game in the last three, and has made 11 of 22 3-pointers in that span.

But his breakout probably came in the last meeting with the Rockets on Feb. 29, when he was sick to his stomach. He had 19 points in that blowout win before leaving in the third quarter, prompting big man Al Jefferson to proclaim: "That's the Devin I used to love and hate (in Dal-

SPARTANS SWEEP BOBCATS

Burley jumped out to a 5-0 lead in Game 1; however, as they've done several times this season, the Bobcats blew a late-inning lead and lost 16-5.

The Spartans continued to roll in Game 2, earning a 14-2 victory.

Sisters Chance and Cheyenne Hegsted had a monster day at the plate. Chance was a combined 8-for-11, while Cheyenne went 8-for-10 with six RBIs.

"The key is to keep your eye on the ball and be patient," Cheyenne Hegsted said. "You have to be patient with pitches that are a little bit slower and we just managed to stay back."

The senior catcher had an explanation for Minico's slow start, too.

"I think it was mostly because we had a hard time after the Canyon Ridge loss (Saturday) and we just had to shake it off," Cheyenne Hegsted said. "I think a little of it was (underestimating) them because of

Minico exploded with a nine-run sixth inning. Breeann Bingham finished 3-for-6 with three RBIs and Hanna Munns contributed a double, triple and an RBI.

In Game 2, the Spartans took advantage of three consecutive Burley errors to put up four runs in the second inning and the Bobcats didn't have much fight after that.

"We've just got to play a whole game," said Burley coach Tim Campbell. "... We can't break down completely and start making errors. That's our biggest issue right now, after a few mistakes are made it seems we have a hard time recuperating and getting out of an inning."

Minico (6-5 overall, 4-2 GBC) plays Twin Falls in a three-game series Thursday and Friday.

the Bronco fans that show up can create a game-like noise level.

Having missed four games due to injury last year, including the Broncos' stunning 35-34 upset to TCU on the blue, Taylor might disagree slightly on the adversity part.

Although Taylor ended last season by returning an interception 100 yards for a touchdown in the Las Vegas Bowl against Arizona State, he wants to be remembered this season as an all-Mountain West cornerback.

"Definitely that and really taking my game to another level, whether it's making more turnovers and get the ball back for our offense or just making more tackles," Taylor said. "I just always want to be by the ball."

On the flip side is a player like middle linebacker Blake Renaud, who saw meaningful time on the field last year, mostly on special teams. Having arrived in Boise last summer, this is his first taste of spring ball, and his name is consistently mentioned by coaches as a player who has "stepped up" in the spring.

"I know my plays now," Renaud said. "I don't have to think (as much), I already know it."

That knowledge is important at his position, which has no use or need for wallflower personalities.

"Blake is very physical, but not a very vocal guy, but he's becoming more vocal," Kwiatkowski said. "Your linebackers and safeties, they have to communicate a lot of stuff. But he's getting more comfortable with the calls and the formations."

"I feel like there's no pressure on me," said Renaud, when asked to compare the similarities between his quests for a starting spot as a sophomore at national prep power Concord (Calif.) De La Salle vs. one at Boise State. "I just go out there and play."

No Rest From Recruiting for Coach Gosar

BY STEPHEN MEYERS smeyersmagicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Whether it's talking to potential College of Southern Idaho recruits or Division I coaches asking him about his current players, CSI head coach Steve Gosar is rarely found without his iPhone next to his year.

"I need to keep the dang thing at the office," Gosar said. "The kids are the hard ones to reach, so they call the coaches. I'm talking to coaches all day long, answering questions about my guys, setting up visits for the players. It's a busy time."

Today marks the first day of the regular signing period for athletes to sign National Letters of Intent with Division 1 schools, and Sunday was the first day for players to sign with JUCO programs.

Fabyon Harris has already committed to Texas A&M and he's one of potentially eight Golden Eagles who will move on to four-year programs. Several of those players have scheduled official visits this week including: Pat Swilling (Drake), Gerson Santo (Middle Tennessee State), Paul Egwuonwu (Montana State), Paul Bunch (Emporia State) and Kevin Attila (California Baptist).

Rafriel Guthrie returned Tuesday from a visit to Maryland's Towson University, and is expected to sign with the Tigers. Santo visited Washington State of the Pac-12 this past weekend and possibly has another visit planned to Eastern Illinois.

Freshman Luke Cothron has garnered interest all season from UNLV and Memphis and Gosar said he'll take visits in the coming weeks. Swilling, who underwent surgery on his broken wrist Tuesday, has interest from Appalachian State and Mississippi State, while Bunch also lists Alabama A&M and Kent State as possible destinations.

Gosar, who is in Phoenix recruiting this week, locked up one recruit for 2012-13 in James Reid, a 6-3 guard from Bend, Ore., who averaged 20.1 points, 5.1 rebounds and 7.1 assists for Mountain View High School this season

"He's a good, sturdy player, who really has a good understanding of the game and can shoot the ball," Gosar said.

Reid tripped to CSI twice – the first time in February when CSI played Salt Lake and again last weekend when former CSI great Pierre Jackson was in town. Both times, Reid came away impressed with the program. "CSI is the deal here. You see the logo when you come into Twin, the games are always packed. You really are in a fishbowl," Reid said. "I got to see Pierre at the restaurant and you could see how he was interpreted and received by the community. You can tell that CSI basketball is a big deal and I'm thankful that I'm going to be a part of it."

Harris Named NJCAA All-American

Harris capped off an impressive sophomore season where he averaged 17.1 points and 5.1 rebounds with NJCAA All-American first team honors on Tuesday.

Guthrie was named an honorable mention All-American for the second straight year.

Other Scenic West Athletic Conference honorees included Travis Wilkins (Snow College, third team) and Chase Flint (USU-Eastern, honorable mention). Former CSI guard Jerrold Brooks earned second team honors with Casper (Wyo.) College.

On the women's side, Priscila Santos of USU-Eastern Utah earned first team All-American honors, while North Idaho's Korina Baker was named to the second team. Sofia Hepworth (Salt Lake) and Erica Martinez (Snow College) were both named honorable mention.

CSI Women Sign Two

Marsh Valley's Sarah Viehweg and West Jefferson's Cassidy Skidmore two of CSI's four Idaho commits for 2012-13 - officially joined the Golden Eagles on Tuesday after signing their letters of intent.

Viehweg was named the Class 3A All-Idaho player of the year after averaging 12.8 points, 10.2 rebounds, 2.7 blocks and 1.7 steals.

She led Marsh Valley to the state championship this season, where she scored a game-high 23 points in the Eagles' 64-47 win over Timberlake.

The 5-7 Skidmore was a Class 2A All-Idaho secondteam selection this season and is a strong ballhandler, said CSI women's head coach Randy Rogers.

"Sarah is really a banger inside, a post player who will mix it up inside and is an efficient scorer," Rogers said. "Cassidy can really handle the ball and I expect her to come in and help solidify that point guard position."

CSI's other two Idaho commits - Dietrich's Moriah Dill and Rigby's Alli Furniss — are both expected to sign early next week, said Rogers, who will be in Los Angeles this weekend on a recruiting trip. As for the CSI sophomores looking to move on to four-year schools, Rogers said his players are weighing their options and taking visits. Mechela Barnes visited Seattle Pacific this past weekend and Tayllor Gipson has interest from Cal State Bakersfield. Kylee Schierman has interest from Northwest Nazerene in Nampa and Rogers has been showcasing Chakala Carthen to schools across the country.

Seattle starting pitcher Blake Beavan pitches during the first inning the Mariners' game Tuesday against

Rangers Blank Mariners, 1-0

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas • Neftali Feliz pitched seven crisp innings in his first major league start and David Murphy had an RBI single for the only run in the Rangers' 1-0 victory against Seattle.

Feliz (1-0) allowed four hits, struck out four and walked two in his first game since the former closer failed to hold a tworun lead in Game 6 of the World Series. The Cardinals won in seven games.

Feliz was a shade better than Blake Beavan, who was pitching for the first time in the ballpark where he grew up watching the Rangers.

Beavan (0-1) gave up six hits in 61-3 innings.

TIGERS 5, RAYS 2 DETROIT • Miguel Cabrera doubled and scored on Prince Fielder's single, part of a snowy eighth-inning rally that gave Detroit a win over Tampa Bay.

BLUE JAYS 7, RED SOX 3 TORONTO • Kyle Drabek pitched into the sixth inning and Edwin Encarnacion homered to lead Toronto to the victory.

YANKEES 5, ORIOLES 4, 12 INNINGS

BALTIMORE • Raul Ibanez doubled in the tiebreaking run in the 12th inning, and New York overcame a three-run deficit and a wild performance by starter Freddy Garcia.

National League CARDINALS 3, REDS 1

CINCINNATI • Carlos Beltran and David Freese homered again on Tuesday night, and Kyle Lohse provided another stingy performance, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Beltran, counted on to help make up for the loss of Albert Pujols, hit his third homer off Mike Leake (0-1). Freese, the World Series MVP, added a two-run shot off Leake — also his third.

BRAVES 6, ASTROS 4 HOUSTON • Chipper Jones came off the disabled list and began his final season in the majors with a single and a two-run homer to help Atlanta top Houston for its first win.

The nearly 40-year-old Jones singled in his first atbat and hit a left-handed homer — the 455th of his career — in the third inning to put the Braves up 3-1.

DODGERS 2, PIRATES 1 LOS ANGELES • Andre Ethier hit a tiebreaking homer with two outs in the eighth inning, sending Los Angeles to a victory over Pittsburgh in their home opener.

Exactly 50 years after Dodger Stadium opened, Ethier hit a solo shot on his 30th birthday, a drive into the right-field stands off Jason Grilli (0-1).

NATIONALS 6, METS 2 NEW YORK • Ross Detwiler pitched five scoreless innings and Washington handed New York its first loss on the same night they learned David Wright has a broken a finger.

BREWERS 7, CUBS 4 CHICAGO • Alex Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in Milwaukee's five-run first inning, sending the Brewers to a victory over rival Chicago.

Since then, not a sniff, not in New Jersey after he was traded for Jason Kidd in 2008; not when he was an NBA All-Star in 2009; and not last year with the Jazz after the February trade.

"As a young player, you kind of take it for granted, making the playoffs every year," said Harris, now in his eighth season. "It's been quite a while."

While Utah's management has embraced him and staved off all the new Harris trade rumors, he acknowledges it's taken a while for him to settle in with the Jazz.

"I've had flashes, especially the second part of the season after the All-Star break," Harris said of playing up to his old level. "But I'm trying to find a level of consistency." As Harris goes, so do the Jazz, and an up-tempo attacker is the player Utah needs. He's playing with the speed that earned him a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records in 2009 as the fastest to go baseline to baseline. "On a good day, I could match it, yeah," Harris said. Corbin wouldn't doubt

"It's his speed," he said. "He's doing a great job of pushing the ball down the floor. His confidence in his jump shot has gotten better this year because he's making shots. But he uses his speed to get on top of the basket and break defenses down, and he can finish in the lane."

Harris went on a personal 11-0 run in the fourth quarter Monday night to spark Utah's 91-84 win over the star-less San Antonio Spurs. It was the third time this season he's had a personal 10-0 run in the fourth quarter.

It was an abrupt ending for Petrino, who had built Arkansas into a Southeastern Conference and national power over four seasons, including a 21-5 record the past two years. But Long made it clear that the success on the field was overshadowed by repeated deceptive acts and that no one was more important than the program itself.

Long said Petrino was fired "with cause" - meaning he will not receive a multimilliondollar buyout - and there were no discussions about ways to keep Petrino at Arkansas. Long declined comment when asked about Dorrell's job status.

Petrino finishes his tenure at Arkansas with a 34-17 record in four seasons, leading the Razorbacks to a No. 5 final ranking last season and a Cotton Bowl win over Kansas State.

He did not immediately issue a statement.

Today's Highlight:

On April 11, 1862, the Civil War Battle of Fort Pulaski in Chatham County, Ga., ended a day after it began as the fort fell to Union forces.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1814, Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated as Emperor of the French and was banished to the island of Elba.

In 1899, the treaty ending the Spanish-American War was declared in effect. In 1912, Crosley Field, the longtime home of the Cincinnati Reds, had its opening day under its original name, Redland Field. (The Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 10-6.)

In 1921, Iowa became the first state to impose a cigarette tax, at 2 cents a pack-

In 1945, during World War II. American soldiers liberated the notorious Nazi concentration camp Buchenwald in Germany.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman relieved Gen. Douglas MacArthur of his commands in the Far East. In 1962, President John F.

Kennedy held a press conference in which he angrily denounced plans by United States Steel and other steel producers to raise prices (the companies ended up backing down). The New York Mets played their first game, losing to the host St. Louis Cardinals 11-4. In 1970, Apollo 13, with astronauts James A. Lovell, Fred W. Haise and Jack Swigert, blasted off on its illfated mission to the moon. In 1979, Idi Amin was deposed as president of Ugan-backed by Tanzanian forces seized control. In 1981, President Ronald Reagan returned to the White House from the hospital, 12 days after he was wounded in an assassination attempt. Race-related rioting erupted in the Brixton district of south London. In 2009, Susan Boyle, a middle-aged volunteer church worker, wowed judges and audiences alike with her rendition of "I Dreamed a Dream" on the British TV show "Britain's Got Talent." Ten years ago: U.S. Rep. James A. Traficant Jr., D-Ohio, was convicted of taking bribes and kickbacks from businessmen and his own staff. (Traficant was later expelled from Congress and sentenced to eight years in prison; he was released in September 2009.) Venezuelan police battled protesters demanding President Hugo Chavez's ouster.

Five years ago: North Carolina's top prosecutor dropped all charges against three former Duke University lacrosse players accused of sexually assaulting a stripper at a party, saying the athletes were innocent victims of a "tragic rush to accuse." MSNBC announced it was dropping its simulcast of the "Imus in the Morning" radio program, responding to growing outrage over host Don Imus' on-air reference to the Rutgers women's basketball team as "nappyheaded hos." (CBS Radio followed suit the next day.) Death claimed author Kurt Vonnegut in New York at age 84 and actor Roscoe Lee Browne in Los Angeles at age

One year ago: A bloody, four-month standoff in the West African nation of Ivory Coast ended when troops loyal to the elected president routed and captured his rival, Laurent Gbagbo, the longtime strongman who'd lost the vote but refused to give up power. A subway bombing in Minsk, Belarus, claimed 15 lives.

IF APRIL 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your highly ambitious nature is capable of great achievement during the year to come. Pay attention to the new acquaintances you meet during the next several weeks. You can obtain sound advice and widen your scope of influence by networking with like-minded people. Ward off potential business or career setbacks in September by sticking to what you know and not taking any risks. In November and December you can move forward with new projects, plans, and ambitions and expect a certain amount of success with anything you begin. If you are looking for a new romantic partner you may form a friendship that has lifelong potential.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you want to hit the nail and drive home a point, you must aim for it. If you put half the effort into your work, career, or business that you put into being argumentative or vague you build something worthy.

TAURÜS (April 20-May 20): Catch a case of cultural improvement. New ideas can go viral and brighten your day. You can exercise your mind as much as your body and perhaps with much better results. Make no investment decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't sit under the apple tree with anyone else. Those little indiscretions can drop on your head like apples and give you a headache. If you give into a temptation or a whim, you may regret it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Gently push your foot in the door. Taking the initiative can make the difference between winning and losing. Do not sign an agreement or a contract because all the facts might not be available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Confidence levels yo-yo. A partner or associate might be highly competitive and make you feel inferior. Some talents are not at your disposal, but others you have but are not utilizing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Magpies like to gather shiny, worthless objects to line their nests. Learn a lesson from the magpie and don't be tempted to take home every shiny object you find. Your money can be better spent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If it can't be cured it must be endured. There might be great benefits in being patient and not giving in to impulses. What seems incredibly enticing or aggravating will not be an issue very long.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leave them before you love them. Even if a new romantic conquest appears willing, or an offer you can't refuse is presented, pass it up. Such attractions will leave you high and dry in a SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your personal charm attracts plenty of moths to your flame. The moths, however, are pests that will leave a mess behind. You may enjoy admiration, but the flutter of their wings blocks your light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't jump in with both eyes closed. It will pay, during the next several days, to make sure that all financial transactions are aboveboard. Take steps to improve your long-term financial security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): High ideals may motivate you to make the world a better place. You might overlook the fact however that achieving your goals require skills you lack. Don't bite off more than you can chew.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You just want love. In your efforts to please everyone or feel attractive, however, you might alienate someone crucial to your happiness. Be careful not to give anyone any reason to doubt your trustworthiness.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Doubts are more cruel than the worst of truths."

— Moliere

Today's problem is a defensive one, so put yourself in the West seat. South is declarer in six no-trump after opening one no-trump. North showed five spades, then offered a choice of small slams with his jump to five no-trump, rejecting South's suggestion of diamonds as a place to

You, West, lead the club queen, which declarer wins in dummy and plays a spade to his jack. Plan the defense.

You know that partner has no points at all. If you win the spade ace, you can be sure that declarer will be able to test spades with impunity before examining his other chances. Since the spades do split, declarer will surely come to 12 tricks. However, just because YOU know spades split, does not mean declarer can be as confident of this!

If you refuse to win your spade ace on this round and the next (perhaps even throwing in an echo with your small cards just to try to persuade declarer that things are not going his way), South will not know that spades are breaking. He may decide to test diamonds first. When they fail to break, he will go back to spades (hoping that the spades break and that whoever has the ace was originally short in diamonds), but now you will be able to win your ace and cash a diamond trick for down one.

Ducking the spade is not sure to defeat the hand; winning it is sure to let the slam come home.

ANSWER: There are two attractive choices here. You might jump to three no-trump, suggesting a balanced hand with a good heart stop. Or you can bid two diamonds, natural and forcing, planning to bid no-trump later. I strongly prefer the second choice, since we might find out about an absence of spade stops for no-trump, or we might get to a club or diamond slam.

DEAR ABBY: What's the best thing to do when someone insults me for being myself? My hair has been bright blue for the last two semesters of college. I like it. I'm young, and my family is letting me express my "wild" side while I'm in school.

Six months ago I went to meet my ex-boyfriend's mother, and the first thing she said to me was, "You're one of my son's phases, right? Boys don't actually bring girls with blue hair home to Mama." Abby, it was with my ex's encouragement that I dyed my hair this bright color.

My family, my church and most of my teachers think it's OK. Is there a social stigma attached to exotically dyed hair? And what's the best way to react when someone insults me for just being myself? - NICE PERSON

IN WALLAND, TENN. DEAR NICE PERSON:

Whether there's a stigma attached to looking different depends on who is doing the looking. Some people your ex-boyfriend's mother, for instance - find it offputting. Did you tell her that it was with her son's encouragement that you dyed your hair blue? It would have been interesting to see her reaction. It would also be interesting to know what shade his current girlfriend's hair

When others comment about the unusual color of your hair, instead of treating it as an insult, smile and say, "Don't judge a book by its cover." Then change the sub-

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 26 years. I love him, but he's a terrible listener. He's not that way with everyone. When we're out socializing, he's a good conversationalist and a polite listener. It's when we are home that he never lets me finish a sentence. When we're alone, I can't express a complete opinion or thought without being interrupted halfway through a word or sentence. He just cuts me off and starts

I'm an intelligent woman with valid opinions, but he would rather hear the sound of his own voice than mine. How do I get him to let me husband controlling in other aspects of your relationship? If not, the problem may be that you have been together so long he thinks he knows where your sentences are going, so he responds before you complete your entire thought. One way to handle this would be to tell vour husband how patronized it makes you feel when he does it. Another would be to interrupt HIM by saying, "Excuse me! I wasn't finished talking." Or, "You finished my sentence, but that wasn't what I was going to

DEAR ABBY: My sister, "Beth," and I are very close, but a constant source of contention is her boyfriend, "Brody." Beth and Brody have broken up several times, and each time it happens, she fills me in on every horrible thing he has ever

They always seem to get back together, and then Beth expects me to like him de-

pring is such an exciting season. As the cold winter months melt away, buds begin to blossom and fresh fruits begin to make an appearance. From the first tiny strawberries to a profusion of blueberries, blackberries, and raspberries, these sweet and colorful fruits make for a deliciously simple starring role in homemade desserts.

"I live an area of California known for its abundance of fresh produce. The beginning of the berry season is always my favorite time," Stephanie Gallo, third generation Galfamily member. "These tiny fruits burst with so much flavor. They are so easy to use in baked goods. Pairing them with a light bodied, sweet wine is a fantastic way to end a great meal."

Gallo Family Vineyards' Taste of Home recipe collection has a signature Tiny Berry Tartlets recipe that's showcase these jewels of the garden. The warm flaky crust makes the perfect complement to nature's sweetest flavors. Try serving this scrumptious dessert with Gallo Family Vineyards' light bodied Pink Moscato. Its bouquet of flavors including white peaches, passion fruit and honeydew melon make it a wonderful pairing.

Gallo Family Vineyards stands behind every bottle of wine it produces with the Best Taste Promise. If you are not completely satisfied with the quality of the wine that you've chosen to share with your guests, Gallo Family Vineyards invites you to share your thoughts at their official website. It's just one of the many ways Gallo Family Vineyards maintains its 75 year tradition of producing the highest quality wines at a reasonable price.

sheet of phyllo on top of the first, brush with third of the butter, and sprinkle with the remaining half of the almond/sugar mixture. Place the third phyllo sheet on top, brush with melted butter and sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

With a sharp paring knife or kitchen shears, cut the layered dough into 12 squares. Gently press each square into a prepared muffin cup to create a freeform tartlet. Bake the tartlets for 5 minutes or until just golden. Let cool in the pans completely. (The tartlet crusts can be made up to 2 days in advance and kept in an airtight container.)

To assemble the tartlets, gently remove each tartlet from the muffin pan and place on a serving tray or plate. Place a generous teaspoon of lemon curd in each tartlet. Dip the berries into the syrup with a slotted spoon and mound them on the lemon curd. Serve immediately.
