Long-serving Senator Faces Challenger in Dist. 27

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

BURLEY • Experience and seniority versus fresh ideas. In the newly formed District 27, which includes Minidoka and Cassia counties, newcomer and Oakley rancher Douglas Pickett is challenging Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, in the May 15 primary.

Pickett

With Declo Sen. Denton Darrington's retirement this session, Cameron would be the most senior member of the Idaho Senate. With that comes influence, Cameron said. If re-elected, Cameron would be able to retain his co-chairmanship on the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, where he has helped balance the state's budget during difficult economic times.

"Everything in the Senate is done strictly by seniority," Cameron said. "And a new individual would not have the kind of influence or the ability to protect our priorities, our rural priorities." That includes water and agriculture issues, which Cameron has helped to fund, he said.

But, Pickett said, seniority isn't everything. The Senate needs new ideas, not someone who is tied into the establishment, he said.

"We have an opportunity now to vote for somebody who will go and look for solutions to problems, rather than simply trying to appease special interests or decide things based on political expediency," Pickett said, adding that he sees himself as the true conservative candidate.

In Idaho, the salary for state senators is $16,116 per year, plus living expenses during the legislative session. State senators serve a two-year term.

In the meantime, staff members are doing their best to take care of residents in a facility where the phone lines and the fire system have been turned off.

Assisted Living Concepts — the Wisconsin-based company that owns Chaparelle House — shut off the phone lines Friday despite pleas from interim managers to keep them on, said Rick Holloway, president of Western Health Care.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare hired Western Health Care to close down the facility after it lost its license last week during an inspection.

ULTRASOUND LEGISLATION CONTINUES ON

Ultrasound still seen as tool in fight against abortion.

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Among a sea of baby dresses and posters showing fetal development at the Twin Falls Pregnancy Crisis Center sits a new, high-tech ultrasound machine, capable of giving both abdominal and transvaginal ultrasounds.

To Pregnancy Crisis Center Director Marilyn Scott, the ultrasound machine is one of the center's most important tools in the fight against abortion.

The volunteer staff is still receiving training to use the machine — so it is not yet in use on a regular basis.

But Scott said that in her experience, clients set on getting abortions have changed their mind upon seeing the blurry black and white image of their fetus on the ultrasound monitor. That's why she and others worked for five years to fundraise to bring an ultrasound machine into their office.

It's a battle Scott and the volunteers at the Pregnancy Crisis Center have been quietly waging for years and won't give up on any time soon.

In March, Scott drove to Boise to testify in favor of legislation what would require women to have an ultrasound before getting an abortion, saying that ultrasounds might persuade women not to go through with the procedure.

The bill never passed, and though the legislative session has been over for almost three weeks, Idahoans are still talking about the proposed mandate. And already, opponents and

- Women must receive three pamphlets that include information on fetal development and abortion alternatives.
- Doctors must offer to allow women to view an ultrasound image of the fetus.
- One parent must give consent before minors get an abortion.
- No abortions after 20 weeks except when the mother's life is in danger.
- Insurance cannot cover the cost of abortion, except when the woman's life is in danger or if an additional premium is paid.

Twin Falls Council Asks about Canyon Project Appeal

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls City Council next week will get information from how to appeal approval of a preliminary plat for the planned Canyon Park North development on the Snake River Canyon rim.

That came after questions Monday about how such an appeal would work, following concerns voiced by residents over the project, a planned shopping center.

During Monday's public comment period, Cheri Condie spoke against the project. Mayor Greg Lanting then asked if there was any way the public or council could appeal the Planning and Zoning Commission's approval of the development's plat.

Lanting said he'd heard from several citizens over the past week wondering about an appeal.

"I think it is safe to say this is a passionate issue by both sides," said City Manager Travis Rothweiler, asking the council to wait until consulting legal counsel before making a decision on how to proceed.

Also Monday, the council heard a presentation from the city's human resources department on wages for city employees.

T.F. JAIL INMATE ALLEGEDLY FOUND WITH MORPHINE

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A woman allegedly found with morphine pills while she was an inmate at the Twin Falls County Jail was arraigned Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

According to court records, at about 10:46 a.m. April 3, other inmates informed jail deputies that Janelle Renee Harrington, 44, of Lincoln, Neb., was in the bathroom and had a baggie of blue pills. The pills were later identified as morphine.

Sheriff's deputies said they found Harrington sitting on the toilet and ordered her to stand up, without flushing. But they didn't find any pills, according to court records — nor did they find pills after a strip search and a cell search.

At lunch that day, a deputy reported walking past the holding cell where Harrington was sitting and noticed one of her hands was under her tray, holding something. The deputy allegedly found a baggie with several blue pills, some blue powder on Harrington's jumpsuit, and a piece of a blue pill where she had been sitting.

Harrington was taken to the emergency room where deputies say a piece of plastic bag and a piece of a blue pill was removed from her body after a cavity search.

Harrington was charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of a controlled substance by an inmate. She is being held on $10,000 bond and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 27.

Former Walmart Security Guard Charged with Grand Theft

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Police say a former Walmart employee who worked security for the store shoplifted more than $1,400 in electronic items.

On Wednesday, Twin Falls Police responded to the Twin Falls Walmart in the 200 block of Cheney Drive West for a call about an employee theft.

A loss prevention employee told police he had seen security video of Emma Kathleen Richins, 19, in the store the night before.

At about 11:40 p.m. on April 10, Richins was allegedly spotted on the video with a computer missing its security device. Another security employee told officers Richins was also seen going into the bathrooms at the front of the store and could be heard opening packaging in a stall, according to the police report.

The report says Richins then left the store followed by security employees. She allegedly told the other employees she knew they couldn't detain her when they asked for her receipt for the items.

According to the report, when she was told police were on the way, Richins left the cart with the merchandise and drove away.

Officers met with

Richins at her home in the 100 block of Meadowview Lane in Twin Falls on April 12 and arrested her for grand theft.

According to police, Richins called and reported threats because of a drug debt and might have stolen the items to repay her debts.

The items left in the shopping cart totaled $1,217.28, but police say another $212.59 worth of merchandise has not been recovered.

Richins was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on grand theft and burglary charges. A $1,000 bond was set and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 20.

CSI spokesman Doug Maughan said Monday that he didn't have an update on when the situation could be resolved. College

Maughan said last week that the investigation isn't criminal in nature and won't result in charges.

Buhl Woman Accused of Selling Meth, Pot

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

BUHL • Several drug buys aided by a confidential informant helped deputies arrest a woman accused of selling methamphetamine and marijuana.

Loretta Lyn Dryden was arraigned on Thursday and charged with three counts of delivery of a controlled substance and a count of possession of a controlled substance.

On March 29, the Twin Falls County sheriff's narcotics investigation team conducted two controlled purchases of methamphetamine with the aid of a confidential source at Dryden's home, in the 300 block of Eighth Avenue North in Buhl.

The source had been advised by Gooding County sheriff's deputies to arrange to purchase an eighth of a gram of methamphetamine from Dryden.

According to court documents, the source took $220 to Dryden's home and bought 2.2 grams of meth. About an hour later, the source returned and allegedly picked up an additional half-gram Dryden owed.

On April 10, deputies arraigned another buy between Dryden and the confidential source. The source told deputies that Dryden said she didn't want any buyers contacting her, but allowed the source to come over. Dryden allegedly told the source she was suspicious with the police. The confidential source convinced Dryden they were not and asked to buy one-sixteenth of an ounce of meth.

"This is a dangerous (explicative) game we play. This is my life and everyone knows I won't be taken alive. I have to worry," Dryden said, according to court records.

Dryden sold 1/32-gram of meth and 19.5 grams of marijuana to the source that day, the records state.

On Wednesday, deputies searched Dryden's home and allegedly found glass pipes and marijuana.

Curtis Frank Benavidez was also arrested at the scene for frequenting a place where drugs are sold.

Dryden was held on a $100,000 bond and a preliminary hearing for the deliver charges was scheduled for April 20. Pretrial hearings for Dryden's possession charge and Benavidez's frequenting charge were scheduled for May 22.

supporters are looking ahead to the next legislative session, readying their arguments if the contentious issue comes up again.

Opponents had many problems with the bill: There was no exemption for victims of rape and incest; it inserted the government into a decision normally made between a doctor and a woman; and Idaho physicians are already legally required to offer women a chance to see an ultrasound image.

But, Scott said, some of her clients claim abortion providers discourage them from looking at the ultrasound images.

Volunteers at the center promote abstinence, and encourage people with unplanned pregnancies to keep the baby or put it up for adoption. Those seeking birth control advice get referred to their physicians, especially because some of the volunteers are religiously opposed to contraception. The idea, Scott said, is to "let that be between her and her doctor."

Scott isn't a fan of the legislative process, but said she is willing to testify again if the issue affects her clients.

Hannah Brass, legislative director for Planned Parenthood Votes Northwest, said the organization is waiting to see what changes the new legislation might have. In March, Boise Sen. Chuck Winder, the original bill sponsor, said he might consider sponsoring the bill again, but only if there are changes. Jason Herring, president of Right to Life Idaho, said he and other bill supporters might try different tactics next year, like introducing the bill earlier in the session to give legislators time to learn all the facts.

"It's hard to say exactly what I will do, what Planned Parenthood will do, about it," Brass said. In the meantime, Planned Parenthood is getting involved with the elections by sending out questionnaires that quiz candidates on issues like sex education and abortion rights.

"We just want to know where a candidate stands," Brass said.

Council

Starting wages for employees, especially those in lower pay grades, haven't kept up with the private market, said Gretchen Scott, human resource analyst for Twin Falls. Because of that, the city has seen high turnover in some positions.

The city has a pay grid to determine starting salaries for employees. Sometimes, to recruit skilled applicants, the human resources department is willing to negotiate on the salary, Scott said. But the way the city handled salaries and raises created morale issues in some departments, she said.

Susan Harris of the city's Human Resources Department asked the council to help develop a philosophy on setting salaries and determine if the city wants to continue lagging behind market value, meet market value or be a leader in salary rates.

Most council members expressed a desire to adjust compensation to retain employees.

"We need to take care of our employees so we can take care of these services," Vice Mayor Don Hall said.

Grant Helps Buhl After-school Program

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • The Buhl School District will receive a $150,000 grant for its after-school program.

The Idaho State Department of Education has awarded $1.5 million in grants to 11 districts across the state to help boost academic support, cultural enrichment and community involvement. The money is to fund "21st Century Community Learning Centers."

Competitive grant awards for the 2012-13 school year ranged from $98,039 to $150,000. They're renewable for up to five years.

Buhl Superintendent Byron Stutzman said the district will partner with the Boys & Girls Clubs of Magic Valley to look at using grant funding to build a club location in Buhl.

In addition to Buhl, other districts that received funding include American Falls, Blackfoot Community Center/Idaho Science and Technology Charter School, Emmett, Fremont, Kootenai, Madison, Nampa, Pocatello/Chubbuck, Sugar-Salmon and Val-livue.

Structured after-school programs are a key component in preventing gang activity, drug use and delinquent behavior, according to the ISDE.

HEYBURN MAN THREW METH FROM VEHICLE

BY ALISON SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Heyburn man was charged with trafficking in methamphetamine after Idaho State Police made a traffic stop and reported finding more than half a pound of meth.

Jose Tapia Lopez was arraigned Thursday on charges of trafficking, destruction of evidence, eluding and providing false information in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

At 2:18 p.m. Wednesday, an Idaho State Police corporal was patrolling on U.S. Highway 93 near Bridgeview Boulevard in Twin Falls when he saw a blue 1997 Saturn SC with a window tint that appeared too dark. The corporal followed the driver, later identified as Lopez, as he turned onto Bridgeview and tried to make a traffic stop. The corporal said the driver then pulled into the Magic Valley Mall parking lot and continued to drive. As the driver began to pull toward an exit, the corporal said he hit the Saturn in its left rear corner with the bumper of the patrol car, causing it to come to a stop.

According to court records, Lopez provided police with a false Mexican identification card, but later gave his real name in an interview.

At one point in the pursuit, the ISP corporal lost sight of Tapia. Another officer said that at this point he saw Tapia throw a package from his vehicle. The package was recovered, tested and weighed and according to police contained 231.1 grams of methamphetamine.

Lopez also had a felony warrant in Minidoka County for possession of methamphetamine and one in Cassia County for possession of meth with intent to deliver.

He was held on $250,000 bond and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for April 20.

OSLO, Norway • With a defiant closed-fist salute, a right-wing fanatic admitted Monday to a bomb-and-shooting massacre that killed 77 people in Norway but pleaded not guilty to criminal charges, saying he was acting in self-defense.

On the first day of his long-awaited trial, Anders Behring Breivik rejected the authority of the court as it sought to assign responsibility for the July 22 attacks that shocked Norway and jolted the image of terrorism in Europe.

Dressed in a dark suit and sporting a thin beard, Breivik smiled as a guard removed his handcuffs in the crowded court room. The 33-year-old then flashed his salute before shaking hands with prosecutors and court officials.

"I don't recognize Norwegian courts because you get your mandate from the Norwegian political parties who support multiculturalism," Breivik said in his first comments to the court.

Eight people were killed in Breivik's bombing of Oslo's government district and 69 were slain in his shooting massacre at the left-leaning Labor Party's youth camp on Utoya island outside the capital. Breivik has said the attacks were necessary to protect Norway from being taken over by Muslims.

"I admit to the acts, but not criminal guilt," he told the court, insisting he had acted in self-defense.

The key issue to be resolved during the 10-week trial is the state of Breivik's mental health, which will decide whether he is sent to prison or into psychiatric care. Anxious to prove he is not insane, Breivik will call right-wing extremists and radical Islamists to testify during the trial, to show that others also share his view of clashing civilizations.

U.S. Prepares for Last Major Afghan Offensive

BY PATRICK QUINN
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • For Taliban militants and U.S. strategists alike, all roads in this impoverished country of mountain passes, arid deserts and nearly impassable goat tracks lead to this ancient capital of 3 million people nestled in a high and narrow valley.

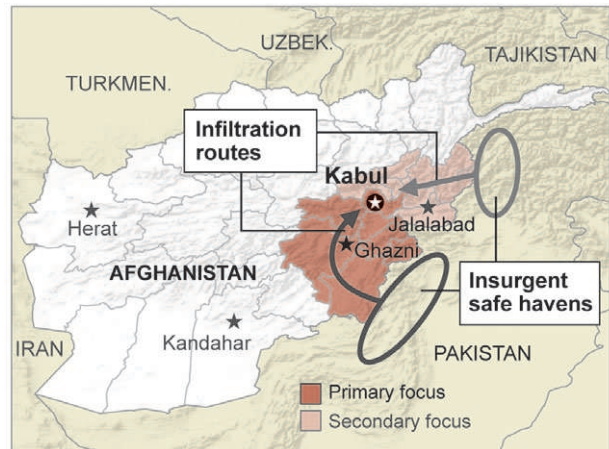

The Taliban made their intentions clear over the weekend, mounting spectacular coordinated attacks that spawned an 18-hour battle with Afghan and NATO forces. And now, the U.S. is gearing up for what may be the last major American-run offensive of the war — a bid to secure the approaches to the city.

While bombings and shootings elsewhere in Afghanistan receive relatively little attention, attacks in the capital alarm the general population, undermine the government's reputation and frighten foreigners into fleeing the country. That's why insurgents on Sunday struck locations that were so fortified they could cause little or no damage, including the diplomatic quarter, the parliament and a NATO base.

"These are isolated attacks that are done for symbolic purposes, and they have not regained any territory," U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said Monday.

The U.S.-led spring offensive, expected to begin in the coming weeks, may be NATO's last chance to shore up Kabul's defenses before a significant withdrawal of combat troops limits its options. The focus will be regions that control the main access routes, roads and highways into Kabul from the desert south and the mountainous east. These routes are used not only by militants but by traders carrying goods from Pakistan and Iran.

The strategy in eastern Afghanistan involves clearing militants from provinces such as Ghazni, just south of the capital. The pivotal region links Kabul with the Taliban homeland in the south and provinces bordering Pakistan to the east. NATO, under U.S. command, will also conduct more operations in eastern provinces such as Paktika and Paktia that are considered major infiltration routes to the capital from insurgent safe havens in Pakistan.

Afghan and U.S. officials blamed the Pakistan-based Haqqani network, which is part of the Taliban and has close links with al-Qaida, for the weekend attacks that left 36 insurgents, eight policemen and three civilians dead in Kabul and three eastern provinces. But Army Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said officials have not concluded whether the attacks emanated out of Pakistan.

Declining numbers of international troops in the coming months are also forcing coalition forces to focus less on remote and thinly populated places such as eastern Nuristan. They hope to move responsibility for those areas to the Afghan security forces.

Coalition forces last summer made gains in traditional Taliban strongholds such as Kandahar and Helmand provinces in the south, areas they must now hold with fewer troops. By September, as many as 10,000 U.S. Marines are scheduled to leave Helmand and hand over the lead for security to Afghan forces in the former Taliban stronghold.

"It's going to be a very busy summer," Gen. John Allen, the top U.S. and NATO commander, said recently.

Iran Tightens Grip on Web in 'Soft War' with West

BY ALI AKBAR DAREINI AND BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran • Iran calls it the "soft war" with the West: Battles to control, defend and monitor the Internet and other high-level telecommunications. The latest move came quietly when the powerful Revolutionary Guard recently launched what it claims is a hack-proof communications network for its high-level commanders.

Largely overshadowed by the show-downs over Iran's nuclear program, the efforts to build a cyber-fortress have become a priority among leaders fearful of Internet espionage and virus attacks from abroad and seeking to choke off opposition outlets at home.

The drive also highlights the stepped up attempts by many nations — particularly across the Middle East — to filter the Web after social networking sites played such a crucial role in the Arab Spring uprisings.

In a video message for Iranian new year last month, President Barack Obama denounced what he called the "electronic curtain" that keeps ordinary Iranians from reaching out to Americans and the West.

"We are not in an imaginary state of threats or sanctions," Revolutionary Guard Deputy Cmdr. Hossein Salami told Guard leaders in late March as he inaugurated the new closed communications system called "Basir" or Perspective. "Threats and sanctions are practically being enforced against us. Communications have changed the picture of the world including threats and wars?"

The system is vaguely described as a something akin to a closed mobile phone network, possibly involving special relay towers and passcodes.

The Guard's network is separate from Iran's wider goal of creating a so-called "clean" Internet, a plan not fully explained by authorities but apparently seeking to weed out non-sanctioned content.

The Guard's new communications system reflects the increased emphasis on high-level security amid tensions over Iran's nuclear ambitions and the possibility of a pre-emptive Israeli strike to stop what the West suspects is a program aimed at building weapons.

Basir was unveiled days after Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei ordered the creation of an Internet oversight agency that included top military, security and political figures in the country's boldest attempt yet to control the Web.

The panel is headed by President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and includes powerful figures in the security establishment such as the intelligence chief, the commander of the Revolutionary Guards and the country's top police chief.

AP Wins Pulitzer for Stories on NYPD Spying

BY DEEPTI HAJELA
Associated Press

NEW YORK • The Associated Press won a Pulitzer Prize for investigative journalism Monday for revealing the New York Police Department's widespread spying on Muslims, while The Patriot-News in Harrisburg, Pa., and a 24-year-old reporter captured the award for local reporting for breaking the Penn State scandal that ultimately brought down Joe Paterno.

In a reflection of the forces reshaping the media world, the turmoil-ridden Philadelphia Inquirer won in the public service category for exposing pervasive violence in the city's schools, while David Wood earned a Pulitzer in national reporting for a relative newcomer, The Huffington Post, for stories about the suffering endured by American troops severely wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan.

It was only the second Pulitzer ever awarded for reporting that appeared online only.

A year after the Pulitzer judges found no entry worthy of the prize for breaking news, The Tuscaloosa News of Alabama won the award for coverage of a deadly tornado.

It beat out the Wisconsin State Journal, which was named a finalist for its around-the-clock coverage of the political drama and historic protests over collective-bargaining rights that erupted after Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker's introduction of a budget-repair bill last year. The Journal is owned by Lee Enterprises, the owner of the Times-News.

By blending traditional reporting with the use of social media, The Tuscaloosa News provided real-time updates and helped locate missing people, while producing in-depth print coverage despite a power outage that forced the paper to publish at a plant 50 miles away.

The twister hit just after the news staff had had a session on how to use social media to cover the news, city editor Katherine Lee recalled.

"I think we won because the tornado hit where we live, and we all felt a responsibility to do this well, to tell our story well — about how people came together to help total strangers," Lee said.

Another Pulitzer for investigative reporting was awarded to The Seattle Times for a series about accidental methadone overdoses among patients with chronic pain.

The New York Times won two prizes. David Kocieniewski was honored in the explanatory reporting category for a series on how wealthy people and corporations use loopholes to avoid taxes. And Jeffrey Gettleman received the award for international reporting for his coverage of famine and conflict in East Africa.

Sig Gissler, administrator of the prizes, said the winners in this year's 96th annual competition show that journalism is still a "vibrant force" as a watchdog for the public.

The AP's series of stories — available online at <http://ap-ne.ws/IrNyPk> — showed how New York police, with the help of a CIA official, created an aggressive surveillance program to gather intelligence on Muslim neighborhoods, businesses and houses of worship. It was the 50th Pulitzer won by the news organization.

WHAT WOULD ROMNEY CUT?

Overheard conversation holds clues to GOP candidate's plans.

BY MAEVE RESTON AND SEEMA MEHTA

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

PHILADELPHIA • When President Barack Obama told a Russian leader that he could be "more flexible" after the election — during what he thought was a private conversation — Mitt Romney came down like a hammer. He accused his Democratic rival of "pulling his punches with the American people" and hiding his real agenda.

Romney found himself in similar circumstances Monday after he was heard telling donors at a Florida fundraiser that while he planned to slash government programs, he probably would not share those plans with voters before November. Romney told guests at the Sunday night fundraiser that he might eliminate the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development and that he would likely consolidate the Education Department "or perhaps make it a heck of a lot smaller."

The remarks, overheard by reporters from NBC News and the Wall Street Journal who were staked out on a sidewalk outside the event, were among the few specifics Romney has let loose about his plan to cut federal government spending to 20 percent of the nation's gross domestic product, from the current 24 percent, by 2016.

Democrats pounced, holding a "What's Mitt hiding?" conference call during which they argued that Romney's plans would decimate programs that help middle-class and lower-class families. The incident, said Sen. Charles E.

Schumer, D-N.Y., was emblematic of a pattern of secrecy within Romney's campaign — including his refusal to release multiple years of tax returns, details about his offshore investments or the names of his fundraising bundlers.

"Apparently Mitt Romney only shares the details of his economic plan if you donate $50,000 a head to his campaign," Schumer said. Democrats said cuts to the education and housing departments would restrict access to programs such as Pell grants for college students and federally guaranteed housing loans.

The Romney campaign brushed off the criticism. Former Republican Sen. Jim Talent of Missouri insisted during a conference call with reporters that there "wasn't any change in policy" and that Romney "was just discussing ideas that were coming up on the campaign trail."

But there was no question that the typically cautious candidate had gone well beyond his typical stump speech — in which he mentions his support for moving programs like Medicaid to the states, where he says they would be more efficient, and his backing of Paul Ryan's budget plan, which aims to rein in the cost of Medicare while cutting taxes.

According to NBC, Romney told the fundraiser guests that he would combine many departments in Washington, adding: "Some eliminate, but I'm probably not going to lay out just exactly which ones are going to go. Things like Housing and Urban Development, which my dad was head of, that might not be around later. But I'm not going to actually go through these one by one. What I can tell you is, we've got far too many bureaucrats. I will send a lot of what happens in Washington back to the states."

Hot Temperatures Force Boston Marathoners to Take It Slow

BY DAVID KLEPPER

Associated Press

BOSTON • There are races to run fast, and there are races just to finish. With temperatures hitting the 80s Monday's Boston Marathon was the latter.

Nearly 22,500 participants braved unseasonably balmy conditions at the 116th running of the storied 26.2 mile race. Organizers stocked extra water and pleaded with runners to slow their pace to avoid heat stroke. Some 4,300 participants registered to run opted to sit out.

A pair of Kenyans outlasted the heat to take first place in their respective races. Wesley Korir prevailed on the men's side, while Sharon Cherop placed first for the women.

"It was brutal, just brutally hot," said 38-year-old runner Jason Warick of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, who took an ice bath before the race to cool his body. "Around 15 miles the wheels just came off. Then it was just about getting home."

Organizers said that as of Monday evening, just under 2,000 participants had received some level of medical attention, and about 120 were taken to hospitals in ambulances. One person was taken from the course in serious condition in Wellesley, though the details of their condition were unavailable Monday.

Medical volunteers scanned the finish line for runners displaying signs of heat stroke, assisting those in need to nearby medical tents. By mid-afternoon, dozens of wheelchairs carrying pale and weakened runners stretched outside the tents.

"I've never seen anything like (that)," said 35-year-old Desiree Ficker of Austin, Texas, who used salt supplements during the race to stay moving. "It was really hard seeing the confusion on people's faces."

Organizers said careful preparation and responsible runners prevented more serious problems on what was one of the hottest marathons in Boston history.

Heat was also a problem in the 2004 marathon.

US Economic Outlook Brightens as Retail Sales Rise

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Americans bought more electronics, started home improvement projects and updated their wardrobes last month, inspired by warmer weather and a healthier job market. U.S. retail sales rose 0.8 percent in March, the Commerce Department said Monday. The increase capped a strong quarter of gains and contributed to a brighter outlook among economists for growth in the January-March quarter. Businesses are responding by restocking their shelves at a steady pace, a sign that they expect the trend to carry over into the spring. More retail spending also helped offset a decline in confidence among homebuilders. And it could ease concerns about March hiring, which slowed to half the pace of the previous three months.

In this March 12 file photo, a shopper carries bags of merchandise in Freeport, Maine. U.S. retail sales rose at a solid pace in March 2012, as a healthier job market encouraged more consumers to shop, the Commerce Department said Monday.

“Retail sales soared in March with stores in just about every category recording sharp increases over February levels,” said Joel Naroff, chief economist at Naroff Economic Advisors. “And let’s not forget, the February spending was strong.” The more robust retail sales in March contributed to a mixed day of trading on Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up roughly 72 points to end the day at 12,921. But the Standard & Poor’s 500 index ended the day essentially flat, while the Nasdaq composite fell 23 points. The retail sales report is the government’s first look each month at consumer spending, which represents 70 percent of economic activity. Consumers are spending more despite paying higher gas prices and seeing little growth in their wages. Shoppers bought more furniture, groceries, clothes and sporting goods last month. They also paid more for gas.

Still, excluding cars, gas and food, sales rose 8.2 percent in the first quarter, the most in two years. The gain pushed total retail sales to a record high of $411.1 billion, 24 percent higher than the recession low hit in March 2009. “This is a good report,” said Chris Christopher, an economist at IHS Global Insight. “Consumers are spending despite feeling the pump price pinch.” Other recent data suggest stronger growth in the January-March quarter. Business stockpiles rose a seasonally adjusted 0.6 percent in February, the Commerce Department said. Larger stockpiles require businesses to order more goods. That leads to more factory production, which boosts growth. And overall sales — which includes wholesalers and manufacturers as well as retailers — grew 0.7 percent, more than inventories. That’s a good sign because it is evidence that companies aren’t building too much inventory, which can lead to production cutbacks. James Marple, an economist at TD Bank, forecasts the economy expanded by about 2.7 percent at an annual pace in the January-March quarter. That’s a full point higher than his estimate a month ago. Still, the housing market has struggled to gain momentum. The National Association of Home Builders/Wells Fargo said Monday that its builder sentiment index fell for the first time in seven months. Builders also expressed weaker confidence in sales over the next six months.

American Jim Yong Kim is Chosen to Lead World Bank

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON • Jim Yong Kim, an American who is president of Dartmouth College, has been chosen to be the next president of the World Bank. His selection extends the U.S. hold on the top job at the 187-nation development agency. Kim, a surprise nominee of President Barack Obama, was selected Monday in a vote by the World Bank’s 25-member executive board. He’ll succeed Robert Zoellick, who’s stepping down after a five year term. Developing nations waged an unsuccessful challenge to Kim, 52, a physician and pioneer in treating HIV/AIDS and tuberculosis in the developing world. Kim’s selection marks a break from previous World Bank leaders who were typically political, legal or economic figures. The World Bank raises money from its member nations and borrows from investors to provide low-cost loans to developing countries. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner praised the selection, saying Kim “has a lifetime of experience solving complex problems.” He said Kim “will help breathe new life into the World Bank’s efforts” to promote economic growth around the world. Developing countries had put forward two candidates for the post: Nigerian Finance Minister Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala and former Colombian Finance Minister Jose Antonio Ocampo. Both argued that it was time to break the hold the United States has had on the World Bank job and provide a greater voice for developing nations.

FCC Fines Google $25,000 Over Street View Probe

NEW YORK (AP) • The Federal Communications Commission has fined Google $25,000, saying the online search leader impeded an investigation into how it collected data while taking photos for its “Street View” mapping feature. The FCC said in a report from Friday that Google Inc. “deliberately impeded and delayed” the investigation for months. The agency said that the online search leader did this by not responding to requests for information and documents. At the same time, the FCC said it will not take action against Google over its data collection. Part of the reason for that is that it still has “significant factual questions” about the Street View project that haven’t been answered. To get some answers, the FCC had subpoenaed a Google engineer who developed the software code that the company used to collect and store data. But the engineer, who is not named in the report, declined to testify, invoking his Fifth Amendment rights against incriminating himself. In a statement, Mountain View, Calif.-based Google said it disagrees with the FCC’s characterization of its cooperation with the investigation and will be filing a response. “As the FCC notes in their report, we provided all the materials the regulators felt they needed to conclude their investigation and we were not found to have violated any laws,” the company said in a prepared statement.

OBAMA’S BUFFETT RULE IMPACT ON TAXES, JOBS

WASHINGTON (AP) • President Barack Obama’s proposal to impose a “Buffett rule” tax on the rich is generating enormous political wattage, but the plan itself would directly affect only a tiny fraction of Americans. Only around 210,000 taxpayers — a bit over 1 of every 1,000 — would face higher federal taxes if the measure were enacted, according to an estimate by one respected bipartisan research group. In addition, while Republicans say the plan would be a job killer, only a small proportion of businesses would potentially be subject to the tax, according to data from a 2011 Treasury Department study. These firms make disproportionately large amounts of money, but many of them don’t employ any workers.

"If it turns out that some of the allegations that have been made in the press are confirmed, then of course I'll be angry. ... We are representing the people of the United States, and when we travel to another country, I expect us to observe the highest standards."

Latest Salvo Fired in 'Mommy Wars'

Virtually everything said and done in a presidential election year distorts the truth, much like concave and convex mirrors in a carnival attraction alter one's true reflection.

That kind of distortion occurred in the recent dustup over whether women who choose to stay at home can completely understand the economic challenges and personal struggles faced by women who choose, or need, to work outside the home while raising children.

There is no question that professional women receive much more societal validation than "stay-at-home moms." Few magazine covers at the checkout line or full-page ads promoting events and awards to "successful" women, laud mothers who stay home to raise their children. There aren't a lot of television shows today like "Ozzie and Harriett," "Leave It to Beaver" or "Father Knows Best."

The view expressed by Democratic strategist Hilary Rosen that Mitt Romney's wife, Ann, has "never worked a day in her life" and thus can't relate to struggling families is bogus. Can a politician who has never held a job in the private sector relate to those who work there, or are searching for a job there? I'm thinking of the former community organizer, now president, Barack Obama. Can a career politician like Vice President Joe Biden identify with someone who doesn't have the perks — planes, limousines, high pay and discounted, or free health care — he has enjoyed for most of his career?

Former Vice President Dan Quayle's wife, Marilyn, who is an attorney, said it best at the 1992 Republican National Convention in Houston: "...having a profession is not incompatible with being a good mother or a good wife. ... Women's lives are different from men's lives. We make different trade-offs. We make different sacrifices. And we get different rewards."

If a woman "chooses" to work at home (and aren't politically liberal women supposed to support a woman's career choice?) and if she feels adequately compensated, shouldn't her choice be affirmed, not only by her husband or partner, if she has one, but also by society?

Similarly, if a woman wants to work, or must work outside her home, shouldn't she be equally supported by society and not made to feel added guilt and pressure? Reasonable people ought to be able to answer, "yes," to both questions.

Still, all of this is a distraction. Even if Ann Romney had chosen to work outside her home (and she did perform a great deal of volunteer work while battling breast cancer and multiple sclerosis), and even if she then could — in Rosen's mind — relate to other women who made that same decision, how would that make anyone else's life better? Would such a choice by Romney have improved the economy so that women who want to work outside the home, but can't find jobs, get one? Would it have allowed women to stay home if they were afforded that "luxury"?

This is what politics has become. It's about feelings and image, not substance and ideas that work. Because of skyrocketing debt, high unemployment and the failed policies they have promoted, Democrats cling to feelings and focus on one's ability to relate. But it's a fiction to believe that the only women's issues of importance are those promoted by the left.

Liberal women are attempting to dominate women who share a different political and moral worldview. It's all a house of mirrors; nothing more than a distortion of reality in an election year. Expect to see more of the same between now and November.

Online readers are saying: Police say a former Walmart employee who provided security for the store shoplifted more than $1,400 in electronic items...

Jerry Honsinger: "Just not worth it. Stupid."

Brian Keathley: "Walmart pays minimum wage and therefore gets minimum employees. You can't get a Rolls Royce for no money down and $199/month. You can't get good employees for flunkie wages!"

Mike Irish: "Stealing from Walmart is stupid. Having a 19 year old female security guard working at Walmart is even more stupid."

Magic Valley Residents Weigh In on the Topic of Religion in Politics:

dlux511: "I believe a candidate's religion factors in to who they really are. Barack Obama's affiliation with pastor Jeremiah Wright says something about Obama's foundational belief...and...it was interesting how the president distanced himself from this pastor, when it became a political liability. "The biggest challenge any of us who make "religious claims" face is to live accordingly.

"Granted, the more diverse a country becomes, the more viewpoints you're going to have, making it difficult to legislate from a centralized position/location (Washington D.C.)

"Google and explore the difference between a "democracy" and a "republic". It's tough to swallow the fact that as a democracy get's older, the clock is ticking on how long it will last because a house divided against itself eventually cannot stand. A republic, which the United States was in the beginning, stays strong because problems are handled by the states and locally instead of depending on a "majority rules" democracy which can easily be hijacked by tyrants and powermongers (presently happening)

"Loving your neighbor as yourself doesn't come naturally...only God can accomplish that in each of us who is honest enough to admit our natural selfishness and self-centeredness.

"Many endeavors start out with admirable intentions but morph into something much less as moral foundations are compromised in order to have one's own way."

generaleyes13: "I love how nowadays people confuse the obligations in the bill of rights. The whole concept of "separation of church and state" is an obligation of the government—not to interfere with religion. There is no reciprocal obligation—that is, that religion must stay out of government. Such a concept would be so foreign to the founding fathers that they would not be able to reconcile it (just think about how much religion was tied into forming this country).

"Religion gives morals. What is a country without morals? It is a godless country without responsibility or accountability. Unfortunately, God has been pushed out of the conversation so much who do not understand the obligations outlined in the bill of rights that this country is becoming a godless one.

"What is also funny is that even atheists have religion. Not believing in anything and that others believe in something false is a religion. So, in theory, if believers shouldn't be able to be influenced by their religion, then atheists should not be able to be influenced by their claimed "lack" of religion."

ASmiles101: "Religion should not be involved in Politics. I have already seen how our elected officials already let Religious convictions affect the way they vote. It is time for them to ask us. That's part of the problem with politics today everyone votes for what they want and don't ask what the PEOPLE want. Elected officials trying to ban health care based off Religious Convictions, Ban or keep it because that's what the PEOPLE want not because you the Elected official says it does not fit in my Religious beliefs. I Don't care what your religious beliefs are i care if it is good for the people financially or not. That's like voting along party lines it just doesn't make sense vote for right and wrong based off of What the people want. Quit trying to make the decisions for us and learn to ask us (The People) What we want."

SKC_ID: "Does religion have a place in politics? Absolutely not.

"Our forefathers came to this country largely because of religious wars and persecutions in Europe. When they founded this country they were determined NOT to repeat that mistake here. Separation of church and state is crucial to the functioning of our democracy. If we stupidly abandon it, we won't have a democracy very long."

Lincount: "Religions do have the right to speak out on moral issues such as abortion, gay rights, gambling, pornography and the like. If religions could not speak out on them that would give atheists an unfair advantage. Why should they be able to pass legislation on these values but not religious people?"

"Politics and Religion make this country great. Good to talk about them. For moral reasons religions not only have a right but a duty to speak out. Should someone say I should not support this bill because my church teaches it and I don't want to seem like I take advice from my church. That is a good way for the other side to win."

THEIR VIEW

Antibiotics, Animals and Us

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Friday, April 13:

Voluntary guidelines for pharmaceutical companies will not wean the livestock industry off its addiction to antibiotics. Yet that's what the U.S. Food and Drug Administration — which has previously taken tentative steps to curb the agricultural use of antibiotics and is under a judge's order to carry out existing laws that call for limiting the overuse of two classes of antibiotics — is proposing. Obviously, the agency wants to avoid a protracted legal battle with producers, and its authority is limited by Congress' repeated refusal to act. But this latest plan falls far short of the decisive action needed to make a difference.

Most of the antibiotics given to livestock aren't used to treat illness but to quicken the animals' growth or as a preventive measure to keep disease from sweeping through the crowded pens and cages that are common to industrial agriculture. Doctors have been growing more cautious about prescribing antibiotics for humans because overuse fosters the development of drug-resistant bacteria.

Boy Alerts Officials to Murdered Family

LAS VEGAS • A 9-year-old boy arrived at school Monday with a grisly story: His mother and sister were dead at their home four blocks away. Minutes later, police found the bodies of a woman and a girl — along with a blood-covered man and an unharmed 4-year-old child — in the modest home in a West Las Vegas neighborhood.

The man, who had unspecified injuries, has not been identified as a suspect or charged. Police say the five people belong to a single family.

Police said the boy was uninjured when he arrived at Mabel Hoggard Elementary School, where his sister also was enrolled.

Principal Celese Rayford declined comment.

NASA: 1st Private Space Station Visit on Track

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. • A private U.S. company is on track to become the first commercial visitor to the International Space Station.

NASA said Monday there's a good chance that Space Exploration Technologies Corp., or SpaceX, will make its April 30 date to launch a cargo ship to the space station. More software testing is needed before a final "go" is given. Managers said they will meet again next Monday to review everything.

The Dragon spacecraft will be hoisted aboard the company's Falcon rocket from Cape Canaveral.

The company's chief executive officer and chief designer, Paypal co-founder Elon Musk, said the Falcon and Dragon are proven vehicles. What's new is getting the supply ship to the space station. Musk was hesitant to give out odds for success, stressing that this is a test flight.

Other Targets Eyed before NYC Subway Plot

NEW YORK • A former yellow cab driver-turned-al-Qaida recruit testified for the first time Monday that he drove around New York City in early 2009 casing potential targets for a terrorist attack, including Grand Central Terminal, Times Square and the New York Stock Exchange.

Zarein Ahmedzay told a Brooklyn jury that he and two former high school classmates — Najibullah Zazi and Adis Medunjanin — also considered striking Penn Station or city movie theaters before settling on attacking Manhattan subway lines as suicide bombers.

Ahmedzay also recounted a meeting at an al-Qaida hide-out in Pakistan, where the three agreed to become martyrs.

The testimony followed opening statements at the trial of Medunjanin, 27, a Bosnian-born Muslim and naturalized U.S. citizen who has pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction, providing material support to a terrorist organization and other charges. Zazi and Ahmedzay pleaded guilty and agreed to testify again Medunjanin in a bid for leniency.

Mont. Man Gets 25-54 Years in Idaho Woman's Death

BOISE (AP) • A Bozeman, Mont., man was sentenced Monday to 25 to 54 years in prison for killing his former girlfriend at her Boise apartment last year and setting a fire to try to destroy evidence.

Lloyd Hardin McNeil, 32, was sentenced to 15 years in prison for voluntary manslaughter the March 5, 2011, slaying of Natalie Davis, 30. He also was sentenced to a consecutive 25 years for first-degree arson and 14 years for grand theft.

Fourth District Judge Deborah Bail said McNeil must serve all 15 years for the manslaughter and at least 10 years on the arson charge before he can ask for parole. The Idaho Statesman reported.

Prosecutors said McNeil and Davis had a tumultuous relationship that turned fatal when McNeil suffocated her, soaked her mattress in vegetable oil and set it on fire. Prosecutors said he then took her car, dogs and some jewelry and left town. He was arrested two weeks later in Seattle.

McNeil continues to maintain his innocence, saying the case against him was "ridiculous assumption and speculation" and that he "wished he could have saved" Davis but didn't explain what that meant.

The day before she died, Davis told Boise police she had broken up with McNeil after he tried to shove pills down her throat. She said she planned to move to California.

After Davis' death, a charge that McNeil assaulted her in Gallatin County, Mont., in July 2010 was dismissed.

Idaho Roadblock Remains after Judge Intervenes

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A judge prohibited a central Idaho county from dispatching a frontend loader to clear boulders that block a remote mountain road, temporarily defusing a local-versus-federal flare-up in which one county official threatened to haul off a U.S. Bureau of Land Management manager in "pretty pink handcuffs."

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill ruled on Friday that Custer County officials for now can't reopen Herd Creek Road after objections of the BLM, which argued the boulder-removal plan violated federal law.

The agency closed the road near a wilderness study area more than a decade ago. But county officials have been warning for months they would remove boulders on Sunday, arguing the BLM didn't properly consult with locals.

Custer County sent heavy machinery to the closed road on Sunday but stopped short of removing the boulders after the decision by Winnmill, who wrote the county failed to follow proper guidelines to wrest control of the road from the federal agency.

"Irreparable harm is likely because the defendants intend to reopen the road that passes through, and is proximate to, a wilderness study area that could be adversely affected by traffic," Winnmill wrote. "The road has been closed since 1999, and there is no showing of any need for reopening the road at this point."

Winnmill, who said the BLM has a likelihood of succeeding on its argument's merits, scheduled a hearing Thursday in Pocatello on his temporary restraining order.

Custer County Commission Chairman Wayne Butts, among locals in this mountainous region who for years have chafed at federal control of about 97 percent of county territory, said Monday he envisions this case as establishing a beachhead in returning the region's management to people who live here.

Since last year, Butts and other Custer County commissioners have been getting advice from Fred Kelly Grant, a constitutional lawyer and property rights activist who argues the federal government has failed to properly coordinate road closures and other management decisions with local officials.

This month, Butts called state BLM director Steve Ellis and warned him he would forcibly remove any federal officials who tried to stop the front loader from completing its business.

That included BLM district manager Joe Kraayenbrink in Idaho Falls.

"I told Steve if Joe showed up, I'd find a pretty pink pair of handcuffs to have him hauled away in," Butts said, adding he was disappointed with Winnmill's restraining order. "I'm shocked that a federal judge would allow himself to be used as the arm of federal activism of the worst sort."

Bureau of Land Management officials didn't immediately return a phone call Monday.

In their filing seeking the restraining order, they argued that Herd Creek Road was blocked to protect values in the Jerry Peak Wilderness Study area, where no motorized vehicles are allowed.

Removing "BLM-installed barriers to access will constitute a trespass on lands belonging to the United States and likely result in damage to federal government property, damages to natural resources, and a violation of federal law including the U.S. Constitution," BLM lawyers wrote.

Grant, the activist who is also working to block removal of dams on California's Klamath River, didn't return a phone call.

IDAHO BRIEFS

Boy's Injuries Allegedly Caused by Dad

POCATELLO • A 6-year-old Pocatello boy who was hospitalized last week after apparently being beaten has been removed from life support at a Salt Lake City hospital.

The Bannock County prosecutor's office is reviewing the case to decide if charges against the boy's father, Anthony Blake Viles, will be upgraded. Viles was arrested Thursday and charged with felony injury to a child after investigators say he acknowledged striking the boy.

The Idaho State Journal reports Afton Wrigley was removed from life support at Primary Children's Hospital on Sunday evening. The family donated the boy's organs.

Prosecutor Mark Hiedeman says an autopsy was planned Monday and a decision on charges will be made Tuesday.

Idaho Kicks Off School Laptop Bidding Process

BOISE • Idaho has started accepting bids for a contract to provide every high school student and teacher with a laptop, or similar mobile computer.

Suppliers have until May 25 to submit their pitches, according to a request for proposals issued by the state Division of Purchasing. The 85-page document was obtained by The Associated Press through a public records request.

Idaho is phasing in laptops while making online classes a requirement to graduate, under reforms authored by public schools chief Tom Luna.

A task force created to help implement Luna's changes recommended the device come in the form of a laptop. That recommendation is mentioned, but not a requirement in the request for proposals that was issued last Wednesday.

The document includes a description of what should be in the device.

Mule Deer Suspected of Attack Killed

PRESTON • An Idaho

wildlife officer shot an aggressive mule deer buck that threatened a man and two children last week in southeastern Idaho and was suspected of attacking two others in the same area last fall.

David Priestley of Franklin told Idaho Fish and Game officials that he was hunting marmots with his son and his nephew, both 9, on April 7 when the buck began circling them, stomping and raking its head.

Priestley called Fish and Game Officer Corey Owens, who shot the animal.

Owens said the age, size and location of the buck were consistent with the deer that attacked Sue Panter last fall, causing puncture wounds, scratches and bruises. Panter's rescuer, Michael Vaughan, was gored in the legs.

The buck's head and neck were taken to the state's Wildlife Health Laboratory in Caldwell for testing.

For Now, BSU Job is Southwick's

If the Boise State quarterback derby was a boxing match, the bout that played out in Saturday's spring game would have been an easy one to score.

Patrick Sheltra
Sports Editor

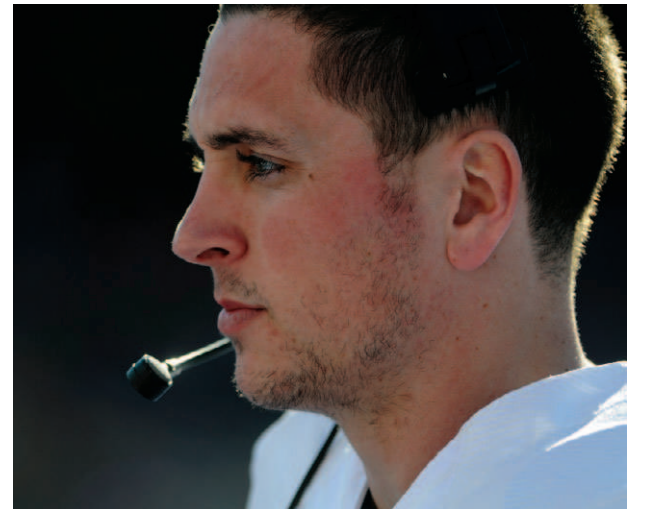

Southwick — UD That's Joe Southwick, by unanimous decision. He didn't win every round, but like a crafty boxer, he won early and late in the round ... err ... scrimmage.

Touchdowns on the opening and closing drives can leave that kind of impression, just like a late flurry of punches that land late in a round can affect a judge's scorecard. Southwick also led a third scoring drive that ended with a field goal.

And like in boxing, where the old adage is that challengers must decisively beat the champion to take their belt, Southwick's competition for the starting job didn't do enough to make a case to unseat him and his spot atop the depth chart.

True freshman Nick Patti landed the biggest blow among the three challengers, connecting with Troy Ware on a 35-yard touchdown pass.

If Saturday's spring game is any indicator of what the regular season holds, the only time Boise State quarterback Joe Southwick will don a headset is when his team's defense has the ball.

NOBODY HIRES BOBBY VALENTINE EXPECTING PEACE

That's not the way he did business in the past, and as his latest run-in with struggling slugger Kevin Youkilis demonstrated, Bobby V. is not about to turn over a new leaf now.

Jim Litke
Associated Press

Whether it meant needling opponents, umpires, his players or even his boss — Valentine rarely lets an opportunity pass without reminding everyone who is the smartest guy in the room. That explains why he was so welcome in TV studios and broadcast booths, but perhaps also why Valentine hadn't managed in the big leagues for 10 years until the Red Sox gave him an office last winter. So if nothing else, a culture clash was inevitable.

Boston was coming off an historic collapse in the final month of last season, the last few days of which have been portrayed as a baseball production of "Animal House." Terry Francona, who preceded Valentine in the job and won two World Series titles in his eight seasons there, conceded he'd left it to the players to police the clubhouse themselves and that by the end, a few devoted more time studying takeout menus than lineup cards. Even after leaving, Francona was reluctant to name names. That won't happen with Valentine, who calls things as he sees 'em the moment he sees 'em.

So those who think he went hard after Youkilis just a few games into the season should remember when Valentine was managing the Mets and Todd Hundley, arguably his best bat, went into a slump in late August 1997. Instead of extra batting practice for Hundley — or as in Youkilis' case, a show of more emotion — Valentine prescribed an entire lifestyle makeover.

"Todd needs to change his ways," Valentine said at the time. "He doesn't sleep enough. He's a nocturnal person and he needs to get more rest. He has a tough time getting to sleep after games."

That dig — especially the part about Hundley being a "nocturnal person" — might be a little more personal than the usual motivational fare managers dole out. But what makes Valentine's critiques even more unnerving is that unlike the diamond — where he was often several moves ahead of more-celebrated rivals like Tony La Russa and Bobby Cox — even Valentine doesn't always know where the endgame is off the field. He was fired abruptly after one very successful season with the Chiba Lotte Marines in Japan following a tiff with the general manager, then got fired during a second stint there in 2009 despite winning a pennant and a popularity contest against

Potential Clemens Jurors Question Cost Of Hearing

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Roger Clemens stood and uttered "Morning" to the 90 potential jurors who had gathered in the ornate, sixth-floor ceremonial courtroom, the one deemed big enough to hold them all. After he sat down, he swiveled his chair, as if trying to make eye contact with as many as possible.

Some of those looking back had no idea who he was. Others, including two who survived the first cut, wondered if it was a waste of taxpayer time and money that got him to this point.

The seven-time Cy Young Award winner was back in court Monday in the government's second attempt to prove that he misled a House committee at a landmark drugs-and-sports hearing in 2008. The first trial last July ended in a mistrial when prosecutors introduced inadmissible evidence after only two witnesses had been called.

One potential juror said he felt "it was a little bit ridiculous" when Congress held hearings on drug use in sports because he felt the government should have been focusing on bigger problems.

Nevertheless, the native of Chile — an investment officer for an international bank — was asked to return, the only male to remain in the jury pool among those who were individually screened on the first day.

Another potential juror recalled the 2008 hearing by saying: "At the time, I remember thinking it didn't seem to be a great use of taxpayer money," but she was kept in the pool after she said she could be impartial.

"Even if I don't agree with the reason that you're brought before Congress, you still have to tell the truth .... If you perjure yourself before Congress, it's still illegal," said the woman, who is an executive for an environmental nonprofit organization.

But another potential juror was excused after she volunteered: "I don't know if that's the best use of government tax dollars at this time." She said her feelings could influence her ability to serve.

Hot Temps Slow Down Boston Marathon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON • There are races to run fast, and there are races just to finish. With temperatures hitting the 80s, Monday's Boston Marathon was the latter.

Nearly 22,500 participants braved unseasonably balmy conditions at the 116th running of the storied 26.2 mile race. Organizers stocked extra water and pleaded with runners to slow their pace to avoid heat stroke. Some 4,300 participants registered to run opted to sit out.

"It was brutal, just brutally hot," said 38-year-old runner Jason Warick of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, who took an ice bath before the race to cool his body. "Around 15 miles the wheels just came off. Then it was just about getting home."

Organizers said that as of Monday evening, just under 2,000 participants had received some level of medical attention, and about 120 were taken to hospitals in ambulances. One person was taken from the course in serious condition in Wellesley, though the details of their condition were unavailable Monday.

Medical volunteers scanned the finish line for runners displaying signs of heat stroke, assisting those in need to nearby medical tents. By mid-afternoon, dozens of wheelchairs carrying pale and weakened runners stretched outside the tents.

"I've never seen anything like (that)," said 35-year-old

Desiree Ficker of Austin, Texas, who used salt supplements during the race to stay moving. "It was really hard seeing the confusion on people's faces."

Organizers said careful preparation and responsible runners prevented more serious problems on what was one of the hottest marathons in Boston history.

Heat was also a problem in the 2004 marathon, when 2,041 of the 18,002 participants who started the race sought medical attention. That's a higher percentage than any year in memory, according to organizers.

"This was the day we were preparing for," said Thomas Grilk, executive director of the Boston Athletic Association.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The outcome of any serious research can only be to make two questions grow where only one grew before."

— Thorstein Veblen

In today's deal from a charity game in honor of Arthur Loeb to benefit the Lenox Hill Neighborhood House, how do you find out scientifically whether you want to be in slam?

Once hearts are set as trump, North can ask for key cards (the four aces and the trump king). If the response is zero or three — or one or four — the cheapest step asks for the trump queen; the response in the trump suit denies it, and a bid in any other suit promises it. If the responder has two key cards, the immediate response either shows or denies the trump queen.

Today, however, slam has two chances, the first being to find the trump queen, the second to discard North's clubs on declarer's spades. On a nonspade lead, such as the diamond jack, you should cash the heart ace and unblock dummy's two spade honors. Only then do you lead a heart to the king, trying to cash your spade winners to pitch dummy's clubs.

However, at a few tables where key-card Blackwood was not in use, West led the club ace against six hearts, and now the diamond-jack shift went to the ace, eight and six.

How to play the trump suit now? After the ace and a small heart sees East follow twice, the old adage is "Eight ever, nine never." However, East's play of the diamond eight was surely significant, suggesting shortage. Since West appeared to have many more diamonds than East, the heart finesse was the odds-on play, and declarer duly took it to make his slam.

ANSWER: You may look at this 16-count and assume you have extra values. But in a sense, with your doubleton spade honors not pulling their full weight, you have really nothing to spare in high cards, and certainly nothing extra in terms of shape. Pass two hearts, and be happy to stay low.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 43-year-old veteran of the grocery industry. I am also an associate of one of the premier supermarkets in the country, and I disagree with your response to "Chicago Clipper" (Feb. 18)!

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Coupons are a necessary evil and are graciously accepted, but they create an abundance of work for retailers. It takes countless hours of sorting, logging, filling out forms, mailing and receiving to be reimbursed for the face value of the coupon. This is hardly a benefit to the grocer.

The abuse and fraud associated with coupons adds up into millions of dollars. When a customer leaves one on a shelf for the next shopper, it usually ends up on the floor. So we now have a slick surface that someone can slip on and fall. When they are placed on an item in the dairy or meat case, they inevitably fall to the bottom and clog the drains, which causes water backups — another safety hazard — not to mention it's trash we must fish out. All of this takes time and money away from the associates performing our duties in a very low-profit industry.

By leaving an unwanted coupon on a store shelf for the next customer, Chicago Clipper is NOT "paying it forward." She's adding to the problem. So, please, folks, keep your coupons in your purse, wallet, pocket or coupon book until you get to the checkout line.

— FLORIDA BUTCHER

DEAR FLORIDA BUTCHER: Thank you for pointing out to my readers and me some of the problems coupons may create. Your sentiments were repeated by many retailers. However, other shoppers and retailers offered suggestions that may help to eliminate the problem, including: coupon exchanges, donating them to the military, posting them on Freecycle, Craigslist or Facebook, etc. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a coupon user. I am also a grocery store employee. I constantly have to pick up coupons left by customers who are "paying it forward" or "being generous." Not only are they a safety hazard, but they make our store look unkempt. We pride ourselves in maintaining a high standard of appearance. We actually clean up more coupons than those we redeem.

Why not hand the extra coupons to your checker and ask that they be offered to the next customer? As for litterbugs who leave expired coupons laying around, every check stand is equipped with a garbage can, and an employee will be more than happy to throw out your trash if you ask.

— STORE MANAGER IN MONTANA

DEAR ABBY: I leave coupons for others, but I often go one step further. If I see someone with the item in his or her cart, I'll offer the coupon directly to that person. So far, I have met pleasant people who are happy to get a break at the cash register. I have also met people who have told me how delighted they were to find coupons on shelves.

— MARIE IN MAINE

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow with a 20-year-old car and I accidentally smashed in its front end.

When I got home and my neighbor saw what had happened, he spent his next weekend at a wreckage yard buying all the necessary replacements. The following weekend he reassembled my car to perfection.

Would he take any money for his efforts? No!

Abby, there are wonderful people in this world and he is certainly one of them. And incidentally, he is a Navy captain on active duty.

— LEE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR LEE: So your guardian angel wears a Navy uniform! He's not only an officer and a gentleman, but also a master mechanic. You are one lucky lady, and he is a sweetheart.

Today is Tuesday, April 17, the 108th day of 2012. There are 258 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 17, 1937, the animated cartoon character Daffy Duck made his debut in the Warner Bros. cartoon "Porky's Duck Hunt," directed by Tex Avery.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1492, a contract was signed by Christopher Columbus and a representative of Spain's King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, giving Columbus a commission to seek a westward ocean passage to Asia.

In 1521, Martin Luther went before the Diet of Worms (vohrms) to face charges stemming from his religious writings. (He was later declared an outlaw by Holy Roman Emperor Charles V.)

In 1861, the Virginia State Convention voted to secede from the Union.

In 1911, the town of Palm Beach, Fla., was incorporated.

In 1941, Yugoslavia surrendered to Germany during World War II.

In 1961, some 1,500 CIA-trained Cuban exiles launched the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in an attempt to topple Fidel Castro, whose forces crushed the incursion by the third day.

In 1969, a jury in Los Angeles convicted Sirhan Sirhan of assassinating Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The First Secretary of Czechoslovakia's Communist Party, Alexander Dubcek, was deposed.

In 1970, Apollo 13 astronauts James A. Lovell, Fred W. Haise and Jack Swigert splashed down safely in the Pacific, four days after a ruptured oxygen tank crippled their spacecraft while en route to the moon.

In 1972, the Boston Marathon allowed women to compete for the first time; Nina Kuscsik was the first officially recognized women's champion, with a time of 3:10:26.

In 1975, Cambodia's five-year war ended as the capital Phnom Penh fell to the Khmer Rouge, which instituted radical policies that claimed an estimated 1.7 million lives until the regime was overthrown in 1979.

In 1986, at London's Heathrow Airport, a bomb was discovered in the bag of a pregnant Irish woman about to board an El Al jetliner to Israel; she'd been tricked into carrying the bomb by her Jordanian fiancé.

In 1997, former Israeli president Chaim Herzog died in Tel Aviv at age 78.

Ten years ago: Four Canadian soldiers in Afghanistan were killed when they were mistakenly bombed by an American F-16 pilot. (The pilot, Maj. Harry Schmidt, was later fined and reprimanded in a non-judicial hearing.) Secretary of State Colin Powell ended his 10-day Middle East peace mission after failing to get the ceasefire he'd sought between Israel and the Palestinians. A federal judge ruled the Justice Department couldn't interfere with Oregon's assisted-suicide law. (The law was ultimately upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.)

Five years ago: A day after the Virginia Tech massacre, President George W. Bush visited the campus, where he told students and teachers at a somber convocation that the nation was praying for them and "there's a power in these prayers." In Rome, a U.S. soldier went on trial in absentia for the shooting death of Italian intelligence agent Nicola Calipari at an Iraqi checkpoint in March 2005. (However, a court later threw out the proceedings against Spec. Mario Lozano, saying Italy had no jurisdiction.) Actress Kitty Carlisle Hart died in New York at age 96.

One year ago: U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton visited Japan, where she expressed confidence the country would fully recover from its tsunami and nuclear disasters. Actor Michael Sarrazin, 70, died in Montreal.

IF APRIL 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next four weeks, get all crucial matters into alignment. Prepare for a brief period of heavy going in the first half of June. That is when people will be more likely to criticize you and when the best-laid plans can go awry. Keep a low profile and give no one a reason to find fault. Late June and early July offer a great deal of improvement and a good time to launch your key initiatives or make key decisions. Duck for cover in September when once again the stars test your resolve. Make no new commitments, but be scrupulous about meeting any obligations you already have. December is an excellent time to launch financial arrangements or sign business contracts.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Just because you hope to line your pockets doesn't make you an avatar of avarice. Your good sense and luck when handling financial affairs might be misconstrued by others as greed. Ignore them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Compete with someone else's magnificent obsession. Something may turn your special someone on, but it might be a job, a new project or a business deal instead of you. Don't fight against the tides.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The novelty will wear off soon. New friends might be fascinating only because they offer a taste of something that breaks up dull routines. You are engrossed by the latest technological playthings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Learn something new. If you remain intensely and passionately focused on becoming knowledgeable about a subject it will no longer be a stumbling block and you can change the future outcome.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Positive thinking isn't the answer. It isn't enough to be optimistic; you must actually do things that foster improvement in your life. Pay down debts or read and study to educate yourself; take command.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't give in to wishful thinking. Your sign ruler Mercury has moved into energetic Aries, but that doesn't necessarily mean that fast talking gets you anywhere. Meet up with those who enjoy conversation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your black belt is slipping. You may be engaged in acts of political jujitsu. Since you are often on the defensive of late, other people may find dealing with you requires being offensive. Avoid controversies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spend in haste; regret in leisure. Save your enthusiasm for a fascinating new or unusual interest for another time. Don't fritter away hard-earned cash on a fad or in an effort to compete with friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If success were easy, there would be more successful people in the world. Don't just wait around for a pot of gold to appear at the end of the rainbow. The things you want to own can be an incentive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Peer pressure can be painful. The more you think that you are absolutely right, the more likely you are to be wrong. Just because you see what is wrong with the world, you do not need to point it out to everyone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be tired of being reliable. Career, school work, job or business can make heavy demands, or require that you remain poised for sudden changes, but can also provide bountiful rewards.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The money in your pocket easily slips away. Keep in mind that there are no strings attached to the dollars you have. You can spend them as you wish, but might be more reckless and impetuous than usual.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
