Report Questions Schools Funding

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • School districts across Idaho are looking to taxpayers for help keeping schools up and running.

This year, 81 school districts have a voter-approved supplemental levy issue in place. That's nearly 70 percent of the state's 117 districts, according to data from the Idaho State Department of Education.

"Our supplemental levy has become a survival levy, just like everyone else," Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said.

School districts' growing reliance on voter-approved funding is central to a report released last week by the non-profit Idaho Center for Fiscal Policy.

Written by former longtime chief state economist Mike Ferguson, the report suggests changes to Idaho's school funding system might have violated a constitutional requirement to maintain a uniform and thorough system of public and free schools.

The report also states public schools funding as a share of state spending has dropped sharply since 2000.

Idaho school districts used to receive part of their funding from local property tax revenue.

FORECLOSURES STAY STEADY

Foreclosed Homes Tempt Bargain Hunters

TWIN FALLS • Picture a four-bedroom home with brand-new roof, interior paint, carpeting, electrical wiring, dual-pane windows and kitchen counters.

The 1,800-square-foot house sits in an attractive, well-kept Twin Falls neighborhood with little traffic and a city park within easy walking distance.

Think such a place can't be affordable? It just might be within reach if it's a foreclosed property such as the one described above, which is selling for $93,000 to a first-time buyer.

It's one of the foreclosed houses owned by First Federal Bank of Twin Falls. The bank often renovates foreclosures to make them attractive to people wanting something they can move right into.

"This house should qualify for (a Federal Housing Administration) loan," said Jason Meyerhoeffer, First Federal's chief credit officer. "That's the standard we try to meet."

A total of 316 foreclosed houses reverted to bank ownership or were sold at auction in Twin Falls County during 2010, according to

T.F. Post Offices Quiet at Tax Filing Deadline

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • It was a fairly normal Tuesday afternoon at the downtown U.S. Post Office.

Customers came to pick up applications for passports, find boxes for oddly shaped items, and mail off manila envelopes. There was rarely a line with more than a few people at a time.

It was tax day, traditionally a madhouse for post offices across the United States as people rush to meet the filing deadline. But a combination of online tax services and professional tax preparers have made the postal chaos a relic of decades past.

It wasn't always this way.

A 1998 Associated Press article describes the party-like scene on tax day at Boise post offices: Back rubs, performances by Boise Philharmonic musicians, and discussions on tax reform with then-Sen. Larry Craig distracted the line of stressed-out people who had procrastinated on filing.

Not so in 2012. Gigi Hilbert of Buhl was in and out of the downtown Twin Falls post office in less than five minutes.

UI, SLAIN STUDENT'S FAMILY REACH DEAL

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • University of Idaho officials and the family of a graduate student who was killed by a professor she had dated have agreed to a financial settlement in a claim against the school over the 22-year-old's death, sources told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

A settlement would bring some closure in the wake of shootings that police have described as a murder-suicide, which horrified faculty, students and parents and brought Idaho's oldest public university under intense scrutiny.

The terms of the agreement between Katy Benoit's family and the school were not immediately available.

Benoit died in August after police say she was shot 11 times by Ernesto Bustamante, an assistant psychology professor with whom she had recently broken off a romantic relationship.

Police say Bustamante, after shooting Benoit, checked in at a Moscow hotel and killed himself. He had resigned from Assistant City Manager Mike Williams said the idea is to make information more easily accessible.

"Ultimately we want to tell our story better, and that's what this position will do," Williams said.

In the new position, Palmer will provide information on the city's activities online through its website and social media, as well as work with local media outlets to release information. Palmer will also work with the city to reach out to civic groups and the private sector.

Palmer, 32, started working at the Times-News in 2005, previously serving as an education reporter and business editor. He begins work at the city on April 30. He lives in Twin Falls with his wife, Karen, and children Jacob, 5, and Lacey, 2.

CSI Board Revises Relationship Policy

Idaho didn't lead to the change.

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho's board of trustees approved a revised policy Monday about consensual relationships involving employees.

The policy states that "no employer shall enter into or continue a romantic or sexual relationship with a student or employee over whom she or he exercises academic, administrative, supervisory, evaluative, counseling or other authority."

It's the first time the college's policy has been revised since December 2001, though officials say a recent incident at the University of revision was part of a regular policy manual update.

"That was one of the policies that was on the docket to be looked at," he said.

The policy was reviewed by CSI employees before it came to the college's board.

Arrossa said the policy is precautionary and spells out the guidelines for consensual relationships. However, he said it's never been an issue in the past.

He said an August incident at the U of I "heightened our awareness" about the topic, but wasn't the reason for revising the relationship policy.

Katy Benoit, a U of I student, was shot and killed in August 2011 by her former professor, Ernesto Bustamante, whom she had been in a romantic relationship with until earlier that year.

by an owner or an investor," she said. "If an owner is buying, we ask the bank to put some work into it. If it is something an investor is buying, it usually is a home in poor condition and the bank is not likely to put much money into it."

ing. Prices are holding pretty firm and there have been some good sales."

Gooding suggests that anyone buying a foreclosed property have it thoroughly looked at by a qualified inspector. Getting a professional opinion about wiring, the heating system and other aspects is vital, as with the purchase of any home, she said.

One of the roadblocks to stimulating the housing industry is that federal underwriters Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae have been reluctant to approve loans, said First Federal's Meyerhoeffer. They have put on the brakes more than banks have, he said.

"I strongly suggest that whether it's a bank repossession or a traditional seller. It's one of those 'buyer beware' things," she said.

"Those entities have become more conservative in underwriting loans they will accept," Meyerhoeffer said. "That's not altogether a bad thing. Some of the underwriting that occurred is what led to the problems we are having."

Gooding said this is the time of year when many homeowners who've fallen behind in payments try to catch up and avoid their foreclosure by spending their tax returns.

As for foreclosures, he said the popular perception is that they hurt market value of other homes, but he disagrees.

She cautions buyers against expecting a steal just because a house has been foreclosed.

"If (a house) goes through foreclosure and is purchased by a first-time homebuyer, then it will likely improve the neighborhood," Meyerhoeffer said. "They are proud of their home and will fix it up. That would improve the value of the neighborhood almost every time."

"The banks are a lot more aggressive dropping their prices than the traditional sellers are, but not as much as people think," Gooding said.

The same thing happens if an investor buys a foreclosure with the intent to sell it. However, if an investor purchases a foreclosure as a rental and doesn't improve the property, it will have a negative effect, he said.

She believes the Magic Valley's agriculture base and some of the area's solid commercial businesses helped the housing market avoid the drastic dive seen in other regions.

Buyers must weigh needed repair costs when contemplating the purchase of a foreclosure, Meyerhoeffer added. What appears to be an extremely low price might not turn out that way.

"We are kind of a unique little area," Gooding said. "We are conservative by nature and the risk-takers weren't here as much as other places. The real estate market here is actually rebound-

She recalled ridiculously long lines on past tax days in California, where she used to live.

Here, it didn't even occur to her it was tax day. "I wasn't even thinking of it," said Hilbert, who used H&R Block to file her taxes.

Twin Falls Postmaster Bill Reese said the post office has seen a decrease in tax day traffic in recent years. "(Monday) was steady," Reese said. "It wasn't terribly bad, but it wasn't all just tax returns either."

On Tuesday morning, Reese predicted his staff would log extra hours, partly because of the tax returns and partly because a couple of staff members are out on sick leave. But, he said, it would be nothing like years past.

"We're seeing a fairly good decline, even from last year," Reese said.

his position at the university only days earlier.

Authorities say they found six guns and medications for bipolar disorder and severe anxiety in his hotel room.

Bustamante, who had been known to alternately refer to himself as a "psychopathic killer" and "the beast," disclosed that took medication for bipolar disorder shortly after he was hired in 2007, according to public records obtained by The AP and other media outlets in October.

Benoit's family filed a $3 million tort claim against the university in December, saying the school "negligently and recklessly" hired, retained and supervised Bustamante.

The university knew that he engaged in abusive sexual relationships with female students and "failed in its duty to prevent Bustamante's sexual harassment of Katy Benoit," according to the family's claim.

Benoit complained to the university last June that Bustamante had pointed a loaded gun at her head on three separate occasions and told her he would kill her.

Puppet Show Teaches Safety Advice

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

WENDELL • Five-year-old Gissel Ochoa knows exactly what to do if a stranger offers her candy or asks her assistance in finding a lost pet.

"Tell your mom. Your grandpa," Ochoa said.

Find and tell a trusted adult?

"Yeah!" said the student of Wendell's Orchard Valley Head Start.

The school's students were taught safety lessons on Tuesday through a bilingual puppet show as part of National Child Abuse Prevention Month. Instead of simply sitting through a lecture, the school's 32 students were eased into what can be an uncomfortable topic by using animal puppets to introduce safety advice.

"Using puppets is a good way for the kids to connect to the subject and understand the concept," said family educator Ruth Calderon.

Roxanna Bielmas, 18, is doing her senior project at the Head Start center. Her project was inspired by Bielmas seeing how well her little sister responded to the program.

something safe and fun like a puppet. The kids looked liked they had a good time."

Cayden Hughes, 4, of Wendell, certainly did.

"I learned how to be safe and the puppet show was fun to watch, too," Hughes said.

Center Director Cindy Scott said Tuesday's event simply introduced students to safety concepts. The center will continue teaching the class more lessons, including recognizing abuse and telling an adult if something happens to them.

"We never like thinking about bad things happening to our children, but it's important to educate them and give them the tools necessary so they can protect themselves," Scott said.

Lincoln Elementary Receives School Garden Grant

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Lincoln Elementary School will receive a $2,500 grant from the Recyclebank Green Schools program for its school garden.

The program awards grant money to schools for unique student projects that will "green" their classrooms and community.

At 11:30 a.m. today, representatives from program partners — including Twin Falls Mayor Greg Lanting, Recyclebank and PSI-Waste Connections employees Josh Brown and Les Reitz — will present the school with a check.

The school will use grant funding to plant a school garden. The project will also include creating a composting system using lunchroom scraps and building a greenhouse with irrigation. Students will learn about planting, composting and starting seedlings.

There will also be garden parties throughout the gardening season.

Lincoln Elementary will make compost available for neighbors who want to start their own garden. Students will be encouraged to adopt a neighbor and assist them in tilling and planting in the spring.

Schools across the county submitted green project proposals to Recyclebank in order to participate in the Green Schools program. Recyclebank members donated their points to help fund the schools' projects and Recyclebank matched member point donations dollar-for-dollar.

Retired CSI Instructor to Oversee Welding Program

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Starting today, a retired College of Southern Idaho instructor will temporarily oversee the college's welding program.

Jim Schlund — who retired from the college three years ago — directed CSI's diesel technology program for 28 years. He also taught some welding classes.

CSI President Jerry Beck said Schlund will be paid $40 per hour to finish out the term.

Schlund will fill in for welding instructors Juan Martinez and Kent Parish, who were put on paid administrative leave Thursday.

CSI spokesman Doug Maughan wrote in an email to the Times-News that college administrators and outside advisers continue their investigation into the personnel matter. He didn't know when the situation could be resolved.

Regular classes will resume today for welding students.

Earlier this week, students were given the option of working in the welding lab under the direction of a lab assistant.

Maughan said the priority is to make sure students can finish their degrees or certificates. The spring semester continues until May 4, followed by finals week.

Info Sought on Car Involved in Tuesday Semi Rollover

TIMES-NEWS

HANSEN • Idaho State Police are seeking information on an unidentified vehicle they believe caused a Tuesday semitrailer rollover near the Hansen Bridge.

According to an ISP release, a 2011 Peterbilt semitrailer pulling a flatbed trailer rolled — spilling roofing material across Idaho Highway 50 — when its driver swerved to miss an unidentified vehicle that turned in front of it from 3900 North Road.

The semitrailer's driver, 37-year-old Joshua Stallings, of Weiser, was uninjured when his vehicle overturned, but the result of his evasive action ultimately blocked both lanes of the highway for about two hours.

Stallings was wearing a seat belt at the time of the crash. The crash remains under investigation.

ISP asks anyone with information about the vehicle that turned in front of Stallings to call 324-6000.

Forest Service OKs Travel Plan for Clearwater

LEWISTON (AP) • The U.S. Forest Service has signed off on a new travel plan for the Clearwater National Forest that shuts down trails to motorized vehicles and has drawn criticism from recreation and conservation groups alike.

The new plan was affirmed after administrative appeals week by Jane Cottrell, deputy regional forester in Missoula, Mont., and a former supervisor of the Nez Perce National Forest in Idaho. The plan, which closes about 200 miles of trails and about 1 million acres to motorized travel across the forest, follows existing rules and regulations and adheres to the agency's mission, Cottrell said.

Forest Supervisor Rick Brazell said the new blueprint for managing travel access will protect elk habitat yet still provide a wide variety of trails for forest visitors. Even though the plan bans motorcycles from some trails, the forest will allow motorized travel on 1,388 miles of trails in Idaho County alone, he said.

"I think it's a positive thing for elk habitat," Brazell told the Lewiston Tribune in a story published Tuesday. "There is still ample opportunity for folks to go ride motorcycles and four-wheelers. We didn't cut back that much."

The plan was appealed by 26 groups and individuals irritated with various aspects of the plan, which forbids cross-country travel and closes several long, single-track trails to motorcycle riders. It was also challenged by conservation groups claiming it still gave too much access

"In my opinion, we are getting to the point where we just can't take anymore. ... The end result is we have to take our local forest back out of federal control somehow."

Idaho County Commissioner Skip Brandt

to motorized travel like motorcycles and all-terrain vehicles.

Both sides are considering filing lawsuits to prevent the forest from implementing the new plan.

"In my opinion, we are getting to the point where we just can't take anymore," said Idaho County Commissioner Skip Brandt. "Whether it's locking out the locals from motorized access or locking us out of jobs, we are getting backed into a corner. The end result is we have to take our local forest back out of federal control somehow."

Gary Macfarlane, ecosystem defense director of the Friends of the Clearwater, said his group will go to court barring an objection from the group's attorneys.

"Unless they tell us we don't have a case, I think we are probably going to end up in court on it," he said. "I believe the Forest Service erred and violated executive orders by leaving so much of the backcountry open to motor vehicles."

Where's a Yellowstone Bear? On Your Phone

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • Pretty soon, the best place to be on the lookout for wolves, grizzly bears, bison and other wildlife in Yellowstone National Park could be your phone.

Just don't be surprised if lots of other people get the same idea and most of the creatures you see are the two-legged variety.

New smartphone apps enable people to pinpoint where they've recently seen critters in Yellowstone. People who drive to those locations can — at least in theory — improve their odds of seeing wildlife compared to the typical tourist's dumb luck.

One app called Where's a Bear promises "up to the second" animal sightings in Yellowstone. Recently a website called Yellowstone Wildlife began offering a similar app.

Websites long have kept track of animal sightings in Yellowstone. Already this spring the Yellowstone Wildlife site shows signs of life: Mule deer near park headquarters at Mammoth, bison in the area of a landmark petrified tree.

A message on the site warns of grizzlies feeding on a bison carcass near the Yellowstone River Trail. The statement relayed from the National Park Service could save a life. Grizzly attacks killed two tourists in Yellowstone last summer.

But not everybody thinks that making a lot of wildlife sighting information readily retrievable by phone is a hot idea. As it is, the crowds that stop to gawk at roadside wildlife in Yellowstone can grow to hundreds of people, pointed out Vicky Kraft, of Pine Mountain, Calif., who maintains a Facebook group for Yellowstone.

Grizzlies are especially challenging for park rangers who have to both direct traffic and keep people a safe distance away.

"It's crazy. There's no parking. People sideswipe each other because they're looking at the bear," Kraft said Monday.

Wildlife becoming too comfortable around people is another concern. A grizzly habituated to people is even more dangerous than the average bear.

"I think there's a responsibility that a person should have if they really like Yellowstone to say, 'Gee, is this going to be bad for the animals? Is it bad for the ranger? Is it bad for the park?' And I think when you look at a situation with that app, the answer would have to be yes," Kraft said.

Attempts to reach the app developers through their websites Monday and Tuesday were unsuccessful.

Yellowstone officials said the apps would become a problem depending on their popularity.

"If it did take off it would be a concern. It's got other applications but at its worst core it would send more people to wildlife jams," Yellowstone spokesman Dan Hottle said.

One technical problem with the apps is the vast majority of Yellowstone doesn't have cellphone coverage. Also, it's not like anybody is going to persuade a moose, elk, or bald eagle to wait around for the next tourist to show up.

On the other hand, a pack of wolves seen killing a bison might stick around for days while they fed on the meat, suggested Tom Mangelsen, a wildlife photographer who lives in Jackson Hole, just south of Yellowstone.

"I imagine it would be helpful, certainly for tourists or people who aren't familiar with Yellowstone, and I suppose for people like me, too," Mangelsen said.

Mangelsen counts himself among the many photographers and tourists who have been watching a popular grizzly in Grand Teton over the past few years. The grizzly recently emerged from hibernation with her three cubs — big news in Jackson Hole.

Mangelsen said he didn't rush off to share the news online.

"I haven't been on one of those websites more than three times in my life to see what's going on in Yellowstone," he said. "But I know people live by it."

Malamute Rescue Group Plans Boise Rally for Montana Dogs

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • About 160 malamutes that were seized in a raid last fall in Jefferson County in Montana aren't yet up for adoption — the dogs' owner, Mike Chilinski, has been charged with dozens of counts of felony animal abuse and has yet to stand trial.

Boise-based Moonsong Malamute Rescue is monitoring the case closely. If the dogs become available for adoption after the trial, the local rescue group plans to find them new homes.

The group is organizing an April 26 rally, with live music and a raffle, to support the possible rescue effort. The event will be at 7 p.m. in the Rose Room, 718 W. Idaho St.,

Boise. There will be a no-host bar.

The malamutes were seized because they were "malnourished, unkempt, injured and mistreated," according to the Helena Independent Record. They are being cared for by the the Lewis and Clark Humane Society.

"We are excited about helping all the dogs find great homes and live the way they deserve to live," said Melissa Richeson Gallegos, Moonsong Malamute secretary/treasurer, in a news release.

Moonsong Malamute Rescue is based in Boise, but also serves Montana, Utah, Nevada, and Wyoming.

Boise Teen Pleads Guilty in Church Theft

BOISE • A southwestern Idaho teen has pleaded guilty to stealing cash and musical instruments from two Boise churches.

The Idaho Statesman reports 18-year-old Timothy Michael Brown will be sentenced June 4 for felony burglary and grand theft. As part of a plea agreement, Ada County prosecutors dropped three additional counts of burglary.

Brown was arrested in Georgia early this year and extradited back to Idaho to face charges in connection to church thefts reported late last year.

Authorities say the teen was caught on surveillance video stealing a donation box from St. Mark's Catholic Community Church on Nov. 20. During a hearing Monday, Brown also pleaded guilty to stealing guitars from a different church and selling the items, valued at more than $1,000, to a pawn shop.

AG Sides with Police in Nampa Shooting

BOISE • The Idaho Attorney General's office has determined that a Nampa police officer was justified in using deadly force during an armed standoff last summer.

The Idaho Statesman reports that the Attorney General is not recommending any charges be filed against officer Matt Thomas.

Thomas was one of several officers involved in an encounter with Charles Mefford, who died Aug. 24 from a gunshot wound to the head. Officers were trying to arrest Mefford on a robbery warrant when he pulled a gun and ran into a nearby house, then later fired shots at officers.

Deputy Attorney General Paul Panther said Mefford fired at officers and refused to obey commands to put down his firearm.

The six-hour standoff ended when officers found the Mefford dead inside the home.

State Settles Another Prescription Drug Case

BOISE • Idaho has reached a $2.6 million settlement with a prescription drug company accused of selling products at false or inflated prices.

The agreement announced Tuesday with drug manufacturer Glaxo-SmithKline marks the state's 14th settlement over price fixing matters with drug companies since 2005.

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says an investigation revealed the company inflated average wholesale prices of drugs eligible for Medicaid reimbursement by as much as 27 percent.

The inflated price results in overpayments to pharmacies that provide the drugs to Idaho Medicaid clients.

The settlement will return $620,000 to Idaho's general fund and $1.5 million to the federal government, bringing the total recovered since 2005 to $20 million.

Three other cases naming eight other drug manufacturers are still pending.

Man Charged in Death of 6-year-old Son

POCATELLO • A 27-year-old Pocatello man is charged with first-degree murder in the death of his 6-year-old son.

The Bannock County prosecutor's office announced the charge against Anthony Blake Viles on Tuesday. He was to be arraigned Tuesday afternoon. His bail was set at $1 million.

Deputy Chief Prosecutor Vic Pearson says when a child under the age of 12 dies as a result of aggravated battery, it becomes a first-degree murder case.

Viles was held on felony charges for injury to a child after he acknowledged striking Afton Allison last week. The boy died Sunday evening at a Salt Lake City hospital.

More than 50 people attended a candlelight vigil for Afton Monday night in Pocatello. Jessica Allison-Wrigley told those in attendance that her son's organs were donated to children awaiting transplants.

Neighbors Sue County to Block Nuclear Plant

BOISE • Neighbors of property in western Idaho where a company aims to construct a nuclear power plant are suing the local government there in an effort to block the project.

The neighbors seek to force Payette County to dump a 20-year development agreement with Alternate Energy Holdings Inc.

In a statement Tuesday, John Burlile and others say they aren't asking for money.

Instead, they want Payette County to rescind all decisions that helped the small company engage in what plaintiffs contend was a fraudulent stock scheme.

Last week, AEHI settled with investors for $450,000 to resolve allegations the company schemed to mislead shareholders.

Don Gillispie, the company's president, denies wrongdoing.

Monday's latest lawsuit alleges Payette County violated land-use planning laws.

Payette County commissioners hadn't yet reviewed the 3rd District Court complaint.

Woman Sentenced for Embezzlement

BOISE • The former treasurer of a Meridian homeowners association has been sentenced to a year in jail for stealing more than $20,000 from her neighbors.

The Idaho Statesman reports Kristy Jenkins was sentenced Monday to a year in jail followed by nine years on felony probation. She pleaded guilty to felony theft in February.

The plea agreement calls for Jenkins to pay restitution. The amount will be set at a hearing later this spring.

Meridian police began their investigation in August and developed evidence that Jenkins wrote personal checks with association money and opened up a credit card account in the name of the association to make personal purchases totaling about $20,000 between 2006 and 2011.

Head-on Crash Near Payette Kills 2 People

PAYETTE • The Idaho State Police says two people were killed in a head-on crash on U.S. Highway 95, just outside Payette.

The ISP is still investigating why their vehicles collided late Monday afternoon. The highway was blocked for over four hours.

Authorities say 80-year-old Allen St. Clair of Kamiah and 68-year-old Carolyn Sinner of Weiser died at the scene.

Boise Attorney Represents GOP Candidates in Patent Case

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • John Zarian, a Boise intellectual property attorney who worked as a volunteer for Mitt Romney during the past two presidential campaigns, is now defending him in a patent infringement case, along with Rick Santorum and Newt Gingrich.

The three, who have dominated the Republican political landscape for months in their quest to be the party's presidential candidate, were named in a lawsuit earlier this year.

The suit was filed by the co-inventors of a process they say is being used on Facebook. Frank Weyer, one of the inventors and a patent attorney in Los Angeles, filed the action against the three high-profile candidates along with JP Morgan and Goldman Sachs. The co-inventors had earlier filed a suit against Facebook, but that case is on hold.

Zarian has been a Romney supporter and volunteer. He did legal work for the candidate about the time of the Idaho caucus was held last month and was contacted by Romney's team about representing him, Zarian said. The other two candidates contacted Zarian shortly after.

Zarian is part of the Utah law firm Parsons Behle & Latimer, that has a Boise office.

Doc-lawyer Uses Dual Careers to Fight Idaho's Fetal-pain Law

Rick Hearn, of Pocatello, is using a legal strategy that many experts say is unheard of.

BY REBECCA BOONE
 Associated Press

BOISE • A poor woman in rural Idaho was looking for help after authorities said they found an aborted fetus in a box on her back porch.

Jennie Linn McCormack had been charged with giving herself an illegal abortion using drugs purchased online, and she faced five years in prison if convicted.

She had three kids, little money and less hope when she walked into a lawyer's office in Pocatello and told her story to Rick Hearn, who has a soft spot for underdogs. "Her circumstances pulled on my conscience," he said.

"I wanted to represent Jennie."

He had no idea his decision would turn into the nation's first lawsuit challenging the so-called fetal pain laws enacted in more than half a dozen states. Nor did he suspect he would end up trying to intervene in the lawsuit on behalf of a doctor who had never been involved in terminating a pregnancy — himself.

Hearn, who had already finished medical school when he decided to get a law degree, is using a legal strategy that many experts say is unheard of.

"This is like nothing that I've ever read about or encountered," said Bill Horton, a legal ethics expert associated with the American Health Lawyers Association and the American Bar Association's health division. "But these abortion rights lawsuits tend to bring out unusual strategies sometimes."

Hearn is trying to join the case as a plaintiff in an effort to overturn Idaho's fetal pain law as unconstitutional. The strategy is so novel that legal observers can't predict how it will turn out.

The doctor-lawyer says he is simply doing the right thing for his client.

"I was forced to take this highly unusual step," he said. "I didn't want to."

He says he frequently works with people who can use all the help they can get. "I normally represent the small people who are suing government or corporations," he said. "And I do some criminal defense."

McCormack came to him early last year, saying that she was a single mother living on between $200 and $250 a month and faced felony charges.

Authorities say on the day before Christmas in 2010, McCormack took abortion drugs to terminate a pregnancy that was more than five months along. An acquaintance heard that she'd done it and called police, who looked into the claim and said they found a fetus in a box on her porch.

The county prosecutor charged McCormack under an Idaho law that makes it illegal for anyone other than a health care professional to be involved with terminating a pregnancy. Hearn defended McCormack and the case was dismissed. But it wasn't a total victory: A judge tossed the charges "without prejudice," meaning she could be prosecuted again at any time.

Meanwhile, Idaho lawmakers passed the fetal pain law.

Such regulations ban abortions after 19 weeks of pregnancy, under the premise that a fetus may feel pain at 20 weeks.

The scientific research that bolsters the measures has been the subject of heavy debate, but such bans have been gaining momentum among conservative legislators. A plan passed last year in Idaho with overwhelming support.

Hearn didn't want McCormack living with the constant threat of prosecution and decided to turn the tables. Rather than wait for the law to come after his client, he and McCormack decided to go after the law.

They sued in federal court last September, fighting for McCormack's right to take medication to induce an abortion and for doctors' rights to prescribe such drugs. They also took aim at the fetal pain abortion ban, which they felt also violated women's constitutional rights to privacy.

But U.S. Judge B. Lynn Winmill ruled the lawsuit wouldn't get class-action status and that McCormack didn't have the right to challenge some aspects of the law because she wasn't currently pregnant and seeking an abortion.

So Hearn went one step further, filing a motion to intervene as a plaintiff himself, in his role as a physician who may want to prescribe abortion-inducing drugs in the future.

Never mind that Hearn hasn't practiced medicine for about six years — his license to practice is still current, he said.

And never mind that he's never performed an abortion, nor does he intend to. In fact, he's Catholic, and the church is strictly anti-abortion.

But Hearn says he's reconciled his personal beliefs with his professional efforts to help McCormack in her legal fight.

"Neither I nor my family are seeking abortions, and we would not. But Jennie is not Catholic," Hearn said. "This is about her right to choose."

Deputy Idaho Attorney General Clay Smith dismissed Hearn's move as merely an attempt to introduce issues that McCormack has no standing to present.

Hearn doesn't dispute that.

"I'm not trying to trick anybody or anything," he said.

He added, "I'm intervening in order to assert her right to obtain an abortion, and the courts have said that doctors can assert the rights of their patients."

OPINION

"If it turns out that some of the allegations that have been made in the press are confirmed, then of course I'll be angry. ... We are representing the people of the United States, and when we travel to another country, I expect us to observe the highest standards."

President Barack Obama speaking about allegations that Secret Service agents hired prostitutes while in Colombia.

OUR VIEW

Open Space Preservation Takes Foresight, Political Will

Before the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission voted on the Canyon Park North development on April 10, Commissioner Tom Frank had the final word.

His tone could only be described as resigned. "When I moved here in the '70s, that piece of land was a cow pasture," he said. "This development is going to represent a big change for this town and change is difficult."

But he said he didn't have a better alternative to offer, so he would vote for the project.

Then he made a motion to approve the preliminary plat for what will be a 25-acre commercial development on the rim of the Snake River Canyon. The commission unanimously approved the plat — now the final plat goes before the Twin Falls City Council.

The April 10 meeting wasn't a public hearing for the Canyon Rim development, but the commission did allow public comment.

Two women got up and asked the developer and the planning commission to reconsider the layout of the project to give it a more pedestrian-friendly, human-scale feeling.

When citizens made similar complaints the night before during a zoning change discussion for the same project at the Twin Falls City Council meeting, Councilman Shawn Barigar told them the property had long been slotted for retail development.

"If you want wide open spaces, that left a long time ago in Twin Falls, no matter how many hundred feet you get back from the canyon," he said.

His comment might sound cold, but he's right. The "long time ago" Barigar refers to was 40 years ago when the land along the canyon rim next to Blue Lakes Boulevard was purchased for future development.

If preserving open space is indeed a community value, then it must be named as such.

And that preservation must be recognized as the process it is — taking years of community effort, not just a last-minute plea at a planning commission meeting.

Citizens must identify the viewsheds and the open space they want to protect long before the land is purchased and the plat is being presented. Those identified areas must be included in the Twin Falls Comprehensive Plan, the city's planning document that City Council uses for establishing policies and directing growth and development.

If it is done early and with all the stakeholders at the table, preserving open space can go hand-in-hand with economic development.

Twin Falls missed its opportunity to set aside this particular view along the rim decades ago.

The development of Canyon Park North will be a boon to economic growth in the Magic Valley, and the community will always have access to the canyon through pathways along the rim that continue to be developed.

Meanwhile, the city has taken an incredible step to purchase and preserve the nearby wildlife area around Auger Falls — the kind of planning necessary to preserve such vistas in the long term.

For those residents who are angry about losing the view of the rim to shopping, it is a lesson for the future.

THEIR VIEW

LEGALIZE DRUGS? DISCUSSION IS VALID FOR U.S., MEXICO

The following editorial appeared in the Los Angeles Times on Sunday

The Summit of the Americas is more often a photo opportunity than a forum for bold policy initiatives. When issues of substance are discussed, the meeting of the hemisphere's 34 leaders has generally yielded more clashes than regional pacts. But some saw a chance for a little more action this year when leaders from several Latin American countries came to this weekend's summit in the Colombian seaside city of Cartagena complaining of drug war fatigue.

Over the last six months, that weariness has been spreading throughout Latin America. Colombia's Juan Manuel Santos, Guatemala's Otto Perez Molina and Mexico's Felipe Calderon have all suggested that governments need to look at options beyond the military strategies that have left tens of thousands dead in Latin America while failing to curb consumption in the United States, the largest cocaine market in the world.

The three leaders, all close U.S. allies, say it is time to discuss decriminalizing drugs, with Perez writing that global drug policy is grounded in what he calls the false premise that "global drug markets can be eradicated." He says that ending prohibition would remove the obscene profits from the trade and, as a result, reduce the competition and violence that is part of it. With the U.S. presidential election just months away, the Obama administration is not going to engage in discussions about liberalizing drug laws just at the moment.

But Latin American leaders, weary of failed enforcement policies, are calling for an important discussion. The United States should not jump on the decriminalization bandwagon without a lot of serious thought and careful analysis. But nor should it shut itself out of that debate. Alternative approaches that hold out hope for a regional solution deserve a fair hearing.

Not Funding Mustard Tree Shows Misplaced Priorities

To the Twin Falls City Council members:

I know that when you have to vote on certain items to do with the city that you are not going to please everyone all the time. But that being said, I would really like to know how you justify $20,000 for the Twin Falls Municipal Band and $9,000 to the Magic Valley Arts Council but can't help out the Mustard Tree.

In these tough economic times with people out of work and no medical insurance, the Mustard Tree is sometimes the only place they can get treated for any illnesses.

I think a wiser decision would have been to spread the grant money around to areas in the community where it is needed most.

Maybe the city council members should get out in the community more so they can get an idea what is lacking here. Don't get me wrong, I'm all for the music and arts programs; I just think our priorities might have gone astray here.

Thank you for reading this.

E. Idaho Boy Who Died in Shooting ID'd

IDAHO FALLS • Free-mont County officials have released the name of a 14-year-old boy who died after an accidental shooting over the weekend.

The sheriff's office says William Storm Rees died Saturday in a shooting at his grandparents' home in Teton.

Authorities say emergency crews responded about 7:45 p.m. Saturday to a report of a boy being shot in the abdomen.

Officials say Rees was handling the firearm while his grandfather was checking on something and the gun went off.

The boy was flown to the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls where he later died.

E. Idaho Man Shot During Police Standoff

McCAMMON • Authorities say an eastern Idaho man remains hospitalized in critical condition after being shot and wounded by police when he emerged from his home after a standoff with police with a rifle and a loaded round in the firing chamber.

Bannock County Sheriff Lorin Nielsen tells the Idaho State Journal that 51-year-old Dennis Alan Buzzell was taken to a Pocatello hospital.

He was listed in critical condition Sunday. Nielsen did not say how many times Buzzell was shot.

Officers responded to a report of shots being fired at about 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Nielsen says Buzzell fired at officers who surrounded his house. Police say Buzzell emerged at 9 p.m., but refused orders to drop his rifle.

Man Arrested in Idaho in Montana Assault

MISSOULA, Mont. • A Montana man wanted for attempted deliberate homicide and aggravated assault is under arrest in Idaho.

KGVO-AM reports that 57-year-old John Navarro Stone of Fortine was arrested Monday afternoon at Jerry Johnson Hot Springs, just over the Montana border.

The Western News reports Stone was wanted in Lincoln County in northwestern Montana for the March 10 beating of a female companion.

Idaho County Sheriff Doug Gittings says Stone tried to escape arrest by jumping over a bridge into the river, but deputies were able to stop him.

Last Seen in Moscow

A missing person poster for Rachael Leigh Anderson of Clarkston, Wash. — two years after she went missing — is seen on Monday in Moscow.

LEWISTON TRIBUNE • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two Years Later, Fate of Mom Who Went Missing in Idaho Still a Mystery

BY KERRI SANDAINE
Lewiston Tribune

CLARKSTON, Wash. • On a rainy April afternoon, Rachael Anderson left her home in Clarkston and never returned. The mother of four was last seen in Moscow two years ago Monday, and posters of the dark-haired woman with a big smile are still hanging in storefront windows and pinned to bulletin boards across the region.

At this point, police believe she was murdered, and detectives haven't stopped searching for clues in their investigation of what happened to Anderson on April 16, 2010.

Asotin County Detective Jackie Nichols said police know there are people out there who could provide the answers, and they are making progress in piecing together evidence.

"We will leave no stone unturned," Nichols said. "We are getting closer."

Anderson's family wants closure, but they also know it's going to be difficult to hear the cold, hard facts of what transpired. They say Anderson, who was 40 at the time of her disappearance, wasn't the type to run off and leave her kids, so something terrible must have happened.

"It is hard to believe it's been two years," said her oldest daughter, 26-year-old Amber Griswold of Lewiston. "I feel frozen in time. I want a resolution, but it's frightening both ways — not to know and to know the truth."

Griswold said the passage of time hasn't made it any easier to accept that her mother is probably never coming back. The family can't move on or grieve properly because Anderson is still missing.

"I think about my mom multiple times a day and she is in every single one of my dreams," Griswold said. "I feel like we're at a standstill. It's discouraging because there's nothing the family can do right now."

Anderson's younger sister, Kristina Bonefield, said it's taken a toll on everyone in the family. The 33-year-old woman lives in Belle Fourche, S.D., where Anderson grew up.

"It's just so hard to say goodbye to someone when you don't know where they are," Bonefield said in a phone interview with the Tribune. "How can you not think about a missing family member? She's my sister, and I miss her. I feel so sorry for her kids."

In the beginning, family members almost felt guilty if they even thought for a minute she wasn't coming back, Bonefield said, breaking into tears.

"You felt like you were giving up hope. Now it's been two years. She definitely didn't run off and leave her children. She has a new grandbaby who was born in February, and she wasn't there. She made a big deal out of birthdays and stuff. It's like a huge part of our lives is gone."

Capt. Dan Hally of the Asotin County Sheriff's Office said one of the most frustrating parts of this case is not being able to provide answers that would give the family some closure.

There are persons of interest in the case, including Anderson's estranged husband, Charles A. Capone, Hally said. He is in prison on a federal firearms charge and scheduled to be released in September.

"Even though the evidence has led us to focus somewhat on specific individuals, we still continue to investigate all possibilities, and we haven't drawn any conclusions," Hally said.

Nichols keeps a picture of Anderson on her office wall and continues to follow up on leads and search for her whereabouts at every opportunity.

"At a certain point, it is going to be very difficult for some people to explain away the mounting evidence we have compiled," Nichols said. "This is by no means a cold case."

Consumers Warned to Beware of Unlicensed Debt Collectors

BY AUDREY DUTTON
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Businesses that collect debts and offer credit counseling and debt consolidation to Idaho consumers — without a license — are a nagging problem, according to interviews and state records.

The Idaho Department of Finance can crack down on bad actors, but it often relies on consumer tips. Those tips let the department know a company is working the phones and the mail, trying to collect in Idaho.

"First thing is, check the website (at finance.idaho.gov) to see if they're licensed," said Anthony Polidori, supervising examiner for the department's consumer finance bureau.

Can't find the company's name listed in the licenses?

Call the department at 332-8000, he said.

"If the collection agency is collecting a legitimate debt ... (people) want to be cognizant of it, that (not paying) could affect that account," Polidori said. But make sure a company is legal before making any agreements with it, he said.

According to the department:

In February, the department ordered New York company Cambridge Huxley & Associates LLC to stop taking money from Idahoans. The company already had a similar order against it in Minnesota.

Between December 2009 and October 2011, Cambridge Huxley tried to collect from at least three Idahoans without being licensed to do so.

One of those Idahoans asked Cambridge Huxley for licensure information, then was left alone.

The company also called an Idaho man and demanded $1,143, threatening him with felony check-fraud charges if he didn't pay. The Idahoan gave his bank account information to Cambridge Huxley.

In November 2011, an Idaho woman complained to state officials that the company was threatening her with a felony and calling her repeatedly.

The company had a chance to respond to Idaho's order, but didn't. It hasn't applied for a license.

Businesses licensed by the department's consumer finance bureau grew in number in fiscal 2011, according to the department's annual report. But the debt-collection industry made up almost all of that. Nearly 41,000 debt collection agents were licensed in Idaho in fiscal 2011.

To be licensed, agencies must submit annual reports to the state and obey state consumer-protection laws.

The department found about 20 companies doing unlicensed debt and credit counseling and collections in Idaho during the last fiscal year. They included Twin Falls-based Magic Valley Credit Repair, Kentucky-based National Patient Account Services and Florida-based Christian Debt Consolidation Inc.

"Before I started seeing Dr. Jill this pregnancy, I could hardly walk. At 35 weeks I had to use the motorized carts while shopping because my hips and low back hurt so badly. The night after my first adjustment from Dr. Jill, I was able to walk around with no pain!! I can't believe I went through my first pregnancy without chiropractic care. Next time around I will go to Dr. Jill from day one."

Norway Killer Expounds on Views at Trial

BY KARL RITTER
Associated Press

OSLO, Norway • In a scene unimaginable in many countries, Norway's worst mass killer got the chance to explain his fanatical views to the court and the world, unrepentant and dressed in a business suit. Prosecutors and lawyers for the families of his 77 victims even shook his hand.

Two days into Anders Behring Breivik's terror trial, the way Norway's legal system deals with a confessed killer who rejects its authority is baffling — even to some Norwegians.

The 33-year-old far-right militant gave a rambling hour-long address to the court on Tuesday, reading from a statement that essentially summarized the 1,500-page anti-Islamic manifesto he posted online before his bomb-and-shooting rampage nine months ago.

"The attacks on July 22 were a preventive strike. I acted in self-defense on behalf of my people, my city, my country," Breivik declared, demanding to be found innocent of terror and murder charges. "I would have done it again!"

Breivik has five days to explain why he detonated a bomb outside government headquarters in Oslo, killing eight people, then drove to a nearby resort island, where he massacred 69 others, mostly teens, at a summer youth camp run by the governing Labor Party.

Breivik, who has admitted carrying out the grisly acts, boasted they were the most "spectacular" by a nationalist militant since World War II.

His victims were part of a conspiracy to "deconstruct" Norway's cultural identity, he said. Comparing the Labor Party youth wing to the Hitler Youth, he called their annual summer gathering an "indoctrination" camp.

Prostitution Scandal Ricochets Through D.C.

BY JULIE PACE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Secret Service prostitution scandal escalated Tuesday with the disclosure that at least 20 women had been in hotel rooms with U.S. agents and military personnel just before President Barack Obama arrived for a summit with Latin American leaders. The head of the Secret Service said he had referred the matter to an independent government investigator.

Secret Service Director Mark Sullivan, shuttling between briefings for lawmakers on Capitol Hill, was peppered with questions about whether the women had access to sensitive information that could have jeopardized Obama's security.

Sullivan said the 11 Secret Service agents and 10 military personnel under investigation were telling different stories about who the women were. Sullivan has dispatched more investigators to Colombia to interview the women, said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee.

"Some are admitting (the women) were prostitutes, others are saying they're not, they're just women they met at the hotel bar," King said in a telephone interview. Sullivan said none of the women, who had to surrender their IDs at the hotel, were minors. "But prostitutes or not, to be bringing a foreign national back into a secure zone is a problem."

King said it appeared the agency actually had "really lucked out." If the women were working for a terrorist organization or other anti-American group, King said, they could have had access to information about the president's whereabouts or security protocols while in the agents' rooms.

"This could have been disastrous," King said.

The burgeoning scandal has been a growing election-year embarrassment for Obama, who has said he would be angry if the allegations proved to be true.

At the White House, Obama was asked at the end of a Rose Garden event whether he believed Sullivan should resign. The president ignored the shouted inquiries; his spokesman later Obama had confidence in the Secret Service chief.

"Director Sullivan acted quickly in response to this incident and is overseeing an investigation as we speak into the matter," White House press secretary Jay Carney said.

On Thursday, eleven Secret Service agents were recalled to the U.S. from Colombia and placed on administrative leave after a night of partying that allegedly ended with at least some bringing prostitutes back to their hotel. On Monday, the agency announced that it also had revoked the agents' security clearances.

At least 10 U.S. military personnel staying at the same hotel were also being investigated for their role in the alleged misconduct.

Two U.S. military officials said they include five Army Green Berets. Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity about an investigation that is still under way.

One of the officials said the group also includes two Navy Explosive Ordnance Disposal technicians, two Marine dog handlers and an Air Force airman.

Shuttle Discovery Earns Cheers on Final Voyage

BY RICHARD SIMON
Los Angeles Times (MCT)

WASHINGTON • Cheers broke out from crowds gathered on the National Mall. Workers peered out windows and looked up from sidewalks. Motorists pulled to the side of the road to catch a glimpse of the spectacle:

The space shuttle Discovery piggy-back on a modified 747, flying low over the monuments of the nation's capital before landing at Dulles International Airport on the way to its permanent new home with the Smithsonian.

"Folks were pretty excited. It was a pretty special moment and a great show," said Adrienne Watson, an aide to Rep. Loretta Sanchez, D-Calif., who was among the congressional staffers who gathered at the U.S. Capitol to watch the historic flyover. The plane flew at about 1,500 feet but made low passes at Dulles and Reagan airports and Joint Base Andrews in its last air show.

The Discovery is the first of the retired shuttles to be delivered to their final destinations after a fierce competition for the rare space artifacts. Others are headed to the California Science Center in Los Angeles, the Intrepid Sea, Air and Space Museum in Manhattan and the Kennedy Space Center visitor complex in Florida.

Jeffrey Solsby, a congressional staffer who watched the flyover from the window of his Capitol Hill office, said his wife Michelle took their daughters, 6 and 4, out of school to see "something I'm sure our girls will remember for a long time."

Police Handcuff Georgia Kindergartner for Tantrum

BY JEFF MARTIN AND JERI CLAUSING
Associated Press

ATLANTA • A kindergartner who threw a tantrum at her small-town Georgia school was taken away in handcuffs, her arms behind her back, in an episode that is firing up the debate over whether teachers and police around the country are overreacting all too often when dealing with disruptive students.

The family of 6-year-old Salecia Johnson lashed out Tuesday over her treatment and said she was badly shaken, while the school system and the police defended how they handled the episode.

Across the country, civil rights advocates and criminal justice experts say, frustrated teachers and principals are calling in the police to deal with even relatively minor disruptions.

Some juvenile authorities say they believe it is happening more often, driven by zero-tolerance policies and an increased police presence on school grounds over the past two decades because of tragedies like the Columbine High massacre in Colorado. Hard numbers to back up the assertion are difficult to come by.

"Kids are being arrested for being kids," said Shannon

Kennedy, a civil rights attorney who is suing the Albuquerque, N.M., school district, where hundreds of kids have been arrested in the past few years for minor offenses — including such things as having cell-phones in class, burping, refusing to switch seats and destroying a history book. In 2010, a 14-year-old boy was arrested for inflating a condom in class.

Abducted Newborn Found after Mother Slain

BY JUAN A. LOZANO
Associated Press

SPRING, Texas • A newborn who was abducted from his dying mother after she was repeatedly shot Tuesday outside a suburban Houston pediatric center was found safe hours later, according to investigators who said the suspected shooter sped off with the infant in a blood-stained Lexus.

The 3-day-old boy was found around 8 p.m., about six hours after his mother, Kala Marie Golden, was fatally shot following a verbal altercation in a parking lot, Montgomery County District Attorney Brett Ligon said.

Ligon wouldn't say where the infant was found, but he said it wasn't at a nearby apartment complex where officers wielding guns and riot shields searched earlier Tuesday evening.

Secret Service

The Special Forces Green Berets were working with Colombia's counterterrorist teams, the official said.

The agents and service members were in Colombia setting up security ahead of Obama's three-day trip to the port city of Cartagena for a summit attended by about 30 other world leaders.

People briefed on the incident said the agents brought women back to Cartagena's Hotel Caribe, where other members of the U.S. delegation and the White House press corps also were staying. Anyone visiting the hotel overnight was required to leave identification at the front desk and leave the hotel by 7 a.m. When a woman failed to do so, by this account, it raised questions among hotel staff and police, who investigated. They found the woman with the agent in a hotel room and a dispute arose over whether the agent should have paid her.

While the identities of those being investigated have not been revealed, Maryland Republican Senate candidate Daniel Bongino told The Associated Press Tuesday that his brother, an agent who was on duty in Colombia, is "cooperating" with the investigation. Bongino, a former agent himself, insisted that his brother was not a target of the investigation.

The Secret Service has insisted that Obama's security was not undermined by the incident, which happened before he arrived in Colombia.

Sen. Susan Collins of Maine, the ranking Republican on the Homeland Security Committee said Tuesday that "20 or 21 women foreign nationals" were brought to the hotel. Eleven of the Americans involved were Secret Service, she said and "allegedly Marines were involved with the rest."

In at least one of his briefings with lawmakers, Sullivan said he was calling on an inspector general to hold an independent review. Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, welcomed that news, saying an independent review "should help the agency regain some respect from the American taxpayers and from people around the world."

The Secret Service did not immediately respond to a request for comment about Grassley's account.

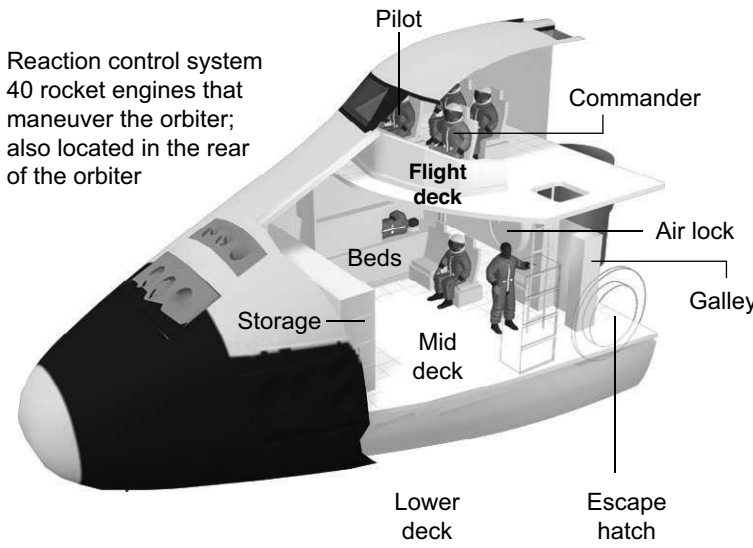

Meanwhile, a person familiar with the agency's operations said it was unlikely the agents involved would have had access to detailed presidential travel itineraries or security plans. Those materials are often given to agents only on the day they carry out their assignments and are kept in secure locations, not hotel rooms, the person said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Norway

Breivik also lashed out at Norwegian and European governments for embracing immigration and multiculturalism, and claimed to be speaking as a commander of an anti-Islam militant group he called the Knights Templar — a group that prosecutors say does not exist.

At one point, Breivik even likened his attacks to the U.S. dropping atomic bombs on Japan to bring World War II to an end. "They did it for something good, to prevent further war," Breivik said.

The court's main judge interrupted repeatedly, admonishing Breivik to get to the point, but let him continue after he threatened to quit addressing the court altogether if he wasn't allowed to deliver his entire speech.

"It is critically important that I can explain the reason and the motive" for the massacre, he said.

Mette Yvonne Larsen, a lawyer representing victim's families, also interrupted Breivik, saying she had received complaints from victims that the defendant was turning the trial into a platform for his extremist views. But even she showed some sympathy for Breivik's right to explain his actions.

"We understand that the court allows it, but we felt it was our duty as lawyers for the bereaved to intervene," Larsen told reporters.

Norwegian legal experts said it was important that the country's legal traditions apply to everyone, even Breivik, whose massacre shocked this prosperous, peaceful nation.

The justice system isn't about "revenge, but sober, dignified treatment" for everyone accused of a crime, said Thomas Mathiesen, a professor of sociology of law at the University of Oslo.

"It is deeply ingrained in Norwegian tradition and fundamental values. If it lasts all the way through the 10 weeks of this trial, and I think it will, we have an important message to the world," he said.

When Breivik entered the courtroom on Tuesday, he delivered the same clenched-fist salute with his right arm outstretched as a day earlier, turning to stare at the families of some of his victims.

On Monday, Norwegian prosecutors and even lawyers representing the families of victims shook Breivik's hand as the trial opened, raising some eyebrows. Prosecutors shaking hands with defendants would be a rare sight in the U.S., as well as in neighboring Sweden and other Nordic nations.

"That was a bit strange," said John Christian Elden, who represents some survivors but is not participating in the trial.

Breivik had asked to wear a uniform in court in pretrial hearings but was rebuffed, and he appeared at the trial in a business suit and tie, his thinning hair neatly combed.

"We don't have orange jumpsuits and that kind of thing in Norway," his lawyer Geir Lippestad said. "This is a completely normal way to dress in a Norwegian court, even in a serious criminal matter."

Breivik's lawyers concede that his contention that he acted in self-defense is unlikely to succeed and said the main point was to avoid an insanity ruling, which Breivik contends would negate his cause.

In Arlington County, where teachers took students outside for flyover, Barrett Elementary School Principal Theresa Bratt said in an email, "The children told me that they wanted to reach up and touch it because it seemed so close."

But for Texas congressmen, the flyover was a bitter reminder that Houston, home of mission control, was passed over for a retired orbiter.

"One of these vehicles belongs at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, not on the Intrepid in NY," Rep. Michael McCaul, R-Texas, wrote on his Facebook page. "Shame on the White House for playing politics with a national treasure."

The flyover was such a big event that AAA Mid-Atlantic issued a warning to motorists: "Don't let anyone or anything — even a space shuttle overhead — distract you" and "For safe shuttle-spotting, pull off the road and park your car."

"The child is healthy. The father of the child is on his way to be reunited with the child," Ligon told The Associated Press.

A person of interest has been detained though no charges have been filed, he said. He wouldn't provide any details about the person.

Golden was leaving an afternoon checkup with her son, Keegan, when she had a verbal altercation with a woman in a Lexus parked next to her pickup truck, Montgomery County sheriff's Lt. Dan Norris said.

Witnesses said the woman repeatedly shot Golden, took the infant and sped away, hitting the dying mother as she screamed "my baby" and tried to reach into the Lexus, Norris said.

Witnesses also reported hearing as many as seven gunshots and said a man also was in the sky blue or light green Lexus, which was blood-stained on the driver's side, Norris said.

Investigators were processing evidence Tuesday night at one apartment in the complex that was searched, and they took away a vehicle parked in front.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

U.S. Stocks Jump after Strong Profits; Spain Soothes

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks stormed higher Tuesday after promising signals about the profitability of U.S. companies and a strong debt auction by Spain. The Dow Jones industrial average rose for the fourth day in five and posted its biggest gain in a month. European stocks had their best day in four months after Spain, the latest flashpoint in the European debt crisis, attracted strong investor interest at an auction of two-year debt. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 194.13 points, or 1.5 percent, at 13,115.54. It was up as much as 210 points Tuesday afternoon.

Warren Buffett Says He Has Prostate Cancer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) • Warren Buffett told his company's shareholders in an open letter Tuesday that he has been diagnosed with early-stage prostate cancer.

The 81-year-old billionaire investor and CEO of Berkshire Hathaway Inc. said his condition is "not remotely life-threatening" or debilitating. He said he and his doctors have decided on a two-month treatment plan that is to begin in mid-July. "I feel great — as if I were in my normal excellent health," Buffett said in the letter.

Buffett said he was diagnosed April 11 and has received tests including a CAT scan, a bone scan and an MRI.

Jobs, Rent Hikes Boost U.S. Housing Market

BY DEREK KRAVITZ

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • It's been a long time since the market for new homes has looked this good.

Rising rents and a healthier job market are inspiring more people to consider buying.

Builders are responding to the demand by laying plans for more homes this year than at any other point in the past 3½ years.

And banks are helping both by approving more loans.

All that points to a better year for the housing market, though a full recovery could take several years.

"We're doing so much more business than we have in years," said Ed Kopal, who runs a construction company in East Texas and has seen his business more than double this year compared with 2011.

Others, too, foresee more enthusiasm among buyers after four sluggish years.

Builders requested a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 747,000 permits to build homes in March, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. The pace hasn't been that high since September 2008.

Of those requested, 462,000 permits were to build single-family homes. That's 12 percent more than just six months ago. Still, the figure remains far below the 800,000 permits a year that signify a stable new-home market.

Builders are seeing more demand for apartments, too. Over the past six months, permits to build apartments have surged 68 percent, to 285,000 permits. A healthy number is closer to 400,000 a year.

Rents are rising, which has spurred construction for both kinds of homes.

At a Glance

PERMITS UP: U.S. builders requested a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 747,000 permits to build homes in March, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. The pace hasn't been that high since September 2008.

RENTS RISING: Rents are rising, which has spurred construction for both kinds of apartments and single-family homes. In Chicago, median rents in the past 12 months have risen 8.6 percent, or more than $100 a month.

MORE INTEREST: A survey of homebuilders has shown an increasing amount of foot traffic at open houses across the country since September.

— Associated Press

In Philadelphia, rents have increased nearly 15 percent over the past year through February, while home values have dropped 5.4 percent, according to real estate website Zillow.

Minneapolis rents are up nearly 10 percent; home prices are down nearly 7 percent. Baltimore has seen rents rise 8.6 percent and home values drop 4 percent.

In Chicago, median rents in the past 12 months have risen 8.6 percent, or more than $100 a month. In the same period, the median home price has fallen 11 percent, to just $154,600.

So while apartment developers are chasing higher rents, renters are seeing more incentive to buy homes. A survey of homebuilders has shown an increasing amount of foot traffic at open houses across the country since September.

New homes are seen being built on March 15 at a development in Santa Clarita, Calif.

• The Coca-Cola Co. is continuing to expand its reach worldwide and turning to a variety of smaller drink sizes to boost profits and keep rising commodity costs in check. The world's biggest soda maker on Tuesday reported better-than-expected profit for its first quarter as it sold more of its drinks around the globe. Total revenue was $11.14 billion for the three months ended March 30, up 6 percent from $10.52 billion a year ago.

Free Program Helps With Teacher Certification

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Area residents interested in becoming certified teachers in Idaho are invited to a free program Tuesday to learn about the process.

The American Board, a nonprofit organization dedicated to recruiting and certifying new teachers, will hold information sessions at 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. at the Hilton Garden Inn's Snake River South Room, 1741 Harrison St. in Twin Falls. Sessions will be led by Idaho teacher certification specialist Michael Burke.

Those who attend will learn what to expect in a teaching career and receive advice on the path to certification. Information: Burke, 605-520-2694 or mburke@americanboard.org.

The American Board is a state-approved organization that certifies career changers, substitute teachers, paraprofessionals and out-of-field teachers.

IMF Slightly More Upbeat on Global Economy

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • The International Monetary Fund is more optimistic about the global economy after seeing faster U.S. growth and a coordinated effort in Europe to address its debt crisis.

The global lending organization said Tuesday that the U.S. economy should expand 2.1 percent this year. Europe will likely shrink 0.3 percent and the world economy should grow 3.5 percent. All three of the IMF's estimates are slightly better than its January forecasts.

While short-term spending cuts are necessary, European governments should focus on long-term deficit reduction plans that don't kill off economic growth, the IMF said.

The group praised European leaders for bulking up its bailout fund and taking other steps to address the crisis. The 17 countries that use the euro should emerge from a shallow recession later this year, the IMF said.

IKEA to Sell Televisions Integrated into Furniture

STOCKHOLM (AP) • Already the one-stop shop for smart and compact home furnishing, IKEA is venturing into the world of technology — with the IKEA TV.

The new furniture range, named UP-

PLEVA, the Swedish word for experience, integrates an LED TV, a sound system with wireless bass speakers, an internet connection and CD, DVD and Blu-ray players — all in one self-assembled piece.

Although the TV and the other electronics are made by Chinese manufacturer TCL, IKEA has built everything around them, hiding the masses of cables that can be a nuisance and make a living room look shabby.

Dining Tidbits

Chicken Salad with a Twist

Norm's Cafe today will unveil a $6.95 chicken salad sandwich, piled into a croissant with avocado and bacon, owner Vicki Collins said.

"It's a new one. We're just now starting to think about it," she said. "It's going to be very, very good."

Collins said Norm's Cafe (803 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls) doesn't come up with new recipes often, because its returning customers seem to like its tried-and-true menu items. But through its catering service, she said, many women have requested chicken salad.

The ladies will like the new California Chicken Salad Sandwich, Collins said, because it'll be packed with vegetables and avocado. The bacon? Not so healthy, but it gives the sandwich a kick.

'Out of the Ordinary'

In the mood for Thai? Check out Prasai's Thai Cuisine's new dinner menu.

"We've added a couple of new dishes that are a little out of the ordinary," said owner Rick Johnson.

How about a seafood curry served in an artichoke bowl? Another, which Johnson calls the Three Buddies, is a shrimp, scallops and squid dish mixed with red and bell peppers, carrots and cashews. There's also an eggplant and sweet basil recipe.

"It's lightly deep-fried and served with garlic, red bells, jalapenos and basil," Johnson said. "Vegetarians like that one."

The items rolled onto the dinner menu this spring — the first time items have been added in two or three years, he said — and seem to be selling well. Prices range from $9.95 to $15.95, and the new dishes are available only at Prasai's downtown location (428 Second Ave. E., Twin Falls).

A Burrito Full of Flavor

What makes a tasty burrito often isn't its beans and meat. It is what's on top that counts.

Aguila Con El Taco in Burley (123 W. Fifth St., Burley) knows this, and, from time to time, likes to experiment to give its customers that extra punch of flavor. Manager Rachelle Lara said she's pleased with the restaurant's newest creation, the Aztec burrito.

The large flour tortilla is filled with rice and beans, but it's on top where the magic happens. It's garnished with grilled jalapenos, diced tomatoes, cilantro, onion, lemon and a slice of avocado.

"It's really delicious," Lara said, noting it's "packed with flavor."

Want it hotter? You can have the Aztec smothered in red or green chili sauce, making this burrito one your taste buds won't soon forget. The price isn't bad, either: $6.85.

All About Sandwiches

Depot Grill (545 Shoshone St. W., Twin Falls) is experimenting with new sandwiches. The chicken wrap is a healthier choice, while the rodeo sandwich is all about filling bellies.

"We're still letting the customers taste them out as we make them," said owner Steve Soran. "They'll be the ones that pick 'em" for the menu. "People around the Depot are very vocal. They'll let us know what they like."

Some of the contenders: a Dagwood Sandwich of meats and cheeses; a sirloin steak sandwich topped with cheese and sauteed peppers and onions; and the chicken caesar wrap, served with a salad.

"We don't serve fries with that one," Soran said.

A tostada-like sandwich is several layers thick. "The thing is huge. It's very impressive looking."

Don't expect to see anything added permanently to the menu soon. "We've been around for almost 100 years," Soran said. "We don't do anything overnight." But you can try the experimental dishes and let the Depot know what you think.

Soran expects prices will run from $3.25 to $7.75 — the range of the current sandwich lineup.

SUCCESS AND A SIDE OF SYRUP

This Declo entrepreneur's flapjack mixes have grown into a sizzling business.

BY NATALIE DICOU
ndicou@magicvalley.com

DECLO • Charlotte Armstrong described the subtle distinction between flapjacks and pancakes.

"If you live in the city, you call it a pancake," she said. "If you live in the country, you call it a hot cake. And if you're a cowboy, you call it a flapjack."

The Armstrongs fall somewhere in the latter two categories, and their company, Cowboy Tom's Flapjacks, is bringing tasty whole-wheat breakfast foods to city slickers and country folk alike — no matter what terminology they use.

Armstrong, 64, started the company — it's named after her husband, Tom — eight years ago. She'd never been an entrepreneur before, but she had an idea and decided to go for it.

"She's a natural," Tom said. "She's good with people and pretty sharp with the business."

Charlotte hopes to sell the company someday. She said Cowboy Tom's was appraised by USA National Innovation Marketplace, which concluded her company has a 50 percent chance of being sold for $2 million to $70 million.

"I didn't think it was going to grow this big," said Charlotte, who sells about 2,000 8-ounce bags of flapjack ingredients every month and a half.

Cowboy Tom's Flapjacks come in whole-wheat and gluten-free varieties. Charlotte said her flapjacks are healthy because the wheat berries retain their nutrients better than flour. Customers grind them up themselves in their blenders.

Customers can purchase flapjack ingredients or a gift pack, which includes the ingredients, a bottle of Cowboy Tom's Lip Lickin' Country Maple Syrup and a book, written by Armstrong, titled "The Legend of Cowboy Tom."

Charlotte's business plan involves capitalizing on city folks' desire to buy cowboy-themed souvenirs. Her products are sold at gift shops throughout the West, and she sells them personal-

3 Beers to Put Some Spring in Your Step

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • As our thoughts turn to gardens and weekends outside, U.S. breweries are musing on their spring seasonal beers.

Well, on how much they've sold so far, anyway. Several large breweries decided to move up the calendar this year, releasing their spring beers in February and likely confusing a few consumers.

The good news: We've finally got the kind of weather these beers are made for. Here are three suggestions of great brews to pick up next time you're in the mood. These ales are new this season:

New Belgium Dig

New Belgium is mixing up its seasonal slate this year, and for spring that means Dig — a pale ale that's also light and flowery, but with a bit more malt to it and a certain tartness. The latter's likely due to its highlighted hops, including Sorachi Ace and Nelson Sauvin. The brewery's website promises bursts of lemon, passion fruit, mango and peach; not sure I got all that, but Dig does have more flavor to it than some other spring offerings (Sam Adams, I'm looking at you). It's $4.25 a pint at O'Dunken's Draught House.

Deschutes Chainbreaker White IPA

Although this beer isn't a spring seasonal — it's Deschutes' newest addition to its year-round brew — this spring is your first chance to try Chainbreaker in the Magic Valley. And the season fits it well.

Freshly poured into a glass, the beer's nose emphasizes that this is an IPA but remains light and floral. Its taste stays in that vein — while certainly hop-forward, varieties like Citra soften the edge. The wheat used in the mix contributes as well, and a touch of orange and coriander rounds out the package.

You'll find Chainbreaker for $2.29 a bottle at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise.

Sierra Nevada Ruthless Rye IPA

That reference above to some breweries pushing for an early spring? This was one of them. Chances are, you may have seen Ruthless Rye and its distinctive label art around town the past couple of months. It's not too late to try it — and it's well worth picking up. The rye contributes a spicy, exciting aroma, while on the tongue it meshes well with the hops (at least four varieties, including Citra again, according to the brewery's website). A slightly creamy aftertaste ensures the beer doesn't completely scorch your throat on the way down and ensures you can come back for more.

Something New Brewing in (Barrel) Aged Beers

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

Fine wine is said to improve with barrel aging. So why not fine beer?

That's the thinking behind the emerging craft beer trend of aging brews in the barrel to give them more complexity. "There's something extra about the flavor," says Dougal Sharp, master brewer and owner of the Scotland-based company Innis & Gunn, which has just introduced its Irish Whiskey Cask Stout in the U.S.

"Oak aging anything — a wine, a spirit or a beer — imparts enormous depth of flavor and mellowness and complexity. Just think about some of the best, the real premier cru oak-aged wines that you've had. You might not be able to point to exactly why you just love the wine, but you do because it has this enormous depth of flavor. That's what barrel-aging gives beer."

The Innis & Gunn beer was a bit of an accident that began about a decade ago when Sharp, working for his family's brewing company in Edinburgh, got an order from an Irish whiskey maker looking for a custom-brewed beer to season whiskey barrels for a special finish. The plan was to throw out the beer once the seasoning process was over, and that's what happened at first. But then some distillery employees who apparently had practiced a little initiative intervened.

"I got a call one day from the distillery to say, 'You're not going to believe this but the workers who are emptying these barrels out don't want to throw the beer down the drain because they say it's just too delicious.'"

Sharp investigated and later, after refining the process, set up Innis & Gunn with his brother, Neil. (Innis and Gunn are the brothers' middle names.) The company also makes beer aged in old rum casks, but for now the limited-edition whiskey cask stout is the only beer available here.

Aged for 60 days in a three-step maturation process, the beer is priced at $12.99 a four-pack and there are plans to introduce it in draft form.

Though it's still a niche in the overall industry, wood- and barrel-aged beers merited their own category in the 2011 Great American Beer Festival, with 40 entries. And they're just one of the many developments to arise from the fast-moving craft beer scene.

"The entire American beer scene has changed over the past three decades because of today's small U.S. craft producers," says Julia Herz, craft beer program director at the Brewers Association, based in Boulder, Colo.

A Substitute for Sauterne

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: For years, we used a Sauterne cooking wine for onion soup, chicken and many other dishes. Apparently it is no longer available. Can you recommend a white wine that does not have to be refrigerated and isn't too expensive?

Answer: Cooking wines like Sauterne date to the days when wine wasn't something the average consumer kept on hand. Names like Sauterne, Burgundy and Chablis were meant to sound European, but the wine wasn't actually produced there. Wines labeled "cooking wine" usually contained preservatives, particularly salt, to make them shelf-stable after opening.

These days, the standard advice for cooking with wine is never to cook with something you wouldn't drink. Since most of us wouldn't want to drink salty wine, the old cooking wines are disappearing.

But for people who don't commonly drink wine with meals, that leaves the problem of what to use in recipes that call for a small amount of wine. One handy solution is the miniature four-pack. Since a bottle is only 187ml, or about 3/4 cup, you don't waste much, and the packs usually cost $7 or less.

Since Sauterne was a sweeter wine, something like a white zinfandel or a riesling should be a good replacement.

Mike and Ike Announce Split in Cheeky Ad Campaign

BY MARYCLAIRE DALE
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA • They've been together 72 years, but it's not clear whether Mike and Ike will reach their next anniversary.

The colorful candy characters are going their separate ways, and using Facebook, Twitter and Tumblr to announce the split.

How better to engage the teenage audience that Pennsylvania candy maker Just Born hopes to reach with the cheeky marketing campaign?

"At some point, we would love ... for them to get back together," said Matt Pye, vice president for marketing of Bethlehem-based Just Born. "In some ways, consumers are going to help (determine) where this story ends up."

The story has been unfolding this year on social media sites, with hints of trouble between the fictional friends.

Mike plans to pursue music, while Ike dabbles in art.

"I know it's hard to believe, but yes — Mike and I split. It is what it is. We just couldn't agree on stuff anymore. Some call it creative differences? Whatever," Ike posted.

Countered Mike: "We just don't agree on the candy. My red, his red, my lime, his lime, my box ideas, his box ideas. So over it. Instead of all this hassles, now I'm just gonna jam."

The characters themselves — vaudeville types when the candy debuted in 1940, anthropomorphic fruit in the 1980s — are now absent from the packaging. The latest boxes, billboards and other displays will have one name or the other scratched out.

The origin of the brand name remains a mystery even to Just Born, although fans often wonder if it's named for real people.

"Consumers have always contacted us and asked: 'Who are they? The owners? The founders?'" Pye said.

That curiosity helped spark the idea of a story line as a new Just Born management team, led by President David Yale, looked to reinvigorate their folksy brands, which include Peeps, Hot Tamales and Peanut Chews.

These Aren't Your Granny's Preserves

BY JUDY HEVRDEJS
Chicago Tribune

Figure a million or so cookbooks have been written on home food preservation since self-sealing Mason jars debuted 150 years ago. Few contain recipes as creative as those packed into chef Paul Virant's new book, "The Preservation Kitchen: The Craft of Making and Cooking With Pickles, Preserves and Aigre-Doux" (Ten Speed Press, $29.99).

Few have recipes such as smoked apple butter and beer jam, pickled fennel and cherry bomb peppers, or sauerkraut made with Brussels sprouts or turnips. These are not your granny's preserves.

But those are just some of the recipes in Virant's book and part of the volume's first half, which is dedicated to preserving methods, from marmalades and salted produce to the sweet-sour French aigre-doux and the piquant condiment from Italy called mostarda.

In the book's second half, Virant shows how cooks can incorporate preserves into dishes and cocktails: Pickled and fresh fennel transform panzanella salad, beer jam subs for vermouth in a Manhattan. Such creativity shows up often on menus at Virant's Michelin-honored Chicago restaurants, Vie in Western Springs and Perennial Virant in Lincoln Park.

"When you look through the book and see recipes for the preserved items and the menus — I don't know another chef that incorporates these so much into their food," says Virant, during a chat at Vie, where the preserving is done and jars of jewel-toned preserves are stored. "I think of this as a signature style of food that really embraces the Midwest and adds an element of surprise."

And Virant is a fine coach for cooks accustomed to packing strawberry freezer jam into upping their game and inspiring those interested in keeping local flavors on their table year-round.

Getting in Touch: Your Hands Are the Most Important Tools in the Kitchen

BY JUDY HEVRDEJS
Chicago Tribune

OK, admit it: The only carrots you eat are pre-peeled and bagged. You've been buying chicken tenders so long you've forgotten that the bird comes with bones and skin. And the only dough you ever touch these days has George Washington's face on it.

Maybe it's time to get back in touch with food and let your fingers do the learning.

"Your hands are your most important tools," says chef Daniel Patterson of San Francisco's Michelin-starred COI. "You don't understand ingredients unless you touch them."

"Technology is very good," adds Patterson, who lets machines aerate, puree and vacuum-seal foods at his restaurant. "But technology is not as good as the human body. The information that you get from your hands, from all your senses, really, is vastly more complex and textured than from a machine."

Cookbook author Pam Anderson heartily endorses the use of one's hands in the kitchen.

"Often in interviews, one of the questions people ask me is, 'What's your favorite kitchen tool?' and I say, 'My favorite kitchen tool is my hands.' Any tool beyond that is simply an extension of my hands," she says. "People are always amazed."

In Anderson's latest book, "Cook Without a Book: Meatless Meals" (Rodale, $32.50), her hands show up in many photos, from mixing scones to pressing liquid in chopped cucumbers through a sieve.

"When you go in the kitchen, wash your hands and touch, smell, taste, look, freely," the Connecticut mom says. "That's definitely my philosophy and my approach. My kids will vouch for that."

Along with your sense of taste, says Patterson, touch is one of the most important ways you can understand food if you pay attention and develop a "sensory memory."

Institute of America, or CIA, in Hyde Park, N.Y., students work on learning the degree of doneness of different foods, from fish to vegetables, and the correct feel of a variety of doughs.

Occasionally, chef Howard "Corky" Clark, a CIA culinary arts professor, undercooks, overcooks and correctly cooks pieces of fish so students can feel each. "It's not easy to get people to not look, but to feel," he says.

And when students knead doughs, "chefs will walk by and say it needs more flour, then come back in a minute and say, 'I could tell it needed more flour by the way it looked and the way it handled. Now do you feel the difference between what you were kneading and what it is now?' so they can actually feel the difference," Clark adds. "With vegetables, we teach them to stick a knife in it. Then I say, check one. Feel it. With a broccoli stem, you have to know that it's going to break apart but not be mushy."

TV's renowned kitchen geek-cookbook author Alton Brown understands the importance of touch in the kitchen. In "I'm Just Here for More Food" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $35), he writes about trying to replicate his grandmother's biscuits.

"For years I tried to clone the tender little jewels of goodness that came out of her oven." He tinkered with everything — ingredients, oven temps, etc. — without success. One day, he watched her make them: Her arthritic fingers, unable to knead the dough, simply patted it. "It's the detail that made all the difference in the world."

Reach Out and ...

Cookbook author Pam Anderson suggests:

Toss a salad: It's a good way "to evenly coat and spread oil and salt and pepper over all my salad greens and get them well coated. Then add your vinegar and get that evenly coated. You can feel it. With tongs, you're about 8 inches away from the source."

Knead it: Use a food processor to make yeast doughs, "but there's nothing like pulling pizza dough or bread dough out of the food processor, pouring it onto the countertop and giving it that final 30 seconds to a minute kneading to pull it into that baby's-butt smooth texture."

Brush vs. hands: "I use a brush for egg washes on bread and pastries, (but) if I'm coating meat with oil and salt and pepper before searing it, that's generally a hand process for me. You're more efficient with your hands usually than a tool."

"When you touch a vegetable and it's limp — a carrot or beet — you know what that's going to do to the final product because you've cooked those kind of carrots and you have this memory that connects something that's too soft with an end product that's diminished in its spirit," he says. "The sensory experience of touch becomes linked to taste. It's one of the first ways you learn what things taste like without even tasting them."

"There's an intimacy with touch," adds Patterson.

"There's an engagement on a very close level. And if you don't have that connection or you're not willing to make that connection, what you've lost — it's like having a relationship with somebody you never touch."

Using your hands to mix a biscuit or cookie dough, or using a knife and your hands to cut a hunk of beef into stew cubes or whole chicken into quarters, elevates cooking beyond following a recipe.

Yet learning that can be a challenge. At The Culinary

Red Curry Paste: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

It's red, but it isn't red hot. And that's why it's the sort of curry the average American is going to love.

I'm talking about red curry paste, one of a literal rainbow of intensely flavorful Southeast Asian seasonings.

To be clear, curry pastes are not the same as the curry powders most people know, though they do share some ingredients.

Curry pastes — which are used in Thai, Indonesian, Malaysian and Indian cooking — combine dry spices with ground fresh herbs and roots, garlic, chilies and other ingredients to form thick pastes.

These pastes often are classified by color. Green curry paste, for example, is a fiery Thai blend that combines green chilies, lemon grass, garlic, shrimp paste and kaffir lime leaves. It usually is blended with coconut milk to season beef, pork and chicken.

Yellow curry paste is a bit milder and usually sports garlic, lemon grass, galangal (a relative of ginger), cumin, cinnamon and turmeric. It's popular for adding to soups.

But the most versatile and widely used is red curry paste, a mash of red chilies, coriander roots and leaves, shrimp paste, lemon grass, garlic, shallots and galangal.

It's got some kick, but it won't sear your mouth. It's used with everything from chicken, duck and beef to pork and shrimp. And it lands in everything from stews, curries and soups to dressings, marinades and condiments.

The smell is both comforting tomatoey and exotically heady with spicy aromas. The flavor is warm, but not biting, with tastes of ginger and garlic.

Conveniently, red curry paste also is the easiest variety to find at the typical American grocer. It usually is packed in small glass jars or cans and can be found in the Asian section. Once opened, the remainder can be refrigerated for months.

I like to combine red curry paste with the meat from a rotisserie chicken and a package of fresh pasta for an easy and incredibly delicious weeknight dinner. For more ideas for using red curry paste, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/Hfg2Jm>

Red Curry Chicken Noodles

Not in the mood for noodles? The curried chicken mixture also makes a killer sandwich, both warm and cold. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 12-ounce package fresh fettuccine pasta
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 1 red bell pepper, cored and diced
- 14-ounce can coconut milk
- 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 tablespoons red curry paste (more or less to taste)
- Meat from a 1 1/2-pound rotisserie chicken
- 1/3 cup chopped fresh cilantro
- 1 lime, quartered

Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil. Add the pasta and cook according to package directions. Drain and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a large saute pan over medium-high, heat the olive oil. Add the onion and bell pepper, then saute until tender, about 10 minutes. Add the coconut milk and red curry paste. Stir until the curry paste and coconut milk are smooth, then bring to a simmer.

Chop or pull the chicken meat into bite-size chunks, then add to the coconut milk mixture. Toss well to coat evenly. If the meat is cold, return to a simmer. Stir in the cilantro.

Serve the pasta topped with the chicken. Alternatively, add the drained pasta to the pan with the chicken and toss to mix. Just before serving, squeeze a bit of lime juice over each plate. Per serving: 610 calories; 260 calories from fat (43 percent of total calories); 29 g fat (20 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 120 mg cholesterol; 57 g carbohydrate; 30 g protein; 6 g fiber; 390 mg sodium.

farmers, and their own wheat was among the contenders.

All the taste-test participants chose the same wheat variety — and it wasn't from the Armstrongs' farm. They chose wheat from Cleve Smith's dry-land farm in Albion. The Armstrongs began buying wheat from him for Cowboy Tom's instead of using their own. This year, the Declo couple plans to grow 10 acres of dry-land wheat to see if they can grow it as tasty as Smith, who won't be farming for ever, Charlotte said.

The grandmother uses a dining room as her "factory" and her grandchildren as employees. They sit at a table, chat and work.

"I only have them for so long," Charlotte said of the work/bonding sessions. "Pretty soon they'll be young adults with their own families. All I can do is build memories, and that's what we're doing."

Charlotte pays her grandchildren $8 an hour to pack the bags, seal them up and attach labels.

"She's my grandma, and she's fun to be around," said Kassi Condie, 14. "She lets you have breaks, and we can choose our hours."

Kassi is Charlotte's helper at farmers markets throughout the summer.

"She's quite the little salesman," Charlotte said.

Kassi's technique: a big smile and then she motions people over with her finger. After offering a sample of Uncle Tom's Flapjacks, she gives them her never-fail line.

"Will that be one or two today?" Kassi will ask.

"That's closing the sale," she said.

Steak and Eggs By Way of the Vegetable Patch

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Much as I love a big, beefy steak, sometimes I need something on the lighter side.

Which doesn't mean I'm willing to sacrifice the delicious char of the grill or the satisfaction of something big and boldly flavored on my plate.

So I started playing around with the idea of vegetable "steaks" — produce that is cut into thick slabs, then slowly grilled over medium heat until tender and seared. Of course, the cast of vegetable characters with which you can do this is limited. People have been doing it with portobello mushrooms (sans slicing) for years. But I was looking for something new.

For example, butternut squash could be cut into rounds. Ditto for potatoes, both sweet and white. Fennel bulbs could be trimmed and cut in half top to bottom. If you're good with a knife (and careful as you set them on the grill) even cabbage and broccoli could be done this way.

But my favorite is cauliflower. With some experimenting, I've found that a head of cauliflower can be sliced into two thick "steaks" that hold up well on the grill. They can be seasoned as you see fit, and topped with whatever you like. In this recipe, I keep the seasonings simple, then top them with lightly poached eggs and truffle oil, creating a delicious sauce.

Grilled Cauliflower Steaks with Poached Eggs and Truffle Oil

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 2.

- 1 large head cauliflower
- Olive oil
- Salt and ground black pepper

- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- Juice of 1/2 lemon
- 1 tablespoon white or cider vinegar
- 2 eggs
- Truffle oil (or truffle-flavored olive oil)

Heat a grill to medium. Bring a large saucepan of water to a low simmer.

Use a paring knife to trim away the leaves and any stem at the base of the cauliflower, but do not cut out the core. Stand the head of cauliflower upright on its base. Use a large bread or other serrated knife to trim away 1/2 inch on either side of the head. Reserve these pieces for another use.

Leaving the head standing upright, use the knife to slice the cauliflower in half down the center to create 2 even halves. Sprinkle both sides of each half with olive oil, then with salt, pepper, a bit of the garlic powder and a little lemon juice.

Carefully set the "steaks" on the grill, cover and cook for 8 minutes. Use a spatula to carefully flip the cauliflower and grill for another 8 minutes, or until both sides are lightly browned and tender. Transfer to serving plates, then cover with foil to keep warm.

Once the cauliflower is done, add the vinegar to the simmering water.

Crack 1 egg into a small glass, then gently and slowly pour it into the simmering water by bringing the lip of the glass right down to the surface of the water so the egg slides in. Cook for 4 minutes, then use a slotted spoon to lift out the egg (letting excess water drip away), setting it one of the cauliflower steaks. Repeat with the remaining egg.

Season the eggs with salt and pepper, then drizzle with truffle oil. Serve immediately.

Bundt Coffee Cake to Honor Mom on Her Special Day

BY ELIZABETH KARMEI
For The Associated Press

The first thing I ever picked out to bake with my mother was a lemon blueberry Bundt cake. I'd seen an ad for the cake — complete with lemon-yellow icing — and thought it was the most sophisticated, beautiful cake possible.

So my mother indulged me. We bought the mix, made the cake and it was beautiful. But as it was a mix, it tasted like a mix.

Even at 5, I was disappointed. But my mother had a happy solution. The very simple and very classic sour cream coffee cake. We made that coffee cake together for years, and then for at least a decade I made the same coffee cake myself every time I went to or hosted a brunch.

Over the years, I tweaked it, adding a double layer of streusel as a topping and as a filling, and adding more pecans. Baked in a Bundt pan and sliced just where the ridges fall, it was and remains a crowd pleaser. I also love baking it in mini Bundt pans so everyone gets an individual cake.

Predictably, I can't make a sour cream coffee cake without thinking of my mother which, in my mind, makes it the perfect Mother's Day treat.

You can substitute walnuts for the pecans if you like, and even add coconut or a bit of chocolate to the batter, which is rich and moist without being heavy. I'd bet that I could even add blueberries to the batter and glaze the coffee cake with a lemon icing to make the lemon blueberry Bundt cake of my childhood dreams!

The cake is even better baked the day before, eliminating the work in the morning. I like serving it with a savory sausage-egg strata that can be assembled the night before and baked just before you want to eat. Add fruit salad and you have a perfectly delicious and perfectly balanced brunch for Mom that anyone can make.

Classic Sour Cream Coffee Cake

Start to finish: 1 hour 15 minutes (15 minutes active). Servings: 12.

For the batter:

- 1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- 1 1/4 cups sour cream (not light or non-fat)
- 2 large eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups sifted flour (sift before measuring)
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon fine-grain sea salt

For the cinnamon-sugar filling:

- 1 cup pecans, chopped
- 3/4 cup packed dark brown sugar
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- Pinch of sea salt

Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Coat a 12-cup (large) Bundt pan with a bit of vegetable oil or cooking spray (do not use baking spray).

To make the batter, in a large bowl, combine the butter and sugar. Use an electric mixer to beat until light and fluffy. Add the sour cream, eggs and vanilla, then mix again until well incorporated.

Measure and sift together the flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Add the flour mixture to butter-sugar mixture a little at a time, mixing between additions and scraping the sides of the bowl as needed, until well mixed. Set aside.

To make the filling, in a large bowl combine the pecans, brown sugar, granulated sugar, cinnamon and salt. Mix well. Spoon a shallow layer of the filling mixture over the bottom of the Bundt pan. Spoon half the batter into the pan over the filling. Sprinkle all but 1/4 cup of the remaining filling evenly over the batter. Pour the rest of the batter over the filling, smoothing it with a silicone spatula. Sprinkle with the remaining filling.

Bake for 50 to 60 minutes, or until the cake pulls away from sides and a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Start testing for doneness after the cake has baked for 40 minutes since ovens and pans vary in the way they bake. Remove from oven and transfer cake pan to a cooling rack. Let cool before slicing.

Mushrooms, Wine Flavor this Chicken Stir-Fry

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post.

I used to stir-fry almost exclusively with Asian flavors, but I've branched out. Here, I've adapted the idea of coq au vin, a classic dish of chicken stewed with mushrooms and onions in red wine.

I serve this over rice, but you could easily substitute buttered noodles.

The chicken and mushrooms can be sliced, and the onion chopped, up to 8 hours in advance, then wrapped in plastic and refrigerated.

Red Wine Chicken and Mushroom Stir-Fry

4 or 5 servings.

- 3 tablespoons olive oil or peanut oil
- 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, cut into thin strips
- 1 1/2 inches long
- Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 medium onion (4 ounces), finely chopped
- 1 pound white and/or cremini mushrooms, sliced 1/4-inch thick
- 1/2 cup full-bodied red wine
- 1 cup no-salt-added or homemade chicken broth
- 2 tablespoons brandy or cognac (may substitute water)
- 2 tablespoons water
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large wok, nonstick skillet or shallow braising pan over medium-high heat. Season the chicken strips with salt and pepper to taste. Working in batches, add the strips to the hot wok, skillet or pan and cook without stirring for 2 to 3 minutes, until lightly browned; then turn them over and stir-fry until the chicken loses its raw look. Transfer to a clean plate and repeat, adding the remaining oil as needed, until all of the chicken is cooked. Reduce the heat to medium; add the onion and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, until the onion softens. Increase the heat to medium-high. Add the mushrooms and cook for 6 to 8 minutes, stirring every minute or so, until the mushrooms have softened and cooked through and their liquid has reduced. Carefully add the red wine and cook until it reduces by half, 3 to 4 minutes. Stir the cooked chicken and the broth into the onion-mushroom mixture. Combine the cognac, water and cornstarch in a small bowl, stirring until the cornstarch has dissolved. Once the liquid in the wok begins to boil, add the cornstarch mixture and stir to thoroughly combine. Cook until the sauce thickens; taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Reduce the heat to low; cover and cook for 6 to 8 minutes, adjusting the heat so that the liquid is barely bubbling at the edges. Just before serving, stir in the parsley. Serve warm, over rice or noodles.

More Foods Going to Pouch Packaging

BY EMILY BRYSON YORK

Chicago Tribune

Package food makers are thinking outside the bottle and can. More to the point, they're increasingly partial to pouches.

Kitchen staples from Campbell Soup Co. and H.J. Heinz Co. will be joining other consumer products in pouches this year. The trend is being driven by savings on packaging and shipping costs as well as aesthetics — an upscale pouch sporting elaborate graphics offers a modernized look and premium appeal, marketers say.

John Kalkowski, editorial director of Packaging Digest, said pouches also are becoming more prevalent because technology has improved, doubling average shelf life from one year, to two.

Manufacturers can cut packaging costs 10 to 15 percent by going to the pouch, he said.

Overall pouch use in consumer products, including shampoo and pet food, has increased 37 percent since 2007, according to Mintel Group, with particular growth in snack pouches.

For Campbell, the move is part of a battle for credibility with millennials, aged approximately 18 to 34, who tend to associate its iconic red-and-white cans with Grandma's house.

This summer, the Camden, N.J.-based company will launch Campbell's Go Soup, a premium line with trendy flavors like coconut curry with chicken and shiitake mushrooms. Go Soup comes in an edgy, graphically intense pouch with funky fonts and pictures of young people making quirky faces, seeming to enjoy the soup. Informal notes at the bottom try to eliminate confusion about the product, like "shiitake happens, but this soup is ready to eat."

The company also will launch a line of skillet sauces in pouches this fall, designed to make dishes like shrimp scampi or Thai

MCT PHOTO
Heinz has a new 10-ounce pouch of its signature ketchup.

green curry chicken easy when the right protein and starch are already on hand.

Charles Villa, vice president of the consumer and customer insights department for Campbell's USA, said pouches have broad appeal to consumers, and particularly those under 35.

"They see the pouch as a very contemporary packaging alternative and they relate that packaging to a better quality experience coming from the food that's in," Villa said, adding that they expect "a better quality experience for the food," and even a "fresher" product.

For the H.J. Heinz Co., however, a flexible pouch is being used to introduce a smaller size of its namesake ketchup. With a squeezable pouch and nozzle, the 10-ounce product will sell for 99 cents compared with $1.99 for a 20-ounce bottle.

The typical shopper in a developed market like the U.S., said CEO William R. Johnson "is now intensely focused on value," adding that buying decisions are based more on price, "and less about product design."

With the pouch's lower price, Heinz is hoping to give budget-minded families a reason to buy its product rather than a private-label offering.

While pouches have been prominent in Europe, Central and South America for five years or more, they're beginning to gain traction in the United States, which is notoriously slow in adapting to trends, said Lynn Dornblaser, director of CPG insights at Mintel. In Europe, she said, consumers are accustomed to buying milk in pouches, too.

'ENLARGED' FOOD FOOLS DIETERS INTO FEELING FULL

THE YOMIURI SHIMBUN

TOKYO • A team of researchers has developed a new approach to dieting — controlling your appetite by viewing an enlarged image of a food item you are about to eat.

The team, led by University of Tokyo professor Michitaka Hirose, has developed an image processing system that changes the apparent size of a food item when one picks it up to eat it. The size of the user's hand appears unchanged.

The system involves a pair of eyeglasses equipped with video cameras connected to a computer that processes the images.

When a person wearing the glasses looks at a food item he or she is holding, the system processes the image of the item to make it appear as much as 50 percent larger or 33 percent smaller than actual size. It also processes images of the hand so it looks natural even while holding the different-size items.

The team conducted an experiment using the system, in which 12 men and women in their 20s and 30s were asked to eat cookies until they got full.

Simple, Speedy Dessert Right for Spring

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

Dessert is an uncommon offering in my house, though not due to any we're-too-healthy-for-that ethic.

Rather, the typical day of work and errands and chasing a child tend to leave me with little time to consider dessert.

Which is why on the rare occasion that dessert does make an appearance, it needs to be fast, simple and something that can be prepped ahead. Even better is when the dessert can do double duty and be used in another meal the next day. That's a tall order for dessert.

But I have found one that works for all criteria — popovers.

This simple pastry — they resemble large, inflated muffins, but are hollow — comes together in almost no time and calls for just a handful of ingredients. Even better, the batter can be made the night ahead. And because popovers aren't particularly sweet, they work as well for dessert (their fillings can be sweet) as they do for breakfast.

Here's how it works. You make the batter in the blender whenever you have a spare 5 minutes (up to 24 hours ahead of time). Refrigerate it until you're ready to use it (just pop it back on the blender base for a quick whirl before using).

For a dessert, heat the oven while you make dinner. As you sit down to eat, pour the batter into a popover pan, pop that in the oven, then go enjoy dinner. By the time you finish, the popovers will be done. Then just tear a small opening and spoon in a filling — I've offered a simple mascarpone cream, but use whatever moves you — and you're done.

For a second serving as breakfast, save half of the batter for the next morning, then bake up a fresh batch and serve them with jam and butter.

Cardamom Popovers with Cinnamon Mascarpone and Berries

Start to finish: 45 minutes.
Servings: 12.

For the popovers:

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 cups milk
4 large eggs
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom

For the filling:

Two 8-ounce tubs mascarpone
2 tablespoons honey
Juice and zest of 1 lemon
2 teaspoons cinnamon
Sliced strawberries or other fresh berries, to serve

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a 6-cup popover pan with cooking spray.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

In a blender, combine the flour, milk, eggs, butter, sugar, salt and cardamom. Blend until the ingredients form a very smooth batter, about 1 minute. Fill each of the prepared popover pan cups about halfway with batter. You should use only half of the batter in the blender. The remainder can be baked as a second batch or refrigerated for up to 24 hours.

Bake for 30 minutes. Remove the popovers from the pan and use a knife to cut a small hole in the top of each to let the steam escape. Cool slightly. Meanwhile, to prepare the filling, in a medium bowl gently stir together the mascarpone, honey, lemon juice and zest, and the cinnamon. When the popovers have cooled just enough to handle, carefully tear the opening in each just enough to be able to spoon in about 1/4 cup of the filling. Serve each with sliced strawberries or other fresh berries. OBITUARIES

Leland Grant Ostler

June 23, 1920-April 16, 2012

TWIN FALLS • After an extended battle with cancer, Leland Grant Ostler, 91, passed away Monday, April 16, 2012, at his home in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Leland was born June 23, 1920, in Jerome, Idaho, to Johnathan and Edith Thompson Ostler. He was the eighth of 11 children. Leland was married to his sweetheart, Audrey Fay Beeson in Gooding, Idaho, on June 5, 1941. They spent 62 wonderful years together before Audrey was called home in September of 2003. Born to this marriage were Linda Fay, Janet Aletha, Sandra Dianne and Mark Warren. Sixteen years later, the couple adopted Kurtis Grant and three years later adopted Marcine, which completed their family.

Leland served in the Navy during World War II. At the close of the war, he returned to Idaho where the family made their home in Buhl for many years. He worked as a mechanic and then in the Postal Service. Following his retirement from the Postal Service, he worked for a time as a real estate agent and a contractor.

Leland served many positions in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, including bishop's counselor and bishop in the Buhl Wards. When the children were grown, Leland and his companion served missions in the West Indies, Columbia, South Carolina and the Chicago Temple. They also served as temple officiators in the Boise, Idaho, and Logan, Utah, temples. Over the last eight years, he has served in the Twin Falls Family History Center, indexed more than 50,000 names for temple work, and attended the temple about twice a week until his health interfered.

Leland is preceded in death by his sweetheart, Audrey; his parents; five brothers, Carl, Willis, Roger, Vaughn and Richard; 3 sisters, Lila Prentice, Lola Jensen and Ruth Burnham; one son-in-law, Ross Merrill; and three grandchildren. Surviving are two sons, Mark Ostler and Kurtis Ostler; four daughter, Linda Ostler, Janet Wood, Sandra Merrill and Marcine Sawyer; 36 grandchildren; 117 great-grandchildren; and 21 great-great-grandchildren.

A visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday evening, April 19, at the Twin Falls LDS 4th Ward Church, 421 Maurice St. N. in Twin Falls. The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Friday, April 20, also at the Twin Falls LDS 4th Ward Chapel, 421 Maurice St. N. in Twin Falls, with a visitation beginning at 10 a.m. Interment with military honors will follow at 2 p.m. in the Jerome Cemetery. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Carolyn A. Hoover

June 21, 1937-April 14, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Carolyn A. Hoover, 74, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away Saturday, April 14, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

She was born June 21, 1937, in Twin Falls, to T. Frank Cox and Norma F. Kempton. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1955 and attended business college after graduation. She later married Donald L. Young and had her first daughter, LeAnn. She and Donald later divorced and she married Wayne H. Hoover, and together they had two daughters, Terrie Lynn and Cathryn Jo. She and Wayne later divorced. Carolyn worked with attorney William J. Langley for 23 years and Farm Credit Services for 18 years until her health began to fail and she entered retirement.

Carolyn is preceded in death by her parents and two infant brothers. She is survived by her three daughters, LeAnn (Jim) Stuart, Terrie Peck and Cathryn (Stephen) Elston, all of Twin Falls. She is also survived by eight grandchildren, Lyndee Stuart, Katie Grubbs, Brandon Fiscus, Brett Fiscus, Andrea Fiscus, Kara Fiscus, Michael Legg and Jared Legg; 12 great-grandsons; five great-granddaughters; her brother, John R. Cox of Twin Falls; and a life-long friend, Joan Wall.

A graveside service will be held at 3 p.m. Friday, April 20, at the Twin Falls Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Lance Cox and the staff at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Friends and family may leave condolences by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Wendi (Satterwhite Lively) Heller

Jan. 15, 1969-April 14, 2012

AFTON, Wyo. • Wendi was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Jan. 15, 1969. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1987 and went on to be a nanny in Connecticut before returning to Twin Falls. She and Leroy Norris of Buhl were married for 13 years. During that time, Wendi was a business owner and worked at Jerome Cheese in the microbiology department. Despite wanting nothing more than to have children, Wendi was unable to do so. She treasured her nieces and nephews instead.

Wendi married David Heller of Wyoming approximately three years ago and felt she had found her soul mate. They lived in Twin Falls; San Diego, Calif.; and Afton, Wyo., where she passed away in her sleep Saturday, April 14, 2012. Wendi was a wonderfully sweet person who would have done anything for anyone.

She is survived by her father, stepfather and brothers and sisters on both sides of her family, in addition to many nieces and nephews. Wendi was preceded in death by her loving grandparents, Walt and Betty Mildon; her great-grandmother, Suzie Messinger; and her mother, Marilyn Lively.

There will be a memorial service Friday, April 20, in Afton, Wyo. A local service is being planned and will be announced soon.

Sybil Marie Burns

Jan. 23, 1912-April 13, 2012

JEROME • Sybil Marie Burns, 100, of Jerome, Idaho, passed away peacefully Friday, April 13, 2012, surrounded by family and friends at Woodstone Assisted Living in Twin Falls, Idaho.

She was born in Livonia, Mo., on Jan. 23, 1912, to Cleveland R. Polson and Nellie Bolander. She was the third child of six siblings. She married and later divorced Harry Barnett, then found and married the love of her life, James "Pat" B. Burns. They resided in Jerome, where she worked and raised her family.

Sybil is preceded in death by her husband, parents, a brother, two sisters, a son, two daughters, and two grandsons. She is survived by two sisters; two sons, Keith Barnett of Nevada and JR Burns of Boise, Idaho; as well as numerous grandchildren; great-grandchildren; and great-great-grandchildren, whom she loved dearly.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 19, at Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome, with viewing two hours previous.

The family would like to thank the caring staff at Woodstone Assisted Living and the wonderful nurses of Visions Hospice who cared for Sybil.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials in Sybil's name be made to a favorite charity.

Little Goes a Long Way with Nuts in a Healthy Diet

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Nuts often get a bad rap because of their high fat content. But the fat in most nuts is the healthy unsaturated variety.

It doesn't mean you should eat nuts with abandon, but it does mean you should feel no guilt about working them into a healthy diet.

The trick is moderation. And because nuts are so rich, moderation can be easy. All that rich flavor means it doesn't take much to feel satisfied. Whether you prefer to incorporate them in a dish, sprinkle them on a salad, or snack them by the handful, they are a great choice for healthy eating.

Nuts generally have a deeper flavor when toasted. To toast raw nuts, place them on a dry baking sheet and roast for 10 to 12 minutes at 350 degrees. Keep a close eye on them because they go from toasted to burnt very quickly.

The freezer is the best place to store nuts (same goes for seeds). All their healthy oils put them at risk for going rancid. Place them in a zip-close plastic bag and squeeze out the air before freezing. Always give your nuts a sniff and a taste before putting them in your dish. If they have any sourness or bitterness, don't use them.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

We've chosen to showcase walnuts in this recipe for a composed salad made from roasted tomatoes (the roasting brings out their sweetness) and creamy, herbed ricotta cheese. For a great dinner, serve this alongside a piece of crusty multigrain bread with some greens and a grilled chicken breast.

Roasted Tomatoes with Herbed Ricotta & Walnuts

Start to finish: 2 1/2 hours (30 minutes active). Servings: 4.

4 large tomatoes, halved and cored

1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper
1 cup low-fat ricotta cheese
1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil
2 teaspoons chopped fresh thyme
2 teaspoons chopped fresh oregano

1/4 cup chopped toasted walnuts
Balsamic vinegar (optional)

Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Place a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet. Spray the rack with cooking spray.

Arrange the tomatoes on the rack, cut sides up. Sprinkle the tomatoes with the salt, sugar and white pepper. Roast for 1 hour. Flip the tomatoes over and roast for another hour, or until the tomatoes are soft, wrinkly and have shrunken considerably in size.

While the tomatoes are roasting, in a medium bowl stir together the ricotta, basil, thyme and oregano. Set aside to allow the flavors to meld.

Serve the herbed ricotta alongside the roasted tomato halves. Sprinkle with toasted walnuts and drizzle lightly with balsamic vinegar, if using.

A Fresh, Rich Pea Soup Perfect for Spring

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

The inspiration for this rich, creamy pea soup came from an unlikely source — lime marshmallows.

While attending the South Beach Wine and Food Festival in Miami, I had a chance to eat lunch at Food Network Iron Chef Geoffrey Zakarian's restaurant, Tudor House Miami. I was completely won over by his simple pea soup studded with lime marshmallows. It was such an unusual combination that worked so well.

And, frankly, it made a lot of sense. Peas pair so well with an acidic tang. It's why they so often get a splash of lemon juice or a sprinkle of lemon zest. So why not lime?

I considered his soup during my flight home and wondered how to recreate it. While I love making marshmallows from scratch for special occasions, I'm not likely to whip up a batch for a simple weeknight soup. So I decided to skip the marshmallows and work the lime juice right into the soup. Turned out great.

This soup — which is inspired by, not a recreation of Zakarian's — is incredibly flexible. I like the extra layer of flavor you get by roasting the onions and garlic. But if you'd like to keep it simple, by all means dump everything in a pot and simmer until the onions and garlic are tender, then puree.

And there's nothing stopping you from topping this with purchased mini marshmallows.

Creamy Pea Soup with Roasted Garlic and Lime

Start to finish: 45 minutes (10 minutes active). Servings: 8.

3 large yellow onions, chopped
2 heads garlic
Olive oil
1 pound frozen peas
1 quart chicken broth
1 tablespoon minced jalapeno pepper slices
8-ounce container creme fraiche
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro

2 tablespoons lime juice
Salt and ground black pepper

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a rimmed baking sheet with cooking spray.

Arrange the chopped onions in an even layer on the prepared baking sheet. Carefully cut off the top of each head of garlic. You should cut deep enough to reveal the tops of the cloves inside. Set each head on the baking sheet and drizzle with olive oil. Spritz the onions with cooking spray. Roast for 30 minutes.

After about 20 minutes of roasting, in a large saucepan over medium-high, combine the peas, broth and jalapenos. Bring to a simmer.

Place the onions in a blender. One at a time, carefully hold each head of garlic (they will be hot) over the blender and squeeze. The softened cloves should easily pop out of their skins and into the blender. Ladle the pea and broth mixture into the blender, then puree until smooth. Return the soup to the saucepan over low heat.

Stir the creme fraiche, cilantro and lime juice into the soup. Season with salt and pepper.

Duck Salad Is Quick Asian Meal

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

With minimal effort, you can put together a salad with crunch, color and bit of Asian spice.

We used fresh duck breasts; they render more fat than frozen/thawed duck breasts. Strain and reserve the fat for another use.

Serve with garlic breadsticks. Adapted from "365 Ways to Cook," edited by Eleanor Maxfield (Firefly, 2011).

Warm Duck Salad

4 servings.

1 1/4 pounds fresh duck breasts
1 1/2 teaspoons sunflower or safflower oil
1 teaspoon toasted sesame oil
1/2 teaspoon Chinese five-spice powder
Pinch sea or kosher salt
Pinch freshly ground black pepper
2 or 3 limes
1-inch piece ginger root
1 small (5 to 6 ounces) cucumber
2 shallots (2 to 2 1/2 ounces total)
2 Thai bird's-eye chili peppers
1 small (5 ounces) Granny Smith apple (may substitute green mango)
4 Campari (small) tomatoes
2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
1/2 cup roasted, unsalted cashews
3 to 4 cups prepared cabbage/coleslaw mix (may substitute mixed salad greens)

Use a sharp knife to score the skin side of the duck breasts on the diagonal one way, then in the other direction to form a cross-hatch pattern.

Rub the oils, the five-spice powder and the salt and pepper all over the duck breasts. Place them skin side down in a wok, then place the wok over medium-low heat. Cook for 10 to 12 minutes, so the skin becomes crisped and golden and fat is rendered; if necessary, increase the heat to medium after the first 8 minutes to ensure crisped skin. Turn the duck breasts over and increase the heat to medium (if you haven't already done so). Cook for 3 to 5 minutes (for medium-rare). Transfer to a cutting board so the duck breasts can rest for at least 5 minutes.

While the duck is cooking and resting, cut the limes and squeeze their juice into a large mixing bowl to yield 2 1/2 tablespoons. As you work, add the ingredients to the bowl: Peel, then finely grate the ginger. Cut the cucumber and shallots crosswise into very thin slices. Stem and seed the bird's-eye peppers, then cut them crosswise into very thin slices. Core the apple, then cut into thin slices or matchsticks. Cut the tomatoes into quarters.

Add the soy sauce, cashews and slaw mix; toss to incorporate and coat evenly. Arrange on a serving platter.

Cut the duck on a slight diagonal into thin slices, placing them on the salad. Drizzle with any accumulated juices from the duck. Serve warm.

Switch to Flavor-filled Chicken Thighs on the Grill

BY SUSAN M. SELASKY
Detroit Free Press

At my house, firing up the grill takes place year-round, no matter the weather outside. We are not alone. Weber's annual GrillWatch has found that almost half of those surveyed grill all year.

Chicken breasts, one the most popular things to grill, should also be one of the easiest. But many people overcook or undercook them.

Greg Reyner, chef-owner of Cafe Muse in Royal Oak, Mich., recently told me that he's been using chicken thighs in more dishes. "The fat content is a little higher, but it's not as temperamental as the breast," Reyner said. "The thigh is more forgiving and a lot more flavorful."

I agree with Reyner that chicken thighs are an easy, tasty alternative, despite some confusion about their fat content, which seems to vary quite a lot. The Perdue brand lists a 3-ounce roasted chicken thigh without bone and skin as having 180 calories and 6 grams of fat. A U.S. Department of Agriculture listing says that a 3.5-ounce cooked boneless, skinless chicken thigh has 177 calories and 9 grams of fat and that about 4.6 ounces of cooked skin-on thigh meat has 346 calories and 22 grams of fat.

Today's Chicken Thighs with Apricot Glaze recipe is a great dish to whip up at the last moment for unexpected guests. It calls for bone-in, skin-on thighs, but you can substitute boneless, skinless ones. They cost more but take less time to cook.

Grilling them with the skin on keeps them moist, but you can remove the skin before serving to save fat and calories. You can grill them without the skin, too, just make sure you baste them every so often with the glaze to keep them from drying out.

The USDA recommends cooking thighs to an internal temperature of 165 degrees. The timing depends on the size of the thighs.

The glaze is made with apricot preserves, one of my pantry staples. The preserves are mixed and heated with minced jalapeno peppers and crushed red pepper flakes. The sweetness from the preserves balances the heat from the jalapenos.

Chicken Thighs with Spicy Apricot Glaze

Serves: 4 (2 thighs each).
Preparation time: 10 minutes. Total time: 45 minutes. You can use boneless, skinless chicken thighs, if desired. They will take about half the time to grill over direct heat.

- 8 small chicken thighs, trimmed of excess fat
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 3/4 cup apricot or peach preserves
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 jalapeno pepper, diced
- 1 tablespoon minced garlic
- Pinch of crushed red pepper flakes
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 green onions, thinly sliced, for garnish

Cilantro sprigs for garnish

Preheat the grill to medium-high for direct heat. Coat the grill rack with a flavorless oil, such as canola. Place the chicken thighs in a large bowl and season with salt and pepper. In a small saucepan, stir apricot preserves, red wine vinegar, olive oil, jalapeno, garlic and red pepper flakes. Heat until melted.

Remove 2 tablespoons of the apricot glaze and add to chicken thighs in the bowl. Toss to coat thighs. Set remaining glaze aside. Sprinkle the chicken with salt and pepper and place on the grill, skin-side down. Grill until you get nice grill marks on the skin side. Turn over and brush with some of the glaze. Close the lid on the grill and grill until the thighs are cooked through, about 25 to 30 minutes depending on how big the thighs are. Baste occasionally with more of the glaze if desired.

The thighs are done when the internal temperature of the thickest part is 165-170 degrees.

Remove the chicken thighs from the grill and transfer to a serving platter. Pour remaining glaze over the chicken and sprinkle with green onions and garnish with cilantro sprigs.

You're Doing It Wrong: Pancakes

BY L.V. ANDERSON
Slate

You don't need an excuse to eat pancakes: They are easy, economical and beloved by virtually everyone. What's more, they're inexplicably impressive — despite requiring very little effort, homemade pancakes tend to make people fall over themselves with gratitude and admiration.

Sadly, though, misinformation about pancake-making abounds. Many recipes call for separating the eggs, whipping the whites, and then folding them into the batter at the last minute. This supposedly results in a light, fluffy pancake — but it's utterly unnecessary. You don't need to go halfway toward making a meringue to make good pancakes; you just need to get some chemistry right.

Which is why buttermilk is absolutely crucial for good pancakes. Buttermilk is fermented milk (despite the deceptive name, it's no fattier than regular milk); thanks to the fermentation process, it's thicker and more acidic than regular milk. (In a pinch, you can approximate buttermilk at home by adding lemon juice or apple cider vinegar to milk — 1 tablespoon per cup of milk — and letting it sit at room temperature for a few minutes.) Buttermilk is terrible for drinking but a godsend for baking; the chemical reaction between the acid in buttermilk and the base in baking soda is what prevents pancake batter (and other quick bread batters) from being too dense.

Once that chemical reaction has taken place, ethereal pancakes are guaranteed — so long as you don't overwork the batter. Stir pancake batter as little as possible: As soon as all the streaks of flour are absorbed into it, you're done. If you try to stir until no lumps remain, you'll activate the gluten in the flour and end up with tough, rubbery disks.

The recipe below, passed down from my father, was a Saturday-morning mainstay in the You're Doing It Wrong household when I was a kid. (With one change: I've made half the flour whole wheat; as previously mentioned, whole wheat flour not only tastes good, but adds a tiny amount of nutritional value to otherwise nutritionally irredeemable baked goods.) These pancakes take well to additions: Sprinkle blueberries, banana slices, chocolate chips, pecans, or whatever other bite-sized goodies you like on top of the batter just after you've ladled it into the skillet.

Buttermilk Pancakes

Yield: About 16 pancakes (4 servings). Time: 20 to 30 minutes.

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup whole-wheat flour, or more all-purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 large eggs
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil or peanut oil

Oil or butter for cooking the pancakes
Butter and maple syrup for serving

Put a large skillet over medium heat, or heat a griddle to medium. Whisk together the flours, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt in a medium bowl. Beat the eggs in a separate large bowl, then stir in the buttermilk and oil. Add the flour mixture to the buttermilk mixture and stir just until combined; the batter should be lumpy.

Put about a tablespoon of oil or butter in the skillet or on the griddle. When it's hot, begin to pour the batter, a scant 1/4 cup at a time, into the skillet or on to the griddle; try not to let the pancakes touch one another. When the bottom of the pancakes are golden brown, the edges are firm and the tops are bubbly, after about 3 minutes, flip the pancakes and cook until golden brown on the other side, about 2 minutes. Repeat with the remaining batter, adding more oil or butter to the skillet or griddle for each batch. Serve hot with butter and maple syrup.

Castleford Boys, Valley Girls Dominate Oakley Invite

dbashore@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Playing in an unfamiliar position was all the motivation Mitch Howard needed.

Beaten out by Sierra Harr for the top spot in Castleford's golf order for Tuesday's Oakley Invitational, Howard played to near perfection in the No. 2 spot, shooting an even-par effort on the back nine for a winning score of 77, leading Castleford to the team win.

"It's definitely not something I'm used to, so it motivated me a little," said Howard. "I hit the ball well, didn't putt very well, but I started playing well all around on the back. I just focused on my game and didn't try to get too involved in everything else going on."

Howard led four Castleford golfers in the top 10, as the Wolves finished with a team score of 337, 50 strokes ahead of Valley. Harr finished tied for second with Raft River's Zach Zollinger, two shots behind Howard. Castleford's other top 10 finishers were Tanner Allred in fourth with an 84 and Mike Peckham in 10th with a 97.

"This is the best we've shot all season, I think," Howard said. "We're right about where we want to be (at districts and state) — here or maybe even a little lower."

Valley's girls shot a combined 473 to easily outpoint Lighthouse Christian. Leading the way was Kaela Standlee, who shot a season-best 104 in prime golfing conditions to earn the low-round honors.

"I've been really working on my short game, and especially my putting. I think that took about six strokes off today (from a normal round)," said Standlee. "I'm a fair-weather golfer, and this whole season has been great golf. Hopefully I can keep getting better."

Raft River's Spaeth Steps Down as Coach

But the longtime successful coach isn't leaving the Trojans, moving over to take over athletic director duties from the retiring Dennis Lee.

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

MALTA • For the better part of two decades, Raft River High has known only one athletic director and one football coach.

That will all change next fall.

After more than 20 years as the school's athletic director, Dennis Lee will retire at the end of this school year.

Taking his place, and resigning as head football coach, is Randy Spaeth.

"It's mixed emotions, but it feels like it's the time to take advantage of this opportunity," said Spaeth. "Dennis has been a tremendous help through the years. He's spent the last couple months mentoring me and it makes me feel good that he's excited for me."

"I feel like I have a good rapport with other athletic directors in the district, and I'm excited to work with them and work in sports through a different facet," Spaeth said.

The longest-tenured coach in the Class 1A Division I Snake River Conference, Spaeth will step away from the football program after a successful 15-year run in which he posted a 104-46 record and reached at least the state semifinals seven times.

in the fall," Spaeth said. "I'm going into a new position and I just really want to put my attention toward doing the athletic director job as best as I can do it. To me it would be a real conflict of time to figure out football and AD all at once."

Spaeth will continue to coach track — where he has helped the Trojans to six state titles — and JV boys basketball.

"Football really requires a tremendous amount of time

One of Spaeth's first tasks as athletic director will be to hire his football successor.

"After putting 15 years into our program here, it's really critical to me that we don't turn the program over to just anybody," Spaeth said. "I

NFL

Manning, Broncos Open vs. Steelers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The nation won't have to wait long to see Peyton Manning in a Broncos uniform.

Manning's first game as Broncos quarterback will come in prime time as Denver hosts Pittsburgh on the opening Sunday of the NFL season. The four-time MVP was released by Indianapolis after missing the 2011 season following neck surgery. After conducting a four-city lottery for his services, Manning landed in Denver, which hasn't won a Super Bowl since his new boss, John Elway, was behind center.

"We're excited about that. Anytime you have a guy behind the center named Peyton Manning, you're going to get a lot of attention," Elway said.

Manning won't have an easy assignment against the Steelers, who ranked first in overall defense and against the pass last year.

"The opening game in Denver obviously will be an interesting way to start the season," Steelers President Art Rooney said. "There will be a lot of attention paid to Peyton Manning's first game with the Denver Broncos, so it'll be exciting to start out that way."

Pittsburgh's season ended in Denver in January when Tim Tebow threw an 80-yard TD pass to Demaryius Thomas on the first play of overtime in their wild-card playoff game. Manning presents a whole different challenge.

"Hopefully we can back up the playoff game that we had last year," Elway said.

Steelers at Broncos is one of four prime-time games in the league's kickoff week, Sept. 5-10. The schedule, released Tuesday, has the Super Bowl champion Giants hosting the Cowboys in the first Wednesday NFL game since 1948; the league moved the game to avoid a conflict with President Barack Obama's Thursday night speech at the Democratic National Convention.

"We will have a week-in and week-out challenge, not only in who we play, but with the different elements of our schedule," Giants coach Tom Coughlin said.

"We play on four different days and we have five night games. Our first three games are Wednesday-Sunday-Thursday. We play

FAB FIVE: UK STARTERS DECLARE FOR DRAFT

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. • Kentucky's starting lineup of three freshmen and two sophomores did most everything together. Now, they will go their separate ways in the NBA.

Freshmen Anthony Davis, Michael Kidd-Gilchrist and Marquis Teague, and sophomores Terrence Jones and Doron Lamb declared for the draft in a nationally televised news conference Tuesday night.

"We made it work," Jones said. "We all wanted to be there and do it together like we've done everything else together."

The group, all clad in similar blue UK golf shirts, came into the season largely untested before ascending to No. 1, winning the Southeastern Conference in dominating fashion and capping an NCAA tournament run with a 67-59 victory over Kansas in the title game for the school's eighth championship.

"It's been a great opportunity playing here, I'll miss this team, the way we played together. We all love each other," said Davis, who picked up every major player of the year award and is likely the No. 1 pick in June's draft. "I'm just going to miss this place. We won an NCAA championship here and did a lot. We all did a lot for this school and I'm going to miss it."

The five join seniors Darius Miller, who is also projected to be drafted, and Eloy Vargas in leaving the program.

"This is a players' first program. I said it three years ago. During the season, it's about our team. You saw it in this year's team, they were about each other," coach John Calipari said. "When the season is over, it's about moments like this."

The departures mean only freshman Kyle Wiltjer remains from the rotation with a new class of highly touted recruits joining Calipari next season. Calipari said he had never watched the final game of a season until this one.

Kidd-Gilchrist appeared emotional for a few moments at the podium and later said his mother, Cindy Richardson, wanted him to

TWIN FALLS • Josie Jordan is continuing the Magic Valley's prep migration to southeast Washington.

The Twin Falls High senior signed a letter of intent Tuesday to play women's basketball at Walla Walla Community College.

Jordan, who played the small forward position for Twin Falls, averaged 12.5 points and was a reliable shooting option from the perimeter.

"I liked the coaching staff, and the team. Love the campus, and the gym was awesome. I just loved it all around," said Jordan. "I'm excited to play for a great program and ready to start playing ball again."

Among others, Jordan will join Bruin boys basketball player Eric Harr and Canyon Ridge softball player Karly Hudelson, her best friend, in becoming Warriors next school year.

"There's so many people from the Magic Valley going up there. I'm close with some of them and I think it'll be fun just to be around them from high school into

MARLINS TRIUMPH IN GUILLEN'S RETURN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Ozzie Guillen made a victorious return to the dugout Tuesday night, when pitchers Josh Johnson and Heath Bell snapped out of early-season slumps to help the Miami Marlins beat the Chicago Cubs 5-2.

Guillen returned from a five-game suspension imposed after his comments praising Fidel Castro caused a backlash in South Florida, especially among Cuban Americans.

Johnson allowed two runs in seven innings and Bell earned the save after four rocky outings. Streaking Hanley Ramirez broke a 2-all tie with a three-run homer in the eighth, his third.

No demonstrations targeted at Guillen were evident, although a screaming fan in the second deck did call the Marlins manager an insulting name several times midway through the game.

NATIONALS 1, ASTROS 0
WASHINGTON • Gio Gonzalez earned his first win with the surprising Nationals, pitching seven dominant innings in a win over the Astros.

The Nationals improved to 9-3, their best start since moving from Montreal to Washington in 2005.

BRAVES 9, METS 3
ATLANTA • The Braves finally beat the Mets, taking advantage of shaky defense to hand Johan Santana the shortest start of his career.

Tyler Pastornicky's two-run double highlighted a five-run second that finished off Santana. Randall Delgado (2-0) won it for the Braves, who lost their first four games against the Mets this season.

BREWERS 5, DODGERS 4
MILWAUKEE • Pinch-hitter George Kottaras' two-run double with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted Milwaukee over Los Angeles, snapping the Dodgers' six-game winning streak.

RANGERS 18, RED SOX 3

BOSTON • Mike Napoli hit two of Texas' six home runs and the Rangers romped past Boston for their fifth straight victory.

Josh Hamilton homered and matched his career high with five RBIs. Adrian Beltre, Michael Young and Nelson Cruz also connected for the Rangers.

YANKEES 8, TWINS 3

NEW YORK • CC Sabathia shook off early trouble to get a rare April win for the Yankees and backup catcher Chris Stewart hit a go-ahead, two-run single and had three RBIs for the first time in his career to lead New York over the Twins. Sabathia (1-0) allowed three runs and four hits in 7 1-3 innings with seven strikeouts and one walk. After falling behind 3-1 in the third, he didn't allow a hit and retired 13 in a row during one stretch.

BLUE JAYS 7, RAYS 3

TORONTO • Jose Bautista, Adam Lind and Brett Lawrie homered and Toronto took advantage of a three-error game by normally sure-handed Evan Longoria to beat Tampa Bay.

It was a career worst performance for Longoria, the AL's Gold Glove third baseman in 2009 and 2010. He became the seventh player in Rays history to make three errors in a game.

Matt Joyce homered for the Rays, who have lost six of eight.

ORIOLES 3, WHITE SOX 2

CHICAGO • Nolan Reimold homered for the fourth consecutive game and made a terrific diving catch in left field, helping Baltimore beat Chicago.

Baltimore had just one hit before Robert Andino singled with one out in the sixth. Reimold then hit a drive to left-center off John Danks, giving the Orioles a 2-0 lead. J.J. Hardy followed with a drive to virtually the same spot for his third homer.

TIGERS 3, ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Miguel Cabrera snapped out of his slump with a pair of hits, driving in the go-ahead run and helping Detroit over Kansas City.

Cabrera was 0 for 22 before his single in the third inning, but it was his RBI single off reliever Greg Holland in the eighth that proved most important. It came on the heels of singles by Andy Dirks and Brennan Boesch, and snapped a 1-all tie.

Dog Days in Jury Selection for Clemens Retrial

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • One potential juror was questioned for 68 minutes. Another for 64 — and he didn't even make the cut. Along the way, Roger Clemens' lawyer offered some clues as to his strategy once testimony gets under way, including a challenge to whether Congress had a legitimate purpose in holding the hearing at which the seven-time Cy Young Award winner testified — and whether Clemens' testimony was voluntary.

The laborious task of selecting a jury for the Clemens retrial resumed Tuesday and might not be done by the end of the week, with the judge and lawyers for both sides parsing prospects' thoughts on topics as disparate as Barry Bonds and Lance Armstrong, Twitter and the reputation of the Justice Department.

"To be completely honest, I dislike Barry Bonds. ... Truthfully, I believe he actually did it. I believe he used drugs," said one man, a graphic designer who nevertheless was asked to return after he expressed neutral feelings about Clemens.

The court is narrowing the initial jury pool of 90 down to 36, from which to select the final 12 jurors and four alternates who will decide whether Clemens lied when he denied using steroids and human growth hormone before a U.S. House committee in February 2008. The extra 20 are needed because Clemens' lawyers are allowed to strike 12 and prosecutors, eight — without giving any reason.

By the end of the second day, only 32 Washingtonians had been questioned, with 15 — 11 women and four men — meeting the initial approval of U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton.

Jury selection will continue at least through Thursday, and no session is scheduled for Friday. Even the judge's "10-minute break" in the morning ended up lasting 25 minutes.

"Things aren't going as fast as I thought," Walton said early in the afternoon.

Finding potential jurors without some preconceived opinion about the case — or whether it's worth the time and expense for the government to pursue it — has been challenging. Among those who were excused was the woman who told the judge: "I feel like I know too much." She said she had discussed the case with friends and added: "I frankly question the legitimacy of bringing this to this court."

It was during questioning of one potential juror that Clemens' attorney Rusty Hardin raised the issue of whether Clemens truly "voluntarily appeared" before Congress. Clemens was not subpoenaed to testify at the 2008 hearing, and the government has always maintained that he testified on his own will.

Clemens' lawyers also filed a memo with the court that argued the government must show that the hearing was a "competent tribunal." The memo listed a dozen "examples of Congressional conduct that exceeds the power to investigate," including "asking a witness to appear before a committee to give him an opportunity to tell his side of the story."

"There's going to be a challenge by the defense as to the propriety of the hearing ... and the way it was conducted," Hardin told one juror.

Clemens, wearing a dark pinstriped suit and red tie, remained silent during the proceedings, listening to the questioning and often looking at notes.

want to have the program continue with a very high-caliber person that can pick up right where we left off and take the program to new levels. I want to see our kids to continue to have success and contend for state championships."

Lee, who was unavailable for comment Tuesday, has also played a role in coaching Raft River to 15 state track championships, boys and girls combined.

Spaeth emphasized his gratitude for community support, and that he's proud of Raft River's reputation for "doing things the right way."

"The biggest thing that I feel good about is that our football program across the state of Idaho is well-respected," Spaeth said. "I'm going to miss the regular interaction with the players, going to practice and watching the kids grow and get better, and getting in those game situations where you see things you've been working on come together."

two road night games early, come home for a week and then go to San Francisco. Our people are going to have to be really good about it."

The now-traditional Monday night opening doubleheader has Cincinnati at Baltimore, followed by San Diego at Oakland.

A juicy opening-day matchup features San Francisco at Green Bay; the teams combined to go 28-4 in 2011. New Orleans, still awaiting league punishment to its players for the bounty program that targeted opponents for dangerous hits, hosts Washington.

The Saints have a bye after their fifth game, which means interim coach Joe Vitt will actually miss seven weeks during his six-game suspension for his role in the bounty system.

A 14-week package of Thursday night games begins in Week 2 with Chicago at Green Bay. All but one of those games will be on NFL Network, which now has games from September until December instead of just the second half of the schedule.

The other Thursday night game is on Thanksgiving on NBC: New England at the New York Jets, Tebow's new team. Earlier that holiday, Houston is at Detroit, then Washington at Dallas.

Two Sunday games will be played outside the United States. St. Louis hosts New England on Oct. 28 in London, while Buffalo hosts Seattle on Dec. 16 in Toronto.

Fab Five

 return to school since he was one of the youngest players in Division I after turning 18 in September. Instead, he has other plans for her.
 "I want to spoil my mom. I think I'm going to spoil my mom to death. That's one thing I'm looking forward to," said Kidd-Gilchrist, who plans to buy her a watch for starters. "I'm ready, I think. I'm ready for anything that comes my way now."

 Teague, the point guard, seemed to be the only player who might be a questionable first-round pick in Calipari's effort to match his 2010 draft class that saw five players go in the first round led by the No. 1 overall pick, John Wall. Teague said he felt like he did enough to be drafted in the first round by leading a "great team that's kind of like an NBA team" to a national championship.

 "This is my lifelong dream to play in the NBA and to be doing it with these guys, we're all just making the decision together just makes it that much more special," Teague said. "I love every day knowing I played with these guys and that not being an option any more is tough to deal with. But we all decided we needed to move on, so this is something we've got to do."

 Lamb said he really had only one goal after both he and Jones were projected first-round picks last season.
 "The reason I stayed was to win a national championship," Lamb said. "Me and Terrence we talked together last year and we decided to come back this year to win a national championship and we did that. Our dreams came true."

 Wiltjer and the rest of the bench made up just 6 percent of the total minutes played this season. But the group will quickly be getting help.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Notice of Realty Action: Proposed minor boundary revision at Minidoka National Historic Site, Jerome County, Idaho.

The National Park Service is considering adding approximately 88.51+/- acres of land that lies adjacent to the existing westerly boundary for the Minidoka National Historic Site. The proposed land addition is identified as parcel nos. 2, 3 and 4 in property survey recorded on 07/30/2009 under instrument no. 2093795 and identified as tax parcel nos: RP08S19E2300A and RP08S19E329001A.

The inclusion of this land within the park boundary will enable the current conservation easement holder to donate and convey its interest in the subject land to the National Park Service for the benefit of preserving and telling the Minidoka Internment Camp story that took place during WWII. The Camp's hospital and Army barracks designated as Blocks 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 were situated on this 88.51-acre parcel.

Further information on this proposal is available from the National Park Service, Columbia Cascades Land Resources Program Center, 168 South Jackson Street, Seattle, Washington 98104; Attention: Mr. Rick Wagner (206) 220-4100. Public comments will be accepted, in writing, at his address until May 25, 2012.

The action to proceed with the boundary revision will become the final determination of the Department of the Interior, in the absence of any subsequent action to modify or vacate the proposal.

THE TRUSTEE HAS NO KNOWLEDGE OF A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED REAL PROPERTY, BUT FOR PURPOSES OF COMPLIANCE WITH IDAHO CODE, SECTION 60-113, THE TRUSTEE HAS BEEN INFORMED THAT THE STREET ADDRESS OF: 1115 Filer Avenue West FKA 1095 Filer Ave. West, Twin Falls, ID 83301, MAY SOMETIMES BE ASSOCIATED WITH SAID REAL PROPERTY.

If the successful bidder cannot provide the bid price by means of one of the above means of payment, the sale will be postponed for 10 minutes only to allow the high bidder to obtain payment in a form prescribed herein above. If the high bidder is unsuccessful in obtaining payment as directed within 10 minutes, the sale will be re-held immediately and any bid by the high bidder from the previous sale, will be rejected, all in accordance with Idaho Code 45-1502 et. Sec.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by Patrick D. Brown and Lisa Barini-Garcia, husband and wife, as Grantor to Alliance Title & Escrow Corp. successor by merger to Security Title Company of Idaho, as Trustee, for the benefit and security of Orus L Bowles and Phyllis M Bowles, husband and wife as Beneficiary, recorded June 2, 1995 as Instrument No. 1995008661, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to: Make principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note, modified. The original loan amount was $108,500.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 6.200% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated June 2, 1995. Payments are in default for the months of January 2012 through and including March 2012 in the amount of $850.00 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reinstatement. The principal balance as of March 13, 2012 is $30,087.32 together with accrued and accruing interest thereon at the rate of 6.200% per annum. The per diem is $5.11. In addition to the above, there is also due delinquent real property taxes for part of 2011, together with penalty and interest, and any other real property taxes that may become delinquent during this foreclosure, any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $30,087.32, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

Get In The Habit!

Read the Classifieds Every Day

DEAR ABBY: My youngest daughter, "Lizzy," the sweetest and most conscientious of my children, has been cut off yet again by her mother, "Ruth." Ruth pressured Lizzy to graduate from high school a year early because she couldn't date with a child still at home. (Her words.) After graduation, Lizzy was shipped off to another state for college, then abandoned to find her own funding for continued education.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips
Lizzy feels unwanted by her mother and desperately wants to know why. The truth is, Ruth didn't want that pregnancy in the first place and has held it against Lizzy. The deeper truth is I wanted another child and deliberately got Ruth pregnant. I never told anyone, even after Ruth divorced me several years later. As far as I know, she has always accepted it as accidental.

What I did was wrong, yet I can't imagine a world without my daughter in it. Lizzy is the only one of my children who has become close to me since the divorce. The others all believe their mother's lies about me — that I cheated on her, which is the opposite of what really happened.

Should I share the truth about her birth with my daughter? I'm not sure because I have always believed it is a major mistake to admit to a child of any age that their pregnancy was a surprise, let alone that it was unwanted. Two of my siblings weren't planned, and one of them has become a bitter and distant adult. I want to help my daughter understand and accept her mother's insane actions and get on with her own life. What should I do?

- GUILT-RIDDEN DAD DEAR GUILT-RIDDEN:
Lizzy already has a pretty good idea that she wasn't wanted, and I wouldn't be surprised if her mother hasn't told her she was a "surprise" baby. Do not try to expiate your feelings of guilt by telling your daughter what you have told me. That is a discussion you should have with your confessor, not your child. It may take a therapist to help Lizzy forgive her mother and get on with her life. What you should do is pay for at least half of her therapy and contribute toward her education.

DEAR ABBY: My son was recently diagnosed with bone cancer and is currently receiving treatment. We heard about a fundraiser for pediatric cancer being held in our community. We joined the event and have received many donations from family and friends. As much as I want to hand-write thank-you cards, between his treatments, my work schedule and my other kids I can't find the time. Is an email thank you OK? The donations have all been made online.

- WANTS TO DO THE RIGHT THING DEAR WANTS TO DO THE RIGHT THING: I know you are under a lot of pressure right now. However, please refrain from expressing your gratitude by email. Send short, handwritten, personal notes — a few at a time — to those who gave money, as your schedule permits. It is the proper thing to do, and they will be appreciated.

DEAR ABBY: For decades I have been told I look like my mother. The problem is, my mother is ugly! I no longer respond to the comment, preferring to remain silent and just stare at the person instead.

Abby, please remind people that unless the comparison is to an attractive model, opinions should be kept to oneself.

- BEAUTIFUL IN MY OWN WAY, RICHMOND, KY.

DEAR BEAUTIFUL IN YOUR OWN WAY: I'll remind them, but it's possible that you're overly sensitive. The person could be referring to a family resemblance, your coloring or a mannerism. A diplomatic response would be, "Thank you. Isn't she a dear?"

This is a GREAT way to earn some extra cash! Start a delivery route today!

Today is Wednesday, April 18, the 109th day of 2012. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On April 18, 1942, an air squadron from the USS Hornet led by Lt. Col. James H. Doolittle raided Tokyo and other Japanese cities during World War II.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1775, Paul Revere began his famous ride from Charlestown to Lexington, Mass., warning American colonists that the British were coming.

In 1831, the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa was officially opened.

In 1906, a devastating earthquake struck San Francisco, followed by raging fires; estimates of the final death toll range between 3,000 and 6,000.

In 1910, suffragists showed up at the U.S. Capitol with half a million signatures demanding that women have the right to vote.

In 1912, the RMS Carpathia, carrying survivors of the Titanic disaster, arrived in New York.

In 1934, the first laundromat (called a "washateria") opened in Fort Worth, Texas.

In 1942, the first World War II edition of The Stars and Stripes was published as a weekly newspaper.

In 1945, famed American war correspondent Ernie Pyle, 44, was killed by Japanese gunfire on the Pacific island of Ie Shima, off Okinawa.

In 1949, the Republic of Ireland was proclaimed.

In 1954, Gamal Abdel Nasser seized power, becoming prime minister of Egypt.

In 1978, the Senate approved the Panama Canal Treaty, providing for the complete turnover of control of the waterway to Panama on the last day of 1999.

In 1983, 63 people, including 17 Americans, were killed at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, by a suicide bomber.

Ten years ago: Police arrested actor Robert Blake in the shooting death of his wife, Bonny Lee Bakley, nearly a year earlier (Blake was acquitted at his criminal trial but found liable in a civil trial). Amtrak's Auto Train derailed near Crescent City, Fla., killing four passengers. Afghanistan's former king, Mohammad Zaher Shah, returned to his country after 29 years in exile. A small plane slammed into a skyscraper in Milan, Italy, killing the plane's sole occupant and two other people. Norwegian adventurer Thor Heyerdahl died near Colla Micheri, Italy, at age 87.

Five years ago: The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 ruling, upheld the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act. Four large bombs exploded in mainly Shiite locations of Baghdad, killing at least 183 people. Mark Buehrle of the Chicago White Sox faced the minimum 27 batters in a 6-0 no-hit victory over the Texas Rangers. Curtis Strange and Hubert Green joined the World Golf Hall of Fame.

One year ago: Standard & Poor's lowered its long-term outlook for the U.S. government's fiscal health from "stable" to "negative." Crystal Mangum, who'd falsely accused three Duke lacrosse players of raping her, was charged with murdering her boyfriend, Reginald Dye. Kenya's Geoffrey Mutai won the Boston Marathon in a record time of 2:03:02, while fellow Kenyan Caroline Kilel won the women's race in 2:22:36. The Los Angeles Times won a Pulitzer Prize for revealing that officials in Bell, Calif., were paying themselves exorbitant salaries; but for the first time in the Pulitzer's 95-year history, no award was given in the category of breaking news.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Conscience is the inner voice which warns us somebody may be looking."
— H.L. Mencken

An avoidance play is declarer's attempt to deny one opponent the lead. This could be because we fear a shift from one opponent but not the other, or equally, as in today's deal, one opponent has winners to cash.

Look at the play today in three no-trump, remembering that your target is to take nine tricks, not 10!

West leads a spade obediently. As declarer, you must duck the first two spades to cut the defenders' communications. You win the third spade and should work out that you only need four diamond tricks for the contract, but you must keep East off play if he has four diamonds. To do that, you do not mind sacrificing an overtrick.

You cross to dummy by leading a low heart to the jack. Now comes a diamond toward your hand. If East plays low, you insert the eight and have achieved your target of bringing in the diamond suit safely.

If East divines your intention and inserts the 10 on the first diamond, you take the trick in hand and lead a heart to the ace. Then you repeat the process in diamonds, planning again to lead low to your eight, finessing against East's jack. This ensures that you make nine tricks, since if West has a second diamond, the suit must be splitting for you, and you can overtake your remaining diamond honor with dummy's ace and run the suit.

ANSWER: You might sensibly respond one no-trump here (you are about a queen short of a two-no-trump response). Alternatively, you might simply introduce your diamond suit. Again, though, you seem about a queen short of an invitational jump to three diamonds, so a simple call of two diamonds would suffice. I prefer the former choice, as it represents the best chance to reach game.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF APRIL 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Concentrate on the spiritual rather than the physical over the next several months. Because your ambitious nature may make you blind to pitfalls, there is a tendency to fight the very things that are good for you in July. A lucky break can keep you from losing out, but it is inadvisable to begin anything of crucial importance in July or September when cosmic tides are not flowing your way. The business or career projects you begin in December are certain to bear fruit within the year and give you much to be grateful for. Take care of your health in the year ahead and get regular checkups.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay tuned for ways to care for the environment. You can develop a feel for ways to create long-term profits without injuring the planet. You can be very intuitive and astute with daily business affairs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pay attention to the poetry in the world around you. Even when you are getting your hands dirty while digging in the garden, you can listen to the birds sing. Give the squeakiest wheel some oil.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could have a shot at making it in the big time. Take aim at lofty goals and idealistic objectives that serve to knit together the needs of your family and the ongoing demands of your job or career.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It may be time to trade up. The old and worn out is ready to be replaced. Your ability to pick things of lasting value is enhanced, so this might be a good time to start serious comparison shopping.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Life is short but art lasts. Value the most timeless things that never waver and never fade. Take time to explore the depths of harmonious feelings that have developed between you and a special someone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are hard-wired for fun and the pursuit of fantasies. In your quest for excitement, however, you might disregard the rights of others. To avoid a sniff of disapproval, restrain your wild impulses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Joint resources may need careful perusal. Maybe it is time to shift funds, merge assets or make an important decision. Don't be too anxious to discard ideas and procedures that have stood the test of time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Alchemists never found the philosopher's stone or turned base metals into gold. There may be a lesson in this; endless experimentation may yield results, but not necessarily the results you hoped for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Trust your intuitions. It might seem that your ideas are unappreciated by others, but your social instincts are right on the mark. You might not receive recognition, but you recognize that some people are best avoided.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Search for enduring values. Don't waste your pennies on items that won't stand the test of time. Take time to stretch your creative mind and let yourself be swept away on a tide of imagination.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you have built well, you have a firm base. From here, you can make lasting improvements. You may have the ear of the mighty and the tides of popular opinion swing your way to encourage you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Train your mind and the body will follow its lead. Envision the ways that you can achieve your goal and practice it constantly within the safety of your mind. Logic isn't necessary with emotional issues.
