SEXUAL ASSAULT RESPONSE

A Streamlined Solution

A joint Sexual Assault Response Team is improving how such cases are investigated and prosecuted within Twin Falls County.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • Crimes are committed, evidence is collected, specimens are rushed to a lab and results return before the third commercial break. Suspects are caught, they confess and victims have some sense of justice, all in one hour.

Real life, though, isn't as neat and tidy as a TV crime drama. So within Twin Falls County, a group of law enforcement officers, nurses and advocates is working to make the process of going through the criminal justice system easier on victims, one crime at a time.

While the Sexual Assault Response Team officially started about two years ago, the need for such a coalition among agencies has been discussed for years, said Lori Stewart, the victims' assistance coordinator with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

The group pools its resources, working to solve sexual assault cases and sharing knowledge from each involved agency.

Stewart has been in victims' services for 14 years, responding to sexual assault cases. Now she's also a member of SART. She's there for the victim from the start, through a doctors' exam and the collection of evidence.

Besides providing that emotional support, she has assisted nurses tending to victims and helped officers by taking photos at the scene. Sometimes, victims tell her

'Redneck' Derby Still a Good Cause

Loathed by animal advocates and loved by hunters, the annual event has raised more than $200,000 for area schools and charities.

BLISS • When Sandy Bates talks about how a rock chuck derby became a memorial for her daughter, she starts with a bittersweet smile.

It was 2007 and Hannah — her 20-year-old daughter — had to miss the annual rock chuck derby to meet with a cancer specialist.

"The doctor came in and asked her why she was feeling down and Hannah says, 'I'm upset that I'm missing the damn rock chuck derby,'" Bates said. "And of course, the next thing out of the doctor's mouth was, 'What the hell is a rock chuck?'"

When Hannah lost her battle with cancer in 2008, the community immediately threw its support behind Sandy and dedicated all the funds it raised from the first derby to nonprofits in honor of Hannah.

Five years later, the Hannah Bates Memorial Rock Chuck Derby has continued to donate its contributions to lo-

Workman

RUPERT • Army Sgt. Chris J. Workman, killed in an April 19 Black Hawk helicopter crash in southern Afghanistan, will be laid to rest Friday in Rupert.

Workman, 33, will return to Idaho Monday afternoon, when his body will be transferred to his family during a private honorable transfer ceremony at Gowen Field in Boise.

A public funeral service will be held at 3 p.m. Thursday at Eagle Christian Church, 100 Short Road, Eagle.

Workman will be returned to Rupert, where his parents live, on Friday for a 3 p.m. interment at the Rupert Cemetery, 450 N. Meridian, Rupert. The event is open to the public.

Workman and three other soldiers were killed when the Black Hawk helicopter they were riding in crashed in the Garmsir District of Helmand Province in southern Afghanistan while attempting to evacuate seven wounded Afghan police officers injured in a suicide bombing.

According to a U.S. Department of Defense release, the other soldiers killed are Chief Warrant Officer Nicholas S. Johnson, 27, of San Diego, Calif.; Chief Warrant Officer Don C. Viray, 25, of Waipahu, Hawaii; and Sgt. Dean R. Shaffer, 23, of Pekin, Ill.

Workman, an Army specialist, was posthumously promoted to sergeant. He joined the Army in 2009.

He leaves behind a wife, Camille, and stepson, Cole Hayes, along with family in Rupert and elsewhere.

Murtaugh Shooting Investigation Continues

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Investigators continue to work the case of a Tuesday night shooting that left one man dead and another severely injured. A third man in the shooting south of Murtaugh suffered minor injury and drove himself to Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley that night, according to law-enforcement officials.

The other victims were taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, where one man died.

"The question at the center of the investigation is who did what and when," Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said Friday. "Once we've got the answer to that question, it will answer all these other questions."

Officers responding to the shooting arrived at the scene Tuesday night to find two injured men and a SUV fully engulfed in flames.

But as the investigation continues, few details have been offered. Police haven't released the identities of any of the shooting suspects, and details of the survivors' injuries remain limited.

One of the men was injured to the point that he's unable to make a phone call, Loebs said, adding he's unsure whether the man's next of kin had been notified of his injuries.

Loebs was also unsure if the deceased man's family had been notified of his death. The men's names will not be released to the public until positive identifications and notifications have been made, Twin Falls County sheriff's spokesman Lori Stewart said earlier this week.

More details will be available following an all-agency briefing Monday, both Loebs and Stewart said.

Get That Weak Heart Looked At

Over the past few weeks my heart feels like it is racing and I feel weak all the time. Could it be atrial fibrillation?

— Tom, Filer

Answered by Dr. Dan Brown, St. Luke's Clinic, Cardiology:

If you are experiencing irregular heartbeats and constantly feel weak, it is very important that you contact your health care provider. You could be suffering from a disorder known as atrial fibrillation. A-Fib is a very common disorder of cardiac rhythm. It is easy to diagnose with an electrocardiogram (an ultrasound of the heart). There will be a few cases where A-Fib comes and goes, but most cases have persistent A-Fib.

Fifty percent of those who are diagnosed with A-Fib also experience sleep apnea. Sleep apnea is a sleep disorder characterized by abnormal pauses in breathing or instances of abnormally low breathing during sleep.

The main concern with A-Fib is the potential for stroke. The low pressure chambers of the heart, the atrium, quiver in A-Fib. In the left atrium, there is a place where the blood stagnates, increasing the likelihood of clot formation. If a clot occurs, it can migrate to the brain, causing a stroke. The goal in treatment of A-Fib is to alter the heart's electrical system with medications, cardioversion (an electric shock that can return the heart rhythm to normal), catheter ablations or advanced surgical options. If a person is also diagnosed with sleep apnea, a CPAP machine can also aid in the treatment of this disorder.

Hunters began trickling in on Friday to weigh the largest rock chuck they shot that day. The first on the scales was Garrett Awalt, 10, who won last year's youth hunt with a 12.4 pound rock chuck.

"I think I'm going to win again this year," Awalt said, pulling out the dead critter by the tail from a 5-gallon bucket. "At least, I hope so." The only rock chuck that BURLEY • About 100 candidates, voters and a few people who were just curious braved a steady rain Thursday to listen as Cassia County candidates talked about why they should win the Republican ticket in the May 15 primary election.

The "Meet the Candidates Night" was held by the Cassia County Republican Central Committee at Burley High School's Little Theater.

Nine candidates in contested races for the state Senate seat in District 27, county commissioner seats in District 1 and 3 and the office of Cassia County sheriff gave three-minute speeches and answered questions from the audience.

The evening attracted voters of all ages, including some new to the process.

"I wanted to come and learn about the candidates because I get to vote this year," said Jordan Ruiz, 18.

Ruiz said he was most interested in listening to the candidates in the county commission and sheriff races.

Seventeen-year-old Brendon Zurogoza said he was just curious and wanted to check out the event.

"I haven't been to an event like this before," he said.

things when officers are out of the room. If it's information about the suspect, Stewart can pass it on. But mostly, she helps victims through the twists and turns of the criminal justice system.

"My duties haven't changed, but now they're more integrated," she said. "Everyone knows what the other one is doing."

Det. Sabrina Becker has been a detective with the sheriff's office for only six months. But she has responded to sex crimes for much of her eight years in law enforcement.

"Being a female, you end up taking more of these crimes," she said, adding that the majority of sexual assault victims are women who end up sharing more with a female officer.

Becker is among the original deputies chosen to be involved in SART. Her experience in working sex crimes made her a good fit for the job, she said.

"It takes a different kind of person to go to these scenes and get the details and not be so affected," she said.

In the past, before investigators like Becker arrived at the scene of a sexual assault, the first officer on the scene would ask the victim to explain what happened. Medics at the scene might also ask. Later at the hospital, nurses and doctors would ask the victim to explain the attack again. Once investigators became involved, the victim would again need to tell the story.

Sometimes, victims shut down. Now, the patrol officer —

FIRST ON THE SCENE

Officers are given these tips for responding to reported sexual assaults:

- Make sure the suspect is not a danger to police or the victim.
- Assess the victim.
- Call for medical treatment.
- Secure the scene and start a log of who's gone in and why.
- Get an investigator on scene.

who is generally first on scene — just asks the victim if the suspect is an immediate threat. Once the scene is safe, the officer assesses whether the victim needs medical treatment.

"Once the victim gets to the hospital, the SART nurse and the investigator are there while the victim tells the story once," Becker said.

More organization and cooperation upfront helps build better cases in the long run, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb.

"The more coordinated we are at the beginning, the better chance we have of putting a successful case together," he said. "It also gives victims support."

When medical workers, victims' services and investigators work together, everyone can get to the bottom of what happened, he said.

While SART is working, it has room to improve, Stewart said.

"We're all separate and we all get so busy," she said. Members haven't met as much as they'd like to recently.

Officers move back and forth from patrol to investi-could help keep them up-to-date.

It will take time to fully integrate each agency and hospital workers who have to worry about patient privacy issues, Loeb said.

For police, the main issue is getting as much information as quickly as they can, he said.

"The longer we wait, the longer it takes to solve," he said.

It's too early to tell if SART has improved conviction rates, but it surely helps victims, Stewart said.

"It absolutely helps victims and those who work the cases," she said.

Refreshed Kimberly Senior Center Reopens Its Doors

BY JAMI WHITED
For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • When Annie Bradley and other board members of the Ageless Senior Center in Kimberly first looked at their gutted building a few months ago, they couldn't imagine the vision that was to come.

"We were just amazed," Bradley said of the center's transformation. "We couldn't imagine what they were fixing to do. We never even had any baseboards and now we even have a new ceiling."

The makeover was made possible by a surprise donation of $250,000, made in the will of Nora Andersen, an occasional visitor to the center who died in September 2010.

Ageless officials learned the size of the donation last summer, along with nine other Magic Valley charities and organizations who received similar amounts. The center's renovation plans were announced last fall: new flooring, an upgraded kitchen, new offices, central air and asbestos removal.

The center closed in November for the work, reopening with Thursday's celebration of the remodel.

New furniture, beautiful cabinetry, fresh paint and a sparkling tile floor were the first things people noticed as a steady stream of visitors poured in to escape the rain.

Liz Johnson, a board member from Hansen, worked with Andersen several years ago. She said Andersen was a super person who would have enjoyed the remodel.

"She would have been thrilled to death with the improvements," Andersen said. "It was so good she left this to us. She was a very quiet person."

Friends Linda Patterson and Deanna Taylor, both from Twin Falls, come to the senior center frequently. Patterson's sister is a cook at the center and they said it's the service, food and company that keep them coming back.

"Everyone here is so friendly," Patterson said. "We really enjoy the company."

Taylor nodded in agreement. "It's really one big happy family."

Roger "Mad Dog" Maschek with the Gem State Fiddlers remarked on the crowd's excited, happy faces.

"This place looks almost like the White House," he half-joked.

The original plan was to reopen the center by January, but a few pitfalls and roadblocks extended the remodel's completion to April. Visitors anxiously awaited the reopening during the long winter months. Some traveled south or tried out other centers in the Magic Valley — but they remained faithful to the Kimberly center.

"I was so bored," said Bradley. "We all were. We were really thrilled when they reopened. It gives me something to do and to look forward to."

Whether it's pinochle, bingo, the new snooker table, recovery meetings, lunches and special dinners or other activities, the center is open daily for a variety of uses.

Mary and George "T" Nauman of Kimberly are self-described snow birds, but looked forward to the return of the center.

"It was definitely missed," Mary said. "(Site Director Patty Bloxham) did a fantastic job. There were so many good changes and everything was for the better."

The new snooker table caught Mary Nauman's eye. She enjoys other games such as bingo and pinochle, but has her own cue stick.

"I'll try it out, why not?" she laughs. "It's here for using. I hope it brings more people out. We really are like one big family."

Noah Oliver, of Twin Falls, and his late wife Veda knew many people at the center. He's now the last one left of their original group, but still visits after his morning coffee routine.

"I could have joined other centers in Twin Falls or Filer," he said. "But this place really is like family."

As the Gem State Fiddlers started playing "We're Comin' Round the Mountain," Bloxham looked upon the large crowd and beamed with pride.

"The interest shown on this really makes you proud. The response from the community and especially the seniors and visitors is incredible," she said. "It really makes your heart happy."

Three with Mini-Cassia Connections Sentenced in Drug Trafficking Case

TIMES-NEWS

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. • Three Mini-Cassia residents are among five people sentenced to prison on federal drug charges after a November 2010 traffic stop near Rock Springs, Wyo., led to a deeper investigation.

According to a Sweetwater County Sheriff's Office release, the deputy who made the stop discovered Christopher Scott Ayers, 33, formerly of Burley, was wanted in Minidoka County for a probation violation. A search of his vehicle turned up methamphetamine, marijuana, cocaine, digital scales and drug transaction records.

"This is a prime example of effective law enforcement, cooperation and interaction," Sweetwater County Sheriff Rich Haskell said in the release.

During an investigation, undercover officers purchased drugs from Ayers' co-conspirators, and arrested Felix Maldonado, 52, of Burley; Sheila Ann Russell, 31, of Burley; and Juan Manuel Glaria-Ramirez, 37, of Salt Lake City. Steven E. Painovich, 60, of Eden, Wyo., was arrested later.

Painovich was sentenced to 10 years in prison followed by five years of supervised probation on two charges related to conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine. He must also pay fines and fees.

Ayers was sentenced to 12 years and seven months in prison, followed by five years of supervised probation for drug conspiracy and money laundering charges.

Russell was sentenced to 14 years in prison on drug and money laundering charges, while Maldonado was sentenced to 12 years and seven months in prison, followed by five years of supervised probation, on similar charges.

Glaria-Ramirez pleaded guilty to charges related to conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine. His sentence is pending.

Authorities Surround Bunker of Wash. Fugitive Suspected of Killing Family

BY GENE JOHNSON

Associated Press

NORTH BEND, Wash. • Authorities on Friday surrounded an elaborate, underground bunker believed to be that of a gun-toting survivalist suspected of killing his wife and daughter nearly a week ago and then holing up in the woods of Washington state.

Keller

They pumped gas into the structure in the Cascade foothills east of Seattle and heard movement inside, but the dozens of officers were not entering the bunker because they believed its occupant was heavily armed, and that it might be booby-trapped.

Sheriff's officials said later Friday they weren't sure the gas penetrated deep enough to reach the person inside, who they believed was 41-year-old Peter Keller. The standoff continued into Friday evening.

Sgt. Cindi West said she believed officers had opened a hatch on the bunker, so they could partially see inside. Officers had chain saws, and were contemplating trying to dismantle part of the structure, West said. No other information about what was happening at the scene was immediately available Friday evening.

Keller has not been seen since a fire at his North Bend-area home Sunday led responders to discover the bodies of his wife and daughter. The two had been shot to death.

"It's a very extreme tactical situation," King County Sheriff Steve Strachan said. "Time is on our side. We're not going to do anything rash."

West said evidence found in Keller's home helped authorities locate the bunker, dug 20 feet into the side of a ridge in an area of dense vegetation, at noon Friday. Officers were able to pinpoint the location after enhancing a blurry photograph found on a hard drive in an open safe in Keller's house, she said. The photo included a view from the bunker in which buildings in nearby North Bend were visible, along with a set of power lines.

Detectives triangulated the rough area of the bunker and were confident they had the right location after receiving tips from people who had seen Keller's faded red pickup truck parked at the trailhead, West said.

Two experienced trackers were sent to the area and found tracks that appeared to have been made by someone carrying a heavy backpack.

SWAT teams went into the woods at 5 a.m. and could smell wood smoke from the wood stove in the bunker before they could see it, West said.

The bunker was found at about the 1,350-foot level, several hundred yards due east of a trailhead at Rattlesnake Ridge. It had several entryways and ladders.

"This isn't a hole in the ground. It's an elaborate structure," Strachan said.

Court documents described Keller as a loner who has a survivalist mentality and has been stockpiling supplies in the woods.

An arrest warrant issued Wednesday accuses him of two counts of first-degree murder and one count of first-degree arson.

The fire at Keller's home was stopped before the house burned down, and authorities said they found seven gasoline cans placed in different areas of the home.

The King County medical examiner has determined Kaylene Keller, 18, and her mother, Lynnetee Keller, 41, both died from gunshot to the head. Their bodies were found in their bedrooms.

Kaylene's boyfriend told detectives that Peter Keller had shown him his gun collection and several large-caliber rifles and handguns, court documents said. The boyfriend, who was not identified, said Kaylene had told him her father took long hikes on the weekends and was stockpiling supplies at a fort in the woods.

Peter Keller withdrew $6,200 from a bank last week and told one of his co-workers at a computer refurbishing store in Preston that he might not return, according to court documents.

Officers with the SWAT team had spent Friday morning searching a popular hiking area known as Rattlesnake Ridge just outside North Bend. Deputies closed trails and roads leading into the area of dense trees and networks of hiking and biking trails. Sheriff's vehicles dotted housing developments that abutted the ridge.

Sally Betts of Vashon Island had been hoping to hike Rattlesnake Ridge with her friends from the Renton Women's Hiking Club, but drove off for another trail after learning of the search.

"We thought that Rattlesnake is so popular, he wouldn't be there. He's an outdoorsman — he'll be off on the wilderness somewhere," Betts said.

Idaho Power Bills May Rise 7 Percent

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Residential customers could see a 7.1 percent increase in their monthly power bills this summer if state regulators go along with the full collection of rate-adjustment requests sought by Idaho Power this year.

The increase would raise the average monthly power bill for the average residential user by about $6, to $88.91 from $82.99. The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has not yet approved the increase.

Idaho Power's proposed increase is the net effect of eight requests before the PUC, six seeking increases and two seeking decreases.

Among the most significant requests are:

- The Langley Gulch plan: 7.1 percent increase. Power customers are being asked to cover the nearly $400 million investment of Idaho Power's new gas-fired plant west of Caldwell.

- The annual Power Cost Adjustment: 5.1 percent increase. The company seeks a rate increase or decrease each year based on the cost of purchasing power. Last year the power cost adjustment dropped 6.5 percent. The company is seeking a $43 million increase this year. The company says this year's increase is driven by rules that require Idaho Power to buy energy from renewable sources such as Idaho's growing wind industry.

Searchers Again Seek Confused Veteran

BY VINCE DEVLIN

Missoulian

POLSON, Mont. (AP) • Monday morning, Orin Storrud told his sister he might "walk over to Rhode Island for the afternoon."

Mona Storrud is always worried her brother, a U.S. Army veteran who suffers from schizophrenia, will wander off. The last time he did it, just before Christmas, he was missing for 48 hours in 10-degree weather.

The time before that was even worse.

He disappeared for 14 long years.

It took some detective work by three strangers at St. Joseph Medical Center in Polson last October to reunite brother and sister after the 14-year absence.

Now Mona is asking for western Montana's help again.

When she got home from volunteering at her granddaughters' school in Deer Park, Wash., for two hours Monday, Orin was gone.

No one has seen or heard from him since.

As the hours turn into days and there has been no sign of him at Spokane-area homeless shelters, Mona Storrud thinks it's very possible Orin may be making his way to, or may already be back in, Montana.

They both grew up in Butte, and she believes Orin spent much of the last three years of his long absence in the Libby area before mysteriously turning up at the Polson hospital on Oct. 15, confused, cold, hungry and penniless.

"He seems to gravitate that way," Mona says of western Montana.

All he wanted, Orin said when he wandered into St. Joseph Medical Center in October, was help in locating his sister.

What little information he was able to provide emergency room technician Gloria Quiver turned out to be 20 years old.

He said his sister's name was "Mona Gregory" and that she lived near a ski resort somewhere in the Pacific Northwest.

Both were true two decades ago, when Mona was married and lived in Chewelah, Wash.

But in the fall of 2011, both clues were dead-ends.

Polson police could find no missing-person reports on an Orin Storrud, and couldn't even be sure that was his name, since he carried no identification.

It was cold that night, and raining. Without an ID he couldn't stay at a homeless shelter, and there was nothing physically wrong with him, so they couldn't check him into the hospital.

Quiver got Orin some food, and a pillow and blanket so he could sleep in the ER waiting room.

When she got to work the next day, he was still there.

Quiver called in nursing supervisor Annie Gray, who called in hospital chaplain John Payne. Together, they managed to track down Mona Storrud in Deer Park.

Mona was stunned and delighted when she got the call. For 14 years, she hadn't known if her brother was dead or alive.

Orin spent one more night in the waiting room. The next day Payne got him cleaned up, gave him a fresh set of clothes, and the hospital workers chipped in to buy him a bus ticket to Spokane.

"The thing is, he's been doing so good," Mona says.

She has him convinced he's helping her watch after her three granddaughters, ages 12, 11 and 10, even though it's the girls who help watch after their great-uncle.

"And he thinks he's helping me train our new puppies, even though I think the puppies are training him," Mona says.

Everyone loves having him around, according to Mona, who lives with her daughter, Carrie Dean.

Councilman Nabs Suspected Burglar

SANDPOINT • Northern Idaho resident Justin Schuck has sat on the Sandpoint City Council for a little more than two years. But this week, he took his civil service to a new level by sitting on a suspected burglar.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports that Schuck's wife discovered a man rifling through her car on Tuesday and alerted her husband, who grabbed a shotgun to confront the man. According to a police report, the 31-year-old councilman told the man to get on the ground or risk being shot. After a brief struggle, Schuck subdued the suspected burglar by sitting on him.

Prosecutors have charged 18-year-old Stanley Evan Richardson Jr. with two counts of burglary in connection with the incident. He has not yet entered a plea.

Nampa Police Search for 2-year-old Girl

NAMPA • Police in Nampa are asking for help in finding a 2-year-old girl who may be with her father.

Officers say Joel Ortiz-Martinez did not obey a court order to return Italy Phebe Ortiz to her mother, America Soplis, on April 22. The girl was last seen with her father.

He was last seen driving a silver 2000 Mitsubishi Eclipse with the Idaho license plate 2CHU675.

Italy Ortiz is 3 feet tall, weighs 30 pounds and has brown eyes and black hair.

House Approves Simpson Bill on Water Diversions

BOISE • The U.S. House has approved a bill sponsored by Rep. Mike Simpson that would allow landowners to make repairs to historic water diversions located in two Idaho wilderness areas.

The House unanimously approved the measure this week, sending it on to the Senate for consideration.

The bill gives the U.S. Forest Service the power to issue permits to private property owners seeking to make fixes to irrigation or small hydropower operations located inside the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness Area and the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness.

Simpson says the bill applies only on 25 projects that existed before those lands were declared wilderness by Congress.

Simpson says the bill is critical to ensure that these water systems can be maintained and preserved for the beneficial use of the landowners.

U of I Launches $225K Capital Campaign

MOSCOW • Officials at the University of Idaho are going public with a $225 million capital campaign aimed at bringing in money for scholarships, new faculty and upgrades to laboratory and classroom spaces.

The fundraising campaign is the largest in the school's history and has so far been in a quiet phase, bringing in more than $161 million since 2007. The university will kick off the public phase of the campaign Friday in Moscow.

The campaign, Inspiring Futures: Invest in the University of Idaho, aims to bring in $62 million for facility improvements, $63 million to attract new faculty, $54 million for scholarship programs and $46 million to foster partnerships with industries and business.

Spokane River Reaches Flood Stage

SPOKANE, Wash. • The Spokane River reached flood stage early Friday morning, with minor flooding at low-lying areas near the river.

The National Weather Service predicted the river will rise another six inches above its flood stage of 27 feet this weekend before it begins to fall Monday.

The agency says that if the river reaches 28 feet, sections of the Peaceful Valley neighborhood might flood. Flooding is also possible along Upriver Drive and in the Riverpoint industrial area.

Heavy rains across the region, along with melting mountain snows, have caused rivers to swell.

Yellowstone Panel Gets Arbor Day Award

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • The Greater Yellowstone Whitebark Pine Committee has been recognized by the Arbor Day Foundation for its efforts to protect and restore whitebark pine trees.

The Montana, Wyoming and Idaho-based Greater Yellowstone Whitebark Pine Committee is one of 16 individuals and organizations to be recognized by the foundation.

The Greater Yellowstone Whitebark Pine Committee will receive a Forest Lands Leadership Award for leadership in advancing sustainable forestry efforts on public forest land.

Whitebark pine trees are critical to the ecosystem of the Greater Yellowstone Area, but the species faces several threats, including white pine blister rust and mountain pine beetle outbreaks.

Western Governors Discuss Public Lands, Energy

BY JOSH LOFTIN
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Seeking a unified front on common concerns, the governors of four Western states held discussions Friday on issues ranging from federal land control to immigration. “The Western states need to bind together and unite their voices,” said Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, who hosted the talks at the governor’s mansion near downtown Salt Lake City.

“We have a uniqueness that other people don’t understand.”

The participating governors, all Republicans, included Idaho’s Butch Otter, Wyoming’s Matt Mead and Nevada’s Brian Sandoval, who joined the conference by phone.

The all-day gathering, which Herbert dubbed the Rocky Mountain Roundtable, focused heavily on the management of public lands by the federal government.

All of the states represented have large swaths under federal control, whether it’s national forest, national parks or acreage owned by Bureau of Land Management.

The participating governors say that federal policies can impede energy development, which can be important catalysts for job creation and increased tax revenue. But they worry their concerns are downplayed or ignored in Washington.

Regional cooperation is important because it ensures that the needs of states with smaller populations are still respected, Otter said.

“We find more balance when we ask for more input,” he said. “When we have rules and regulations promulgated by a federal agency without that input, there is a problem.”

Herbert has said that he hopes future meetings would include Democratic governors who were invited but couldn’t attend.

Mead echoed that sentiment, saying that many of the issues transcended political affiliation. He said this is especially true for energy-producing states where industry issues often collide with environmental concerns, such as clean air and water or endangered species.

One of the areas where political affiliations will play a role, however, is a burgeoning legal battle between states and the federal government over control of federal lands.

A Utah law signed by Herbert this year requires the federal government to relinquish its ownership of land in the state by 2014, despite warnings from legislative attorneys that the law was probably unconstitutional.

A similar bill passed the Arizona Legislature and next goes to Republican Gov. Jan Brewer for a signature or veto.

High Court Rules Idaho Girl Should Live with Dad

Court questions Department of Health and Welfare’s motives, noting that an agency employee wanted to adopt the toddler.

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • The Idaho Supreme Court has ordered a 3-year-old girl in state custody be delivered to her father, a Mexican citizen who has never met her and is legally barred from entering the United States.

In a ruling Thursday, justices said a lower court erred when it severed the man’s parental rights in December. Idaho’s Department of Health and Welfare had requested the move, claiming the man abandoned his daughter and it was in her best interests to remain in the U.S.

The high court rejected those arguments and questioned the department’s motives, noting that an employee at the agency wanted to adopt the toddler.

“It makes one wonder whether the real reason for seeking termination of (the) father’s parental rights is the fact that a department employee wanted to adopt (the) daughter,” said Justice Daniel Eismann, who authored the court’s unanimous opinion.

The department is still reviewing the decision, said spokesman Tom Shanahan.

“The ruling gives us an opportunity to review our policies and practices to making sure that we’re meeting our obligation to protect parents’ rights from the very start of the case,” Shanahan said.

The girl’s father, who is not identified in court documents because it is a child custody case, is elated with the ruling, said his Nampa attorney, Jayme Beaber. The man has only seen photographs of his daughter and has spoken to her a handful of times by phone, Beaber said.

“He has never met her, he has never seen her,” Beaber told The Associated Press.

The man married an Idaho woman in 2007 after illegally entering the country years earlier, court records show. He then returned to Mexico under court order in 2008 with his new wife, who soon became pregnant and went back to Idaho.

The woman gave birth to a baby girl named Maria in November 2008. The father tried to come back to the U.S. to reunite with his family in March 2009 but was caught in Arizona and sent back to Mexico, according to court documents.

That same month, his daughter was removed from the mother’s Idaho home amid allegations of abuse and neglect. The baby, Maria, was placed in protective custody after state officials found the mother wasn’t providing adequate care.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare developed a case plan for the woman so she could regain custody of her daughter. Back in Mexico, the father was seeking information and contacted the Department of Health and Welfare. He told the caseworker that if his wife could not care for the child, he wanted her to live with him in Mexico, court records show.

The man also had the Mexican health and welfare officials determine whether he was fit to raise a child. Their report found the man was “financially, emotionally, physically and mentally able to provide” for his daughter, the high court said.

By early 2010, the mother hadn’t made sufficient progress, and the Department of Health and Welfare moved to terminate her rights. The agency also sought to terminate the father’s parental rights, saying he abandoned the child, who had been placed with a foster family.

The department’s report noted the foster mother was an employee with the agency and willing to provide baby a permanent home. The woman doesn’t work in the agency’s child protection or child welfare division, Shanahan said.

The father fought the move, but a magistrate court sided with the state, finding the man didn’t support the child financially, or send any letters or gifts.

“This finding by the magistrate is clearly erroneous. In fact, it is absurd,” said Eismann, who noted that the man’s daughter was 7 months old when she was placed in state custody. “Having someone read letters to her from (her) father would not in any way create a parental relationship of any kind.”

Justices also lambasted the lower court’s finding that it was in the child’s best interests to remain in state custody because she had no relationship with her father or ties to Mexico. The man couldn’t legally enter the United States to form a relationship with his daughter, Eismann wrote.

“In fact, neither the department nor the foster parents even told her who her father was,” he said, noting that at the time, the girl called her foster father “daddy.”

Diary Found in Lewiston Key to Unlocking Family’s History

Care and some lucky connections put diary in hands of a great-grandson of the weather-obsessed man who filled its pages almost 160 years ago.

BY CODY BLOOMSBURG
Lewiston Tribune

LEWISTON (AP) • It was the mid-1970s and Jack Moyer had just finished an appliance repair when he spotted a red leather-bound diary in the dirt behind an Orchards home. The year 1853 was written on the book flap.

He asked the woman at the residence if it was hers. She said no, so he took it home and put an advertisement in the Tribune asking if anyone had lost the book.

“I was always afraid someone would say, ‘Yes, it’s mine,’ and it not be the right guy,” Moyer said. That was a worry he stored with the book, wrapped in plastic in a drawer, for more than 30 years.

This February, Moyer’s care and some lucky connections put the diary in the hands of a great-grandson of the weather-obsessed man who filled its pages almost 160 years ago.

The pocket-sized book gave few clues about its owner — a man named Alvah Taylor Lougee, born in New Hampshire on March 9, 1823 — or its authenticity when Moyer first found it. There was a card in it with a woman’s name and Cavendish, Idaho, written on it, but nothing told the story of how the book came west.

Three dates are printed on each page; in the space between, Lougee filled in a few lines of record from each day.

He started most with, “This day ...” and followed with what the weather did.

On Friday, March 4, 1853, he was living in Maine and wrote the following:

“This day the weather has been (sic) moderate. Ben (sic) down to Webster Lake. Gen. Franklin Pierce takes the presidential chair. Success and long life to him!”

The next day it snowed and he stayed in the house until late afternoon.

His letters were inked tightly together, but remained orderly and beautiful, with small, subtle flourishes.

A Time Gone By

Lougee recorded other things that show a time gone by, like the wages he earned for 19 months of farm work: $384.75.

He copied a recipe for tonic that calls for a half pint of good whiskey as a key ingredient. The base for a golden ointment was recorded as 1 pound of lard.

But much of who Lougee was and how his diary came to be in the Lewiston Orchards remained a mystery until Moyer recently showed it to Evelyn Wells of Pasco.

Moyer met Wells through his sister-in-law and showed her the diary after finding out she grew up in Orofino. Before that, the book had rarely left the drawer and had been all but forgotten.

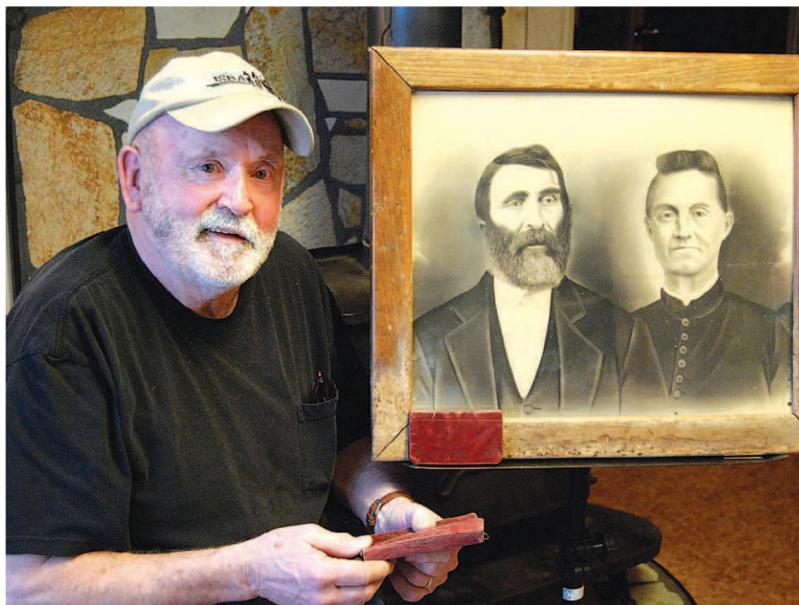

Wells recognized some names, including Claude Wells, but didn’t have a sure link to one family, so she put Moyer in touch with Bill and Harriet Reece. Bill was raised in Cavendish and Harriet was a classmate in Orofino.

When Harriet Reece saw the names in the book, she thought of their friend, Bernie Lougee, a 70-year-old retired logger who lives in the Cavendish area.

They took the diary to him on a Sunday in February and its journey was over — he knew every name, especially his great-grandfather’s, Alvah Taylor Lougee.

Moyer met Bernie at his Western music band’s practice the following evening.

“I felt kind of choked up because I had finally found someone it belonged to,”

LEWISTON TRIBUNE • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bernie Lougee holds his great-grandfather’s diary from 1853 next to a portrait of his great-grandparents on March 14 in Lewiston.

Moyer said. “It made me kind of proud that I did it, but I have to credit Evelyn Wells, and Bill and Harriet Reece.”

For Bernie, it was the key he was looking for but didn’t know existed.

“It was a miracle,” he said.

The little red diary was the hard link to the history he and other relatives had been patching together to rebuild the family story.

A cousin in Ohio, Jinny Frisone, had been digging through obituaries and census records to piece together most of what Bernie knows about Alvah Taylor Lougee’s life before his widow and children, including Bernie’s grandfather, moved out West following work on the railroad.

Alvah Taylor Lougee married Rachel Maria Rogers in 1854 while living in Maine, then the couple moved to Stillwater, Minn. He worked in lumber mills for five years before they moved to Kanabec County, Minn., where he started farming and later held the office of county treasurer for seven years. After that, he and the family moved to Livonia, Minn., where he was town clerk for five years. They had six children and Lougee died on his birthday in 1885.

ISP Arrest Four for Trafficking Pot

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Idaho State Police arrested two Boise men and a man and woman from Coeur d’Alene on drug trafficking charges following two different traffic stops on Interstate 84 over the past week where officers seized a total of more than 10 pounds of marijuana.

Timothy D. Byrd and Shandel A. Cabaniss are charged with marijuana trafficking charges in Payette County after Idaho State Police say officers found 5.8 pounds of pot during a traffic stop on Interstate 84 early Wednesday morning.

A Payette County Sheriff’s deputy found the pot after an ISP trooper pulled Byrd over just after 1 a.m. Wednesday on westbound I-84 about 17 miles from the Oregon border for a traffic violation, according to reports.

A Payette County K-9 dog detected the presence of drugs in the car during the traffic stop. That’s when officers searched the car and found 5.8 pounds of marijuana inside. The 44-year-old Byrd and passenger 30-year-old Cabaniss, who are both from Coeur d’Alene, were then arrested and booked into the Payette County Jail. Police estimated the street value of the marijuana to be about $14,500. A preliminary hearing on their case is set for May 7.

Joshua W. Smith and Anthony T. Buhler of Boise are charged in Elmore County with felony drug trafficking and possession of a controlled substance after ISP officers say they found 6.5 pounds of marijuana, prescription medication, and a handgun in their car following a traffic stop on I-84 last week.

ISP troopers pulled over the 30-year-old Smith for an undisclosed traffic violation on westbound I-84, near milepost 92, just after 10 a.m. April 20.

ISP reports do not indicate if a K-9 dog was used but officers did search the car and find 6.5 pounds of marijuana inside, along with a Glock handgun and an undisclosed amount of prescription medication, according to reports. ISP officials estimated the street value of the marijuana to be about $16,250.

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to the Ageless Senior Center in Kimberly for putting the money it was bequeathed to good use. Its renovation is complete and beautiful, made possible by a surprise donation of $250,000 in the will of Nora Andersen, an occasional visitor to the center who died in September 2010.

The center has been closed since November and reopened on Thursday.

Visitors anxiously awaited the reopening and by the reactions on Thursday, it was worth the wait.

As one man said, "It looks like the White House."

CHEERS to the organizers of Art and Soul in the Magic Valley. It takes countless volunteer hours to stage the enormous event.

Art is hanging in businesses across Twin Falls and it looks great. On Friday, the opening day of Art and Soul, downtown was lively — the sidewalks were full of people walking up and down Main Avenue, looking in windows and moving from one yellow flag to the next.

The event is a creative way to get residents to explore corners of the business community and the art world they might not have had reason to visit before.

The event features 178 artists, compared with last year's 94, and the artists' work is scattered throughout Twin Falls in 45 businesses.

To learn more, visit Magicvalley.com.

JEERS to both sides' "supporters" in the Twin Falls County sheriff's race. This is the only race in the Magic Valley that has really gotten ugly. A constantly growing stream of comments on Magicvalley.com, on the Times-News Facebook page and in letters to the editor have Tom Carter supporters firing shots at Jack Johnson and Johnson supporters firing back.

The insults are both personal and professional. In large part, their substance appears to have less to do with how both men would perform as sheriff, and more with the hard feelings still left after Carter unseated former Sheriff Wayne Tousley four years ago.

For the record, when Tom Carter and Jack Johnson visited the Times-News to discuss their race with reporters and the editorial board, both men were respectful of each other in all their comments. Their answers stuck to the issues affecting the voters of Twin Falls County. If only their supporters would follow suit.

LETTER OF THANKS

Fred Meyer Funds Improved Library

On behalf of the Twin Falls Public Library Board of Trustees and staff, we would like to thank Fred Meyer for its donations to the library. Thanks also to the Twin Falls Public Library Foundation and Hollie House of Fred Meyer for coordinating efforts in providing these services.

The Fred Meyer funds were used to purchase new outside book drops. We received positive feedback from patrons since the new returns are more convenient, hold more materials and have alleviated traffic concerns.

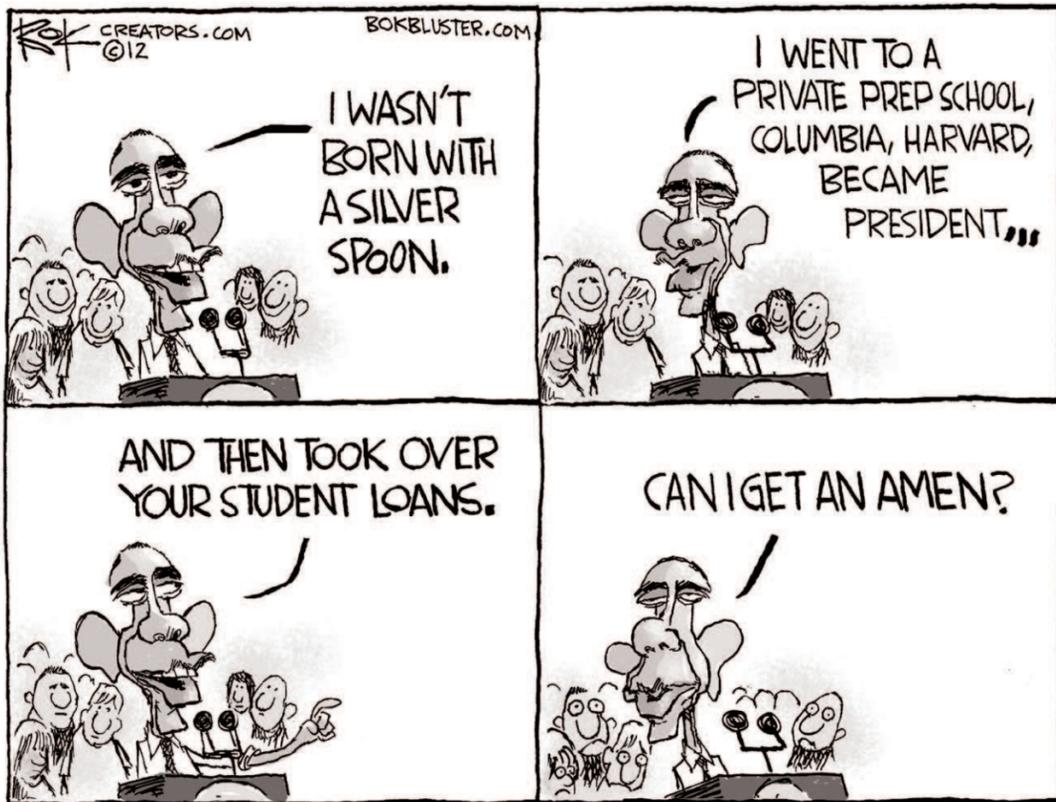

Fred Meyer funds also were used to purchase Playaways (audiobooks on MP3 players) for children, adults and teens. These have proven to be popular in the past and patrons have asked for more. We were fortunate that we were able to add about 50 more titles to this collection.

We're excited that the Fred Meyer funds made it possible to bring in a young adult author, Brandon Mull, to speak in the community on April 24. He spoke at both middle schools in Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge High School. He gave the main presentation and book signing at the library. It was a fun event for families in the community.

Thank you for making us an exceptional library!

The Conservative Showdown Yields a Winner

Michael Gerson

Washington Post

The last few years have been the most decisive and divisive ideological period since the early 1980s, perhaps since the late 1960s. Barack Obama has pursued Keynesian economics on a breathtaking scale, racking up three deficits in excess of a trillion dollars and presiding over a national credit downgrade. In a march of partisan votes, he passed a health reform plan that relies on unprecedented federal powers to reorganize one-sixth of the economy.

The ultimate success or failure of grand executive ambition is measured by its effect on the other ideological side. Opposition to the Reagan revolution culminated in Walter Mondale — earnest and hapless. Resistance to the Great Society suffered a landslide defeat along with Barry Goldwater.

Obama's effect on conservatives has been mixed. He united them in the 2010 congressional elections, which put an end to the inventive period of the Obama revolution. But Obama's ambition has also revealed a tension within the opposition.

On one side there are Rejectionist Conservatives, who come in a variety of forms. There are libertarians who view federal taxation, except to fund a few night watchman roles, as theft. There are tea party activists who believe that any federal power must be specifically enumerated in the text of the Constitution — and then interpret the Constitution as if it were the Articles of Confederation. And then there is Ron Paul, who seeks to overturn the Lincoln and Hamilton revolutions.

But Obama's overreach has also produced another conservative reaction — a Reform Conservatism. The key figure here is Paul Ryan, the main author of two House Republican budgets. The movement's intellectual headquarters is National Affairs, a journal of small but potent distribution. Its brain trust includes thinkers such as Yuval Levin, James Capretta and Peter Wehner.

Reform Conservatism is less ideologically ambitious than Rejectionist Conservatism. It would replace Obamacare, for example, rather than simply abolish it. Similarly, it focuses on education reform — school accountability, parental empowerment and teacher quality — rather than on the demolition of the Department of Education. Reform Conservatism tends to be politically pragmatic. In exchange for serious Medicare reform, for example, it would certainly accept a higher portion of GDP taken in taxes to ease cuts in discretionary spending — if those taxes are designed in a way that doesn't undermine economic growth.

In this political season, Rejectionist Conservatism and Reform Conservatism have been at odds and, on occasion, at war. We've seen this conflict in tea party primary insurgencies against establishment Republicans. All of the GOP presidential candidates were forced to make rhetorical concessions to the rejectionist wing.

But the conflict, in the end, was not a close one. Speaker John Boehner has adopted Ryan's reform approach as the de facto ideology of the House Republican majority. Mitt Romney has embraced the outlines of the Ryan budget and Medicare reform with more enthusiasm than I suspected he would. The internal struggle within conservatism has been difficult, but the outcome has been decisive. Reform Conservatism is intellectually and politically ascendant. It would be the governing agenda of the next Republican administration.

This agenda, in Ryan's expression, has weaknesses — which I will address more fully in a follow-up column. It is best on the fiscal crisis — which threatens all other purposes of government. It is least creative on the social problem — which is prioritized last and suffers from being overwhelmed by the fiscal crisis.

But the debate in American public life has moved on. It is now between Reform Conservatism and Obama's surprisingly unreconstructed liberalism — the real battle to come.

Boise Basques Recall Anniversary of Bombing

BY ANNA WEBB

The Idaho Statesman

BOISE (AP) • Basques marked a somber occasion this week, the 75th anniversary of the bombing of Gernika, a city in the Basque province of Bizkaia. Nearly all of Boise's Basque families hail from Bizkaia. Some of them survived the attacks before migrating to Idaho, and a few are in the Basque Country this week as the city of Gernika memorializes the events of April 26, 1937, in the midst of the Spanish Civil War.

Spanish dictator Francisco Franco gave the go-ahead to German and Italian leaders to try out new methods of aerial warfare in the Basque Country — home to Franco's political opponents.

The attack on Basque civilians destroyed nearly 80 percent of the homes in the city and badly damaged the rest, said Patty Miller, director of the Basque Museum and Cultural Center in Boise.

Boisean Dolores Totorica said the bombings ultimately helped create a political climate that drove many Basques out of Spain, including her own family.

Her sister, Gloria Totoricaguena, and her mother,

Mari Carmen Egurrola Totorica, who lived through the bombings as a small child, are in Gernika this week.

Totorica has kept in touch with them through email. Totoricaguena and Egurrola Totorica have met Basque officials. They've met members of Basque families that fled to Mexico, South America and other parts of Europe. They have had reunions with family members who still live in the area and have experienced a series of embraces, tears and celebrations of their survival, said Totorica.

"Mama will be there as a survivor, and she and I will represent Boise and Boise's recognition of the desire for peace around the world," Totoricaguena emailed from Gernika.

A reenactment of the attack, with church bells, air raid sirens and actors playing the part of city dwellers, took place Thursday, along with a procession to the cemetery.

The attack on Gernika began late in the afternoon and lasted more than three hours. It started with heavy bombs and ended with machine gun fire from the air.

The fatality count is unclear, but materials published for the 70th anniversary by the Center for Basque Studies at the University of Nevada, Reno, put the death toll at 800.

Totorica's parents have deep roots in Boise. They raised their children here.

"We've done well in Idaho. We have no complaints," said Totorica. "But the bombings changed the whole trajectory for families like ours that would have stayed in their home country, speaking their own language. I would be living a very different life right now if it weren't for Gernika," said Totorica.

Egurrola Totorica was just 5 years old, a resident of Gernika, when the bombs fell. She was old enough to remember the sirens, running for shelter with her mother and pressing herself against the trunks of trees to avoid machine-gun fire.

The family didn't know for days whether Egurrola Totorica's father had survived. He did, along with her siblings.

The attacks affected even people outside Gernika. Relatives of Miller, the Boise Basque Museum director, lived nearby. They took shelter in caves.

For many, including painter Pablo Picasso who immortalized the attack on Gernika in a mural that hangs in a Madrid museum, the attack became an example of the brutality of modern warfare. The International Coalition of Sites of Conscience, a network that advocates for social justice, calls the 1937 attacks "an early act of terrorism."

"They chose what was unheard of: to bomb civilians," said Totorica.

The bombings took place on a Monday, a market day in Gernika. The streets were filled with people, including hundreds who had come to the market from surrounding communities.

"Everyone in Bizkaia knew it was market day. I'm sure Franco knew, too," said Totorica.

Miller said Gernika has grown from its tragic past. The city is now home to a peace museum. It became part of the World Association of Martyr Cities. It has two sister cities — Boise and the German city of Pforzheim.

In a 2005 speech during the Basque celebration of Jaialdi, Boise Mayor Dave Bieter noted that representatives from the German government had traveled to Gernika to apologize for the country's role in the attack.

Officials and an orchestra from Germany are in Gernika this week, helping to memorialize the anniversary.

MAN WHO MAY BE LAST GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE WORKER DIES

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • Jack Balestreri was 17 when he got a job helping build the Golden Gate Bridge. He had hoped to make it to the span's 75th anniversary next month.

But Balestreri — believed to be the last surviving bridge worker — died of natural causes at his San Francisco home on April 21, his daughter, Gayle Balestreri, told The Associated Press on Friday. He was 95.

Starting in 1933, Balestreri

did concrete work on the south tower of the bridge and the San Francisco anchorage for three years, the San Francisco Chronicle reported.

Gayle Balestreri said her father would take the family to Fort Point on the San Francisco side of the bridge and tell them about the span and the work he had done.

"He was always very proud of that," she said.

Balestreri was among a group of bridge workers honored at the span's 50th anniversary in 1987.

Golden Gate Bridge District officials believe Balestreri was the last of the bridge workers to die, spokeswoman Mary Currie told the newspaper.

Edward Ashoff, another bridge worker, died on April 14 at his home after a long illness, the Chronicle reported. Ashoff of Mill Valley, who carried rivets and bolts during construction of the south tower, was 97.

Ashoff continued to work for the bridge district after the span was constructed, serving as a toll collector and retiring as toll captain in 1976.

Balestreri's life took a different turn. He played professional baseball and worked at a steel shipyard. He married Marina Saponati, who also worked at the shipyard, in 1943, his daughter said, and went on to work as draftsman for a company in San Francisco for nearly 40 years.

"He was a true San Franciscan," Gayle Balestreri said. "He loved the city and its history!"

Ski Goggle Pioneer Bob Smith Dies at 78

KETCHUM (AP) • Robert Earl "Bob" Smith, an orthodontist whose passion for skiing deep powder snow helped turn him into a goggle and sunglasses pioneer, has died of complications related to heart surgery.

Smith's family confirmed his April 18 death in California. He was 78.

Born in San Carlos, Calif., Smith went on to graduate from Stanford University and the San Francisco College of Dentistry.

Smith served as a dentist in the U.S. Army in Germany in the late 1950s. While there, he traveled to Kitzbuehel ski area every weekend, stoking his passion for the sport.

After enduring frustrating goggle-fogging experiences while skiing in Utah, Smith in the 1960s began developing prototypes for an advanced pair of goggles to solve the problem. Smith sat at the kitchen table with his wife Jean, using dental tools and foam to create a double-lensed, vented ski goggle whose inner lens was protected from the cold.

He patented his invention, which is now considered the industry standard.

Smith founded Smith Sport Optics in 1965 and established its headquarters in Ketchum, Idaho, in the early 1970s. Before he struck a deal to manufacture Smith goggles, however, he often would trade his goggles for lift tickets.

He sold the company in 1991.

Smith Optics Inc. sells its products in 50 countries and reports having a 45 percent share of the ski and snowboard goggle market in North America, making it the top manufacturer.

Judge Tightens Terms of Tamarack Suitor's Freedom

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

Hutcheson

BOISE (AP) • A federal judge Friday tightened restrictions on an indicted former Tamarack Resort suitor, to prevent him or anybody else from trying to unload disputed assets central to the government's criminal case against him.

U.S. Magistrate Judge Candy Dale stopped short of ordering Matthew Hutcheson back to jail but set new conditions to safeguard a golf-course loan that prosecutors allege the independent fiduciary from Eagle, Idaho, bought with money bilked from a retirement fund.

Prosecutors called for Friday's hearing after Hutcheson's father-in-law, Brad Mason, met investors April 19 at Tamarack to market the golf-course loan. Assistant U.S. Attorney Ray Patricco alleged that Mason's activities violated release terms that forbid Hutcheson from raising investor cash.

Under the new restrictions, Dale ordered Hutcheson and anybody associated with him not to solicit investors or sell the loan.

"I considered strongly ordering detention until I had this assurance that the status quo is being maintained," Dale told Hutcheson in U.S. District Court.

Hutcheson, who made a failed $40 million offer for Tamarack in 2010, was hit earlier this month with a 31-count grand jury indictment accusing him of diverting $5 million from retirement funds he oversaw to remodel his home and buy the $3.2 million golf course loan that was part of his plan to take control of Tamarack.

After Friday's hearing, he avoided a reporter outside the Boise courthouse before climbing into an SUV driven by Mason.

Dale rejected a suggestion by Hutcheson's lawyer, Dennis Charney, that his client be allowed to continue to try to find somebody to buy the loan. It would be better for the retirement accounts to see money for the loan, rather than have attempts to sell it blocked by the courts, Charney said.

Dale disagreed, saying such a deal remains speculative.

Not only is the note tied up in this federal criminal case, but a Virginia lender has filed a separate claim to it after Hutcheson pledged it as collateral on a $425,000 loan in mid-2011.

Mason was assigned as Hutcheson's third-party custodian April 12, meaning he's required to report activities by his son-in-law that could run afoul of the courts.

If, just a week later, Mason was meeting on behalf of Hutcheson's company with people interested in the golf course loan, it calls into question his suitability to supervise his son-in-law, Patricco told Dale, suggesting a new person should be found to supervise him.

Dale allowed Mason to remain Hutcheson's custodian but renewed her warnings against violating his son-in-law's release conditions.

"Do you understand you could be held in contempt of court?" she asked.

Mason responded in short, clipped answers that he was aware of the consequences.

"Yes," he said, several times, in response to Dale's admonishments.

Most of Friday's hearing was devoted to Mason's explanation for his Tamarack tour, when resort officials became concerned enough that he was violating the court's restrictions that they informed federal prosecutors.

Mason told Dale his involvement was innocent: The two investors had long planned to visit Tamarack and insisted on coming, despite his attempts to warn them they'd be better off waiting until the courts had resolved the matter.

Trucks Rumbling into MVS

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • For many years the Intermountain Pro Trucks have delivered some of the best touring class racing Magic Valley Speedway had to offer. The tradition continues tonight, but now under a new name.

Recently the series joined forces with the American Speed Association, a sanctioning body formed in 1968 and headquartered in Daytona Beach, Fla.

ASA Pro Trucks Series director Randy Kerr is enthusiastic about what the association has to offer.

“Our agreement with ASA Racing will help take our series to a new level,” Kerr explained. “This is a great way for us to move forward. Our long-term arrangement will help us accomplish our goal of being recognized as the top oval truck series competing in Idaho and Utah.”

For Saturday’s race, driver Scott Luttmner says he hopes to cash in on the same luck he had opening night last season.

“We haven’t had much time to work on the truck this year,” he said. “But that’s the same thing that happened to us last year and we won the race!”

ANOTHER BRONCO OFF THE BOARD

Dallas takes defensive end Tyrone Crawford in third round and is third BSU player to be drafted.

IRVING, Texas • After a long wait to make their second draft pick, the Dallas Cowboys selected another defensive player.

The Cowboys got Boise State defensive end Tyrone Crawford with the 81st overall pick in the third round. It was their only selection on the second night of the NFL draft.

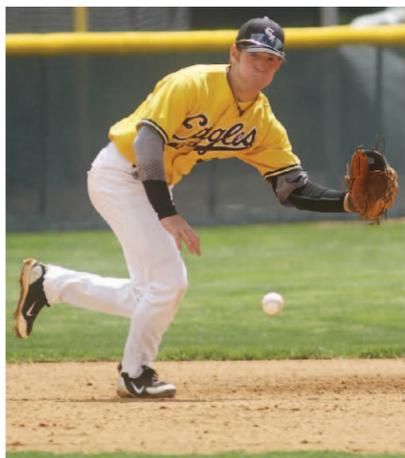

Boise State’s three selections in the first three rounds are the most in school history, eclipsing last year’s draft when Titus Young and Austin Pettis were selected in the second and third rounds, respectively.

Crawford joins Shea McClellin (Chicago Bears; No. 19 overall) and Doug Martin (Tampa Bay Buccaneers; No. 31 overall) in this year’s draft, with each going in Thursday’s first round.

A first-team All-Mountain West performer and the Broncos’ Outstanding Defensive Lineman in 2011, Crawford led the Broncos with 27.0 tackles-for-loss in his two seasons with the team. He was also named honorable mention All-America by SI.com following his junior season in 2010.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones had to wait more than three hours and watch 48 other players get selected Friday night before he got to make his only pick of the day.

No Power, No Timing for CSI’s Bats

Third baseman Tanner Morache eyes the ball against Western Nevada College at Skip Walker Field Friday in Twin Falls.

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • When College of Southern Idaho baseball coach Boomer Walker brought his team to near the right-field foul pole following the team’s 7-3, 6-0 doubleheader loss against Western Nevada College, an impending dressing-down was inevitable.

While the players hustled to dress Skip Walker Field up for today’s second doubleheader, Walker later bemoaned the lack of someone stepping up to do what was needed when the chips were down.

“I’m just disappointed with some of our two-year guys who didn’t do a very good job of leading by example,” Walker said. “You get into situations and you can’t move a guy along like you should, things like that.”

Walker came into this series saying that starters Kyle Olason and Andrew Freter needed to work deeper into games. That didn’t go according to plan.

Olason threw 42 pitches in the first inning of Game 1 and left in the fourth having conceded seven runs — four in the first when a botched sacrifice resulted in an error and on two seeing-eye singles.

Freter tossed more than 100 in his outing, but walked five batters. He matched eventual winner Derrick Pitts pitch for pitch before departing in the seventh inning of a scoreless Game 2.

“I can’t take anything away from Freter, but you can’t walk that many guys,” Walker said. “And in the first one, we can’t field a routine pop-up bunt, they get a seeing-eye hit and another that takes a funny hop and we’re down four. It’s frustrating.”

One not-so-frustrating point for CSI (28-20 overall, 17-15 Scenic West) was the play of second baseman Tyler Dunnington, who was moved into the leadoff position and responded

Minico Is Frank in Making Statement

The Spartan pitcher keeps just ahead of Tiger hitters in leading team to victory in opening game of key series.

RUPERT • Both teams know what’s at stake in this weekend’s series.

Minico and Jerome are fighting for the No. 2 seed for the District IV tournament, which comes with home-field advantage and a priceless first-round bye.

So it’s no surprise that the first game of the series Friday night was a tight pitcher’s duel.

Minico’s Andrew Frank out-battled Jerome’s Cameron Aherns in cold weather as the Spartans won 5-3.

Frank struck out 11 batters and walked none. He located his fastball, caught the Tigers off guard with a two-seam change-up early on, and then his curveball found its bite in the later innings.

“Give Jerome credit. I feel like I was hitting my spots pretty well and they were still hitting me,” Frank said. “All our other games mean something, but right now you know exactly what you’re looking at, the two seed. It’s a big weekend.”

Aherns pitched well enough to win, allowing just four hits and one earned run.

“It was tough pitching conditions. Cameron went in and out of being able to feel his curveball, which limited some of the stuff that we could do and they got some pretty good swings off those,” said Jerome coach Tom Bobrowski. “Frank did a good job on the mound keeping us off balanced.”

Wood River Names New Boys Hoops Coach

HAILEY • Wood River High School has named Billy Zei its new varsity boys basketball coach, school athletic director John Rade announced Friday in a press release.

Zei replaces Rick Bradshaw, who led the Wolverines to a 2-18 record in his only season at the helm. Bradshaw stepped down due to what Rade termed “an employment opportunity.”

“(Zei) has demonstrated many strengths, which include but are not limited to commitment and passion for the game of basketball, sound fundamental knowledge of the game, communication skills as well as the ability to teach our student athletes quality character values needed to be successful both on the court and off the court,” Rade said in a statement.

Zei, 29, led the Wolverine freshmen to an 8-10 record last season. He graduated from Dallas Baptist University with a degree in business administration.

Ex-Bruin Jordan Signs With Lewis and Clark

TWIN FALLS • Former Twin Falls High School baseball player Jared Jordan has signed a letter of intent with Lewis & Clark College State College in Lewiston. Jordan, a 2010 graduate of Twin Falls, currently plays for Walla Walla (Wash.) Community College where he is batting .283 with four home runs, 26 RBI and five stolen bases in 34 games this season.

The infielder will join the Lewis & Clark State College program as a junior next season. The Warriors compete in the NAIA in the Frontier Conference.

can take comfort knowing they let one slip away with a couple miscues — a hit batsman here, a throwing error there — that led to four unearned Minico runs.

In the same token, Minico (13-7, 10-3) can feel confident after putting a solid bat on the ball all through its lineup.

“Offensively we swung it really well, we hit balls hard,” said Minico coach Ben Frank. “Offensively I thought we hit well enough to have eight or nine runs. We counted seven or eight balls that we hit line drives right at guys where on a different day (it’s a hit).”

With the game tied 3-3 in the bottom of the fifth, Minico’s Shay Chandler drew a walk and stole his way around to third before scoring the go-ahead run on a throwing error. Jerome then muffed a would-be double play that allowed another run to cross.

Jerome put the first run on the board in the first inning on Zach Thibault’s solo home run. Minico answered in the bottom half with Sager Nevarez’s RBI single. The Spartans tacked on two more runs in the second, both unearned, highlighted by Chandler’s RBI double.

US Officials: Core al-Qaida Essentially Destroyed

BY KIMBERLY DOZIER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A year after the Navy SEAL raid that killed Osama bin Laden, the al-Qaida that carried out the Sept. 11 attacks is essentially gone but its affiliates remain a threat to America, U.S. counterterrorist officials say.

Core al-Qaida's new leader, Ayman al-Zawahri, still aspires to attack the U.S., but his Pakistan-based group is scrambling to survive, under fire from CIA drone strikes and lying low for fear of another U.S. raid. That has lessened the threat of another complex attack like a nuclear dirty bomb or a biological weapon, the officials say.

Al-Qaida's loyal offshoots are still dangerous, especially Yemen's al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, or AQAP. While not yet able to carry out complex attacks inside the U.S., such groups are capable of hitting Western targets overseas and are building armies and expertise while plotting violence, according to senior U.S. counterterrorist officials who briefed reporters Friday.

"Each will seek opportunities to strike Western interests in its operating area, but each group will have different intent and ability to execute those plans," said Robert Cardillo, a deputy director at the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. The other officials were authorized to speak only on condition of anonymity.

The shift from a single, deadly group to a more amorphous threat may not seem much of an improvement. But the U.S. believes that the bin Laden raid and continued U.S. counterterrorist action have reduced the chance of a sophisticated, multipronged attack on the U.S. like the attacks of Sept. 11 or the deadly bombings in Madrid in 2004 and in London in 2005.

An attack with weapons of mass destruction — chemical, biological or nuclear — by any al-Qaida-related terror group also seems less likely in the coming year, Cardillo said.

Al-Qaida's Zawahri has not managed to harness multiple groups into a cohesive force focused on a single, catastrophic attack, officials said.

Al-Qaida's key affiliates in Yemen, Somalia, Iraq and North Africa have pledged allegiance to Zawahri but, unimpressed with his leadership, "have not offered the deference they gave bin Laden," Cardillo said. Zawahri has a reputation as an abrasive manager and a less than charismatic speaker.

That loss of a single, charismatic voice likely means "multiple voices will provide inspiration for the movement," leading to a bout of soul-searching as to what the splinter groups want to target and why, Cardillo said.

7 Homes, Hog Farm Destroyed in Colorado Tornadoes. At least seven homes and a hog farm were destroyed early Friday after authorities said rare nighttime tornadoes ripped through sparsely populated counties on the southeastern Colorado plains. State officials say no deaths have been reported, only minor injuries from the twisters.

House OKs Student Loan Bill, Paid for with Health Care Funds. Setting the stage for another political showdown, the House on Friday narrowly passed a Republican plan that would stop an interest-rate hike on student loans — paid for with funds from President Barack Obama's health care law. Democrats want the rate kept low, but objected to eliminating a fund for public health and prevention programs to finance it. The GOP approach, they contended, was an attack on women and children who benefit from such programs. — Associated Press

New Secret Service Rules on Alcohol, Unsavory Bars

WASHINGTON • Seeking to shake off the disgrace of a prostitution scandal, the Secret Service late Friday tightened conduct rules for its agents to prohibit them from drinking excessively, visiting disreputable establishments while traveling or bringing foreigners to their hotel rooms. The new behavior policies apply to Secret Service agents even when they are off duty while traveling, barring them from drinking alcohol within 10 hours of working, according to a memorandum describing the changes obtained by The Associated Press. In some cases under the new rules, chaperones will accompany agents on trips. The embattled Secret Service director, Mark Sullivan, urged agents and other employees to "consider your conduct through the lens of the past several weeks." The Secret Service said it would conduct a training session on ethics next week.

Crowds Watch in Awe as Space Shuttle Arrives in NY

BY MEGHAN BARR

Associated Press

NEW YORK • In a city understandably wary of low-flying aircraft, New Yorkers and tourists alike watched with joy and excitement Friday as space shuttle Enterprise sailed over the skyline on its final flight before it becomes a museum piece.

Ten years after 9/11, people gathered on rooftops and the banks of the Hudson River to marvel at the sight of the spacecraft riding piggyback on a modified jumbo jet that flew over the Statue of Liberty and past the skyscrapers along Manhattan's West Side.

"It made me feel empowered. I'm going to start crying," Jennifer Patton, a tourist from Canton, Ohio, said after the plane passed over the cheering crowd on the deck of the aircraft carrier USS Intrepid, the floating air- and space museum that will be the shuttle's permanent home.

"I just feel like to have a plane fly that low over the Hudson, right past New York City, and to have everyone cheering and excited about it, shows that we don't have fear, that we have a sense of 'This is ours.'"

Onlookers bundled up on the blustery spring day along the piers on the West Side, cameras slung around their necks. The roar of the aircraft could barely be heard over the howling winds. In truth, the camera angles on TV made it seem as if the shuttle was a lot closer to the buildings than it really was.

The low-altitude flight was well-publicized, and few people were caught off-guard. Not one person called 911 to report a low-flying plane, police said.

The jet carrying the shuttle turned east and flew over central Long Island. Nassau County office workers looked out their windows in delight as it passed over the Roosevelt Field Mall, near the spot where Charles Lindbergh took off for Paris in 1927.

Lawyers Argue over Sex Tape at Edwards Trial

ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO, N.C. • Opposing lawyers in the John Edwards trial wrangled with a judge over whether to allow testimony about a sex tape of the former presidential candidate and allegations of an affair involving an ex-aide who ended a week on the witness stand Friday.

Edwards is accused of directing a conspiracy to use about $1 million in campaign donors' payments to help hide the Democrat's pregnant mistress as he sought the White House in 2008. He denies knowing about the money and has pleaded not guilty.

Former aide and confidante Andrew

Young testified this week that he deposited the payments from a wealthy Texas lawyer who served as Edwards' campaign finance chairman and an elderly heiress into personal accounts controlled by him and his wife. The money was used to help build a $1.5 million North Carolina home; Young, who is testifying under an immunity agreement, said he did not pay income taxes on the money.

Prosecutors objected Friday when a defense lawyer for Edwards asked Young whether he had threatened to release a "private video" to expose Edwards' affair with Rielle Hunter.

U.S. District Court Judge Catherine

C. Eagles instructed Edwards lawyer Abbe Lowell to continue his cross-examination of Young without mentioning the tape.

After conferring with the judge, Lowell said he would wait to potentially discuss the tape when the defense presents its case.

Hunter sued Young in state court two years ago over ownership of the sex tape and other personal items in Young's possession. That civil suit was settled earlier this year with an agreement to destroy all copies of the tape, though there are suggestions in court documents that federal investigators may still have a copy.

Bear Wanders onto Colorado Campus, Moved to Mountains

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) • A 200-pound black bear that wandered onto the University of Colorado campus and caused a stir before falling 15 feet from a tree has returned to the wild, officials said Friday.

State wildlife official Jennifer Churchill said that the 200-pound male bear was tagged and taken to a remote Rocky Mountain area of ponderosa pines, with plenty of oak brush and chokeberry — food fit for a bear — west of Boulder.

The bear has become a celebrity since it wandered around a university residence hall in Boulder and climbed a tree Thursday. Wildlife officers eventually tranquilized it, and the bear dropped from its perch onto pads placed on the ground.

A photographer with the CU Independent online student newspaper captured a shot of the bear as it fell.

The bear landed on its back before a crowd of gawking students. Some stroked its paws after it was caged.

"It was really a perfect landing," campus police spokesman Ryan Huff told the Daily Camera.

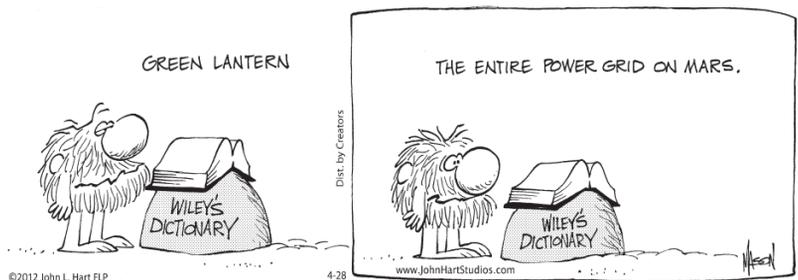

Rhonda Chestnutt was putting coins into a parking meter near the Bear Creek student apartments on Thursday when she felt shaggy fur brush against her legs.

Chestnutt, who works for a leadership program at the university, thought it was a large dog — until the bear looked back over its shoulder.

New Photo Shows Work at N. Korea Nuclear Test Site

WASHINGTON (AP) • New satellite imagery appears to show a train of mining carts and other preparations under way at North Korea's nuclear test site but no indication of when a detonation might take place. Early this month, South Korean intelligence reported digging of a new tunnel at the Punggye-ri site, which it took as a sign that North Korea was covertly preparing for a third nuclear test. The U.S.-Korea Institute at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies provided AP on Friday with its analysis of a sequence of photos of the site taken by a private satellite operator between March 8 and April 18.

Community Gathers for National Day of Prayer

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • A small group of Twin Falls prayer warriors have dedicated themselves to organizing a community-wide celebration of the 61st National Day of Prayer.

The public is invited to join in a nondenominational prayer service, themed "One Nation Under God," at the Twin Falls City Park Band Shell from 11:55 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday.

Special worship music will be provided by Missy Kennedy, and Virgil Horner will open the noon prayer session. Those in attendance will then be given prayer folders and encouraged to break up into small groups to pray for the specified areas of government, media, families, schools and churches.

"Prayer really calls people to a place of intimacy with their Creator," Horner said. "We're just lay people who believe in the power of intercessory prayer and want to gather together."

The first Continental Congress called for a National Day of Prayer in 1775 but it was not officially established by an act of Congress until 1952 when President Harry S.

Truman signed it into law. The Reagan Administration amended that law in 1988, designating the first Thursday in May as the official day of observance. Thousands of events are expected to take place across the country next week.

Other National Day of Prayer community events include a Mayor's Prayer Breakfast sponsored by the West End Ministerial Association at 7 a.m. at Calvary Chapel, 1004 Burley Ave., Buhl. Admission is free, but a suggested donation can be given to support the West End Food Pantry. Kathryn Bausman, executive director of Jubilee House in Twin Falls, will be the guest speaker. Her topic will be the growing problems of homelessness, addiction and their impact on the family.

"As Christians who believe in God, and as a community, we need to step up," Bausman said. "We believe that God will work for the benefit of his people and need to ask for his blessing."

The Filer Ministerial Association and Filer Kiwanis Club will host a Mayor's Prayer Breakfast at 8:30 a.m. May 28 in the Peace Lutheran Church Fellowship Hall, 600 Stevens St. Tickets will be available at the door and are $7 for adults, $3 for children. Proceeds will benefit Peace Lutheran Church youth group ministry projects. The event's guest speaker will be the Rev. Paul Johnson.

A public time of prayer also will be held at 12:20 p.m. Thursday in the Filer City Council Chambers, 300 Main St.

John E. Swayze may be reached at 326-7212 or Idahocolumninch@aol.com.

VOICES OF FAITH

What Part of Your Faith Experience is Most Meaningful?

MCCLATCHY
NEWSPAPERS

We Know That We Are Saved

Mankind has many reasons for what is of great value. When we find the one thing that moves us, we do everything in our power to extend its worth. Most of us have found that salvation is the greatest gift to humankind. The teachings of the Scripture have shown us the great redemptive love of God and his unending pursuit to bring men and women into a harmonious relationship with him that is most beneficial.

As a result of our salvation, we are placed in the position to receive all the benefits of a rich and rewarding life. One who is saved is able to experience the joy of walking with God. Yes, sometimes that walk may be difficult and soul-wrenching, but our trust and faith will help us persevere.

The more we embrace the idea of our salvation, we discover the ability to interact with others who are seeking the same desires. Salvation also allows us to seek purity of life and the right relationship with our neighbor. We are saved and being saved each day of our life. It is a wonderful experience to know that Christ has died for our sins and puts us back in the right relationship with God. Therefore, I worship God!

— The Rev. R.L. Baynham, pastor of Metropolitan Baptist Church, Kansas City, Kan.

Compassion for Others

We can let experiences in life harden us so we become increasingly angry and resentful, or we can let them soften us and make us kinder and more open to what scares us. The choice is always ours. In Buddhism there is a Sanskrit term called bodhichitta. Translated, bodhi means "awake" and chitta means "mind." Therefore bodhichitta means "awakened mind." Some think this is about loving-kindness, others think it is about compassion, but it is about both of these and more. Bodhichitta is the essence of all Buddhist spiritual practice. It is the desire to alleviate the suffering of all sentient beings without exception. We exclude no one. We include even those people who are mean and nasty to us. Even those that we might give the label "enemy" are included.

The great Buddhist nun and teacher Pema Chodron said, "An analogy for bodhichitta is the rawness of a broken heart. Sometimes this broken heart gives birth to anxiety and panic; sometimes to anger, resentment and blame. But under the hardness of that armor there is the tenderness of genuine sadness. This is our link with all those who have ever loved."

So, the most important aspect of Buddhist faith experience is developing bodhichitta. This unlimited compassion for all beings awakens us and softens our heart. It means cultivating bravery and kindness to open to the uncertainty of life.

Bible Translator Criticized Over Word Substitution

BY TOM BREEN
Associated Press

One of the largest Bible translators in the world is undergoing an independent review after critics claimed language in some of their translations intended for Muslim countries misses the essential Christian idea of Trinity: the father, son and the holy spirit or ghost.

Critics argue that using words like "Messiah" instead of "Son" and "Lord" instead of "Father" badly distorts the doctrine, in which God is said to be one being in three persons.

"If you remove 'son,' you have to remove 'father,' and if you remove those, the whole thread of the scriptures from Genesis to Revelation is unraveled," said the Rev. Georges Houssney, the president of Horizons International, a Christian organization that works extensively with Muslims and himself a translator of the Bible into Arabic.

Orlando, Fla.-based Wycliffe Bible Translators argues the translations have never been about avoiding controversy, but choosing words that most accurately reflect the Gospels: Some concepts relating God to family members don't make sense in some cultures, so the language needs to reflect that.

Free Will vs. Determination

TWIN FALLS • Ryan Terry will discuss "Free Will vs. Determination" when the Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship meets at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W. in Twin Falls.

The question of free will has been debated for millennia. Some people believe humans have the capacity for free will. Many theists regard free will as a special gift from God. The notion of human free will is an important premise for much of what happens in human society. Free will is necessary for the notion of personal responsibility. If people do not have free will, it is difficult to argue they are responsible for their actions. If that is the case, how can they be punished for misdeeds or praised for good things if those actions were not freely chosen? Does a person really have free will or does their environment and experiences mask a real ability to have free will? These thoughts will be explored.

Information: Ken Whiting, 734-9161.

Dow Regains Ground It Lost in April; Amazon Surges

NEW YORK (AP) • It took a while, but the Dow Jones industrial average finally gained back all its losses for the month. On a day of conflicting signals, as investors weighed disappointing economic news against reports of higher profits at big companies, stocks inched higher. All three major indexes were up Friday, though barely. The Dow climbed 23.69 points to 13,228.31, a tiny 0.2 percent gain. That was enough to push the index into the black for April. It's now 16 points higher than where it began the month. The Standard & Poor's 500 edged up 3.38 points.

Regulators Close Four Banks in Three States

WASHINGTON (AP) • Federal regulators have closed two banks in Maryland and one each in Minnesota and South Carolina, bringing to 21 the number of U.S. banks that have failed so far this year.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Friday that it shuttered Bank of Eastern Shore, in Cambridge, Md., as well as HarVest Bank of Maryland, in Gaithersburg.

Regulators also closed Inter Savings Bank in Maple Grove, Minn., and Plantation Federal Bank in Pawleys Island, S.C.

Combined, the closed banks had $1.3 billion in assets and $1.21 billion in deposits as of Dec. 31.

The FDIC estimates that the banks' failure will cost the insurance fund $252.5 million, combined.

Procter & Gamble's 3Q net income loss • Procter & Gamble Co. said Friday that it is rolling back some price increases and focusing on introducing new products in developed markets as the world's largest consumer product maker seeks to reignite market share growth. The maker of products ranging from Bounty paper towels to Luvs diapers also lowered its guidance below expectations for the fiscal year as its third-quarter net income dropped 16 percent, hurt by restructuring charges and continued high costs for items like diesel fuel and packaging. Shares fell nearly 4 percent Friday.

Shoppers carry purchases Tuesday on the Third Street Promenade in Santa Monica, Calif. The Commerce Department said Friday that consumers spent at the fastest pace in more than a year.

Year Got off to Slow Start but Some See Rebound

BY PAUL WISEMAN AND CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Don't panic yet. The government reported Friday that the economy got off to a tepid start this year, but that doesn't foreshadow a repeat of the near-standstill that happened in 2011.

"The economy is firmly on a growth trajectory," said Sung Won Sohn, an economics professor at California State University's Smith School of Business. "The first-quarter slowdown will be temporary."

Still, the January-March report was discouraging.

Economists had expected gross domestic product — the broadest gauge of economic output — to expand at a 2.5 percent annual rate for the first three months of the year. Instead, the Commerce Department said it was 2.2 percent, mainly because of government budget-cutting and a slowdown in business investment.

And some of the January-March growth, meager as it was, probably came at the expense of the current quarter. An unseasonably warm winter pulled car buyers into showrooms earlier than usual.

The same was true for housing construction. That's one reason it jumped at a 19 percent pace from January through March.

Economists doubt consumers can keep spending as freely as they did in the first three months of this year: an annual pace that was 2.9 percent faster than in the previous quarter and the fastest in more than a year. They probably can't afford to. Americans' after-tax income rose just 0.6 percent in the first three months compared with a year earlier. That was the puniest pay increase in two years.

People spent more in part because they socked away less. The savings rate fell to 3.9 percent of after-tax income.

That was down from 4.5 percent. Economists worry that people won't keep spending more unless their income grows.

Stock prices rose Friday despite the report of weaker growth. David Rosenberg, chief economist at Gluskin Sheff, said investors might have bid up stocks because they think the Federal Reserve is more likely to pursue another round of bond buying to stimulate the economy.

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke "has created the impression that if the economy stumbles, he'll be there to hold your hand," Rosenberg said.

The lackluster first-quarter growth follows government reports that hiring slowed sharply in March and the number of people seeking unemployment benefits reached a three-month high.

With 12.7 million people unemployed, today's economy needs much faster growth to boost hiring. Growth would have to be roughly 4 percent for a full year to lower the unemployment rate, now 8.2 percent, by 1 percentage point.

In 2011, a series of setbacks struck the economy. Gas prices rose sharply. An earthquake in Japan shuttered factories there and cut off supplies to U.S. manufacturers. A standoff in Washington brought the federal government to the brink of default, rattling investors and consumer confidence. And Europe's debt crisis threatened to diminish U.S. exports and further spook investors.

The economy slowed to an annual rate of just 0.4 percent in the first quarter of 2011. Unemployment, which had been falling, rose again last summer.

But most economists think the U.S. economy is more resilient this year.

The job market, household finances and businesses are all in better shape than they were a year ago. Supplies are flowing freely. Political bickering has eased. And the fears about Europe have subsided at least temporarily.

Calif. Holstein with Mad Cow Disease Was Lame, Lying Down

BY TRACIE CONE

Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. • The California dairy cow found to have mad cow disease was very old for a milk producer and had been euthanized after it became lame and started lying down, federal officials revealed in their latest update on the discovery.

The 10-year-old dairy cow, only the fourth mad cow case discovered in the United States, was found as part of an Agriculture Department program that tests about 40,000 cows a year for the fatal brain disease. It was unable to stand before it was killed and sent to a rendering plant's Hanford, Calif. transfer station.

It was one of dozens that underwent random testing at the transfer site, and the positive results have set off a federal investigation into the source of the disease.

U.S. health officials say there is no risk to the food supply. The California cow was never destined for the meat market, and it developed "atypical" BSE from a random mutation, something that scientists know happens occasionally. Somehow, a protein the body normally harbors folds into an abnormal shape called a prion, setting off a chain reaction of misfolds that eventually kills brain cells.

A USDA spokesman says they do not yet know what causes this strain of the disease. Agriculture officials are investigating, among other things, whether feed sources might have played a role in the animal contracting the fatal illness.

Child Labor Groups Upset Farm Rules Are Dropped

Proposal was mocked in rural states where farmers often have their kids do chores that can include operating heavy equipment.

BY SAM HANANEL

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Obama administration's move to scrap a plan that would prevent some children from working in dangerous farm jobs drew sharp rebukes Friday from child welfare advocates who claim the president caved to election-year pressure from farmers and Republicans.

The Labor Department spent more than a year working on the proposal to ban children younger than 16 from using power-driven farm equipment — including tractors — and prevent those under 18 from working in grain silos, feed lots and stockyards.

Labor officials tried to avoid controversy by specifically excluding children who worked on their parents' farms. But the proposal became a popular political target for Republicans who called it an impractical, heavy-handed regulation that ignored the reality of small farms.

Reid Maki, coordinator of the Child Labor Coalition, said the Labor Department's sudden decision late Thursday to withdraw the proposed rules means more children will die in farm accidents that could have been prevented.

"There was tremendous heat, and I don't think it helped that it was an election year," Maki said. "A lot of conservatives made a lot of political hay out of this issue."

The goal was to protect children who are four times more likely to be killed while performing farm work than those in all other industries combined.

But the proposal was routinely mocked in rural states like Kansas and Montana where farmers often have their kids do chores that can include operating heavy equipment.

Sen. Jerry Moran, R-Kan., said the rules would threaten a way of life, even preventing kids from operating a battery-powered screwdriver or a pressurized garden hose.

"Those regulations were very specific, things that seemed very lacking in common sense and in many ways just crazy," Moran told reporters Friday at a news conference in Topeka, Kan.

While the Labor Department repeatedly denied it would go that far, officials promised three months ago to modify the plan in a bid to mollify opponents. The agency made clear it would exempt children who worked on farms owned or operated by their parents, even if the ownership was part of a complex partnership or corporate agreement.

That didn't appease groups like the American Farm Bureau Federation that complained the new prohibitions would upset traditions in which many children work on farms owned by uncles, grandparents and other relatives to reduce costs and learn how a farm operates.

Farm state Democrats also expressed concerns. Sen. Al Franken, D-Minn., called the withdrawal "a good outcome." Sen. John Tester, D-Mont., pledged to "fight any measure that threatens that heritage and our rural way of life."

The Labor Department said it withdrew the proposal in response to thousands of comments that expressed concern about the impact of the changes on small, family-owned farms.

"To be clear, this regulation will not be pursued for the duration of the Obama administration," the agency said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Love your neighbor, yet pull not down your hedge."
— George Herbert

While most declarers were in four hearts in today's Yeh Brothers deal, Liu Jun was in three no-trump.

It might have been easier to pass out three diamonds doubled: A trump lead will apparently net a minimum of 300. But on the informative auction shown, West led a diamond to the nine and king. A club finesse held, the next one lost as West threw a spade, and back came a low diamond. Declarer won in hand, cashed his spade and heart winners, and presented East with a diamond. That player could cash three diamonds, but then had to concede the last three clubs to dummy.

East should have returned the diamond jack at trick four, in which case West would have had the option to win the diamond six on the third round. But declarer has a resource.

He advances the heart queen, hoping for a bare jack or nine with East, then cashes one club, pitching a heart, comes to hand with the second top spade, and exits with a diamond. If East wins, he must surrender the game-going tricks in clubs. If West wins, he has a spade to cash, but can't manage more than one heart trick.

Incidentally, if West pitches a heart on the second club, declarer wins the diamond return and returns a third diamond. If East cashes out, West is squeezed in the majors; if East switches after taking a diamond or two, declarer sets up hearts as before.

ANSWER: I recommend that you use the call of two hearts here as natural and nonforcing — less than an invitation. The logic is that with invitational values or better, you can bid the new minor (here, two clubs) as a forcing relay asking for three-card spade support or four hearts. If you do that, a jump to three hearts should show 5-5 with invitational values.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE Trustee Sale No. ID0700006-11 APN RP J17750030130 A Title Order No. 110602481-ID-GNO On July 2, 2012 at 10:00 AM (recognized local time), on the front steps of main entrance to the Jerome County Courthouse, 300 N. Lincoln Ave, Jerome, ID 83338 in the County of Jerome, State of Idaho, PIONEER TITLE OF ADA COUNTY DBA PIONEER LENDER TRUSTEE as successor Trustee on behalf of LOANCARE, A DIVISION OF FNF SERVICING, INC., will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Jerome, State of Idaho, and described as follows: LOT 13 IN BLOCK 3 OF THE AMENDED RE-PLAT OF THOMPSON SUBDIVISION, JEROME COUNTY, IDAHO, RECORDED MARCH 18, 1997 AS INSTRUMENT NO. 970968 The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that the address of: 305 WAVE I, JEROME, ID 83338, is sometimes associated with said real property. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by FERNANDO M. SOARES, JR AND MERCEDES SOARES, as Grantors, to LEND AMERICA as Trustee, for the benefit and security of LEND AMERICA, A NEW YORK CORPORATION as the original Lender and MORTGAGE ELECTRONIC REGISTRATION SYSTEMS, INC. (MERS), solely as nominee for Lend America, a New York Corporation, its successors and/or assigns, dated as of February 2, 2009 and recorded February 6, 2009 as Instrument No. 2090520 and as assigned to LOANCARE, A DIVISION OF FNF SERVICING, INC., current Beneficiary, recorded May 20, 2011 as Instrument No. 2112646 of the records of Jerome County, Idaho. The above Grantors are named to comply with section 45-1506(4)(A), Idaho Code. No representation is made that they are, or are not, presently responsible for this obligation set forth herein, The default for which this sale is to be made under Deed of Trust and Note dated February 2, 2009 is: FAILED TO PAY THE INSTALLMENT OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST WHICH BECAME DUE ON NOVEMBER 01, 2010 AND ALL SUBSEQUENT INSTALLMENTS OF PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST, ALONG WITH LATE CHARGES, DELINQUENCIES DUE ON A PRIOR ENCUMBRANCE/REAL ESTATE TAXES/FIRE INSURANCE, SENIOR DEED OF TRUST, ALONG WITH ACCRUED INTEREST, PLUS FORECLOSURE COSTS AND LEGAL FEES, IN ADDITION TO ALL OF THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS AS PER THE DEED OF TRUST, PROMISSORY NOTE AND ALL RELATED LOAN DOCUMENTS. The monthly payments for Principal, Interest and Impounds (if applicable) of $732.05, due per month from November 1, 2010, and all subsequent payments until the date of sale or reinstatement. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $119,325.26, plus accrued interest at the rate of 6.00000% per annum from October 1, 2010. All delinquent amounts are now due, together with accruing late charges, and interest, unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, Trustee's fees, attorney's fees and any amounts advanced to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. GARAGE SALE SEASON IS ON!

Place your garage sale ad in the Times-News. 6 lines of text, 3 days, $26. Deadline is Wednesday at 1:00pm.

Today is Saturday, April 28, the 119th day of 2012. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On April 28, 1789, there was a mutiny on the Bounty as rebelling crew members of the British ship led by Fletcher Christian set Capt. William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific. (Bligh and most of the men with him managed to reach Timor in 47 days.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1758, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, was born in Westmoreland County, Va.
In 1788, Maryland became the seventh state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.
In 1817, the United States and Britain signed the Rush-Bagot Treaty, which limited the number of naval vessels allowed in the Great Lakes.
In 1918, Gavrilo Princip, the assassin of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and the archduke's wife, Sophie, died in prison of tuberculosis.

In 1937, former Iraqi president Saddam Hussein was born in the village of al-Oja near the desert town of Tikrit (he was executed in Dec. 2006).

In 1942, pollster George Gallup said most Americans preferred to call the current global conflict "World War II" or "The Second World War" (other suggestions included "Survival War" or "War of World Freedom").

In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress, Clara Petacci, were executed by Italian partisans as they attempted to flee the country.

In 1952, war with Japan officially ended as a treaty signed in San Francisco the year before took effect. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower resigned as Supreme Allied commander in Europe; he was succeeded by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

In 1967, heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali refused to be inducted into the Army, the same day General William C. Westmoreland told Congress the U.S. "would prevail in Vietnam."

In 1987, Contra rebels in Nicaragua killed Benjamin Ernest Linder, an American engineer working on a hydroelectric project for the Sandinista government.

In 1988, a flight attendant was killed and more than 60 persons injured when part of the roof of an Aloha Airlines Boeing 737 tore off during a flight from Hilo to Honolulu.

In 1992, the Agriculture Department unveiled its pyramid-shaped recommended-diet chart that had cost nearly $1 million to develop. (A revised pyramid was introduced in 2005; a new approach, "MyPlate," replaced the pyramid concept in 2011.)

Ten years ago: Severe weather, including tornadoes in Missouri and Maryland, killed at least six people. Alexander Lebed, the gruff former general who'd helped defeat the 1991 hard-line Soviet coup, was killed in a helicopter crash near the Russian town of Abakan; he was 52.

Five years ago: A suicide car bomber struck in Karbala, Iraq, killing at least 63 people. A suicide attack on Pakistan's Interior Minister (Aftab Khan Sherpao) killed 28 people; the official was slightly hurt. Death claimed "Tonight Show" assistant conductor Tommy Newsom at age 78 and character actor Dabbs Greer at age 90.

One year ago: President Barack Obama reshuffled his national security team, with CIA Director Leon Panetta succeeding Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Gen. David Petraeus replacing Panetta at the CIA. Convicted sex offender Phillip Garrido and his wife, Nancy, pleaded guilty to kidnapping and raping a California girl, Jaycee Dugard, who was abducted in 1991 at the age of 11 and rescued 18 years later. (Phillip Garrido was sentenced to 431 years to life in prison; Nancy Garrido was sentenced to 36 years to life in prison.) Canada's Patrick Chan won the world figure skating championships in Moscow.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has never liked her sister-in-law. Mom thinks "Auntie Beth" is "completely out to get her," even though no one has seen any evidence to support my mother's claims.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

For the past several months, Mom has been complaining nonstop about how "awful" Beth is. She says things at the most random times to people she barely knows. If we don't show sympathy toward Mom, she then becomes enraged. It has caused many problems between our family and Auntie Beth's. We can't have holidays together because my aunt is not allowed in our house. No one wants to be involved in the drama or to participate in the terrible gossip.

How can I help my mother understand the harm she is causing and get our family back together?

— SICK OF THE DRAMA DEAR SICK OF THE DRAMA:

Your mother's behavior appears to have escalated from disliking Aunt Beth to obsessive and paranoid. If it is time for her annual physical, her doctor should be told about it because her behavior is not normal and she may need a neurological exam or counseling.

Unfortunately, there isn't much you can do about this, because if you try, she may think that you are "against" her, too. But the rest of the family can refuse to allow her to exclude Aunt Beth by not accepting invitations in which she is not included.

DEAR ABBY: I have started a relationship and am falling in love. I have known "Willa" for a few years, but we never really hung out before this. We see eye-to-eye on lots of things. However, the other night she told me she'd had a past relationship with her best guy friend, "Mike," whom she refers to as a "big brother." I have known him for a year.

Mike is someone I hang out with. Their fling was eight years ago. Willa also hinted there may be other mutual friends she has had relations with before me. I don't care who she's been with, but I feel I should know which ones we socialize with. And I'd rather hear it from her than find out from a friend. Willa says it isn't her place to spread other people's business. What do you think?

— WANTS ANSWERS DEAR WANTS ANSWERS:

Unless Willa intended to make a full disclosure, she shouldn't have teased you by making you curious. Obviously, you do care about whom she has been with, so now you need to be honest with yourself about why. Would you prefer not to socialize with the men with whom she has had past relationships? Because she has clammed up, perhaps you should assume that she has been with all of the men she has introduced you to. The question you need to ask yourself is whether you can put her past aside and focus instead on building a future with her.

DEAR ABBY: I am curious to learn what your readers do when they receive a gift card for a place where they don't shop or eat. Some restaurants are located far from where I live, and some stores don't carry anything I need or want.

— GRATEFUL, BUT ... IN COLUMBUS, OHIO DEAR GRATEFUL, BUT:

I'm printing your letter, but I am sure most of my readers would do what I would do and that is re-gift it to someone who would appreciate it and use it.

IF APRIL 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A passion for success and increased ambitions may make this a banner year. You will make the most progress between now and the end of June because of your relentless focus on whatever has tweaked your interest. Enjoy the fruits of your labors, but keep a few extra dollars tucked away for a rainy day. In December there may be plenty of rainy days when you will be glad you have something to fall back on. Plan ahead, so you won't need to make crucial changes at the end of the year when your popularity rises but the chance of making a major mistake is multiplied.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do what you want to do with those you want to do it with. Spend a little extra money to get the very best or to make solid improvements in your personal life. The stars smile on dedicated industriousness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can't keep a good man or woman down. Certain ideas that you thought were improbable, if not impossible to accomplish, might gain support from partners. Set crucial projects in motion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pursue passionate pastimes. Adventures of the amorous kind could be in the stars for you this weekend, as pleasure-loving Venus lingers in your sign. Depend upon trusted friends to speak up on your behalf.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't cut corners. You won't be satisfied with half measures when putting important matters into motion. Whether it is business or pleasure that turns you on, indulge an appetite for the finest things.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make a success of whatever you put into motion today. You are quite likely to take charge when problems or obstacles appear. But be careful to avoid stepping on sensitive feelings and sensibilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have the whole world in your hands. Your star prevails if speedy fingers or physical exertion is required. You think and act faster than other people but that does not give you the right to gloat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Act in haste, repent in leisure. A tendency to jump headfirst into whatever fray is available could be counterproductive. Soothe tired muscles and relieve inner tensions with sensuous massage oils.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leave the briefcase in the closet. Business affairs could be a big turn off when a lover is in the vicinity. Use sex appeal to lure a lover into your arms. Be cognizant of changes in the romantic barometer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on welding wisdom and fearlessly defending fair play. You can put your passions to work in positive ways. Watch out for a tendency to throw money at problems or argue over values.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You like working relentlessly to make ends meet, but might get too tired and lose your temper. You may bristle with defensiveness if you feel you are being coerced or treated to unfair competition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Give it your all. If you wish to experience abundance in your life, you have to imagine it first. Don't be limited by a lack of imagination. You are ready to push anyone or anything to the limit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are geared up to visit exotic places, meet new people and abandon past prejudices. Your desire for excitement could be misunderstood by a loved one, but your passion for success will be appreciated.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
